“I saw Senior-Constable Kelly was coming up, and I told him he could get a shot at him with his rifle if he came to where I was; he did so, and fired twice, hitting his hand on one occasion. I got closer to him, when, all at once, he left the sapling, and came straight for me. I emptied my revolver at him, not twenty yards away from him (and as a proof I was hitting him, one of my bullets was found embedded in his box of cartridges), but he came on steadily, saying ‘Fire away, you bloody dogs, you can’t hurt me.’ I thought it was all over with me, and threw myself down at the butt of a large fallen tree, reloading as quickly as possible. On looking up I found he had walked into a trap, between two large limbs of the tree I was at. I could now see Steele circling from the left, and Kelly on the right, so I called out to the figure to give up (so as to distract his attention from them), but he said, ‘No, never while I have a shot left.’ As I thought I had a good shot for his head, he being not more than fifteen yards away, I fired, hitting him full on the head, but not having the slightest effect on him. As I fired I said, ‘How do you like that, old man?’ He replied, ‘How do you like this?’ and he leant over the log, firing as he did so. I saw Steele fire twice, I think, and he seemed to fall backwards. I ran up, and jumping over the log, saw Steele and he on the ground. I grasped the revolver from him as he fired, and Senior-Constable Kelly, coming up almost at the same moment, pulled his headgear off. Steele at once recognized him, and would have shot him, but I said, ‘No, take him alive.’ I mention this because you did not recognize Dowsett in the matter at all. He must have been very close to you at the time. Is that statement true?—The statement in regard to pulling the helmet off is incorrect. The moment he touched the ground the helmet dropped off. The statement in reference to wounding the revolver out is not correct. I got the revolver like that—[showing his meaning]—and seized him by the wrist, and twisted it out of his hand, and threw it down. Mr. Marsden was present when Dowsett put his hand forward to take the revolver. I said, ‘Do not take that; that is my property.’

9262. Where is that now?—I don’t know. I made a report about it. I handed it to Mr. Marsden and he read “New South Wales” on it. I told Mr. Sadleir about it when I went to the station.

9263. You have told the Commission that the police ran away, except yourself. Is this statement correct that Dowsett makes in which he states that he had a conversation with Constable Kelly, that he fired at him several shots, and he and Constable Kelly were coming up to attack him at the time you fired—is that correct?—Not so far as I can judge. He was in the scrub with Montfort, as far as I can judge.

9264. You stated several ran away?—I said they retreated.

9265. Did they run away?—They did open out and retire.

9266. Is this correct that Dowsett came to render assistance, and fired several shots before you fired?—I believe he fired shots.

9267. Is it correct that Senior-Constable Kelly was coming forward at that time?—No, that is not.
9269. If Kelly swears that he will be saying what is not correct?—He will be saying what is not correct.

9270. If Dowsett is correct that he fired several shots and was coming forward to Kelly, will your statement be correct that, had it not been for you, Kelly would have made his way to the hotel?—There was no person between that and the hotel.

9271. Could he have got there?—I believe he would, from my observation.

9272. You remember now Dowsett being present on that occasion?—Yes.

9273. And you remember he fired shots?—I did not see him. I believe he did.

9274. You remember the scuffle he had with you over Ned Kelly?—There was no scuffle.

9275. Do you remember the words, “do not shoot him”?—They were not used. I did not know Dowsett at the time.

9276. You say you wrested the revolver from the hand of Ned Kelly?—Yes.

9277. And you deny Dowsett doing it?—He certainly did not; and Ned Kelly said to me, “Steady, do not break my finger.” I got his finger in the trigger, and threw him down on the ground, and held him by the beard, as Senior-Constable Kelly came round. Dowsett stood just below Dr. Nicolson and Mr. Marsden.

9278. As to the revolver—after you fired at him and he fell, the very first weapon you seized was the revolver over his shoulder?—He was looking at me. He put the revolver back like that—[explaining]—and I saw him try to bring the revolver to bear on me, and I caught the revolver—that was the first thing I did. He fired. I then twisted it round, and threw him down, and caught him by the beard.

9279. Was it not the shots of Constable Arthur that drove him back?—No, he did not retreat back. He was coming. Suppose this was the back of the house, he came down that way—[pointing out on the plan].

9280. Do you recollect Kelly calling out, “Look out, you will be snagged”?—He said, “Look out, you ——, you will be snagged.”

9281. To whom?—Constable Arthur. He fired two shots at Constable Arthur. When he fired those two shots he laughed.

9282. You did not mention before his firing at Arthur. Did he call out that immediately he steadied himself?—Yes.

9283. Was Arthur the first constable that fired at him?—Yes.

9284. With reference to the police running—do you mean to convey that they ran away or opened up?—I say I think Constable Arthur ran a considerable distance. I do not say the other police. They went to shelter—they would have been shot if they had not. The others retreated from tree to tree, but the men that were there, as he came on the rear, if they did not retreat, he must have shot them. I do not attribute cowardice to the men. Only Constable Arthur, who went an unnecessary distance away from the house.

9285. Kelly aimed twice at him, and he was the first man that fired at him?—Yes.

9286. And you think he retired an unnecessary distance?—Yes.

9287. Where was he when he first retreated?—[Pointing to the plan]—There is the lying log here, about eighty yards from the house.

9288. Where were the people that were looking at the capture at the railway station?—Here—[pointing to the plan].

9289. Therefore, if Arthur had fired with his rifle at Kelly, and missed him, was there a probability of his shooting the people at the railway station?—No, certainly not. It would have gone more towards the point of the spur of the hill.

9290. By Mr. Hare.—You think that the entire credit of the Kelly capture is due to you—do you imply as much as that?—I shot him and arrested him.

9291. Was he not shot before?—Yes, I admit, but he was not dead—a long way from it.

9292. He was shot in the foot, was he not?—Yes, I have said so.

9293. With what?—A bullet.

9294. Do you know where the bullet penetrated?—No.

9295. You did not see his foot?—I just saw the boot taken off, and a wound under the ball of the foot.

9296. Are you aware the bullet was taken out of his foot afterwards at Beechworth?—No.

9297. Could he walk well when you arrested him?—Yes. I did not think he had got a scratch, when I saw him coming down.

9298. Had you not to carry him to the railway station?—Yes; he was shot in the leg and groin with buck-shot. He was walking deliberately about, and said, “Come out, boys, and we will whip them.”

9299. What was the wound in the arm?—He was shot through the fleshy part of the arm.

9300. The lower arm and the upper?—Yes.

9301. It went through two places then?—Yes.

9302. When were those shots received?—I could not tell.

9303. Did he not tell you—you have told hearsay and rumors—did he not tell you when?—From hearsay I can tell you. He said he was shot in the morning, early.

A. L. M. Steele, 31st May 1881.
9304. You have told the Commission rumors that were going about; I ask you what Kelly said?—I said already there were old wounds.
9305. By the Commission.—Can you say they were done at a prior date by their appearance?—Yes.
9306. Is that further confirmed by the statement made by Kelly when he got them?—Yes.
9307. In the foot as well?—Yes.
9308. By Mr. Hare.—Had he bled very much?—He must have bled very considerably.
9309. Out of the two wounds in the arm and in the foot?—Yes.
9310. From the wounds before your shot?—He must have bled considerably before I shot him.
9311. You said he would have got back into the house had it not been for you?—I believe so.
9312. Could not Mr. O'Connor have prevented him from his position?—What was the good of shooting at him?

9313. Could not Mr. O'Connor have done so before he got into the house?—If he kept that strip of scrub, Mr. O'Connor could have only seen him a few yards, and I do not believe he could have shot him. I do not think he could have hit him in the legs from there. It would have been a chance if they had. They would have shot at his body naturally I suppose.
9314. The party round the house—Mr. O'Connor and Senior-Constable Kelly—were there two hours before you?—Yes.
9315. Are you sure that you heard the first shots that morning?—The only reason—the station master said he thought he heard the train, and I ran down the line and heard a volley fired then.
9316. You do not know whether that was the first volley?—No.
9317. There might have been a volley half-an-hour before that?—From what I can hear from men—

9318. From your own knowledge?—I tell you from hearsay—from what I heard from the men, I believe it was the first volley.
9319. Why?—Because the second one, they say, followed in a few minutes after.
9320. What do you mean by the first volley—a number of shots?—Just like firing a volley, and then an odd rifle shot after, then there was a pause for a minute and a half or two minutes.
9321. Do you think 150 shots fired?—No.
9322. That volley consisted of about how many shots?—I cannot say; a volley might be 500 shots.
9323. By the Commission.—It is impossible for a man that distance to tell.
9324. By Mr. Hare.—You said in your evidence yesterday that I implied by the questions I put to Falkiner that you turned your back upon the outlaws?—Yes, I think you could have explained that.
9325. Was that your answer?—No, I did not turn my back.
9326. You went in the opposite direction?—I went towards Beechworth; it was not exactly back.
9327. Did you, when you left Wangaratta that morning, or on arrival at Beechworth, telegraph to Mr. Sadleir to tell him how certain you were they were the outlaws?—I do not recollect whether I did or not.
9328. Were you not told that those persons supposed to be the outlaws were leading a horse similar to the one taken from Kennedy—a pack-horse?
9329. By Mr. Hare (to the witness).—Are you certain that Mr. Smith had any men there?—I know Constable Twinommy told me he had.
9330. Mounted or foot?—The foot men were mounted then; five or six I think Twinommy told me.
9331. Do you know the names of any of the men who were stationed at Wangaratta then?—Yes.
9332. Who kept the books while you were away?—Sometimes they were not kept at all; they lay there till I came back.
9333. It can be found, from the occurrence book, what men were available for Mr. Smith on that day?—I think it would be very difficult to tell, because there were parties out nearly every day.
9334. The books would tell?—Not if the books were neglected.
9335. Constable Twinommy can tell?—Yes. I think there were three foot men and three mounted.
9336. Do you know that the station master at Wangaratta put in a claim to the Reward Board, in consequence of the information he gave that morning?—No, I do not.
9337. Did he say it was not his fault that the Kellys were not caught—that the information was certain, and that you had been heard to say it was the best information since the Kellys were out?—I never heard that. The station master was not the first that told me.

9338. Did you receive a telegram about it?—No, not at all—it was merely gossip about it, and I told.

9339. Mr. Sadleir all about it; and I have already given full evidence as to what I did.

9340. Did you go to Rats’ Castle?—Yes.

9341. You went to Beechworth first?—Yes, and on to Rats’ Castle, and got, late at night, into Yackandandah.

9342. By the Commission.—When did you first see Mr. Sadleir after that?—Some days after.

9343. About what day?—About three days after.

9344. Then three days went on before you gave the information to Mr. Sadleir?—It might have been two or three.

9346. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—You were not in the district then?—No.

9347. Mr. Sadleir objected to Mr. Hare’s line of examination.

The Chairman intimated to Mr. Hare that it would be better not to pursue the course of examination objected to.

9348. By the Commission (to the witness).—Was it not clearly your duty to do as you did, and let your officer, he having got the information, take the steps he thought desirable?—Yes, I thought so.

9349. Did you know how many men Mr. Smith had with him?

9350. That was old information, and you were quite satisfied the other was the Kellys?—It was possible I might have been mistaken, but my opinion was that it was the outlaws.

9351. It was clearly your duty to let Mr. Sadleir know this at once?—I sent to the Inspector of Police, who was at the station; and I had to do my own duty.

9352. By Mr. Hare.—Do you remember, on my return to Wangaratta, after Mr. Nicolson went down the second time, the conversation I had with you about agents—about the system of employing agents—about the middle of June?—Yes; I recollect you were very different in your manner. You seemed to adopt a different system, and to place more reliance on your sub-officers then, when you came back the second time. I could understand from your manner on the second visit that you intended to work with the sub-officers.

9353. Did I not on the first occasion?—Not with me. When I say “did not work,” I think you might have let me know a little more.

9354. By the Commission.—Was it not clearly your duty to do as you did, and let your officer, he having got the information, take the steps he thought desirable?—Yes, I thought so.

9355. Do you remember telling me you had not much faith in agents?—I told you I had no faith in Aaron Sherritt. That was the only man I had not faith in.

9356. Do you remember telling me you had not much faith in agents?—I told you I had no faith in Aaron Sherritt. That was the only man I had not faith in.

9357. Do you remember about another man employed in your sub-distinct, without any reference to you?—No.

9358. By Mr. Bickerton.

9359. Did you receive a telegram about it?—No, not at all—it was merely gossip about it, and I told.

9361. Was he the president of the shire council?—He may have been.

9362. Was he?—I do not think he was. My reason for mentioning this to Mr. Hare was to show the evil of my not knowing the agents, and Mr. Nicolson saw the danger of it himself afterwards.

9363. By the Commission.—You said there was a difference in the conduct of your officer, as far as you were concerned, on his second arrival in the district, in his treatment of his sub-officers—what do you mean by that?—He gave me more information, and seemed more disposed to let me know what was going on. At first I knew nothing. When Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir came to Wangaratta I knew they were in communication with agents about there; and they went away, and I was just as wise when they left as when they came.
9364. But on Mr. Hare returning to duty, about a month prior to the capture of the Kellys, I understand you to say he went more into the details and consulted you as to the working?—Yes, that is what I mean.

9365. By Mr. Hare.—Was there not an officer stationed at Wangaratta senior to me on the previous occasion when I was up—Superintendent Furnell?—Yes, but you know that Mr. Furnell was more in our way than anything else.

9366. I do not know anything about that?—He was there, and he was not recognized by the Chief Commissioner. I was in charge actually.

9367. By the Commission.—Why was he not?—He was not able to stand the work. He was a man that had been discharged from the police force and had been taken on again.

9368. Was Mr. Furnell discharged from the force?—Yes.

9369. And then taken on for temporary duty?—Yes; he was not physically fit for the duty.

9370. Was not he gazetted out of the force?—I think so.

9371. Did you recognize him as your senior officer?—I heard Mr. Furnell complain that neither Mr. Hare nor Mr. Sadleir would recognize him, and I think there was some correspondence with the Chief Commissioner about it.

9372. Did you recognize him as your superior officer?—I referred some things to him, and he threw them back to me, and said, "I have nothing to do with those; you have charge of the station."

The witness withdrew.

James Dwyer sworn and examined.

9373. By the Commission.—What are you?—A constable stationed in Melbourne. I joined the police force on the 14th January 1873.

9374. Were you engaged in the North-Eastern District in the search for the Kellys?—Yes; a few days after the murders of the police by the Kellys in the ranges I made application to Captain Standish to give me permission to go in pursuit of them. I stated in that application that I would do my best to search for and capture them or die in the attempt, and now I can truthfully tell you that I faithfully kept my word.

9375. Was it single-handed you went?—No, joined in search parties.

9376. Were you out in search parties?—I was in the search parties through the Strathbogie Ranges and other places.

9377. Did you, at any time, have information so far as you believed that you were considered to be near upon the track of the Kellys?—I got information, but it was not reliable; like all others, it was untruthful.

9378. Do you consider the information was given for the purpose of capturing the Kellys, or deceiving the police?—I believe at the time it was for the purpose of capturing the Kellys, but when it is hunted up it was found not to be truthful.

9379. Do you mean it was given too late?—Too late; there was no truth in it at all.

9380. Do you think any of that supposed information was given for the purpose of deceiving the police?—Yes; at the time of the Jerilderie bank robbery we were out in Strathbogie, and the informant who led us to go there stated he saw Ned Kelly on a Friday night a fortnight previous. We were there when we got the account of the sticking-up of the bank.

9381. Might they not have been in the ranges at the time?—We never found the slightest trace of them there; and this informant, when questioned, we found was a man who had served a sentence for horse-stealing, and was a sympathizer with the gang.

9382. You consider he gave false information?—Afterwards we did.

9383. Was he paid by the Government?—I never heard so. He gave the information voluntarily, to lead the police out there while the outlaws were committing this depredation upon the bank.

9384. Do you consider that any of those that were paid by the Government were not true men I believe some of them did act with truthfulness, and did try to assist the police.

9385. Were you in a position to know who was employed?—I know Sherritt was.

9386. Were you impressed with the truthfulness of Sherritt?—I was at that time.

9387. Were you afterwards?—No. I was at Bethanga at the time when I mistrusted him.

9388. What led to that?—People that lived near him, in conversation with them, telling me that Sherritt was leading the police astray and was a sympathizer with the Kellys, and I questioned those people, and they gave me the reasons.

9389. Did you believe them?—I believed them at the time; I believed, too, at that time the Kelly gang were not in the country.

9390. Were you one of the cave party at any time?—No, I never was round there.

9391. Were you in Sherritt’s house watching?—No.

9392. In what part of the country were you principally stationed?—Benalla, Eldorado, Bethanga, on the borders of the Murray, Murchison, on the Goulburn.

9393. Where were you when the information came that Sherritt was shot?—In Wangaratta.

9394. Were you one of those who went down in the train from Wangaratta to Glenrowan?—Yes.

9396. How long did you take then to get in?—Mr. Rawlins, who volunteered to go with Mr. Hare, when the engine-driver was approaching this place where the rails were torn up, struck a match, and the engine-driver pulled up, and we got down and went to Rawlins, who told us then, how Mr. Hare was shot and what was done up to that time.

9397. Did you hear what he said?—He said, in approaching the house, accompanying Mr. Hare and Mr. O’Connor, the verandah lit up with a volley from the Kelly gang on the police, and Mr. Hare was shot, and said, “Oh! I am shot in the first volley,” and Mr. O’Connor said, “Where?” Mr. Hare said, “In the wrist, get your men,” and, turning to Rawlins and the men, said, “At your peril, men, do not let them escape.” Mr. Hare stood in the open fire and holding the gun in his hand the blood gushed out, and holding his hand up in his button-hole he fired again. Mr. Rawlins described how he got shot and what was done after.

9398. What did you do when Mr. Rawlins told you that?—He told us, too, Mr. O’Connor was with his men and directing the men to take their positions, and he saw Mr. O’Connor waving his hand to his men to go round the house and saw himself get into the trench.

9399. What did you do as soon as you got this information?—Mr. Rawlins was talking very affectionately of Mr. Hare, saying, “Poor fellow, he had to go back for loss of blood;” and I said, “My God, you do not infer by that he is dead.” Mr. Rawlins said, “I hope to heaven no.”

9400. Did you come on from the place?—A volley had been fired from the house, I had heard. We ran to the house, and down to the railway station.

9401. How long did it take?—Five minutes.

9402. What time did you arrive?—Twenty minutes to five—we were, about twenty to five, where the rails were torn up—and Rawlins took five minutes to give his information, and then five minutes to get there. The reporters of the press came forward—Mr. McWhirter of the Age, Mr. Allen of the Telegraph came forward—and, knowing me, said, “By George, Dwyer, we are glad to see you from the city.” They pulled out their books to note the time I arrived; and I said, “As you are going to make honorable mention of it, there is Sergeant Steele, and Constables Moore, Caussey, Welsh, and Montfort.” Mr. Carringtou put it down and took out his watch.

9403. Did you tell the reporters in the morning?—This was when we first saw them in the morning.

9404. Were they able to take it down?—They had their books, taking it down.

9405. Was it light at the time for them to write?—It was coming on to dawn of day, but it was before day. Mr. Carrington pulled out his watch, and said, “It is ten minutes to five.”

9407. Where were you then?—On the platform of the railway station. The whole of us walked down the platform—the reporters of the press, and Mr. Marsden, the petty sessions clerk, and all of us. The train came in, and Mr. Sadleir was the first jumped out where I was standing, and asked me, “Where is Mr. O’Connor?” I said, “I do not know, sir; I have just arrived.” At this, Senior-Constable Kelly came running down, and Mr. Sadleir saw him, and turned from me on seeing him, and asked him the same question, “Where is Mr. O’Connor?” Kelly, pointing with his finger, said, “He is up in the drain in the front of the house.” Mr. Sadleir said, “I want you to show me to him.” At this, Mr. Sadleir turned round to the men, who were all at the train at the time, and standing in a mob on the platform, and said, “Come on, men, spread yourselves round the house and assist the others, walk three yards apart, so that you will not be a target for the outlaws to fire at you.” He passed, accompanied by Senior-Constable Kelly, and went to Mr. O’Connor; and Kelly turned after showing him where Mr. O’Connor was, and took ground to the right.

9408. What side of the house?—The north side—the Wangaratta side, where I found him afterwards. Mr. Sadleir passed on, after leaving Kelly, into the trench where O’Connor was. That was about twenty-five or thirty yards from Jones’s house. I walked down the line with Sergeant Whelan and some others towards the gate, as Mr. Sadleir was approaching the trench where Mr. O’Connor was. Ther was a shot passed me to the windward in the direction of Mr. Sadleir. I saw the windows lit up as the volley was fired. It was at Mr. Sadleir, from the two outlaws in the house.

9409. How could you prove it was at Mr. Sadleir?—Because the whiz of the bullets was so near, I could see he narrowly escaped at the time. I heard the whiz of the bullets over the heads of the men at the rear of me; it whizzed over their heads, and they made the remark at the time, some of them, that Mr. Sadleir had a narrow escape.

9410. Where was Mr. O’Connor?—In the trench.

9411. How far was Mr. Sadleir from Mr. O’Connor at the time of the whizzing?—Fifteen or twenty yards.

9412. Nearer the railway station?—Yes; he was in the open. I got up on the road leading through the gate, and Constable Millane, on the Benalla side of the house, called me, “Where are you going, Dwyer? get under cover or you will be shot.” I looked round to see where I could get under cover, and I could see nowhere only where Mr. Sadleir went in the trench.

9413. How far had you advanced up the road then?—I had just crossed the culvert to where it was metallled and got into the drain.

9414. Had you passed through the railway fence?—No; I got into the trench down with them, and heard Mr. Sadleir express to Mr. O’Connor, “How have you got on, I know nothing.” Mr. O’Connor repeated what he had done up to that time, and spoke about Mr. Hare being shot, and spoke very affectionately about him, and sorry for the mishap he had got. At this same time the women began to scream out and yell. Mr. Sadleir said, “Oh, there are civilians inside.”

9415. Who was in the trench when you were there besides Mr. O’Connor?—There were two trackers and Constable Kirkham. Mr. O’Connor said, “Oh, it is full of them.” Mr. Sadleir then said, “By George, if they are there, we cannot fire into it, we will be only killing innocent people.” The police at this time were firing round at the Benalla side.

9416. Into the house?—Yes.

9417. What police?—The men that came with Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare’s men that had spread themselves round that side; and Mr. Sadleir said, while talking about the outlaws in the house, that they could not be sure they were all in the house; and I said when we heard in Wangaratta that Mr. Hare had them surrounded, we knew they would not escape, we knew that they were right. My heart was so sure and my mind impressed that wherever Mr. Hare would come on them they would never escape, and I volunteered to Mr. Sadleir, if he had any orders to give to the men, I would take them; that was in the trench. I was armed with a double-barrelled gun and a Colt’s revolver, and I knew how to use them well. Here is some of the ammunition I had at the time—[producing the same]. This ammunition was not able to penetrate the house.

9418. What sort of a whistle was this; did he tell you what sort?—A whistle with his fingers.

9420. How did you know that?—I heard Mr. Sadleir calling out “All you innocent people throw yourselves flat on the ground, and you will not be shot”—that was Mr. Sadleir’s voice.

9421. Were there shots then?—Yes; they were firing from above and below, and the outlaws firing also; and the same time I heard them call upon the civilians to come out, and they would not be molested.

9422. About what hour was that?—About half-past six o’clock.

9423. Daylight?—It was drawing for day. I passed on to all the other men, Constables Reilly, Kelly, and Welsh.

9424. Where was Kelly?—In the centre, at the Benalla side, in the centre from the gully—that was foot-constable Kelly.

9425. That is the big fat constable in Benalla?—Yes, in Benalla. While delivering these orders the outlaws saw me running, and they expressed, “Knock that b——— over.” As I was running delivering the orders from one to the other—— 9426. Did you run pretty smartly?—I did from one man to the other to avoid the bullets.

9427. Did you hear the whizzing?—Yes, very well, the whizzing about through the trees from the constables. Constables Welsh, Kelly, and Reilly seeing my narrow escapes, called upon me not to run about, I might get shot. If I had any word they would pass it round the line from man to man. They passed on and went to the back of the stockyard outside the fence. Constables Moore and Caussey were at the tree behind this fence.

9428. What time did you arrive there about?—About half-past six o’clock; it was daylight then, They told me they had taken up good positions, and the outlaws’ horses were standing inside the fence.

9429. Did you see them?—Yes, I did; and Constable Moore told me their object was, if the outlaws attempted to come out and make an escape with their armour on to mount the horses, they would shoot the horses and so prevent them.

9430. You knew at half-past six in the morning that the outlaws were there in armour?—Yes, that was the first time, and before that I heard them running round, and they hit their armour with the revolvers, and said, “Fire away, you ——, you cannot kill, we will put the daylight through you.” I said, “It is a very good idea, and I will tell Mr. Sadleir so.”

9431. To shoot the horses?—Yes, I looked down then, and saw Sergeant Steele, Constable Montford, and others round the north side, down by the railway fence.

9432. Did you speak to Sergeant Steele?—I did not, I saw them. My object was to see so as to tell Mr. Sadleir the house was well surrounded.

9433. You were not going round to tell Mr. Sadleir anything; you said you were going round to convey certain instructions from Mr. Sadleir. What did you say to Sergeant Steele?—I did not speak to him.

9434. To any one near him?—I did not; I saw they had taken up their positions.

9435. Were you not going down to convey orders from Mr. Sadleir to the men?—Yes.

9436. Then how was it you did not convey those orders to the men on the Wangaratta side?—I turned back because some of the men called out, “Bring us up some ammunition.” Some had only five and some only ten rounds. I was talking to Constable Caussey then behind the horses.

9437. Where did you go then?—I turned back the same road as I came, to get the ammunition from Mr. Sadleir, to bring it up to the men.

9438. You did not tell those men at the back of the stockyard that Mr. Sadleir had instructed the men to fire high?—Yes.

9439. Did you ask those men to convey that information round to Sergeant Steele and his men?—I did, to pass the word round.

9440. Which of the constables did you tell?—Constable Alexander, I think.

9441. Did you see Gascoigne?—I did.
Where was he?—He was round at the Benalla side too.

Did you speak to him?—I believe I did. There are so many I could not particularize them all; and going back to Mr. Sadleir, I said “The men are short of ammunition, tell me where it is till I take it up to them.” Mr. Sadleir said, “I do not know where it is, or whether there is any at the station. Every man that came with me brought a hundred rounds, and I do not know whether there is any at the station.” Mr. O’Connor said then, “Then send for it.” Mr. Sadleir then took out his memo. book and scribbled a telegram on it for me to take to the railway station, and send it to Benalla for ammunition.

Where was Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor at this time?—In the trench. I met Mr. Sadleir out of the trench; he was standing in a very dangerous position. The bullets were whizzing round him, and his bravery at that time cheered me. My feelings towards him were that of a brother, and I would follow him to the mouth of the outlaw’s gun at the time.

Where was he standing?—He was out on the open.

Was he outside the railway fence?—He was near the fence leading up to Mother Jones’s house, but still partly in the trench, partly covered like.

What time would that be that you got back to Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor?—It was before he gave me this paper.

What time was it that you were at the stockyard—half-past six?—I cannot mistake, because I looked at my watch.

What time was it then?—Twenty-five minutes to seven. He gave me the paper, and I left, and went up to the railway station. Approaching the railway station, Mr. McWhirter and Mr. Allen came forward and said, “What is it, Dwyer?” seeing me with this paper in my hand. I said, “It is only a telegram for more ammunition.” I then asked where was the station master, as I wanted to send this telegram. Mr. Stanistreet came forward, and I gave him this paper, and he sent it forward to Benalla.

Was there any ammunition at the station?—No. Mr. McWhirter said, “Why, Dwyer, one of the outlaws is out in the bush, and the men are firing at him.” I looked up, seeing where they were, and saw Ned Kelly at the time. He had on a grey top-coat. He said, “Fire away, you b———s, you cannot kill me; I am encased in armour.

You heard that?—Yes; and said, “Come out, boys, and we will lick the lot of them,” beckoning to the other two outlaws, “Come out, and whip the lot of them; Oh, you b———s, we will put the daylight through you.” I ran away from the reporters. Allen had hold of me by the right arm, keeping me back, saying, “Do not, Dwyer, you may be shot;” and tearing myself away from him, I fell on my right side; he had such a grip of me; and the first man I met was Constable Bracken, behind a tree, after crossing the railway fence. He said, pointing with his finger, “There is Ned Kelly.” I said, “Why not rush him; I am told he has armour on, you cannot kill him.” I heard the police on my left say, “Certainly, boys, let us rush him,” and on looking I saw Senior-Constable Kelly. I was then rushing up to rush Ned Kelly, and when about twenty yards I fired one barrel. At this time Ned Kelly was crossing a dry creek towards the log where he fell.

What did you fire with?—My shot gun. Ned Kelly was then walking towards the dry creek coming down, and he turned round to fire at me, covering me. I was looking down at my gun to pull back the empty cartridge, I heard some one call out, “Look out, Dwyer, he has you covered.”

Who was it?—I did not know who it was at the time. I heard afterwards it was Mr. Rawlins—he told me so. While he was firing, Sergeant Steele fired at him.

Did you see Sergeant Steele?—I did, and Ned Kelly dropped down. He was near the dead tree, and dropped down on his haunches like this—indicating the same, and when Sergeant Steele was running up, Ned Kelly at this tried to shoot him with his revolver, and Sergeant Steele grasped it and turned it over.

Did you see that?—Yes, we were running up. Senior-Constable Kelly, Bracken, and I were running up at the time. Sergeant Steele was the first and us three after; Sergeant Steele was at his head.

Then yourself; Bracken, and Senior-Constable Kelly were all rushing at the outlaw when Sergeant Steele fired and closed with him?—Yes.

9457. You said Steele shot at him, and he fell as he shot at him?—Yes.

9458. And as he was firing he held the revolver that way?—Yes, and Steele rushed forward and pulled it out of his hand and laid it by his side. I vaulted over the log and got at Ned Kelly’s feet as he was bending on his knees. Sergeant Steele had him with his left hand across his neck, this way—[indicating the same]. Senior-Constable Kelly was standing behind, Bracken had hold of Kelly’s left arm, and I was in front. Kelly was trembling with fear, and said, “Do not kill me, let me live as long as I can. I never injured one of you.” The helmet fell off as he was firing.

9459. After or before the revolver was taken?—Before it was taken.

9460. Did you see the railway guard Dowsett there?—He was about the fourth or fifth man that came up. Constable Montfort was about the same time, about the fourth man, and after him Dowsett, and then the reporters of the press.

9461. How long was it before Dowsett came?—Not five seconds.

9462. Did you see Dowsett fire before you reached Kelly?—No, the first I saw of Dowsett was under the log with his head out.

9463. Did you see him fire?—I did not.

9464. Was that the log Ned Kelly was behind?—No, it was lower down, towards the railway fence. Senior-Constable Kelly was nearer the fence than Dowsett.

9465. It is said you wanted to make short work of him on that occasion?—I never made use of that expression.

9466. That you were going to finish him off?—I never made use of that expression.

9467. What did you say?—When he said he never injured any of us, I said, “You d—— wretch after your shooting my comrade and Mr. Hare, and when poor Kennedy was begging his life of you as you are begging yours of us, you shot him like a dog.”

9468. Did you give him a friendly kick?—I did not. The kick I gave him was the kick I would give a cow to wake her up. It was to show my contempt; it would not have hurt a child. He said, “For God’s sake, let me live as long as I can.”

9469. He did not want to die?—No; he showed all the symptoms of cowardice.

9470. You did not believe much in his courage?—What roused me was having heard he would never be taken alive, and then seeing his cowardice at the time.

9471. What did you do, because it has been stated publicly that you were going to finish him off on that occasion?—I never expressed such a word.

9472. On your oath, you say all you did was when you went down towards his feet, and you said to him, when he was begging his life, that he had shot Kennedy like a dog, and you kicked him?—I gave him a tip with my boot. When the crowd was leaning over Kelly, two bullets whizzed past from the outlaws in the house.

9473. In what direction?—At the crowd of us. The two outlaws in the house fired at the crowd as they were looking at us capturing Kelly. I saw them outside, between the kitchen and dwelling part of the house. Mr. Melvin, of the Argus, called out, “Keep watch, keep watch!” addressing himself more to me. I left the crowd to go back to Mr. Sadleir, and, passing in view of the outlaws, one of them came out from the kitchen door and levelled his gun, and I did the same with mine, and he drew back; and the other police, seeing him, put a shower of bullets at him. The police round the trees at that side—Arthur and Montefort and others—fired a shower of bullets at him. I saw the bark shot off the side of the kitchen door, where he was standing. He said, “Fire away, you b——s, you cannot kill me.”

9474. Did you see Constable Arthur before you saw Sergeant Steele shoot Kelly?—No, I did not.

9475. How long after was it before you saw him?—About three minutes.

9476. Where did you first see Arthur after you left Kelly?—When I was going back to Mr. Sadleir. I met him coming up to the crowd from where he was.

9477. How far from Ned Kelly, should you think?—This was after Ned Kelly was captured.

9478. How far was where you met him from where he was captured?—About 20 yards.

9479. Did you see him running away?—No.

9480. Did you see any of the constables firing at Kelly except Sergeant Steele?—No, I did not see any only Sergeant Steele. Passing in front of the house, two bullets whizzed at me from the two outlaws in the house, and Mr. Sadleir, seeing my narrow escape, exclaimed, “Good God, Dwyer, why are you going about in that reckless manner, you will be shot?” I said, “I came down, sir, to inform you of Ned Kelly’s capture.”

9481. Where did you find Mr. Sadeir then?—He was in the trench.

9482. Where you had left him with Mr. O’Connor?—Yes. Mr. Sadleir asked, “Are you sure?” and I said, “Yes, sir, for there is his blood on my hand and trousers”—that was his left hand laid on mine and the thigh of my trousers. Mr. Sadleir asked who was the first man caught him. “Sergeant Steele was,” I answered, and described then how he was captured, and what I did from the time I left him. I then went up to the station to see if there was ammunition there, to bring it to the men who had not much. Approaching the railway station where the train was, I saw Mr. Rawlins and one of the reporters of the press leaning on the carriage window, talking to Mrs. O’Connor and her sister, Miss Smith, and I head Mrs. O’Connor express—“Oh, if I had seen any man who could tell me how he is” (meaning Mr. O’Connor) “for I have not seen or heard of him since he left my side.” I, hearing the remark, said, “Here you are, I have just left him in the trench.” I saw she was crying, and looked very pitifully, and, to cheer her, I said, “There is no occasion for you to fret or make yourself miserable, he is all right,” and I commenced to laugh to cheer her up. She said, “My poor fellow, will you have a drink of brandy?” I was dreadfully fatigued and hungry at the time, and had nothing to eat since Sunday evening, and been out all the time. She called the sister, and said, “Give him a nip.” I answered, “Yes, please, I feel the want of it very much.” The sister said, “Oh, give him a nip, and she poured out the brandy with some milk, and also gave me the bottle of brandy to take round to all the men that would take it. Some were teetallers, and would not take it, and some of the men said, “For God’s sake, Dwyer, bring us something to cat; we are starving.” I went round to tell Mr. Sadleir this, and to send for some provisions. He was then giving orders about the safety of Ned Kelly at the station, when I told him about it. Ned Kelly on seeing me, on my entering the door, said, “Oh, here is the whom I fired my last shot at.” He was then on a stretcher.

He said, “What is your name?” I said, “My name is Dwyer.” He said, “Where are you from?” I said, “That is no matter to you.” I saw him looking wistfully at the bottle in my hand, and looking down I saw I had about a nobby in it, and I said, “Will you have a drink of brandy?” and he said, “Yes, please, if you will give it to me.” I said, “Why would I not?” He said, “Put the glass to my lips, I cannot—my hands are tied.” I put it to his lips, and some of the brandy fell on his big beard, and he put his hand up to suck the brandy in this way—[indicating his meaning]—and looking up at me, he said, “Give me a bit of bread, I am very hungry.” Mr. Sadleir, hearing his remark, said, “You shall have every care and attention, Ned. Go, Dwyer, and see if you can get a bit of bread for him.” I went and got some scone cakes from Mrs. McDonald’s, and Mr. James Dwyer, continued.

1st June 1881.
Sadleir seeing from his sucking his beard that he would like more brandy, told me to fetch a bottle of brandy. Mr. Sadleir gave him the brandy, and I gave him the bread. Ned Kelly, looking up, said, “Thanks, Mr. Sadleir, this is more kindness than I ever thought to get. Mr. Sadleir replied, “You shall have every care and attention, Ned; do not irritate yourself; keep yourself quiet,” settling Ned Kelly’s head on the pillow, and some one putting cotton round his sore leg and arm. Mr. Sadleir said to Ned Kelly then, “Ned, the fate of the other two men is certain, do you think if you sent a message up to them, they would surrender?”

9483. There were three men?—Byrne was shot.

9484. Was it known to every one then?—Only from what Ned Kelly said that Byrne was shot when he was taken.

9485. How could he know?—He saw him drop.

9486. How do you know about that?—Ned Kelly said, when he saw his best friend dead, he had no more faith in them; he left the house.

9487. Did you hear him say that?—I believe I did hear Ned Kelly say that at the time. He told Mr. Sadleir they were cowards, and would not surrender.

9488. Mr. Sadleir said that “the fate of the two men is certain, do you think, if you send a message up, they will surrender”?—Ned Kelly said, “No, they are too cowardly,” and this is the time I know he said about losing his best friend.

9489. How long had Kelly been at the station when this conversation was heard by you?—It would not be above fifteen minutes.

9490. That would be about seven o’clock in the day?—Kelly was captured about sixteen minutes to seven. I looked at my watch when I got back to the trench by Mr. O’Connor, and it was then twelve minutes to seven.

9491. Were there any of the reporters about when this conversation took place?—There were not.

9492. Who was by?—Mr. Sadleir and I.

9493. Anyone else?—I did not see anyone else.

9494. Was Dowling there?—No.

9495. Did you see Dowling with Ned Kelly there?—Yes.

9496. What was he doing?—Like all the others, assisting.

9497. Did you see Dowling at the station with Kelly between seven and nine o’clock?—No.

9498. Did you see Dr. Nicholson?—Yes; while the conversation was going on, Dr. Nicholson was the first I saw come in to dress his wounds. Ned Kelly was bandaged at this time. As Dr. Nicholson came in, Mr. Sadleir told me to go and tell Mr. O’Connor to come up, that he wanted him. I went to the trench, and told Mr. O’Connor that Mr. Sadleir wanted him at the station. At this time, Mrs. O’Connor and the train she was in was whistling, going back to Benalla. Mr. O’Connor stood up in the trench, and was waving his handkerchief to her, and she was at the carriage window doing the same to him; and at that time two bullets passed from the outlaws in the house at Mr. O’Connor when he was standing in the trench; the bullets went through the railway wheels.

9499. Did you see them?—I heard the rattle of them going through the railway wheels; Mrs. O’Connor fell back on the seat, and Mr. O’Connor stood up, turned his gun and fired at the house, and said, “You ——, would you shoot my wife.” One of the trackers, while he was standing in the trench too with Mr. O’Connor there, a bullet went here, and made a trail through his hair, and he said, “Oh, I believe I am shot.”
9500. That was while you were in the trench?—Yes.

9501. You seem to have had a special gift for seeing bullets whizzing past; Mr. Sadleir described you as jumping over the bullets; did you see any particular bullets passing?—It is an absurd thing, with all due respect, to say that I jumped them. The words that Mr. Sadleir expressed I am sure could not be reported correctly.

9502. He said you were jumping about, going from point to point?—I was jumping about everywhere.

Mr. Sadleir.—I said as a bullet struck the ground before him he jumped.

9503. By the Commission.—How could you tell the bullet hit the train?—I heard the rattle of the bullet going through the wheels.

9504. But the train would make a noise?—The bullets made a noise like hitting a target.

9505. How could you hear the rattle of the bullet going through if it did not strike something?—I saw the dust of the bullet when it struck the wheel and heard the noise of it, the same as if it hit a target. The time I did jump was when I was coming to tell Mr. Sadleir, and when the bullets whizzed round me and they turned up the ground at my feet. I made a jump, when the bullet tore up the earth in front of me.

9506. When you were coming to Mr. Sadleir did any bullets strike the ground in front of you?—One bullet did, and the other passed close by me, and Mr. Sadleir heard it, and he made use of the expression.

9507. You did jump then?—Yes, that was the only time.

9508. What time in the morning was this?—Twelve minutes to seven.

9509. Daylight?—Broad daylight. I got in the trench and looked at my watch. It was twelve minutes to seven.

9510. Was Mr. O'Connor still in the trench at the time the train left conveying Mrs. O'Connor to Bemila?—He was standing straight up in the trench.

9511. Had you seen him anywhere from the time you arrived on the ground until the special train left in any other place except in the drain?—Up to that time I never saw him anywhere but there.

9512. What time was it when the train left with Mrs. O'Connor?—It would be near nine o'clock, I should think.

9513. Did you look at your watch about the time the train left?—No, not at that time.

9514. It appears that Senior-Constable Kelly, in his sworn evidence at Beechworth, stated that you had kicked Ned Kelly when he was down, and I find here in Mr. Sadleir’s report that you acknowledge you did so. “It will be seen from the evidence of Senior-Constable Kelly, 1925, in the examination of the prisoner Edward Kelly, before the Beechworth police court, that Constable Dwyer, 2507, kicked the prisoner when already secured by the other police. I may state that Constable Dwyer reported the circumstance to me himself, immediately after the occurrence, and expressed his regret that in the excitement of the moment he so far forgot himself”—Yes, I told Mr. Sadleir so.

9515. When you came down and told about the capture, you said you gave Kelly a kick?—Yes, I did.

9516. The question is this: was the kick given from vindictive feelings or disgust at his cowardice?—Disgust at his cowardice, having heard his friends say he would never be taken alive, and then hearing him call out what he did, it roused my indignation against him, as I have already said. The prisoners came out at ten minutes past ten. I was then at the railway station, eating a bit of dry bread and cheese on the platform, when I saw them rush out of the front with their hands up, crying out, “We are all innocent people; we are innocent—we are prisoners.”

9517. That was the men prisoners?—Yes, I ran up, and Mr. Melvin, of the Argus, the other civilians, and Mr. McWhirter. I ran into the crowd of prisoners as they rushed out. I had my gun ready, looking amongst them for the outlaws. I was under the impression that the outlaws had surrendered then themselves. Reardon was near me at the time. Not seeing the outlaws, I said to Reardon, “Where is the outlaws?” “They are in there, sir,” he answered, pointing with his finger to the window of the house.

9518. To the room they were in?—Yes. The two were standing at the window, and going back and forwards, like this, to get an open to fire with his gun, like this—[explaining his meaning by gesture]. Mr. Melvin, of the Argus, came up and laid his hand upon my shoulder, and I said, “Go back; do you see them inside going to fire out.” He did do so, and went back to a tree, and I went back with him. I was impressed then, that if I kept with the civilians, they would not fire at me; and I kept Reardon and the others close to me until I got to the north of the house. I was in plain clothes at the time. I took shelter behind a tree. I saw them then peeping out, going to the side of the window to look out. I saw a helmet on his head, and walking back and up the passage. I saw one get out from the dwelling-house to the back kitchen; and I ran round to the north side, thinking I might get a shot at him there. A second one came after him, and went into the kitchen too; and the thought struck me to go down to the railway station, to put on Ned Kelly’s armour. I did not tell anyone of it then that I would do so. I ran down to do so; and when I went to the railway station, Mr. Craven, of the Commercial hotel, Benalla, and Mr. Ball, and Mr. Shortell, and other civilians, they were looking at it; and Mr. Craven had the helmet of Ned Kelly fitting it on. Seeing me they spoke in a friendly way, and, talking about the armour, I said, “That is the very thing I came down for. I want to put it on and rush the house, and then the other men could come to my assistance.” One of those men—I do not know which—expressed, “It is a —— good idea, but perhaps it would be better not to go. You might get shot in the encounter.”

9519. Did you see Mr. Sadleir?—Not at that time.

9520. Did you suggest that to Mr. Sadleir?—No; the armour was so cumbersome and so heavy that I abandoned that idea and went back.

9521. Did you put it on?—Yes, some of it. I took the helmet from Mr. Craven—he had not the breast-plate and the rest of it; and when I took this breast-plate, I found it so heavy I thought I would do better without it, and rush. I went back again to the same place I left, and I heard Constable Armstrong, and saw him coming up to Mr. Sadleir. Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor were at this time walking round the lines.

9522. What did you hear Armstrong say?—I did not hear him say, but he himself told me after, that he would not allow it. Montfort said, “Well, I will go and ask him,” and he did, and he told him the same words.

9523. Did you hear Armstrong say?—I did not hear him say, but he himself told me after, that he had volunteered to rush the house.

9524. Did you volunteer to Mr. Sadleir to rush it?—Yes.

9525. When?—At half-past two.

9526. What did you say?—”Mr. Sadleir, there are four of us down behind the tree, Armstrong Dixon, Montford, and I, willing to rush the house, if you will let us, and put an end to this suspense.” “Indeed I will not,” he said, “I will not sanction any man to lose his life, and you should not ask me and you should not leave where you were. Go back and stop there.” I went back again to the constables. We were then within about twenty or twenty-five yards of the house, and Armstrong said, “What did he say?” and I told him that he would not allow it. Montfort said, “Well, I will go and ask him, and he did, and he told him the same words.

9527. Did Montfort tell you that?—He told us that Mr. Sadleir would not sanction it. The outlaws came to the front at this time and fired at us. They would fire a shot and then they might be half an hour before they would fire again.

9528. What time was this?—I saw them at half-past two coming from the back kitchen and going to the dwelling house.

9529. How many?—Two; one walked after the other. Constable Welsh of Wangaratta was with me at the time, and I said, “There they go, do you see them?”

9529. Where was the last shot fired—from what portion of the hotel that you saw?—The north window of the hotel, near the chimucy.

9530. Facing the front?—Yes.

9531. At what time?—It would be about half-past two.

9532. At what time did you see them at the back?—Half-past two.

9533. Did you see them at both places at the same time?—I saw them pass from the back to the front, and I left that position and went down to where Armstrong and Montfort were, behind the tree, twenty-five yards from the house. I remained there half an hour before I did volunteer to Mr. Sadleir; and at that place Armstrong said that he had volunteered; and he said, “Will you back me up?” He is a brave constable. I know his courage. We fired bullet after bullet at them, and we heard the heavy thud of one of them falling, like the rattle of the armour on the ground. I said, “There is one of them shot”; and I called out as loud as I could “There is one of them inside shot,” addressing the group of civilians at the station. I think Montfort went up and told Mr. Sadleir that one of them was shot inside.

9534. How far were you from the house then?—Twenty or twenty-five yards at the tree at the north of the chimney; and the four of us there heard it as plain as if the armour was thrown upon these boards.

9536. About what time?—At four o’clock.

9537. Did you see him before that?—Yes, when he arrived and after.

9538. Did you see him when you proposed to rush the place?—Yes, and a long time before that.

9539. Where was he stationed at the time you saw the outlaws—at the back of the hotel?—I could not tell, but at the time he set fire he was at the Benalla side. Half an hour after this heavy thud we heard another thud, and Constable Dixon said, “That is another shot.” That was about an hour before the fire was put to it. And a short time after that Mrs. Skillian rode down to the fence by us; and Montfort said, “Go back, Mrs. Skillian, you cannot come in here.” She had come down from the bush, and arrived on the scene and rode to the fence, and we all looked at her. She replied in a very low obscene expression, and turned her horse and went up to Mrs. McDonald’s house and came down on foot, and walked towards Mr. Sadleir, on the Benalla side, with Mr. O’Connor and other parties. What passed between them I cannot say. About five minutes after her appearing, Johnson came up and set fire to it. I saw him coming up with straw lit and setting fire. The priest, when the house was burning, came down and took off his hat, and blessed himself, going into the door; and he said, putting up his hands in this position—[holding up his hands]—“In the name of God, men, will you let me hear your confession?” addressing the outlaws in the house. I heard him say that as he entered the door of the hotel. He passed in and out of the back, and said, “Come up, men, these men are all dead,” addressing us at the tree. The four of us ran up, and Constable Armstrong and I took Joe Byrne, who was at the far end in the passage. I took Joe Byrne by the shoulders, and Armstrong by the feet, and lifted him out. At the door Mr. Sadleir, Mr. O’Connor, and others met us, and the priest, in the crowd, said, “Go back, constables, the other two men are on the beds.” We dropped Byrne and went back to the passage. The blaze of fire was coming and we put up our hands. Steve Hart had his feet up on the bed. He was burning down to here—[pointing to his waist]—and his feet were on the bed, and his hands in that position—[indicating the same]; and his face all burnt and his blood was passing and frizzling like a steak in a pan. Looking again to the left of us, the north end near the chimney, Dan Kelly was lying in this position—[indicating the same]. The left knee was crippled and his hand outstretched. His helmet was off; he had the armour on—the breast-plate; and on his neck and thighs and hand there was blood. I knew him to be Dan Kelly from the low forehead, and the description of them, and that the other must be Steve Hart.

9540. Could you swear those were the two men, Hart and Kelly?—Yes, I knew the man I saw in that position, with the black hair and sallow complexion, was Dan Kelly.

9541. How far apart from each other?—About six yards, the length of the dwelling house, one at one end and the other at the other end. Dan Kelly was at the chimney side, with his feet on the bed, opposite the window.

9542. How did they get together when the bodies were found?—They were not together.

9543. Opposite the window you say?—Yes, the full length of the house. The passage was in the centre, leading out, and we were in the passage, and saw on each side.

9544. That is one to the north and the other to the south?—Yes, the whole length of the house. We could not get to them because of the fire, and Armstrong said to me, “Come out, Dwyer, we cannot take them.”

9545. Were they dead at this time?—They were. “No,” I said, “we will have to leave them to their fate.”

9546. Did they have any appearance of having killed one another?—No, the blood I saw along the arms and neck and thighs led me to believe they were shot by the police, and that the heavy thuds we heard was their being shot.

9547. Did you see them before they were shot?—Yes, I have said so. Armstrong said, “Come out,” and I said “Yes, we will have to leave them to their fate,” and we had only just left the place where we were standing when the ceiling fell down.

9548. Were you and Armstrong the first to follow the priest?—Yes, the two first, and took out the body of Byrne.

9549. Did you go from the front door?—No, the back door.

9550. Then you must have gone round to the back when the priest went in at the front?—No, we did not stir till the priest came out.

9551. You said you heard the priest ask them to make a confession and you were twenty yards away in front of the house?—Yes.

9552. Where were you when you heard that?—At the north end of the house, the Wangaratta side, partly to the front and partly at the side.

9553. You saw the priest enter?—Yes.

9554. Did you see him come out again at the front?—No, at the back. He went in at the front and out at the back.

9555. Did he return out through the front again?—No, he went out of the back door.

9556. Then you entered at the back door?—Yes.

9557. You say you saw the priest coming out of the back door?—He went in at the front, looked at them, and they were dead, as I said, and passed out of the passage over the body of Joe Byrne, and out at the back door towards the kitchen, and said, “Come up, men, those men are all dead.” We ran round to where he was standing and passed him and went in and took out the body of Joe Byrne. The priest said, “Go back, the other two men are on the beds.”

9558. How far did you go in from the back door?—Just as far as the bar.

9559. Where were the two bodies lying when you found them?—[The witness pointed on the plan the positions he had previously referred to.]

9560. If any constables say that in taking out the bodies they got them close together would that be true?—Not true. When I came out I saw Mr. Sadleir taking Cherry out, and heard the expression, “Give me a drink of water.”

9561. If six witnesses swore that the priest came out of the front door would that, in your opinion, be incorrect?—It would be incorrect. He never entered the house after telling us.

9562. You swear that he came out of the back?—Yes, and stood between the kitchen and the back building, and no man could enter the house without my knowing it.

9563. How long was it from the priest went in at the front door, having taken off his hat and said what you said about confession, till Mr. Sadleir came to the door?—About a minute.

9564. Just time to pull out Joe Byrne’s body and to see that you could not get the others in consequence of the fire.

9565. How long would that be?—About a minute. He was up to the door taking the body of Cherry in a blanket, and I heard Cherry say, looking up, “Give me a drink of water.”

9566. Was the body of Byrne taken out at the back or front door?—The back door. Armstrong and I took it out and left it there.

9567. Is the back door out towards the skillion place where the yard is?—Yes.

9568. And the front door is towards the railway?—Yes.

9569. Do you know the tree Sergeant Steele says he was behind?—No. I saw him by a tree at the north.

9570. Do you know the tree that it is said Steele was behind?—No, I do not.

9571. Did you see him behind the tree?—No, I did not.

9572. Would that tree command that back door you spoke of?—Yes.

The witness withdrew.

The Chairman intimated to the officers present that the Commission had passed a resolution that the further attendance of the officers be dispensed with.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o’clock.

THURSDAY, 2nd JUNE 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;

E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P., G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,

J. H. Graves, Esq.; M.L.A.

James Dwyer further examined; cross-examined by Mr. O’Connor.

9573. When did you first come to Benalla during the time I was there?—In March.
9574. That was immediately after I arrived? Yes, about a week after.

9575. Can you inform the Commission if you know anything about Constable Kirkham being given over to me?—I heard he was given over to you to look after the black trackers.

9576. Did you and your comrades understand that he was under my orders?—I did, and he was so.

9577. Did you ever hear Constable Kirkham make the statement that I had nothing to do with him?—No, never.

9578. Coming to Glenrowan, when Mr. Sadleir upon the first occasion spoke to me in the trench, did you hear what I said to him?—I did.

9579. When I was speaking to Mr. Sadleir, did I tell him “There are a lot of prisoners in the house, but they are in the back part of the kitchen”?—Yes, those are the words you said.

9580. And did not I also say, “Therefore, our firing into the front of the house will not hurt them”?—Yes, you did; that was when Mr. Sadleir asked, “Are there civilians inside,” and you continued that conversation, stating there were.

9581. Did you hear me tell Mr. Sadleir in these words, as well as I remember, “Senior-Constable Kelly told me that he found a rifle a hundred yards from the back door of the hut, covered with blood, and it, in his opinion, was one of the outlaws’ rifles”?—Yes, you did at that time.

9582. And that, in Senior-Constable Kelly’s opinion, some of the outlaws had got away?—Yes, you told him that at the same time, following up the conversation.

9583. Was it possible that you could have told me this?—No, I could not.

9584. You were in the trench for a part of the time, for a short time?—I was.

9585. From your recollection of my position, would it be true to say where I was was seven feet deep?—No, it would not.

9586. Would it be true to say, that from my position I could only command the ridgepole or the top of the roof of the house?—No, you had a good commanding view of the front of the house, and no one could make his escape from it without your seeing him.

9587. You remember my position there?—Yes.

9588. Will you inform the Commission if there was any position that a man could have taken up to command the front of the house except my position?—No, there was not, and I can give a reason. When Constable Milne called to me to get under cover, as two volleys were fired at Mr. Sadleir, I looked to see where I could get under cover, and I could see no place of cover, only this trench where I saw Mr. Sadleir get into.

9589. By the Commission.—Had you previously known the ground there?—Yes, I was there for three months in 1873, while the railway there was being made.

9590. By Mr. o’Connor.—While you were there did you see Mr. Sadleir and myself both fire?—Yes.

9591. Would you explain to the Commission what portion of or how far the body was exposed when we were firing?—You were exposed this much—[explaining by gesture]—just to the chest line.

9592. In your opinion, if a man said it was such a safe position that I could not be hit, would that be true?—You could be hit at that time.
Any time I was firing?—Any time you were firing you could be hit by anyone in the house. They had a clear open sight of you from this—the chest—up when you were firing.

What time did you say that you came and told me Mr. Sadleir wanted me—about?—Half-past nine or twenty minutes to ten.

You were on the field from that time up to the time the burnt bodies were taken out?—Yes.

Did you see me during the remainder of the day?—I did. I saw you walking round with Mr. Sadleir, and by yourself other times, and some of the men with you going round the house to all the lines, firing sometimes and walking others, and some of the men with you.

In your opinion, did I show any cowardice during the fight at Glenrowan?—It would be absurd for any person to say so; and I saw you act bravely, and I know you to be a splendid shot and a thorough bushman.

By the Commission.—Did you understand Constable Kirkham to be immediately under the control of Mr. O’Connor, at Glenrowan?—I did, inasmuch as he was in charge of the trackers with him.

After the arrival of Mr. Sadleir, in whose command would Kirkham have been—would he have obeyed Mr. O’Connor or Mr. Sadleir?—In my opinion he should obey Mr. O’Connor as he was minding his troopers and under his control with them.

Did the outlaws fire as many shots as the police in the front of the house fired at them?—They did not, because there were only two of them, and double that number in front.

Were there many shots fired from the hotel at the time?—There were. The outlaws kept principally in front of the house, firing, and the civilians were at the back; they kept at the windows in front to avoid the civilians.

Do you think from what you saw there, would there be half as many shots fired by the outlaws at those in front as those fired by the police?—No, there could not.

How many were there in the trench besides yourself, Mr. O’Connor, and Mr. Sadleir at this particular time when you saw them fire?—There were Mr. O’Connor and two trackers, and Constable Kirkham, and Mr. Sadleir and I—that is six altogether.

If the outlaws, two of them, were firing, and firing with the same rapidity that you in the trench were firing, they could discharge a third of the number of shots?—They did not; they only fired a shot now and again, when they saw an opening at the men.

Did you fire then?—Yes, I fired both barrels, and after that I volunteered to take orders, as my shot-gun was not much good.

By Mr. O’Connor.—Were you aware that Constable Kirkham had no ammunition at that time, and could not fire?—He told me he only had five rounds and he was sparing it.

By the Commission.—When you saw Mr. O’Connor going round with Mr. Sadleir and some of the men, what time was that?—About eleven and twelve, and up to ten, when the prisoners came out. Mr. O’Connor and Mr. Sadleir were up around the trees before that, and from that time till the firing of the house, they were walking round and taking up their positions, and seeing the men were at their posts.

The witness withdrew.

Charles Gascoigne sworn and examined.

By the Commission.—What are you?—Mounted constable.

Were you long in the North-Eastern district before the Glenrowan affair-stationed there?—I joined the police force on the 6th of March 1879. I was taken on as a probationary constable at that time by Captain Standish, at the time of the Kelly outrages.

9610. Were you in any of the search parties?—I was in Mr. Hare’s search party.

9611. How many were there of you?—I almost forget.

9612. About how many?—I think six or seven.

9613. What time was that party out?—I think it was about the 30th June 1879.

9614. Did you, in any of your search parties, have any information that led you to believe you came near upon the Kellys?—Well, when out with Superintendent Hare’s party at that date, the first night we were out in the Strathbogie, I heard some dogs barking at the crossing of the creek; so in the morning we were travelling in that direction, and the black tracker picked up some tracks. He followed them on for about a mile, and then they went up the range and came down again, and went in and out; and Mr. Hare came to the conclusion that they were the tracks of some one looking for cattle. We did not pay much attention to this, but a day or two afterwards Mr. Hare’s horse was lost, and one of the men was looking for it, and I happened to be with him when he was returning to the camp, and a woman, the publican’s wife, told us that Jim Quin came there the very night that I heard the dogs barking at this crossing, and got four bottles of brandy.

9615. Is that what you would consider the most reliable information of the Kellys?—That is the most that ever I got when I was out.

9616. Would the Kellys have had any difficulty in avoiding you when you were out in search patties?—No; they had every advantage.

9617. Were you out with any search parties after the second system of search was inaugurated?—No; none at all.

9618. Where were you stationed when Mr. Nicolson was up in the district?—Violet Town.

9619. You were not out with any of the search parties under him?—No; none at all.

9620. Were you in the cave party?—No.

9621. Were you in the party at Sherritt’s house?—No.

9622. Is there anything in connection with the search for the Kellys that has come under your notice that you think is worth relating to the Commission before you come to Glenrowan?—No.

9623. Do you think if you had followed up those tracks you would have come on the Kellys?—I could not say that, but that was the remark the woman made to the man. There was so much false information at the time that it was very hard to believe any one.

9624. You were troubled with false information?—Yes.

9625. At every turn?—At every turn.

9626. You considered it came from the sympathizers to throw you off the trail?—You could hardly believe any of them. I was reared amongst the people and there were plenty of respectable people that I could have got, but what information we got was from friends of the Kellys.

9627. And that was calculated to throw you off the track?—It may have been true, but we were searching all round the country and found nothing.

9628. Were those private agents employed by the officers from time to time men you could not place implicit reliance on?—The only one I knew was Aaron Sherritt; he did not know me at the time; he thought I was a constable from Melbourne, and did not know me. He was talking to me for about an hour, and I took in everything he was saying; and at the latter end I took it to be a lot of nonsense, because I knew the Kellys as well as he did, and it was a lot of falsehoods. Captain Standish saw us talking, and thought I did not know Sherritt, and I told Captain Standish that I should not like to follow Sherritt as a leader or be with him any time—he might lead them into a trap; and Captain Standish made the remark to me, “I will give him enough rope, and he will hang himself.”

9629. Generally were the parties from whom the police obtained their secret information a class of people that were unreliable?—They were, what I knew of the class.

9630. That they would mislead the police wilfully?—Yes.

9631. You have been living in the North-Eastern district for a number of years?—Yes, all my life, and I know the country and the people well.

9632. Did you know the “diseased stock agent”?—The only one I knew was Aaron Sherritt, and another young man who went under another name that I was not aware of.

9633. Look over this list of agents and see if you know them. Note any there whose information you think would be reliable. The real names are on the left?—[The witness read the list.]—There are so many different people in the district of the same name that I know that it would be hard to tell.

9634. Do you think the men bearing those names would give any reliable information?—I think so.

9635. As a rule you consider the agents were misleading the police?—I do.

9636. They were simply taking all the money they could from them?—Some of them might give a little information if it was very safe—if they thought they could get away after they gave it.

9637. Then in that case the system of private spies would be very little use for capturing the gang?—If they could get the right men.

9638. I speak of the class of men, from your own knowledge, if your impression be correct, there would be no probability of the gang being captured from information supplied by people of that description?—No.

9639. You do not know the one that is represented as the “diseased stock”?—No, I do not.

9640. Are you aware he gave information that armour was being made?—I was not. I knew nothing about the armour. I knew only of the stolen mould-boards. When I was with Senior-Constable Kelly, looking for the man travelling with the cart, I heard about the mould-boards, when we were round Greta.

9641. What would, in your opinion, be the best means to be used to secure or capture a gang of outlaws in the same country—men of the same character—have you formed any idea?—Yes. The best way would be for mounted police to go out with very little provisions, and no incumbrance, just a ’possum rug—something to sleep in—net to take a lot of packing on horses; no pack-horse at all, unless it is a long journey, four or five men; and let them camp out, just the same as shearers or any others; just take a saddle-bag with one days’ provisions.

9642. Somewhat similar to what shearers and bushmen used to do in the old days, knocking about for work?—Just the same.

9643. Without uniform?—Yes.

9644. And get provisions where they could?—Yes.

9645. Take firearms, or not?—They must take a rifle with them, because the revolvers are no good.

9646. The rifle would show what they were?—They could manage to plant that in the swag.
those short carbines, in the ‘possum rug. I think the rug would cover the whole of 9647. You would have the rifle-carbine ready for emergency?—Yes.

9648. You would carry the revolvers?—Yes; and the rifle would be only in case of a long shot.

9649. How soon could you get it out of the rug?—Half a minute, or less, you could draw it out.

9650. Is it a very difficult country then to follow bushrangers up?—It is, especially in the Greta country, where they have so many friends.

9651. The difficulty is not so much in the nature of the country as the class of people that live there?—Yes. If a party of police went out as they used to go, they would be starting through the town; there would always be some one watching, and the spies go from Benalla to the other party, and so on, carry it on, and the outlaws know in what direction the police have gone; and the party of police with the pack-horses could be traced all over the country.

9652. A search party like that would be a laughing stock to the outlaws?—It would be a laughing stock to the outlaws.

9653. Could a body of bushrangers remain in the ranges for a long time without the police getting at them?—They can get out of the ranges into other ranges, and the men with pack-horses could not get as quickly as they could.

9654. They could not stay in the ranges without coming for food?—No; not more than a fortnight.

9655. From your conversation with the police, did they seem to express any doubt of the likelihood of capturing the gang in the way in which they were proceeding?—Some did, but some were inexperienced men to the bush.

9656. From your knowledge of the men of the district, more particularly the population, do you think there is a likelihood of another organized outbreak?—It is a very hard question, but I will answer it from my own knowledge. I have been stationed at Glenrowan of late, and from the conversation of some of them I believe there is a very bad feeling existing between some of them and the police.

9657. They would shoot the police if they got the chance?—Yes, if they got a chance in the dark.

9658. Is that the police generally?—Yes; especially the men that were taken on at the time of the Kellys—any one they know they have got more of a “down” on; and the people about Glenrowan are just as frightened as when the Kellys were out to give any information.

9659. Then that district is not in a satisfactory position?—No.

9660. Do you think you were in danger of being shot any time there?—When I first went to Glenrowan, two days after the capture, about a week after, a man wrote to the police camp and told me the best thing I could do was to leave the place, that he would not give me reasons; but he heard I would most likely be shot, but he would not tell from whom; and he said, “You ought to know me.” He was an old school-mate of mine, a very respectable man; and I told him I did not care as long as they gave me a “show,” and it was not a cowardly attack. He told me I was very foolish not to go.

9661. Have you formed this impression that yourself and other constables engaged in the capture of those men at Glenrowan are subject to the attacks of these men secretly?—I believe they are in more danger than any other men—I do not know that—any constable. I think the uniform is enough to make them shoot a man. I think the men taken on specially who know these men there is most danger to.

9662. Such men as senior-constables Kelly and Johnson, yourself, Sergeant Steele, and several others who have been very prominent in the Glenrowan affair, for their personal safety, ought to be removed to some other district?—Well, no, I do not think so. I think a man that would go after the Kellys would be in just as much danger then as now. Of course, he knew the Kellys would shoot him cowardly then if they got the chance.

9663. Your impression applies to all the members of the force in uniform as to their danger through being in uniform?—Yes, in that district.

9664. Do you think there is any fear of any gang taking to the bush the same as the Kelly gang did?—I believe there is at present, from my own knowledge.

9665. Can you give the Commission any idea of what you base that opinion upon?—I base it on the information of some of the sympathizers themselves, talking to them.

9666. Do you think the police would have as much difficulty now, with all the knowledge they have got, in suppressing anything of that sort as they had before?—I believe they would.

9667. Do you think that the very strictest repressive measures would be necessary if they did break out?—It would. It wants experienced bushmen to go after them.

9668. You do not approve of men being sent from the Richmond depot without experience in the bush?—No. If they have not experience they have to trust to a leader, and if the leader was to go they would not know what to do.

9669. They must follow the leader?—They must follow the leader. And there were foot men and all sorts of men taken out in the pursuit, which caused dissatisfaction amongst some of the mounted men.

9670. You disapprove of the Melbourne men being sent up at all?—For search parties.

9671. They do for guard at the banks?—Yes.

9672. Good horsemen and good bushmen are best for that?—Yes. Some of the men in the parties could not ride a horse—could not ride it over a fence. In fact, it was not the men’s fault; they were never allowed to jump their horses. Any person there can jump a fence, but if we jump a horse and hurt the horse’s legs we have to make great reports, and perhaps do not get out of it. You can never catch those men with the horses. You must have them trained to jump, and the men to ride them.

9673. Coming to Glenrowan, will you give as short an account as you can of it?—I have a written statement here of it, which I think will shorten it.

9674. You had better read that?—[The witness read the same, which is as follows:—] "Glenrowan Police Station, North-Eastern District, May 13th, 1881. Mounted-Constable F. C. Gascoigne, No. 3056, begs to report, for the information of the Police Commission, relative to the capture of the Kelly gang of outlaws, on the 28th June 1880, as follows:—I left Benalla with a party of constables, consisting of Senior-Constable Kelly, constables Barry, Canny, Author, Phillips and Kirkham, under the command of Superintendent Hare; Inspector O’Connor and the black trackers were with us. When the train arrived within one and a half miles of the Glenrowan railway station the pilot engine, which was about 200 yards ahead, stopped; a few minutes after Superintendent Hare came to the guard van, told the men to get out, as the rails had been taken up about half a mile from the station. At the request of Superintendent Hare, Constable Barry, Phillips, and myself accompanied him to the pilot, which we mounted; the pilot then put back the other train, and we then together proceeded on to the Glenrowan station. When we reached the station Superintendent Hare, accompanied by Constable Barry, Phillips, myself, and a Mr. Rawlings, proceeded to the gate-house, the residence of the station master; and in answer to Superintendent Hare’s enquiry as to where the station master was, the station master’s wife said (weeping) that the Kellys had taken him away; and in reply to a question where, she pointed in the direction of Mrs. Jones’s hotel. She also told Superintendent Hare that Steve Hart, the outlaw, had only left her house two or three minutes. We then went back to the station to get out the horses; when about eight or nine were got out by Constable Canny, which I was holding, one of the trackers saw a man on horseback, about 100 yards away, on the hotel side. Constable Barry and two trackers were put on guard to watch. Before all the horses were got out I noticed some excitement at the other end of the platform; most of the men rushed there; I then heard someone say, “They are at mother Jones’s.” Superintendent Hare called out, “Let the horses go,” which I did; he started for the hotel, followed by the men. When about 60 yards from the hotel, Constable Barry asked Superintendent Hare what was the matter; he then said, “Come along, boys.” When we got within about 20 yards of the hotel, one of the police said, “Look out.” I then saw the flash of a rifle. The had not died away when I saw a row of flashes come from under the verandah of the hotel; the police quickly returned the fire. A man then came out from under the verandah, when Superintendent Hare called to him and advised him not to be foolhardy, and told him that he wished to speak a few words to him. In reply, the man said, “I don’t want to speak to you,” and at the same time fired at Superintendent Hare, and then returned to the verandah. The moon at this time was shining from the back of the hotel, and full on the police, the outlaws being in the dark shade, under the verandah. The police now took cover, some behind the railway fence, others behind trees, &c., as near the hotel as they could find it. Shots were freely exchanged on both sides, I managed to get behind a small sapling post, about 30 yards from the end of the hotel. I 9675. About what time was that?—About ten minutes past three o’clock.

9676. Was that before or after Mr. Hare was shot?—After. I was standing close to him, but I did not know when he was shot; it was ten minutes after the first volley was fired he said he was shot.

9677. Did you hear him say he was shot?—Yes, ten minutes after the first fire. “A woman came out of the hotel at the back, and a girl was with her holding a candle. A man then came out and, putting his hand on the woman’s shoulder, tried to pacify her. I heard her say something about her son being shot. Two men were firing from a position above me in the direction of the woman and girl; I called on them to stop firing, but they kept on. I then said, ‘You are cowardly black wretches (believing at the time they were trackers) to be firing on women.’ I also called upon the police to stop firing into the hotel. Superintendent Hare then gave the order to cease firing. About this time a man made his appearance in front of the hotel, and walked towards the railway fence, and fired a shot in that direction, at some one; three shots were fired at the man in return, who I believe to have been Edward Kelly, the outlaw, by his appearance. He then fired at three men who were standing on the closed road, about 50 or 60 yards from him, at the Benalla end of the hotel. I think one of the men was Superintendent Hare. I don’t think these men could see the outlaw, as the night was very frosty and clouds of smoke hung between them and the man who fired. After, I, the outlaw, had fired the shot, he was standing face on to me; I fired at him, and he returned the shot quickly; we had three or four shots at each other, and after my last shot he turned sharply round, and called out, ‘You b—— cocktails, you can’t hurt me, I am in iron. Two of the outlaw’s shots struck the post behind which I was taking shelter. Superintendent Hare now called out, ‘O’Connor, place your boys round the house, and for God’s sake don’t let them escape.’ I now left my post and went to the two men above me, who I thought were trackers, but I found they were police constables; they told me not to stop there, as there was not sufficient shelter for me. Shots at this time were coming from the passage between the hotel and kitchen; I left these two constables and went to a tree above them, could see the outlaws’ horses, in the yard, at the rear of the hotel. Was at the tree about a quarter of an hour, when Constable Kirkham said that he would go for ammunition, and promised to come back again, but did not. About ten minutes after his departure I heard footsteps behind me, and saw a man about 15 yards away, coming towards me. I called on him to throw up his hands, which he did not do; repeated the order, when he enquired if I was a policeman; I said, yes; he then went away. Soon after, I saw a match struck about 100 yards from me; I saw two other men with him; Constable Phillips was stationed at a tree about 10 yards from me; he left his post to stop a man who was making his escape from the hotel; when about the railway crossing, Phillips called on me to come and assist him; I did not then go; he called again, and said that one of the outlaws was escaping. I at once went down to his assistance, overtook the man on the railway line, and stopped him, asked his name; he said that his name was Neil McHugh; he had on his back a wounded boy. I asked him the boy’s name, he said that he was Mrs. Jones’s son; the boy was bleeding at the time from the month. I then asked McHugh who was in the hotel; he said, ‘There are 30 of them, and they have armour on—

9678. By “they” did he mean the outlaws?—He said “they,” he did not distinguish the outlaws. I thought the whole lot had armour, from what he said—‘and for God’s sake don’t go too near the hotel, for they intend to shoot you all in the morning.’ Phillips then went in front of the hotel, and I returned to my post at the tree which I had left, and remained there for about two hours and a half. Everything was very quiet at the hotel, but the horses in the yard behind were very uneasy. About this time I could hear a train coming in the distance from Benalla. I now left my post and went down to the railway crossing, near the gate-house; saw a black tracker come out of a drain behind me; I asked him how many of our men were killed, he said only two, Constable Canny, and Jimmy, the black tracker. I remained at the railway crossing until the train arrived at the station. The newly-arrived police came down the line towards the gate-house, when they (the police) were about thirty yards from the gate-house, when shots were fired at them from the windows of the hotel; a little after this I saw a man walking up the back yard of the hotel, and go amongst the horses, and at the same time saw a horse get out of the yard, and get away into the bush.

9679. Without a rider?—Without a rider. “I did not see the man again, he did not come back to the hotel. The horse that got out of the yard was the one that Edward Kelly had been seen riding, and judging from appearance I believe the man who was in the yard to have been Ned Kelly; I could easily have shot at him, but knowing the police, who had recently arrived, were mostly posted on that side, I was afraid I might shoot some of them, and I also knew that Kelly was wearing armour. At this time there were only two constables at my side of the building. About twenty minutes after I saw the man amongst the horses. Superintendent Sadleir came to the tree and told me to shoot at the chimney. I told him it was no use shooting at the hotel as the outlaws had armour on; he said that I must have made a mistake, I told him that I did not make any mistake, that myself and Edward Kelly had had several shots at each other at a short distance, about twenty-five yards. Did not fire at the chimney, as I was short of ammunition, only having twenty rounds, when I arrived on the ground, for my rifle. Shortly after Superintendent Sadleir left me, Senior-Constable Kelly came up and told me and another constable that had arrived by the Benalla train that he had picked up Ned Kelly’s skull cap and rifle. I asked him what he had done with his own hat, seeing that he had the skull cap on; he said that he lost it in the bush. I showed him a hat, and asked him if it was his; he said it was. I told him that one of the black boys had found it under the culvert crossing; he said that he was not under the culvert; he afterwards said that he was going round to the men with ammunition, and must have lost it under the crossing. Soon after Constable Kelly left there was great excitement, and shots were fired on the Wangaratta side of the building; one of the black boys said that he could see a man running away, and one of his mates, called Jimmy, fired at him. About sixteen shots were fired on that side of the building. About half or three-quarters of an hour afterwards eight or ten shots were fired in the same direction. I saw a man run from a tree close to Jones’s hotel towards the firing; he had not left his tree more than two minutes when I could hear someone calling out; I was afterwards told that it was Ned Kelly; I believe the man who left the tree close to the hotel was Sergeant Steele. Orders were given by someone on the ground to fire high. Shots were fired from the hotel after Ed. Kelly was captured. Once I saw a shot from the kitchen strike a horse that was loose in the yard; the shot was fired through slabs; the horse fell on his hind quarters and got up again. About 8 a.m. I saw a man at the hotel door hold up a white hand-kerchief; a shot was fired at the man, and he went inside again; I looked round, and found that it was one of the black trackers that had fired the shot. At this time someone in front of the building called to the people inside to come out, as the place would be shot into; about thirty persons came out, and were told to lay down in front of the hotel, and after being examined they were let go. The men that came out told the police that Joe Byrne was shot dead about 5 o’clock a.m., and was lying in the bar of the hotel. Shots were fired, after the Kelly prisoners were released, into the hotel on all sides. The two outlaws, Hart and Dan Kelly, fired from the windows of the hotel on the Benalla side of the building. Firing was kept up by the police until 3.30 p.m. The hotel was set on fire by Senior-Constable Johnson, which burnt very quickly, owing, I believe, to quantities of kerosene and spirits being split about the floor inside the building. I was not told by Superintendent Hare that there were prisoners in the hotel; I first heard of it from McHugh, who said that there were about thirty of them; and they have got armour on, and are going to shoot you in the morning.”

9680. Then you kept up your position all through, where you were first?—I kept within from 30 to 60 yards the whole time, except when the prisoners came out; I got a little way away then.

9681. Who went with you from the platform the first thing?—I was holding the horses, and Constable Canny was getting out. Constable Barry was placed on guard with one of the black boys, I think. I gave Barry my rifle to hold, and said I would hold all the horses if he would hold my rifle in readiness. During some excitement, Barry went away, and left me and Canny with the horses. This excitement, I believe, was Bracken singing out; and Canny said what would he do with the horses; and Mr. Hare said, Let them go.”

9682. In what order did you proceed from the platform to the railway gate?—I went alone, Canny following.

9683. Where was Mr. Hare?—He was on ahead.

9684. And all the others?—I believe he was in company with some others. I do not know.

9685. Did you see Mr. Hare and some of the others pass through the railway wicket-gate?—I saw
Mr. Hare, and I believe I was the next man that passed through, and there was another man came through—I do not know who he was—and went down the side of the fence.

9686. Did you see Mr. O’Connor at that time?—I do not know; he may have been that man that went down the side of the fence.

9687. You know the position Mr. Hare took up first, on the first firing?—Yes.

9688. Is that almost in a line with the railway gates, crossing from one side to the other?—No, it is the wicket-gate nearest to the hotel.

9689. Between that and the hotel a little to the Benalla side?—A little to the right, almost straight to the front door.

9690. When did you next see Mr. O’Connor; you saw him at the railway station after you arrived?—No.

9691. Where did you first see him after you arrived at Glenrowan?—The first time I saw him after the train left Benalla was at Glenrowan, at eight o’clock in the day, with Mr. Sadleir.

9692. Where was he?—Standing by the railway fence, on Jones’s side of the railway fence.

9693. Whereabouts?—[The witness indicated on the plan.]—Somewhere near the tree where I first saw Steele, but a little lower down; it was where the prisoners came out; he was just standing inside the fence.

9694. Did you hear Mr. Hare say anything after he was shot?—I heard him say, “O’Connor, place your boys and, for God’s sake, do not let them escape.”

9695. Did you see what became of Mr. Hare after that?—I never saw him again.

9696. You saw Mr. O’Connor when?—About eight o’clock; about when the prisoners came out.

9697. What prevented them from going up to the hotel at first?—The volleys fired from under the verandah, the corner posts.

9698. And then Mr. Hare gave orders to surround the building?—He gave no orders at all except what he said to O’Connor.

9699. Had you any orders during the day?—None from anybody after Mr. Hare left, except from Mr. Sadleir to shoot at the chimney.

9700. Had you any from any other members of the police?—I had orders from Senior-Constable Mullane to go and fire into the end of the building. I told him I had no ammunition, and he had a bag on his back and had plenty of ammunition, and I said, “If you give me some I will fire in.” He said, “No, go and get some.”

9701. Did Dwyer come with orders?—He came with a bottle of brandy, that was all.

9702. Did Kelly come to you with any orders?—None whatever.

9703. Did you see Constable Kelly after you told him you had found his hat?—I do not remember.

9704. In what direction was he going with the skull cap on?—He was coming from the front of the building through the culvert, right across the crossing. That was the first I saw of him that night before the fight.

9705. Then after that where did he proceed to?—He went back again the way he came.

9706. Then he must, within the time you saw him, have walked back to the Wangaratta side of the hotel to be present about the time Ned Kelly was captured?—Yes, some way round that way.

9707. Are you of opinion that Ned Kelly got away when that horse escaped?—Yes.

9708. What constables were on that side?—I do not know.

9709. Are you aware there were any at all?—No.

9710. Did you not know the Wangaratta men came?—No. I do not know who came, excepting when the Benalla men came. I did not know the Wangaratta men came at all. I never saw any man to get orders from at all when Phillips left me. Constable Mullan was the first to come to me. He arrived with the Benalla train.

9711. What time was that?—It might be about six o’clock or a few minutes afterwards.

9712. It was quite possible for all the outlaws to have escaped at that time then if there was no one stationed round that side?—Well, they might have escaped by crawling away at one particular side, the back side—the Wangaratta back part.

C. Gascoigne,
continued,
2nd June 1881.

9713. You remained on the Benalla side of the hotel?—Yes, all the time.

9714. Were you in a position to see whether there was any large amount of firing from the hotel front?—I had the position from the front and side windows to see any one escaping at that end.

9715. Was there any large amount of firing from the front windows after the first volley?—Not from the front windows; there was a lot between the kitchen and the hotel. There was a paling fence for cover, and there were two men firing endways at the Benalla side; they were standing between the kitchen and the hotel.

9716. Was there a large amount of firing from the immediate front of the hotel—towards the hotel?—There was at the first shooting a lot of shots.

9717. After Mr. Hare was shot, was there much firing from the police from the railway side?—Well, I believe there were a good number of shots firing from that, not so freely as before.

9718. When was the last time you saw any shot fired from the hotel during the day?—Half past two, from the back window, the skillion where the outlaws were captured.

9719. Had there been any considerable amount of firing from the hotel from the time the civilians were released until half-past two?—Odd shots only.

9720. Only now and then?—Only now and then odd shots.

9721. You were present at the burning of the hotel?—Yes.

9722. Did you see the priest go in?—I saw him go in.

9723. Which way did he go in?—In the front door.

9724. Which way did he come out?—I could not say. I heared some of the people sing out he was burnt, and I went to the back of the hotel.

9725. You did not see him there?—I saw him afterwards, at the back, but I cannot say whether he came out that way or not.

9726. Did you see the body of Joe Byrne taken out?—I saw some men carrying it away; I was not there. There was supposed to be a wounded man at the back, Cherry, and I went there.

9727. Did you see the bodies of the two men that were burnt?—I did.

9728. Before they were moved?—No, there was some one moving them from the position they were in.

9729. When you saw them they had been moved?—Yes.

9730. After the house was burnt and the bodies dragged out?—Yes, it was still burning.

9731. Did you see where they were brought to or from?—Yes.

9732. Where were they lying in the hotel?—When I saw them?

9733. Can you say what room those two were in?—They were in the room on the Benalla end of the building, the back skillion on the Benalla end—the south end.

9734. Were both bodies there?—They were both there.

9735. Were they both there when they were burnt?—I believe they were.

9736. Did you hear Dwyer’s statement about those bodies?—I did.

9737. Do you consider that is a correct statement?—Well, the bodies had been removed, had been poked with a pole when I saw them, and that may have shifted them.

9738. Not from the north end to the south end?—No. They were both in the small room, as I have stated.

9739. Could a body at the north end have been shifted into the skillion on the south end?—No.

9740. You saw them both in that room?—Yes.
9741. How was the armour lying? It had then been moved, a man with a large pole had been poking it.
9742. Who was the man?—Williams, of Dookie, a civilian, and Senior-Constable Johnson.
9743. He had not moved them far?—No, not much out of position.
9744. Not a yard?—No, perhaps a foot.
9745. Were they lying on the floor?—Yes.
9746. Not on the bed?—No.
9747. Were they lying together when you saw them?—They were pretty close together, and I did not take exact notice, because I had just run a cartridge out of my rifle on account of so many people being about; and some fellow said, “Do not be so smart unloading your rifle, young man, look what is coming before you”; and I saw some of their friends coming up, and that drew my attention away from the bodies.
9748. After you saw Mr. O’Connor with Mr. Sadleir, was that about the time the people were coming out?—Yes.
9749. Did you see anything more of Mr. O’Connor?—I never saw him again.
9750. You received no orders from him?—No.
9751. You mentioned that you were left to act apparently upon your own responsibility?—I was.
9752. And you did do so?—I did.
9753. Did Dwyer give you any instructions whatever when he came round with the bottle of brandy?—Not to me; but I believe he was the man that called out to fire high.
9754. Was that when he was next to you?—This was sometime afterwards. He gave no orders at the time of the bottle of brandy.
9755. Did you fire high in consequence of that?—No; I fired only two or three shots the whole night into the hotel, and that was at the first. The other ten shots fired by me were at the supposed outlaws outside the building.
9756. You were firing at the men when they came outside?—Yes.
9757. How many shots did you fire that time?—Thirteen shots.
9758. And ten of those you say were fired at the outlaws?—I believed them to be the outlaws.
9759. Not at the building?—No.
9760. How far distant were you from the outlaws when you fired at the men—do you think you hit the object you fired at?—I believe I hit the object.
9761. That was when you ascertainment they were in armour?—When Ned Kelly came out the second time, he walked from the front of the hotel towards the railway line. Ned Kelly fired a shot, and there were three shots returned at him. Kelly then fired at three men standing down on the Benalla side, near the big gates; and he fired single shots, and those men paid no attention to the shot at all. I was stationed a little above them, and I fired at Kelly, and he fired at me two or three shots, and the last shot I fired, he said, “You—— cocktails, you cannot hit me; I am in iron.

9762. Did you hear the sound of the bullet on the armour?—No; there was a coat on that prevented that.
9763. Did you know Kelly?—Yes, I knew him; I knew him by his voice and appearance.
9764. You knew him before, personally?—Yes; I had a conversation with him at one time before Fitzpatrick’s affair. I was looking for some horses, and he told me he was very sorry for what he did in Benalla; but, for all that, he would be one with Lonigan and Phil. Smith one day.
9765. What did that mean?—That he would have it out some day.
9766. Have you any knowledge of when Ned Kelly got away?—After we had the shots at one another and he said that, he walked towards the corner of the fence, but the smoke was so thick I could not see whether he went in the fence or towards the bush; so after this some time Senior-Constable Kelly and Arthur found the rifle in the direction he went.
9767. Do you know how he was coming down where he eventually was taken that he was followed by his horse, or had his horse with him?—No; his mare made her escape out of the hotel yard at six a.m., and was not caught until next day.
9768. Did you see the mare at the time that you fired at him; was his mare about then?—She was in the yard, I believe.
9769. Do you know that?—The only thing I know about it is about five o’clock, or half past the morning, some man walked up the yard from the hotel and went into the yard, and I saw him go among the horses; and I saw the horse rear up in the yard, and the man could not get on, and she broke through the slip-rail on the fence of the hotel away on the Benalla side, and turned into Morgan’s Creek out into the ranges.
9770. Did you see Mr. Hare at all after you came through the gate and passed on with him?—I saw him after the first volley, and about ten minutes after.
9771. Was it that day that he said he was wounded?—Yes.
9772. Does it occur to you that it was that shot that wounded him when the man took deliberate aim at him?—I could not swear it. I believe it was; that was the first time I heard he was wounded.
9773. After you knew he was wounded when did you again see him?—I never saw him again; he gave the order for Mr. O’Connor to place his men, and I never saw him after.

C. Gascoigne, continued.

9774. Do you know the exact words he used when he gave the orders to Mr. O’Connor?—“O’Connor, place your boys, and for God’s sake, do not let them escape.” He said, “Men, surround the house.”

9775. A separate order to the men?—Yes.

9776. Whom did you understand by the men; your party, was it?—Yes, or rather Superintendent Hare’s party.

9777. Did you see Superintendent Hare shooting a second time?—He fired the first shot at the outlaws that was fired. I do not know whether he fired after or not.

9778. Was that a portion of his instructions at any time?—No; he said, “Men, if there is any one shot, outlaws or police, do not run to pick them up; let them lie.”

9779. That is not the question; did Mr. Hare at any time give you instructions never to fire till you were fired upon?—Not that I heard.

9780. Did you receive any orders from Mr. Hare or any one that on this occasion you were not to fire until you were fired on?—No.

9781. You used your own discretion as to when you were to fire?—Yes.

9782. Did you see Superintendent Hare shooting a second time?—Partly.

9783. Did you hear Canny’s evidence at Glenrowan?—Yes.

9784. Did you hear him say he went after this to the Wangaratta side?—I believe he was at the Wangaratta side, more towards that side on the railway side. I could not say whether he was on the Wangaratta side, over the fence.

9785. When Mr. Hare asked Mr. O’Connor to place the boys round the house, do you know whether he took any steps of that sort?—I never saw any.

9786. You do not know whether they were at the Wangaratta side?—I do not know where the men were.

9787. By Mr. O’Connor.—In your written statement you stated that you were out with parties who had pack-horses and baggage?—Yes.

9788. Were you ever out with any of my parties?—No.

9789. Then you are not referring as to how I worked?—No.

9790. By the Commission.—It was quite true the civilians were fired upon when they came out?—Yes. I believe that Riordan made the statement at Glenrowan, and he said the police fired on the civilians; that is the only shot that was fired—that single shot at that time.

9791. That was at the time the civilians were coming out or at the time of the flag of truce?—The flag of truce.

9792. There was no shot fired at the time the civilians came out, as far as you know?—I do not believe there was.

9793. Were you in a position to say whether any members of the police fired from the Wangaratta side at any parties leaving the hotel?—No, I think Riordan, in his statement, said that the man went to the other window with a handkerchief two or three times before this flag of truce came out, and he was shot at. I wish to say that is not correct. In my position—I had the end on the Benalla side of the front, and nearly all the back except the windows—I could see end on all the building. [The witness pointed out his exact position on the plan.]

9808. You have been in Benalla, and know all the country round there from your boyhood?—Yes.
9809. In your opinion, is it more efficacious for the securing of those men, leaving them alone and depending upon private information to get them, or is it the best plan to keep them completely under surveillance of the police throughout?—I believe it is best to keep them—not to watch them too much, but to let them have a little of their own way; but any that do wrong, to pounce on them at once; not to have spies looking out, because it only maddens them—that is the private spies—when they find it out. It only maddens them, and makes them turn against the police. I believe in the police going amongst them, and knowing them.
9810. You believe it keeps them more under control?—Yes.
9811. And immediately on an outbreak they should be arrested?—Yes, the men would know them, and their whereabouts, and know where to capture them.
9812. But by keeping away from them, you do not know their associates, or their whereabouts, or habits?—No.
9813. Do you know any special case of any man who would not give information now, after what has been said about the sympathizers—in consequence of that?—No, but I do not believe you would get anyone at Greta that you could rely on.
9814. Most of the men have been asked whether they think it would have been more judicious to have rushed the house or pursue the course that was pursued at Glenrowan?—Well, I believe the outlaws could have been taken easily—the two men—if there were not so many police on the ground; there were inexperienced men on the ground, cross-firing on the other men—they were not used to firing a rifle, and thought the ball would not go through the house—they had no experience in firearms.
9815. Then it is your opinion that although there was a large number of police surrounding the hotel, had the police been instructed by their officers not to fire because a party—that is a small party—was about to rush the building, that would have been the best plan to have adopted?—Yes, I believe so.
9816. You believe the two men could have been captured without the burning of the hotel?—I believe they could have been, without the burning of the hotel.
9817. Without loss of life?—No, I will not say without loss of life.
9818. If you had been in charge, would you have adopted that in preference to blowing the place down with a cannon, or setting fire to it?—I would have let one man, if he could, have got in, the others to back him up in the passage. I would not have sent in two or three, rushing.
9819. Could that have been done by recalling the men at the other side?—Yes.
9820. Are you a good shot yourself with the rifle?—Yes.
9821. Have you had plenty of practice?—Not with the Police Department. I was only out three times practising with them.
9822. Do you think they supply you with sufficient ammunition for practice?—No. I was seven months and only had four shots when I had a new rifle, a Martini.Henry, that I never used before.
9823. Would it be better if the police had more ammunition, and a regular system of practice, the same as is now indulged in by the volunteers?—Yes.
9824. Then it is a false economy not to give it to them?—Some of the men could not hit a hay-stack, and some are splendid shots. I got eighteen rounds when I received the Henry, and Sergeant Whelan asked me for six rounds; and when I went to Violet Town I fired those four shots. I never got any from the Government unless I bought it, except when Mr. Nicolson took me out in the ranges to have a shot in a party.
There was a cup given, I believe, by Mrs. Nicolson. I went out with the party, and beat them the first time, and I never had a shot for seven months.
9825. It is often the practice that the police supply their own ammunition for practice?—Yes. There is a statement made by Jacob Wilson, that his son had a selection at Glenrowan, and that sympathizers were annoying him at night, and threatening to shoot his son; and he came to the police station to get assistance, and the officer in charge told him they had enough to do to take care of themselves. Glenny was the officer in charge. I happened to be there present, and happened to be at the son, “Holy Wilson’s” place, close to the police camp, and there were a lot of men knocking about there; they were fencing a man’s place, and I believe the statement made is not correct. He used to get frightened by a young man named Cass, living a hundred yards off. He used to try and frighten Wilson. Wilson was trying to get into the police. I never saw any signs of anything, and I was round night and day.
9826. This is only your opinion?—Yes.

The witness withdrew.

Hussey Malone Chomley sworn and examined.

9827. By the Commission.—There are some papers laid before the Commission, and I have been looking over them. They are relative to the exact position that Mr. O’Connor occupied under this Government?—Yes.
9828. Was he paid, to your knowledge, by the Victorian Government for his services?—Yes.

9829. Can you say if there is any correspondence as to the exact nature of his duties and position in the department?—I could find no papers whatever, or scarcely any, in my office. I find there is apparently an official correspondence here between Mr. O’Connor and his Government, in which he must have asked for copies of correspondence between the Police Department here and his department in Brisbane, and they say they enclose copies of the correspondence. I cannot, in this correspondence, see any single thing about the position or anything else of Mr. O’Connor. Here is a telegram from the Chief Commissioner of Police, Brisbane, dated 17/2/79—‘C. C. Police (only), Benalla. The Colonial Secretary approves of my sending trackers, provided they volunteer for the service, receive extra pay, and are assured of a fair share of reward offered, provided their efforts tend to capture of gang; our rate of pay is three pounds per month. No hope of keeping matter from newspapers. Am wiring north about volunteers there is no difficulty. Reply re pay, &c.’ Would that pay there mentioned, in your opinion, apply solely to the black trackers?—Yes; that is the three pounds a month.

9830. Can you say that there is no defined arrangement as to Mr. O’Connor’s position?—I understood Mr. O’Connor was to get double the pay he received in Queensland from this Government. The actual pay he received from this Government was, I believe, £360 a year, and travelling expenses attached to the rank he held.

9831. What was that?—Sub-Inspector.

9832. He was then a volunteer from their service?—I cannot say.

9833. How do you arrive at this knowledge. Is it by official documents; if so, we want to get them?—I think I heard the most of it from Mr. Moors. To tell the honest truth, I was not in the office at all until the last month or two. There are no official documents in our office about it.

9834. I can find none about it except one, where it says he and his party of trackers are not to be separated?—I have made enquiry, and I find that most of that correspondence was from the Chief Secretary’s office.

9835. Will it be found there?—I think it might, if there is any; but the Under-Secretary is ill, and the Acting Under-Secretary; they are both away ill now.

9836. Do you consider it is very vague, the information on this subject?—Very vague.

9837. Unusually vague?—Yes; it might have been much more explicit.

9838. What would the arrangement be, that they were all to receive double pay?—That is what I understand.

9839. Do you know whether the black trackers received Queensland pay?—No, they received double pay from our department; that is all I know.

9840. Are there no documents that would give you more information?—No, not on that point.

9841. Mr. O’Connor.—I saw Captain Standish when I came over to Benalla, and he showed me written instructions he got from Queensland; he showed them me at the Benalla office, and I read them they were written on white foolscap without any lines; I remember it well.

The Chairman read the following letter:

“Melbourne Club, 25th May 1881.

Dear Sir—In reply to your letter of the 23rd instant, I beg to inform you that when retiring from the public service I did not take away any official documents of any kind from my office. Any copies of telegrams or correspondence on the subjects referred to in your letter, if not made away with, must be in the office of the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police. I have no private correspondence with the Queensland authorities on the above-mentioned topics.

H. M. Choumley, continued.
“Yours faithfully,

“F. C. STANDISH.

“James Williams, Esq., Secretary.”

The Witness.—Those particular documents, it appears, Captain Standish had in New South Wales himself, so he must have taken them.

9842. Having heard Captain Standish’s letter, and having heard the state of things here, are you in a position to inform the Commission whether there are any other documents in the office?—I am not aware if any search has been made. Mr. Moors has made search all through the papers and could not find any.

9843. All that were in the office have been forwarded to the Commission?—Yes.

9844. Are you aware that the Commission made a recommendation that, pending the enquiry here, Mr. Sadleir should be relieved from duty?—Yes.

9845. Is his return to duty indispensable to the public service?—No.

9846. Have you made provision for his duty?—Yes, to fill up his place. He is not going back to the North-Eastern district.

9847. Is he absolutely required in any other district?—He is not absolutely required.

9848. Is this a copy of the report you forwarded to the Chief Secretary, dated 1st May 1881?—Yes. [The same was handed in and read, vide Appendix.]

9849. In the second paragraph you state “That in consequence of the disclosures made before the Police Enquiry Board, and the references made to persons who assisted the police with information during the Kelly outbreak, it is now utterly impossible to obtain information as to the movements of the sympathizers.” Will you indicate what portion of the enquiry that refers to?—No, I cannot; I was told it. The information was given to me.

9850. From whom did you obtain that information?—Mr. Sadleir and others.

9851. No, that is your own report, and you state it as your own?—It is all from what I have been told.

9852. Who told you?—Mr. Sadleir, Mr. Baber, and, I think, either Sergeant Steele or Sergeant Whelan.

9853. It is not from your own knowledge?—No, I was only in Benalla three hours then.

9854. Have you read the reports in the press of this present enquiry?—Yes.

9855. Have you not been furnished with copies of the official evidence taken?—Yes.

9856. Can you point to any part of that where the disclosure of persons or places is likely to have that effect?—No, I cannot do that, but I can quite understand they would. I committed myself in that report on the statements of those officers.

9857. And not from rending the evidence?—No, I did not know what effect it would have upon the people up there.

9858. You went up to Benalla by one train and came down by the next?—Yes.
9859. That was all the opportunity you had of judging of the state of the district?—Yes, and the reports that came to the office from the district.

9860. Are those reports in the office?—They are in my pocket at present, at least some of them.

9861. Upon which you founded that report?—Yes, and some conversations I had with people. This is the first I received, I think, from Mr. Sadleir, dated April 22nd, 1881. It is written as a private letter, as he was relieved from duty at this time.

9862. Will you read the portion you refer to in that letter?—I will read the whole of it—[reading the same as follows:—]

"Superintendent’s Office, Benalla, April 22/81.

My dear Chomley—As I expected, from the disclosures before the Police Commission, a great ferment has arisen amongst the Kelly sympathizers here. A respectable man who has been in our confidence all through the Kelly business called on me late last night, and informed me that the sympathizers are very busy trying to trace out who our agents are, and that they are swearing vengeance against them and against the police. These threats are made of course out of the hearing of the police, and no private person can be induced to take proceedings. I have no reason to doubt my informant’s statement, who adds also that the sympathizers are all armed, and that they are ripe for mischief. I may say that except for a chance hit of information of this sort we (the police) are entirely in the dark about their movements and intentions. It may be that better counsels will prevail, and that by the moderation I have been careful to observe the roughs will have less excuse for any outbreak. Still I think the outlook is serious. If an outbreak does occur I expect it will be infinitely worse than anything before. The effects so far of the Police Commission enquiry is to discourage the police and to add to the terror of persons who have been helping and would otherwise still help the police. My own position, too, is very uncomfortable. In all I have done I see nothing that I would not do again under the same circumstances, and I believe every person who acted with me is of the same mind. Still the few who disapprove or pretend to do so have been very noisy, and taking everything into consideration it would perhaps be better that I should have a change of districts. The change will be a serious loss and inconvenience to me, still I wish you to take the matter into serious consideration. Baber is aware of the information I have received, and he has informed the police in the neighborhood to be on their guard.

"Yours very truly,

"J. SADLEIR.

“H. M. Chomley, Esq., Acting C. C. Police.”

9863. Are you aware that Mr. Nicolson, Mr. Hare, and Mr. Sadleir were removed from duty pending the enquiry of this Commission?—Yes.

9864. Would you receive anything from those gentlemen and deal with it officially now that they have been relieved?—Yes, whether they have been relieved or not. If they give me important information I must act upon it, remembering their position.

9865. Are you not aware that they are in the hands of the Commission at present?—That would not prevent my taking advantage of any information from them. It would be no excuse to say that.

9866. Would you, on the recommendation of either of those officers, remove a constable in any of those districts?—I do not know that I should.

9867. In fact they are in the position now of superintendents of police?—They are in the position of civilians, and I would take notice of information from a civilian—a respectable man as I suppose Mr. Sadleir is.

9868. Were you aware at the date of that letter that Mr. Sadleir had given evidence before this Commission?—Yes.

9869. And you based your report on that?—Yes, to some extent; his information and experience must be just the same as ever, and there are others. Here is a report from Mounted-Constable Graham.

9870. Is that from Greta?—Yes; it is dated 26th April 1881. [The witness read the same as follows:—] “Report of Constable Graham, 2312, relative to sympathizers of late Kelly gang.—I beg to report for the information of the superintendent that a number of them were here yesterday, drinking. viz.:—Jack Quinn, Tom Lloyd, jun., Paddy McAuliffe, Tom McAuliffe, John McMonigal, and Jack Nolan; and from their manner I am led to believe that another outbreak among them is imminent. Jack Quinn is very anxious to find out who it was that got the sympathizers arrested in 1879. They all appear to have a great dislike to Pat Quinn, and speak of him as the black tracker.—ROBERT GRAHAM, Mid. Const., 2312. The Supt. of Police, Benalla.”

This is a memorandum from Mr. Baber, who is in charge of the district.—[reading the same]—

“Police Department, Superintendent’s Office, Benalla, 27th April 1881. Memo.—I beg to forward Senior-Constable Elliott’s report of yesterday’s date for the information of the Acting Chief Commissioner. Matters are looking serious, and the police are certainly unprepared for another outbreak. It is out of the question to know where to turn for private information. I have consulted with Superintendent Sadleir, who has sounded two persons who formerly acted as agents, but they have declined (as Mr. Sadleir informs me) on account of the disclosures which have been made. They will not act now under any circumstances; and they say it is hopeless to look for private agents again. It only remains to be considered what preparation the police can make, and additions which should be made to the strength.”

Then there is a report from Senior-Constable Elliott attached, in reference to the stealing of two pit saws from Acock’s, dated 26th April 1881. He says—

“And I have also very little doubt but that the saws were stolen for the purpose mentioned in Sergeant Steele’s telegram of yesterday, more especially as Constable Graham informs me that the Kelly friends and sympathizers have been more than usual about Greta for the last two days.”

The telegram alluded to is here, dated 25th April 1881—

“Stolen last night from Acock’s, Seven-mile Creek, two large pit saws, supposed taken to construct armour out of.
Would be well to send trackers at once to Acock’s, near Glenrowan. Will have tracks, if any, preserved.—A. L. M.
STEELE.”

9871. Did you receive any others?—And then I saw this in the paper—the Benalla Standard—the leading article, dated 26th April 1881—

“There is not the slightest doubt but what the formation of another gang of bushrangers is being meditated in the Greta district. We have it from most reliable authority that the Kelly sympathizers have recently spoke openly to this effect, and the general actions of these persons infer that some secret work is occupying their attention. The sympathizers’ rendezvous—Mrs. Kelly’s house—is seldom empty, and frequently it happens that the number of visitors to this domicile is very large. Many threats of revenge have been made since the tragedy at Glenrowan, and grave fears are daily entertained of another outbreak.”

Those are the reports I received, and then I went up and saw Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Baber, and Sergeant Steele and Whelan.

9872. What was Whelan’s statement?—To the effect that he did not think the men would come out voluntarily, unless there was some attempt to arrest one of them, and then he thought they would come out.

9873. Generally was he under fear of outbreak?—I do not think he was under fear of outbreak.
Sergeant Whelan stated (I took notes at the time) he had heard it was intended to take the life of Skillian or Williamson, he did not know exactly which, who gave information to Captain Standish, which appeared by the evidence before the police enquiry. He said the newspapers which contained the evidence were eagerly looked for, with the view of finding out who had been giving information. He said they were great savages, but he hardly thought they would turn out unless cornered for horsestealing; that is my own impression too.
He said they would not hesitate to take the life of Skillian or 9874. Is that all of Whelan’s?—Yes, I just took a short note of it.

9875. What is Steele’s statement?—That a man named —— told Constable Healey that the police would have hotter work than they ever had before with the last mob; and that a man named —— told a friend of his he believed another mob was getting ready to turn out about Greta. He said that he thought that the saws were taken for the purpose of making armour, and heard that a saw had been taken for the same purpose before, but had been found too light; those saws were pit saws. And then he said he thought, if there was a fresh outbreak, the names he gave me would be in it.

9876. That is the substance of the conversation you had with various officers?—Yes.

9877. And the other reports you have read are the only reports bearing on the North-Eastern district?—That is all, I think. I spoke to another gentleman up there in reference to this newspaper paragraph.
I asked him had he good reason to put it in. He said the person who gave it was to be relied on for being truthful, and he knew that he had every reason to be correct.

9878. In consequence of those reports you recommend the appointment of an efficient superintendent, to proceed to the district at once?—Yes.
9879. In the second portion of your report you recommend that Mr. O'Connor should take charge of the black trackers?—Yes.
9880. Will you point out, in any of those reports furnished to you, where Mr. O'Connor’s name is mentioned?—It is not mentioned.
9881. Will you tell why you arrived at the conclusion to recommend Mr. O'Connor?—I cannot give more than in my report, that I was told I could not get information; and, in case of an outbreak, we must fall back on the black trackers, and we must make them as efficient as we could.
9882. It was merely from your own feeling in the matter you recommended that?—Yes.
9883. You went to Queensland?—Yes.
9884. You engaged black trackers?—Yes, five.
9885. They are the ones at Benalla now?—Yes.
9886. At the time you were in Queensland, did you attempt to make any arrangement for any officer who had any experience with the trackers to come?—No.
9887. Why?—I carried out the instructions I received to go and get those men and bring them back.
9888. Did it suggest itself to your mind to make enquiries as to that?—No.
9889. Could you tell us now of any special abilities possessed by Mr. O’Connor in the management of the trackers?—I understand, and, I believe, correctly, that Mr. O’Connor has been with the trackers for years—some seven years before he came here; and I know those black trackers, from what I was told over there, require very delicate handling.
9890. Do you know any special aptitude he displayed in Victoria with them?—No, I never saw that.
9891. Was any information on that supplied by the officers up there in the North-Eastern district?—All of them, I heard every one of them speak in his favor.
9892. There has been no recommendation made in those reports about him?—No. I showed some of these reports to Mr. Berry, and I said I thought I ought to go up to Benalla about them. This was on a Thursday. I told him I would like to go up and see the officers; and he said, “Very well.” I went up on Friday, and came down on Friday night. On Saturday I went to Mr. Berry and told him, by means of my rough notes, pretty much what I am telling you now; and he said, “What do you propose now?”; and I began to tell him what I intended to do, and he said, “I think you had better put your suggestions in writing, and let me have it on Monday, when I come to the office.” This was after twelve o’clock on Saturday, and before I left my office I drafted out that report, and on Monday I wrote it out. I spoke at Benalla to Mr. Sadleir, and he said, “If you recommend that, it will be a most unpopular appointment”; and I said, “I have to do it in self-defence; I am responsible, and I must do something.”
9893. Than you had some conversation with Mr. Sadleir about it?—Yes.
9894. Did you make any enquiries from Sergeant Whelan as to the management of the troopers by Constable Kirkham?—No. I did not consider Sergeant Whelan was competent to judge.
9895. You did not think it worth while to ask whether Constable Kirkham was able to manage those blackfellows?—No.
9896. Did you know the officer who had charge of them at Benalla?—Constable Kirkham, I believe. I knew he had been placed in charge.
9897. You did not think it worth while to enquire whether he had made himself master of the position, and could manage them as well as Mr. O’Connor?—I did not know whom I could ask, or who would be a judge of that.
9898. Did you know, of your own knowledge, that Kirkham had been with Mr. O’Connor with his blacks?—Yes.
9899. Is this the fact, that you simply recommended Mr. O’Connor to the position in the North-Eastern district because he had been for some time an officer in the Queensland police, in charge of the black trackers?—Yes, and for other reasons. Mr. O’Connor’s name was quite sufficient to keep this gang from breaking out. Also from all that has gone forward in this Commission and the papers before, and from Mr. Hare’s report. Mr. Hare states that as long as Mr. O’Connor stayed there the gang would not come out, and as soon as Mr. O’Connor left they did come out, and as soon as they did come out they sent for Mr. O’Connor again.
9900. Do you know under what circumstances Mr. O’Connor left the Queensland police?—No. I know very little about Mr. O’Connor at present. I saw him only just before I went to Queensland, so that I cannot speak myself from any personal experience about him; but all the officers that had been with him, until this unfortunate quarrelling commenced, spoke of him in the highest terms. I asked Mr. Sadleir first of all. I said something about the black trackers, “Are they much use?” The expression he made use of—and he did not know what was the object of my question—was, “The fact is that our men do not understand them.” He did not know the reference—there was none to Mr. O’Connor then. And after that I said, “I am going to recommend Mr. O’Connor to come back again;” and he said it would be a most unpopular appointment.
9901. What did you understand by that?—That he was not liked by the men; that they would not like a stranger coming over them.

9902. What men?—The sub-officers and men.

9903. That there would be a jealousy?—Yes. Mr. Sadleir stated in his evideance that the Kellys never showed themselves after Mr. O’Connor came here with the trackers scarcely.

9904. They kept very quiet, no doubt?—And all I want to do now is to keep them quiet.

9905. Of your own knowledge you have no experience of Mr. O’Connor’s qualifications?—No; I only saw him two or three times except in Collins street.

9906. Were the black trackers utilized in the matter of the stolen saw?—Yes.

9907. What did they do?—They got on the road near Greta, and lost the track.

9908. They were not of any service there, then?—No.

9909. I suppose no trackers could prove of service where there was great traffic on a road?—That is exactly what they ought to do. If there is a well-beaten road, they can find the track as it goes off the road. That is where they want a man to teach them.

9910. When you went to enlist black trackers in Queensland, did you make any enquiry as to their competency for tracking and doing this work?—Yes.

9911. Had you any knowledge, yourself, personally as to the business of black trackers?—No, very little.

9913. You formed the opinion that they required peculiar handling, and except with that, and a leader with the knowledge of their peculiarities, they would be inefficient?—Yes, when I came back the first thing I said to Captain Standish was, “I have brought you over five of the smartest boys in Queensland”; and I said, “I do not think they would be a damn unless you have them properly handled”—that was the first thing I told him.

9914. Are they not a little heavy?—Mr. Seymour, the Queensland Commissioner of Police, saw them, and said he had never seen finer men, and he would have liked them for himself.

9915. Did you make enquiries whether it is necessary for all those men to go in a body?—No, it is not necessary; I do not think so.

9916. Either one or two?—Two; I think those men ought to be scattered about, now.

9917. Is it not immediately putting them on the track the great tiling?—Yes. If Mr. O’Connor had gone up then, the first I would have got him to do would have been to separate them; but I wanted a man who understood them.

9918. You have told us what Mr. Sadleir said about that appointment; were you influenced in recommending Mr. O’Connor’s appointment by anything you heard in Queensland, when there, with reference to his men?—No, more by the reports. I thought O’Connor’s name and his black trackers would keep those people out; if O’Connor was the greatest duffer, I believed it was enough to have his name; and if it kept them quiet, that was all I wanted.

9919. With regard to your recommendation that a smart officer be sent into the district—was Montfort sent on that?—Yes.

9920. You were ordered to prepare this report after twelve on Saturday, and be ready with it on Monday?—Yes.

9921. That was a short time for so important a report to be prepared in?—Yes.

9922. Montfort was sent on this report?—Yes.

9923. When you wrote that report you apprehended there would be an outbreak?—Yes, so far as this, that if an outbreak did take place, and if I had not made the best preparations, I should be deservedly censured. I should lose my billet.

9924. From information now received do you consider that that fairly represents the state of the case?—I do.

9925. Have you taken the necessary precautions to obviate the occurrence?—I have done what I could. I have sent up extra men, and taken some of the men that were not very active, and put others in their places.

9926. Has your principal endeavor been to see that efficient men are sent?—Yes. I first of all selected mounted men from the different districts—young men, and sent them up; and I sent three or four foot police, to put them in different places; and I told Inspector Montfort if there were any men not efficient to send them down, and he is doing so, and I would send up others.

9927. Were most of those men there during the Kelly outbreak?—I think so, One man came down who broke his leg.

9928. Are the men armed with the Martini-Henry carbine?—No, they have got twenty-one repeating Spencers, that is in the North-Eastern district, and they have thirty-four Martini-Henry rifles.

9929. Are those long rifles?—Yes, two Sniders and a Winchester, and three of the Martini-Heary carbines, and they have 89 breech-loading rifles.

9930. Are those Sniders?—I do not know, and they have all good revolvers.

9931. Would it not be advisable to have a uniform arm?—I think it would.

9932. Is there any reason why not?—Simply the cost.
9333. Are they not in the colony?—I do not know; I think the military have some.

9334. Would it not be wise for you to make a requisition to the Chief Secretary for those Martini-Henry carbines?—Yes.

9335. And rifles for the footmen?—Yes.

9336. Is it not advisable to have them all of the same pattern, so that the same ammunition will serve all?—It is most indispensable.

9337. That being so, would it not be your duty to make an urgent recommendation to the Chief Secretary to have the arms all of one character?—Not very urgent, because we have the ammunition for all those arms now.

9338. Did you read the account of what occurred at Glenrowan, at Mrs. Jones's, the want of ammunition, and the police getting wrong ammunition?—Yes.

9339. So that if the Kellys had broken out on the side where this wrong ammunition was supplied, the men were really unarmed?—I did not see that.

9340. Is it not a matter of vital importance that the men should have arms all alike, and ammunition?—It is very advisable.

9341. Is it not usual in every service?—Yes, and it ought to be here. The men were unprovided altogether before.

9342. Are there Martini-Henry carbines in the colony?—I think the military have some.

9343. Will you look upon it as your duty to make a requisition for those arms?—Certainly.

9344. I think you ought to do it?—I will do it at once.

9346. What is the probable cost of a hundred rounds of ammunition?—About a penny a-piece, each round.

9347. Would it not be a very cheap method of making the police efficient?—I sent up a thousand rounds.

9348. Would you not think it a very wrong policy to keep the men with arms in their hands and not allow them practice to use them?—Yes.

9349. Has it not been done?—Only on the score of economy.

9350. Is not a good deal of a man's precision obtained by the continual use of his weapon?—It is absolutely necessary.

9351. Even a good marksman at first may be nervous, and miss his mark?—Yes, he will be apt to get rusty.

9352. There is a paragraph in your report here that I would like to ask a question about. It is as follows:—"That in consequence of the disclosures made before the Police Enquiry Board, and the references made to persons who assisted the police with information during the Kelly outbreak, it is now utterly impossible to obtain information as to the movements of the sympathizers, our chief dependence must, in case of a fresh outbreak, be in our black trackers., and it is most advisable to make them as efficient as possible. At present I am led to believe they are not as useful as they might be if they were properly handled by an officer who understood them." You stated in your evidence just now, I think, that you did not make any enquiries when you were up?—I said Mr. Sadleir told me.

9353. What did he tell you?—That our men did not understand them, and that in this business about the saws they could not follow, that is all. I am only giving the evidence that I have heard on this particular occasion; but, of course, I constantly asked about those boys.

9354. Suppose Mr. O'Connor had been there, could they have seen the tracks any better?—I presume Mr. O'Connor would have followed on, and found whether the tracks were there.

9355. Could not Mr. O'Connor have been appointed to be second without his being put over the heads of older men in the district?—I do not suppose Mr. O'Connor would go as a sergeant or constable. I have never spoken to him, and did not know whether he would join at the time. When I took this report to Mr. Berry we had some conversation, and he said, "Have you spoken to Mr. O'Connor, and do you know if he would join." I said I did not, and said, "Another thing, he is before the Commission"; and Mr. Berry said, "Of course, I will have to see the Chairman about that before anything is done; you had better see Mr. O'Connor, and ask him if he will join"; and then he said he had better see him himself; and I telegraphed for Mr. O'Connor, and sent him up at once, and when he went up Mr. Berry said, "Nothing can be done till you are released by the Commission."

9356. What did that mean?—Until you had finished with him or gave him permission to go, I understood.

9357. There is a list sent by Colonel Anderson of the arms served out to the police. I see 160 Martini-Henry rifles, and 6 Martini-Henry carbines, and 26 Westley-Richards carbines, a Snider rifle, and a Soper-Henry carbine; would it not be quite easy to return those weapons without much difficulty; could you collect them and send them back, and apply for weapons of the one class, the Martini-Henry?—Yes.

9358. The Chief Secretary sent down a document here, requesting the opinion of the Commission relative to the mounting of men in this country—experience, and so on—have you prepared that?—I have sent in a statement here.

9959. A petition has come in, making certain statements as to the expenditure, and making suggestions as to the more efficient mounting of the Victorian police—the case is submitted to the Commission?—Yes.

9960. The expense appears in this considerably less here than in the adjoining colonies?—So I believe. I had better put this in—[producing a return].

9961. I want to know how you authenticate it?—There is a letter from Sydney; there is a letter from Adelaide; and another from Brisbane—[hanking in the same.] They are chiefly based on extracts from the different colonies.

9962. What is the cost per horse in the colony?—The total cost of the last twelve years has been £1,400 a year.

9963. How much is that per horse?—The average price per horse is £19 7s. 8d. The cost in South Australia was £30 10s. per horse, in New South Wales from £17 to £18, in Queensland, £12 to £14. Now the cost per man per horse for the year for Victoria is £4 4s. 0½d., for New South Wales, £5 8s.;

South Australia, £9 7s. 6d.; Queensland, £15 7s. 8½d. The vote, as I told you before, for purchasing horses in Victoria is £1,416 a year for 337 men, exclusive of officers’ and cart horses; the cost in South Australia is £1,500 a year, with 160 men. As far as I can make out, there are included in the number of mounted, two saddlers who are not mounted. The cost in New South Wales is £2,700 a year for 500 men—that is what is stated in the report. The cost in Queensland is £4,000 a year for 100 white troopers and 160 black troopers—that is 260 altogether.

9964. This matter having been brought before you, do you suggest to the Commission that any alteration can be beneficially made in the mounting of police?—No, judging by these returns; we do it cheaply, and our horses will compare well with theirs. From what I am told, I do not think it can be more efficiently done.

9965. Provided the men are properly armed?—Provided the men are properly armed.

9966. And the horses trained?—You see if that practice is carried on in the districts that trains the horses.

9967. Do you authorize training horses to jump?—We never have done.

9968. Would it not be well to authorize that in the North-Eastern district at any rate?—Yes, and to teach the men to be able to ride them.

9969. If the outlaws are mounted on good horses that take a fence anywhere, is not that an enormous advantage over the police horses?—Yes, of course it is—[The witness handed in the return quoted from above relating to expenditure for police horses, &c.—Vide Appendix.]

9970. We have it in evidence from a very reliable witness, that the best method of preventing an outbreak is to put active young men to ride about the district, and get well acquainted with the faces and appearance of all the people?—No doubt of it.

9971. We have it in evidence also that the secret system of getting information completely broke down; that is to say, that in the witness’s opinion the information that was given was false, or colored, in a multitude of instances—do you think that would be a better system to secure the quiet of the district?—There ought certainly to be something of the sort. Of course the secret system is a good thing, but you ought not to be obliged to depend on it. The secret system is pursued in Melbourne the same as up there, and with advantage, but you cannot depend on it altogether.

9972. You are peculiarly liable to be deceived if you no not know the people?—Yes.

9973. You have been many years in the police force?—I joined on the 21st September 1852.

9974. In your report to the Chief Secretary you first recommended that Inspector Montfort should be appointed; if that had been done and Mr. O’Connor appointed, in what relation would the latter be to the other members of the police force in that district?—That was not decided upon. I am not in a position to say what; he would have been the only officer there with Inspector Montfort; if he went up there Inspector Baber would have been relieved.

9975. Then Mr. O’Connor would be the second officer in the North-Eastern district?—The second of two at Benalla.

9976. You make certain recommendations, and we want to know what would be the effect of those?—It would be according to what position he was put on the list.

9977. Who would be number one?—Mr. Montfort.

9978. And Mr. O’Connor number two?—Yes.

9979. Was his appointment intended to be temporary or permanent, in your mind?—I did not think he would come if we made it temporary, or I would have made it so. I thought it would end in its being permanent; if I could have got him cheaper I would have tried to get him.

9980. Are you aware of the regulations that, except in special cases, promotions shall be made from the ranks?—Yes, and this is an exceptional thing.

9981. Do you consider this promotion from the ranks advantageous to the public service?—I do not know how it will end, it has acted fairly so far, but I do not know about the future. We have got some good officers from the ranks. The great thing I see against them is their age—before they are promoted they are so old; at the present moment I am the fifth youngest officer now in the service.

9982. Do you think if the promotions of officers were from those of a younger class the public service would be benefited?—Yes, that is the great drawback, the age.

9983. Would you have an educational test?—I think there should be an educational test for officers joining; you could take the Civil Service examination or whatever is fixed on.

9984. Do you think to be an efficient officer, superintendent, or inspector, a man should be able to ride?—Certainly.

9985. That is indispensable?—Yes, ride and drive, and take his turn at anything.

9986. Suppose a man rises from the ranks, how many years does it take him till he gets charge of a district?—I do not know. No one has ever done it yet.

9987. In Mr. Hare’s evidence, he stated that he was too old for the Kelly work, that he had not the buoyancy that was needed for it?—Yes.

9988. And your evidence goes to show that a man must necessarily be beyond the prime of life, or well up to it, before he can be an officer?—Rising from the ranks, he must be past the prime; no man can, possibly hope to be there till he is 45 or 50.

9989. Would it be better that younger men should have charge of districts instead of the officers at present?—I do not know whether you can get the two things combined.

9990. Do you think the educational tests, with other tests, would narrow the number so that young men could get in sooner?—Yes.

9991. Did not Mr. Montfort rise from the ranks?—That was special promotion for special service, and he is not a young man; he is 50 years of age.

9992. Is it your opinion that inspectors ought to be young, active men?—Yes.

9993. For superintendent it does not matter if he has the experience of years?—Yes, he can drive about on the main roads.

9994. You said, in the ordinary run of promotion, a man would not obtain it till he was 45?—Yes.

9995. What age do the regulations provide that a man is to retire at?—Fifty-five.

9996. Then he would have ten years of office only, under the most favorable conditions?—Yes.

9997. Mr. Baber reports that the police were quite unprepared for another outbreak in that district;
how is that?—I suppose he alluded to not being able to get information. I do not know.

9998. Practically speaking, we have not gathered in this enquiry that the agents were of any value at all to the police?—They did not do anything; they did not catch the Kellys.

9999. Would he refer to the want of arms?—No.

10000. Of good bushmen?—I suppose he wanted more men.

10001. I apprehend what you want is young, active men?—Young, active, capable men, both as officers and men; we have too many old men.

10002. Is Inspector Baber a good horseman?—I believe he is.

10003. Is he a mounted man?—Yes.

10004. He is the officer there now in that district?—Yes.

10005. What other officer is in that district?—Sub-Inspector Pewtress.

10006. Is he an active horseman?—I understand he is not, I have not seen him.

10007. Do you know his previous service?—I know of his being in the Town Hall for years—
Sergeant in charge. I know he is not a young man.

10008. He is a splendid officer?—Yes he is—a case of the right man in the wrong place.

The witness withdrew.
Adjourned till Tuesday next at Eleven o'clock.

TUESDAY, 7TH JUNE 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;

G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.,
J. H. Graves, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.,
W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.,
J. Gibb, Esq., M.L.A.

Jacob Wilson further examined.

10009. By the Commission.—Do you wish to add anything to your former statement?—Not more than to be examined before Superintendent Hare, for him to prove that he actually did engage me. The report in the Age stated that I was not engaged, and I wish now to prove before Mr. Hare that he did engage me.

10010. Do you state you were engaged by Mr. Hare?—Yes, I was.

10011. What purpose were you engaged for?—He sent out a constable to me with a written note asking me if I would come in to see him on urgent business.

10012. Have you that note?—I burned all the letters.

10013. What was the constable's name?—Ryan.

10014. What purpose were you employed for?—When I came in he asked me would I take a man out to my place—a detective—and I said I would, provided he would protect me if anything happened to me in undertaking it; and Mr. Hare told me to go with the man and to show him how to work the ground.

10015. You want Mr. Hare to be examined to say if he did give you such and such instructions?—Yes.

10016. Anything else?—No. I was engaged by Mr. Hare a year before to examine a bridge for some horses. I would ask you if you would be kind enough to intercede with the Chief Secretary to get me a situation. I am now getting an old man, and am not able to make a start for myself again.

10017. What employment do you want?—Gatehouse-keeper.

10018. Or anything that will be a living?—Yes.

10019. What you want the Chairman to do is to represent your case to the Chief Secretary, as you cannot go back there?—Yes.

10020. You have received no compensation from the Government for the services you have rendered?—No, I never got anything for it.

The witness withdrew.

Thomas Carrington sworn and examined.

10021. By the Commission.—What are you?—Artist.

10022. You are connected with the Press?—Yes.
10023. Were you present at Glenrowan, when the Kelly gang were caught?—Yes.

10024. Will you kindly state things as you saw them?—From the time I left Melbourne?

10025. From the time of your arrival by the train at Glenrowan?—Well, when the train drew up at the station, someone, I forget who it was, gave the orders to get the horses out, and the police commenced doing it, opening the sides of the trucks and getting the horses on to the platform. They were in the middle of this work when a man rushed up in a very excited state, whom I afterwards found to be Constable Bracken, and pointing over to the hotel he said, “They are over there, for God’s sake look sharp or they will get away,” or something like it. We found afterwards it was in the direction of Jones’s hotel he meant. He was out of breath.

10026. Previous to that had you seen Mr. Hare?—Yes.

10027. Did you see where he went before Bracken came?—He disappeared for a time.

10028. You did not know where?—I did not know where. There was a stampede among the horses, they dashed off the platform towards the Benalla end and disappeared, most of them. Then I heard Mr. Hare call out, “Come along, boys,” and there was a general rush and they disappeared. It was a dim uncertain kind of light. We could see them disappear towards the Glenrowan hotel.

10029. Then what?—The witness looked at the same. They took the direction of Jones’s hotel after leaving the platform, and went straight away to the railway wicket gate, as near as we could see in the dim light. Of course they opened out, but that was the direction they took.

10030. Did you notice who was the first to leave?—Mr. Hare was the first.

10031. Did you notice any other of the constables or officers that you knew by sight or that you could now distinguish by name that accompanied Mr. Hare?—No, they were all muffled up in great coats.

10032. Did you see Mr. O’Connor that morning?—I did. I saw him on the station.

10033. Did you see him the time Mr. Hare left the station?—I did not see him leave the station. Mr. Hare was a very tall figure, and I could see him leave, but the others were muffled up. It was a bitter cold night, and their coats were turned up, and their hats down over the faces, so the only way to distinguish was by height. We were walking about the station to keep our feet warm, and it was then I saw Mr. O’Connor. They disappeared towards the house, and we went to the edge of the station, the extreme end of the platform. Mr. Melvin, the reporter of the Argus, went towards the ditch with the police. He was the only reporter that had a firearm with him. The police had scarcely been gone a few seconds when we saw the front of the verandah of the hotel lit up with flashes of light replied to by shots from the police, and then in five or six minutes we saw a tall figure coming to us through the smoke. At this time, the white smoke helped to light up the scene against the dark background. We could see a tall dark figure coming through the smoke. This was Mr. Hare coming back, six or seven minutes after the flashes. He went back the second time, and it was not more than ten minutes altogether. He then came back, and blood was running down his fingers from the wound in his wrist, which was bleeding very freely, dripping as he came along; and we did the best we could for him, that is the four reporters left on the station. I was amongst them. I tied up his wrist, and then he went out again and disappeared. We saw him go out, he went again towards the Glenrowan hotel.

10034. Almost the same route?—Almost exactly the same route as he came, and he disappeared again into the uncertain light.

10035. You could see almost to the small gate?—I could not say what distance. It is fifteen or twenty yards, I believe, to the first bridge, and he then came back again the same line. He was tottering then.

10036. How long after was that?—The first and second return only took from ten to twelve minutes altogether, the whole time. He came back, and from loss of blood he fainted, and we got him into a carriage. He was very sick, and asked for some brandy or whiskey, and there was none about; none of us had any, unfortunately; and we thought the best thing we could do was to get him away to Benalla, and we gave directions to one of the engine-drivers to do so, but he started with the wrong engine, and went to Benalla without him. Everybody was in a most excited state on the station.

10037. Who was “everybody”?—There were four reporters on the platform, and two ladies in the carriage.

10038. Did the second engine start immediately after?—About fifteen or twenty minutes, and we sent him by that. Then we walked up and down the platform to keep ourselves warm, and now and then a constable would come up and give us a little news—how they were getting on—what they were doing—whether they had seen anything. One constable that came up, I forget who it was, said, “There is a bad nest of them at the back, keep a look-out; there is a bad lot in that hotel over the road—keep a look-out.”

10039. That was McDonald’s hotel?—Yes; and then the horses that had escaped into the paddock were galloping and very restive, as if somebody was coming from that end; and we were fearing something,
...not knowing what it was. There was a great scare at the time. I cannot give the time it was exactly. The next thing was the fearful screaming of some woman, “They have killed my child”; and the next incident was Senior-Constable Kelly coming down the road by the side of the station with a skull cap in his hand, which he said he had found on the top of the ranges near a pool of blood, and he said, “By jingo I think that one of them has escaped.”

10040. Had he a rifle with him?—Yes. He showed us the skull cap. There was a desultory firing going on all this time, but most of the firing seemed to come from a little gap in the ditch in front of the hotel.

10041. Had you any knowledge of who was stationed in that ditch?—No I did not know, only I have heard lately that the trackers were there.

10042. Was there much firing from the hotel at that time?—Very little after the first volley; now and again a shot, but every time there was one shot from the hotel it was replied to by half a dozen at least from the ditch. The next incident was a woman coming up with a child in her arms. I do not know her name. We put her into a carriage. She was in a most excited state. We tried to get out of her some news, but she could give nothing connectedly. She said they were armed, or something about armour, but she was too excited for us to get anything from her. She said they were all there.

10043. Do you know who that woman is now?—No, I do not. Just about break of day, standing at the right hand side of the station, that is the Beechworth end, we noticed the police standing behind trees turning towards the Beechworth direction, the steam was rising very heavily then off the ground; and we could see a tall figure that looked at first like a man with a black hat pulled over his face, and a white coat on, and he seemed to be drunk from the way he was staggering about. I thought it was someone trying to cause a diversion to allow the men to escape from the hotel at first. Then I saw the police firing at this figure. For some reason he put his foot on to a log every time he fired, then he would disappear into the gully behind the trees. There was a man with a great coat on just in front of him, with a revolver. Afterwards we found it was Dowsett. He kept pegging away at him with his revolver. He had his back to the station.

10044. Was he nearest to Ned Kelly at that time?—Yes, he seemed to be the nearest.

10045. You understand now that other figure was Ned Kelly?—Yes, the one in the hat.

10046. Did you consider that Dowsett was nearest to him?—I think he was a little nearer than the others. They were all well sheltered, they were all behind fallen timber piled up—trees that had fallen. In fact, we were the most exposed; we were standing on the station without any cover at all. Then, after this firing had gone on for some time and it did not take any effect, Sergeant Steele ran out from the tree where he had been firing and fired at Kelly’s legs and brought him down, and, as the police closed on him, we ran and jumped the fence from the station, and went up to Kelly. As I got up I saw Sergeant Steele with Kelly’s arm in the air, and the pistol go off. Ned Kelly was lying against a tree, and one of the police kicked him. Then they began cutting the straps of his armour, the wires that held it on, and got it off; and two or three took him by the shoulders, helped him to walk to the station; got him on for the time they were called upon to surrender.

10047. About what o’clock was this you are speaking of now?—This was after Kelly was taken, up to the time they were called upon to surrender.

10048. What o’clock was that?—I could not tell you, my watch had stopped. It was broad daylight when Kelly was caught.

10050. Did any officer seem to have command over them then?—No; that was what struck me. There seemed to be no one in command, and I thought they were looking for some one to give instructions. For instance, two advanced to a tree close to the house, and stood there some time.

10051. On the Beechworth side?—Yes, they were for two hours waiting. We were there from two on the Sunday morning till four the next day; you cannot fix the time very well, I was busy with my own work. Those were the things I noticed when I was going round.

10052. Can you fix any portion of the day when the police received any instructions or any commands from their superior officer?—Well, the first decided step was when the hotel was fired; that seemed to be the only time. I thought then they must have been ordered to do that.

10054. When you first approached the place did Mr. Hare give any orders?—I do not know. After Mr. Hare left the station I do not know what orders were given. I only know of the one by Mr. Hare, “Come along, boys.”

10056. Did you see Mr. Sadleir?—I knew him by sight.

10057. Did you know his position in the force?—No. I did not.

10058. You did not know of your own knowledge whether he was a senior constable?—I knew he was an officer in the force, but I did not know what grade.

10059. Did you know he was a superior officer to any other on the ground?—It never struck me to think anything about that.

10060. You saw Mr. Hare leaving the station with Mr. O’Connor—how long after he left did you see Mr. O’Connor on the station?—I did not see him after that.

10061. When did you see Mr. O’Connor after that time?—I never saw him till now.

10062. What position were you in at the time the people were released from the hotel in the morning?—I was at the station when the civilians came out; I ran out to where they were.

10063. Did you not see Mr. O’Connor at that time?—No.

10064. Is it possible for Mr. O’Connor to have been present and you not seen him?—Certainly.

10065. During the morning, from the time that Mr. Hare left till the place was fired, you did not see Mr. O’Connor all the day?—No.

10066. If you did not see Mr. O’Connor or Mr. Sadleir giving instructions between the hours you speak of; did you see any constables or men giving any orders or doing anything as if they were under orders?—No; I saw Mr. Sadleir several times during the day, but he was always, when I saw him, in the room with Ned Kelly, cutting up tobacco and smoking, standing by the fire and talking to the others. I was in the room three times.

10067. This was while the house was surrounded?—The house was surrounded at this time; it was surrounded until the burning—the men held their positions at the trees.

10068. Did you know whether Mr. Sadleir went out to the men?—I did not see him go out.

10069. Had you much opportunity of seeing him in the station house?—Yes, I went in three different times.

10070. Was he in there each time?—Yes, engaged as I have said, standing by the fire.

10071. You did not see him out in the field at all giving any instructions?—I did not.

10072. Do you know what time the cannon was sent for?—I do not. I heard a rumor of a cannon being sent for, but I thought it was a joke; that someone was amusing himself. The idea of a cannon to blow two lads out of a house seemed to me something very remarkable—a house surrounded by something like fifty men armed with Martini-Henry rifles.

10073. You say lads—how do you know there were but two?—We were told that Byrne had been shot while drinking whiskey, and Ned Kelly was a prisoner.

10074. Who told you Byrne was shot?—Nearly everybody that came out of the hotel.

10075. Did you hear Ned Kelly say so?—No.

10076. Was it generally believed by those present that Byrne had been shot?—Yes.

10077. It was an established fact?—Yes, it was circumstantially told that he was shot, drinking a glass of whiskey, and that the other two were standing in the passage—that was what the twenty or thirty men said coming out, that the other two were cowed—were standing in the passage frightened; and then when I heard about the cannon to destroy those two lads I looked upon it as a joke.

10078. Here is a letter that has been placed in evidence, you had better read that?—[The witness read letter of his own, dated 19th July 1880, printed at question 1602 above.] This is not properly punctuated.

10079. You must have received a letter prior to that from Mr. Hare?—I did.

10080. Have you the letter he wrote?—I have not.

10081. Could you inform us of the nature?—Yes, I can give the substance of it.

10082. Will you do so?—He said he did not know who bound up his wrist at the time, and he thanked me for it—that is just the substance of it; it was a little more open, he said I did him good service, that was all; it was just a letter of thanks.

10083. Did that letter in any way ask you to express an opinion of the proceedings on that occasion?—Not in any way at all.

10084. He did not ask you to say whether you thought or not, that after he left the police were left without anyone to give instructions?—He never asked me anything directly or indirectly—it was simply a note of thanks. I am sorry I did not keep it.

10085. You say in the last paragraph, “I think Mr. Webb ought to know that a man who had fainted from loss of blood was not in a very fit state to look after ladies. I never saw any one bleed as you did”?—Mr. Webb complained of Mr. Hare not looking after the ladies.

10086. Who is Mr. Webb?—I did not know who he was. He said in the letter that Mr. Webb blew me up for not looking after the ladies. I said he ought to know a man in a fainting state was not in a very fit state to look after ladies.

10087. Have you any notion who Mr. Webb is?—No. I saw two ladies in the train.
10088. Do you know one was Mrs. Webb?—I did not know who she was.
10089. Is the Commission to understand that really your impression is that had any officer been present after Mr. Hare had to retire, in consequence of the shot, that those outlaws could have been captured much earlier in the day, and without the burning of the hotel?—My idea is this, that if anybody had been there to take up the command, after those four outlaws had come out and emptied their weapons, and called on his men to rush in, they could have taken them easily. They were all outside the hotel when Kelly was wounded.

10090. What was your impression later on in the day after the civilians were released—were you then under the impression, that if any officer had been there to have commanded the men to have made a rush, that they could have been taken easily?—I am perfectly certain they could, because the house towards the Benalla end was a blank wall. There was a door here and there, a small passage and a blank wall the other side. The men could have come up to this side and rushed round simultaneously.

10091. Those blank sides are the chimney end?—One is the chimney end; they are both blank ends. They could come up this way, open out and take the house in front and rear.—pointing to the plan—besides there was Kelly's armour on the platform. If it was good enough for him to face the police with, surely some one could have put it on and have gone in, besides with the knowledge that the only two left in the place were the youngest, and they were both cowed and frightened, and both in their armour.

10092. You make use of this expression in your letter to Mr. Hare, “Looking back on the past, I sincerely regret that you were wounded so early in the fray, as from that moment the police were virtually without a leader, as Mr. Sadleir did not take any active part outside to my knowledge”?—Yes.
10093. Is the evidence you have given now full information that you have as to the part he took or not?—Yes, that is all I know about it. You must remember all this time I was doing my own work.
10094. Have you now given full information to supplement that statement in your letter?—That is all I know about it. I never saw Mr. Sadleir outside on the field.

10095. Would you, with all you have heard since the date of this letter, write this letter in the same words again?—I would exactly.
10096. That letter was written solely in consequence of the letter that Mr. Hare wrote to you, conveying thanks for your action to him?—Yes, it was a reply to him. I did not answer it for a long time.
10097. Did you hear any remarks—you have stated that the men appeared without a leader, in your opinion—did you hear any remarks by civilians or police as to the want of a leader?—Well, the civilians round about were offering suggestions, and saying, “What a pity they do not do this or that, rush the hotel or do something.” I did not hear any remarks of the police about it. I left half an hour after the hotel was burned.

10098. From what you have seen, did you approve of that action of burning the hotel?—Certainly not—most ridiculous. I never heard of such a thing in my life. Of course I do not know much about military tactics, but it seemed to be almost as mad as sending for a cannon. If the police had joined hands round the hotel the outlaws could not have got away, they could have sat down on the ground and starved them out.

10099. Had you heard that day that some of the police had volunteered to rush the hotel?—Yes.
10100. Could you give the names of any?—No, I did not know the names of the police.
10101. As a matter of fact, was it known by spectators that the police were prepared to rush the hotel if they had permission from their superior officers?—Yes, it was thoroughly well known. The remarks of the civilians were all uncomplimentary to the police in that way.
10102. Did you hear any civilians say they were willing to do it?—I heard two or three working men say, “I would do it if I had some firearms myself. I would rush the hotel myself.”
10103. Did those uncomplimentary remarks apply to the police as policemen, or to the officers and their discipline?—To the police generally—spoke of them as they, “Why do not they rush the hotel?” “Why do not they put on the armour?” and so on.
10104. Did you form the conclusion at that time that there was a feeling of cowardice amongst the men as constables?—No, no cowardice amongst the men.
10105. No want of courage on the part of the men?—No, only they seemed not to know what to do next.
10106. Did it strike you as a lack of supervision?—Yes.
10107. The want of a head?—Yes. It seemed to me that some of them would have liked to rush the place, but thought if they did, perhaps they would have got a wagging from their superior officer when he came.

10108. Where were you when the house was set on fire?—At the railway gates.
10109. You saw the priest enter?—Yes, we ran over and were just behind him.
10110. You were at the station gate there—pointing to the plan?—This cross gate—the large gate.
10111. How near were the nearest persons to the hotel when the priest went in?—That is difficult to say—twenty or thirty yards.
10112. The priest went in the front door?—Yes, towards the front door. I am not sure whether he went in at the front door.

10113. Did you see him come out?—I do not think I did. We rushed up with the crowd. The first thing we saw was two or three men pulling the dead body of Byrne out, and I followed them to make a drawing of Byrne.

10114. About what time in the day did you see the last shot come from the hotel?—Well I do not think there were any shots fired after ten. I am not sure, but you could not very well tell, because there was more danger from the police scattered round. The police on the hill might have fired a shot and people have thought it came from the hotel.

10115. Was there danger of the police shooting each other?—Undoubtedly. I went down during the day to the Beechworth end and knelt behind a log with one of the police, and while we were sitting there—I was making a drawing—a rifle ball came over our heads. I will swear it was not fired from the hotel, because I was looking at the hotel at the time. It must have come from the ranges at the back—the south end.

10116. By Mr. O’Connor.—When the special train arrived from Melbourne at Glenrowan, what part of the train were you in—on the engine?—No.

10117. It would be towards the Benalla end?—Yes.

10118. In what position were you when Mr. Hare passed towards the Glenrowan hotel—in the carriage, or where?—Standing on the platform.

10119. Alongside the carriage door?—No, not near the carriage door.

10120. In what place were you on the platform?—I will show you.—[the witness drew a plan]—I was standing just there when Mr. Hare passed.

10121. You were in a position to see everybody that passed if you only knew them?—Yes.

10122. How many men passed when Mr. Hare passed?—I could not tell you.

10123. You did not follow the police in the rush, did you?—No.

10124. Where did you get to immediately after the police left the platform?—Kept at the same point all the time on the platform. There were some pack-saddles there, and we lay down on our bellies on the pack-saddles, and looked towards the hotel.

10125. By the Commission.—Looking in the direction in which the men had gone?—Yes.

10126. By Mr. O’Connor.—You state Mr. Hare came back and had his hand tied up and started for the front again?—Yes.

10127. Do you remember that the smoke from the firing was very thick and heavy?—Yes; there was a good deal of it.

10128. Could you see any distance towards the hotel for the smoke?—No; but you could see the figures advancing through the white smoke.

10129. Did you see Mr. Hare go up to the front position of the house again?—No, certainly not you could not see him.

10130. He may have gone halfway and come back again?—He may for all I knew.

10131. This was after he was wounded I am referring to?—When he came back the second time?

10132. After he was wounded be came back and you tied his hand up. I ask you, how was it possible for him to have gone halfway and return?—It was possible. He disappeared in the same direction as he came from. He was away three or four minutes, long enough to go to the hotel and back the second time.

10133. How long after the second time he appeared was it to the time the engine left?—I cannot fix the time—half an hour—three-quarters of an hour. They were shunting the engines about twenty minutes. I could not contradict anybody who might say two hours.

10134. By the Commission.—Your impression is twenty minutes?—Twenty minutes to half an hour.

10135. By Mr. O’Connor.—Is it not a fact you were at McDonald’s hotel the greater portion of the morning?—That is thoroughly untrue.

10136. You never left the Glenrowan side?—I did.

10137. Will you state where you went to?—Went to McDonald’s hotel. I was there for about a quarter of an hour, getting a glass of beer and a bit of bread and cheese.

10138. What time?—That was about twelve o’clock. That was the first time I left the station and crossed the line. I had been up the ranges in the meantime.

13139. Youstate you never heard any order from a superior officer to the men; could not orders have been given without your knowledge?—Certainly they could.

10140. I believe you wrote a long account in the papers, but it came out that the report was by Mr. Carrington, and afterwards it was found out not to be correct; I want to ask him about it.

The Chairman.—You should produce the article, and ask him if he wrote it. I do not think Mr. O’Connor can ask anything about what appeared in the papers, but he can ask as to the points he refers to.

10141. By the Commission (to the witness).—Did you know Mr. Hare before this?—I did not, to speak to, but knew who he was perfectly well.

10142.—You would know his voice?—Thoroughly; it is a peculiar voice.

10143. By Mr. O’Connor.—You could not make the mistake of anybody else’s?—If there were two exactly alike I could.

10144. In the article that appeared in one of the newspapers, there was a statement made that the engine that took Mr. Hare to Benalla took the ladies also; do you remember ever seeing the statement which came out the next day to that effect?—I may have. I had an impression they did go by the train. I am not sure whether they went in the first or second train, or whether they went at all.

10145. Did you see the same paper contradict it, saying the writer thought they had, but found after they did not?—I do not remember that. You may write a great deal, and you do not remember everything you write.

10146. By the Commission.—Did you see the train leave that conveyed Mr. Hare to Benalla?—I did; we were on the station at the time.

10147. It was just possible that the ladies may or may not have been in the same train without your being thoroughly conversant with it?—Yes, they might have gone or not. I did not look after them.

10148. In all probability you and the other reporters’ attention would be directed primarily to the state Mr. Hare was in and not notice about the ladies?—Yes, it might be.

10149. By Mr. O’Connor.—Are you not aware that up to this time the carriages had not left the platform, only the engine?—What carriages?

10150. The carriages and the trucks that came up to Glenrowan?—I am under the impression that the carriages did go with one of the engines; I am not sure. I know Mr. Hare was in one of the carriages, because he put his hand into one of the slings.

10151. Did you see Mr. Hare on the engine going down to Benalla?—No. The ladies may not have gone at all for all I remember. I never took any notice of them. The only time I went to the ladies was to borrow a pair of scissors to cut a pocket-handkerchief for Mr. Hare’s wrist—that was the last I saw of the ladies.

10152. As to this letter, “I never saw anyone bleed as you did.” Mr. Hare himself then added, The next paragraph is about the ladies.” Do you know whether this letter is the full letter you wrote to Mr. Hare or not, or is there some other portion of it?—I think there is something more. It was a stupid thing for ladies to come on at all when it was reported at Benalla that the line was taken up.

10153. Can you state who your authority was?—Some men on the Benalla station said, “The lines are taken up, and they are going to shoot you,” and others said, “They have put logs on the line.” One man said positively the lines had been taken up.

10154. By the Commission.—Do you think there is anything material to the present issue in that portion of the letter that is not there?—I do not think so.

The witness withdrew.

Joseph Dalgarno Melvin sworn and examined.

10155. By the Commission.—What are you?—A reporter on the Argus.

10156. You have heard Mr. Carrington’s evidence!—Yes.

10157. Is there anything in that evidence that you disagree with, or is there anything omitted that you would like to tell the Commission?—Well, I do not take the same view as he does. I should rather like to make a statement of my own.

10158. In what direction?—Merely as to what took place at Glenrowan.

10159. Can you let the the Commission know the point exactly where you differ from him. Did you hear Mr. Hare call the men to come along?—Yes.

10160. Did you see Mr. Hare come back?—Mr. Hare, on hearing from Bracken where the outlaws were, called out, “Come on, boys,” and made for the hotel. All the police and black trackers, and Mr. O’Connor accompanied him. For a minute or two the reporters on the platform did not know where the outlaws were, and waited in suspense till the first shot was fired—the first volley—then of course we saw where the Kellys were. I ran up then to the ditch.

10161. Which ditch?—The continuation of the one Mr. O’Connor was in.

10162. Was it near the first crossing?—I came out to the end of the platform, and it must be this ditch—[pointing to the plan].

10163. The first ditch from the railway station?—Yes.

10164. About fifteen yards from the end of the platform?—Yes. I saw firing all about the front of the hotel, and then I tried to get nearer. Went close up to the railway fence in this direction—[pointing out on the plan]—where I supposed there was the stump of a tree, but it was merely bushes, no protection at all; and I returned to the platform. A few minutes after that Mr. Hare returned, wounded.

10165. How many minutes would that be from the time Mr. Hare left the platform?—At the most ten minutes, I think.

10166. May it have been ten minutes from that time?—Yes, it may have been.

19167. What occurred after you bandaged his arm?—He returned towards the hotel, went down the platform, and disappeared from our view.

10168. Did you see him after that?—He seemed to be going toward the gate here—[pointing to the plan].

10169. That is the second time?—Yes.

10170. How long was he away then?—Perhaps five minutes, or over. I could not exactly say.
10171. Did he say anything when he returned?—He returned, hardly able to walk, tottering and faint, and sank upon some bags which lay upon the platform.

10172. Up to that time had you seen Mr. O’Connor?—No.

10173. I mean from the time that Mr. O’Connor left with Mr. Hare and others until Mr. Hare returned the second time in a fainting state had you seen Mr. O’Connor?—No.

10174. You heard Mr. Carrington describe what occurred—it is almost a waste of time to go over all that again—did you agree with his description as he went along, or is there any point you wish to notice?—There seemed to be some doubt as to the ladies, when they returned to Benalla.

10175. What time did they return?—Mr. Hare was quite unable to return to the field, so we got him into the railway carriage along with the ladies, and it was intended that he should be taken down to Benalla with them. They seemed rather afraid of taking charge of him, and Mr. Rawlins, one of the volunteers there, agreed to go along. Then one of the railway officials, the guard I think, explained, that they could not run the whole train down to Benalla quick enough—they would probably meet the other one coming up with reinforcements; but that if Mr. Hare would go on the engine he would run him down in ten minutes. That, of course, involved leaving the carriage with the ladies, and Mr. Hare was then put on the engine and taken away. Then the next thing after that was, I think, a messenger from

Mr. O’Connor to Mrs. O’Connor. I am not sure who it was, but a policeman certainly came and spoke to Mrs. O’Connor.

10176. Do you know which constable it was?—I should know him if I saw him again.

10177. Was it Kelly?—No.

10178. Was it Dwyer?—No.

10179. Was it Kirkham—a smart fair fellow?—That answers to the description of the man I saw.

10180. Did you hear any of the instructions that were sent by the constable to the ladies?—No, I did not, I did not listen. He asked where Mrs. O’Connor was, and I pointed out the carriage.

10181. You have heard the description of taking Ned Kelly, by Mr. Carrington—do you remember anything different from that?—Well, when Ned Kelly made his appearance, the police, of course, turned to fight him, and Senior-Constable Kelly and Dowsett were together, between us who were on the platform and Ned Kelly. They were in our view all the time, and those two men, Senior-Constable Kelly and Dowsett, advanced together upon him from tree to tree, and got within about fifteen yards of him. I saw it stated that Senior-Constable Kelly turned and ran away, but that is literally untrue.

10182. From your own personal observation?—From my own personal observation. He kept advancing steadily. They had got within fifteen yards of Ned Kelly when Sergeant Steele came down from the hotel, and seemed to attack Kelly in the side and shoot him down.

10183. At that time both Kelly and Dowsett were advancing towards the outlaw?—Yes, advancing steadily.

10184. Did you see Constable Arthur?—I could not distinguish them individually.

10185. Did you see any member of the police running away apparently?—No, I did not. I saw one taking a half circuit round him, as if to get a better shot at him.

10186. You have heard how the outlaws were stationed in the house?—Yes.

10187. Have you anything to add to that of importance?—From what I heard from the prisoners, I concluded it was not an absolute certainty that Byrne was dead and the other two cowed.

10188. What conclusion did you come to from what you heard?—It seemed certain that the other two were alive, and that they were fightable was evident from the fact that they were still firing from the hotel.

10189. Any attempt to seize them would have been accompanied with danger?—Yes.

10190. What time did you see the last shot fired?—About one o’clock.

10191. That is as near as you can judge?—Yes.

10192. From what part?—From the gable end, between the back kitchen, as if they were firing from the passage.

10193. Then at that time you must have moved?—I was then writing out my report in McDonald’s hotel and looking out occasionally.

10194. Could you from there say whether the shot was from the hotel or from the police at the Benalla end?—I could, and more easily than from the platform, because I could see the police shots from behind the hotel and the smoke rising from the shots at the hotel itself.

10195. You have heard Mr. Carrington’s statement that he formed the impression from early morning to the afternoon that the police were all ready, and that the only thing they required was someone to give definite orders—did you form a similar impression?—No.

10196. What was your impression?—You refer to the afternoon?

10197. I refer to before daylight?—Well, after Mr. Hare was wounded and left, Senior-Constable Kelly seemed to do the principal part of the work—at all events he was continually going round the men and carrying ammunition, and visiting us on the platform and telling us how things were going on. He called up,
I think, twice.

10198. He would have made a circuit of the house in the meantime?—Yes; we saw him do that.

10199. Who succeeded Senior-Constable Kelly in command?—Mr. Sadleir.

10200. What did he do to your knowledge?—When he arrived I saw him talking to Senior-Constable Kelly and he was out on the field. By this time I was doing my own work.

10201. What time did you first see him on the field?—It was dark when he arrived, and I think he went out immediately after.

10202. When did you first see him on the field?—I think about seven o’clock.

10203. What was he then doing?—I saw him going up in the direction of the corner gate.

10204. Had you, prior to the capture of Kelly, seen Mr. Sadleir in any portion of the field, giving orders to any of the police?—No.

10205. When did you next see Mr. Sadleir after the capture of Kelly?—Immediately after the capture of Kelly he cam to the station. He spent some time with Ned, interviewing him, as it were, and Mr. Sadleir’s object seemed to be to ascertain, if possible, from Ned, some sign by which he could get the other outlaws to surrender.

10206. How long after that was it you saw him actively engaged giving orders to the constables surrounding the hotel?—He was walking about on the field and on the platform the whole morning, and always busy. I could not fix any definite time.

10207. Will you fix some point where he was giving instructions to any of the police?—I cannot tell. I did not see him give any instructions at all. I simply saw him with the police.

10208. Where did you see him first?—On the platform.

10209. You saw him in conversation with Kelly?—Yes.

10210. Where did you see him on the field next taking part in the proceedings?—I cannot fix the definite time.

10211. Can you fix the place on that plan where you saw him?—No. I cannot until the burning of the house.

10212. Is it altogether a blank in your mind where and when and what he did?—No; I saw him about the platform, and I remember seeing him walking towards this gate—[pointing to the plan]—about seven o’clock in the morning.

10213. After the capture of Kelly and the time you saw Mr. Sadleir in conversation with Kelly at the station, will you fix any point where you saw Mr. Sadleir in the field?—Yes, he was to the right of the house when the prisoners came out—about that position—[pointing to the plan].

10214. Did you see Mr. Sadleir at any time actively engaged in the field between the capture of Kelly and the time you saw him when the prisoners came out?—No, I do not remember.

10215. Would you tell us whether you saw Mr. Sadleir giving any instructions to the police under his charge, except at that time?—I never saw him giving instructions to the police under his charge. I never saw anyone giving instructions.

10216. Was anybody else except Senior-Constable Kelly giving instructions to the police from the time Mr. Hare left?—I say I did not see anyone giving instructions.

10217. Will you tell us why you differ from Mr. Carrington when he says the police had no one to give instructions after Mr. Hare left?—Because Senior-Constable Kelly was there, and seemed very busy, and kept things right until morning, when Mr. Sadleir arrived.

10218. What time did Mr. Sadleir arrive?—Between five and six—just before daylight.

10219. Then the only officer you saw after Mr. Hare left in the morning, giving instructions to the police, was Senior-Constable Kelly?—I did not see him giving instructions.

10220. As far as you know, neither Kelly nor Mr. Sadleir gave instructions to the police?—As far as I know. I did not hear them.

10221. Was there any impression that anyone had charge?—Kelly told us what he was doing when he came to the platform, but we were not present to hear him giving the orders. The other constables told us that Kelly had placed them at certain trees and had supplied them with ammunition.

10222. Then your impression from those statements was that Kelly took charge of the whole operations when Mr. Hare left?—Yes.

10223. Until Mr. Sadleir came?—Yes, certainly. I disagree from Mr. Carrington in thinking that there was a want of officers or want of supervision on the part of the officers. I speak now first of Mr. Hare, the next place of Senior-Constable Kelly, and then Mr. Sadleir. With regard to Mr. Sadleir, after Ned Kelly had been caught, and the prisoners had escaped from the hotel, there were at least two of the outlaws inside alive and in armour and fighting; they were fighting up to one o’clock; there were plenty of policemen there to rush the place; and Mr. Sadleir’s position seemed to be this—“Would I be justified in rushing this place, and throwing away probably half a dozen lives; is there another way of accomplishing the same end?” and he ultimately decided to burn the place, and thereby secure his object without losing any lives.

10224. What reporter suggested the cannon?—I do not believe anyone did. I did not.

10225. What did you think of that proposition yourself?—I was surprised when I heard of it. I went to Mr. Sadleir to ask if it was true. He said it was, and wished me to say nothing about it till it arrived. 10226. You were not the reporter that suggested it?—No, certainly not.
10227. Did you hear any suggestion that any of the police should put on Ned Kelly’s armour and rush the building?—No.
10228. Did you approve of burning the hotel in order to destroy them?—Yes.
10229. No other course suggested itself to your mind?—There were other courses open. That was the safest one, and I did not consider it was worth while throwing away other lives for the sake of these two outlaws.
10230. Was there no danger to Johnson in approaching the hotel?—Not much.
10231. Did you approve of burning the hotel in order to destroy them?—Yes; because the outlaws inside would be able to shoot down with their revolvers three or four or five or six of the men as they entered the house before they could lay hands on them.
10232. Do you know whether, at the end of the hotel where Johnson set fire to it, they could see then to fire out from it at any person approaching?—I do not.
10233. Do you believe it was so perforated?—I could not say. I know the roof was riddled with bullets.
10234. What time did you know that Byrne was shot?—The rumor started soon after the prisoners escaped, and it was gradually confirmed as time wore on.
10235. Had you not heard of it before that?—No.
10236. Not at the time that Kelly was captured?—No.
10237. You had no information before the prisoners escaped at ten o’clock that Byrne was shot?—No.
10238. Was it possible that a great number of people surrounding Glenrowan would have known it without you knowing it?—Not a great number; some of them may.
10239. You were examined by the Reward Board?—Yes.
10240. You used the expression as to Kelly, that after Mr. Hare left, and up to a certain time, he, in your opinion, kept things right?—Yes.
10241. You stated why you came to that conclusion?—Yes.
10242. That he posted the men and came round for ammunition, and went round the house to see if the men were so posted, and came back and told you from time to time on the platform how things were?—Yes.
10243. That is what you mean by saying “kept things right”?—Yes.
10244. Do you think from the time Mr. Sadleir came, when you first saw him, he kept things right?—I do.
10245. Will you say in the same way shortly how he kept things right as Kelly did?—I can only say this, that I saw that things were kept right, and I knew he was in charge. That is my only answer. I saw him leaving the platform, but I did not follow him. When he was in the midst of his work I was in the midst of mine.
10246. Do you know of your own knowledge whether he went round himself and saw the men were posted?—I do not.
10247. Did you see him issuing any ammunition to the men?—No.
10248. Did senior-constable under his orders issue ammunition?—No.
10249. Did you see him talking to Ned Kelly?—Yes.
10250. Did you see him in the room smoking where Ned Kelly was?—Yes; I saw him filling his pipe.
10251. That portion of the evidence Mr. Carrington gave you saw?—Yes.
10252. Can you specify, except generally, that he did keep things right—any one particular thing which you call keeping things right?—No; I can only say things were kept right, in my opinion.
10253. Have you any reason to believe he did not?—No.
10254-5. You said you would speak of Mr. O’Connor’s part in the matter presently—can you mention what you desired?—What I wanted to explain was this, that I understood Mr. O’Connor was there simply as a volunteer; that, as a volunteer, he did good service, for which he deserved the thanks of the community.
10255. What we want is not your impressions, but what he did there—what do you know about him on that day of your own knowledge?—I simply know he left the platform with Mr. Hare and I did not see him again till after daylight.
10257. What did you see of him after daylight?—He came on the platform and spoke to Mrs. O’Connor.
10258. I think you said you got into the ditch where Mr. O’Connor was—did you see him there?—No. I saw the firing there.
10259. How do you know Mr. O’Connor was there?—From Senior-Constable Kelly 10260. Did you hear him speak to Mrs. O’Connor?—I saw him come on the platform and go to Mrs.
O'Connor. I did not hear him speak to her.

10261. Did you see anything else of Mr. O'Connor during that day?—No; I never saw anything of him.

10262. He might have been doing anything without your knowing?—Yes.

10263. Were you on the ground to see him?—We were on the platform, and did not see him.

10264. By Mr. O'Connor.—Did you not hear from some of the police what I was doing?—Yes.

10265. You heard that I was taking my part in the fight?—Yes. Mr. Hare, when he came on the platform, told Mrs. O'Connor; or Mr. Webb asked where you were, and if you were right, and he said, yes, you were right, in a good place in the drain. That was when he came on the platform, wounded.

10266. Did you hear Mr. Hare give any orders?—No; nothing but "Come along, boys."

10267. You did not hear his "fine manly voice" above the din of the fight?—No.

10268. Would you have been in a position to have heard it?—I think so.

10269. If anybody else had?—I think so.

10270. Did you or not see me when the prisoners came out?—No.

10271. Where were you then?—When they came out they rushed to one side, where they were checked by the police; and then to the other side, where they were also checked by the police. Mr. McWhirter and I ran out, checked them in front, and rounded them up to Mr. Sadleir. We were quite close up to the fence.

10272. Is it a fact that anybody was aware that the line was taken up when we were at Benalla?—I never heard it. It was said, "Perhaps the line may be torn up, and we had better send an engine in front."

10273. It was not stated as a fact?—No.

10274. That was not the reason the men were put on the engine?—No, only as a precaution. We thought we were going right on to Beechworth.

10275. Did you know that Mr. Carrington any time during the day was over at McDonald's?—Yes.

10276. How often?—Once, I think.

10277. How long did he remain?—He just had a bit of bread and cheese. I think he was there at the time I was, and only for a few minutes. I remained writing my report, and looking out of the about windows.

10278. Do you not remember my first appearance after leaving my position, when I spoke to you, the first time you saw me after the first firing?—I remember seeing you come on the platform shortly after daylight.

10279. Do you not remember coming up to me and introducing yourself, and saying, "You remember Lancefield, you did not want me to come with you then"?—Yes.

10280. And further on saying, "Well done, you stuck to your post well"?—Yes, considering you all the time as a volunteer.

10281. You did not say that to me?—No. I thought it was understood all along.

10282. On that day of the fight did you hear any disparaging remarks about my conduct—that I had not conducted myself as an officer or a constable?—Oh no. The only thing I heard of you was from Senior-Constable Kelly. He said he had asked you to take up another position and you had declined. That confirmed my impression that he was in charge.

10283. Did he make the statement to you that he asked me to place the men and I would not?—No.

10284. By the Commission.—What did you understand by "change his position"?—By shifting from one part of the drain to another or to another drain.

10285. You mentioned that when the prisoners came out, I think, you ran and told Mr. Sadleir?—No; when the prisoners came out they were checked on both sides by the police. They were rushing to the station where there were no police to keep them back, and we (Mr. McWhirter and I) checked them and rounded them up to Mr. Sadleir.

10286. You understood Kelly when he mentioned about Mr. O'Connor and another position—another position where his services would be more valuable?—Yes.

10287. By Mr. O'Connor.—Had you subsequently seen the position I was in?—Yes.

10288. In your opinion was it a good position to command the front of the house?—A very good position.

10289. By the Commission.—Could Mr. O'Connor at all times from that position see anyone who left from the front of the hotel?—Yes.

10290. Then if the woman and child, described by Mr. Carrington as leaving the front of the hotel, did leave would Mr. O'Connor see those or anyone?—He could see anyone in daylight, no doubt.

10291. Did you consider, when you rounded up the prisoners, as you say, towards Mr. Sadleir, that you were doing so to try and prevent the escape of the Kellys?—Certainly. We had a revolver each and we presented it at them.

10292. And turned them up towards Mr. Sadleir for the purpose?—Yes.

10293. Do you consider now, as you have given your evidence, that you were giving praise to Mr. O'Connor as a volunteer or an officer?—As a volunteer only.

POLICE. 3A
J.D. Melvin,
continued,
7th June 1881.

John McWhirter
7th June 1881.

10294. You considered him a volunteer?—Yes.

10295. You would not have given him praise if you had thought he was the officer in charge of the men for what he did?—No, I think as an officer he ought to have taken a more active part in directing the operations.

10296. By Mr. O’Connor.—By what authority do you know I did not give any orders?—Merely from what I hear from Senior-Constable Kelly.

10297. By the Commission.—This is a letter from Mr. O’Connor, dated 7th September 1880, in which he makes use of the following expression:—“In conclusion, I have to point out, as a Queensland officer of police, voluntarily serving in Victoria, assisting in searching for the Kelly gang,” &c. Is that the position you thought he was in that morning?—That is the position I thought he held—that he had been asked and came up as a volunteer.

The witness withdrew.

John McWhirter sworn and examined.

10298. By the Commission.—What are you?—A reporter on the Age.

10299. Were you in here during the morning?—Only occasionally.

10300. The best way for you to do will be to give a short narrative from the time the first notice was that the Kellys were in the Glenrowan hotel?—In order to prevent my going over it again, I may say I heard a portion of Mr. Carrington’s evidence, and he seemed to be under the impression when at Benalla, when the special train reached Benalla, that the lines were torn up; such was not the case. Constable Kirkham was present in front of the engine in order to watch the line in advance of the train, but it was afterwards resolved to send on a pilot engine as a precaution against surprise.

10301. In other words, we understand that the pilot engine and all those precautions were taken not from any specific information, but to prevent any accident from the outlaws, or their firing into it?—Yes. When within about a mile from the Glenrowan station we were stopped. I saw the pilot engine in front waving a red light. Some men got out of the train and some of the policemen got out of the train, and met the pilot engine. Mr. Melvin, of the Argus got out of the window of the carriage which I was in and obtained a key from the guard, and opened the door for Mr. Hare. Mr. Hare followed the other men and went up the line towards the pilot engine. We then heard that the Kellys had taken the people of Glenrowan, and had torn up the line half-a-mile below the station—that is on the Wangaratta side. I heard Mr. Hare giving orders to run on to the platform of the Glenrowan station quietly, and a few minutes afterwards we started again. On reaching the platform the reporters at once got out of the train. We had opened the door prior to that, and I then saw Mr. Hare with Mr. Rawlins go down the line towards the station-master’s house. In a few minutes they returned, and I heard from some one that the Kellys had been on the station a few minutes before and had taken the station-master off in the direction of the Warby Ranges. Mr. Rawlins was speaking to Mr. Hare, and told him that he knew the Warby Ranges well and would take the police party that way. I asked Mr. Hare for firearms for the reporters, as we had none at that time, and told him we would help him to carry on the fight, and he told me in a few minutes he would give me some. He left with two other men, I think, and walked in the direction of Jones’s hotel. He had not gone far when a man came running towards them and called out, “They are there; surround them.” Mr. Hare at once started to run, calling out, “Come on, boys.” He had crossed the drain between the station and the hotel, in fact was on the outside of the fence, when I noticed three figures coming into the verandah of the hotel and fire. Some of the then were still on the platform, and they picked up their arms and ran towards the hotel.

10302. Will you describe at this stage who went with Mr. Hare from the station?—I think Mr. Rawlins went with him from the station, but I was under the impression that it was Senior-Constable Kelly, but I cannot say it was.

10303. How many left with him?—About two when he went first.

10304. I mean after you heard some man say, “They are in Jones’s hotel, surround them”—had many left with him then?—The greater proportion of men—nearly all of them, but there were some of them engaged at the time taking out horses who did not hear, I think, Mr. Hare call out to them to come on.

10305. Did you see Mr. O’Connor leave then?—I heard him say something to the ladies in the train and run off, preceded by some of his black trackers.

10306. How far was Mr. Hare from the station, should you think, before Mr. O’Connor left?—A very considerable distance. He must have been seventy or eighty yards. Mr. Melvin called on me to come on, and I ran with him—he ran straight towards Jones’s hotel whilst I ran more in the direction of the station-master’s house.

10307. Could you see the direction Mr. O’Connor took?—Yes, I came to the drain and jumped into it—I saw some one jump into the drain and I jumped into it, and I saw Mr. O’Connor in the drain.

10308. Will you show where that is on the map?—[The witness examined the plan.]—I could point out the position on the ground. There were two black trackers further up the drain than Mr. O’Connor, to his right.

10309. Then it was one of the drains near the wicket-gate?—Yes.

10310. What time was it you saw Mr. O’Connor there?—Only on the starting of the firing, the firing was then continued, the first volley. The police were firing and the outlaws were firing also. I suppose I had not been there an instant before I heard that Mr. Hare was wounded, and having no arms. I thought it was better for me to go back to the station. I ran back at once. The next thing I heard was Mr. Hare, who has a peculiar voice, which I knew well, call out, “Cease firing.”

10311. Could you tell about where he was?—Outside the fence when he called out that, between the house and the fence. I may tell you it was a very clear night, we could see far and hear well, because it was frosty and the atmosphere perfectly still. The firing stopped, and we heard one of the outlaws using very bad language to the police, telling them to come on or they could fire away, as they could do them no harm.

10312. Could you indicate where the outlaw was that made use of the bad language?—Yes, I should say very close to the Wangaratta corner of the hotel.

10313. On the inside?—On the inside of the hotel—called out in a very loud voice.

10314. Was that immediately after the first volley?—Immediately after the first volley, and the order had been given to stop firing. I heard also, immediately after the outlaw had spoken, the cries of women inside. It was very hard to guess the time on an occasion like that, but I should say in about ten minutes Mr. Hare came back to the platform. His leg was drenched with blood, and he asked us to tie something round the wound in his wrist. This occupied some little time, and Mr. Carrington was assisted by the other members of the press, Messrs. Allen, Melvin, and myself. Mr. Rawlins, during this time, was holding Mr. Hare’s gun, and when the wound had been tied up, Mr. Hare asked Mr. Rawlins for the gun. Mr. Rawlins said, “Surely you are not going back, let me have the gun.” Mr. Hare replied, “I am going back,” and I advised him that he had better remain where he was for a short time. He took no notice, but walked off in the direction of the hotel, taking the gun with him. He was away some little time, about five minutes I should think, and returned again; when I saw him coming towards the railway station, he was staggering like a drunken man. I ran up to him and gave him my arm, and we assisted him into the railway carriage, he was then in a fainting condition, and we gave him some sherry which the ladies had. I advised him that he had better return to Benalla, and have his wound attended to by the doctor; that by doing so he could send more men from Benalla, and could himself return with them if necessary, after his wound had been dressed by the doctor. After a little persuasion he consented to do that, and I ran to the engine-driver to tell him to go back to Benalla with Mr. Hare, and to assist Mr. Hare in rousing the men at the police barracks as quickly as possible. The engine-driver seemed to misunderstand what was said to him, as he proceeded down the line a short distance and then ran rapidly past the station without taking Mr. Hare with him, and went on to Benalla. I then asked the driver of the second train to take Mr. Hare, and Mr. Hare got into the engine and was taken back. Before leaving, I spoke to the engine-driver, telling him not to forget to bring back the doctor, and one or two things of that sort.

10315. Was it long after the first engine started that the second engine went?—I think about five minutes between the two engines.

10317. The engine was ready to start as soon as it could safely?—Yes. I should have stated that on going back to the station the first time I saw Constable Bracken, and he was then in a very excited condition, running about the verandah posts saying he had escaped death. I learned from him he had been made a prisoner in the house, and that there were about thirty more prisoners there. He suddenly disappeared from the platform, and a minute or two afterwards I heard him ride rapidly down the line on one of the police horses in the direction of Benalla. After the departure of Mr. Hare I think Mr. Stanistreet, the station-master, came out of the hotel, I heard him challenged by the police, and heard him say, “Stanistreet, station-master.” He was questioned as to who were in the house, and he said about thirty or forty prisoners; that they were lying on their faces. I think it was in the front room he said.

10318. Who questioned him?—I believe it was Senior-Constable Kelly. He said that Mrs. Jones’s daughter and son had been wounded. There was very little firing done for some time afterwards. Senior-Constable Kelly at once started to take the men round the house, and placed them at intervals. About twenty minutes, I should think, after Mr. Hare had left, Senior-Constable Kelly returned to the station (aicketly, carrying with him a rifle stained with blood and wearing a skull-cap. He told us he had found the rifle in the bush at the Wangaratta side of the hotel, and he feared one of the outlaws had escaped, and the ground was stained with blood near there, and he asked what was best to be done under the circumstances. We (when I say “we” I mean the members of the pess) advised him that he could do nothing till daylight, and as the man was evidently wounded the black trackers would have very little difficulty in tracing him. Constable Phillips came up at that moment and stated that he had heard that all of the outlaws were in the place. Mrs. Reardon, soon after that, came outside and began to scream; Mrs. Jones was also screaming and cursing the police.

10319. For what?—She was calling them murderers, and said Ned Kelly was man enough for any of them, and why did not they come up and take them out of that. She just heaped one abuse on the back of another.

10320. Did you see Constable Kelly go to the carriage door where Mrs. O'Connor was when he came with the skull cap?—Yes. Mrs. O’Connor, or one of the ladies in the carriage, was calling out asking where Mr. O’Connor was—was he all right, was he safe, and Senior-Constable Kelly stepped forward to the van and said—“He is quite safe—he is in a drain.”

10321. When Kelly discovered that rifle, was that the first time he had been round, or before the placing of the men?—I could not say that. He was going round the house, and I think he was placing Constable Phillips at the time on the Wangaratta side when he found the cap. I think Mrs. Reardon did not come out till after Sergeant Steele arrived. After remaining on the platform some time, watching the hotel, I heard the sound of men coming down the side of the range—from the Wangaratta side. I called to some of the police nearest that there were some men coming down the hill. I then heard Senior-Constable Kelly’s voice challenge someone on the side of the hill, and heard the reply that it was the Wangaratta police with Sergeant Steele. At that moment we heard the train coming from Benalla with the Benalla police, with the second party; the one party arrived about two minutes before the other. Mrs. Reardon came out of the hotel; she was told to come towards the police. She was carrying a child in her arms and she did so; at the same time she said—“Let my husband and boy come with me.” She came up to near the railway fence when two men came out of Mrs. Jones’s hotel.

10322. Where were you standing at this time?—At the back of the station. One of the men was running with his head down, and several shots were fired; both then turned round and went back into the hotel.

10323. You could hear Mrs. Reardon’s voice plainly?—Yes, she screamed and was very excited. She said they had killed her boy, or they would kill her boy, or something of that sort. She came to the station, and I at once spoke to her and took her story down. It was published in the Age the next day.

10324. Did you see, prior to this, a man come out of the hotel with a wounded child in his arms?—Yes the man carried Mrs. Jones’s child out, and Mrs. Jones accompanied him. He was challenged by the police, and he carried the child across towards the station-master’s.

10325. Did you see him leave the hotel?—No, I saw him immediately after.
10326. You do not know whether he came out at the back or front?—No, he was carrying the child.
When at the back of the police, Mrs. Jones left the man and began to abuse the police again.

10327. Did she go back to the hotel again?—Once or twice she came out and went back. She came towards the police, and eventually came out to a position at the rear of the police, abusing them, calling them murderers and one thing and another.

10328. At what time were the police aware those people were in the house?—Immediately after the first volley had been fired.

10329. Would all the police be aware of that fact?—I cannot say. All the police must have known. We knew, and they were in a better position to know than we were. We certainly had the benefit of the stories of the prisoners who did make their escape, and the police at the back of the house would know at once. I know when I knew there were so many prisoners inside I made enquiries about the firing into the place, and was told the police were instructed to be careful and fire as high as the height of a man above the ground. It was described that the prisoners in the house were lying on their faces on the floor.

10330. Do you know who gave the instructions?—I do not. I was simply told by some of the men.

10331. About what time did you first hear of that?—About the time I heard of that was, I think, in the first rush—many of the men had taken wrong ammunition with them, and the consequence was that they had to send back for ammunition, and Mr. Melvin and myself sorted the carbine and Martini-Henry ammunition and gave it out to the men as the messengers came to the station for it.

10332. Who came for it?—Rawlins took the first lot and Senior-Constable Kelly the next.

10333. When did you first know when the police were instructed to fire high?—I believe it was from Kelly or Phillips when they came for ammunition, because I thought at the time it was dangerous to fire into the house where there were so many innocent people, that is, according to the statement received from Stanistreet that there were thirty or forty prisoners in the hotel—innhabitants of the place. That led me to ask the police which room the prisoners were in and the position, and I was told they were to fire high.

10334. Do you know the time Mr. Sadleir arrived?—It was before that.

10335. You swear positively that before Mr. Sadleir arrived the police were instructed to fire high?—I will not swear that, but I will swear I was told they were instructed to fire high. Immediately after Steele arrived the train came in, and the Benalla police were distributed on the Benalla side of the house, I think. The boy came running out with his head down, and there were several shots fired.

10336. Did you see the boy running?—I saw the figure of a man—I took it to be two men, and I could tell that one was running stooping his head and shoulders.

10337. In what portion of the hotel was that?—He came out of the front door and ran towards the tree near which Mrs. Reardon got over the fence.

10338. From the position you were standing in could you see that boy or man coming from the hotel?—I could, and did.

10339. Were you then stationed at a point further removed from the hotel, or nearer the drain where
Mr. O’Connor was?—I was further from the hotel.

10340. And you could see from your position this boy or man coming out of the house?—Yes, as I say I saw them.

10341. You were further from the hotel than Steele was?—Yes.

10342. Do I understand you that you were between the station and the hotel?—I was between the station and the hotel. You will see the station has a raised platform, and on the side of that platform, between the station and the hotel, we took up our position, and sat on or lay down on some police saddles. It was very cold at the time.

10343. You had a full view of the house from there?—Yes. When the Benalla and Wangaratta police came, the firing at the hotel was more rapid than it had been for the three hours prior to that.

10344. Would that be about five o’clock?—It would be hard to fix the time. I did fix it pretty near at the time.

10345. Was it before daylight?—It was. I think it was not daylight till about seven o’clock. Nothing of any great moment occurred till after daylight, when I noticed the figure of a man coming through the woods from the direction of Morgan’s Look-out. He walked straight towards the hotel, and when within twenty yards of Constable Arthur, who was lighting his pipe at a log, he raised his revolver and fired in the direction of Arthur, who fired three shots at the man. Of course the man was Ned Kelly, and as Kelly still continued to advance, he (Arthur) ran in a circle for cover to a tree—that is in the direction of the railway station. I believe the shots hit the outlaw, because I could see him stagger distinctly and almost step backwards to recover his position again. Senior-Constable Kelly and Guard Dowsett closed in on Ned Kelly and both fired at him.

10346. From the back?—I saw Dowsett the first approaching Kelly from the railway station, and Senior-Constable Kelly came from Kelly’s rear. Ned Kelly got between two trees, and several shots were fired at him there by Guard Dowsett and Senior-Constable Kelly.

10347. Did you see Senior-Constable Kelly retreating from the figure or advancing?—Always advancing.

10349. What distance would Arthur have to retreat to the tree?—I suppose about forty yards from the position in which he was. He ran towards the station to a tree, got behind the tree, and I saw Constable Phillips, Constable Healey, and Constable Montford come up and take part in the fight, each selecting a tree. Montford stood at the side, and I saw Constable Healey standing down in open ground, and firing at Ned Kelly, and before the shots had been exchanged, Senior-Constable Kelly and Dowsett being the closest to the outlaw. Dowsett was particularly close to him. There was only the log which Kelly came back to and stood at in a curve, and another log about ten or twelve yards distance sheltered Dowsett and both exchanged shots with their revolvers at one another. I saw a man coming rapidly down the side of the hill—that is from the direction of Mrs. Jones’s house and Sherritt’s to within about ten yards of Kelly, near the stump. He fired in rapid succession two shots, and Kelly disappeared, I suppose he fell. I could see his head before that, but immediately after those shots were fired he disappeared behind the log as if hit by the man. The police at once ran towards the outlaw. I ran with

Mr. Melvin and Mr. Allen, and when we got to the log where Kelly was I saw Sergeant Steele kneeling and holding one arm. Guard Dowsett was holding another arm.

10350. Do you know which Dowsett was holding?—The left arm, the one nearest the log. Kelly was lying with his feet towards the railway station; Dowsett was partly across his body, but he appeared to have his arm on the man’s shoulder and across his legs, so to speak. Steele was on the other side of him, that is on the right-hand side of him. Senior-Constable Kelly was sitting across his head. They pulled the helmet off Kelly between his legs.

10351. Did you see that?—I saw them take the helmet off, and Sergeant Steele exclaimed, “It is Ned Kelly”; and, with that, I heard a man approach and give vent to something like a war whoop, and kick Ned Kelly on the side.

10352. Did you hear any other remark made by Steele?—No.

10353. Did you hear him afterwards say, “I swore I would be in at your death, you b—— wretch”?—No. I noticed the man who kicked him was Constable Dwyer. Somebody warned him not to do that—that he had done wrong, and, a few minutes afterwards, Dwyer ran back to where Superintendent Sadleir was, on the other side of the hotel, and expressed sorrow for what he had done. I believe Kelly was taken to the railway station then, and while we were assisting him to the platform, there were several shots fired from the hotel in the direction in which we were. We heard them whistling over our heads.

10354. Were you under the impression that the other outlaws knew that Ned was caught?—Yes. When we first got to the log, I saw the smoke come from the side of the kitchen, and heard a ball whistle over our heads, and Senior-Constable Kelly called on me to pick up his rifle—he had dropped it on the other side of the log on which Kelly was prisoner. I picked it up, and Mr. Allen was told to keep a look-out to see that none of the outlaws came out again to fire.

10355. Did Senior-Constable Kelly advance when he picked up his rifle?—I think he attended the party. We took the outlaw to the station, some had to carry the armour, and it took four or five of us to lift him over the railway fence. The other men carried this weighty armour down to the railway platform, and Kelly was then placed in the guard’s van.

10356. Did Kelly appear to be drunk?—I did not think he was drunk, but he appeared to be ill, and had a wild look on his face—a wasted look. I then saw Superintendent Sadleir.

10357. Where?—On the railway platform. He came in and questioned the outlaw.

10358. Was that the first time you had seen Mr. Sadleir?—That was.

10359. How long was that after Kelly was taken?—It must have been about fifteen minutes, I should think. Kelly was stripped of the armour at the log, and he had to be partly carried to the station, and he had been placed in the guard’s van when Mr. Sadleir came in and questioned him.

10360. Was Mr. O’Connor there then?—I did not see Mr. O’Connor. He may have been, but I did not see him at that time. I was particularly interested in taking notes of what Kelly himself said. Of course it is possible Mr. O’Connor may have been present, but I did not see him.

10361. Where did you first see Mr. O’Connor after you had seen him at the drain?—When the prisoners came out of the hotel.

10362. Where was he then?—On the Wangaratta side of the hotel, standing close to Mr. Sadleir.

10363. Did you see any officer give orders to the men after Mr. Hare left in the morning?—No; except Senior-Constable Kelly.

10364. You never saw Mr. Sadleir give any orders?—I did not. I can tell you where I first saw Mr. Sadleir taking any active part. After the escape of the prisoners, I saw Mr. Sadleir take up a position on the Benalla side of the hotel.

10365. What o’clock was that?—After ten o’clock in the morning.

10366. What position did he take?—He stood behind a tree. I could see him distinctly.

10367. There is a very large tree on that side pointed out to the Commission—would that be the tree directly in a line with the front of the hotel on the Wangaratta side?—It was on the Benalla side I saw him—between seven and about ten o’clock, there was nothing very much occurred.

10368. Was there much firing from the hotel between seven and ten?—There was a considerable amount of shots came from the hotel soon after Kelly was caught.

10369. Were there any shots fired from the hotel in the direction where Kelly was captured at or about the time of his capture?—When he was captured I heard the shots. In fact the shots stripped the leaves off the bush close to where we were assisting Kelly over the railway fence.

10370. Do you know those came from the hotel of your own knowledge, or from those stationed in the gully or from those stationed on the Benalla side of the hotel?—They may have come from the people stationed on the Benalla side, but it is my impression that those shots I refer to came from the hotel, because, when the first shot was fired, I saw the smoke from the hotel.
Then that must have come from?—One of the outlaws.

What portion of the hotel?—Between the kitchen and the hotel it seemed to come from.

At the back?—Yes.

Was there much firing from the time of the first volley in which Mr. Hare was wounded until seven o’clock—from the hotel?—Occasionally I could see the flash of a gun from the hotel, and it was generally followed by two or three shots from the police. The police fired about three shots for every shot fired by the outlaws. It appeared to me that the outlaws had taken up a position in a room at the back of the hotel, from the door of which they fired through the windows—that is some considerable distance from the windows.

Then your impression is that the outlaws fired most of their shots from the back window of the hotel?—Yes.

Between that and the kitchen?—Yes.

Did you see much firing after early in the morning from the front windows of the hotel?—I saw the flashes back in the centre of the house.

I ask did you see much firing after early in the morning from the front windows of the hotel?—No, I think they very seldom exposed themselves near the windows.

That would be the heavy fire drove them into the back?—Yes, and their being more secure in the inside room.

Did you hear that Byrne had been shot in the hotel?—Yes.

About what time?—Early in the morning. I do not know how I heard of it, but I did hear it. It came as a rumour at first that he had been shot whilst drinking with some one else in the bar of the hotel.

Can you fix the time?—About the time Kelly was caught—before the prisoners escaped.

Did you hear Ned Kelly say anything about how his best man was shot, and so on?—I did not. He was told that Byrne was shot, I recollect, at a later hour in the day.

Did he say anything?—He said something about his being a good man or something of that sort.

Did you remain with Kelly after he was taken to the railway station?—I remained in the guard’s van for some time, trying to hear what I could.

Did you see any one putting warm bottles to his feet?—Not in the van. I think he received some treatment of that sort in a room in the station. After he had been in the van some time, by the advice of Dr. Nicholson, he was taken to the station and placed in a bed there. His feet were very cold. I know that because I cut the boots off and assisted the doctor when he was dressing the wounds. His feet and hands were very cold, and he fainted two or three times.

Did you visit Kelly during the day after the first interview?—Yes.

Did you see any one?—Sergeant Steele was with him.

All the time?—All the time.

Did you see Mr. Sadleir any time with Kelly during the day?—I think I saw him there once, he was in the room when I went in. I do not know how long he remained.

10391. You stated you first saw Mr. Sadleir after the capture of Kelly. You next saw him at the time the prisoners were released?—Yes, standing on the Wangaratta side.

10392. After that you saw him stationed on the Benalla side?—Yes.

10393. When next did you see him?—Just prior to the house being fired.

10394. In the interval, between seven o’clock in the morning and just before the house was fired, was Mr. Sadleir particularly engaged giving instructions to the men under his charge?—I did not see him engaged in going round the men, but I saw Constable Dwyer going up to him on several occasions, and going to other parts of the field. I saw Dwyer pass in front of the house on several occasions.

10395. Did you hear about the cannon?—I heard of it in the evening for the first time.

10396. It has been said that the advice to send for that was tendered by some of the reporters?—I think Mr. Sadleir was mistaken in that.

10397. Did you tender that advice?—Certainly not.

10398. Did you hear any one volunteer to rush the place prior to setting it on fire?—I did not hear them offer; but I was told that Constable Armstrong had done so, and Constable Dwyer, and some other constable—it may have been Johnson. I cannot say, but I heard of three.

10399. Did you hear of that previous to burning the hotel?—Yes, some considerable time before the burning of the hotel.

10400. Did you that day form any opinion yourself as to the best means to adopt for the purpose of capturing the two outlaws?—I did not that day; but, on thinking the matter over since, I have arrived at an opinion.

10401. Did you believe it was a good thing to set fire to it?—There is only one thing that would prevent my saying it was the best thing, and that is that it was known that the wounded man Cherry was in the hotel.

10402. That would have deterred you from taking that course?—Yes.

10403. Was that fact known?—Yes, I knew of it; and I am sure if I did that Mr. Sadleir knew it.

10404. Did you hear any one report that to Mr. Sadleir?—Yes; it was stated when the prisoners made their escape from the hotel, I believe. I will not say positively. I believe it was stated by the prisoners when coming to the station. If you understand, when the prisoners made their escape, at half-past ten in the morning, they were all brought round to where Superintendent Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor were standing, and they were called up one by one, and all but two were allowed to go away—to clear out; and I think, on the way to the station it was stated that Cherry was the only man left in the hotel, and he was wounded, and had been carried back into the back kitchen, and was sitting against some bags of oats. That is what I heard. Anyway it was a well-known fact for four or five hours that Martin Cherry was in the place, and was wounded in the groin; we knew the position of the wound.

10405. Did you hear any one volunteer to go and take Cherry out before the house was set on fire?—No; but I noticed Kelly’s two sisters came from the Greta side—Mrs. Skillian and Kate Kelly. Mrs. Skillian was stopped by Senior-Constable Kelly; and I heard him asking her if she would not go to the hotel and advise her brother to surrender. She said she would sooner see them burned first. I did not know at that time; something must have been said to Mrs. Skillian, otherwise she would not have known it was intended to burn the hotel. That was the first intimation I had it was intended to burn the hotel.

10406. How soon afterwards was it set on fire?—Twenty minutes. Senior-Constable Kelly then went to the Catholic priest on the ground, who also had an interview with Mrs. Skillian, to get her to go up to the hotel, and get her brother to surrender. She again said she would sooner see them burned first but she would like to have an interview with her brother before he died. Kelly said, “You had better come round with me to see Mr. Sadleir.” They walked round the Benalla side, close to the railway, and Mrs. Skillian then walked towards the hotel, and was ordered by the police to stop, or they would fire on her. She stopped, and a few minutes after I noticed Constable Johnson take a bundle of straw to the Benalla side of the hotel, and set fire to it. I spoke to the Catholic priest, who was standing near me at the railway gate, and said he was the only man who could save Cherry. He asked me if I did not think there was any danger, and I told him no, because they would not do him any harm.

10407. In consequence of his religious dress?—Yes. He walked towards the hotel, and the police ordered him to go back or they would fire; but he took no notice of them.

10408. The police threatened to fire at him?—That is, the police stationed at a tree just between the station and the hotel. It is the nearest tree to the house I think. He entered the house with his head uncovered, and, as he entered, the whole place seemed to take fire at once. I feared for a moment for his safety, and ran round to the back of the hotel, and there saw several policemen carrying Cherry out. The priest said they were all dead, that they were lying in the room on the Benalla side as he passed through, and that a dog was lying dead alongside of them. I noticed some of the police also taking out the body of Byrne.

10409. Did the police rush up immediately after the priest?—Immediately after the priest.
10410. After he came out?—I did not see the priest come back. I have heard it in evidence that he came back at the front door, and signalled to the men, but I did not see that. He may have done so. Cherry was just dying when he was brought out.
10411. You said, when Mr. Hare rushed up after the first volley, he gave the order “Cease firing.” Why did he do that, have you any idea?—I do not know. It is very possible that, from his position, he heard the cries of the people in the house, and was so induced to order the police to stop firing.
10412. You did not hear him calling to Mr. O’Connor to surround the house?—I did not. Oh, I heard him say to Senior-Constable Kelly, at one time, to be careful and surround the house—“For God’s sake” to surround the house.
10413. Then, in your opinion, Senior-Constable Kelly had full charge till Mr. Sadleir arrived?—I think so.
10414. There was an expression made use of this morning by one witness. He said Senior-Constable Kelly kept things all right. Would that fairly represent his conduct in your opinion?—Yes. That was a peculiarly dangerous time—between three in the morning and six o’clock—because the police on the ground were not numerous. They had to take up places at considerable intervals in order to surround the house.
10415. Their whole aim was then to carry out the orders given by Mr. Hare not to let them escape?—Not to let them escape.
10416. You went round the hotel later on in the day?—Yes.
10417. About what time did you first make the attempt to go round any portion of the hotel. You went to the scene where Kelly was captured?—Yes.
10418. Did you run considerable risk in going to that spot?—I do not know. I did not feel the risk at the time.
10419. Later on in the day did you go round the other sides of the hotel?—I was on the Benalla side.
10420. Round the back?—Yes, about one o’clock, and got a view of the horses.
10421. From seven in the morning until the time that the place was set on fire, was there any very great risk in any one going from point to point if they were at a respectable distance from the hotel?—No, I think not.
10422. Suppose an officer of police having men under him there, he would not run any very great risk in going round to see if the men were properly stationed, and giving instructions himself?—No, he would not.
10423. Did you see any of the police moving from point to point during the day except Senior-Constable Kelly?—Yes, I did.
10424. Did you see Dwyer?—I did.
10425. Did you see him going from one point to another?—Yes.
10426. Do you think he ran any unnecessary risk in doing so?—Yes, I think he did.
10427. That he was rash?—Yes, foolhardy.
10428. That the same work could have been performed quite as effectively with safety?—Yes, quite as effectively. I do not believe the man has any sense of fear at all, that is my idea of him.
10429. Was there any considerable risk in a careful man going round to give orders and so on?—No. At the same time, if an officer had taken up his position on the station, he could very nearly see the men were at their positions. He had only to walk to the Benalla side of the house and he would know the position of all the men from those points of view.
10430. Did you see Mr. Sadleir going about at all?—Well, with the exception of the times I have stated, that is when he came to the station, when I saw him with the prisoners, and when I saw him round the Benalla side of the house, that is the only time I saw him.

10431. Would it astonish you if an officer of police gave this evidence—Mr. Sadleir says, in answer to question No.2792, “It was a very difficult matter, I found, to get round, myself, from post to post. You had to run the gauntlet of the outlaws’ fire from the building, and there was danger too from the crossfire of the police. Constable Dwyer, an active, zealous fellow, seeing me going round myself, asked for any messages I had to give, and I gave him some messages to the different points, and to ascertain for me particulars of how the thing stood at all sides, and he ran round from place to place where I directed. As he went along, I saw him jumping and skipping as sheep will, apparently over nothing.” Then he says that he went back to Mr. O’Connor in the drain. Do you think that was the position for a superintendent of police to place himself in?—It certainly was not a good place to observe the encounter in, to take up in order to watch the progress of the fight, or to meet any emergency that might arise.

10432. Were you in that drain when you saw Mr. O’Connor?—Yes.

10433. What was your impression of the position of Mr. O’Connor for the purpose for which he was there?—I did not think it was a good position.

10434. What do you mean by good?—Not good to take up in order to observe what was done by the Kelly gang. For instance, I may point out that when Kelly made his appearance, I did not believe that any person in that drain either knew what was going on or anything else.

10435. Was it a good position for an officer to take up to prevent any person escaping from the hotel?—No, it was not.

10436. Why do you say “good,” was it not safe?—Yes.

10437. Was it not good in that respect?—Yes; but it was not good for observation.

10438. But for preservation?—Yes, for preservation.

10440. Have you formed an idea of the time Kelly did escape?—Only from the prisoners in the hotel. Some of them said he never came inside the hotel again; that directly the police fired he walked off calling on Byrne to come with him. Others say he walked straight through the building, and spoke to Byrne, and asked him to come with him to the back. They all agree that he did not remain in the house.

10441. The building was not surrounded at that time?—No; I am certain he made off directly the first volley was fired, and before the police had time to surround the house, otherwise I feel certain he would have been seen by the police who were posted there.

10442. Is there anything else of importance?—I noticed, in hearing the evidence given, there was some doubt in the minds of the Commission as to the character of Aaron Sherritt’s hut. I may say I visited the hut after the murder, and Constable McColl, who had been at one time stationed in the hut, described to me the position of the police. I saw some bullet holes through the wall. The house was constructed of colonial hardwood sawn timber, not weather-boards exactly, like slabs together, one on top of the other, like that—[illustrating his meaning]. Run down between two uprights inside of this bed-room there was a lining of mud; and it was apparent that the balls of the outlaws had penetrated the outer wall, and carried away a large portion of the mud inside. It would be impossible for men armed with shot guns to fire through that wall, for I tested it with a revolver to see if a revolver would pierce the walls from the outside, and found that in no instance did the revolver ball go through the hardwood. It was only a rifle ball that would go through.

10443. The slabs would be an inch to an inch and a quarter thick?—Yes.

10444. It would have been possible to have shut the doors?—Well, in the first instance, they were in a very awkward position, they were surprised; but, according to the evidence of the men in the place, when they heard one of the outlaws at the rear of the house or the end of the house striking matches to set fire to the hut, there would have been no difficulty not only in closing the doors but in getting outside.

10445. Is that the case that there was a partition between the front door and the back, a beam running from one wall plate to another?—There was a plate laid from one side to the other from the front to the back of the house, and between that and the roof was an aperture.

10446. There was nothing above the square?—No.

10447. The front door opened back to that partition?—Yes.

10448. Would there have been any difficulty in any one on the bed reaching over from the bedroom and closing both the doors?—It would have exposed them to the outlaws who were supposed to be at the door, but they were great clumsy doors that required some trouble to close them.

10449. Could you give any idea of the height of the top wall plate from the door?—I had to stand on something to look over.

10450. How high?—Standing on something—a stool about two feet high.

10451. The height of a bag of flour?—Yes, the walls were about 7 feet 6 inches.

10452. Was the bedstead in the room when you saw it?—No.
10453. You can imagine the height of a bedstead; could a man have stood on a bedstead and seen over that plate?—Yes.
10454. Do you think the police acted cowardly in remaining?—I think they acted with a considerable amount of wisdom in the first part, and I do not believe, in the first instance, they could have been expected to have gone out. Had they done so, it is my impression they would have been shot; it would have been a useless show of courage. I do not think there was any want of courage displayed.

10455. They only knew that two outlaws were there?—Yes, but they heard voices. You must remember they would look at it this way, that the gang kept pretty much together, and if two were there you might expect that the remainder of the gang were not very far off.

10456. By Mr. O’Connor.—When Bracken gave the information that the Kellys were at Jones’s, you stated that Mr. Hare and a mob of men rushed up towards the hotel?—No; I say that when Mr. Hare was proceeding in the direction of Jones’s, he just got round the side of the station when I heard a man say, “They are there, surround them.”

10457. Did you know those men at the time or afterwards; you found out their names afterwards?—Some of the men I knew. I knew Phillips, I knew Arthur, I knew Senior-Constable Kelly. I distinguished Guard Dowsett by his uniform, and I was told who Montiford and Healey were.

10458. At the time, as these things took place, you recognised those men?—Yes.

10459. It is not from after conversations and talks?—With reference to those two men, Montiford and Healey, I asked who they were afterwards, in order that I might frame my report concerning those who were engaged in the fight.

10460. By the Commission.—That was, in consequence of something you had seen them do, you were anxious to know their names?—Yes, exactly.

10461. Do you consider Dowsett acted with great pluck on that occasion?—I do.

10462. By Mr. O’Connor.—Where were you on the platform when the men rushed up to the house?—On the Benalla side of the station house.

10463. Not off the platform?—On the platform.

10464. Have you any idea of the distance from the platform to the hotel?—About 150 yards I should say; or perhaps 200 yards.

10465. After the first fire was there not a heavy smoke hanging about?—Yes.

10466. Was it possible for anybody to distinguish by sight any person after that volley?—The smoke gradually rose and cleared off the valley; it did not hang about long.

10467. Was not there heavy firing continually at the first?—Yes, until Mr. Hare gave the orders to cease.

10468. How do you know he gave the orders?—I heard his voice.

10469. Are you positively certain it was his voice?—I do not think I could mistake his voice, it is a peculiar voice.

10470. Were you acquainted with him before this?—No; but I had heard him speaking often prior to that.

10471. What was the first occasion you ever had any intercourse with Mr. Hare—when he came back wounded?—No. I had spoken to him at Benalla before that, and once at the time of the Lancefield robbery. Those were the only two occasions.

10472. By the Commission.—After Mr. Hare gave the orders to cease firing, what time did the firing commence again?—I suppose there was an interval of about ten minutes or a quarter of an hour.

10473. Was that after Mr. Hare left?—About the time he left, I think. Oh, there was some firing, when he went out the second time.

10474. That was after you had bandaged his arm?—Yes.

10475. Would that firing be at the outlaws appearing outside, or at the hotel only—have you any idea?—I did not know from my own knowledge; I believe it was in consequence of flashes from the hotel, and they returned the fire.

10476. By Mr. O’Connor.—When Mr. Hare returned wounded to the platform, you state his arm was bound up and he returned to the fight?—Yes.

10477. Of your own knowledge, did you see Mr. Hare go up into the fight?—I did.

10478. Where were you placed at that time?—The station.

10479. What part of the station?—The Benalla side.

10480. You remained at this Benalla side from the time of the first rush to the time Mr. Hare went back wounded?—No; I did not; I walked towards the drain, into the drain, and back again, and took up my position again on the Benalla side, because we could see from there what was going on better than from any other position.

10481. Could you see how far Mr. Hare went?—I could say he had plenty of time to go.

10482. Could you see, I ask?—Well, I am positive I saw him go as far as the drain, if not further.

10483. You say that Senior-Constable Kelly took the men and stationed them here and there; did you accompany him?—No; several times I saw him and heard him speaking. I saw him going round with

7th June 1881.

10484. Where did he get Phillips?—He was going down the Wangaratta side of the hotel.
10485. Where had Phillips been previously?—I do not know where. He came down to the place for ammunition.
10486. Did Kelly tell you he was going to place Phillips in a certain position?—No.
10487. How do you know he was?—When Constable Kelly came to the back with the rifle and was asked where you were, he replied, “In the drain,” and he came back and said, “He would not come out of the drain when I asked him, and I had to place the men myself.”
10488. Whom did he say this to?—On the platform.
10489. Whom to?—I believe it was to me he said it.
10490. Had you seen Senior-Constable Kelly before?—Yes, I had spoken to him twice; first of all at the murder at Schnapper Point, and I had seen him in Benalla once or twice.
10491. By the Commission.—How many years ago was the murder at Schnapper Point?—The Hastings murder—about four or five years ago.
10492. By Mr. O’Connor.—You have given a very free opinion of your own as to my position—did you take into consideration, when you made that statement, the time at which the first rush was taken, the circumstances under which it was?—No, I was simply asked. I based my opinion in this way—I was asked the question whether that was an advantageous position for an officer of police to take up.
10493. An officer or a man was the question—a position for keeping the outlaws in the hotel, and you gave your opinion that you did not think it a good position. Now, considering this, did you take into consideration the time at which the rush was made and the meagre information we had, and not knowing the ground—was it not, under those circumstances, a very good position to take to prevent the outlaws from escaping?—No, certainly it was not.
10494. If you had been in my place, where would you have gone, will you tell the Commission—you can give your opinion about that just as well as the other. I suppose?—My courage has never been tested, and I cannot say what it would be under the circumstances—I can only imagine.
10495. What would you have done?—I would have done as Senior-Constable Kelly did.
10496. What did he do?—He occupied positions in which he could observe the gang had they come out of the hotel.
10497. He was round at the rear most of the time?—Yes.
10498. How about the front of the house; if I had been round here also—by your opinion I ought to have been round where Kelly was—what would you have said if they had come out at the front if there had been nobody there?—It would have given the reporters an opportunity to distinguish themselves.
10499. By the Commission.—Did you see any particular reporter go out with a body of police during the day and act with them?—No, I did not.
10500. Were you or any of the reporters out upon the ground during between the time of the arrival of the Benalla train and the burning?—Mr. Melvin, myself, and Mr. Allen were all out.
10501. Where did you go to?—Round the Wangaratta side of the place in company with the others. Then after that, before the burning of the place, I went up by myself on the Benalla side of the house, near where Mr. Sadleir was at the time the house was set fire to. He was behind a tree.
10502. Did you see Mr. O’Connor on that occasion?—I did see Mr. O’Connor on that side on one occasion, but I forget whether it was then or before that.
10503. Where was he when you saw him?—I think he was with Mr. Sadleir.
10504. Was that in the trench or at the tree?—At the tree.
10505. By Mr. O’Connor—You stated when the prisoners were coming out of the house you saw me with Mr. Sadleir?—Yes.
10506. What time would that be about?—Half-past ten.
10507. Was that the first time you saw me after the rush?—Yes.
10508. Did you know from hearsay where I was before?—Yes, and from personal observation—both.
10509. And you saw me get into the position at that time?—Yes.
10510. When did you see me first?—At the time of the first rush.
10511. Do you mean to say you rushed up with the police at that time?—I did not rush up with the police at that time; the police were in advance of me.
10512. Did you see me take up my position?—I saw you get into the drain.
10513. Where were you?—I was near Stanistreet’s place at the time.
10514. How did you get to that position?—I followed up the police, almost with them; I was just a yard or so behind some of the men.
10515. That would be at the first go-off?—Yes.
10516. Would you show on the plan where that position was?—[The witness did so.]
10517. And in your opinion that was the one I retained throughout, or have you any cause to doubt it?—I have no cause to doubt that; that was the position you maintained till the morning was well advanced.

10518. Did you ever go into that position of mine in the trench before any subsequent rains?—Yes; I went into it on the day after the fight.

10519. You could see the whole front of the house?—I could not.

10520. Why not?—Because your eyes were about level with the ground, and the fence also stopped your view of the place.

10521. Could you not see the house from the position?—You could see the house.

10522. Could you not see people going in and out?—With an effort.

10523. What effort?—By raising on tiptoe.

10524. By the Commission.—Did you see the top rail of the fence riddled with bullets?—Yes.

10525. On which side?—Between the house and the position in the drain occupied by Mr. O’Connor.

The witness withdrew.

G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.

Mrs. Margaret Reardon sworn and examined.

10526. By the Commission.—Do you remember the time at which the Kellys tore up the railway line at Glenrowan?—I do.

10527. Do you know what time it was that the Kellys demanded of your husband to tear the line up?—It was twenty minutes past two on Sunday morning when we left our house.

10528. What time were you taken to Jones’s hotel?—I was not taken there just then; all the prisoners were left at Mr. Stanistreet’s, the gate-house.

10529. You were taken there?—Yes.

10530. What time was that?—We were taken straight from our place to there, and left there while the men were taken away to take up the rails.

10531. Were the whole of your family in the house?—Yes, there was myself and eight children and my husband.

10532. Did the Kellys say for what purpose they took you prisoners?—I begged of Kelly not to take my husband to take the line up. He said he had to do it, as the people up there told him nobody could do it but a platelayer.

10533. Did he tell you why he took the line up?—He said it was to wreck the special train that was coming after him with a lot of police and volunteers.

10534. Did he mention how he heard that?—No, he did not. I asked him how he knew they were coming, and he said, “I quite expect them.”

10535. You were in Mrs. Jones’s house about two o’clock that morning, before the special train came up?—Yes, I was in there from about four o’clock on Sunday afternoon.

10536. Then you were there all Sunday night?—All Sunday night.

10537. How many were there?—A great many people. All the rooms were full; all the front of the house was full of men, women, and children.

10538. Could you get any food there?—No, I saw no food there.

10539. Was there much drinking?—I did not see much drinking, in fact I did not see any. I did not take any notice. I was not in the bar.

10540. Did you see the Kelly gang frequently?—I never saw them in my life till that time.

10541. I mean in the house that night?—Yes, I did.

10542. What were they doing, generally speaking?—There was one of them, Hart who was not there. He remained in charge of Mr. Stanistreet’s family, and allowed them to remain in their own house. I saw Ned Kelly in the kitchen with Mrs. Jones and her daughter. The most part of Sunday night he was not in sight at all—only when they were having a dance, and I saw the other two men. I believe they were playing cards with Mrs. Jones in the little parlour; and during that time it was Mrs. Jones’s daughter was minding us with a revolver in her hand, reckoning where we women and children were, and to count the number up. She used to stand and reckon us like that—[holding out her arm]—with a revolver in her hand.

10543. Were you summoned by the police at Beechworth to give evidence of that?—No, not of that; they asked me nothing of that.

10544. Were you at the trial of Mrs. Jones at Beechworth?—Yes.

10545. Did you give this evidence there that you are giving now?—No, I was never asked it.

10546. You state that Mrs. Jones’s daughter had a revolver?—Yes, in her hand, and she carried it in the pocket of her jacket.

10547. What age was she?—A young woman—I daresay between 15 and 16.

10548. Did Mrs. Jones seemed to be very pleased the outlaws were in the place?—She seemed quite pleased and merry.

10549. Did she dance with any of them?—Mrs. Jones danced, but I cannot say with whom.

10550. Were you in the house when the police first came?—Yes.

10551. What was done inside when the firing commenced?—When the police first came the people were nil going out the rooms, from one room to another, and Constable Bracken came to the room where we were in and said, “Lie down as flat as you possibly can on the floor, it is the only chance you have got,” and we did so.

10552. And did the firing commence immediately?—The firing commenced in about fifteen minutes after that.

10553. Did you see what Constable Bracken did after he told you that?—No, I did not see him after that, for we were in the back room.

10554. Can you tell us how the rooms were situated?—There were three different rooms—the dining room, the bar room in the middle, and the little parlor, at the Benalla end.

10555. How many doors in the front?—Two—one from the bar and the other from the dining room.

10556. How many rooms were there behind?—Two, and a little narrow passage.

10557. Did the passage go right through the house?—Only from the bar to the back kitchen.

10558. It was only between the two back rooms?—Yes.

10559. And in coming through it you entered the bar coming to the front?—Yes.

10560. Do you remember the time the firing commenced?—Yes.

10561. Can you describe anything you saw then in the house?—I did not see anything in the house just then, for there were very dark window blinds, and they were all drawn down.

10562. Was there no light?—No.

10563. How many windows were there in the front?—There were three windows on the front—one in each room, and one in the bar.

10564. Was there a door going from the verandah into the dining room?—Yes.

10565. And one from the verandah into the bar?—Yes.

10566. No door from the verandah into the little parlor?—No; you entered that from the bar.

10567. Was there a skillion room at the back?—There were two.

10568. And then at the back of those a small yard?—Yes.

10569. And two or three steps up to the kitchen at the back?—There were no steps; it went straight on up a little incline to the kitchen at the back.

10570. Do you remember anything of what occurred when the firing commenced?—After there had been a few shots exchanged, I heard a scream in the front room—that was the time Mrs. Jones’s boy got shot.

10571. Do you remember when the first volley was fired?—Yes.

10572. Do you remember where it was fired from?—I could not say that, but it was fired from the outside; the firing all commenced from the outside.

10573. Do you remember seeing the outlaws come into the house immediately after?—No; I did not see them, but I heard them come round the back and into the little passage, but I did not know how many came in.

10574. You were shut in the room?—Yes.

10575. Did you hear any talk of their surrendering?—No; I did not.

10576. Did you hear Ned Kelly ask any of them to come out?—I heard a voice in the yard say, “Come along boys, follow me”; but I did not know who it was said it.

10577. You did not know whether Ned Kelly went out or not?—I did not.

10578. Was it after the volleys you heard that?—Yes; after the first firing was over.

10579. You were then in the back room?—Yes.

10580. How many were with you?—Oh, the place was full of children and another woman and men.

10581. Did that room contain all the prisoners that were in the hotel?—Oh no.

10582. Which other room were they in?—They were all over the front of the house; there were some in every room.

10583. Were there any in the bar, of your own knowledge?—I could not say; I could not see it.

10584. Did you hear the Kellys offering to allow the prisoners to go?—Yes; some time after the first volley was over Mrs. Jones’s daughter came in with a lighted candle and said, “All women and children are to come out.” We accordingly did so. There were two other women, a good many children, and Mrs. Jones and her daughter and I all went out in a great group.

10585. Which door did you go out at?—At the back, round through the back yard.

10586. And went outside?—Yes.

10587. Did you get away at that time?—No. One of my children was not able to walk, and we had to wait to help her on.

10588. Had you to go back into the house again?—The others had got away while we were getting the child out.
10589. How old was she?—Thirteen years.
10590. Why could not she go?—There were a great number of them lying under the bed, and when she came out she was cramped and could not walk. That lot got away, and three of my children with them. We got close to the gate-house, when a voice called from under the bridge, “Who comes there?” and we said “Women and children”; and a little higher up in the gutter or drain there came shots against us, and we had to run back to the house again—my husband, my two biggest boys, and two little ones, and myself.
10591. What gate is that?—The large gate that goes across to the gate-house, crossing the line.
10592. Down by the station master’s house?—Yes.
10593. Where did the voice come from?—From under the bridge leading along there.
10594. There are several bridges?—The main bridge leading to the gate-house.—[The witness pointed it out on the plan.]
10595. Did the police come from the bridge nearest the wicket-gate?—Yes.
10596. Do you mean to say those shots were fired at you as you came along?—I could not say who fired them, but they were fired right across our face, and I shut my eyes once with the fire and smoke. We turned back again, and were coming to the other large gate that leads to the station-yard, and we had to return up to the hotel again.
10597. How many were there?—There were a good many gone on, but at this time there were my husband, my two big sons, the two little children, and myself and the baby.

Mrs. M Reardon continued, 8th June 1881.
10598. And you all went back to the hotel again?—Yes.
10599. The same way as you came out?—Yes.
10600. You came out of the hotel at the back, and came round by the chimney, at the Wangaratta side, in front of the hotel?—Yes.
10601. And then down towards the railway gates at the station master’s house?—Yes.
10602. You were then challenged, and retreated the same way as you had come from the hotel?—Yes.
10603. In what position were you at the time the firing took place—were you in front of the hotel, between the railway gates and the hotel?—We were nearer down to the corner. We were not in front of the hotel, we were nearer down to the railway gate.
10604. Could those people who fired see you?—I cannot say it was daylight, but it was a bright clear moonlight morning.
10605. Did any of the shots strike any place that would lead you to believe that they were intended for you?—I heard them strike the railway fence.
10606. That is fired towards the house?—No, not towards the house, but where the fence turns round.
10607. Did you get a bullet through your shawl?—Not at that time I did not.
10608. When did you get it?—About seven o’clock. I had to return to the house, and there was then no other woman in it but me, and the firing was kept on occasionally.
10609. Was not Mrs. Jones in the house?—No; they were all gone away.
10610. You remained in the house some time?—I remained in the house for a long time after that. I remained till about seven o’clock in the morning.
10611. From the time that you returned till you left that place did you see either of the outlaws?—No, I did not.
10612. Only the men that were prisoners?—I saw only some of the men as I passed in again.
10613. Did you go back to the same room?—I did; and there were a lot more people there—a good many men.

10614. Did you know Byrne was shot at that time?—He was not shot at that time, and at the time I left the house at seven o’clock he was standing in the passage.

10615. Was Ned Kelly in the house?—I did not know whether he was or not.

10616. How did you know he was standing in the passage if you did not see him on your return?—You shall hear it in a minute. I went straight in the house and did not take any notice, and we stood in the passage; but the police had ceased firing for a considerable time, and I said to my son I would try and get out; and I came round out of the room I was in, and I saw three of the outlaws standing in the passage, and I said, “Will you allow us to go?” I could not say which of them they were, but they were the outlaws and had the armour on. I am sure they were the outlaws. They said, “Yes, you can all go; but if you go out the police will shoot you.”

10617. Did you go out at that time?—I went out at that time. I put the little girl out in the yard, and she screamed, and I came out myself next. One of the outlaws (by the voice I took it to be Dan Kelly) said, “If you escape”—and I said “What shall I do?” and he said, “See Hare, and tell him to keep his men from shooting till daylight, and to allow these people all to go out, and that we shall fight for ourselves.” I came into the yard, and I screamed for the police to have mercy on me. I said, “I am only a woman, allow me to escape with my children”; and I added, “The outlaws will not interfere with us—do not you.”

10618. Did you see them?—I could see the men behind the trees.

10619. Did they cease firing?—A voice said, “Put up your hands and come this way, or I will shoot you like —— dogs.”

10620. What direction did that voice come from?—From a tree close behind the stable on the Wangaratta side.

10621. Do you know whose voice it was?—Not at that time I did not.

10622. Was it Sergeant Steele?—It was Sergeant Steele, but at the time I did not know who it was; I saw him afterwards. I put my baby under my arm and held up my hand, and my son let go one hand and held the other child by it, and we went straight on. The man commenced firing, and he kept on firing against us.

10623. Did he fire at you?—I cannot say he was firing at us, but against us.

10624. He was firing in your direction?—Yes, and I got close to the fence, and this tree stood at some distance from the fence of Jones’s yard, and as I did I saw a gun pointed at me. I then turned round and went down along the fence towards the railway station, and two shots went directly after me, and two went through the shawl that was covering the baby—I felt my arm shaking, and I said, “Oh, you have shot my child.”

10625. Have you the shawl now?—Yes, the shawl is here—[The same was produced and the holes in it examined.]

10626. Are there two holes, or was it from one shot?—I do not know whether it was two or one, and the holes have got a good deal larger since. The shawl was doubled and wrapped round the baby.

10627. How many holes were there together when you first looked at it?—Those were all that were at first.

10628. How many holes are there together?—Two.

10629. Were those two distinct holes?—Yes.

10630. You are satisfied it was a bullet?—I could not tell whether it was a bullet or what it was.
10631. But it was from the police firing?—Yes, it came from a gun, for I was very close to it.

10632. Where was your son at this time?—My son was close beside me, coming about a yard away from me, and he said, “Mother, come back; you will be shot”; and I said, “I will not go back; I might as well be shot outside as inside”; but I said, “I do not think the coward can shoot me.” My son turned away and walked back towards the house, pulling the little child by the left hand, and with the right hand up. I looked round and saw him going, and that was the last I saw of him.

10633. At that time were there only yourself, your son, and two other children making your escape from the hotel?—I believe the father was also, but I did not see him.

10634. If the father was there, were no others?—Not that I knew of.

10635. Was it clear enough daylight to see?—It was quite bright; I cannot say whether it was daylight or moonlight.

10636. Sufficiently light to tell a man?—Yes; I heard the police call to Sergeant Steele, saying, “Do not shoot her; you can see it is a woman with a child in her arms.”

10637. Was that from the house?—No, it was from a policeman close beside him.

10638. Do you know who said that?—I found out afterwards that it was a constable named Arthur. I did not know at the time, for I did not know any then.

10639. Was your son close to you?—About two yards from me.

10640. If the man had been firing at your boy, could he have struck you?—I could not say.

10641. How many shots were there?—Just as I turned two shots went past me. I did not see my son shot. He got shot when retreating to the hotel. He said it was just as he was going in the door, and he fell against the door.

10642. Did any one, before the shots came, call out to you to stop, or they would fire?—No, they did not. Only one called out what I have said, “Put up your hands, or I will shoot you like —— dogs,” and we went where the man called us.

10643. It was either moonlight or daylight, so that it was not possible for you to have been mistaken for a male?—I could not be.

10644. You dressed in your ordinary female attire?—I was; and, not only that, but they had been firing from the station at me. There was a gutter along there; and, when Steele commenced shooting at me, they all commenced shooting at me from the other place.

10645. Do you recollect the exact words Constable Arthur used?—I cannot say exactly, but I heard him say at the first set out, “Do not you see it is a woman with a child in her arms”; and when those two shots were fired at me, I heard him speaking very angrily, and then the firing ceased. I could not say the exact words, but I heard him say about “shoot” and “her.”

10646. Do you know whether Ned Kelly had been captured before or after this time?—I know he was captured after what I am now relating. I walked straight on to the slip-panel, and I got behind a tree, and, when all the firing had ceased, I called out again for them to spare my life—that I was but a woman, and for a long time nobody spoke. And then Guard Dowsett came out from the railway station, and, as I was not able to get there alone, he helped me to the station. I do not know how he got me there, whether it was over the fence or through.

10647. How long after you arrived at the station; was it before you saw your son?—I did not see my son until about ten o’clock in the day.
10648. He remained at the hotel, after being shot, until the male prisoners were released?—Yes.

10649. And then for the first time, you knew he had been shot in the morning?—Yes.

10650. Has the attempt to extract the bullet been unsuccessful?—There has been no attempt made yet to extract the bullet.

10651. Has he suffered much in consequence?—He is suffering very much at present.

10652. What age is he?—He will be nineteen on the 17th of November next.

10653. What medical man has seen him?—Dr. Fitzgerald, of this town.

10654. What was this lad doing prior to the Glenrowan outrage?—He was working on a piece of ground his father selected.

10655. What has he been doing since?—Nothing; he has not been able to do anything.

10656. In consequence of the injury he sustained that day?—Yes.

10657. Have you the means to provide him with the requisite medical or surgical attention?—We provide him with the best we can.

10658. Are your means sufficient?—No, they are not.

10659. Did you apply to the Government for assistance at all?—His father did.

10660. To whom?—I cannot say to whom.

10661. Have you a certificate from Dr. Fitzgerald?—It is at home.

10662. Has anything been done to afford surgical assistance, in consequence of your husband’s application?—No, nothing.

10663. Has Dr. Fitzgerald expressed any opinion on the lad?—Yes; he said the weather was too warm just then, but when the cold weather would come he thought he would be able to extract the bullet, though he said there was a good deal of butchering attached to it.

10664. Does your husband apply for any portion of the £8,000 reward?—No.

Mr. Graves.—The papers, together with Dr. Fitzgerald’s certificate, are presented by me on behalf of Mr. Reardon to the Chief Secretary, who told me he would forward them to the Reward Board.

10665. By the Commission (to the witness).—Is your son in town now?—Not just now.

10666. From the appearance of your son every day, do you think he is failing in health or that he is getting stronger?—He is getting weaker and failing in strength.

10667. Can you yourself tell where the bullet is, by feeling?—He can.

10668. Where is it?—Dr. Fitzgerald stated that it was buried in the muscle of his breast bone.

10669. Are you and his father anxious for the operation to be performed?—Of course anything his father thinks will do him good.

10670. You want him treated properly by some surgeon?—Yes. Dr. Fitzgerald stated that the boy wanted quietness and good nourishment, that he was very weak; his certificate stated that.
10671. Were you very much excited when you attempted to leave the house the second time?—I was, when I got into the yard, and found how I was treated by the police.

10672-3. Did you think your life was in danger?—Yes, indeed it was.

10674. About your being shot—you stated that there was a constable behind a tree—how do you know it was a constable?—I knew it was a constable, for there were no others there.

10675. How do you knew who it was?—I found out who it was by enquiring.

10676. Remember you are speaking very strongly against that man?—I am.

10677. What is the evidence on which you say it was that particular man?—I found out particularly that same afternoon. Sergeant Steele told my second oldest boy, some sixteen years of age, that it was he who shot him. Another lad from Winton—I think a son of Mr. Adhearn’s—was speaking to my second boy about the shooting affair. The latter said, “My brother was shot,” and the other lad asked by

Mrs. M Reardon
continued,
8th June 1881.

10678. But whoever shot him was behind the tree?—Yes, that one particular large tree, close to the fence at the Wangaratta side—it might be a couple of yards or three. I never looked at the place since.

10679. You have also stated that Constable Arthur remonstrated with him for shooting—how do you say that?—I did not know him at the time, but two months afterwards I saw him and recognized him, and enquired as to his name, and found it was Constable Arthur.

10680. By Mr. O’Connor.—You said when Sergeant Steele was firing at you the police at the station commenced to fire at you, and then you explained you meant the police in the trench in front of the house?—I could not say it was at me, but it was in the direction of the house.

10681. By the Commission.—What time were you fired at by those in the trench?—I have no idea.

10682. You say now the platform?—No, from towards the station, between the gate-house and the station.

10683. You said those people were in the trench?—I mean they were in the trench; it was from the trench.

10684. You say that persons or the police commenced to fire from the trench?—I could not say who they were, but it came from the trench.

10685. By the Commission.—What time were you fired at by those in the trench?—When we went out first we were driven back by the fire from those parties, but, on the second occasion, when Sergeant Steele commenced firing up there, the parties in this trench answered.

10686. By Mr. O’Connor.—Have you any idea how far the persons in the trench were from you?—I have no idea.

10687. Would you be surprised if the persons in the trench could not possibly have seen you at the time?—I would not, because I stood in the open, not far from the slip-panel in the open yard; but perhaps they were not looking.

10688. By the Commission.—Have you been there often since?—No.
10689. You do not know whether it was the black trackers?—I could not say who it was, but it was the party in the gutter between the fence and the railway station.'

10690. By Mr. O'Connor.—Will you look at this plan, and show where you were?—[The witness did so.]

10691. Could a person from a position in that drain fire at you there?—I did not say they fired at me, but I said they fired towards the hotel.

10692. Then you are not positive they fired at you?—No, I am not. I only say they fired at the hotel at the same time.

The witness withdrew.

James Reardon further examined.

10693. By the Commission.—Did you notice that Sergeant Steele has stated in his evidence that your son was crawling on his hands and knees?—Yes.

10694. Is that true?—It is not true.

10695. Did you see your son shot?—No, I did not. I believe I was lying on my face and hands, between the two houses, when he was hit.

10696. How do you swear that he was not crawling?—Sergeant Steele said he was crawling, coming out, but I saw him walking. He had the child by the hand, and the other hand up. I was behind at the time and his mother before him.

10697. Did he continue when going back to the house to run along with his hand up?—No, he did not.

10698. Did you see him returning to the house?—I would not swear that. I was lying down myself, between the two houses, because there were four or five bullets skimmed my hair.

10699. Did you see him going out?—I did. I was walking behind him.

10700. Did you see him pass from the house?—Yes.

10701. Did you hear him challenged by Sergeant Steel, or any voice?—No, I did not.

10702. Did you see him holding his hand up?—I did.

10703. Did the boy make any remark that he was shot?—He did when he went in. He said, "I am shot." It was at the door he was shot, and he wanted a drink of Water, and nobody could rise to give it to him.

The witness withdrew.

George Vesey Allen sworn and examined.

10704. By the Commission.—What are you?—Reporter on the staff of the Daily Telegraph.

10705. Have you heard the evidence given by Mrs. Reardon?—Yes.

10706. Can you give any information relative to that?—In the main, it is perfectly correct. I saw her leave the house screaming, some time after the first fire, and approach the gate preceded by a number of people. I heard them challenged. I heard her challenged, and reply that she was a woman with children. The man who challenged her somewhere near the gate said, "Come here and show yourself." There was a cross fire from, I think, the trench or gutter that ran down from the station.
10707. Where the black trackers were?—Where I understood they were. That cross fire in the direction of the corner of the hotel from their position disturbed her, and she ran screaming back to the hotel.
I could not see her distinctly. Some one said it was Dan Kelly in disguise—some one down near the trenches.

10708. You could not say whether they fired at her?—No; the shots were fired in the direction of the corner of the hotel near where she was—they were across near her. I saw her come out of the back of the hotel again later on, and saw her fired at. I heard some one (who I afterwards learned was Constable Arthur).

10709. Have you any doubt now, from what you saw and heard, that it was Constable Arthur?—No doubt at all.

10710. What did he say?—I could not say exactly what his words were, but I heard “woman” and about not to fire—“do not fire at her.”

10711. Was this addressed to some one in the act of firing?—Some one closer in, up by the stable, and who had just fired at her.

10712. Did he fire again?—No, not at her. She came down closer, in the direction of the station, and Guard Dowsett ran from the trench or drain through the fence, and dragged her through the fence, and brought her to the station. She was screaming and making a great noise all the time, from the time she left the hotel till Dowsett took her.

10713. Just give us a short account of what you saw?—I left Melbourne in the special train with the black trackers, and picked up Mr. Hare and his men at Benalla, when two engines were placed on to the train, and we proceeded through. Prior to arriving at Glenrowan the train was pulled up by a signal from the pilot engine, and on the guard or driver (one of the men) coming back, we were informed that the rails had been pulled up, and that the Kelly gang was waiting for us. Mr. Hare and some of his men, and Mr. O’Connor, I think, held a consultation, and they proceeded slowly up to the Glenrowan station, where they all immediately got out of the carriages, and, at an order from Mr. Hare, proceeded to land and saddle the horses. The men were very actively at work when a man rushed on to the platform, calling out, “They are here; they are here”; and he went up to Superintendent Hare, and in so many words told him that the gang was at Jones’s hotel, and that there were a lot of people there. Afterwards I found that was Constable Bracken.

10714. Did he tell Mr. Hare at the time that there were a large number of prisoners?—Yes; he was very excited, and jumped about the platform a good deal. Having satisfied Mr. Hare as to the position of the gang, Mr. Hare called to his men, saying, “Come on, boys.” They left the horses, picked up their arms, and scampered away in a body together—very bravely, I thought. Mr. O’Connor was in the van, and surrounded by his black trackers. I read or heard that one of the reporters stated that he was some seventy or eighty yards behind.

10715. You had better give your own evidence of what you know?—I think it was yesterday the evidence was given.

10716. Give what you know yourself—did you see him amongst the number of the foremost men?—
Yes, surrounded by his black trackers. He went away amongst them. They all went away together. I think there was only one who left anything like ten yards behind, and he was a man who had mislaid his gun.

10717. Was he a white or black man?—A white man, and he picked up with his companions—before they had got twenty yards away be went running after them—when the police and black trackers had got about to the drain.

10718. Did you remain on the platform or follow them?—I remained on the platform. Two of the other reporters, Mr. Melvin and Mr. McWhirter, followed them some distance and returned. I stopped on the platform with Mr. Carrington. When they arrived about the drain, I saw some men standing in front of the hotel, on the verandah I thought, and they called out, “Come on you ——— something to that effect, and immediately opened fire—fired one volley on the police.

10719. Who fired the first shot?—The four men who were standing in front of the hotel.

10720. The police were not the first to fire?—Oh, no. They received a volley while they were in sling trot, running in the direction of the hotel.

10721. Could you, from the platform, see the police in front of the hotel when the first volley was fired?—Yes, indistinctly somewhat. but still you could see the body of men.

10722. Not clear enough to distinguish individuals?—No.

10723. Were you able to distinguish Mr. Hare, who is a very tall man?—No; you could not distinguish them clearly, you could just see the forms, that is all. The police scattered apparently on that volley being fired, and replied at once very warmly—a pretty warm fire was exchanged for a few minutes. The police scattered, and took up some positions, but immediately after the first volley, Mr. Hare returned to the platform, wounded, and after having his arm bandaged up, returned back to the field.

10724. How long might that have been from the time he left the platform till he returned?—About eight or ten minutes.

10725. Before Mr. Hare returned to the platform, and after the first volley was fired, did you hear him or any one else giving any instructions to the police?—No.

10726. Was it possible for you to have heard, if you had been paying attention, anything that was said

George V Allen
continued,
8th June 1881.
from that distance?—It was a still quiet night, and the slightest word could have been heard a long distance off.

10727. Although you did not hear any orders given by any one, it was possible for any one to have heard orders given if they had been given?—Yes.

10728. If those orders had been given while the firing was going on could you have heard?—Not while the heavy fire was going on, but during the desultory fire I could.

10729. Did the desultory firing follow the general volley first given?—Yes, and was proceeding while Mr. Hare was on the platform.

10730. Did Mr. Hare go back?—Yes, immediately upon his wound having been tied up. I did not take any part in it. I was looking on. The other reporters, I think, tied up his arm.

10731. How long was he away the second time?—About five or six minutes—a few minutes only. I could not exactly say to the minute.

10732. Had he time to go up to the wicket-gate again and do anything and return?—He had time to go to his men—to where I saw his men, and return, but nothing more. He may have fired a shot or two—it is quite possible—a great deal of firing was going on from the trench. He had his gun with him.

10733. It would not take him more than a quarter of a minute to load his gun and fire?—Oh, no, not as much as that—two or three seconds. After being away a few minutes, Mr. Hare again returned and complained that he was very weak and losing a lot of blood; and arrangements, which have been already described, were made, and he was forwarded to Benalla on the engine. Mr. Melvin went to arrange for the engine to take him back, and it came along the platform to the station for the purpose, but a heavy fire was opened between the police and the gang at the time, and the engine proceeded on to Benalla without waiting for Mr. Hare.

10734. Did you look upon that as the desire of the driver to get out of the way?—I thought so at the time.

10735. Did it occur to you it might have been a mistake of the orders?—I understood the orders were definite and could not be misunderstood—they were to take Mr. Hare back to Benalla, and instead of doing that they proceeded directly back themselves.

10736. We have it in evidence that the order was two-fold—to take Mr. Hare and bring up reinforcements?—Yes.

10737. Mr. Hare went back on the second engine a few minutes after—Senior-Constable Kelly took charge, I understand, in his absence—did the reporters generally understand that Kelly had charge?—Yes.

10738. Did you see him making any arrangements?—Oh yes, going from position to position, instructing the men; he made several circuits of the whole position, some distance back from the house, and frequently visited the platform for ammunition and to make enquiries.

10739. In fact, according to your notion at the time, he was taking fair oversight of the whole proceedings?—That was my impression then, and nothing has occurred since to shake it.

10740. Were you present at the taking of Ned Kelly?—Yes.

10741. You heard the description of that from different parties?—Yes.

10742. I suppose that is tolerably correct?—Yes; the description in this morning’s paper given by Mr. Melvin is the most accurate, to my notion.

10744. Did he fire many shots at him?—Yes, several shots from that position behind the log, the other side of which Kelly fell.

10745. Is it true he fired more shots at Kelly than any other person at this time?—I would not like to say, because there were a great number of shots being fired all round. I think he was the closest in—indeed, I thought that with another step Kelly would have brained him—he was so close, he could have struck him down, he was walking right on to him.

10746. Did you see the rush made on to Kelly?—Yes.

10747. Who was the first to seize him?—Sergeant Steele was somewhat the first, being closer in.

10748. Did you see Steele fire at him?—Yes, I saw they were all firing; Arthur and a number of them were about that position.

10750. Strong evidence was given here, I think, upon the conduct of Senior-Constable Kelly—did you see him?—Yes.

10752. He was coming in rear of them?—Yes, they retreated, and I at the time thought they were running away, the retreat seemed to be so unanimous, and I said to the ladies in the carriage, “The beggars are running away from them.”

10753. You do not hold that opinion?—After I went forward again and watched them I found they were only taking up better positions, that is they got round him; they retreated for the purpose of getting round him, and when they made a circle round him they gradually closed in on him. Steele and Kelly were the nearest to him. They closed on him and grappled with him.

10754. Constable Kelly and Dowsett were closing on the outlaw at the time Steele came from the other side?—Yes.

10755. Would it be correct to assume that if Steele had not been in that position at that particular time Ned Kelly would have been able to make his retreat to the hotel good?—Oh no.

10756. You think he would have been only closed upon by one of the other constables or Dowsett?—Yes.

10757. Were you close enough to see who wrenched the revolver from Ned Kelly’s hand?—I saw a struggle for a moment, I thought it was Steele. I am not sure about that point, however, because they were all up together at the moment.

10758. If Dowsett swore he wrenched the revolver from Kelly’s hand you could not contradict him?—No.

10759. It was sworn yesterday by Mr. Melvin that Senior-Constable Kelly advanced from the first. Is that your view, that he advanced on from the first moment as against Kelly the outlaw. Did you see any retreating on his part?—No, my impression is that Kelly from his first position, his position low down, made a gradual advance right up to the outlaw.

10760. He did not retreat?—No, his advance was right up to Kelly.

10761. Did you hear any conversation between Ned Kelly and his captors at the time?—Yes.

10762. Did you hear Sergeant Steele say, “I swore I would be in at your death you——wretch,” and he was about to shoot him then, so it appeared, when Dowsett said, “Do not shoot him, take him alive”?—I heard Steele make some remark like that, I think those were the remarks, but I think it was Constable Bracken who jumped across the outlaw’s body and held Steele’s revolver off. I thought Steele put his revolver into the cap of the helmet, that was the impression at the moment. He had his revolver and he was using it in some way, and I thought he meant to blow the outlaw’s brains out, when Bracken, to whom Kelly appealed, saying “Save me—I saved you,” jumped across and said he would shoot any man who dared to touch him. Dwyer came up at the moment, rushed up in a great hurry to kick him, and, I think, did kick him.

10763. Did you hear Dr. Nicholson say he would report him if he did that again?—I do not think Dr. Nicholson was there then. There was great excitement at the moment of his capture. All the police circled round him, and seemed inclined to pull him to pieces. Bracken stood over him and protected him. Constable Kelly was down on his knees, taking off his helmet.

10764. Are you sure it was the helmet?—Yes.

10765. We have heard that the helmet fell off when he fell down?—No, I am quite sure it was taken off. I am in doubt whether it was Senior-Constable Kelly or another; but I think it was Kelly, because, as Kelly stooped down to do something, he gave me his rifle and ammunition bag, and I took his position behind that dead tree there.

10766. After giving his rifle, it was for some purpose?—It was for the purpose of taking something off Kelly—relieving him of his armour.

10767. Who first called out, “It is Ned Kelly,” do you think?—I could not say; I would not like to say. At the time I think I knew. I think in my report I noticed who it was, but I could not remember now. I have not thought of the evidence since, more than passing conversations.

10768. Was there any firing coming from the hotel during the time that Kelly was being captured?—No. I was just going to point out that they seemed to have forgotten the hotel in the capture of Kelly; and I called out to them that they were firing from the hotel—it was merely to arouse them from Kelly, to make them take their positions. There was no firing going on, but I called out there was. If they had fired then from the hotel they could have picked off the whole lot of them. They were all exposed, and it was quite an easy shot—it was a revolver shot.

10769. About fifty yards? Yes.

10770. Would it be true that Ned Kelly was lying up against a log, not able to move, when Steele fired?—No; he was advancing slowly down.

10771. Did he lean against a log, as if to take rest?—No; he was closing up to the log, and Dowsett was at the other end of it, firing up at him with his revolver.

10772. The outlaw Kelly was apparently coming from the bush towards the railway station?—At an angle between the railway station and the hotel. He rested several times in his passage down; and I thought he knelt down, or stooped down behind the tree at one time to reload his revolver. He took it very coolly and quietly.

10773. He was taking aim very steadily?—Yes.

10774. How long did the whole affair last?—About a quarter of an hour, I suppose, or twenty minutes.

10775. You did not see the outlaw Kelly retreating after going towards the hotel?—No, he kept steadily on; and I think the action and fire of Steele and Arthur had the effect of turning his course off a little from that. I do not know whether it was to meet Senior-Constable Kelly—I think it might have been to miss him; but, whether or not, the fire that was kept up from Steele and Arthur was too hot, he turned from their direction to the direction in which Constable Kelly was.

10776. In the direction of the station?—Yes, more in the direction of the station.

10777. Did you see the grey mare?—No; I saw some horses in the back yard.

10778. At any point within fifteen yards of where Kelly was shot?—Not within half-a-mile; I searched half-a-mile.

10779. You did not see the grey mare there?—No; I went up through the scrub. Kelly said something about the grey mare, and I went up through the scrub afterwards to see if there was anything about it, but there was nothing there. The only horses that were there were the police horses that were scattered about.

10780. That was inside the fence?—Yes; the police horses all stuck together.

10781. You have seen and heard the evidence about the people coming out; I suppose it is in the main correct?—Yes; perfectly correct in the general way.

10782. Did you hear much firing from the hotel?—After early morning—after Kelly’s capture there was very little.

10783. When do you remember, if you can remember, was about the latest shot that was fired?—I do not remember having seen any fired from the hotel after Kelly was caught, and my impression is that no shots were fired from the hotel after the outlaw was captured.

10784. What time would that be?—About eight o’clock.

10785. You do not remember any more shots being fired after that?—When I said I took Senior-Constable Kelly’s rifle to allow him to do something with Kelly, I took his position, and stopped there to ascertain how the firing was going on, and I moved up a bit to the police, those in a line across the hotel with the black trackers in the drain, and for the hour I was there I am perfectly satisfied that no shot was fired from the front or the Wangaratta side of the hotel, but the shots that came across the hotel from the drain and from the police at the Benalla side of the hotel passed through the top of trees where the police were on the Wangaratta side, and you could hear the ping of the ball.

10786. Those all came from the police and the black trackers?—Yes.
10787. Did you think that was reasonable firing?—I thought it was very reckless, hitting off the limbs and beating against the trees. They were all firing high.
10788. When we went there to examine the place we found the whole of the galvanized iron riddled from end to end?—I think that was in consequence of the order that was given about half-past three in the morning to fire high.
10789. What was the good of that?—To intimidate the outlaws I suppose.
10790. Did you hear the order given?—Yes, by some one in the drain before half-past three, to fire high; and I several times heard orders given to cease firing.
10791. You are quite sure it was before five in the morning, the firing high?—Yes.
10792. You do not know who gave that order?—No, I was trying to recollect. I was under the impression that it was Mr. Hare before he left.
10793. Would you know Mr. O’Connor’s voice?—No.
10794. You do not know whether it was he or not?—No.
10795. We have it in evidence that it was after Mr. Sadleir came—half-past five?—No. I heard the order given long before that.
10796. Was there any reason assigned for the order to fire high?—No.
10797. You did not hear it was on account of the captives inside?—No, I do not know why the order was given, but the reporters on the platform had emptied the van of all its contents, the luggage and ammunition, and stuff to find ammunition for the men, a lot of the saddles and stuff, and piled those up; and I lay on them watching the proceedings, and it was while I was there in the dark, the order was given to fire high, and two or three orders were given to cease firing.

10798. We have it in evidence that Mr. Hare gave the order to cease firing before he left?—Yes, I think he did.
10799. Mr. Sadleir sent to town for a cannon, and we asked him why. He said he thought one of the reporters suggested it. We ask voy did you suggest it?—Certainly not, I was never more surprised in my life than when I heard such an absurdity. Mr. Sadleir must have made a mistake.
10800. Were you about the station a good portion of the day?—I stopped there all through the early morning.
10801. Did you see a rope about the station or hear of one for the purpose of pulling the chimney down?—No, I left the station after Kelly was caught and went about the field.
10802. Did the officers at all consult as to the best means of getting the Kellys out or the civilians?—After Mr. Sadleir came out, I think some consultations or meetings were held amongst the officers and the men.
10803. Do you know of your own knowledge?—No.
10804. Did you see Mr. Sadleir when he arrived?—Yes, I was on the platform at the time.
10805. Do you know when he went there?—I saw him go down in the drain where the black trackers were. I next saw him on the Benalla side of the hotel at one of those trees that were opposite the kitchen or the lean-to, at the back of the house.
10806. What time would it be?—About half-past seven, I think.
10807. What time was Ned Kelly taken to the station?—About half-past eight.
10808. Was it before or after he was taken to the station that you saw Mr. Sadleir at the Benalla end?—Long before. It was some time before Mr. Sadleir had been about the front and up on that side. I did not notice him go further; I was not near enough to notice him.
10809. When did you next see him?—At the log where Ned Kelly fell, talking to Ned Kelly the outlaw.
10810. Just refresh your memory, because I may tell you you are the first witness that swore that Mr. Sadleir was at the log where Kelly was. I want to protect you?—I am much obliged to you. I cannot help the other people’s opinions. I distinctly remember Mr. Sadleir being at the log where Kelly was lying before he was removed. I heard him ask Kelly to give some sign to make the men surrender; and I heard some conversation between him and Kelly. Some one asked Kelly for Sergeant Kennedy’s watch, and Mr. Sadleir interposed and told them to let him alone.
10811. Was that up at the log?—Up at the log.
10812. Not at the station?—At the log.
10813. What others were there that could have heard at the time as you did?—Dowsett.
10814. Phillips?—I think so
10815. Arthur?—Yes, Sergeant Steele and Senior-Constable Kelly. I do not think Mr. O’Connor was there; I am not sure the three reporters were there; and Constable Dwyer was there. I remember that, because I drew his attention to Kelly when first he appeared.
10816. Are you positive this was not in the station house?—I am very positive.
10817. Although six witnesses swear to the contrary, you would maintain you are right?—Although 150 witnesses swore to the contrary I would maintain I was right.
10818. You knew Mr. Sadleir?—Very well. I knew him in Melbourne very well.
10819. Are you aware that it has been sworn here as a fact that Kelly was carried down and helped over the fence and brought to the railway station, and then saw Mr. Sadleir for the first time?—I think I heard
Mr. Sadleir give the order for his removal from the log.
10820. Then your impression is that it would be wrong if it was stated that he was brought down to the station and then first came in contact with Mr. Sadleir?—I think it would be wrong. I think, if you question Mr. Sadleir, you will find that what I say is the case.—[The witness was requested to consider the point during the adjournment for lunch.]
10821. The Witness.—I now wish to add that that is my impression; but if Mr. Sadleir, who ought best to be able to judge, says he was never there, I will not for a moment contradict him.
10822. If he swears he was at the drain at the time?—He ought to know best; but my first impression is, even now, that he was there, and that he prevented me putting some questions to Ned Kelly; and I have looked up the papers since the adjournment and I can find nothing to say it was not so; but in the statement made by Senior-Constable Kelly, he says that, after asking Kelly about Kennedy’s watch, he handed him over to Mr. Sadleir and the doctor.
10823. As a matter of fact Mr. Sadleir swears that the first information of the capture of Ned Kelly came to him in the drain, and that he went up to the station to see him?—I merely give my impression.
10824. You will see it in the evidence here. At question No. 2797 Mr. Sadleir says—“Presently a constable came and explained that this was the capture of Kelly—this noise that we had heard; that was the first I had heard of it.” And at question 2894 he says, “After hearing that Kelly was captured, I went up to see him at the station”—My impression is still that I saw Mr. Sadleir at the log.
10825. You would not contradict that statement of Mr. Sadleir?—No.
10826. You say you did not hear any more shots fired from the building after the capture of Ned Kelly?—Yes.
10827. Do you consider the shots that were fired at that time and heard by constables at one side or the other were the shots from the constables themselves on either side?—Yes, and the black trackers.
10828. Do you remember the letting out of the captives, about ten o’clock?—I do.
10829. Did you see Mr. Sadleir there at that time?—I saw Mr. Sadleir at the tree—standing at the tree close to the hotel, on the Wangaratta side.
10830. That was not the tree that Steele was behind?—Oh no; it was lower down.
10831. Who was near at the time?—I think Mr. O’Connor was there—some of his men.
10832. Did anything occur between the time of letting the people out and the burning of the hotel, that you remember particularly, of importance?—Nothing of importance took place. The men were scattered—placed at all the trees around the hotel, and I understood that overtures were made to rush it by Constable Arthur, Senior-Constable Johnson, and some one else, I am not sure.

10833. Was it Armstrong?—Yes, I think Armstrong was one. I was not there while the overtures were made, but I learned about that time they were made.
10834. At all events there seemed very little attention paid to the place after, except keeping watch?—They were watching, and there was occasional firing going on from the police at the hotel, but no response. I am quite satisfied there was no response after ten or eleven o’clock.
10835. There have been witnesses here who swear that about one o’clock the outlaws came to the back door outside, between the kitchen and the building, and that they fired and the police fired in return could that occur without your noticing?—It might, but I think I would have heard of it, and I did not hear of it.
10836. We have heard it positively sworn by men who said they exchanged shots?—If there were men close up to that place, but I do not think it could take place without everybody in the field knowing.
10837. Did you see the priest go up to the house—which way did he go up?—From the corner of that fence, from the wicket-gate, right up to the front door.
10838. Did you see him when he came out again?—Shortly after he came out at the back.
10839. You did not see whether he came out at the front or back door?—No.
10840. Were the police near the place when he came out?—I think some were as close as eight or ten yards on the Wangaratta side.
10841. Did he give any information when he came out—did you hear anything?—I think he gave some information to the police, but I was not close enough to hear it. The policemen who occupied positions close to the hotel on the Wangaratta side, behind the trees, challenged Mrs. Skillian, who wanted to enter the hotel, and threatened to fire on her if she did not retreat, and although very close she turned back. One of those men was Constable Armstrong, I think.
10842. Did you see the bodies after they were burned?—Yes.
10843. Before they were disturbed by anybody?—Yes.
10844. Can you say in what part of the house they were?—They were in the back room next the...
Benalla side.

10845. Were they both there?—Yes, lying close together, with their heads, I thought, to the back of the hotel.

10846. And the armour was lying how?—As if on them.

10847. Was it lying on the ground beside them?—On the heap.

10848. Close to them?—Yes.

10849. They were burned beyond recognition?—Yes, charred up.

10850. If anyone stated here that one was in one back room at the south end of the house and another in the room at the north end, that cannot be true?—No, not so far apart. There might have been a partition between them, but then they would have been close up to the partition on each side, and it was burned away.

They were within a few feet of each other. I think it would be a mistake. It was very hot, and there was a great crowd of people about, and you could only get cursory glances at the place.

10851. Did you notice particularly whether the men seemed to be under command or any guidance during the day?—After the arrival of Mr. Sadleir they were under good discipline, but earlier in the morning they were not. I thought they were wanting in discipline, in officering during the morning.

10852. That was the time Senior-Constable Kelly was in charge?—Yes, during the whole of the morning they seemed to be deficient in some head on whom they could rely. Although Senior-Constable Kelly worked very hard and very bravely in the morning in the dark, and without any assistance or any one to consult, the men appeared to want some head.

10853. Would they feel that want if he was the man who was entitled to take charge?—I think they would, not being accustomed to his rule, and not being certain whether he was in command or not.

10854. We have had a great deal of evidence from the force themselves, and they have all declared that they considered from the very first that Senior-Constable Kelly was their natural head when Mr. Hare went away, and that they were prepared to obey him?—Yes.

10854A. Did they show any want of discipline to your mind in consequence, as you would say, of being under Senior-Constable Kelly?—Oh no, I did not think they showed a want of discipline. I think they were wanting in guidance. They were right enough—the men behaved right enough in anything they had to do, but they were rather improperly directed, not correctly directed; they did not appear to me to have sufficient reliance or sufficient satisfaction in their leader, and did not seem to be as well disciplined or satisfied, or work as well, as if they had been under Mr. Hare all the time.

10855. Did you see Mr. O’Connor directing in any way the movements of the force during the day?—No.

10856. Would you give an instance of where you found the police were wanting in officering in the first part before Mr. Sadleir’s arrival, and another instance after Mr. Sadleir came to show they were properly officered after his arrival?—In the early morning this instance would give it: The men in the mornig did as they pleased, but acted under the general direction of not letting them—the Kellys—escape, and fired indiscriminately, either for amusement or some other motive, or without any apparent object, all through the morning; after Mr. Sadleir’s arrival I think the firing was restrained, and I think the men had their allotted positions; and from what I saw of their movements I thought they were acting under some general understanding or general order.

10857. Was Mr. Sadleir on the ground directing their movements after his arrival?—Yes, from the time of his arrival.

10858. Near the scene—the hotel?—Right through. He was a good time in the station with Kelly, trying to elicit some information from him, and to get him to give some signal to the men in the hotel to surrender.

10859. How many times did you see him on the ground directing the men after his arrival?—I could not enumerate, but on nearly every occasion I was in the field I saw him somewhere; spoke to him perhaps by the station, and saw him farther off behind a tree occasionally during the most of the afternoon. He appeared to remain at the tree on the Benalla side of the hotel from where he subsequently directed the firing of the hotel.

10860. Then if any witnesses swear positively that Mr. Sadleir was in the railway place, smoking his pipe for the greater part of the day, that would be, in your opinion, incorrect?—Decidedly; it would be incorrect.

George V. Allen
8th June 1881.

10861. How long do you consider he remained with Ned Kelly?—I could not define any time—any specific time. He was in with Kelly sometimes for half an hour and out again, and I think the greater portion of the time in the station was occupied by Sergeant Steele. I think Steele was in charge the greater portion of the afternoon, and did not leave, I think, for hours. I would have been better pleased if they had all been out in the field, because they prevented the reporters interviewing Kelly.

10862. By Mr. O’Connor.—When the special train arrived at Benalla, during the interval we waited there did you hear for a fact that the lines had been taken up?—No.

10863. Do you think if such a statement had been made that you would have heard it?—I could not have escaped hearing it, because I was among all the policemen on the platform, and heard all the orders and everything that was going on. Of course there were a number of rumors talked about.

10864. But no facts?—No facts or any rumor of the line being pulled up.

10865. You state that upon arriving at Glenrowan you got out and saw a party of police start for the house—would you kindly show the position you were on the platform?—Yes. [The witness did so on the plan.]

10866. Then from your position there you were quite able to see everything that occurred as far as the men leaving for the front?—Yes.

10867. Did you take particular notice?—I did take particular notice of the start of the men.

10868. When Mr. Hare started, could you state positively who followed him next?—They were all very close up together; all very much excited, and with a good deal of flurry. I could not distinguish or state now which individual man was next to him. I know there was one constable remained some ten yards behind to find his rifle, which I happened to have, and he caught them before they got twenty yards away.

10869. Do you state that I left with Mr. Hare?—Yes, certainly, surrounded by your black trackers.

10870. You state shortly after starting you heard shots from the hotel?—Yes.

10871. Do I understand you mean to say that the party of police could not have got to this wicket gate, or you said near the drain, I think?—I think about to the drain.

10872. They could not have got to the fence?—No, I hardly think so; they were brought to a standstill by this fire. It seemed to take them by surprise.

10873. By the Commission.—You said you could see the figures distinctly?—Yes.

10874. Were those figures inside or outside the railway fence when the first volley was fired from the hotel?—About the railway fence.

10875. Were they inside or outside?—I could not say for a yard or two.

10876. You said you could see the figures distinctly?—Yes.

10877. You could not be sure they were police?—Yes.

10878. You cannot say whether they were inside or outside the fence?—I think they were on the railway station side of the fence—you could not be positive.

10879. Ten witnesses have already sworn that Mr. Hare and other members of the police had passed through the gate?—I would not say they had not, they were there about.

10880. By Mr. O'Connor.—Was there time, in your opinion, for the police to have got through the fence before they were first fired on?—I could not distinguish for a yard or two. The body of men showed themselves in that neighborhood about there within a yard or two. I cannot say whether I saw the fence then or not; it is impossible to say now whether they were on one side or the other.

10881. You state that when Mr. Hare was at the front you heard no orders given of any kind?—I might have heard the order of “cease firing.” I think I did.

10881a. I want you to be particular about this. You stated before you did not think there were any orders, and if they had been given you would have heard them?—I could not be positive about that. I remember the order being given to cease firing and the order to fire high, but by whom or when, to half an hour, I cannot say.

10882. Did you hear any other orders given?—No.

10883. Did you hear the order given to let the women out, any time in the morning?—No.

10884. You stated you heard the women challenged?—Yes. I heard them challenged down at the railway gate, crossing the line, and the man who challenged them also added, “Come here, and show yourselves.” As they were approaching some fire was opened from the drain.

10885. Would you swear positively that the man was about the railway gate?—Yes, about the railway gate—[explaining on the plan]. You could hear the challenge distinctly from the station, but could not tell exactly for a few yards where it was.

10886. You stated you heard the order to fire high?—Yes.

10887. And the Chairman informed you he saw the corrugated iron perforated with bullets?—Yes.

10888. Do you not remember the report and rumor that the outlaws were said to be in the rafters or tie-beams of the roof?—Yes; it was rumored that they were in the chimney at the time.

10889. Would you not consider firing into the roof was a good plan to hit them if they were in the rafters?—Of course.

10890. By the Commission.—Did you hear it reported that day that one of them was seen with his head stuck out of the top of the chimney?—Yes.

10891. Did you believe that?—No.

10892. Have you examined the chimneys since?—When the fire was going on I did.

10893. You have not examined them since?—No.

10894. You are not aware that any man could get up those chimneys?—No, I did not believe it.

10895. Was that the reason they were told to fire in the chimney?—No; I think the order to fire high was for the purpose of saving the persons in the hotel.

10896. Not to shoot the outlaws if they were coming out of the chimney or roof?—No, that was my impression as to why the order was given, to save the women and children.

10897. By Mr. O'Connor.—One of the witnesses yesterday stated that the train or the carriage containing the ladies went down, he believed, with Mr. Hare—is that a fact?—No. Mr. Hare went on the engine. The ladies remained there some considerable time after Kelly was captured.

The witness withdrew.
Jesse Dowsett sworn and examined.

10898. By the Commissioner.—What are you?—Guard on the Victorian railways.
10899. Do you remember the morning of the day on which the Kellys were captured?—Yes.
10900. Where were you on that morning?—I left Benalla shortly after five o'clock.
10901. You went up with Mr. Sadleir and his party?—Yes.
10902. You were in charge of the train at that time?—No; I was to have taken the first special up—it was arranged on Sunday, but there was some alteration made waiting for the special from Melbourne, and I was told to go home, and they would call me. They did not come to call me, but, about close on five o'clock, a chap that works on the coal stage came and knocked at the place where I was living, and told me that the Kellys were fighting at Glenrowan, and Mr. Hare had come back wounded, so I jumped up and shoved on my clothes and ran over, and was just in time to go on the engine as it went away.
10903. You were not in any official capacity on the railway then?—No.
10904. You got there when?—Somewhere about half-past five.
10905. Of course it was not light then?—No.
10906. What were you first engaged in on going there?—Shortly after I got up there they were talking about the Kellys and got away. They showed a revolving rifle and a skull cap, and Mr. Sadleir was talking to Constable Kelly—asking him how things were going on—and I heard him enquire where Mr. O’Connor was, and Kelly said he was down in the drain, opposite the hotel. While they were talking like this I heard some screams that seemed to come from the getting hurt, as if a woman was getting fooled, and I thought Dr. Nicholson was making some remark there women and children in there—a lot of conversation; but I cleared out when I heard this woman calling out, and I went up to the back of the station and crept on my hands and knees to where there were some tents alongside the railway fence, and I could hear her screaming out, but I could not see her distinctly for the smoke; but presently I saw a woman with her hair hanging down her back and screaming, with a child in her arms; so I called to her softly to come to me. I said, “Come to the police;” and she came towards me, crying most bitterly not to shoot her child the same as they had shot the father. I put one arm partly round her and took the child in my arms, a 10907. What time?—Shortly after six o’clock, I should say.
10908. What happened then?—Of course everybody was on to her to know who was in there, and what they were doing. I stayed there myself some little time, and I thought, “I will go back to where you came from, there does not seem to be anybody up there.” And I went up there again, and saw a man behind a tree that looked rather suspiciously at me, and I said, “Railway,” and stepped towards him. This was a policeman, and we stayed there a considerable time, and the firing was going on; there seemed to be any amount of pellets going about.
10909. You could hear them in the trees?—Yes, and hear them whistle; and all at once something seemed to come as if somebody was hitting me at the back, and I turned round and saw this strange-looking object coming over the hill from the Wangaratta side.
10910. What time was that?—About half-past seven.
10911. Was it getting daylight?—Yes, but the smoke of the guns hung over the ground and made like a fog.
10912. What did you do?—It proved to be Ned Kelly afterwards, but at the time it looked like a great big blackfellow; I called out, I said, “Henley, what is this coming?” and somebody behind said, Keep back, keep back”; but the object kept coming on, and presently I saw it was from that direction the shots came that seemed to strike me, and I said, “You had better scatter, boys.” The figure then seemed to stop in a clump of saplings, and you could see him from the centre firing away several times, and I went along.
10913. In what direction did he fire?—Well, it seemed as if it was pointing towards where I was.
10914. Towards the railway station?—Not exactly, but at the angle between that and the hotel.
10915. You cannot say whether it was towards Arthur?—No, he fired several times.
10916. What then?—I kept going from tree to tree to try and get closer to him, and Constable Kelly was on the right; and I thought as the outlaw Kelly seemed to sit down in this clump of saplings that he was reloading, and I thought it was a chance of firing at him; in fact I kept pegging away at the foot of the clump of saplings, and I said to Constable Kelly, “If you come here you can get a shot at him.”
10917. What weapon had you?—Colt’s breech-loading revolver.
10918. One of the police weapons or a railway weapon?—Railway, one that the Government provided me with.
10919. Did Constable Kelly come?—Yes, he came and fired twice I believe, and I fancy that he hit the outlaw’s hand. He then left the clump of saplings and seemed to be coming still nearer to where we were, and I went from the tree I was at to a big log that lay on the ground, that stood about three feet high, and got behind this. After this he seemed to be coming right straight for me, and he walked into the fork of the log as it were, and as he did, I could see Steele on the left, coming down towards him, and I could see Senior-Constable Kelly on the right, coming towards him; so then I said to him, “You had better surrender, old man, you are surrounded”; and he said, “Never, while I have a shot left”; and I could see the top of his head just above the log, and I fired at it, but it just went off like a parched pea, and took no effect; and I said, “How do you like that?” And he rose up and said, “How do you like that?” And as he did, I saw Steele make towards him, and fire as he travelled on, and immediately after firing the figure seemed to go down all of a heap. I jumped over the log and Steele was on him.

10920. Did you think you were going to be shot?—Yes, I thought he had got me then; but when I saw him drop and fall all of a heap, I jumped up and ran towards him, but Steele was the other side of the log, and he was wrestling with him. I got hold of his wrist and caught hold of the revolver, and it went off, and I kept it.

10921. Right or left wrist?—In his right wrist. It seemed, when he was firing the last time, he seemed to hold it down as if he could not hold it straight out. It seemed to hang down.

10922. Was it the wounded hand?—I could not say. I think the bullet was in the left arm as he laid in the station.

10923. What portion of his body had Steele his hands on?—On his shoulder.

Jesse Dowsett, continued, 8th June 1881.

10924. About the throat?—Close to the throat or shoulder. They were actually on the ground. Constable Kelly was up almost at the same moment, in fact, it was almost a dead heat.

10925. Are you quite sure you did not pick the revolver off the ground?—Yes, I am sure I took it from his hand.

10926. And have it since?—Yes—[producing the same]. It was loaded in three chambers at the time, and the blood all round it. On the hilt there is “N.S.W.G.,” meaning “New South Wales Government.” I believe Kelly said afterwards that it was one that he took at Jerilderie.

10927. Had it any blood on it?—Yes; it was covered with blood, and I kept it like that for a considerable time.

10928. Do you know if he had any other revolver on him?—Yes, I believe one was picked up the following day. I don’t know only from hearsay.

10929. If Mr. Marsden got another one the same day, you would not know whether he did or not?—No.

10930. You are quite positive you wrenched it from Kelly’s right hand?—Yes, that is the one he was firing with at the moment of his capture.

10931. You say there were three charges in it when you got it?—Yes, they were fired off at Queenscliff, where I also cleaned the revolver. That is the tin that was in Kelly’s pouch—[handing in a mustard tin]. That was stuffed fell of cartridges, the same as if they got their ammunition in mustard tins. When they got out at the station, they said, “[Tore is one of your bullets, Dowsett,” and there is the mark in the mustard tin. When they were emptying it out on the station they said that, and that was how I got it. Of course it was choke full then, but that on” happened to stop the way.

10932. Did his helmet come off?—No, Constable Kelly took it off.

10933. Are you quite sure of that?—Positive of it.

10934. It did not fall off where he fell?—No, Kelly took it off fur the purpose of identifying him, and the moment it was off Steele fastened his hand on his beard and said, “You——wretch, I swore I would be in at your death, and I am,” and put his hand back as if he was going to shoot him. I said, “Take the man alive—take him alive.”

10935. Was Constable Bracken there?—I cannot say, because I did not know him personally.

10936. Was there a constable over his body saying, “You shall not shoot him”?—Almos immediately there was, and said, “You shall not shoot the man.” In fact, I think it was the same person that spoke to Dwyer when Dwyer kicked him.

10937. Did Kelly appeal to any one to save his life?—He might have done, but I did not hear it and I thought at the time it was simply the pain of the wounds, and that and rushing on him that made him roar out.

10938. Did he say anything at all?—It was a moment like before the helmet was taken off, and it all seemed smothered up like a rough voice in a speaking-trumpet.

10939. You could not distinguish the words?—No.

10940. Did he speak after the helmet was taken off?—Yes, he said, “Give me a chance,” or “Let me live as long as I can.”

10941. What was the reply given to him?—I do not know that there was any particular reply, only every body seemed to be busy in seeing what was on him, and pulling it off, and getting him down to the railway station.

10942. Did a constable come up and kick him while he was down?—Yes, some chap named Dwyer jumped over and kicked him; in fact, Ned Kelly challenged him with it as soon as he came into the room at the station. He said, “You cowardly dog, you kicked me when I was down”; and Dwyer made answer and said, “No, but you are the cowardly dog, you killed my poor comrade.” “Who was your comrade?” says Kelly. Dwyer says, “Poor Lonigan.” He only said, “Look here, old man, when you were out there, did not you try to shoot me?” Dwyer said, “No.” “Then,” said Kelly, “you had no business there”; and Mr. Sadleir excused the man to the outlaw there in my presence, and said he had lost his temper, and was very sorry.

10944. Where did you see him?—At the station.

10945. After Ned Kelly was taken in?—Yes.

10946. How long after Kelly was taken?—Shortly after he was taken into the room. I was outside with the armour. We were weighing it, getting the weight of it in the scales.

10947. Did you stop in with Ned Kelly?—I was in there about quarter of an hour, not more.

10948. Did you see Mr. Sadleir about during the day?—When I went away Mr. Sadleir was on the platform, and after I came back, when Kelly was captured, I saw Mr. Sadleir there on the platform.

10949. Did you see him anywhere in the field?—No, it was on the platform I saw him.

10950. Did you see him out amongst the men during the day?—I left about nine o’clock. In fact, I came away with Mrs. O’Connor and her sister, and brought the telegram.

10951. You know nothing further of it?—No.

10952. Was your train fired at when you came opposite the Glenrowan hotel; did any ball strike your train?—Not that I am aware of.

10953. Did you see any sign of shots being fired towards you?—No. Of course there was shooting going on, but I could not say that any came towards the train.

10954. If a shot had struck the wheel of the carriage you were in, would you have heard it with the noise and moving of the train?—No; lead hitting iron, the train in motion, I should not have heard it. If it had crashed through the window or wood of course I would have heard it.

10955. Did you see Constable Kelly during the most of the time while you were going up to the capture of the outlaw?—Yes.

10956. Did he appear to be going away from it at any time?—I do not think he had the slightest intention to go away.

10957. Did he run away in any direction as if he wanted to get clear of him?—No; he shifted about from place to place to get the best cover he could, but always seemed to be getting closer up; in fact, he was closing on the right. I appeared to be the centre man, so that if I went right or left I would have been going away, but I went straight to him. They were going to him, but in a little more circular direction.

10958. Did you see any constable who had been firing at him running away after firing at him?—Yes, I did see some man go down towards the station. The thought struck me it was hardly any disgrace to be afeared, because it was not any use firing at him. I knew I was hitting him myself; it did not do any good.

10959. Were they running away?—I do not think they were running to run away altogether, but they went back, and very likely they came round again, but I was watching the one figure, and could not see every thing.

10960. Did you see whether there were any shots fired at Kelly?—Yes, there were a great number of shots fired.

10961. Did it strike you those men were looking for fresh cover, or wanting to get out of the way?—Not exactly wanting to get out of his way. I think myself they thought it was very strange they could not bring him down.

10962. Did you consider they were trying to secure themselves from him?—Well, I could not say anything like that, because it was a rough time just then.

10963. Did you see he had armour on while you were shooting?—No, I never heard a word about any armour or anything else, not till we were at the log when we pulled it off, because he had like a white mackintosh over the whole affair down to his heels, and the helmet standing on his head, and what with the fog and one thing and another, golly! it made him about nine feet high; upon my word it did, coming through the gloom there.

10964. What were your own thoughts?—I said it was Old Nick, and upon my word I thought it was at the time.

10965. Did you know then it was Ned Kelly when you were shooting him?—No, and I do not believe anybody else did till the helmet came off; because directly the helmet came off Steele fastened on him and said it was Ned Kelly, and we knew him by that exclamation.

10966. Do you think from what you saw and know now that you would have failed in the attempt to capture Kelly had it not been for Steele?—Well he did his part towards it, but I think Kelly would have been taken if he was not there.

10967. You do not think it would be right for any one of you that were there immediately close to Kelly then to say, “Had it not been for me he would have escaped”?—No, it would not be fair for any one man to say, “ Alone I did it.”

10968. Suppose you stated, “Had it not been for me Ned Kelly would not have been caught”?—I would not say such a thing.

10969. There were men enough to rush him?—Yes, if anybody had known what he had on they could have jumped on his back and rolled him over.

10970. How far was Senior-Constable Kelly from the outlaw when Steele rushed up?—He was on the right, perhaps twenty or thirty yards away on the right hand side of him.

10971. Where was Steele before he rushed?—Kelly, the outlaw, was in that fork, and I was at the butt of it, about twelve yards off. Steele was up on the left-hand side, and he ran to within about fifteen yards and dropped down like behind a little stump there and fired. I could see the lot of them, and Senior-Constable Kelly was then twenty or thirty yards on the right hand side.

10972. Did they both rush on him simultaneously?—As soon as Steele fired and the figure dropped, I ran towards him, and Steele was on to him while I was running, and Senior-Constable Kelly was up as quick as myself.

10973. Not two seconds between?—It was nearly a dead heat.

10974. You swear now positively that you took the revolver out of his hand?—I do. I took the revolver from Ned Kelly.

10975. When you came in the train to the railway platform with Mr. Sadleir’s party, had you any conversation with any of the police that were there as to the position of affairs?—I heard what Senior-Constable Kelly was telling Mr. Sadleir—where the men were, and how he had placed the men round.

10976. Did he speak as if he was in charge, as if he considered that, after Mr. Hare left?—He seemed to be pretty forward in it. He had this Colt’s revolver in his hand, and the skull cap, and said he had got men here and there.

10977. Were you out of the train first, or Mr. Sadleir?—They were in the van, and I had only just time to jump on the engine with Driver Colman and his fireman.

10978. Who got out first?—I could not say.

10979. Did Mr. Sadleir call Senior-Constable Kelly to him, or did Kelly go up to Mr. Sadleir?—When I saw them they were in conversation on the platform, and I drew near to hear what was going on, and heard what I have said.

10980. Did you hear Mr. Sadleir say anything to him?—Yes; he asked where Mr. O’Connor was; and he said, “He is in the drain in front of the hotel.”

10981. What did he say then?—I do not know.

Jesse Dowsett,

continued,

8th June 1881.
10982. Did you hear him say, “Take me to him”?—No.
10983. Did he make any further remark about Mr. O’Connor’s position?—No, not that I am aware of.
10984. Did you hear Mr. Sadleir give Kelly instructions what to do then?—No; I went away then through this woman, Mrs. Reardon, screaming out.
10985. What induced you to go?—I had been out with every police special before this, looking after the Kellys—in charge of every one; and it was on the Sunday the station master sent and asked for me to come over and see him, and he told me I would have to run a special to Beechworth; and I said, “What time do we start”; and he said, “I cannot tell, but do not go far away.” And then the arrangements were altered.
10986. Were you armed at all?—Yes, a breech loading Colt’s revolver. In fact, I have been carrying it for a long time, and Mr. Hare, only the Friday before, chuffed me about it.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o’clock.

THURSDAY, 9th JUNE 1881.

Present:

William B. Montfort further examined.

10989. By the Commission. — You have been in the North-Eastern district now for some time—how long?—I went on the 4th of May last.

10990. Have you acquainted yourself with the condition of the district generally, so far as police protection is concerned?—I have acquainted myself with what I think is required for the purposes of defence.

10991. Should there be another outbreak in the district such as the last do you think you would be prepared in any degree to cope with it with the present force?—Certainly we would be in a position to cope with it to a certain extent, but I think we would be better able to do so if some of my recommendations are carried out.

10992. Are those the recommendations that were brought before the Government by Mr. Superintendent Chomley?—No, nothing to do with his recommendations at all.

10993. What are the recommendations?—I think I have them included in the report. One point is a foot constable stationed at Oxley, and the formation of a new station on the Fifteen-mile Creek.

10994. Will it be better for the public interests that what you are about to say should not be published?—What I am going to say should not, I think, be published. The less that is known about our movements the better.

10995. The question is: are matters looking serious there now, and are the police unprepared for another outbreak?—I am not in a position to give a positive statement that matters are not serious, but to say that we are not prepared for another outbreak is not correct; we would be more prepared if my recommendations were carried out.

The room was cleared.
The Commission deliberated.
The witness was again called in, and his examination was continued with closed doors.

At the request of the Chairman, this evidence was noted by the Government Shorthand writer the use of the Commission only, not for publication.

Mr. O’Connor was called in.
The Chairman directed that the evidence to follow should be printed in the usual course.

10996. By the Commission (to the witness).—Have you had any experience whatever of their powers of tracking:—Not myself personally, but I provided myself with the information.

10997. From whom?—From Mounted-Constable Kirkham. I made him write a report in connection with certain cases in which the black trackers were engaged. That is since they came up. They came up when I was in Benalla.

10998. That is the last batch?—Yes, the present men; they came in July, when I was there. I produce his report [handing in the same]:—“North-Eastern Police District, Benalla Station, June 8th 1881.—Report of Mounted-Constable Kirkham, 2986, relative to ability of Queensland trackers—I respectfully report for the information of Inspector Montfort, that during the period I have been in charge of the above trackers and on all occasions when out with them in search of offenders and otherwise, they have worked with alacrity, determination and good will, and are most obedient and attentive, and require very little skill in order to work them. The following is a return of duties performed by them, under my immediate observation

Return of Duties performed by Queensland trackers:

="Monkey Brown, Peter Brown—27/9/80.—To Violet Town, to track an offender who damaged property of Mr. Judd, station master there, on night of 26th; succeeded in tracking the footprints to Ben. Gould’s house; arrested Gould, and proved his boots corresponded with footprints traced; was afterwards tried, convicted, and sentenced to one month’s imprisonment.

="Moses Bullis, Peter Brown—4/10/80 to 17/10/80.—In search of jewellery, &c., stolen from Mr. Wallace’s, Pine Lodge, Shepparton. Tracked offenders three miles from Mr. Wallace’s residence, and found jewellery in a hollow log. Two persons arrested, named Brown and Freeman.

="Moses Bulla, Paddy Brown—13/12/80 to 14/12/80.—To Euroa, to search for a girl named Mavor Curtin, who was lost in Strathbogie Ranges. Found girl nine miles from her home on 14th.

="Jim Crow, Dick Brown—23/12/80 to 25/12/80.—To Euroa, to search for stolen sheep, taken from Mr. Cusack. Tracked sheep nine miles from Mr. Cusack’s residence—staying, not stolen.

="Jim Crow, Billy Nut—6/1/81 to 8/1/81.—To Wahgunyah, to search the Murray River for the body of a man drowned while bathing. After a day and a half searching and diving in the river, the trackers recovered the body three miles from where it was drowned, in 30 feet of water.

="Jim Crow, Moses Bulla—5/2/81 to 12/2/81.—To Shepparton and Yalca, to track and track offender Smith, alias Rohan, from the farm-house, where he was working with the murdered man ‘Shea,’ to the well where Shea was found dead. Tracks and traces of blood found by the trackers, and sufficient evidence obtained to have the offender Rohan, alias Smith, arrested, and committed for trial for murder. This offender was tried, convicted, and executed in Beechworth Gaol on 6th June 1881.

And there is the sergeant’s report upon the back of that. “Forwarded for the inspectors information. I have examined this report, and find the duties correct, when the trackers were on special duty. This return does not include patrols, where the trackers were sent out to be made acquainted with the district.—J. Whelan, Sergeant 1305. 8/6/81.” In addition to that I sent out Sub-Inspector Baber some days ago, for the purpose of testing what they really could do, and carrying out the system of practice that I intend to continue with regard to them. Not anticipating any questions on the subject, he is away, and I did not get any report. He intended to write, but he had to go away on duty. He was away for some hours on horseback. He dismounted, and took a course on foot through farms and fences, and along the tops of fences, and pursued a course calculated to puzzle the trackers as much as possible. He then left the following day with three trackers, and accompanied by himself, having no one with him but Kirkham, so that no one should know what the trackers could or could not do, as it would be inadvisable it should be known generally. He reported to me that their ability was unquestionable, that they acted splendidly, and that everything that was expected of them was fulfilled. It was my intention to go out to-day or to-morrow with the other three myself, but, having been summoned here, of course it was not done. These are only instances at present in which I can speak personally of their knowledge and ability to track. Their conduct is exemplary, and they are most attentive and subordinate in every way.

10999. Do they keep in good health?—In very good health, and never enter a public-house, that I am aware of. They never drink. There is no difficulty in controlling them at all.

11000. What pay are they getting?—Five shillings a day, and find themselves in everything.

11001. Are they kept away from the barracks?—They live in a little brick house, but they mess in the barracks, and are usually about in the barracks.

11002. Do you think they would be satisfied if they were separated—would they fret?—I do not think it would be a good plan, especially when we have railroads to send them to any point desired.

11003. Do you not think it would be desirable to put two at one station and two at another, say?—No.

11004. You think it better to keep them massed together, and send out two or three when necessity arises?—Keep them together and send out where required.

11005. Would you send the whole of them together?—Not the whole.

11006. You consider they desire to live together?—Yes; I am guided a good deal by conversations I have with Sergeant Whelan and Kirkham, and Mr. Baber seems to take a great interest in them; in fact, they are continually under my observation since I went up there. They are men not a bit afraid to go out at night, and will go with a message anywhere at night.

11008. There is a report here, when they were endeavoring to find the tracks of a saw, it appears they lost the tracks on a beaten road near Greta?—Yes, of course, they are not infallible.

11009. Do you think if they had been under charge of some one who understood them better they would have picked those tracks up and followed them on?—I do not think so. In point of fact, the saws never went in that direction at all, and in a different direction altogether, in my opinion.

11010. Have you ever heard anything about the saws since they have been stolen?—I did. I heard it was supposed they were taken for spite, because Accock’s sheep were killed, and he poisoned a dog that killed them. I formed that opinion after I had been there three or four days. I was told you could make armour with them.

11011. Are they not very thin?—They are thin, but the question is whether they could be shaped into armour at all. I was told by a person they could be softened specially to shape them, and then hardened again so as to make them hard, but I do not believe that was the purpose at all. I think they were taken by Accock’s neighbor for the purpose of spite.

11012. Have you seen at any time any signs of insubordination amongst the black trackers?—None whatever, nor ever heard of any.

11013. Nor ever heard of any difficulty in managing them?—Not the slightest.

11014. Has Mr. Baber ever said that he had any difficulty with them in dealing with them?—I do not know of his having gone out with them lately since; what I have said he told me. The question never arose; the difficulty was never anticipated, and none arose. They worked well with him, and seemed quite flattered with his presence with them.

11015. You never experienced any difficulty in handling them in any way?—I never heard of any.

11016. From all the information you have obtained since you have been in Benalla, do you think it is possible for the blacks stationed there to be better officered, and be more amenable to what is required of them than they have been in the past, or are at present?—I can only judge of what I have seen myself. I do not see any difficulty about them at all, nor have I been told of any. I questioned the persons who were in immediate contact with them, and I have judged of their behavior myself, seeing them about the stables and station, and they have helped to unload my things when they were brought up, and when I was away and no person to take charge of the house. I sent a couple over, and they remained there till I came back; a more easily manageable set of men I never met in my life.

11017. For the purpose for which the present black trackers were brought from Queensland, have you heard any officer in the district, who had the opportunity of knowing and judging of the way in which the trackers were managed under Mr. O’Connor, express an opinion that they were better managed by him than the present under Victorian police?—I have heard all the police there say—I have spoken on the subject to Sergeant Whelan, Constable Kirkham, and, I think, to Mr. Baber say the same; I am not certain—that those trackers are infinitely better for general purposes than Mr. O’Connor’s trackers.

11018. I was speaking of the management of them?—Well, Mr. O’Connor’s trackers would do nothing for any person but him—in fact, Senior-Constable Smyth, the police clerk, said so, yesterday. I forget what question I asked about. He heard me ask some question of Kirkham, and he said if any other person to take charge of the house. I sent a couple over, and they remained there till I came back; a more person to take charge of the house. I sent a couple over, and they remained there till I came back; a more easily manageable set of men I never met in my life.

11019. Do you think that if the present trackers at Benalla were under the management of Mr.
O’Connor that they would rather obey him than the officer that has had charge of them since?—I cannot say that. In order to judge that I would have to see Mr. O’Connor in charge.

POLICE

W.B. Montford, continued, 9th June 1881.

11020. The men have not been acquainted with Mr. O’Connor. I want to see, as far as you know, have you obtained any information from any of the officers that had the opportunity of judging of Mr.
O’Connor whether he had special qualifications to guide those black trackers for the object they were brought to this colony?—I do not know; I never heard. Of course it must be assumed that when Mr. O’Connor came with the black trackers from Queensland that he was better capable of managing the Queensland black trackers than anybody else.

Mr. O’Connor.—The native police in Queensland are taught only to look to their officer—to take no commands from anybody else. If the Chief Commissioner came up they would take no commands from him.
That will account for their not listening to any one else.

11021. By the Commission (to Mr. O’Connor).—If the trackers brought from Queensland were placed under an officer here who would be kind and efficient in his management they would obey him equally with the man who came with them?—They would.

The Witness.—I was going to say that was my opinion. I can only speak of those six that are there.

11022. Do you see any necessity for any change of the management of trackers. at the present time?—Of course the effect of that question is—11023. Do you think their efficiency would be increased by a change?—That is apt to bring me in contact with other parties.

11024. It is simply a matter of opinion. So far as I gather from your remarks, you think they are perfectly efficient by the tests you have applied to them. I want your opinion as to whether you think they would become more efficient by any change?—I do not think so.

11025. There is one black tracker, I understand, that was with Mr. O’Connor during the time he had charge?—Yes; I believe so.

11026. Have you heard any complaints from Kirkham, or Baber, or Whelan, that this particular black has disobeyed the orders given by any of the officers?—They never disobeyed any. Moses is his name. He is a most active little fellow, not the slightest difference from the others. I think he is more intelligent than the others.

11027. Are you aware that that intelligent boy did not come from Queensland?—I am sure he did come from Queensland. He said he did.

11028. The question I ask is this: are you aware that Moses, the black tracker, did not come from Queensland with Mr. O’Connor’s party?—I am. I did not know it until a few days ago.

11029. Are you aware he was found here and enlisted into the party by Mr. O’Connor?—I did not hear he enlisted him. I heard that he joined Mr. O’Connor’s party here.

11030. Do you know now that he received no Queensland training in the police?—I am aware of that from what I hear.

11031. You have altogether six trackers at Benalla?—Yes, six.

11032. If Kirkham and Mr. Baber, who have had the principal charge of them recently, were removed from the immediate charge of those men, and the trackers were made acquainted with that fact, do you think they would obey some one else placed in charge in course of time, equally with those in charge of them in the past?—I have no doubt of it.

11033. In point of fact those men have simply to be made aware that a certain officer has the control of them?—Yes; they are wide awake enough, and know me now very well. I am endeavoring to answer you as straight as I possibly can—in fact, I have no reservation in the matter. I do not care what the effect of my answer may be, but I can only offer an opinion, of course, on the majority of these questions.

11034-5. By Mr. O’Connor.—This work your trackers have been doing is play, one may say, but, supposing a great emergency arose, would you give the opinion that you would be quite competent to see whether those men did their work properly or not; say another gang came out, and there were murders and banks stuck up?—I think the trackers could be made to track just as well by the men that are there as they would even by the trackers you had.

11036. I am not speaking of that. I ask this—this is all play and child’s work so far?—I do not call it that.

11037. Well, perhaps I am wrong?—It as nearly as possible approached what would have taken place if a murder had been committed—that is, the blacks were right up to a certain point twenty-four hours after the person was there that was supposed to commit the murder. The officer and the troopers with him rode their horses; when it came to a certain point, the officer dismounted and he went away on foot, and walked some miles on foot in and out through the most difficult places he could find, along rocky places and places denuded of vegetation; he selected every possible condition that was difficult, and I would not call that child’s play; that was what would take place in case of murder.

11038. No, excuse me, it was different—those trackers and the men with them knew they had nothing to meet—if it had been a gang of four outlaws who, at the first moment of seeing the men, would shoot them, it would be different. The trackers knew they were running after Mr. Baber, in a friendly way, but, as a fact, has it not happened in the North-Eastern district that when trackers were on the tracks they swore they could not tell them, although the white men could actually see them?—No, I never heard of that. I can only speak of these trackers.

11039. Have you ever heard of this case where two trackers did that?—I heard something of it, but I paid very little attention to it. Those trackers were, I think, natives of this colony.

11040. “Spider,” and another boy, New South Wales blacks?—I heard of “Spider.” I thought he was a Victorian, but I am not speaking of them at all. I am speaking of these six that are here now.

11041. Put the men in a position of danger, and I just ask you, what do you think?—I could not possibly express an opinion of what these men would do if they were placed in a position of danger, further than this, that I would have no hesitation in going myself with them, not the slightest.

11042. By the Commission.—What effect would the appointment of Mr. O’Connor have on the rest of the force in the district—the general police. It was stated by Mr. Chomley, or rather Mr. Sadler, that it would be very unpopular amongst the general body in the district?—Of course the appointment of any outsider to the police force as an officer, would be a very unpopular proceeding.

11043. You refer to any stranger?—I think any stranger would be unpopular.

11044. By Mr. O’Connor.—You do not mean me personally?—I never heard any objection to you personally.

11045. By the Commission.—Have you heard any one express the opinion, since you have been at Benalla, that the appointment of Mr. O’Connor would be very unpopular in the district?—I have.

11046. By whom?—Some of the police, but I could not remember who it was. I heard it in conversation.

11047. Would that be general talk?—Of course it only came that way, but I do not speak with everybody; they must be very particular friends of mine, or they would not broach the subject at all.
11048. Would the appointment of Mr. O’Connor to the charge of the black trackers, in the North-Eastern district, have a tendency to strike terror into the minds of the Kelly sympathizers, or any others that are likely to become troublesome in the district?—I cannot say whether it would or not—there is no means of consulting the persons who would be affected by it.

11049. My reason for asking that is in consequence of the statement of Mr. Chomley—he recommended the appointment of Mr. O’Connor, and said his appointment would be very popular amongst the people in the district, and he said it would create a feeling of terror in the minds of the Kelly sympathizers in the district. Has anything of that description come within your own knowledge since you have been there?—No.

11050. Were you at Benalla at the time Mr. Chomley visited the district?—No.

11051. Would the appointment of Mr. O’Connor cause much dissatisfaction in the force in the district?—I am sure it would; it would create great dissatisfaction in the whole force.

11052. Then that would not have a good effect on the general body of police as being contrary to regulation?—As being contrary to regulation and as creating a precedent, a thing never done before and being contrary to the expectations of a number that are aspirants for promotion.

11053. Before you leave I would ask you one question: you say you desire the troopers to be, in fact all the police in the North-Eastern district to be, armed with the Martini-Henry carbine?—Yes.

11054. Do you think it is of such importance that it would be desirable for the Commission to make a report to the Chief Secretary on that one subject?—I do decidedly; people up there, civilians, highly approve of the report they saw in the papers to the effect that the Commission were going to take that step.

11055. You think the sooner it is done the better?—Yes, and that it is the right thing.

11056. This is a copy of the Victorian police regulations, page 36, paragraph 263, “When a vacancy occurs in the higher grades of the force, and the duties of the vacant office are of such a nature that the Governor in Council shall be of opinion that there is no person of lower grade in the department who is competent to discharge them, the Governor in Council may appoint such person as he may think fit, although not previously engaged in the police force, and with or without examination or probation.” Do you think the time has arisen in the North-Eastern district in which an officer such as is there mentioned should be appointed by the Governor in Council for the purpose of taking charge of the black trackers?—Yes, to take charge of the black trackers.

11058. I will repeat the question again; in your opinion has the occasion arisen in the North-Eastern district in which a departure should be made from the regulation in the police force to admit one who had not been previously in the force?—I do not think it is requisite for that purpose alone. With great respect, I would say that I am placed just in this position—I am given to understand that Mr. O’Connor’s appointment has been proposed, or is about to be made by the Ministerial head of the department, on the recommendation of the permanent head of the department, and it is directly placing me as a subordinate in the position that I am criticising their acts, which I am very much averse to doing. I have no objection to give my opinion; I cannot help holding an opinion. For Mr. O’Connor, I need not tell you for a moment, I have a very great respect; but if you ask my opinion personally as regards whether I consider it would be absolutely indispensable in the present state of affairs to ignore the usage of the service, and incur the dangers arising from setting the police force in a state of ferment over it, I say I do not think the necessity is so great as would warrant the Government in doing anything of the sort, and that is what I mean. I have no personal objection at all to Mr. O’Connor’s appointment, not the slightest but if I am asked my opinion as to the effect on the morale of the force, I consider it will be very deleterious. I do not say the force have a right to have that feeling, but I know as a matter of fact it would have that effect.

11059. Outside the feeling of the force, has the necessity arisen in that district for the appointment of such a gentleman as Mr. O’Connor?—If you ask me as a matter of opinion I say I do not see that it has in reference to the present state of affairs. Of course in giving my opinion on this I do so with great reluctance, because I am placed in a position of antagonism to the Chief Commissioner, and likewise to the action of the Chief Secretary. I can only answer the questions I am asked as truthfully as I can I have no objection to answer the questions so long as I am not misunderstood. I did not volunteer the information.

11060. How long does it take for a man to rise from the ranks to the position of sub-inspector?—It took me eighteen years, and then I was promoted by a fluke.

11061. Missing the fluke, how many years would it have taken?—I might have been in the ranks still, perhaps.

11063. Mr. Hare said he was too old for the work, he said so himself?—I am as old as Mr. Hare, and he may not be fit, but I am perfectly fit. I rode ninety miles the other day, and came back as well and better than when I started. The system in vogue in the Irish Constabulary is the system that I think is the best, as I said in the first part of my evidence; and that is the Government are in the habit of appointing cadets by competitive examination when vacancies occur. At the same time they promote certain head constables, who are reported upon favorably by their county inspectors, to the position of sub-inspectors. Therefore it is not alone that men can rise from the ranks, but there is also the infusion of new blood through the appointment of cadets to be third-class sub-inspectors. I may say my father was a sub-inspector of police, I have an uncle an ex-county inspector, and a cousin a second sub-inspector; so I have had some experience.

11064. In the 25th section the last clause says, “The Chief Commissioner may also, if he think fit, a clause like that is likely to be of service to the police force generally?—It was put in as a sort of safety-valve after that clause empowering the Government to appoint an outsider to a certain position in the force, if necessary. For instance, if it was necessary to appoint an officer in charge of the detectives, it might be necessary to send to London, to England, and it is only exercised in extreme cases; that power of dismissing a man without a reason has not, during my experience of twenty-eight years, ever been exercised.

11065. It could be exercised with impunity against a man if there was nothing against him?—No.

11066. By Mr. O’Connor.—Are you not aware that the late Chief Commissioner was appointed from outside the force?—Yes, but the Chief Commissioner joined in 1858, I think. He was appointed under the Regulations that immediately preceded these, of which those are a copy. Captain MacMahon was Acting Chief Commissioner immediately preceding him in the same way; but when I say the officers, we never look upon the Chief Commissioner as an officer; he is in a different schedule in the Estimates even. He is entered down along with the clerks.

11067. Would it not be just as much against the interests of the men if any new regulations were framed that would debar a man from rising from the ranks?—Yes.

11068. Anything new would tend to interfere with them?—Yes.

11069. And therefore, if you studied the temper of the men, things should go on just as they are, and you would get officers of fifty, sixty, and eighty, eventually?—I do not think that is likely to be the case. I do not wish to criticise what is past, but I believe the retention of certain officers in the force has militated considerably against the promotion in the service.

11070. By the Commission.—It was stated by Sergeant Steele that it would require political influence for a man to raise himself in the force—is that the general feeling in the force?—Yes, it has become very much so of late years.

11072. Have any been appointed apparently through political influence?—That I do not know—I was not in a position to know what influence was brought to bear on the Chief Commissioner.

11073. Might that not arise from men hoping to be the next, and fancying they should be?—It might be very likely. A man came to me when I was in charge of No.1 division and asked to see the superintendent, and wrote a report, calling attention to the fact that he was not promoted. He is an exceedingly good man, and he, in making his complaint to me, said, “The reason, I presume, that I am passed over is that I do not apply to members of Parliament. I do not intend to do so, and therefore it is but right for me to send my report applying for promotion, because I contend that the clause in the manual about not applying does not apply in that way”; and he thought it better to apply personally, instead of through members of Parliament. I only say that is the feeling in the force, and I know it is. I do not know of any case of my own knowledge. When a man thinks he is due for promotion and is not applying for a man to raise himself in the force—is that the general feeling in the force?—Yes, it has become very much so of late years.

11074. You do not know any glaring case as the result of political influence?—No, I do not; I do not remember any.

11075. Within your own knowledge?—No.

The witness withdrew.

James Arthur sworn and examined.

11076. By the Commission.—What are you?—Mounted constable.

11077. Were you out in any of the search parties after the Kellys?—Yes.

11078. In the time that Mr. Hare was in the North-east?—Yes, I was out with him.

11079. And with Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

11080. You have been there all through?—Yes, I have.

11081. Did you in any of those parties believe that at any time you came near upon catching the Kellys?—No; I cannot say that.

11082. You had no information that you had come, or were coming, close up to them at any time?—No.

11083. Did you, in acting upon information you received, ever have the idea that you were getting close to them?—No.

11084. Did you form any opinion while you were in that district as to whether it was a good method to go out in large parties and scour the country, as was done under Mr. Hare?—Yes, I have; I don’t think it was—going out in large parties.

11085. You do not think it was calculated to catch the men?—No; it was impossible.

11086. Did you form any opinion as to the private agents that Mr. Nicolson had?—Some of them were good; in fact I know one that was good.

11087. Did you ever get information that led you to believe you were near the Kellys, or in acting upon it that brought you anywhere near?—Well to where they had been.
11088. How long before?—A fortnight before.

11089. Do you think that information was of any value?—No, not any.

11091. Do you think it would be a good method now, before anything of the sort should occur, to have strong, active young men riding through that district, and making themselves acquainted with all the inhabitants?—Yes, it would.

11092. Do you think they would be in a better position, if an outbreak came, to catch the men at the time, than men going into the district?—Yes; they would have a better knowledge of the country and the people round.

11093. They would know all the people?—Yes.

11094. Do you think a pursuit carried on on that principle would be much more likely to drive the men out of the country or catch them?—Yes, it would.

11095. Small parties?—Small parties.

11096. Riding in different directions?—Riding in different directions.

11097. By concert meeting at different places and comparing notes?—Yes.

11098. Were you in the cave party?—No, I was with Mr. Hare in the first party, when he watched Byrne’s house.

11099. Did you understand when you watched Byrne’s that you might have been watched yourselves?—Yes.

11100. Did you think you were?—I did.

11101. That it was known while you were there?—Yes; Sherritt knew, and he was not to be trusted.

11102. Would you trust Sherritt?—No.

11103. Did he ever give any reliable information as to where the outlaws were?—No; he would say, in speaking about Byrne, not to shoot him; and as for Ned Kelly, he said that he would never be taken, not by all the police in Victoria; they would never get him. That is the way he would be talking.

11104. Did you consider at the time he was an agent of Ned Kelly?—I did.

11105. You always thought so?—I always thought so.

11106. Did his actions at any time lead you to suppose that was the ease?—By his talk and the way he would go away, come and stop with us a night, and next night be away, and move out all hours of the night, and never have anything that was any account. He would be always blowing about Ned Kelly and Byrne never being taken.

11107. Did you believe he knew where they were at the time?—No.

11108. Did you believe he knew anything of their movements?—The way I thought he did it was he went to Mrs. Skillian and carried information to them.

11109. He was giving her information about the movements of the police?—Yes.

11110. How do you account for their hatred to him that led them to shoot him?—Well, the time that Mr. Nicolson’s party was up there, Sherritt was supposed to be seen by some of the sympathizers, and they took the word to Kelly afterwards, and that was the reason he was shot.

11111. Was it possible he was shot for being supposed to give information that was really given by others?—That was all I could make out the reason.

11112. Were you at the Glenrowan affair?—Yes, I went up with Mr. Hare.

11113. About three o’clock in the morning?—Yes.

11114. Where were you stationed?—At different places. First when I went there I was stationed alongside of Mr. Hare, through the gate. He was partly through the wicket-gate when the first shot was fired—just going through. When the first volley went he was clear; he was struck on the second volley.

11115. Were you by when he was struck?—I was about five yards from him. His hand fell. I saw him loading with the gun between his knees, and I asked what was the matter, and he said he was shot in the wrist.

11116. Did he load and fire after he was wounded?—Yes.

11117. How many times?—I saw him fire twice.

11118. Was it a double-barrelled gun?—Yes. He was in the act of loading when I saw him the second time. He had discharged the barrels before.

11119. Do you remember the women getting out before daylight?—Yes. There were some tried to get out just before Mr. Hare left, and they went back again frightened.

11120. Did you hear the screams as soon as the first volley was fired?—Not the first; but after the second or third there were screams, and then Mr. Hare gave orders to cease firing, to allow them to come out.

11121. Do you remember Mrs. Reardon coming out, and her son, and Mr. Reardon?—Yes, that was near daylight.

11122. Where were you stationed at that time?—About thirty yards from the house, on the id. She screamed out as loud as she could, and had a child in her arms, and afterwards he turned round and said, "I have shot Mother Jones in the——" Constable Phillips was on his right, on the right hand behind, and I heard him make some remark about a feather. I could not say what it was.

11126. Did you suppose him to fire at her?—He fired direct at her; we could see it in the moonlight, and then she turned round, and then he fired a second shot, and then I spoke to him and told him not to fire—this was an innocent woman. I could see her with a child in her arms; and then afterwards he turned round and said, "I have shot Mother Jones in the——" Constable Phillips was on his right, on the right hand behind, and I heard him make some remark about a feather. I could not say what it was.

11127. Did you make any remark at that time?—I told him not to fire—it was an innocent woman. I said I would shoot him if he fired.

11128. How far were you from him?—About 20 yards.

11129. What door did they come from?—The back door of the hotel, out of the passage, and just as she came out of the passage Steele fired.

11130. Right behind the hotel?—Yes.

11131. Did you see her son coming out?—Yes, I saw the young fellow coming out, leading a child.

11132. Could you distinguish it was the figure of a man?—Yes, I could see it was a young man.

11133. It was light enough?—Oh, quite light.

11134. Was he crawling or walking?—Walking, leading the child.

11135. Had he his hand up?—After Steele called out to him, he held his hand up, and Steele fired.

11136. After his hand was up?—Yes, and he turned round, and as he went into the door he was shot—I would not swear who fired it—and he fell.

11137. Could you be positive that Steele deliberately fired at that young fellow?—No, because he was the nearest to me, and had to fire past me.

11138. You have no hesitation in saying Steele deliberately shot at the young fellow?—Yes, he shot at him.

11139. Did you see him fall?—Not with the shot Steele fired, but with another shot he fell in the door. I would not swear it was Steele fired that second shot.

11140. Did Steele make any remark?—Not then. After the youth, a man came out with a child in his arms, and Sergeant Steele sang out to him to hold up his hands.

11141. Did he do so?—He threw up his arm, and he fired at him. The man crept on his stomach, and crept into the house.

11142. Would that be the act of a sane man or a madman?—He seemed like as if he was excited. He fired from the tree when he first was there. He fired when I could see nothing to fire at.

11143. Did you not see that he had been drinking?—No. When he came first in the morning, he came to where Constable Kelly and I were standing, and we went to tell him about the outlaws being in the house, and he would not wait; he rushed over to a tree close to the house leaving his men to place themselves.

11144. He did not place his own men?—No, not his own men, or anything—he would not wait.

11145. Who placed his men?—Senior Constable Kelly took two, and the others went by themselves.

11146. You recollect you are on your oath; are you quite positive in these statements you have made?—I am.

11147. And that young Reardon was not crawling?—He was not, not when he came out.

11148. And the man that held up his hands after, you say Steele fired at him?—Yes.

11149. We have it in evidence that the elder Reardon fell upon his knees or belly, and crawled in?—That is what I say. I would not swear it was Reardon or young Reardon, but those that came out after Mrs. Reardon.

11150. You have no doubt in your mind that this was a woman?—Any man could see her and hear her voice.

11151. You had no suspicion in your mind that it was one of the outlaws?—None at all.

11152. You could tell the voice?—Yes.

11153. Sergeant Steele had the same opportunity of knowing that as you?—Just the same.

11154. Did he make any remark when you said you would shoot him if he fired again?—No; the only one was that he had shot Mrs. Jones in the—— 11155. Were you at the capture of Ned Kelly?—I was.

11156. About what time was that?—About a quarter past seven, or half past.

11157. Was it pretty clear light?—It was foggy in the morning.

11158. If it had not been foggy it would have been clear?—Yes.

11159. Might that occur from the smoke from the guns?—No, I think not; it was a very foggy night.

11160. Where were you when Ned Kelly first appeared coming in?—I was about 100 yards from the house at the Wangaratta end. After Steele fired at this woman I shifted back, took up another position at the log, and then shifted further back again. I had a Martini-Henry rifle; it was as good at 100 yards as at twenty, and I was afraid if I stopped too near I would hit some one the other side. I was kneeling down when I heard something behind me, and I turned round and saw—I could not make out what was coming from behind the bush, and I told him to keep back or he would be shot.

11161. Were you the first that saw him?—I was. He made some rumbling noise through the helmet, and I said I would shoot if he came up, and with that he raised a revolver, and as he did so I fired at him, and he staggered, and then fired in the direction of me. The shot fell about half way. He could not raise his arm very well.

11162. Why not?—He seemed to be crippled. The left arm was holding his right, and the right he had the revolver in. Then I fired at him again a second shot, and he seemed to stagger, but it had no other effect on him; and then I knelt down and aimed at a white mark—a slit in the helmet—and he staggered again, and I made a step forward, and he fired again a second shot. I then called on Constable Phillips, and he turned round and fired the same time as I did. Then I turned round to the other men, as it was no good firing at him, and sang out, and Constable Healey and Montifort were the nearest, and they came up and fired their shotguns at him. He then walked and turned to the tree where we found the rifle and the cap. Then the other men further back, where Sergeant Steele and the others were, started firing right past Constable Phillips and me, and we had to shift or we would have been shot.

11163. You were in danger?—We were in danger; and then Sergeant Steele sang out to steady firing—it was a blackfellow; and Steele went behind a bush; and after Kelly went to the tree where the rifle and cap was found he turned round and was walking in the direction of the railway station.

11164. Down hill, in fact?—Yes; and he tripped over the limb of a tree and fell. As he was falling Sergeant Steele ran up and fired two shots, and then all the other constables rushed—there was a general rush on him.

11165. Do you say he tripped over that before Steele fired?—I do.

11166. That he was falling?—That he was falling.

11167. And when he came out in the morning he was staggering?—He could hardly walk—crippled. I could not say what from, perhaps loss of blood. He seemed to be crippled and weak the way he was tottering along—not able to walk.

11168. Are you positive now. I want you to be very certain about whether Steele brought him down with a shot or whether he had fallen before he fired?—He had fallen before he fired. If there were any shots it would be either Constable Healey or Montifort.

11169. Where was Dowsett?—He was down towards the railway fence, and Bracken.

11170. Did you see Dowsett fire?—Yes, I did. He was on my left, firing.

11171. Steele has stated he fired, and when he fired Ned Kelly went down, or collapsed rather?—No.

In coming along there was a limb came out towards the drain, and, in stepping over the limb, he tripped, and staggered along, and fell.

11172. You are prepared to say that those who have sworn that he was struck by Steele, before he fell, are wrong in their impression?—I never saw Steele fire a shot till afterwards. He was down on the ground—not exactly on the ground—he was stumbling and falling.
11186. It has been stated that he took deliberate aim with his arm and hand?—That is not true. He held it in that position—he did not raise his hand up at all. It was like that—indicating same.

11187. Did you form the impression he was wounded?—It seemed as if he could not lift his hand; and after Montifort and Healey fired he shifted his hand, and held the right hand with the left.

11188. So as to steady it?—Yes. He was more dead than alive when he came out.

11189. Do you know where he came out of the house?—I could not tell.

11190. You do not know anything about how he got out?—No. After we were firing the second volley, there was a man came out from the yard, and as he came out there were two rockets let up between the railway station and McDonald’s, and I was looking round to where they went off, and there was some firing went on then, and as I turned round I saw this man going out. I do not know whether it was Ned Kelly.

11191. We never heard of rockets?—Constable Gascoigne can tell about that. I think it was some sympathizers letting them know they were attacked by the police. One was very faint, and the other was a large one.

11192. Did you form any opinion about the taking of those men, whether the whole time of that night and day should have been spent on it?—Yes; it could not have been done in any other way, without the loss of life. If we had gone in we would have been shot.

11193. Was there any offer to rush the house?—Yes.

11194. Would the police have been willing to?—Yes; in fact, if they had not fired the first shot, we would have been in the house in the morning.

11195. If Inspector Hare had not been shot, would he have gone into the house?—Yes, if they had not have fired. If they had kept quiet we would have been right into the house.

11196. How long would it have taken you to get there?—About five strides we would have been into it.

11197. What distance were you from it when you first fired?—About twenty yards, and we were running.

11198. You were running from the wicket-gate to the hotel?—Yes.

11199. Were you half way through?—Yes, just on the corner of the fence when the first volley came, and we stopped and returned the fire.

11200. Where was Mr. O’Connor at the time?—I did not see him.

11201. Do you know who were outside the railway gate when the first volley was fired?—The only one I could recognize was Gascoigne; I could not any others.

11202. The only one you could recognize was Gascoigne?—Yes.

11203. Where was Mr. Hare?—I saw him and three others besides myself, but I could not tell who they were.

11204. You could not tell whether they were either of the black trackers?—No.

11205. Did you see Mr. O’Connor outside the gate?—No.

11206. Did you see him leave the platform?—No.

11207. Did you leave before him?—I could not say.

11208. Are you sure he was not in advance of you?—I would not swear he was or he was not.

11209. Did you see Mr. O’Connor after in the day?—I saw him, after Kelly was taken, with Mr. Sadleir.

11210. Do you know where he was stationed before that?—No.

11211. Did Mr. Hare give any orders after he was shot?—Yes; I heard him call out, “O’Connor”; and then the next was to bring out his boys and surround the place, and, for God’s sake, not to let them escape—he was wounded and must go.

11212. Did you hear Mr. Hare give any other orders?—No. I did not.

11213. Did he say, “Cease firing”?—That was before he left, but not after he gave those orders to Mr. O’Connor. He never gave any others. The first was to cease firing and to let the women out, and then he went to Mr. O’Connor and gave that order to him.

11214. Did you see Mr. Hare after that?—No.

11215. Who was the next officer in command after Mr. Hare left?—Senior-Constable Kelly.

11216. Did Kelly take the management after that time?—He came out about half an hour after Mr. Hare went away from the drain, and came to me and asked where the remainder of the men were. I told him there were two up higher than I was; and he said, “Come on, we will go round and place them.” The only man he called to was Barry. Gascoigne was next to me; I pointed him out; I said he was all right. Then we went round—about 100 yards round—and spoke to Barry. He had Hero, the tracker, with him; and then we went round the back to the Wangaratta end, and there were no men there, and going round we found the rifle and cap.

James Arthur, continued, 9th June 1881.
Did you hear Kelly tell Steele anything?—S Steele would not wait. Kelly said, “Hare is wounded, and one of the outlaws is gone,” and was going on, but Steele ran up to the tree, and would not wait; and I said to him, “Do not go up there, you will be shot by men between.” I meant he would spoil the shooting at the men in the passage, and he went to the tree.

Did Steele place his men?—No did not.

Did Kelly attempt to give instructions to Steele’s men?—He did to two of the men—he took two of them.

For the purpose of placing them?—Yes.

How many men had Steele?—Five, I think.

He never attempted to place the men at all, but ran up to this tree?—No.

Did you see Mr. Sadleir when he arrived?—No.

When was the first time you saw him?—About half an hour after Ned Kelly was taken.

Where was that?—He came over to the tree I was standing near, about sixty yards from the hotel, on the Wangaratta end—[indicating on plan].

What time did you see Mr. Sadleir?—About half an hour after Kelly was taken.

You were then at the same tree?—Yes.

Who was with him then?—No one was with him that I can remember.

When did you see Mr. O’Connor?—Shortly after that again, it might have been ten minutes.

He was with Mr. Sadleir, towards the hotel; between the railway fence and the hotel.

Were they behind the tree?—No, they were standing talking.

Had they any shelter?—I think Mr. Sadleir was standing with his back against the tree, and Mr. O’Connor standing in front of it.

Did you see Mr. Sadleir any other time during the day?—Yes, several times after that.

Where was he?—At different places on the ground.

Was he going round?—Yes, I was with him when they were firing at the house, when Johnson set fire to it.

Did you see Mr. O’Connor any further during the day?—Yes, I saw him several times with Mr. Sadleir, at different parts of the ground.

Was there any firing after one o’clock from the hotel?—I think, at half-past two they were shooting out of the front, down towards the people on the railway station.

Are you sure that the shots were fired from the hotel, and did not come from the police outside?—You could tell when within thirty or forty yards, by the difference in the sound. The sound of those outside would be sharper, those inside would be dull.

Would the sound from inside appear to be from ordinary guns or rifles, or was it the sound from being fired inside the house?—Yes; it sounded deadened. It was different from any shot outside, from within twenty or thirty yards you could tell.

Are you sure there were no shots fired as late as that?—Yes; I would take it to be half past two. I would not swear to the time exactly.

You say you were there when the house was fired?—Yes.

Did you see the dead bodies after the burning?—Yes.

Where were they?—Lying in the small bedroom in the back.

Which end?—On the Benalla end of the building.

Were they both together?—Yes, about two feet apart.

In the same room?—Yes.

Did you receive any instructions during the day other than those you received early in the morning?—The only instruction I received was to come round and fire into the end of the house just before they burnt it.

That was all the instructions you received during the day?—Except when Senior-Constable Kelly asked me to come round with him.

Did you see Constable Dwyer going round?—Yes.

What was he doing?—I saw him with a bottle of brandy or something in his hand.

Did you hear him giving any orders he had received from anybody?—No.

Did he give you any?—No, he never came where I was.

What weapon had he in his hand?—He had a bottle.

What had you?—A Martini carbine rifle.

Did you fall short of ammunition during the day?—Yes, I think there were four carbines there and one long Martini-Henry; Gascoigne had a long Martini-Henry rifle.

Do you remember seeing Ned Kelly’s helmet taken off?—It fell off.

Are you quite sure of that?—When I got there it was off, and no one had had time to take it.
11263. You were not present when he fell?—They had not time hardly to take anything off him—not the helmet.

11264. Was his head towards the station house?—Yes.

11265. And you swear that now—there is a great conflict of evidence about that?—He was going in this direction. Say there is the hotel—[explaining the same]—he fell over a log. It would not be towards the station or the hotel, but in a line between them. He rolled over. They struggled when they came up; they tried to get up, and got half in a sitting position, and rolled over on his back.

11266. Did you see the revolver taken from him?—No. Guard Dowsett, Senior-Constable Kelly, Sergeant Steele, and Constable Bracken, had hold of him at different places. We had made a rush to him the same time.

11267. Were Steele, Dowsett, Senior-Constable Kelly, and Bracken in and about the person of Ned Kelly before you were close to him?—No, I was not five yards off.

11268. Were they closer than you?—Yes.

11269. They would have a better opportunity of knowing the position than you?—No, they would not have time to shift him.

11270. Would either of those four be in a better position to say whether the helmet fell off or whether it was taken off?—Yes, they would.

11271. You are satisfied his head was towards the station?—I am, and then when I saw the lot on him, they had him safe enough, and no one to look at the house, as he had called out to the others to come out, “Come on boys, we have got them.” I left immediately to watch the house from the tree in case the others came out and fired on to the police.

11272. You did not see anybody taking the revolver from him?—No, I cannot say who took it. One had hold of his arm, and one his beard, and another his arm.

11273. Who had hold of his beard?—Senior-Constable Kelly and Bracken was standing over him.

11274. Might you be mistaken on that?—No.

11275. If anybody swore that Steele had him by the beard, would it be true?—The lot of them might have got hold of him at different times.

11276. The upshot is that you had not the same opportunity of observing the first struggle as others?—I had, except Kelly, Steele, and Dowsett.

11277. Did you see Bracken stand over and threaten to shoot anyone?—I heard him say, “Do not shoot him; he never did rise any harm. I am going to take his part.”

11278. Whom did he say that to?—Apparently to the lot.

11279. Was anyone going to shoot him?—I never saw it. Of course they had a revolver of his in their hands.

11280. Would anyone have had time to have said, “I swore I will be in at your death, and I will shoot you now”?—Yes, I heard Steele say that.

11281. Did he make any movement to draw his revolver?—If I mistake not he had his revolver out. I am not sure about that. There were two or three revolvers out. I heard him make the remark, “I said I would be in at your death.”

11282. Was it after that that Bracken said not to shoot him?—Yes.

11283. What did Constable Bracken say—the exact words—do you remember?—Ned Kelly said, “For God’s sake do not shoot me”; and Bracken said, “I will look out for you, old man”—no, I could not be certain what the words were; but one stood over him in this position—[indicating by gesture]. I know he said something about taking his part.

The witness withdrew.

William Phillips sworn and examined.

11284. By the Commission.—Were you in the North-Eastern district during the time of the Kelly outbreak?—Yes.

11285. What time did you go there?—12th June 1879.

11286. What are you?—Mounted trooper.

11287. Were you in any of the search parties?—No.

11288. Where were you stationed?—At Benalla.

11289. You remained at Benalla?—Yes.

11290. You were never out with any of the parties?—No, not one.

11291. You remember the time the Kellys were in Mrs. Jones’s?—Yes.

11292. Were you there then?—Yes.

11293. What time did you come in the morning?—Three o’clock.

11294. Then you arrived there with Mr. Hare?—Yes.
11295. Did you go out with Mr. Hare when the train arrived?—Yes.
11296. Were you with him at the time he was shot?—Yes.
11297. How far from him?—Between five and ten yards to his left.
11298. You were more in front?—No, he was opposite the fence of the house and I was to the left.

Barry and Gascoigne were there alongside of me.

11299. Are you the constable that said at the barracks that you had not captured the Kellys because they had not come into the barracks yet?—Mr. Hare asked me, “how have you not caught them?” and I said, “They have not come into the camp yet.”

11300. What did you mean?—I meant—he said, “What have you done since you have been up?” and I said, “I have not done anything, except practise shooting.”

11301. You were at the barracks the whole time?—Yes.
11302. Was that what you meant?—Yes.
11303. Did you hear Mr. Hare say he was shot?—Yes, he said, “Good gracious, I am shot,” and I thought he was larking.

11304. Did you see his hand fall?—No, the moment I heard bullets passing I fired, and he was there, shooting with his wound, right opposite the verandah.

11305. Did he continue firing at all?—Yes, I think it was he fired the first shot.
11306. After the first two shots from his gun did you see him load again?—No, but I saw him there shooting—I know he was there shooting.

11307. Did you remain all day on the Benalla side?—No. At four o’clock Neil McHugh came out of the hotel, carrying Mrs. Jones’s boy on his back. Constable Gascoigne was alongside of me. We said to one another quietly, “If this man does not come our way, we will not speak to him.” We were right across and could see right across the verandah, and the man proceeded down and went over the bridge under the road, and I said, “Paddy, perhaps it is two of them getting away,” That was to Gascoigne.

11308. Which door of the hotel did he come from?—From the back.
11309. Did he come round by the wicket fence?—He walked straight down.
11310. When he came from the hotel what road did he take to reach the station—did he get over the fence?—He did not go to the station, he went through the railway gate.
11311. Then he must have passed in front of the hotel to get to the railway gate?—Yes, and I said, “Gascoigne, perhaps it is two of them clearing out, come on and stop them;” and we ran down to the gate and he would not stop, and one of us threatened to shoot him, and then he came back, and between us he told us they had armour and there were thirty or forty in the house, and I said, “Who is inside?” and he said, “Three, I think, there is one or two of them wounded,” and he said, “Look out in the morning, they will shoot you all out at daylight.”
11312. Did he tell you he put the armour on them?—No, he said some red-whiskered man did, I forget his name.

11313. What weapon had you?—A Martini-Henry rifle.
11314. Did you shoot often?—I fired one shot straight at the figure that was in front of the house and then got behind a tree just opposite the verandah. There was a bush fire the other side of the house, and I could see three figures plainly, and I fired about four shots at them during the encounter, and I was surprised that none fell at about forty yards distance, so I fired a couple of shots low, and they walked off at once inside, and the figure that came out the second time fired about six shots, and Gascoigne said, “That is Ned Kelly, I know his voice.”

11315. Do you know whether he went into the house then?—The way he went then, in my opinion, was round the Wangaratta end and round the back yard.
11316. Did you see him after?—I saw him at seven o’clock in the morning.
11317. Where were you then?—I was at the tree at the rear of the hotel. After I challenged McHugh I went round, and I thought Mr. Hare had not gone. I wanted to tell him about the armour, and I did not find him, and I went and told Kelly. He said, “My God they have all got away.” I said, “Never fear, they are in the house;” and I said, “I stopped a man who told me all about the armour that came out of the hotel,” and Senior-Constable Kelly stationed me at a tree here—[explaining the same]. He showed me the spot where he had found the rifle. I stopped there from about a quarter to four to six, and then I challenged the Wangaratta police.

11318. Did you see Mrs. Reardon come out of the house?—Yes, I had my back to the house, and was watching the spot where Senior-Constable Kelly picked up the rifle.
11319. Did you see Mrs. Reardon coming from the hotel?—The first thing I heard was Steele challenging somebody and firing, and then I heard a woman screaming; and with that there were from the front of the house several shots came up.
11320. Did you bear Arthur say anything?—He said, “Do not shoot—that is an innocent woman,” or “that is a woman and children”—something to that effect.
11321. Was there any difficulty in yourself, Arthur, or Steele knowing that it was a female?—Not the slightest.

11322. Before be fired you could see distinctly it was a woman and children?—Yes, it was bright moonlight.

11323. Was there any one else?—Two or three children, and I thought three or four women.

11324. Did Steele shoot immediately he challenged them?

11325. Did you hear him say anything?—First, I asked him what he was shooting at, and lie said, “By Christ! I have shot old Mother Jones in the——;” and I said, “It is a feather in your cap.”

11326. Did you see what happened after what did the woman do?—She was singing out, and went away out of the place. Steele was at some of the trees there, and she walked down. The fence was between her and Steele, and that was what saved her no doubt. After he fired there was loud talking going on, and screaming, and I do not know who took her away.

11327. She was taken away at all events?—Yes, and did not go back to the house.

11328. Did you see any other figure besides her?—No, only the boy.

11329. Where was he?—He was following her, and all at once I saw him run back to the house.

11330. Did you see that he had hold of a child?—No, I could not swear that.

11331. Did you hear any one challenge the boy?—Sergeant Steele was the only one who challenged them.

11332. Did you see the boy shot at?—I do not know of it. I asked him what he was shooting at.

11333. Did you see whether the boy was shot or not?—No, I did not know he was shot.

11334. Did you see whether the boy was crawling?—Walking.

11335. You could not say whether he had any one by the hand?—No, 11336. Or his hand up?—No.

11337. Did you see any man after the boy?—I saw a man at the back door, that is all. He walked out and walked in again. I did not see anything further.

11338. You got placed you say by Senior Constable Kelly?—Yes.

11339. What time was that?—About four o’clock.

11340. Did you receive any orders from any one else during the forenoon?—None except from I Hare before he left.

11341. What did he say?—When I was with him on the pilot engine he said, “Do not fire, boys, unless you are fired on, and if anybody fall do not mind him, do not wait to pick him up.”

11342. Did be give any instructions after he was shot?—Yes, he said, “Cease firing, the women are screaming. Kelly, for God’s sake, take the men and go and surround the place.”

11343. Did he say Kelly or O’Connor?—He said Kelly first, and then O’Connor.

11344. What did you do then?—I was stationed; where I was I had a good position, and the others went round the house.

11345. Did you see Mr. O’Connor going round to surround the house?—No, I never saw him.

11346. When did you first see him?—Some time in the day; eleven or twelve o’clock.

11347. Did you know where he was?—Yes, I knew he was in the drain.

11348. How did you know?—Kirkham told me early in the morning. I said to Kirkham, “How did you not challenge those men who passed down?” I said, “It might be two of the outlaws.” He said first, “Phillips, where are you?” And I said, “Where were you when that man passed?” And I said, “The whole mob might pass for all you might know.” I left there then, and I said, “Where is Mr. Connor?” And he said, “Oh, he is up above the bridge in the drain.”

11349. Did he appear to be making fun of Mr. O’Connor as to his position?—No.

11350. What was your opinion; was he in a safe position?—He was safe, no doubt.

11351. Did you think he could do good service where he was?—I did not think so. I did not think he could shoot anybody that came out of the house.

11352. He could not be shot out of the house?—Oh! no.

11353. McHugh must have passed round from the back to the front to reach you?—I had to run from my post to stop him.

11354. Had he to pass round to the front and between the trench and the hotel before you challenged him?—Yes.

11355. Then any one stationed in the trench could have seen McHugh pass before you saw him?—Yes.

11356. Passed through to the gate?—He had passed over the bridge and out on the railway when I challenged him.

11357. If any one was stationed in that drain and had the command of the hotel they ought to have challenged him long before you did?—Yes, they ought.

11358. Had you been in the position the black trackers were, would not it be your duty to challenge that man coming down towards you?—Yes.

11359. And you came from your post to see that man did not get away?—Yes.
11360. When did you first go up to the north-eastern district?—About the 12th June 1879.
11361. Who was in charge then?—Mr. Hare.
11362. Were you stationed at the depot?—Yes.
11363. Do you recollect the first party of men that were ordered from the depot on the 12th December of the previous year?—No, I was not amongst them.

11364. Do you know who could give us information who those men were who were ordered up then?—When they were delayed there?
11365. Yes?—I do not know the men’s names, but I know the occurrence.
11366. From your own knowledge or hearsay?—From hearsay.
11367. The man who could give the information is dead—could any one else give the information?—No.
11368. Do you recollect there being a report that men were delayed at the depot after being ordered up to the north-eastern district?—I do.

11369. Can you tell who can give information on that point?—I never talked to any one except Sergeant Porter on it. He is the only man who could give the information.

11370. Is he dead?—Yes. He told me he sent the men away as they had been delayed there, I forget how many hours, contrary to Mr. Nicolson’s orders.

11371. Who ordered them away first?—I think the Chief Commissioner.
11372. You were all day at Glenrowan?—When I saw Mr. Sadleir it was about half-past eight or nine and I went to him. He was down by the railway fence, and I asked him what he was going to do, that the men had armour; and he said he had heard that, but he had sent for a cannon to Melbourne.

11373. Did he say that he had been advised to send for it?—No, he did not; he said to me, “You get on a horse and ride down to Benalla, and take another telegram,” and the engine was going down, and I went with it and came back at twelve.

11374. What position did you take up when you went back?—Anywhere; there was nothing to be done when I went back. I went back to the back of the hotel, where I was among my mates.
11375. You went to the back of the hotel to your old position, at the Wangaratta end?—Yes.
11376. Did you remain there all day?—Yes, until we were told off to fire into the front of the house, when it was set fire to.

11377. Were there any shots fired out of the hotel after the time you came back—did you see any?—No, I never saw any.

11378. Could they be fired out towards the front without your seeing them?—Yes.
11379. Or could they be fired out of either side without your seeing?—I could hear the report.

11380. Could you be sure it would be a gun fired there, or somewhere near the house?—Yes, I was near.

11381. Your opinion is there were no shots fired out of the house after twelve?—No.
11382. If any others have sworn that they saw, about half-past one or two, two men come out in the small passage of the house and fire, would that be correct?—I do not think it.
11383. From the position you were in you could judge?—Yes, I could see any part of the back of the building.

11384. You say you went to Benalla and were kept in barracks?—Yes.
11385. Did you wish to go out yourself?—I would like to go out in five or six of a party.

11386. When they were going out?—There was never a party out. When I went first, there was one party went out, and none afterwards.
11387. Were you kept in contrary to your own inclinations?—We were.
11388. How many?—All the men were desirous of going out to catch them, to do the best they could.

11389. Do you know the reason why you were kept in?—No.
11390. Did you ever think of any reason?—No.
11391. Was there ever any reason assigned why you were not allowed to go out?—Well, I cannot say there was.

11392. Were you told off for special duty in the barracks?—I was guarding the banks in the town of Benalla; there were two of us doing that.
11393. What time did you see the figure of Ned Kelly?—Shortly after seven.

11399. How many others were close to him?—Kelly and Steele were the first.

11400. Before you arrived?—I was about the fourth or fifth; I was there when Bracken and Dwyer and Montiford came up.

11401. Did you see Dowsett?—Yes.

11402. Did you see any members of the police attempting to make their escape from Kelly?—Arthur was about ten yards from me, and Healey between me and Arthur at this particular time; and after I had fired two shots I said, “Run round him, boys; that is the only show we have with him”; and Arthur and Montiford ran round. Ned Kelly stopped then and took a look round when he heard that, and went and sat down behind the stump, and sat there for seven minutes.

11403. Did you or any other member of the police make a movement at that time that would indicate that you were trying to escape from the outlaw?—No.

11404. And the movements made by the police were for the purpose of getting into better position?—Yes; we were all like this round the hotel at first—[describing the same]. Ned Kelly did not go individually towards Steele at all, but towards the house.

11405. Then it would not be the fact for any one member of the police to say that if it had not been for his individual efforts Kelly would have been able to make his retreat to the hotel?—No.

11406. It would not be right to say that any one was showing the white feather, and trying to escape?—No; I am convinced of that. Of course when Kelly and Dowsett were behind the tree he was walking right up to them; if they stopped there he would put a hole through their heads.

11407. Did you see him when he fell?—Yes; I was right up with him.

11408. Did Steele or anybody shoot before he fell?—That I cannot say. I had my eyes on Ned Kelly, and I rail down after him, and ran full butt against a stump, where he crossed this gutter. Whether Ned fell I cannot say.

11409. Did you receive any orders direct from Mr. Sadleir after that all the day?—Yes, he sent me to Benalla.

11410. Did any member of the police come to you stating he had been instructed by Mr. Sadleir to do certain things?—No.

11411. In point of fact you received no orders but those from Mr. Hare and Constable Kelly?—Yes.

11412. As far as you are concerned no officer gave you any other order?—No; of course Mr. Sadleir sent me to Benalla with the telegram.

11413. What time in the morning was it?—Between eight and nine.

11414. Did you hear Ned Kelly call out, “Look out you will snag yourself”?—No, I did not. I was the closest to him there.

11415. Did you hear any member of the police volunteer to rush the hotel?—Yes, Montiford, and Dwyer, and all of them. I said to Mr. Sadleir to put Dwyer in the armour; he is the biggest man, and let him walk in.

11416. Did you hear Dwyer volunteer to go in that way?—No.

11417. Was that the only reason that they recommended it in consequence of his strength?—Yes, to carry it in.

11418. You were not under the impression that he could see bullets specially?—That I did not know of.

11419. Was it told you any time that Dwyer had a faculty for seeing bullets and jumping over them?—No.

11420. Did you see him skipping?—Yes, he was skipping all about the place.

11421. What reply did Mr. Sadleir make?—He said, “I am not going to lose any lives over them, they are not worth it.”

11422. Is Dwyer considered in the police, amongst his comrades, as a little eccentric?—He is considered eccentric.

11423. Is he considered a courageous man?—He is. I wish to state that Sergeant Steele has sworn on oath that he was there at three minutes past five; when I read that I did not think he would swear that; I said if he did he would get into trouble. Superintendent Sadleir’s report, dated 1st June, is wrong about the time of his arrival there—there is no doubt they have a motive in it.

11424. Where is the mistake of Steele, first?—I asked Mr. Lang, the station-master at Wangaratta, what time the special train left there in the morning, and he said, “I can tell you by looking at the book.” The time was 5.20 a.m. that it left Wangaratta. It would take them half-an-hour, so the engine-driver told me, to go down; and Mr. Sadleir says in his report of the 1st June that, after finding Mr. O’Connor, he made himself assured that the hotel was surrounded by the police, and in that he was greatly assisted by Constable Dwyer. It will be plainly seen Mr. Sadleir could never have been on the ground till six o’clock, because Dwyer never left the Wangaratta station till twenty minutes past five, and he was there on the ground to see Mr. Sadleir, and the latter and party left the railway station, Benalla, at 5.30 am. Neither parties were on the ground before six o’clock, the returns of the railway will prove it. The object is this: they found that Joe Byrne was shot dead between five and half-past, and they wanted to lie there to take the credit out of that party that were there, and that wounded Ned Kelly and killed Byrne, and kept the other men in the house.

11425. Your contention is that Byrne must have been shot before Sergeant Steele or Mr. Sadleir arrived on the ground, or their men?—Yes, I have stated that in my claim, and I have stated I could bring witnesses to prove it too.

11426. What proof have you that Byrne was shot before six in the morning?—I have got the man he fell on top of.

405

11427. What is his name?—John Delany, of Greta; and also Sandercook, of Glenrowan.
11428. What is Sandercook?—He is a platelayer or something.
11429. Engaged on the railway?—Yes, working about there. There is plenty of evidence to prove that.
11430. Have you anything else you desire to tell the Commission?—I only wish that you will satisfy yourselves about the time that those two trains left the two stations; there is nothing else.
11431. How will the train-book tell that when it did not come up to the station?—It was twenty minutes after five when he left the Wangaratta station, and they swore they were on the ground at three minutes past five. I told them then, but they would not listen to me, and of course I told them what their object was.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next, at Eleven o’clock.

TUESDAY, 14TH JUNE 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. LONGMORE, M.L.A., in the Chair;

Stanhope O’Connor further examined.

11432. By the C Commission desire to know the position you held under the Queensland Government before you came here?—I joined as a sub-inspector of the native police of Queensland on the 1st January 1873; my salary was, before I came here, £180 fixed pay. I emphasize that because the fixed pay is the only pay that is counted in Queensland for our retiring allowance—it is different to this service altogether. The fixed pay of all the officers in Queensland is very low, and the allowance is very high. My travelling allowance as a sub-inspector was £25 a year, and ration allowance £100 a year, with free quarters and a servant or an orderly allowed.

11433. Do you have the engagement of the servant?—He is one of our men.
11434. Are you supposed, as in the army and other services, to pay the orderly anything?—No, nothing. We do, but we are not supposed to do so.
11435. You joined as sub-inspector and remained as sub-inspector?—Up to the present time.
11436. You were never a sergeant?—No; I joined as an officer. After fifteen years, we can retire upon a medical certificate, upon half-pay.

11437. That is if your health is injured?—Yes. After twenty years’ service, we can retire upon two-thirds; twenty-five years, three-fourths; and after thirty years, upon full pay. All those are with a certificate; but if an officer is sixty years of age, has served fifteen years, he can retire without any certificate. The officers in the Queensland force are sub-inspectors, inspectors, travelling inspectors, and commissioner.

11438. Is sub-inspector the title of the lowest officer?—Yes, the lowest commissioned officer.
11439. Is there promotion from the ranks?—Promotion in the white police can be from the ranks.
11440. Is that provided by the regulations?—Yes; but a great many officers, all the native police officers, are appointed independent of the police altogether. An officer, upon being appointed sub-inspector of native police, is sent to the senior officer of native police, and there he remains for six months, generally, and if he is found to be adapted for the service, he is given a detachment. If not, very often they are drafted into the white police as officers. Any native police officer is eligible to be transferred to the white police, and I might say nearly all the inspectors are native police officers, because our duties consist of both white police and native police duties. I may state that, a few months ago, when I was in Queensland, I saw the Acting Commissioner, who informed me that, if I remained in the service, I would be due for my inspectorship in a very short time, that I was on the top of the list.

11441. Would that be inspectorship in the black police or the other?—An inspector in the Queensland police is over both branches. He is equal to the rank of superintendent here.
11442. But does he change as he gets promotion from one to the other?—He goes to head-quarters, and is in charge at head-quarters of all the native police in that district and all the white police.
11443. You had an opportunity of still joining that again after your connection with this force?—Yes.
11444. You came here at the request of the Victorian Government originally?—Yes; I was doing duty in Cooktown at the time. I had been sent for. Two men had been murdered, and I came down 120 miles, and just after returning from this duty a telegram was handed me from the Commissioner of Police, Brisbane.
11445. There was no promise at any period given to fix you in the same relative position here that you had occupied in the force in Queensland at the time, or subsequent to your engagement?—I understood from Captain Standish I was an officer here.

11446. You had no authority in writing?—No; none. This telegram from the Queensland Commissioner of Police stated that the Government of Victoria required a detachment of native police, with an officer who was capable of commanding them, and that he had chosen me for the duty, and wished to know if I was agreeable to go. I received it about 4 o’clock in the afternoon, and I accepted it before 5, and sent an answer. The telegram I have not got, because it came to the inspector of the district and was only submitted to me to peruse. I had to wait a day for the boat to leave, when I proceeded to Brisbane and Sydney; thence by train to Albury. There I met Captain Standish and placed myself under his command.

11447. Before you left did you ascertain exactly what your pay would be?—No; I understood I was to get double pay.

11448. Did you understand that?—Yes, double pay; I was informed that by the Commissioner of Police in Brisbane.

11449. Did he tell you he had written a letter to that effect?—Yes, and he showed me a lot of correspondence.

11450. Did he say double pay?—He said—"You will get double your fixed pay, and the allowances due to an officer of your rank in Victoria."

11451. Did you get the double pay?—Yes.

11452. An allowance of 12s. a day?—Yes, 12s. one month, and 12s. 6d. another.

11453. Did you get an orderly?—No, I had one of my own men.

11454. Was there any provision made for the statement that you then were on leave from the colony, or any memo. made of the position you still held—was it understood that in the event of any vacancies occurring your promotion should go on in your absence?—Certainly; I was down on the roll of officers as if I was doing duty in Queensland.

11455. So that if any vacancy occurred by death, or otherwise, your absence would not prevent you getting promotion?—No.

11456. And you left the Queensland force voluntarily?—Well, hardly that. When I proceeded to Brisbane, after the Kelly Glenrowan affair, I took everything over with me.

11457. Did you proceed to Brisbane by orders?—I did.

11458. You stated you were about proceeding to Brisbane on a letter of recall—have you that letter?—It was upon a telegram.

11459. Have you that telegram?—I think it is there. No; I believe it was not a telegram. I believe it was a telegram from my Government stating that Captain Standish had received orders to at once allow us to return.

11460. “Brisbane. To Inspector O’Connor. Leave will be granted to return if required. June 15th 1880”?—Yes, that was in reference to an application of mine, I believe.—[The telegram was shown to the witness.]

11461. There is the 14th before—"You will receive instructions from Captain Standish, who has been requested to send you back as soon as convenient. The leave you ask cannot be granted, you must accompany boys"?—That telegram was in reply to a semi-official note of mine to the Commissioner in Queensland. I stated about the way this boy had been taken from me, and that I considered the Chief Commissioner here was simply making a cat’s paw of us—would keep us until he got the other men over, and then give us the kick-out. I explained that to Mr. Seymour, the Commissioner of Police, and that telegram came.

11462. That implies you asked for leave of absence?—On the 14th, that was a reply to my letter. I then sent another telegram.

11463. Mr. O’Connor to Commissioner of Police, Brisbane, 14th June—”Of course will accompany, troopers, but request leave such time as required to arrange affairs. Will pay for boys myself during leave”?—Yes, this is the reply—"You must return with troopers without delay on receiving instructions from Captain Standish. Leave will be granted you to return if required.”

11465. King being away, if the Queensland trackers were ordered back, unless you went with them would keep us until he got the other men over, and then give us the kick-out. I explained that to Mr. Seymour, the Commissioner of Police, and that telegram came.

11466. In your letter dated 7th September 1880, you say, speaking of Captain Standish—“He made a series of communications to the Queensland Government, tending to depreciate me and to remove the men from my control and supervision. This was done without my knowledge, and, consequently, I had no opportunity of explaining to my Commissioner.’ Captain Standish’s communications were these, and I may state that I applied for them to the Queensland Government, whom I am representing officially now, and they evidently misunderstood, and sent me the wrong letters, not the ones I asked for; so, if the Commission wish for them, it will be fully a fortnight before I can get them.” have you those letters now?—No, I have not.

11467. Have you applied for those?—I have.

11469. Have you got a copy of the letter you wrote applying for those communications that you think were sent unfairly by Captain Standish?—I wired sometime in August, and the reply was a private letter from Mr. Barron, the Acting Commissioner, dated 6th August 1880, stating that he had not succeeded in obtaining them.

11470. What was the nature of Mr. Ramsay's communication?—A letter from Mr. Ramsay to the Government, stating my services here and what he thought of them. Then I sent another telegram stating that was not what I wanted, and received a reply dated January 11th 1881, stating the necessary papers had been posted on that day. Those were not the papers that I wanted, and I then sent another application for them, dated March 17th 1881. Then he sent me an answer to that—"Copy of papers required posted this evening," that is March 18th, the next day.

11471. Have you received those?—I received papers—not the ones that I wanted, and I sent another telegram which I cannot find a copy of—it was when the Commission a short time ago referred me to the fact; I have not got those papers. I then sent at once a very strong telegram requesting the papers and mentioning the ones I wanted, and I have never received an answer to that. Mr. Barron, the Acting Commissioner, has got into a trouble over there, and I do not know what to do; I have not been able to get any reply.

11472. Have you written any letters since the 30th of March last?—No.

11473. What we require bears on a portion of your complaint which you state is borne out by this telegram that the correspondence had not been supplied, but on the 30th you stated you had received that—it will be fully a fortnight before you can receive those?—I then went on and said the copies will be in the office that will answer the same purpose, but now it is found they are not. All I can say is I have not got it, and that was what the Commissioner of Police told me at Brisbane.

11474. Can you inform the Commission of the date of the first order directing your return to Queensland?—The first positive order to return, I believe, I got from Captain Standish through Mr. Hare—it was a memo.

11475. That is the one you mentioned in your evidence?—Yes, I believe that was the first positive order I received.

11476. What was the date of that?—About the 24th of June 1880—I think I came down on the 25th, the next day.

11477. Have you any idea what representations led to that order being sent?—I can only tell what the Commissioner in Brisbane told me in Brisbane, and what he told me here again on his way to England.

11478. On the 3rd of May came this telegram to the Commissioner of Police, Queensland—"Re Mr. Palmer's telegram to our Chief Secretary desiring return of native police to Queensland, would you object to two of them being discharged if they consent to join our police? Moses was in our employ, but joined Queensland police on death of Sambo. It would be a great convenience to us to have two left. 3rd May 1880, from Captain Standish to the Commissioner of Police, Queensland." On the 19th May this letter is written to Mr. Nicolson by Captain Standish—"Memo. As Mr. Nicolson is aware, the Queensland Government not only refuse the black trackers to be employed save under the supervision of their officer, but have intimated to the Honorale the Chief Secretary their desire that they should be sent back to Brisbane as soon as possible. On receipt of this intimation I telegraphed to the Commissioner of Police at Brisbane to ask him if he had any objection to Moses and one of the other trackers being left behind with the view of their being permanently attached to our force. I attach copy of Mr. Seymour's reply. Mr. Nicolson will therefore be good enough to see Moses, and ask him if he is willing to join our police. I have obtained the authority of the Government to engage the services of four other trackers, and I am on the look-out for them both here and in N. S. Wales. Their pay will be 5s. a day, which will be handed to the officer in charge of the station where they stay, who will provide with food, clothing, and necessaries, giving them the balance of their pay in small amounts from time to time. I shall be glad to receive an early reply"?—It was that letter that I considered put the finishing touch upon the discourtesy I had received up to that time.

11479. Was not your return ordered before that telegram was sent?—No, not to my knowledge.

11480. What we want is this, some communications that you lay considerable stress upon, that Captain Standish has acted unfairly by you?—Yes I consider that letter does it.

11481. That letter appears to me to have emanated from the Queensland Government?—No.

11482. Prior to that there must have been some decision by the Queensland Government to withdraw the trackers previous to that; there must be some correspondence on that?—What my Commissioner told me was that Captain Standish had repeatedly tried to get the services of my men, and dispense with me. That was the cause of it, and I kept on writing to my Commissioner that I did not think we had any justice shown us; and I suppose the Queensland Government, before this letter was written, ordered our return through the Commissioner, which never reached me. Then they wrote and asked for the men with out consulting me or anything else, and then eventually sent that letter to Mr. Nicolson; and I consider, in a disciplined force, that is a most disgraceful course to adopt, actually to go behind me and induce one of my men to leave, and my Government thought so also. There is some mystery connected with it.

11483. There is, because we are left in this position, that prior to that there must have been some communication with the Queensland Government?—Certainly, I admit that.

11484. We are left in this position of doubt, whether that communication came from you or any one else?—I have told you I did write to my Commissioner.

11485. Have you a copy of that?—No. I have been moving about so much since I came here that, upon my word, I cannot find half my papers. The purport of the letter was that I was complaining that Captain Standish, as far as I could see, was jealous of us so far, and would not let us go out if we got anything good. That was my communication.

11486. Independent of other considerations, there are those matters you complain of in this letter; in your evidence you stated that Captain Standish and yourself were on the best of terms for a very long time?—No, privately.

11487. I thought you said officially also?—For the first two months we were privately and officially, but after that we were not privately.

11488. You complained in one case, I think, during the two months?—No, I did not complain till the end of the two months; that was the first symptom I considered of his showing me discourtesy.

11489. You ought to write to the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police in Queensland, or to the clerk in charge of the papers, and ask him if copies of all the correspondence that has been forwarded from Victoria by Captain Standish have been sent?—I have done that; I have wired.

11490. But in the position in which you are placed, I think you ought to go into the reasons, and by letter?—It would take such a long time.

11491. In fairness to the Commission, you ought to give us every opportunity of judging between the parties?—I have wired three or four times.

11492. There was plenty of time to write?—When the Commission spoke of it before, I said that “The copies must he in this office, and there is no use sending.”

11493. You told us just now that you had sent a long telegram since the 30th March?—Yes.

11494. But there had been some difficulties with the then Commissioner of Police. I think you ought still to write?—Certainly, I will write.

11495. You took a note in your diary of the dates, I suppose?—I could only generally, because I never saw any of this correspondence; that is what I complain of. I was told by my Commissioner of Police about it. I do not know what dates they are.

11496. Was it at your suggestion, as to the expediency of recalling your men, that this letter was sent from Queensland?—Certainly.

11497. Was that by letter or telegram?—By letter.

11498. What date, about?—Sometime in the beginning of May or the last week in April.

11499. Have you a copy of the letter you wrote to the Queensland Government?—I have looked everywhere for my letters and cannot find them. I never thought it would be of any use at any time, through moving about at Brisbane and Sydney.

11500. A copy of that letter will be in the possession of the Queensland Government, tho first letter you wrote asking them for your withdrawal?—No. I have made a mistake. I remember now that my communication to my Government, requesting our immediate withdrawal, was immediately after the boy Moses was taken from my command.

11501. Will you now make a note and ask the Queensland Government to furnish you with a copy of that letter you wrote, and all other letters written by yourself in reference to the withdrawal of yourself and the black trackers from this colony?—[The witness made a note of the same.]

11502. Were you under orders then from your Government, at the time of that letter of Captain Standish’s to Mr. Nicolson, to take your men back?—No.

11503. Because up to that time you were, by instruction of your Government, absolutely under the control of Captain Standish?—Yes.

11504. You complained just now of the black tracker Moses being taken away from you without your being consulted?—Yes.

11505. He was no part of the body of men you originally started with?—Yes, he was.

11506. From Queensland?—No, but he was one of my detachment when my boy died. This man was a good-for-nothing fellow, and he came to me and said, “I am a Queensland boy, and I would like very much to go back to Queensland with you.” I said I would ask Captain Standish, and he said, “He is no good to us, and you had better take him if you like,” and I saw the boy and asked him if he would enlist, and I asked Captain Standish and wrote to my Government telling them what I was doing, and I enlisted the boy. The boy was then under me. I taught him everything I could of the work there; and when he got of some use Captain Standish tries to get not him only, but another of my men.

11507. Did you enlist him under the Queensland Government as a trooper?—Yes, and he was to go back with us to Queensland with the same pay as my men, that was the inducement.

11508. Was he selected merely for the temporary service of the Victorian Government?—Yes.
11509. He understood he was engaged on behalf of the Queensland Government and not Victorian?—Yes.

11510. If Captain Standish said in his writing to your Government Moses was in our employment, but joined the Queensland police on the death of Sambo, which would be correct, your statement or Captain Standish’s?—Both of them would be correct.

11511. Surely that answer does not look as if he was in the employment of the Government—it says a useless fellow?—They were all useless, the trackers they had here.

11512. Was he in the employment of the Victorian Government when you enlisted him?—I cannot say whether he was or not positively.

11513. You cannot say whether Captain Standish is right or wrong about that?—No; but no doubt if he says so it is true. I must point out that I am under great disadvantage here, a long way from Queensland, and my Commissioner of Police is at home in England on leave, and the Acting Commissioner is suspended, for I do not know what, and most of my letters were semi-official and private nature to my Commissioner.

11514. What specially now do you want to prove to the Commission in this respect—that you suffered personal loss?—No, I do not want to claim anything.

11515. What is the nature of your complaint, and what redress do you seek through the Commission?—No redress at all. I only want it to be plainly seen by the public and everybody else that Captain Standish, from the time he refused me to go out to the hut business, treated me, officially, most discourteously, up to the time of the Glenrowan business.

11516. To prove that you, as an official of the Queensland Government, were not recognized with that civility which your position deserved?—Yes, officially; and at the time I applied for this Commission I was in the Queensland police, a very different position from what I am now. If I had resigned at that time I would not have called for an enquiry at all, but I considered it damaged me in my own Government’s eyes.

11517. Was there any complaint made of your conduct as an officer of the Queensland Government officially, by a superior officer of the Victorian force?—No officer, to my knowledge, ever commented disparagingly upon me but Captain Standish, and I only knew that from my own Commissioner of Police. He said to me these words, “O’Connor, I could not make out what was the matter—Standish was writing to us wanting to take the men under his own command, and dispense with you—that was what we inferred from it, and we did not know what you had done.”

11518. As a matter of fact, did the Government of Queensland look upon you as in any way degraded by the representations made, or was your official position damaged in the slightest degree by the representations made?—When I arrived in Brisbane, after the Glenrowan affair, I was met by a constable who handed me a letter, which was a formal communication, calling upon me to explain my conduct at Glenrowan; that I had never been mentioned in the press, and that the officers had never mentioned my name, and therefore calling upon me to explain exactly what had happened. I considered this letter was damaging, and I wrote an account of Glenrowan there and then, and I sent in my resignation at the same time. Next morning, I called upon the Commissioner, and he said, “O’Connor, I am very sorry you have taken that step, you are riding the high horse, we never meant it like that. The Chief Secretary wished to find out from you the real facts of the case, in your opinion, of Glenrowan, and he caused me to write that letter. I request you will withdraw your resignation.” After a little conversation I withdrew it, and I wrote another report about Glenrowan, just dealing with my own self, and I think it was the next day the Governor sent for me, and the Chief Secretary and the Governor both had a long talk with me about the whole thing. Mr. Seymour told me about Captain Standish’s writing, and trying to get those men from under me, and when I told him about the boy being taken in the way he was, he was quite shocked he said he never thought for a moment, he said, any man an officer of police, would ever have thought of taking him from under my charge until he had finished with my service.

11519. Was it said in the presence of the Governor?—I do not think so.

11520. Assuming that impression may have existed at that particular time, the subsequent reports, congratulatory reports, which were forwarded by this Government, by the Chief Secretary and Governor, removed any sort of feeling which may have existed prior to that time?—I quite agree it would but I had left just as the latter came to Queensland.

11521. As a matter of fact the complaint, if there was any necessity existed for it at all, is, by your own admission, at once removed by those documents, received officially from the Victorian Government subsequently?—I do not blame anybody but Captain Standish, the Government never treated me wrongly.

11522. You have alluded to a report you gave to the Queensland Government about the Glenrowan affair; will you produce that official report?—I have not got it, but it is nearly the same statement that I gave here—there is nothing further in it that happened there. I will send for it.

11523. If we have the correspondence you referred to, shall we not be in a better position to judge as to the treatment you received at the hands of Captain Standish?—Yes.

11524. The Queensland Government must have those letters in their possession, written by Captain Standish to them?—Yes. May I point out you may not see what I mean in reference to taking these men over. As my Government stated at the moment, they never understood that Captain Standish intended to have taken these men from under my charge while we were actually doing duty in the colony. That is what I found fault with.

11525. You mean those men could have been left behind when you left with the troopers?—Yes, they could have been left in the Victorian service.

11526. Is that not in keeping with that letter of Captain Standish’s to Mr. Nicolson—he asked for two to remain?—He said he had communicated with the Queensland Government, and they had eventually allowed him to keep Moses; but Captain Standish was in an official position, and knew it was an improper thing to take this man from me while I was doing service here. If he had said, “You are dispensed with, and we wish to keep this boy,” there would have been no harm in it. He kept us as a catspaw, and tried to take the whole lot of my men from me, that is the discourtesy.

11527. Is that borne out by the letters?—Certainly; he is telling Mr. Nicolson to go over and take the boy over at once. Of course there were rumours months before that we were going.

11528. It is an arrangement to take two men simply, apparently?—No; that was what my Government meant; the letter came at 11 o’clock and he was taken over into the Victorian force by 12.

11529. This is the letter:—“Mr. Palmer’s telegram to our Chief Secretary, desiring return of native police to Queensland, would you object to two of them being discharged if they consent to join our police. Moses was in our employ, but joined Queensland police on death of Sambo. It would be a great convenience to us to have two left”?—There ought to be another telegram in reply to that; I saw it myself when it was sent up to me. It was this:—“You can take over or retain the services of Moses.”

11530. Is there anything inconsistent in that telegram with the position that Captain Standish held with the Queensland Government in asking them to allow it to be conceded to him?—No; that is right enough, though he might have done it through me.

11531. You say it was in consequence of Captain Standish trying to get trackers other than those you brought that you wrote to the Queensland Government?—No; I had been writing a series of letters complaining of the way I was being treated, but this letter put the finishing touch, in my opinion, and I wrote after this boy was taken over, complaining of what was done, and asking for our immediate withdrawal, as I thought a great act of discourtesy had been done, and my Government said it was with the understanding of our withdrawal that this boy was taken over.

11532. You say that Captain Standish continually attempted to get some of those trackers away from your control. Now this letter of his to Mr. Nicolson sets out that the black trackers are to be relieved, and he has telegraphed asking that some may remain in the colony, and the only one dealt with is Moses; so there is nothing in that letter to say that Captain Standish wished to take the trackers from your control during the time you had charge of them?—Yes.

11533. As a matter of fact, did he take Moses from your control there and then?—He did, and at the same time retaining us as you can see; and on the 24th he told us we could go, and he took Moses over on the 19th, the date of that letter, and would have kept us for the month if he could, until he got his own men over from Queensland. It is not this one act of discourtesy, but I complain of a series of acts of discourtesy.

11534. This is one of considerable importance?—Yes.

11535. I want to ask you this: I have read Question No. 1203 over, where you lay particular stress on Mr. Hare’s report of the Glenrowan affair; do you think there is any force in your objection to that portion of Mr. Hare’s statement, under date of the 20th July 1880, after listening to all the witnesses examined in the Glenrowan affair? I think that Mr. Hare’s statement is the most improper one; he admits that my evidence is correct; he does not give my statement—he just puts two lines in.

11536. Mr. Hare states, on his return after being shot, he saw you running up the drain?—I say that is wrong; I will not say anything further.

11537. Listening to the whole of the witnesses examined, do you consider Mr. Hare was not justified in making that statement that he saw you in the drain?—It is false, because I was not in the drain when Mr. Hare was there. We have got it in evidence, from the man Reardon, that I was not in the drain, but in another position.

11538. Mr. Hare does not say any particular drain; he simply says after he was shot you retired, and he saw you in the drain?—He states in his evidence-in-chief it was not a drain, it was only a depression in the ground. When I asked him he said he did not mean the drain—there was a depression in the ground—[indicating on the plan]. I admit Mr. Hare has got several men who swear to his statement, but still I say his statement is not correct; that is all I can say.

11539. I am dealing simply with his report; the only thing he says about you there is that, after he was shot, he saw you running up the drain?—Mr. Hare never saw me in the drain, because I never was in it when he was on the ground.

11540. You will understand that the Commission urgently desire you to apply for those documents that have been mentioned, and request you to apply forthwith?—I will do so.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow, at Eleven o’clock.

POLICE.
WEDNESDAY, 15TH JUNE 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A.,                G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.,                  G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.

S. O'Connor, continued, 15th June 1881.

C. C. Rawlins, 15th June 1881.

Stanhope O'Connor further examined.

11541. By the Commission.—Did you ask the Secretary to write to the Police Department, to Moors, the chief clerk, for telegrams?—Yes, and for all correspondence between the Chief Commissioner of Police here and the Chief Commissioner of Police in Queensland.

11542. Is this the reply to it?—Yes.—[The same was read as follows]:—“The attached are all I can trace bearing on the subject.—H. MOORS, 14.6.81.” “N 577, of January 1880, was a telegram to police, Brisbane, about the detachment of two troopers from Mr. O’Connor’s party, and keeping them at the depot. We asked if any objection to this; the arrangement would be advantageous.”

11543. That refers to the correspondence you have been asked to produce?—Yes.

The witness withdrew.

Charles C. Rawlins sworn and examined.

11544. By Mr. O’Connor.—You remember the special train arriving at Glenrowan with the police and yourself?—Yes. I wish to ask if I am to be cross-examined on the evidence I gave before the Reward Board, because there were certain corrections I made in that, and I have not yet seen the revised copy.

Mr. O’Connor.—I do not wish to deal with that evidence at all.

The Chairman.—There is certain evidence before the Commission as to what was done by Mr O’Connor, given by Mr. Hare, Captain Standish, and others, and Mr. O’Connor wishes to traverse that.

Mr. O’Connor.—I will not go out beyond what I have stated in my evidence.

The Chairman.—The evidence from the Reward Board is not before us at all.

Mr. O’Connor.—I will not deal with that at all.

11545. By Mr. O’Connor (to the witness).—When you got out of the special train what position did you take up on the platform?—I went off that—went away with Mr. Hare.

11546. But when you got out of the carriage?—I went up to Mr. Hare.

11547. And you proceeded where?—He said,” What shall we do?” and I pointed to Jones’s hotel, and said, “There is Jones’s, that is McDonald’s, that is the station-house. You come with me to the station-house I know the station-master; I will get the information where they crossed the line”; and he said, “All right, but you are not armed.”

11548. Did he give you any weapon?—Yes, a Webley revolver.

11549. Whose was it?—I do not know.

11550. Did you see where he got it from?—He took it out of his belt; it belonged to the police, I believe.

11551. Was it a weapon he was carrying?—I think so.

11552. You got some information at Stanistreet’s and returned to where?—We came back—ran back to the platform.

11553. What was done then?—They were getting out the horses when we got back.

11554. What did Mr. Hare do; did he come up and speak to me?—I did not notice; I was standing at the end of the platform, next the railway station.

11555. Did he give orders for the horses to be taken out?—He did before he went away. I understood when we went away that you were to see the horses were taken out.

11556. By the Commission.—How did you understand that?—Simply because Mr. Hare turned round when he came there and said, “The horses are being taken out”; and Mr. Hare walked down that way, and I saw him speaking to Mr. O’Connor. I did not hear any order given or anything else.

11557. By Mr. O’Connor.—In the act of taking out the horses, was it correct that Bracken ran down on the platform?—Yes, just after one truck was unloaded he came down, before there was a horse taken out. The first horse that was tried to be taken out stuck.

11558. What did Bracken say?—He spoke to me first when I was standing at the end next to the Glenrowan hotel, watching Jones’s.

11559. The Benalla end?—Yes, I was looking out for the Kellys to come out, because Mrs. Stanistreet told me they had just left there. I saw Bracken come out of the house, and jump the fence.

11560. By the Commission.—Do you remember the conversation you had with the station-master’s wife?—Yes.

11561. Tell us exactly?—I looked in and saw her sitting on the bed with all the clothes huddled round her. There was a light there, and she had the children with her. We tapped at the window, and Mr. Hare at the door, and she did not reply, and I tapped again at the window, and she said—"Who is there?" and Mr. Hare said—"We; the police." She was sobbing, and Mr. Hare said—"What is the matter?" and she said—"Oh, the Kellys, they have taken my husband away"—she said—"into the bush," and we said—"How long ago since they were here?" and she said—"Five minutes ago; they were to go"—and she pointed over to Jones’s, and said—"there at the back." I asked her just as I was coming away—"How many are there of them?" and she said—"Forty."

11562. Did she say they were taken to Jones’s hotel?—No, she pointed to the back of Jones’s from the bedroom where she was sitting on the bed, and Jones’s was there—[indicating by gesture].

11563. By Mr. O’Connor. —What happened after Bracken gave the alarm?—Mr. Hare said—"Let go the horses, and come on."

11564. Where was he standing when he said that?—He was standing about opposite the door where you went to take the tickets, between that and where you put Bracken against the wall. You caught Bracken by the arm, as far as I remember, and Mr. Hare came up and said—"What is up?" or "What is the matter?" and then Bracken told you and Mr. Hare together again what it was.

11565. Then what took place?—Mr. Hare said—"Come on, boys," or lads, and we went.

11566. Did you accompany Mr. Hare?—I did.

11567. Were you in the lead?—I was immediately behind Gascoigne, I think it was.

11568. In reference to Mr. Hare?—I was about three yards from him.

11569. By the Commission.—Who was first?—Mr. Hare.

11570. Who next?—I think Gascoigne or Kelly—we were all together, the three.

11571. By Mr. O’Connor.—Did you see myself?—I know you left the platform with us. I did not see you after we got past the first culvert.

11572. Will you explain which?—[The witness explained on the plan.]

11573. Will you explain where Mr. Hare was when the first volley was fired?—He was through the wicket gate.

11574. By the Commission.—How far from the hotel?—About sixteen paces from the nearest corner, next Benalla, before the shot was fired. There was not a shot fired until he was as near as that. I thought he was going to rush the place, and we who were going—there seemed to be no stop at all.

11575. By Mr. O’Connor.—Where were you when Mr. Hare reached that position?—Between him and the fence. I was nearer the gate, just about where the posts began to turn off.

11576. Did you see anybody else through the gate?—Yes, there were either five or seven. Five rough rough the gate and two over, because I counted the number when I thought the place was to be rushed, and some men ran across here, some jumped the fence between the railway wicket gate and the station master’s house.

11577. Upon arriving in this position it was where Mr. Hare received the wound?—I think so. I did not see him receive it.

11578. If he states that was where he received the first shot, was that where he received it?—Decidedly, if he says he was shot by the first shot, that is where he must have been shot, because he never went any further. I know there was one shot, just like that—[the witness clapped his hands]—and then four quickly afterwards.

11579. Then the police returned fire?—Yes, fire opened up all round.

11580. That is you mean in front?—Every man in front, because they went close. Bullets went through the fence, close to me. I heard them go through, and strike the wire too.

11581. What happened immediately after Mr. Hare was wounded?—I do not know. I could not tell because I did not know whether he was wounded. When I first knew he was wounded he was doubled up like that—[illustrating by gesture]. That was the first information I got. I heard him say he was wounded. I was not thinking anything about him at the moment, I was excited.

11582. Did he tell you he was wounded the moment he was?—I could not tell you; I do not think so. I do not think he could.

11583. You mean he remained standing up without saying he was wounded?—I could not tell you really; I do not understand the question.

11584. Will you state to the Commission what Mr. Hare said to you?—He said, "I am wounded; I must go back."

11585. Did he do anything else?—He did not go back at the moment, but very shortly after.

11586. Did he hand you his gun?—Yes, his gun and bag.

11587. Saying what?—He said, "I must go back." I went down to the station with him.

11588. Did he say these words, "Rawlins, I am wounded; take my gun and bag, they are, no use to me, I cannot load again"?—He made use of an expression of that kind. I asked him for the gun before.

11589. By the Commission.—When he made use of that, had he retired through the wicket gate or not?—He was on the side next the hotel at the time he spoke to me about the gun, between the hotel and the gate.

11590. Was his hand tied up at this time?—No, not at all; he was holding his wrist with his other hand.

C. C. Rawlins, continued, 15th June 1881.
11591. By Mr. O’Connor.—Will you state where he went to?—I went down first of all with him to this first culvert, and then I stopped there, and we met some of the reporters; and then I went down to the station-master’s house; and then I went with ammunition back to Senior-Constable Kelly, who had asked me to go back. I left the gun at the station when I went away.

11592. By the Commission.—Were you close to him after he said he was shot?—Yes, standing within three yards.

11593. Did he load again?—I could not tell you. In the excitement of the moment it would be impossible to tell, the smoke was so thick, and the yells, you could not see one another, the firing was so rapid. The smoke was blown gently on to the hotel, and it came up from the railway fence quite thick. You could not see anything at all, you could only hear people yelling and talking.

11594. Did he load?—My impression was at the time he did not load again, but, of course, I did not see. I say this merely because the wound seemed to me to be so severe that he could not load again.

11595. Several witnesses have sworn that after Mr. Hare was shot, he sang out to Senior-Constable Kelly to surround the place, that he was shot, and not allow them to escape; did you hear that?—Yes, I did, and I heard Kelly answer him too.

11596. Did you hear him sing out to Mr. O’Connor at any time, “O’Connor, I am shot, do not allow them to escape”?—No, not “Do not allow them to escape;” he said, “I am wounded, O’Connor, I must go back.”

11597. Do you know in what position Mr. Hare was when he said that to Mr. O’Connor, was he inside or outside the wicket gate?—He was inside, within the railway station reserve, just at the bridge.

11598. The first or second bridge?—The second bridge.

11599. Did you see Mr. O’Connor at that time?—No, I heard him.

11600. Do you know where he was at the time you heard his voice then, when Mr. Hare addressed him?—I cannot tell very well on this plan.

11601. Did Mr. O’Connor answer?—Yes, he was somewhere here about the fence, but I know I heard him shortly afterwards, when the wounded boy Jones and the woman came out. He challenged and said, “Let the woman come out”—just there.—[pointing to the plan].

C. C. Rawlins,
continued,
15th June 1881.

11602. If you can, I want you to indicate where Mr. O’Connor’s voice came from at the time Mr. Hare addressed him?—From here.—[pointing to the plan].

11603. Where is that?—I did not see him.

11604. Do you know there is a gully running down there?—Yes.

11605. Was it in any portion of that you supposed the voice of Mr. O’Connor to come from?—Yes.

11606. Was that the gully nearest to the railway fence?—Yes, there is a corner in the drain, I looked at it in the morning, in which you can stand up and get a shot at the house. When I was at the railway gate where McHugh came with the wounded boy, I was most anxious that this part of the road should be defended.

11607. By Mr. O’Connor.—Before coming to that. On not seeing me you were not prepared to swear where I was?—I could not swear where you were when Mr. Hare was shot, because this was several minutes after.

11608. You accompanied Mr. Hare, you stated, back from the field?—Yes.

11609. Carrying his gun and ammunition?—Yes.

11610. Where did you eventually leave Mr. Hare?—I eventually left him in the railway carriage while I went with ammunition to Senior-Constable Kelly.

11611. How long were you away before you again saw him?—About ten minutes.

11612. Where was he when you saw him the second time?—He was in the railway carriage.

11613. By the Commission.—You stated you left him in the railway carriage?—I left him to get into the carriage, but I do not think he had sat in it. I went away twice from the platform.

11614. By Mr. O’Connor.—When you first brought Mr. Hare back from the field?—That was Stanistreet’s—we did not go to the station at first.

11615. And then from there you accompanied Mr. Hare to the platform?—Yes, and he was to get in the train and be sent back.

11616. Ten minutes after this you found him?—I went with ammunition to Senior-Constable Kelly because they were short, and I then saw Mr. Hare in the railway carriage with your wife and Mrs. Webb.

11617. Can you remember any remark the ladies made to you in reference to Mr. Hare?—They asked me to go down in the train with Mr. Hare.

11618. For what reason?—Because Mr. Hare was calling out—they were frightened.

11619. Do you remember Mr. Hare asking you to get him a horse to ride to Benalla?—Yes.

11620. He asked you. He said, “Rawlins, get me a horse, get me anything, so that I can get to Benalla.”—He said, “Send me down to Benalla,” and I then went to see the engine-driver to take me down, and your wife wanted me to go down in the carriage with them because they were frightened, Mr. Hare seemed so ill. The engine-driver told me that he was frightened to take the train.

11621. Then he said to you. “Rawlins, go and get the engine ready”?—Yes, he said, “Get an engine, get anything, send me back to Benalla.”
11622. And you went and told the engine-driver?—I did. He wanted to take him back. The engine-driver did not seem to know what to do.

11623. This engine went down without Mr. Hare?—No, the one that went down without Mr. Hare went down when fighting was going on.

11624. Before Mr. Hare got to the platform?—Yes.

11625. This second engine—what did Mr. Hare do—did he get into it?—I arranged with the engine-driver to take him on the engine, instead of taking the carriages back, to run down without them. He said, “I will run him down in ten minutes;” and I went and brought Mr. Hare out of the train and put him on the engine, and he went away.

11626. How long was that from the time he had been first wounded—to the best of your opinion. Time appeared to go very slowly there, I know, but you can give an opinion?—Well, I do not suppose it could have been more than twelve or fourteen minutes the whole thing, but of course it is so difficult at this moment to remember what happened.

11627. A quarter of an hour?—About that.

11628. Were you at Glenrowan the remainder of the day after Mr. Hare left?—I was there to the end.

11629. Did you see me going about?—Yes, I saw you twice before the prisoners came out. After that I saw you repeatedly.

11630. By the Commission.—Which prisoners?—Reardon and family, and the others.

11631. By Mr. O’Connor.—The mob of prisoners?—Yes.

11632. What was I doing during that time?—During the time I saw you?

11633. Yes?—You came to the carriage to see your wife and tell her you were all right. The other time you were in conversation with Mr. Sadleir. That is all that I saw up to ten o’clock. You had a big handkerchief round your neck.

11634. At the time the prisoners came out did you see me?—No.

11635. Do you not remember standing alongside of me and calling to the prisoners in a loud voice?—Yes, that is the time you were with Mr. Sadleir. We went down together to the tree. That was just the time the prisoners came out. I remember I asked you who it was that fired the shot at the flag of truce, because it came from the drain.

11636. What time was it when you first saw me?—The first time when you came to tell Mrs. O’Connor it was all right—that was after Mr. Hare was gone.

11637. Can you fix about the time?—No, it was dark, and I never dreamed of looking at my watch at all.

11639. Did you see him at the capture of Ned Kelly?—No.

11640. What was the next time?—The time he refers to he had a red comforter on, and there was a flag waved at the door. The moment it was out some shots were fired from the drain, and I said, “For God’s sake, do not fire at a flag of truce,” and then we went to a tree and we gave them ten minutes to come out.

11641. Where was Mr. O’Connor?—He was with us.

11642. Was that before the capture of Ned Kelly?—That was after the capture of Ned Kelly.

11643. That would be about ten o’clock?—It was half-past ten when the prisoners came out.

11644. Did you see him between the time at the drain and the time when the prisoners came out?—Yes.

11645. By Mr. O’Connor.—You mentioned that you saw me shortly after the capture of Ned Kelly—can you remember the time?—I saw you with a comforter round your neck with Mr. Sadleir; but you were about with Mr. Sadleir all day after that.

11646. That was when the people came out?—Yes.

11647. By the Commission.—What do you mean by being about with Mr. Sadleir?—I saw Mr. O’Connor with Mr. Sadleir. They were going round from point to point round the place, the time the firing was going on into the place at different angles, so as to get at the chimneys. That was after the prisoners were out.

11648. By Mr. O’Connor.—Were you there at the burning of the house?—Yes.

11649. Were you near Mr. Sadleir when Senior-Constable Johnson proposed burning the house?—No.

11650. When did you first know the house was going to be burned?—I was at the tree with Hart’s brother, and Johnson ran across from there. I was between the railway gate station and Jones’s public-house. When the fire was put in, Mrs. Skillian came along from the station along the road, and was going up to the house. The constables called out to her to come back, and she came out to this tree, at the Benalla end. I saw Johnson run across with a wisp of straw all on fire. The police were firing at the side of him; and he put it under the chimney at the Benalla end, where there was a hole, and he ran back, and it gradually lit up the inside.

11651. Who was it called out to cease firing—do you know?—Well, the first call I heard about cease firing was when that man called out, “For God’s sake, do not fire into the building, it is full of women and children”; and I heard you call out, “Let the women out.” This was a man inside the building. I do not know who he was, because just before that there was a terrific volley fired at a man who came out in the front, and that was accompanied by shrieks and screams inside. That was the first time I knew there was anybody inside.

11652. Did you hear anybody call out “Cease firing”?—Yes; three or four people did, and “Lie down till daylight.”

11653. You cannot swear who it was?—No; I heard you call out, “Let the women out,” when McHugh came out with the boy on his back. Do not you remember you bailed him up?

11654. When this man came out and the women came out, did you hear me speak at all?—Yes, that is how I found out exactly where you were.

11655. Will you say what I said?—You called out, “Bail up; what have you got; who is that?” or something of that kind, and this man called out, “A wounded man.” Mrs. Jones was standing at the railway gates at the time, and the daughter was with me there. She had bleeding from the head.

11656. Did you hear me address a man on the left, to see that the Kellys were not coming out with them?—Yes; I heard words to that effect, but I did not know whom it was to.

11657. At this time Mr. Hare was at the platform?—Yes, that was the time I came with the ammunition.

11658. By the Commission.—Can you throw any light on the time Kelly came out?—He never went back again; he came out of the house when Curnow stopped the train.

11659. Where were you then?—We were down at the train.

11660. Do you know whether Ned Kelly came out to shoot at the police on the verandah?—He had not been in again.

11661. Do you know whether he came out of the house to shoot at the police—of your own knowledge?—No.

11662. Was he in the house?—He was not in the house at all.

11663. Was he one of the four that fired at the police when they came up?—Yes, but he came out from behind the chimney, and the second time after he emptied his rifle they called out to come on to the train. He went back again behind the chimney.

11664. Are you speaking of what you know of your own knowledge?—I saw a man; he came out from behind the chimney; the first shot that was fired on the verandah. He was standing on the end at first, firing down in this direction towards the gate. He fired the first shot, and then he went in and loaded again, and then came out into the open that looked on to the drain, and called out, towards the drain, “Fire on, you —— cocktails, you cannot hurt us.” Every one could see him quite plainly, and there was a terrific volley fired at him, and it was the time the yells occurred, and that was the first time I knew people were in the house.

11665. Was that the time that Mr. Hare called out “Cease fixing”?—There were a good many called out prior to any shots being fired, “Cease firing.” Mr. Hare was going through the gate; the time he had retired. He was going back. When I was on the platform, after we came back from Mrs. Stanistreet’s, I stood on the end of the platform, watching Jones’s. I saw a rider coming in the main road along the railway fence, and he went to the side of Jones’s. Whether he got off his horse, or what he did, I do not know. I lost sight of him there through a lot of bushes. Just as he was going along here, Bracken rushed out and spoke to me first, on the platform.

11666. Have you read the evidence in this case?—No, I have not, only one man’s.

11667. It appears to me that your evidence rather contradicts some evidence given before by other witnesses. I understand you to say that Bracken first came out and spoke to you after he escaped from the Kellys?—Yes, that is right.

11668. Was Mr. Hare then with Mr. O’Connor?—Well, I could not tell you exactly.

11669. Yes or no?—I could not say yes or no. He left me to look after the horses.

11670. What horses were they?—Some we had in the trucks.

11671. The black trackers’ horses and Victorian police?—Yes.

11672. They would be some of those that belonged to his own party?—Yes.

11673. When Bracken came down and told you, did you tell Mr. Hare, or did Bracken?—Bracken went up, and Mr. O’Connor got hold of him and got him against the wall, at the station, about ten or twelve yards from where I was.
11679. Would he be in your rear?—He would, when he got to the gate.

11680. Can you say where you last saw Mr. O’Connor, from the time you saw Bracken until Mr. Hare was wounded?—At the second culvert.

11681. Was he on the culvert, or in the drain of the culvert?—I did not see him after he left the train. He was on the track when I last saw him.

11682. Mr. O’Connor says, “When at a short distance from the front of the place, we were stopped by a volley of bullets from its verandah”—would that be correct?—We were stopped.

11683. Who?—I could not tell you—the five or seven.

11684. Would Mr. O’Connor have been one?—I am not prepared to say he was not with us. I know the three men who were with us, three men and myself, that is all out of the seven.

11685. You were by at the time that you believed Mr. Hare was wounded?—Yes, I was standing close to him.

11686. Did you hear him say, “O’Connor, I am wounded, shot in the arm, I must go back”?—Yes.

11687. If Mr. Hare was shot outside the culvert, how do you reconcile that with the fact that when he was wounded he said to Mr. O’Connor, “I am wounded in the arm, I must go back”?—I do not know what time exactly he was wounded. I know I heard him say that to Mr. O’Connor as we were going back to the railway station. I know Mr. O’Connor answered him, but what he said I do not know.

11688. The point we want to get explicitly from you is, did Mr. Hare say that to Mr. O’Connor “I am shot,” upon the ground where he received the shot?—No, he did not. It was on time way back after this terrific volley was fired. You could not walk back where this fire was; they were shooting close to the ground.

11689. Then Mr. O’Connor was not present exactly in the position outside the gate where Mr. Hare was shot?—I could not say, because it was after that he spoke to O’Connor. I did not see Mr. O’Connor at all, I only heard him.

11690. Where did you hear him?—It was below that culvert where I heard his voice, speaking to Mr. Hare, and Mr. O’Connor said something, I do not know what it was. That was when we were going back, after all the volley had finished.

11691. Mr. O’Connor says, “Mr. Hare’s statement as to having fired several shots is untrue”—can you say whether that is correct or not?—I cannot say whether it is.

11692. You say when you took Mr. Hare to the platform after he was wounded that you carried his gun up there?—Yes, I carried it in my hand.

11693. You say you then got ammunition?—Yes, I got ammunition; they were getting short of it, and I went back to Kelly.

11694. Did you see Mr. Hare’s arm bound up by the reporters?—No.

11695. Can you say, of your own knowledge, whether, after his arm was bound up, Mr. hare returned towards Jones’s house from the platform?—I cannot say; when I came back he was in the train.

11696. You cannot say what occurred from the time of your leaving him at the platform wounded until you came back, when he was in the carriage?—No; that is exactly the part I know nothing about.

11697. How long was it from the time you left until you returned?—I could not tell exactly I went right round the whole place.

11698. Might it be seven or ten minutes?—It might be more; I do not think it is any more.

11699. Did you go all round the men?—I went right round the whole position.

11700. Then it must have been about ten minutes?—I did not hang about anywhere; it would not be long.

11701. Had you gone round all the positions before Mr. Hare left for Benalla?—Yes. When I got to the railway gate I gave Senior-Constable Kelly one lot of ammunition, and then I went round in about, I suppose, not more than ten minutes at the outside.

11702. To serve the men with ammunition?—I only gave to those I could find.

11703. Did you surround the hotel as far as the extreme back—the stockyard fence?—I went close to the stockyard.

11704. Did you come round to the place where the Wangaratta men were placed later in the day?—Yes, I did.

11705. After Mr. Hare left the ground, and before the arrival of Mr. Sadleir, did you at any time hear Mr. O’Connor give any orders to the men stationed on the ground?—No, I did not.

11706. Who appeared to take charge of the men after the wounding of Mr. Hare?—Senior Constable Kelly.

11707. Was he, in your opinion, acting as the superior officer?—I understood he was the man in charge, and that Mr. O’Connor only came up as a volunteer.

11708. Who really did take the position?—Kelly.

11709. Did you see Mr. Sadleir after he arrived on the ground?—Yes.

11710. About what time?—I was away at the time he arrived. I first saw him coming out of the drain at the time of the capture of Ned Kelly, when we were carrying the body down.

11711. Were you away at the time he arrived?—I had gone to stop the Wangaratta train, as it was dark, and they might come over the broken line. I stopped the train at the gap, and also stopped the man who was taking the horses away.

11712. How soon after you saw Mr. Sadleir at the time of the capture did you see him giving orders to the men?—I did not see him giving any orders in the morning.

11713. Did you remain at the ground till after the hotel was burned?—Yes.
11714. Did you hear him give any orders during the day?—No, I did not; I was not near him. I did not take any active part in it then, there were so many.

11715. Are you sure you saw Mr. O'Connor at the railway station before his wife left in the train for Benalla?—Yes.

11716. Can you fix about the time?—No, I could not do it.

11717. You are certain that the train that took Mrs. O'Connor back to Benalla had not left the station before Mr. O'Connor returned to the station?—No, I am quite satisfied I saw him speak to his wife.

11718. By Mr. O'Connor.—You stated you understood that I was a volunteer—from whom did you understand that?—I understood it from Mr. Knox, that you had left the force altogether.

11719. Of your own knowledge you did not know what arrangements might have been made?—I heard you had actually gone to Queensland.

11720. You never heard that I had not made arrangements to return on the same footing as I held before?—Well, I did in the train.

11721. From whom?—The reporters. They said when you heard the Kellys had broken out you volunteered to come up to Glenrowan and do service there.

11722. You must understand that the police in another colony may volunteer to do duty and still be the police?—Yes, no doubt about that.

11723. You did not know positively that I was only a volunteer?—I merely believed so; I knew you had severed your connection with the police.

11724. Is it not a fact that you, from subsequent knowledge, only knew that Mr. Hare did not return?—That is not a fair question to put. What I may have stated outside as being my impression is not evidence.

11725. What you have heard since?—I cannot say. I have heard many things. I do not think that is a fair question. I am not going to say about what I thought. Whatever I may say of my impressions outside this building is a very different thing from giving evidence here.

11726. Have you not heard—?—I have heard a great many things. I am not going to say what I heard. For one thing, I heard that Mr. Hare was not there at all, that he was shot at the railway station.

11727. By the Commission (to the witness).—At the time Mr. Hare asked you for a horse, do you consider he was in a state to have ridden a horse safely to Benalla?—Oh no; I would not have let him get on a horse at all.

11728. There could be no doubt that his retiring from Glenrowan was in consequence of the loss of blood he sustained from the shot?—The general shock to the system and loss of blood. I did not think so much of it at the time, as I could not tell exactly the extent of the wound. I was trying to stop the bleeding; it was bleeding very severely.

11729. From what you saw at the time and what you knew after, was it from any feeling of cowardice that he was deserting the field at Glenrowan?—No, I do not think so I think it was from fear of fatal results if he did not get the bleeding stopped. He must have been in very great agony, because he said, “For God’s sake, Rawlins, send me back to Benalla.” That was after I had been round with the ammunition.

11730. You, of your own knowledge, are not in a position to state whether Mr. Hare did or did not return to the front after you first arrived with him at the station?—I could not say.

11731. Was there sufficient time for him to have had his hand bound up at the station and have gone to the front and returned to the station before you saw him again?—I do not know really; I could not tell you. I know I tried to stop the bleeding with a towel, with a tourniquet; I suppose it took some minutes.

11732. No one else tried to stop the bleeding before that?—No.

11733. After your trying to stop the bleeding, you had in the meantime served out the ammunition before you again saw Mr. Hare?—Yes.

11734. By Mr. O'Connor.—Mr. Hare, in his evidence, stated that upon being wounded he went back straight to the platform; you say you took him down to Stanistreet’s house?—Yes, that is quite correct; we went back to the corner and we met the reporters who came out from the drain.

11735. You went along the fence down to the station-master’s house?—No, we did not. After Mr. Hare was wounded we went back through the gate, and he spoke to you, and we went down here—[The witness indicated the various positions on the plan.]

11736. By the Commission.—From the loss of blood and shock, might it not be possible that Mr. Hare might be a little mystified about what took place at that time?—Well, I think he was; he seemed completely knocked up.

11737. You accompanied him from the place where he was wounded back to the station platform?—Yes.

11738. Did you go back then by the same route that you took going?—Yes, exactly.

11739. Did you not come through the wicket gate both in going towards Jones’s and in coming back?—Yes, over the same ground exactly. There is one thing about the affair that I want particularly to say.
A statement has been made that there was indiscriminate firing by the police into the building after the order was given to cease firing—that is not true. There were occasional shots fired, but there was not that indiscriminate firing that was represented by some witnesses. The police acted very well, I considered, right through. I saw the capture of Edward Kelly, if you want any evidence about that.

11740. Were you present when Ned Kelly fell?—Yes, I was. I was on the station when the first shot or two was fired, and when I saw he was moving down towards the fence I moved up there.

11741. Did you see which way he fell?—He fell with his head up rather, with the log on his left-hand side.

11742. Did you see whether his helmet came off then?—His helmet rolled off as he fell down.

11743. Did he trip or was it the effect of the shot?—He was shot by somebody, I am sure, in the knees.

11744. That would be your impression at the time?—Yes.

11745. Would it be with a revolver or a rifle?—Neither, at that time. He was shot with buck-shot from a double-barrelled breech-loader.

11746. Were you present when the revolver was wrenched from him?—Yes, I was close enough to see it—it went off when it was being taken away from him. Sergeant Steele had hold of his arm.

11747. Who seized the revolver?—Steele got hold of the revolver and I held down the wounded arm on the other side. He was shot in two places in the arm and had his arm on one side, and Steele pulled over his hand, and as he fell back his helmet rolled off, and Steele pulled him down and took the revolver out of his hand afterwards, but it went off while we were doing that.

11748. Are you confident Steele was the man who took it?—Steele was the man who had hold of his arm. I would not swear he was the one that took it out of his hand.

11749. The railway guard, Dowsett, swears he wrenched it out of Kelly’s hand?—He was there, but I could not say that he took it.

11750. Has the revolver now, and says he never gave it to anybody?—Well, I had the armour in my possession, but they would not let me keep it. I carried the armour down to the station after we took it off, so I suppose it belongs to me, at that rate.

11751. Did you see Mrs. Reardon coming out from the door?—Yes, I was there at the time.

11752. Did you see anybody shoot at her?—No. That part of the arrangement was just after the time I came back, after stopping the Wangaratta train. The reporters said the police had challenged some body up in the bush, and I said that was the Wangaratta police. I crept up to one of the tents and watched the house for a good time. We heard a noise inside, and, while listening, we also heard Steele challenging some one on the Wangaratta side, and then I heard a woman say, “Oh, my child! my child! Oh, my boys! Oh—(everybody).” Dowsett, the guard, passed close to me. It was pitch dark at that time, and I was straining my eyes to see who it was coming out. I could see it was a woman carrying a baby in her arms, and Dowsett said, “Step this way, Mrs. Reardon.” He was within two yards of me at this time, and he lifted her clean over the fence and took her to the platform, and almost immediately after there was a great shout and Steele fired. It was he challenged her, and he fired two shots in quick succession. I was watching her. Steele said it was Dan Kelly in disguise, and he fired two shots at that moment.

11753. Did you bear anybody threaten Steele if he fired on the woman?—No. I heard Bracken threaten to shoot Dwyer at the time we had Kelly on the ground; he got fearfully excited.

11754. Would that be the constable that kicked him?—He kicked him on the side of his leg and said, “Why did you kill my mate, Lonigan?” I thought the police were going to kill Kelly right off.

11755. Do you think Sergeant Steele fired at the woman?—No, I do not think so; I think he fired at the house at two people, one crawling along the ground.

11756. Did you see that one crawling?—Yes; one dropped down on his face; the other walked back.

11757. Did you see that one who walked back; had he his hand up?—He put his hand up at the time they said, “If you do not go back I will shoot you.” The other fell on his face and wriggled back.

11758. Did you see whether the one that walked back with his hand up was shot?—I did not think he was; he did not fall down.

11759. He fell as he got close to the door?—He got out of my sight as he got to the door.

11760. At the time Kelly was taken, did you see any movement amongst the police as if they were running away?—No; they ran the other Way. I never saw a single man behave with cowardice the whole time. That one shot fired at the flag of truce was the only thing. It came from the front of the building. They kept up a tremendous fusillade from there; no one could have got out of the front of the building.

11761. Do you think that shot was fired by one of the black trackers?—It might have been.

11762. Did you hear Steele make any remarks when he fired those shots?—Yes; that was how I know him—I knew him personally. He made use of some expression with an oath in it; what it was I do not know, I was too far away to hear exactly what he said. I heard “Throw up your arms,” and “It is Dan Kelly in disguise.” I was lying down watching those two figures. After Mr. hare had gone from the place altogether for half—an—hour, I went to Curnow’s, to get a plan of the inside of Jones’s, as I had arranged with Mr. hare to meet the police on the Benalla side, so as to keep them from coming to the front of time house. 4.30 a.m. o’clock I met an engine with two men on it, and they told me about the police coming from Wangaratta, and I asked them whether they knew where time gap in the line was, and they said, “Yes; it is at the foot of the bank.” I said, “No; it is on the top of the bank.” Then I went up to the station, and the reporters said something about the horses being taken away. I went off and caught a man taking the horses away, and when I got to the gap I heard the train coming up, and I struck a match, and the train stopped close to the gap. I also drove the horses back.

11763 Have you any notion of the time those troopers arrived?—It was five o’clock exactly; when I got to the gap it was about five. I struck the matches when the train came up, and a man challenged me and I told him who I was. Nothing would have prevented them going into the gap, because when he found the gap was not where it was represented to be, the engine-driver thought it was on the Benalla side, and he was going right into Glenrowan, full speed, when I stopped him—they would have been certainly wrecked. He made an affidavit to the made an affidavit to the effect that I saved the train. (mum, and Mr. Sadleir sent in an affidavit also that it was I that got the prisoners out at half-past ten.

The witness withdrew.

S. O’Connor, 15th June 1881.

Stanhope O’Connor further examined.

21764. By the Commission.—Do you purpose calling any more witnesses?—the Secretary knows of two witnesses in town, Mr. Sadleir amid Mr. Nicolson; then there is Mr. Knox amid Mr. McBain on one point only. The point is as to whether I was doing my work equally with Mr. Sadleir after he arrived. If the Commission feel justified in stating they have sufficient evidence on that point, I need not call them. Several witnesses stated they did not see me with Mr. Sadleir, but I think the other witnesses have stated that they did.

11765. The bulk of witnesses have stated that after ten o’clock, from that until pretty well the whole of the day, you were about where Mr. Sadleir was?—That is all I want those witnesses to prove, but Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson will be decidedly necessary for me to have.

11766. What point are you going to refer to now—we will continue with your evidence now. The last question was in relation to the report of Mr. Hare that you took exception to?—Yes, and I said I considered it a most improper one.

11767. We will come to your own report—“A private quarrel occurred between Mr. Hare and S. O’Connor, myself” you state in your report?—Yes.

11768. I think it will be necessary for you to state to the Commission the nature of the private quarrel?—I must decline stating what the actual quarrel was, but I can state it generally—it brings a lady’s name in. This quarrel had nothing at all to do with anything I have stated in the report.

11769. Does this quarrel affect the friendship between you and Mr. Hare after you had that quarrel?—No.

11770. The point is here. We find that each officer has quarrelled with every other officer, and they have all indicated that they have quarrelled; and it is the intention of the Commission, I think, to get to the very bottom of that quarrel, so far as it affects public business?—I can give an ex parte statement of what I know, if you wish it.

11771. You had a quarrel of a private nature, in which Captain Standish took sides with Mr. Hare?—Yes.

11772. The friendly relationship was revived between you and Mr. Hare?—Yes.

11773. And you would be on friendly terms in the office?—Yes.

11774. But that did not obtain as between Captain Standish and yourself?—No, we were never on terms of private friendship after.

11775. The statement is that “Captain Standish, who was not in any way concerned, took part against me, and carried it into official matters”.—Yes.

11776. “He made a series of communications to the Queensland Government, tending to depreciate me”—do you think those came out of a private quarrel?—No. Captain Standish’s communications, from what I heard from my Commissioner, did not touch on what he viewed as my private character.

11777. You refer in that to correspondence carried on by Captain Standish behind your back?—Yes.

11778. “And to remove the men from my control and supervision”—that is the correspondence that we are now asking the Queensland Government for the papers of?—Yes.

11779. “Upon this Captain Standish had the man taken out of my party, and attached to his police, although he (Captain Standish) still required our services. For the discourteous manner in which this was done, my Government requested our immediate return.” Is there anything in the communications between you and your Government to lead you to believe that your Government took that view of it?—Certainly.

11780. And we may expect that in the papers that are to come?—Yes. I can tell you what I stated to the Government without the papers.

11781. Do you believe that correspondence would have been of the same nature had the same friendly feeling continued between you and Captain Standish?—Certainly not; because Captain Standish repeatedly pressed me to accept service in this colony, to have my station at Dandenong, and that I would have anything I liked, with my men, if I would accept service permanently in Victoria; and, after that, he offered me Kilmore—that is, the appointment would be made after the Kellys were taken.

11782. Was this all verbal?—Yes; and Mr. Hare himself has heard Captain Standish himself say this. I believe in my cross-examination of Mr. Sadleir he can state so; but I know Mr. Hare has repeatedly spoken to me in the same strain, telling me, “Eventually, O’Connor, you will get the depot, and lead just as jolly a life as I have led.” Those were the words. The moment this quarrel happened Captain Standish, instead of being “Hail fellow well met” with me, instead of giving me the run of the city, as he said he could, and my men, ignored me completely.

11783. He was completely altered in his demeanour towards you?—Completely altered.

11784. You have nothing to add in connection with the search parties?—One thing. I want to point out this—you notice that I, from the very first, wished to work with a small party. Captain Standish would not allow me, and then he pleads that we were useless because we were so big. You can see that he states in his own evidence that I wanted only two men, but he would not allow me, and a few lines after that he says that they were perfectly useless because they were such a large party.

11785. You look upon that as depreciating your services, putting you in the wrong and then blaming you for it?—And then blaming me for it.

11786. You consider that Captain Standish did that without justification?—Which?

11787. That he made you take large parties, and then blamed you because you had to carry large parties about?—He has done that in his evidence.

11788. You think he was not justified in that?—Certainly not. When I offered to go out with two white men, that was all I wanted.

11789. You would have all your boys?—Yes, that would have made eight men.

11790. Did he not object to that previous to the quarrel?—Yes, from the very first; but he never made any objection before to us until this Commission, and then his first evidence is that we were utterly useless.

11791. He objected on the first occasion to your only taking two, is that it?—No when I came, sitting in the office with him, he said, “Now, O’Connor, what is the way you work?” I said, “Well, sir, I would like to take two white men, Victorian constables; I would like them for watches and that.” “Why,” he said, “you take two men, you do not know what kind of men those outlaws are. If you leave your horses anywhere, they will turn round and hamstring your horses. You must not think of such a thing. I would not allow it. You must take not less than six or seven men.”

11792. Then, from the first, he did that?—That was the day before we started out. And then he said to me, “Whenever you leave your horses, it would be advisable to leave a couple of those men with them, and mind, O’Connor, you go out in full charge of the whole party.” Turning round to Mr. Sadleir, he said, “Mind, Sadleir, although you are superintendent of police, you are not over O’Connor.” That has reference to the first party, and the other parties were just the same. The first time I ever heard Captain Standish breathe a word about our uselessness on account of the size of our parties was after this quarrel. I did not hear it officially, but I heard it reported.

11793. How long was that ago?—This would be about a couple of months after Mr. Nicolson went up to take charge. I heard it reported, “Standish is trying to get the men without O’Connor. He would like to break them up. He says it is no use trying to work with such a large body of trackers, a couple would be enough, and that O’Connor will not allow his men to work without himself.” This was just the POLICE.

report that I heard at this time. I wish to state to the Commission that I never did refuse to allow my men to be worked with or without myself. Captain Standish has, without consulting me, actually sent u from Melbourne for me to send two of my men down to Sandhurst for work, and I have done so without a murmur. The only objection I had was to separating the men permanently; and my opinion was that it was simply done to show that my services were no longer of any use, because the moment my men were distributed over the country I could not supervise all of them, and I took that as what his idea was.

11794. Then I understand the gist of your disagreement with Captain Standish is that you considered he was trying to circumvent you—to take the men away from you and to show that you were not required?—Exactly, to show that I was not required.

11795. And that he became more offensive after this private quarrel that you spoke of than he was before towards you?—Privately before he was always on friendly terms, but most insulting sometimes, but still always kept up a friendly relationship between us—that is in private matters; but after this quarrel of course all private friendship ceased, and until the Glenrowan time I think I only saw him once for a few minutes when he came up to Benalla.

11796. In your report you say of the Glenrowan affair—“Mr. Hare and myself were considering the best course to adopt when Constable Bracken rushed down on the platform and gave us the information that the outlaws were in Jones’s public-house. Mr. Hare and I ran up towards the house, he talking to me, and when at a short distance from the front of the place were stopped by a volley of bullets from its verandah;” did you go through the wicket gate that time?—No.

11797. Where did you stop?—Well, I should imagine it was about five yards from the wicket gate, the railway side of the wicket gate, and I most emphatically state what I saw with my own eyes that Mr. Hare might have been in the wicket gate, but he was not through it, because there was no fence between him and me, I recollect no other men besides Mr. Hare, and simply knew him because he spoke to me—whether any other man was between—they were coming up and passing us probably. I could not mention any one man except Mr. Hare, he was speaking to me running up—that is how I knew who he was.

11798. There was no fence between you when he was wounded?—When the shooting first commenced and when he called out, there was no fence between him and me.

11799. Then you absolutely contradict those statements which have been sworn to?—I most solemnly swear that what I state happened within my own eyesight. I do not say he did not go through the gate after he was wounded, but when he was wounded he was at the gate or in the gate, but he was not through it, and I was five yards from him. I noticed him because he sang out to me— O’Connor, I am wounded, I am shot in the arm, I must go back”—one after the other, and he turned back to the station I imagined.

11800. Did he pass you?—He went behind me, and that is all I know about him.

11801. Did you see him any more?—I swear solemnly I never saw him from that moment till I met him in the evening in his bed. He never came up to the fence where I was again.

11802. Then you assert it was almost simultaneous with the first firing he cried out “I am wounded!”—We had just replied. I had not time to load again. I was in the act of loading when he spoke to me, and he only addressed me on the first go off when he was passing behind me. I heard him speaking. I heard him say something about “wretches,” I do not remember any more than that. It must have been almost simultaneously with the firing, because I had not time to load my breech-loading rifle. I was in the act of loading when he spoke and I looked round at him, and he was then passing back to my rear. I was in no trench or drain, I was standing out in the open with the other men.

11803. Then you did not hear him at all cry out to cease firing?—I most solemnly swear nobody ever called out “Cease firing” until I did. After that it was taken up along the line. What made me sing out that was I heard the women, and that was the first intimation I had of there being anybody in the house except the outlaws.

11804. Were you near enough to see whether he reloading?—I was five yards away from him.

11805. You would notice the action if he had reloaded?—I noticed the fire of his gun, and before I could load again he spoke to me, and I had fired the same second as his bang, and he sang out, “O’Connor, I am wounded,” and turned round with his back to me and commenced to walk down to the platform, and he never loaded his gun I swear, in my sight.

11806. He could not have loaded it there?—Not while he was with me. I can hand you in the statement of Rawlins at the time where he states that he had the gun immediately Mr. Hare was wounded.

11807. And he carried it to the platform?—Yes.

11808. He gave us that in evidence to-day?—Yes, I have no wish to run Mr. Hare down in any way—that is no wish of mine. If Mr. Hare had simply stated—given credit where it was due, stated I had helped him and assisted him instead of writing the report as he did, I should never have called for an enquiry. I never wanted such a thing, and I am only stating what I saw actually with my own eyes. I wish to hand in this letter dated 8th June, it ought to be 8th July. It is from Constable Kirkham. —[Reading the same as follows: ]—Benalla, 8th June 1880.—Sir—If there is any investigation, will you be up? Steele has called Constable Kelly everything. Steele says Arthur ran away. Kelly says he was surprised to find me in the trench with you, he wants to know why Riordan or that man that passed out when the girls passed out was not challenged. I say he was challenged by you both times and by me also the second time he passed out. he has talked about me running away, I don’t know what from. Sir, can you let me know when you sail, as I shall have to borrow money off Ryan to return what you so kindly lent me, if you are returning before next pay is due to me. I have sent Ensign article in Mr. Nicolson’s favour. The jealousy and slander here is something frightful; according to Kelly, Arthur and I will catch it at the investigation, there boys are tall and slender, and three say they are Barney’s Brothers; please forgive the liberty I have taken in writing. (Signed) T. KIRKHAM, Const. 2986.—I may state it was at Glenrowan the man Kirkham wanted some money, and I gave him a five-pound note—the only change I had. I left the day after Glenrowan for Melbourne, and the constable wrote me this letter. I replied—told him to keep the five pounds and buy something in memory of my sojourn in Benalla, and asked him if he had seen my statement in the Argus and if he thought it was the correct one. He replied by letter that it was the correct statement of all others that he had seen. Again, upon coming from Brisbane, in passing Benalla I met Constable Kirkham, and he came up to the carriage window and shook hands with me, and informed me that everybody was doing their best to depreciate my services and were so — jealous, and that Senior-Constable Kelly wanted to take the credit for doing everything—All that is in reference to this letter.
he saw me running up a drain, as I did not take cover for fully ten minutes after Mr. Hare disappeared?—I will not swear to ten minutes, but it is after Mr. Hare left the front before I took cover.

11810. You have heard the evidence of others, will you still say you considered yourself the officer in command?—I do not now consider it. After you read me out the regulation, certainly I did not. I know I could not have been an officer in the force at any time, but I was under the impression that when I came over, all arrangements had been made and that I was recognised. I never heard it cavilled at. I never heard a soul say or hint such a thing that I was not at that time. At Glenrowan I did consider I was an officer.

11811. That was between the time Mr. Hare left and Mr. Sadleir arrived?—I considered I was the officer in charge.

11812. The sworn statements of several witnesses there say they did not consider you were in charge at all. Did you do anything whatever during that time to show that you were in charge?—I will tell you more fully than is made clear in my evidence what happened during that short period. The moment I could collect my ideas after the first firing. I told the men to take cover. I gave the order to cease firing. I ordered the women to come out, and as they passed up challenged them. I then thought there was nobody else except the outlaws in the hotel. My idea was to wait until daylight before any steps had been taken, and I looked round for the most suitable place, to command the front of the house. I looked out for the position that would be safe, and the place where I could command the front of the house. Senior-Constable Kelly came to me immediately after—after the first firing, and he conferred, if you would call it so, as I considered he was the second in command. We talked about what was the best thing to be done, and he said, “I will go round to the rear;” and I said, “I will remain in the front.” I deny most emphatically his statement that he asked me to go and place the men with him. He said, “I will go round to the back and put some men there;” and I said, “I will remain here, it is a good place and I can command the front of the house.” We conferred like that. When he came the second time, and said about finding the gun he said, “My God, O’Connor, I believe one of the outlaws have got away;” and my reply was, “I will swear they have not got out of the front, not a living man has got out of the front without my seeing,” and I said, “Kelly, you ought to have remained at your post at the rear.” That was my idea of taking charge of both sides of the house. I have been blamed for not taking a more active part, but I did not think there was anything more to be done than guarding the front and rear. I understood Kelly was at the rear, and I was at the front, and I considered it was quite sufficient to keep those places until daylight.

11813. Then you swear that Mr. Hare did not give any command at all before he left?—In my hearing. I never heard him speaking except in an undertone, about as loud as I am talking now, to somebody behind—it may have been to Senior-Constable Kelly. He may have been giving him commands, but I did not hear him.

11814. You did not hear him telling you to get the house surrounded?—Certainly not. My men were not together—my men were separated among the police. I was just a unit amongst them myself. We were all scattered all round the front. By the evidence you would think I had my five men in a heap, and he asked me to spread them out. It was nothing of the kind, I was by myself.

11815. Is it your opinion that Mr. Hare, when he sent that report, purposely intended to reflect on you, where he stated you ran to the drain?—I consider the report. There is no doubt about it—it was calculated to make a bad impression as to my conduct.

11816. This is what I want from you—you have stated that you and Mr. Hare were on the very best of terms, even going up to Glenrowan, and up to the time of the occurrence?—Yes.

11817. Have you formed the opinion that Mr. Hare purposely made allusion to you for the purpose of injuring you?—I could not say that, but that was my impression—my impression was that there was something behind that. It was not of his own free will, because I always considered him a most manly fellow. He stated he wrote it when he was ill. Somebody must have done it for him, and I believe there was some other person gave him the idea to depreciate me, in order to raise himself—that is my opinion as you have asked me. I had not seen Mrs. Hare since this quarrel till I saw Mr. Hare when he was wounded, and the moment she saw me she came out, and shook hands with me, and said her husband wished to see me, and I said “Certainly,” and went into the room, and he put his sound hand out. “O’Connor,” he said, “let by-gones be by-gones—we must not think of anything but our old friendship after such an ordeal as we went through,” and I seized his hand and shook it, and we were on the very best of terms.

11818. Then that would indicate that he did not exactly consider he was on the best of terms before that?—Well, we never had a real make up of the quarrel. Two letters were written. He wrote me one and I answered it. That was the quarrel. We never spoke or saw each other until Mr. Hare arrived in Benalla to take command. He shook hands with me. We never referred to the quarrel which made it so far that we were on the best of terms—friendly terms, privately and officially.

11819. You had been on the best of terms from the 2nd June 1880 to the 24th June—till you wrote?—Yes. Of course you know there was a certain restraint between us, we were not on such jolly terms as before, but to all intents and purposes we had made up the quarrel without referring to it, and it was after the fight that we, you might say, returned to our old relations—what we were before—really good terms.

11820. Do you think on the morning of the 29th, when you went down with him in the train, that Mr. Hare had anything whatever to do with the reports that appeared in the metropolitan papers giving a full account of what had taken place—the capture of the Kelly gang at the Glenrowan hotel?—Certainly I think he had, and I will explain in a few words. Mr. Hare came from the front wounded. By the evidence, Mr. Hare was tended by the reporters. Mr. Hare stated what he had done—what he knew there and then. Where else did the reporters get their information? Mr. Hare admits sending one telegram which I would very much like to see.

11821. Which is that?—One which he sent down—the first about the fight.

11822. The one that he speaks of that he sent when he arrived at the telegraph office at Benalla?—Yes.

11823. You would like to see a copy of that?—Yes. Then Mr. Hare came down to Benalla, where he saw several people and told them all that he did—those all travelled and got into the press. Everybody was anxious to hear something about it, and I say this is what colored the whole thing. “I did this and I did that”—Mr. Hare did that. Nobody else would know what any other person did at the time, because I had not been to speak to the reporters.

11824. Do you believe that Mr. Hare then—if your suspicions be correct—furnished the information to the reporters of the press, was really then desirous of keeping your name out of the thing?—No, I do not say that for a minute.

11825. Would it not be natural for any one in giving a description of what had taken place to have said “I did so and so”?—Certainly I admit that, but I do not admit that he did right to write that report afterwards.

11826. You suppose that after the heat of the action, any one asked for information would tell what he himself had done?—Yes.

11827. Particularly as it was done in the darkness of night?—Yes. The only communication I had with the members of the press was—I do not know how they came till Mr. Melvin came up and, as the evidence stated, touched me on the back.

11828. One of the other witnesses said it was their special province to obtain information. The constables said they were interviewed by the members of the press?—Yes.

11829. So that there were a number of police constables gave evidence to the press as well as Mr. Hare and others?—Yes, and I may state that I never spoke to a member of the press until I put that short résumé of what happened at Glenrowan into the Argus on the 30th, or some date after.

11830. We have had statements made—would you be kind enough to inform the Commission the conditions under which you stipulated that you would join the police force, in the position that was proposed recently to confer upon you?—That if they offered me a suitable rank I would accept it.

11831. Was the nature of the rank stated?—No.

11832. Would you then have accepted any position lower down the scale than superintendent?—Yes.

11833. Would you have accepted any position lower down than sub-inspector?—Certainly not; I would not take any rank, I may tell you, in the Victorian force under inspector.

11834. In other words, you would not join the service in the ranks—Queensland or any other service?—No, certainly not.

11835. Would that have been only as it affected the black trackers?—Certainly not.

11836. In the same position as any other?—As a member of the force.

11837. You would be in this position in the North Eastern district, that you would take charge if the superintendent was away?—Yes, but put me in the North-Eastern district, as it is there as an inspector I would be junior in rank to Mr. Montfort.

11838. And to two others?—No, senior to two others.

11839. Mr. Baber?—Mr. Baber would be junior.

11840. And Mr. Pewtress?—Junior, I would be second in command.

11841. And would have command if he were out of the district?—Yes, I would join as an inspector.

11842. You could have been removed at any time to any other district in the same position?—Yes, or in a higher position.

11843. Was it to be only of a temporary nature or permanent?—Permanent. I may just tell you exactly what passed. I received a telegram asking me to come and see Mr. Chomley. I came in, and he said, “The Chief Secretary wants to offer you the command of the trackers in the North-Eastern district.”

11844. What date was that?—Just the day before the Commission took action in regard to it I called, and Mr. Chomley and I had a long talk about it. I said, “Look hero, Chomley, I would not accept that billet.”

11845. Are you sure it was only the day before?—Only the day before or two days before that, and Mr. Chomley said, “The Chief Secretary wishes to give you command of the trackers,” and I said, “I am very much obliged, but I would not take it.” He said, “Not take it?” and I said, “No, certainly not, I do not know those men. They have never been drilled. They do not know what a weapon is or what a horse is. They have been taken out of the bush up in Queensland and brought down here as trackers. They may be very good, but I am not going to take the responsibility of taking them under my charge, for in the event of a mistake in tracking I should have to bear the whole onus.” I said, “No, thanks, I would not think of doing it, but if the Chief Secretary wishes I would accept a suitable rank in the force, and do my best to assist them in looking after the trackers—such as picking men that are suitable, because all men are not—to look after them—teaching the mc how to do so. I will do so, and take the men out and see what good they are for trackers.” Mr. Chomley said, “Will you come up and see the Chief Secretary?” and he went up with me and went in before me, and a few minutes after I was called in, and Mr. Berry said, “Mr. O’Connor, you have heard what Mr.
Chomley said?” and I said, “I hope you have heard what I said to Mr. Chomley;” and he said, “Yes, it was never my intention to give you a position solely in charge of the trackers and nothing else; my offer was as an officer in this service, and of course I would expect you would assist in any way you could in looking after the black trackers, but I never for a moment thought that you could sacrifice your duties and confine yourself solely to the black trackers as you did before.” I said upon those conditions of course I would accept the appointment, he then said, “Well, Mr. O’Connor, when do you think you can go up?” “Well,” I said, “I could go up at once but there is this Commission; I must first of all find out from them.” And he made some remark I cannot quite remember—“Oh yes, I forgot the Commission—better let the thing remain until you get permission from them to go up.” So I asked the Commission then. That is the whole thing that passed, and you gave me permission and then retracted it.

11846. Had you any conversation with any member of the police force prior to your receiving that telegram from Mr. Chomley?—Never—not one.

11847. No conversation as to the probability of your joining the Victorian police force any time within a month of receiving the telegram?—Never since the Glenrowan affair, and it was just as great a surprise to me as probably it was to a great number of others when I was offered it.

11848. Did you have any conversation with any member of the police force after receiving the offer of the appointment, and before the morning that we took objection to your appointment?—I never spoke to any member of the police force outside our men, until I had seen Mr. Berry and met them in this room, and then I spoke to Mr. Sadleir and I spoke to Mr. Nicolson.

11849. Would it be unfair to say whether they approved or not?—Mr. Nicolson did strongly approve of it and Mr. Sadleir also at that time, but they said that it would cause a great deal of dissatisfaction in the force amongst the constables.

11850. Did he tell you that it would be contrary to the regulations, which have the effect of law?—He did not, but I have seen the regulations.

11851. If you will look at that list, you will see the inspectors there—[The witness did so]. Were you to be in addition to those men or to take the place of any of them?—That is more than I can tell you.

11852. You did not hear?—No.

11853. The rank was not decided upon, except that you would not take anything under an inspector?—I did not say so to them.

11854. You would not accept anything under?—No.

11855. You would not have taken a lower position than that of inspector in the police?—No.

11856. I ask you now, having reference to the regulations, are you aware that an appointment to that position, there being no vacancy, would be contrary to the regulations?—No.

11857. They provide that, “When a vacancy occurs in the higher grades of the force, and the duties of the vacant office are of such a nature that the Governor in Council shall be of opinion that there is no person of lower grade in the department who is competent to discharge them, the Governor in Council may appoint such person as he may think fit, although not previously engaged in the police force, and with or without examination or probation?”—Yes.

11858. I contend that you could not have got that legally unless there was a vacancy?—How can you tell there was not a vacancy? I believe there are two or three inspectors short, but I could not state positively. I believe when I was up in the North-Eastern district, there were one or two or three inspectors short, I cannot say positively so, therefore it would come within the Act if there were.

11859. You do not know of your own knowledge there was one short?—No, I never enquired.

11860. Those telegrams sent by Mr. Hare have been put in?—I have never seen them.

11861. “Captain Standish, Melbourne Club, Melbourne.—The pilot engine was stopped half-a-mile from Glenrowan, and we were told that the line had been pulled up by the Kellys miles beyond Glenrowan. Train and pilot went up to the Glenrowan station. I jumped out of train and went to station-master’s house. The wife told me everybody in Glenrowan had been taken into the bush by the Kellys. I immediately ordered every man out of the train, and at same moment Constable Bracken rushed up saying he had escaped from the house and struck me in the arm (not seriously). I immediately got the house surrounded by all the police force amongst the constables.

11862. Is there anything more you wish to say?—I may just point out that there have been a great number of witnesses who stated that they did not see me, and did not know I was there and all this. Well, in any court of law if one man does see you it upsets all the evidence of those who do not—is not that the fact?

11863. Is there any one that did not see you during the day?—Yes, certainly.

11864. Is there any one witness that we have examined who makes that statement?—Yes, that they did not see me on the ground, doing duty on the ground—I believe Senior-Constable Johnson denied having seen me. I wish to add as to the position in the drain being so extraordinarily safe, that the man alongside of me, Trooper Jimmy, a Queensland tracker, was wounded, and I stood exactly the same chance of being wounded that he did, and the others in the drain also, and when he came down to Essendon he showed symptoms of erysipelas through suffering from his injuries, and I called in Dr. Turner, who attended him several times and made a charge of four guineas, which was refused to be paid—I suppose by the Police Department.

11865. You made a claim?—No, the doctor did. That was done although the medical attendance on Mr. Hare was over £600, and I believe it was paid.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o’clock.

THURSDAY, 16TH JUNE 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
J. H. Graves, Esq., M.L.A.,
W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,

John Sadleir further examined.

11866. By Mr. O’Connor.—You have heard, during some of the evidence given at this Commission, John Sadleir, reflections cast upon me, as showing a want of courage?—I heard a good deal of the evidence to that effect.

11867. Now will you state what was my behaviour during the expeditions when you accompanied me; did I evince any fear?—You mean in March and April 1879?

11868. Yes?—Certainly not.

11869. Did I not request that only two constables should accompany me?—Yes, I am pretty sure of that.

11870. Will you tell the Commission what I always asked you to allow when we came upon tracks which were fresh, and which we all thought were the outlaws’—I mean as to the working of the trackers?—You asked me to hold back all the white police and let you go on with your boys alone, which I refused to do.

11871. And in your opinion it was just the opposite to showing fear in meeting the outlaws?—Oh, most decidedly; we came to an understanding that I could not allow that early in our first trip.

11872. From the time you arrived at Glenrowan on the morning of the 28th June until you left did you consider I showed a want of courage:

11873. Then, from your own knowledge of me, a charge of this nature would be untrue?—So far as after I arrived on the ground.

11874. That is from your own knowledge of me?—Yes.

11875. Do you remember the first occasion of my going out in search of the outlaws?—You went out first with me.

11876. Do you remember it?—Yes.

11877. In my evidence, page 50, question No. 1074, I said—“Prior to leaving, I told Captain Standish that I only required two of his men; but this I was told was not sufficient, and I must take not less than six Victorian constables with me. Captain Standish informed me, in the presence of Mr. Sadleir, that I was to be in charge of the party.” Is this true or not?—Yes, that is perfectly true. I would like to state to the Commission, in explanation of my share in that, I was at the time not quite certain that I could stand the exposure, and thought that I should probably have to return in a day or two.

11878. By the Commission.—You stated in your previous evidence you had been suffering from rheumatic fever?—Yes, also Mr. O’Connor being a stranger I wished to avoid any dispute with the head of the department in his presence. Captain Standish’s order was an unlawful one, he had no power to give it, it was not in his power.

11879. What order was that?—That Mr. O’Connor was to be considered as in charge of the party, and as soon as ever I found I could stand the exposure, I gave Mr. O’Connor to understand I was the senior officer. The facts as stated by Mr. O’Connor were perfectly true that Captain Standish did put him in charge or say he was in charge of that party.

11880. To you?—Yes, in my presence.

11881. You now express the opinion that, not to have any unpleasantness, you submitted temporarily to that?—Yes, for the two reasons that it was uncertain that I could remain out, and I wished to avoid disputes with the head of the department before a stranger, Mr. O’Connor.

11882. Am I to understand that this order was given without any previous consultation with you?—
None whatever.

11883. Your reasons for not remonstrating then could not have influenced Captain Standish; he was not aware of your reasons?—No, I should think not; it came upon me as a great surprise.

11884. He had not consulted you before?—No; and it was contrary to all the regulations of the service; and if he had consulted me I should have known what to do.

11885. Is not that an action in every sense that would be resented in any service?—It is actually unlawful; no officer can do it. Our ranks are apportioned by the Governor in Council, and no head of the department has any right, without actual suspension from duty, to take such a step.

11886. In question 229, Mr. O’Connor is questioning Captain Standish, “Do you not remember saying to Mr. Sadleir that, although he was superintendent, he was to be under me for that party?—Certainly not.” That was an independent command given to Mr. O’Connor by Captain Standish?—We were, three of us, standing on the hearth.

11887. I mean it is not the position of parties, but it was an independent command; he gave him the command in your district independent of you?—No, there could not with that distinction. If I accompanied the party, I held my rank in spite of Captain Standish or anybody else, except the Governor in Council.

11888. Did Captain Standish say that at that time?—He said that or words exactly to that effect; there is no question at all about it.

11889. Was that said in jest or in earnest?—No, it was said in earnest, and I was very much offended, of course, and hardly knew how to take it at the moment.

11890. So that in reality you considered that Captain Standish, you being the superintendent of that district, gave Mr. O’Connor a separate command in the district, not under you in any way whatever?—It was an order that turned things so completely upside down that I did not know what to make of it—no one can give a junior authority over a senior officer.

11891. You say now by that act he did in reality, so far as his words are concerned, put Mr. O’Connor over you for the time being?—Certainly, that was his object.

11892. By Mr. O’Connor.—To your knowledge, did Captain Standish ever give an order of the same effect to other officers?—Oh, no; as far as my knowledge goes, that was the only order of that sort given by him.

11893. May I remind you of the time when Mr. Brook Smith was in charge of the Beechworth district; do you not remember Captain Standish wiring up Mr. Smith and telling him not to interfere in the Kelly work?—I cannot say that I do; the telegrams will show that or not.

11894. Are you not aware, in conversation then, that Captain Standish repeatedly told Detective Ward that he was to be interfered with by Mr. Brook Smith—that he was to do all the work connected with the Kelly business?—That was quite understood.

11895. In the same line of reasoning, that was an absurd and illegal order, to put Detective Ward or Senior-Constable Mullane over an officer?—It was not quite on all-fours with the order he gave to you and me, because they were not acting in the same business; but it was disparaging to Mr. Smith, no doubt.

11896. Do you not remember Captain Standish ordering Mr. Brook Smith on a tour, the longest tour he could possibly make, to prevent him being at Beechworth during a particular time?—Yes; he sent him to Tintaldra, Corryong, and all up that country.

11897. Was that not for nothing else but to prevent him having anything to do with the Kelly work?—Yes, on the particular occasion.

11898. At questions Nos. 1085 and 1086 there is this evidence:—“Had you any the first time?—None. We went up the King River, and on the fifth day out, namely, the 21st April, arrived at De Gamaro station, informed us of his having found on the run, near the Black range, a horse answering the description of one of the horses ridden away from Jerilderie by one of the outlaws, offered to show us the horse and its tracks; but just as we were arranging for an early start for the morrow a constable galloped up with a letter from Captain Standish, saying if we were not on anything good perhaps it would be better to return. ‘Anything good?’—Any good information. The letter stated that Mr. Hare thought he had found some traces in the Warby ranges. Mr. Sadleir and I conferred together, and sent Captain Standish word of what we had been told, and as he had left us to decide, we preferred to follow our own information; but if he (Captain Standish) still thought it advisable for us to return, he was to send us word again and we would obey. This he did the next day, and we returned to Benalla immediately, on the morning of the 23rd”—Yes, that is substantially true. There is one thing I do not quite remember. I know the man referred to; he represented this horse, not as one of the Jerilderie horses, but as a horse recently very hard ridden, and that could only have been left there by some of the outlaws or their friends.

11899. I admit we did not know it was the police?—The last is quite true. I am not quite sure about your dates, and we were about to go in search for the horse when we returned on being called in.

11900. Is my statement in questions Nos. 1091 and 1092 correct:—“Captain Standish showed a great want of interest in any work in the Kelly pursuit. This was not only observed by myself, but by both Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare.”—“Was that verbally, or how?—Repeatedly, day after day. Mr. Sadleir will be ready to prove it, and I suppose Mr. Hare will repeat what he has often said to me. In fact, Mr. Sadleir often observed to me that he never could get two minutes’ conversation with Captain Standish upon Kelly business; that the moment he began to talk upon the subject Captain Standish would take up a novel and commence to read”?—Well, Captain Standish is not here, and not in the service.

11901. No matter; I made this statement, and it is to corroborate or otherwise my statement?—What is the question then?

11902. Nos. 1091 and 1092. If the Chairman thinks I ought not to put it I will withdraw it.

The Chairman.—I think it may be put, under the circumstances.

11903. By Mr. O’Connor.—Will you answer that?—It is quite true that Captain Standish showed a want of interest in the work; we all remarked it—every officer there.

11904. Do you remember Captain Standish ever telling you or you hearing his opinion of me; I refer to the time that he wrote a certain letter to Mr. Fosbery?—Oh, yes; that was immediately after you came.

11905. About a month after, I believe?—I believe it was sooner. He told me he had written to Mr. Fosbery to say he wished he had several officers like you; he spoke in very flattering terms about you. I did riot feel the disparagement, at least, I do not care about other people’s opinion; but I remember Mr. Hare was very angry about it. It was treated in such a way, though Captain Standish did not mean it perhaps, that it was a disparagement of every other officer in the service.

11906. By the Commission.—Might it not have been with regard to Mr. O’Connor’s age?—It might have been, though I do not think it was.

11907. It did not strike you as being in that connection at all?—No. Captain Standish was a man to take ready fancies, and he gave expression to them. I do not wish to give any more weight to the thing; I would have passed it at the time without comment, if another officer had not felt offended at it.

11908. By Mr. O’Connor.—Do you remember saying how reticent Captain Standish was in his information to you and me?—He had a queer way when he got information; he made a mystery of it for a little time.

11909. But he made no mystery to Mr. Hare?—No; he went to him; he was more intimate with him than with the others. He made a mystery of it for half-an-hour, an hour, or perhaps an afternoon, and then he would come and confide in me; and I think in nearly all cases he would come to you afterwards. He had an air of mystery. He was unaccustomed to the work, and he exaggerated the importance of his information.

11910. Did not Mr. Hare receive the information and have all the arrangements made before we heard about it?—It was simply this, that Mr. Hare generally got the information before we did. Sometimes only a few moments, when he could make no arrangements.

11911. Do you know any cases where he got information which was kept from us for an afternoon?—Without specifying a case, I have already said he would keep up that air of mystery for a few minutes, an hour, or perhaps an afternoon. I think it was more Captain Standish’s way than any set purpose.

11912. You have heard in the evidence several references by Captain Standish as to the slowness of the trackers working?—Yes.

11913. It has been stated that on account of the baggage horses, we could not be any good?—I think that is not a correct assertion. Of course we had to have a large number of pack-horses. Your boys were more susceptible of cold than white men, and it was necessary to carry a fly or tent for their blankets; but we had no real trial of your speed that I can call to mind. They were very active on foot. On one occasion we had a very long trip to search for some place, and they were certainly then quicker than our horses. Your men, and in better condition.

11914. We were on tracks once or twice, were we not?—Yes.

11915. That we thought were undoubtedly the outlaws?—Yes.

11916. Did you then complain of a want of quickness on the part of the men?—No; but in both those cases the boys followed the tracks on foot, if I recollect rightly.

11917. Excuse me, I think you are mistaken—do you remember the time that Constable Graves was with our party?—Yes.

11918. Do you remember our picking up tracks on the top of the range over from Pyers’ Gap?—Yes.

11919. Were we on foot?—No, not when we picked up the tracks.

11920. Did we not follow the tracks to the selector’s house on the side of the range?—Your men actually on the tracks, I think, were on foot, and went down the range through burnt ground. The horses were near, I know, because you or I got on our horses occasionally. The tracks were very difficult.

11921. They were very old?—They were. I will not be positive about it, but I think that particular work was done on foot.

11922. But was our party singular in having pack-horses?—No, every party after you came had pack-horses.

11923. Every party, from March, had pack-horses?—Yes; and there was very little difference between two pack-horses and four—they make no difference.

11924. Did not I often state to you that if we were on sure information, we would go without pack-horses or anything?—Certainly. We did that at the King, where we thought we had sure information. There we left our pack-horses at a Chinaman’s, and one or two constables to watch them. Indeed, I think we left all our horses there, and got upon the tracks where they went through a fence, and all in there up the King to Morphy’s selection.

11925. Did we not send all our white men away?—Yes, there were only you and I and the black boys, I think, out on the tracks, so that the plan you proposed at first was carried out at this time.

11926. Did we not get on the track of men that answered the description of the outlaws?—We thought we were on the track of the outlaws at the time, I know.

11927. And they were quite fresh?—Yes;

11928. Do you remember the occasion that Mr. Hare and I referred to about the boy Moses tracking?—I was not with you then.

11929. Do you remember the occasion?—I am not quite sure.

11930. Do you remember the time Mr. Hare was out and came with this boy Moses, when he came in and reported about the rapidity with which this boy tracked?—Yes, I remember that being talked about, but I was not there to see for myself.

11931. Do you remember hearing Mr. Hare’s opinion about the boy at the time, about his wonderful rapidity?—Yes, I remember that before that Mr. Hare had very little faith in the trackers, though he was one that sent for them first; but I understood, after that trip up that country, his opinion was changed—it was about Tom Lloyd’s, some of the ranges about Greta or thereabouts, as I believe.

11932. Then my statement in my evidence that Mr. Hare, after our first trip together, had such a good opinion of us that he said we should never go out unless upon sure information is correct?—Yes, I believe that was the occasion he said it, and I know it was about that time.

11933. In reference to the Lancefield bank robbery, will you state if Sub-Inspector Baber ever told you about it, and, if so, what did he say?—I cannot remember that he did.

11934. By the Commission.—Before that I wish to ask you, in your opinion, would the trackers act as well in twos or threes as in larger numbers?—Not against armed men. I have given you a written statement on that; I endeavoured to make that plain.

11935. What we want to elicit is your opinion as to whether it would be wiser, as a matter of policy, to keep the black forces at one centre, or to have them in different portions of the colony; say, in the country where the outlaws were?—If it is a mere opinion, and a recommendation, considering all the present circumstances, I should advise, as long as there was any danger in that district, to leave them there in a body.

11936. Do you think, from what you have seen of the blacks, that it is better for general efficiency anywhere that six or seven be kept together, or that they be detached?—There is no object in keeping six together, except as they combined to search for the gang; for ordinary search work, such as tracking horse-stealing in the Wimmera, where you do not expect to find an armed man at the end of your work, they will do very well in twos. If they would go singly they would do equally well, but they get lonely singly; but for ordinary duty, suppose there was no probability of another armed gang being out, you can separate them as you please, so long as you keep them contented. That is my opinion.

11937. The next question is a question of policy, whether those men will work as well under officers that one or two may be under as they would work in a body under such an officer as Mr. O’Connor?—Oh, they would certainly work under an officer like Mr. O’Connor, who understands them, better under all circumstances, singly or six together, because they are full of tricks and they have to be watched. A person must be up to their dodges, and other men do not understand them. I am satisfied they do not. I am satisfied that where those trackers have failed, in ordinary peaceful duty so to speak, it has been through want of proper handling, not any want of skill on their part. We had no benefit from the first trackers, because there were only two, and they anticipated danger if they thought they were on the tracks. I think they may be possibly kept in small detachments if the circumstances allow and if they are properly handled. We will say suppose those six men that know each other begin to get lonely at Sandhurst or Wimmera, let them meet one another, change across; but in the face of armed resistance I would not trust two trackers, or three perhaps, or anything like a small number for a day.

11938. By Mr. O’Connor.—Then you do not remember hearing Mr. Baber telling you about the Lancefield robbery, about the tracking?—I do not think I saw him after that for months, and I really forget if there was nay conversation. If you recall any circumstances to my mind I may remember, he has spoken in a general way certainly, and he told me the tracks were picked up under various circumstances, I suppose in a general way certainly, and he told me the tracks were picked up under various difficulties; rain, I think he said, was the principal one.

11939. What do you know yourself about the Lancefield bank robbery?—Nothing at all.

11940 You accompanied him to Kilmore?—Yes.

11941. Was it not raining heavily all that night?—Yes.

11942. The next morning we had to go to pick up those tracks?—Yes.

11943. Did I ever refuse to let you have any or all my trackers when you asked me?—I never asked you for them.

11944. When the department asked me?—You had an objection to parting from them.

11945. But for the loan of them to work?—No; we missed horses from our paddocks, and you gave them for that and any business of that sort.

11946. Did I not send men to Sandhurst at one time?—Yes; there were two men started for Sandhurst, and did their work and came back again.

11947. Is Constable Kirkham, in your opinion, correct when he said he was never under my command?—He was under your command all the time.
11948. Could he have misunderstood his instructions when you and Mr. Nicolson handed him over to me?—I do not remember what the instructions actually were, but I know what his position was; he was placed entirely under your orders.

11949. Did he not take all his orders from me?—Yes, all his orders. If he came to me for anything connected with your party, I always insisted that it should be with your knowledge and authority.

11950. Did you ever hear that he questioned an order from me?—Never; and all the officers looked upon you as a brother officer in the service; and I believe the constables all looked upon you in the position as an officer.

11951. Then it was impossible for Constable Kirkham to doubt that I was his immediately superior officer?—Of course, Kirkham is technically correct in saying you were not an officer of Victorian police; but we never looked upon it in that light. As a proof of that, the moment I landed at Glenrowan, knowing we had always conferred with you as an officer and looked upon you as in that position, I went straight to you; and that was my object in going straight to you.

11952. Do you consider Constable Kirkham qualified to give an opinion as to the capabilities of my men in opposition to my opinion?—Certainly not. I think Constable Kirkham is a very poor man with the trackers. He is a very good-tempered man, and manages to get on very well with them, but I do not think he has the art of guiding them in their work.

11953. Did you ever notice a want of courage on the part of my men who were out on those expeditions?—No. I think there was a difference between them, but that was more from what I heard from yourself. I never noticed a want of courage.

11954. They were always willing to go to the front?—Yes. There were two or three of those men very brave men. There is no question at all about it.

11955. Do you remember coming to me in my position at the Glenrowan fight?—Yes, I went straight to you.

11956. You have a perfect recollection of the position?—Yes.

11957. Did you fire from this position?—I fired myself from that position at the outlaws, when they came out (or what we supposed to be the outlaws) striking on their armour, making a noise. At this time I did not believe they were in armour, and I fired from that position myself on them, with a Winchester repeating rifle.

11958. Constable Barry swore that my position was seven feet deep, any portion of it, and you could only see the roof of the hotel—is that correct?—That is not correct. You might find a place seven feet deep, within a yard or two of where we were, but there was a second bank in the drain, where I stood, and sat at intervals in speaking to you.

11959. Was there a tree or stump, or any other covering in front of the house, between these drains?—Nothing, except the posts of the fence, which was not a covering.

11960. When you sent for me, did I not at once come to you?—Yes, when I sent the constable for you.

11961. Did I not accompany you round the line of men on several occasions?—You were mostly in my company the rest of the day, after that, around the men.

11962. Did I not assist you in advice, and so on?—Yes, I communicated with you fully, and conferred with you in every thing.

11963. Do you remember the conversation you had with Captain Standish the day after Glenrowan, when he ordered you to put Mr. Hare’s name in general orders?—That is a matter of complaint by myself, if anything is said.

11964. It is in reference to my accuracy. Did you not ask for my name and yours to accompany Mr. Hare’s?—Will the Commission say whether I am to answer that. I wish to conform to the rule established by the Commission, that is, when it is unnecessary to speak unpleasantly of another absent person that it should not be done; and I asked Mr. O’Connor to avoid making use of me in that way.

11965. I quite agree with that, but this is in reference to myself. The question is, after the Glenrowan capture, Captain Standish came to Mr. Sadleir and ordered him to put Mr. Hare’s name in the general orders. Mr. Sadleir said, “Captain Standish, I want to say” (or words to that effect) “unless Mr. O’Connor’s and my name appear with those,” and Captain Standish refused and made a remark, when Mr. Sadleir repeated that it ought to be. Captain Standish said, “You, Nicolson, and O’Connor are so d——d jealous of Hare that you would do something or other.” I want to know is that correct or not?—(To the Commission)—Am I to speak on that?

11966. By the Commission.—It is a proper thing to enquire into?—Then I would sooner state the whole circumstances.

11967. With reference to that, the question asked is a question that has a public side to it, and one that we intend to investigate very closely before we are done, so long as your statement is given fairly?—You understand I am not desiring to hide anything, or I am not desiring to go to the other extremity.

11968. I want to protect you in that by saying it is of public importance?—Then I can have no hesitation in speaking.
11969. By Mr. O’Connor.—Will you explain the whole thing?—Yes. Shortly after Captain Standish landed on the platform at Glenrowan, after the day’s work was concluded, he said to me, “I have a telegram from the Governor, thanking Mr. Hare for his conduct.” I said nothing to him at the time. He desired me to put this into orders, which means publishing the commendation of the Governor. On that occasion I said nothing. I was too busy. I had resolved what to do. Later in the evening, at Benalla, he came to me again, and said, “Do not forget to put the Governor’s message into orders.” I said to him, “Captain Standish, I think that O’Connor’s and my name should also be mentioned.” He said, “They are the Governor’s orders, and I cannot alter them.” Then I said, “The Governor is not fully informed, and I look to you to inform him fully of the circumstances of the day.” I said, “I shall see you in the morning, I suppose,” and be said, “Yes, I shall be at your office in the morning.” Then in the morning I said to him, “Captain Standish, will you please to listen to me for a few minutes without getting irritated or angry,” and I asked him to sit down and listen to me patiently. I said, “In reference to your orders about the Governor’s message to you, did Hare take the Kellys?” I said, “Unfortunately he was wounded before they were taken,” and I argued with him to that effect for some quarter of an hour, perhaps longer. I said, “It is not fair towards O’Connor, though I am only now speaking for myself. It is not fair towards me that our names should be passed over.” I had to repeat this several times and urge it. He said it was all our duty—jealousy; that Nicolson was mad with jealousy, and that I was mad with jealousy; and I said, “No, there is no jealousy about it; I only ask you to do what is simply fair towards O’Connor and myself. If the commendation is worth anything, we deserve to share in it.” I said, “I am seeking no credit for the duty beyond this: that we found ourselves with fifty policemen around the outlaws shut up in a house, and had to capture them or destroy them. I am claiming no heroism for myself or anybody else. It was a simple piece of work, the tamest piece of work I ever was in, but whatever the credit is we should share in it with our men.” He then yielded, and said, “Then wait till you hear from me.

POLICE.

16th June 1881.

John Sadleir.
Standish had explained that that was it, I would have quite understood it.

_The witness withdrew._

S. O'Connor, 16th June 1881.

Stanhope O’Connor further examined.

11980. _By the Commission._—Arising out of the question as to whether your black trackers are considered more efficient in small detachments or singly for tracking purposes, what is your opinion?—It is a fact, not an opinion, that the men are more efficient in small bodies.

11981. Of how many?—Of not less than five or six.

11983. The fact is, you consider it is better for men to belong to the same tribe?—No, I do not say that. We never do that in Queensland. There must be two men of a detachment of the same tribe, but neighbouring tribes have blood relationships, and those are friends—they are great friends; and if you get two of those men, they will remain and be as jolly and cheerful as possible.

11984. How long were you in Queensland?—I think eight years.

11985. Connected with the black trackers all the time?—Yes. I was up in the northern portion of Queensland, the Conway Barracks, near Bowen, at first, and I left that after twelve months, and went up to Palmer goldfields.

11986. So you are thoroughly acquainted with them?—Yes.

11987. Do they all speak English?—When you enlist a man he does not; you must teach him.

11988. Do you understand the language?—There are so many tribes. I understand a good deal of it, but one of the rules of the service is never to allow the men to speak in any way except in English. We take them out with the old troopers, and teach them their work.

11989. The old black trackers?—Yes; troopers we always call them in Queensland. It takes three years to make a man efficient. Very often these men are found to be utterly useless. I have had black boys who got lost half a mile from the barracks in Queensland. It is the general rule that they are good trackers, but there are exceptions.

11990. Is it not from the fact that they have very quick senses of hearing and sight they become so expert?—They have got undoubtedly quick sight, but their hearing I would not say.

11991. The sense of smell, is that very acute?—It is.

11992. Do you think an English boy might be trained in the same way?—No.

11993. Not born in Queensland?—No; they get very good, but the very best white tracker I ever knew could not come up to the worst black tracker I ever had.

11994. What is the difference?—It is sight, nothing but sight. I had one boy in this detachment named Johnny; he was without doubt—all the officers I know said—the best boy they ever saw for tracking ---for picking up a track. I was out with him on one occasion (there had been a horrible murder committed) with another officer who had a detachment of eight men, and I had my detachment of eight men. This boy Johnny fell to the rear, while we were looking for the tracks, and the fifteen other troopers passed in a line, and the boy Johnny as he passed up to me pulled up, and said to me, “Marmie, there is the track.” I pulled up, and could not believe the boy, and I got off the track and I measured fifteen paces to where he saw the track from where he pulled up. The other men had all passed it and not seen it, and where he pointed it out to me I could not see it till he got off and traced it with his finger.

11995. What does “Marmie” mean?—It is an old Queensland black word, meaning “Mister.” All native police officers are called “Marmies.” I wish the following document in reference to the trackers to be inserted if permissible.

11996. _The Chairman._—Very well. [The same was handed in, as follows:]—“Police Department, Melbourne, 27th May 1881. Sir,—In reply to your telegram of yesterday enquiring as to the working of the Queensland trackers, I beg to state,—1. That the party of trackers who accompanied the expedition of 11th March 1879, as well as one in the following April, showed great skill in tracking. This is not merely my impression, but my actual observation of their work. On one of these trips the tracks were very faint indeed, and could not have been followed without the aid of the trackers. On the other trip the tracks were much more plain and recent, and as it was supposed that they were those of the outlaws, and that the offenders were not far ahead, a good opportunity was furnished of judging of the spirit of the trackers when danger was to be apprehended. On this point, too, their conduct was satisfactory. 2. Referring to your enquiry as to whether the trackers work better in twos or threes or all together, I am clearly of opinion that where time pursuit is of an armed hand, as were the Kelly gang, it is idle to expect a very few trackers to follow tracks into cover. With the full party the case is different, especially if they rely on one another, and are directed by a person who understands them and their work. Then one or two can be placed in advance on each wing, and they are almost certain to discover any ambush without themselves being seen. This gives the men actually on the tracks perfect confidence. If the offenders are discovered in concealment, the scouts will inform the whole party of their exact position. If the offenders are still moving, their tracks will probably be observed by the scouts, when the rest of the party is signalled to, and the work is thus greatly expedited. For ordinary tracking, where no dangerous resistance is expected, two trackers, and often one alone, will be found sufficient for the work. The above particulars show the result of my own experience so far as it has gone; and having made it my care during the last few years to consult various persons well versed in the business, I have found a singular unanimity of opinion to the same effect.—I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant, J. SADLEIR, Superintendent of Police. The Secretary Royal Police Commission.”

S. O’Connor, 16th June 1881.

The witness withdrew.

Charles Hope Nicolson further examined.

11997. By Mr. O’Connor.—Do you remember taking charge at Benalla?—I do.
11998. On time occasion I was there?—Yes, July 1879.
11999. Do you remember me telling you that I was afraid that we would not be allowed to be in the taking of the Kellys; that was what I imagined Captain Standish intended?—That “we”?
12000. Myself and my men—the Queensland police; do you remember any conversation?—Yes.
12001. My complaining about not being allowed to be in at the death, in other words?—You were referring to something that had passed, not that you were afraid you would not be.
12002. Can you recollect any conversation I had about it with you; do you remember my saying to you that Captain Standish seemed disposed to prevent our being in; any good information—being sent out on any good information?—Yes; but you were alluding to what was past.
12003. And then what did you reply to me?—My reply to you was that whilst I was there you should receive every fair play, and that I would consider it a very improper thing—in fact, a discredit to the colony—to treat you otherwise; that is to say, to make any attempt to keep you from being present at the capture.
12004. Do you remember me referring to one case in particular, when Captain Standish received information?—I told you also I did not consider any officer in the police force would act in that way towards you.
12005. Do you not remember me telling you about one particular case?—Yes; you alluded to a case that has been mentioned in evidence about the party going out to a hut.
12006. And about Captain Standish’s reply when I asked to go out?—Yes.
12007. That he would endeavour to take the Kellys without our valuable assistance; did I not tell you that?—Yes.
12008. Some time after you were in Benalla there was a horse found which turned out to be one of the police horses from New South Wales?—Yes, I recollect that distinctly; both horses turned up at the same time, the two Jerilderie horses.
12009. But this particular one found on the De Gamera station?—Yes; it was one of the two. I understood it was one that had been described to you and Mr. Sadleir some time previous when out there.
12010. Can you give any information about the Lancefield bank robbery; it happened while you were in charge there?—Yes. I received a telegram announcing the robbery of the bank there, and an order to despatch you with your trackers to Kilmore, and that you would proceed from thence to Lancefield.
12011. You know nothing about the result?—That order came from the Chief Commissioner of Police.
12012. Did you ever hear what work was done by the trackers?—Well, I heard it from yourself.
12013. You did not hear it officially from any one?—No; and I heard it from Mr. Baber, I believe. He was subsequently up in the Benalla district, and in the course of conversation he told me of it.
12014. Did he mention how well or how badly the boys worked?—He spoke very highly indeed.
12015. He did not complain their movements were so slow?—Yes.
12016. In question 1109 of my evidence, after that information which Mr. Sadleir got about the armed men being seen on a certain road?—Yes, I know the circumstance you allude to. I say, “After this we were unable to get any information fresh enough to work upon, as heavy rains always had occurred before we got the news, until one day, I cannot remember the date, at 6 p.m., we had information that the outlaws had been seen on the railway line about Wangaratta, with the telegraph wires broken. We started within two hours of the notice to the scene, but upon arriving at Wangaratta got word that the whole thing was a mistake, and was explained in the press next day. It was a threshing machine pulled down the telegraph wires in passing across the railway line.”
12017. Is that a correct statement?—Yes, with the exception of this about near Wangaratta. It was near Chiltern, on the other side of Wangaratta, and at Wangaratta we were stopped by the news that it was a threshing machine passing the line had broken down the wires.

12018. How long was it before we were ready to start after getting word?—We have reduced the time of starting to something under half-an-hour.

12019. About twenty minutes?—Yes.

12020. I say, “After this appearance of activity on the part of the police, information ceased for some time to come in, as the Kellys got a fright that if they showed out we should be after them at once. This we got from their friends; so some time passed before the outlaws began to forget the matter.” Is that correct? Can you recollect that for a long time after that we did not get—when I say “long time,” I mean some weeks after—we did not hear any further, and we heard from the friends that the outlaws had got a scare?—The outlaws were aware of that; and I believe the outlaws were aware of that. I would not like to answer that without seeing that return I sent in.

12021. I go on to say, “This put us—Mr. Nicolson, Mr. Sadleir, and myself—on our guard that unless good reliable information came to us, we, I mean the party, should not go out”?—That is certainly correct; I can say that myself.

12022. In reference to this series of communications to the Queensland Government, do you not remember me telling you that I knew there were a series of communication?—Yes.

12023. And complaining to you; mentioning my complaint to you, that I thought the private communications in reference to taking the men from under my charge was a very improper proceeding?—You complained of the attempts to take the men from under your charge. That is the complaint I showed to you in the first instance, when I came up there.

12024. But latterly, again, did I not state that I considered it very wrong of Captain Standish making communications at the time, just before the time of taking over Moses?—Yes.

12025. Will you inform the Commission about the fact of Moses’ transfer from the Queensland police to the Victorian police?—There is a communication on the subject which speaks for itself; which I would rather have produced.

12026. There was a conversation I had with you when you presented that telegram to me, as a matter of courtesy. I said I would do nothing of the kind—did I say that “I will not hand over the men”?—I remember you making some objection to handing over the men.

12027. I said Captain Standish ought to have communicated with me?—Yes; but you did hand over the men.

12028. After you represented to me it would be advisable to do so, and I listened to your advice?—Yes. I think you considered that the man was not to be handed over until you left the colony. You were going away.

12029. During your stay at Benalla, did I ever inform you that Captain Standish and Mr. Hare had, on several occasions, wished me to join the Victorian force?—Yes; that Captain Standish and Mr. Hare had several times spoken of your joining the Victorian force—not in my presence—but you told me of this previous to my coming up there in July. I may state this also, that I was requested by Captain Standish to come up before he left. About the month of March I was requested by Captain Standish to come up and see him at Benalla about some business, and bring up some documents with me, which were referred to in my evidence, for his signature, and some other things. When I arrived he told me of the arrival of Queensland trackers; that they had been despatched that morning, Mr. O’Connor and Mr. Sadleir with the party. I had never seen Mr. O’Connor at this time, and he said he wished he had more officers of the same kind in the force. He said that to me on that clay.

12030. By the Commission.—Meaning by that smart young officers?—Yes.

12031. That is what you understood?—Yes.

12032. By Mr. O’Connor.—Do you remember upon my senior-constable leaving the colony handing me a Victorian constable in his place?—I do, and I might mention the circumstances. You left your senior-constable at McIvor. You came up with Constable Kirkham in charge of your men. You related the circumstances under which you had left your senior-constable behind, and you requested that Constable Kirkham would replace him at the time for the present, and he was accordingly handed over to you. Kirkham was one of the party sent out to Lancfield.

12033. Is it possible that Constable Kirkham could have misunderstood the instructions?—No, not at all. I should tell you further about his instruction. Sergeant Whelan, part of whose duty it was to oversee everything on the station, on one occasion mentioned to me, and I have no doubt he did to Mr. Sadleir—I am not sure—some fault he had to find with Constable Kirkham. I do not know what it was I think it was for being out too late at night, or something of that kind, and Constable Kirkham was disposed to repudiate Sergeant Whelan’s supervision over him. Kirkham was sent for by me, or I went and saw him and spoke to him, and led him to understand that although he was detailed for the charge of your men and under your orders, that still he was also with an understanding with you that he was also under Sergeant Whelan’s supervision—that it was the latter’s duty to see that he performed his duty, and if not, to report him.

12034. Did not Kirkham get all his orders from me?—All his orders, he was not interfered with at all; he was left entirely as your sub-officer.

12035. Then it would be untrue for him to say that he never looked upon me as his superior officer?—It was untrue decidedly. It must be known to every constable at the station.

12036. By the Commission.—In fact, was it to supply the same position of the old man?—Yes, exactly.
12037. By Mr. O'Connor.—I make a statement here. Question 1112, I refer to the last day on which you were at Benalla:—"Mr. Nicolson, a short time after lunch, asked me to dinner at 7 o’clock to meet Mr. Hare, and I accepted his invitation; but about 5.50 p.m. Mr. Nicolson ran up to me, and told me he had to go to town by the six train, and therefore would have to put off the dinner; but he was going to write a note to Mr. Hare explaining his apparent rudeness." Is that correct?—That is quite correct.

12038. Did you see any cause to complain of the conduct of my men or myself during your command up at Benalla?—During the time that I was at Benalla there was no quarrel or difference amongst the officers there, either you, Mr. Sadleir, or myself whatever, and you were attentive to your duties, that is particularly to your men. Your men consequently were happy and well-behaved, so much so that they became quite favorites in the township. In your own conduct personally I never saw anything to take exception to. You were temperate in your manners and language, and in your habits and everything, and in consultation you displayed a thorough knowledge of your duty and a considerable degree of uprightness and ability.

12039. By the Commission.—Will you look at that document; those are the instructions given to Mr. O’Connor by his department in Queensland. Will you look at that passage just at the end of it, there where they are giving him instructions what to do preparatory?—Yes. “Sub-Inspector O’Connor will obey all instructions given him by the Chief Commissioner, and will co-operate cordially and cheerfully with the members of the Victorian or New South Wales police with whom he may be required to serve. He will also from time to time, as opportunity occurs, communicate with the Commissioner of Police, Brisbane.”

12040. What I want to ask is this: does not the first passage of that convey to you yourself, as the superior officer of police, that the position that gentleman was to occupy here was still an officer of police?—In this colony?

12041. An officer attached to the Victorian police?—Decidedly.
12042. With his men?—Yes.
12043. And that he was to obey instructions from the Chief Commissioner here the same as he would from the Chief Commissioner of Brisbane if he were there, He delegates his authority to Captain Standish?—Decidedly.

12044. To order him, an officer of the Queensland police, as if he was a Victorian officer?—Yes.

19045. Is it your opinion, from the wording of that, that Mr. O’Connor was then bound solely to obey the instructions of the Chief Commissioner, or would it be competent for him to obey orders from others?—It would be competent. It was for him to obey the Chief Commissioner of Police of Victoria, excepting the Chief Commissioner in Queensland gave him some instructions to contradict him. I should say he was bound to obey all orders coming from the Chief Commissioner, even though coming through Mr. Sadleir.

12046. If Mr. Sadleir gave those orders, without Captain Standish’s orders, would he then be bound, under those instructions, to obey Mr. Sadleir?—I should think he would.

12047. He was bound to obey Captain Standish, and, through Captain Standish, every superior officer?—Yes.

12048. Do you think that?—Yes, I do.

12049. Without the direct interference of Captain Standish?—Any superior officer that Captain Standish acknowledged.

12050. Do you think that, except Captain Standish, was he not, by those orders, obliged to obey any other officer?—I should think he was, any other officer that Captain Standish placed over him—any superior officer.

12051. If he did not place any other officer over him?—I considered I was over him when I was up there, and, in my absence, that he was under Mr. Sadleir.

12052. Did Captain Standish tell you he was under your orders?—No. I do not think it was necessary.

12053. Are you aware that he led Mr. Sadleir to believe that Mr. O’Connor was independent of him?—I was not aware of that.

Mr. O’Connor.—I do not agree with Mr. Nicolson in that. I consider that I was solely under Captain Standish.

12054. By the Commission (to the witness).—Those orders are very clear and distinct. Do you think his Chief Commissioner wanted him to be under any other officer of Victorian police other than Captain Standish?—Well, you see here, “And will co-operate cordially and cheerfully with the Victorian or New South Wales police.” Speaking very strictly, Captain Standish should have left an order at Benalla, handing Mr. O’Connor over to me; but it was a thing that was understood.

12055. But it was understood the other way, because Mr. Sadleir stated he was placed in a very awkward position, because Captain Standish led him to believe that Mr. O’Connor was over him, or independent of him, at all events?—I was not aware of that. At the same time, I do not think it was absolutely necessary to leave it in writing. It is a thing that would be understood in a disciplined force. “With whom he may be required to serve. He will also, from time to time, as opportunity occurs, communicate with the Commissioner of Police, Brisbane.”

12056. Supposing, now, that you were to send a man of yours to do duty in a private capacity with another gentleman, and told your man to obey “Mr. Brown’s” directions, would you consider he would be bound to obey “Mr. Jones’s” orders without being specially informed of it?—It depends upon circumstances. In the police force, if a man is specially sent up to a district to perform a special duty, he is placed under the superintendent of the district.

12057. But Mr. O’Connor was not a member of the Victorian police?—No.

12058. By Mr. O’Connor.—Did you ever doubt but that I was an officer of this force; did you always look upon me as an officer of this force?—No, I did not; I looked upon you as an officer of the Queensland force attached to us.

12059. By the Commission.—And subject to the orders of the Chief Commissioner?—Yes.

12060. And if he had any orders to give, I think he should have said, “Mr. Nicolson, Mr. O’Connor is under your instructions; tell Mr. O’Connor of that”?—There is no evidence of that.

Mr. O’Connor.—I consider if Captain Standish wanted to do the thing properly he ought to have first asked me if I was willing to be under another man; but if he had done the thing properly, I was only under Captain Standish by my instructions.

16th June 1881.

12061. By the Commission.—And the sworn evidence here is that he told Mr. Sadleir you were in an independent position, or over him?—[The Witness.] I heard of that, and looked upon that as a mistake or an oversight of Captain Standish’s; that Captain Standish had no right to do so, was wrong in doing so. I do not wish to reflect in any way, but I think it was a mistake.

12062. That he was acting outside the police regulations of Victoria?—Yes, decidedly; that he had no power to place Mr. O’Connor over Mr. Sadleir.

12063. Would it not lead Mr. O’Connor into a false position?—Yes, it might; but I understood on that occasion Mr. O’Connor quite understood the matter, and waived the right of command to Mr. Sadleir—in fact, took no notice of it.

12064. As a matter of courtesy?—Yes, courtesy as between two gentlemen.

12065. The next passage is “He was still to report himself in every particular”?—I do not see anything to object to in that.

12066. From that you consider he was serving in a dual capacity, for the time being in the police force here while he remained an officer of the Queensland force, and could be recalled at any time?—Yes, could be recalled at any time.

12067. Does that indicate that he was to keep himself in communication with his Government?—Yes, with the Chief Commissioner of Brisbane.

12068. Does that indicate that he was absolutely under control, and never left the Queensland department?—Decidedly. “He will also from time to time, as opportunity occurs, communicate with the Commissioner of Police, Brisbane.” If I were sending an officer or man to any neighbouring colony on similar duty, that would be one of the conditions.

12069. Read the next?—“He will look carefully after his troopers, and be particular about their arms and ammunition—see that they are properly clothed and fed, and are always in the charge of either himself or the senior-constable.”

12070. If Captain Standish gave an order contrary to that, would he not be bound to obey that instruction in preference to Captain Standish?—Yes, but Mr. O’Connor’s duty first would be to obey that order of Captain Standish’s, and report it to the Commissioner at Brisbane.

12071. Even though he had distinct orders?—“Should it become necessary to form two parties, the sub-inspector is to take one, and the senior-constable the other.”

12072. Now, if Captain Standish ordered a second party to go out with Mr. Sadleir, without either Mr. O’Connor or his sergeant, what would Mr. O’Connor be bound to do?—Well, this is the order to Mr. O’Connor, that if it is necessary to form two parties, he is to take one and the senior-constable is to take the other—Mr. O’Connor and his senior-constable were never to part with the command of the trackers.

12073. My question is, if Captain Standish ordered two of the black trackers to go out with Mr. Sadleir or any one else, would Mr. O’Connor be bound to obey that order of the officer so given, or would he be bound to obey that written authority?—The same principle that I spoke of before applies to this. He would be bound to obey that order of Captain Standish’s, and to report it to his Commissioner; that is the principle laid down in discipline—a man must obey every lawful command of his superior, and, if he is not satisfied with it, he can report it—obey first and report it afterwards, never disobey it; of course a lawful command. A man may disobey an unlawful command.

12074. Would not that be given by an unlawful authority?—No, an unlawful command is something against the law.

12075. What is the next?—“Sub-Inspector O’Connor must recollect that he merely goes as an assistant, that the conduct of affairs is entirely in the hands of the Chief Commissioner and his officers, and therefore that in obeying any orders given him he frees himself from responsibility for anything beyond his own acts.”
12076. Does that not put him completely under the control of the Victorian authorities?—Yes.
12077. Having read that, was that the position, in your opinion, that Mr. O’Connor held the whole time you were there?—No, that must have been modified, because Mr. O’Connor had received communications from his Commissioner that his men were not to be parted from him, and not taken from under his command.
12078. By Mr. O’Connor.—But, nevertheless, did I not assist you in every way I could with my men, in fact, lending you men to go out on ordinary duty?—Yes, after that conversation I had with Mr. O’Connor, that he alludes to, I had the use of the trackers in any way I desired.
12079. By the Commission.—Did Captain Standish, to your knowledge, directly or indirectly, hold out any hopes to Mr. O’Connor that if he chose he would be retained in the Victorian police?—Only from that interview I had with Captain Standish in the first instance I have told you of, and what I was informed of by Mr. O’Connor and by Mr.Sadleir corroborating it. That was merely hearsay—nothing from Captain Standish beyond what I have already told you of, in my interview at Benalla.

The witness withdrew.

TUESDAY, 21ST JUNE 1881.

Present:
The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
J. H. Graves, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.,
G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.,

W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.,
J. Gibb, Esq., M.L.A.

The Chairman read the following letter from Captain Standish to the Secretary of the Commission:

SIR,
In reply to your letter of the 18th instant, I beg to inform you that all official communications which passed between the Commissioner of Police at Brisbane can be utilized, but that I cannot consent to the private communications which passed between him and me being furnished to the Police Commission.

Yours faithfully,

Jas. Williams, Esq., Secretary Police Commission.

(Signed) FREDK. STANDISH.

Henry Armstrong sworn and examined.
12080. By the Commission.—What are you?—An ex foot constable. I was in the force nine years. I beg to ask that my record sheet be produced. [The same was produced.] 12081. I see that you have a very excellent sheet—do you know the contents of it yourself?—No; constables are not allowed to see their own record sheet.
12082. It is a very good one, at all events. Were you in the North-Eastern district before the Kellys broke out?—Yes; I was stationed at Wangaratta when the gang broke out. I had been there about twelve months. I volunteered my services, and went in search of them along with Sergeant Steele.
12083. Were you out with any of the search parties?—With all the search parties, and with Sergeant Steele till they were captured.
12084. Whom were they under?—Chiefly Sergeant Steele; and on one occasion only Superintendent Furnell was in charge. I was afterwards transferred to Wahgunyah, on the Murray.
12085. Did you form any opinion yourself as to the value of those search parties?—Well, I thought they were almost useless—to a certain extent.
12086. Did you ever on any occasion have the belief or the knowledge that you came close upon the Kelly in any of those parties?—Never in my time.
12087. Did you know anything of the secret service system?—Well, I had a slight knowledge of it.
12088. Did you understand that good information was given at any time by any of those informers?—Sherritt gave good information; that is all I can speak of by my own information.
12089. Was it given in time for you to act upon it, so as to be of any value?—It was not given to me.
I cannot say I ever received any while I was in the bush to say that the outlaws were at hand.
12090. How can you say Sherritt gave good information?—He told me he informed Captain Standish that Joe Byrne was one of the men along with the outlaws; and he afterwards informed me he told Captain Standish when Byrne and Kelly passed through Sebastopol on their way to Jerilderie. Those were the only occasions of importance.
12091. He told you he had informed Captain Standish of those things?—Yes.
12092. In good time for him to have acted?—No, not in sufficient time.
12093. Were you present at any time when Sherritt was able to tell where the police were, although he was not with them?—I could not say that at all I do not see how he could.
12094. Did you understand that he was acting on behalf of the outlaws as well as the Government?—I have every reason to believe from my experience of Sherritt that he was true to the police once he was won over.

12095. Had you any reason to believe that he was trusted by the outlaws?—I do not believe it once he was won over. I will state my reasons for saying so. The third night I was in the cave party there were only two constables in the cave, and it was time to leave for the first camping ground, and I asked Sherritt to go, and he refused to come. He said, “Two men are not enough to go to Byrne’s; you may tell Nicolson that I will not go at all; those men are not bushrangers, they are bloody murderers.” I have every reason to believe that he was true from that. I was very kind to Sherritt I always gave him tobacco when he came to Beechworth or a few shillings to buy some. I have known petty lies he told, but nothing of importance to mislead the police. I do not believe he ever told me a lie. I felt as safe in his company as with any constable in the force, from my experience; and I was seventy-five nights in his company, watching Byrne’s place.

12096. Was he ever sworn in as a constable?—I believe not.

12097. Have you any idea why he was murdered?—I believe it was because he was known he assisted the police in a general way; that is my belief.

12098. It was given in evidence here, in reply to that by a witness, that he believed it was that Sherritt was believed by the outlaws to have given information about their movements which the witness stated did not come from Sherritt, but came from another private individual; and the outlaws, not knowing who had given it, charged Sherritt with it—have you any knowledge of that?—I have heard of it, but I do not think there is any proof of it. I think Sherritt knew very little besides what he told me. I was with him up to the time he was shot.

12099. You were one of the cave party?—Yes.

12100. Did you believe that that cave party was kept a secret?—Well, every attempt was made, but I am thoroughly confident that it was discovered.

12101. The police made every endeavor, but it was impossible to do it?—Yes.

12102. Did a great many people connected with Sherritt’s family know?—Yes, Mrs. and Miss Sherritt; they are the whole Sherritt family.

12103. And some of the family were going to school along with the Byrnes?—Well, Denis Byrne was going to school with a brother of Mrs. Sherritt’s, twelve years of age.

12104. They would naturally speak of the cave?—Yes.

12105. Your opinion is that it was known?—It was known.

12106. Do you remember a report being asked from you with reference to the cave party?—I do.

12107. What occurred with reference to that?—When I was leaving Beechworth, Ward had asked me to furnish a report along with the other constables. I made a report to say that I simply carried out Mr. Nicolson’s instructions, and formed no opinion as to whether we were discovered or not. Ward asked me to report that we were not discovered, but I refused to do so.

12108. What did he say on that occasion?—He said, “Will not you report that we are not discovered?” I said, “No, I cannot.” I was leaving for my station then. Opinions were expressed in the cave by the men as to the reason for Ward keeping the party on. I had heard it said by one constable, Anthony Alexander, of Cashel, “It is my opinion that Ward is making a fool of the whole of the officers to put money in the pocket of a certain storekeeper at Beechworth.” The latter is a most respectable wan. Ward and he were very intimate, and his bill, I believe, was £30 a month in the pocket of a certain storekeeper at Beechworth.” The latter is a most respectable wan. Ward and he were very intimate, and his bill, I believe, was £30 a month—about that—for provisions, spirits, and porter supplied to the cave party.

12109. You were very well kept while you were there?—Very well; but we had to put up with a great deal of hardship.

12110. The provisions were good, but the hardships very great?—We had no sleep hardly; about eight or nine days we used to remain there, and could not wash our faces; had to carry water two miles.
12119. Do you know whether they did?—I believe they did. Constable McHugh and Dixon also made reports in reference to it.

12120. Did you hear that the fact of your being in the cave was known at the police depôt in Melbourne?—I had heard that Constable Faulkner lost a letter there, but that was after the capture. It was written to him from the police depôt at Richmond, but it was lost accidentally out of his pocket.

12121. Lost where?—I have only the general hearsay of the men, and mention was made in the press as to it—that a letter to Faulkner from the depôt was found in the cave after we left there.

12122. In which it was announced that your presence was known?—I believe so.

12123. Can you say any other way it might have got known?—No, I could not say anything of my own knowledge as to that.

12124. You were in Sherritt’s house, watching?—Yes.

12125. How long had you been there?—I think about twenty-three nights. The cave party shifted to Sherritt’s hut before it was broken up, and I was sent to that hut again after Mr. Nicolson was withdrawn in Mr. Hare’s time. They shifted then because the cave was getting very dirty.

12126. You were in Sherritt’s house on the night he was shot?—Yes.

12127. Will you describe what occurred?—Perhaps I had better state the instructions I received. I was ordered from Wahgunyah to Beechworth on the 31st May 1880, to watch Byrne’s place. I got a telegram when I arrived at Beechworth to return to my station at Wahgunyah. As I was starting to the station with my papers made out, Detective Ward came up from Benalla by the two o’clock train and countermanded that order. He said I would have to go out to watch Byrne’s, with two other constables, McCall and Alexander. The instructions I received from Ward were in the Beechworth barrack yard. The late Aaron Sherritt was present. He (Ward) said, “Armstrong, you will be in charge; you will watch Byrne’s from eight o’clock at night until about five in the morning.” I asked him if I would keep a sentry, and he replied, “No; keep no sentry; keep inside.” Ward left then, and he came back again about seven o’clock at night, riding with some other man. He said, “I will go away and get your ticket to go to the quarterly assembly in the benevolent asylum—you and McCall.” I said, “I do not want to go.” This was Thursday night, on the 3rd of June. We waited until twelve o’clock at night, and finding he had not returned, we started on our own account, we three—Alexander, McCall, and I. When we arrived at Sherritt’s hut Sherritt was in bed. It was two o’clock when we arrived there. We did not watch Byrne’s that night. About the 5th, Constable Magor joined us. He remained until about the 17th. He returned to Beechworth then, along with Constable McCall. Durross and Dowling came out in their place; that left the four constables who were in the hut at the time Sherritt was murdered. We used, when we would return in the morning, to be round the kitchen fire until Sherritt and his wife, Durross and I slept on the bed with our blankets. Alexander and Dowling slept on the floor. It was a weatherboard hut, with a shingle roof.

12128. Are you quite sure it was not slabs let down between uprights?—Well, I have heard so many differences of opinion about that that I can scarcely recollect, but I believe the sides were weather-board and the roof shingles. I am inclined to think that the ends were slabs.

12129. One witness gave evidence that rifle bullets were fired at the house and did not penetrate quite through, but knocked the plaster down on the inside?—I noticed that in the papers; I think there was a sort of clay between the uprights.

12130. You know that a bullet fired at a weatherboard would go through both sides of the house?—Yes, indeed.

12131. Was it a boarded floor?—Yes, all boarded. The house was our own. We paid for it out of our own private money; that has never been refunded. The owner of the hut came about 11 o’clock in the morning. I was a foreigner, and he ordered Sherritt to clear out. Sherritt would not give up possession; then the man said he would go and get the police. He was the original owner of the hut. Sherritt took forcible possession of it. I said, “For God’s sake bring the man back here; he will turn us out and we shall be discovered.” So Alexander lent Sherritt the money to pay for the house.

12132. Had Sherritt the house rented?—He took forcible possession of it; it was an abandoned house.

12133. “Jumped” it?—Yes, we paid him for it sooner than he turned out. The room we were in—I think it would be eight feet and a half or nine feet wide, by about seven and a half feet long.

12134. Then there would be just room for two to sleep on the floor?—Yes, with the exception of about two feet at the foot of the bed where we had provisions stored.

12136. What was their object in running after you?—Sherritt said they thought we were going to rob the sluice-boxes; they had gold there. I said to Sherritt the next morning, “Go round and see what the Chinamen have to say, and tell them we are the Kellys if they say anything,” and Sherritt returned; he said, "They think we are going to rob their sluice-boxes." I said, "We will point the guns, and they will think we are the Kellys.” Sherritt said, “Yes.” We pointed the guns, and they ran away.

H. Armstrong,
continued,
21st June 1881.
It is all right, Harry, the Chinamen say they saw the Kellys last night. I told them not to tell, and they said, 'No -- fear, we know Joe Byrne'; Sherritt and I arranged not to go out in the moonlight till ten o'clock (it was moonlight then), and remain out two hours longer in the morning. The following night, Saturday the 19th June, Dowling and I were helping Sherritt to cut wood for Sunday; Mrs. Sherritt came running out, and said, "Mr. Hare and Detective Ward are here; Ward told you to go down to Byrne's." Sherritt started alone; that was the custom in the Nicolson cave party time for us. I went and saw Ward; he said to me, "Mr. Hare has gone down along with constables Duross and Alexander; go away and be before them, and say you had left before them, and challenge, lest the other party should fire." I got my ammunition, and I said to Dowling, who was along with me, "This is a strange affair I think I will tell the truth." Dowling said, "Certainly." When we arrived at Byrne's, Sherritt was there. After some time, I saw Mr. Hare coming with two other constables I knew him by his height. I did not challenge as Ward told me; we were too close to Byrne's house, but I shouldered my gun by which he would know I was no enemy—that is the officer's salute. I said, "I am Constable Armstrong." I was the first time I had ever met Mr. Hare. He called me back in from the bush, and said, "How are you getting on?" I said, "Doing the best we can, sir." He said, "What brought you down before this man; that man (meaning Alexander) does not know the way?" I said, "The fact of it is—I will tell the truth, no matter what is the result—Dowling and I were helping Sherritt to cut wood; we were seen by Chinamen last night, and we had arranged not to go down till ten o'clock to-night, and remain out a little longer in the morning." Mr. Hare said, "That man has told me a lie." I could not say whom he referred to.

12137. Whom do you think?—I never could know what constable till I read in the press. I thought it was Duross, and I thought first it was Alexander. I said, "This has already been referred to before you." I said, "I cannot account for his telling a lie unless it is because I am the senior man, he might think I would get into trouble for not being out earlier." Mr. Hare said, "Do you believe in Sherritt?" I said I had every confidence in him. After some conversation, he said, "I am taking Sherritt away; what will you do in the event of the outlaws coming?" I said, "I know Steve Hart, and I could form a good opinion of the others. I will call them to bail up, and if they do not, we will all fall on them." He said, "Do not you think it would be as well to let them go to Byrne's and dismount, lie down beside their horses, and shoot them as they get on." I said, "I think that would be a very good plan, sir." he bade me good night in the most friendly manner, and wished me success; did not abuse me by any means, as he said in the evidence. When I returned to the hut I said to Sherritt, "Mr. Hare seems a nice sort of man to speak to; it is a devil of a pity that he was told; it will look bad for us." Then Sherritt said, "This is some of Mr.—— Jack's work," meaning his brother, "he is always carrying stories to Ward and Mullane, to say I am drunk at the Chinese camp, and so on; if they come always in this way. I will throw up the job." On Sunday the 20th, Paddy Byrne stood on his grey mare in the front of the hut, looking in, we all watching him through the joints of the door, between the hoards. On Monday the 21st, about a quarter past eleven, we were camped about 600 yards from Byrne's house, at night. It was occasionally light moonlight. Sherritt had left us at this time; he went to have a look round towards the stockyard and towards Byrne's Gap. Dowling called out, "There is a horseman." I said, "Look out, out, then." I saw the horse, and recognized it as Byrne's grey mare, and also Paddy Byrne by his position on the horse—the stooping position he used to ride in. We waited till about four o'clock in the morning. We could not follow the horse, as Sherritt had left us, and we would have been seen ourselves, the night was so light; we could see as far as Madden's Gap, that is about a mile. When we returned to the hut in the morning, Sherritt was there. I said, "Aaron, it was a pity you had left us. Paddy Byrne has gone off scouting on his grey mare. I am going off to Beechworth to report and send the trackers up. Do you watch and see if you can pick up the tracks, and if the mare has returned." I said to the other men, "Whatever information you get, bring it into Beechworth, no matter what it is." I reported to Senior-Constable Mullane at seven o'clock in the morning, and the trackers were sent up by the afternoon train; but Ward had said Sherritt could not pick up the tracks, and they were not sent out. Dowling came in that night to say that the mare had returned. On Saturday morning, the 26th of June, Sherritt said to me in his own hut, "Armstrong, you are discovered. Denny Byrne passed in the rear of the hut, and looked in twice. They can set fire to this hut, and shoot you one by one as you run out." I said, "We will have to chance that; they can shoot us, too, any night on the way to Byrne's. However, I will go in to-night and tell Ward, and he can tell Mr. Hare if he likes." About half-past six on the same night, I was lying on the bed—— 12138. Who was in the hut?—The four constables—Alexander, Duross, Dowling, and myself; Mrs. Sherritt and her mother, Mrs. Barry.

12139 And Sherritt?—Yes. Duross was having his tea in the kitchen. I was falling asleep, lying on the bed, about half asleep. I intended going in that night to tell we were discovered.

12140. Where were your horses?—We had no horses. I heard a knock at the door, and a voice said, "Sherritt, I have lost my way." Mrs. Sherritt said, "Aaron, go out and show him." The door was opened, and I heard a shot.

12141. He went to the door, and opened the door?—Yes. I took little notice of that shot. I thought it was Duross' revolver had gone off accidentally. Duross came into the room. I then heard the second shot, and I made some remark to say these were the Kellys. I took my shot gun and revolver and got on my knees on the bed. The other men were in a scene of great confusion, picking up their arms as hurriedly as they could. I remained for a chance to fire out of the window.

12142. Did you see what occurred to Sherritt then?—No. I had not seen that then. I remained for some time, and I heard a voice, just for a few seconds, say, "Open the door, send those men out." I think two constables went hurriedly to the bedroom door; I cannot recollect which constables. I was watching myself through the window.

12143. It was the custom when a knock was heard for the constables to go into the bedroom?—Yes. I remained at the window for a few seconds, and a third shot was fired. It was on the front of the house, facing the El Dorado road.

POLICE. 31

12144. Parallel with the door?—Yes. When that shot was fired I thought I had been seen from the window. Then I went up to the bedroom door, and put my gun out through the calico screen. Constable Alexander had his gun out through the screen also, pointing towards the front. I could not tell what position the other men were in. I believe one was trying to fire over the partition, and the other at the window. Byrne challenged us from the back, and said, “Come outside and surrender, or I will shoot you rotten dogs.”

19145. How did you know it was Byrne?—I did not know at that time, only Mrs. Barry called him Joe. From what I heard described afterwards I believe it was Byrne. I had never seen him in my life. I could have fired very close to Byrne that time, but I would have shot Mrs. Barry. I could hear her voice directly in the path. The two doors were open. Before this Byrne had said, “I have no down on the police,” while the women were all running in and out at this time, and an occasional shot was being fired.

12146. Whom from?—The people outside; I suppose the outlaws.

12147. There was no shot fired from inside?—No, we were armed with shot-guns, and we could not fire out through the boards. They were used by watch parties, but they were totally useless in our case, as we could not fire through the boards.

12148. Was there no rifle?—No, none. I do not blame Mullane for that. Duross blames him for our having shot-guns, but I do not. I carried my shot-gun all through, and they were used by watch parties.

12149. Had you been informed that the Kellys would likely appear in armour?—No, never anything of the kind. To have closed one of the doors, to have prevented the fire from that side of the house, would have been useless. The boards were upwards of an inch short in places, and we could have been seen distinctly through the boards of the door. Every time the women came in they were in great danger of getting shot by us. We could hear their step in the dark, and they were in danger of getting shot by us. We could not see the outlaws without appearing outside the screen; then we could have been seen and shot down from either side of the house, exposed to two fires, two doors immediately opposite, and we would have been right in the centre.

12150. You have not mentioned about Sherritt being shot?—Mrs. Sherritt said, “Aaron is shot,” after the second shot was fired.

12151. The women were going back and forwards, in and out of the house, apparently not having any fear. Had the women any assurance from the outlaws at all that they would not be interfered with, or was it at the solicitation of the outlaws that they did go out?—I cannot say. I do not think there was any treachery on the part of the women.

12152. They fearlessly rushed out, regardless of the consequences?—Yes.

12153. Do you think their danger was any less than that of the police if they had followed suit?—Mrs. Barry told me, “We knew Joe Byrne when he was a boy.” He had slept between her and Mrs. Byrne when he was a boy, and she was confident he would not shoot the women.

12154. Were they confident those were the outlaws?—I could not say—Mrs. Barry knew Joe Byrne, and she said Joe in the commencement, so I knew it was the outlaws by that.

12155. What I refer to is, that the women seemed heedless of the consequences, and you admit the danger was as great for them as for any other person to go outside the house. In that condition of things do you think if you and the other men with you had followed suit and suddenly rushed out that you might not have succeeded in capturing them or had a show for a fight?—It is my opinion, and the opinion of disinterested police at Beechworth, that had we been ready when the second shot was fired, ready under arms, we would have had a chance. I admit that, but after that I believe we would have been every one dropped.

12156. You see, as far as I understand it, I am under the impression that the women having come in at various times and gone out again, they were fearless of the consequences and they knew the desperate condition of things—could not you, under shelter of the women, have rushed out in order to have a chance?—That would have been a very cowardly thing, going under their protection. I would rather be shot myself.

12157. Could you be seen inside?—Yes.

12158. Could you see anything outside?—Not a single thing; inside there was a log fire burning, which was intended to last until morning, also a candle burning. I called out to one of the men to throw me the pillow to knock the candle out. I then said, “Never mind, the fire is showing more light; we will do nothing to attract attention.” The women were in this time. Mrs. Sherritt we told to go under the bed, to keep out of the way. Mrs. Barry came in with a very heavy step, and I said, “Oh, my God! Mrs. Barry, I was near shooting you; if you go out again you will be shot.” We put her under the bed roughly, but she did not complain. After some time, when it got dark, say about eleven o’clock, I closed the doors.

12159. That was when the fire began to get a little low?—Yes; there were no catches for the doors. I had to close them with my gun; they used always to fly back. Then I rolled some of the logs on one side from the fire, and threw what tea I could find on the fire. I shifted the body of Sherritt to one side also; the body had fallen inside. We could hear voices distinctly all night. About four o’clock there was a lot of conversation heard. Mrs. Barry said, “They are there yet.” She spoke first. I said, “It is all right; they are waiting for daylight, when it is getting light.” I had my gun through the back door, and I could see or hear nothing of them. The dog was also lying asleep. Alexander then came from the bedroom, and he said, “They are gone,” and he went to open the door. I said, “Look out from behind the tree.” I had seen a Chinaman standing at the tree. Dowling had lost his ammunition in the early part of the night.

12160. How?—He could not find it. I said, “Wait till Dowling has got his ammunition ready.”

12161. Your ammunition would fit his gun?—I had given him a little of mine the night before. When I went out Alexander went out before me, and we searched about the bush and could see nothing of them. Duross and Dowling remained in reserve; only the two of us remained at that time, thinking to drive the outlaws out, had they been about. I then prepared to start to Beechworth with information.

12162. What time was this?—About a quarter to seven. After consulting with the others we agreed to send all the messengers we could find on the creek and remain on the ground ourselves. They came down so suddenly on us at nightfall, and as I thought without horses, I thought there might have been a possibility of their returning. I thought it would have made matters still worse had the gang shown up during my absence. I wrote out three letters addressed to the Beechworth police; there was a Chinaman passing and I gave him a letter; I gave him some money too. He returned after a while and said he was afraid to go. I then sent him to Mr. O’Donagheue, the school teacher. Mr. O’Donagheue said he would go, that he was not afraid of Joe Byrne. He remained away about an hour and a half, when he returned and said his wife would not allow him to go, besides he heard the outlaws were in the ranges to shoot any person who would go in with word I then said I would go. I went up to the Sugarloaf Range to look for one of Sherritt’s horses, but I could not find any. I started then myself on foot. When I got a mile along the road I saw Paddy Byrne on his grey mare. He came at a fast gallop to meet me. I still thought the outlaws were about. He turned off the road or I would have taken his horse. When I got near Beechworth, three miles from Beechworth, I met a man named Considine. I stopped him and took his horse from him perforce. I knocked the horse up in five minutes. On looking round in the bush I saw the last messenger we had sent, Duckett; he called out to me, and I told him to go back—he ran after me with the letter I had given him and I told him to tear it up. The horse was a very inferior animal, and it was near one o’clock when I got to Beechworth. There I reported the occurrence to Senior-Constable Mullane. The last definite information I had heard of the outlaws was when they were at—Wangaratta. There were then six armed men in the gang—every officer in the charge of the Kelly search was aware of that. There was a fifth man, described unknown; was also armed with two revolvers. I am in a position to prove that.

19163. Can your evidence be corroborated?—I will give the names of persons who will corroborate it if necessary. It was the general impression that—was also in the gang.

12164. Had the outlaws, the Kellys, another brother?—Yes.

12165. What name?—Jim.

19166. Where was he during the outrages?—In Wagga gaol, for horsestealing.

12167. After his release the general impression amongst the officers was that he had come over and joined the band?—It was thought so, but there was no direct proof of it.

12168. Can you give the names of men who will give direct evidence on that?—I can. I merely stated it to show that we expected more than four men, to show what deterred us from going out.

12169 You have given very important evidence that there were six in the gang; it will be better to leave out the names of those other two. Did you ever see the six together?—I did not.

12170. In conversation with the Sherrrits, who intimately knew all those men, was it the impression of this man and woman, the Sherrrits, that there were more than four?—Well Sherritt did not think so. I spoke to him about that, and he said the man alone he believed was a man named—, a horsestealer from Kilmore.

19171. Did either of those four outlaws ever speak to you about two other men at anytime?—I never had any conversation with any of them but Steve Hart, and that was prior to his taking to the bush.

12172. Did you get that from Sherritt in a direct way that the six were seen together?—No; Sherritt knew nothing whatever about the outlaws after they crossed at Jerilderie.

12173. Do you know anyone who ever saw those six together?—I do.

12174. Who can give direct evidence?—Yes.

12175. Do you know more than one?—I believe I do.

12176. Will you give the names of those privately?—Yes.

12177. Are they, in your opinion, reliable men?—They are. I am not the least afraid of a new gang breaking out, and I know as much about them as any man who was in connection with the search parties.

12178. Did you ever suggest to your superior officer the advisability of taking action in this matter?—No.

12179. Did it ever strike your mind without suggesting that in the interests of justice it was advisable to take action against those men?—I had not seen any officer after that.

12180. Did the officers know it?—I heard it was suggested to the officers, and it was not considered advisable to take action, fearing it might prevent or injure the search for the Kellys.

H. Armstrong, continued.
21st June 1881.
12181. This information was equally in the possession of your superior officers?—I have reason to believe it was. I had been speaking to Jim Kelly for an hour and a half at Glenrowan before Ned’s execution. He said, “I will not enter the bush; I have got a good trade; I can earn £3 a week by making boots, and I am too fond of going to theatres, and taking girls in the gardens at night, for the work; but should I ever be interfered with by the police I will not do as Ned has done; I will shoot every man, and have satisfaction.”

Tom Lloyd and Dennis McAuliffe, two of the most prominent of the Kelly sympathizers, went out voluntarily and helped us when we were stationed at Glenrowan, and looked for a horse down in the bush after Kelly’s execution.

12182. Do they express any opinion to the police?—They seem inclined to be most friendly with the police, if the police will treat them in the same friendly way. I have been drinking on three occasions with Tom Lloyd since the capture, and found him most friendly.

12183. Do you think it dangerous?—By no means whatever, if he is treated well by the police; he is a splendid fellow.

12185. If so, what policeman will be responsible?—The family was arrested by Detective Ward.

12186. You think there will be evidence that that was the case?—If the Commission will examine the witnesses I will name them; and if they will allow me to repeat the statements made to me by Senior-Constable Mullane, so that he does not back out of it, it will be shown it was a put-up case.

12187. By Ward?—Well, I would not like to say the name.

12188. It would come out in evidence?—Tom Lloyd boasted in the hotel of the civility he had received from the Glenrowan and Greta police; but if they were wrongfully arrested it would have a very bad effect on the Kelly sympathizers in the district. I know Dick Hart, and I do not think he would ever take to the bush.

12189. We are now coming back to the time that you were in Sherritt’s hut; did any of the men that were with you show a desire to go out at any time to meet the Kellys?—No; I suggested a rush about nine o’clock, and asked if the men were game to follow me, and every man said “Yes,” and every man repeated the words, “I do not consider it advisable”; and I then said, “You do not consider it advisable,” and every man said, “Yes.” At the inquest held on the remains of Sherritt, I stated how every man answered “Yes,” and I omitted to state how every man said the words, “I do not consider it advisable.” At the same time had I taken the lead I have no doubt but some or all might have followed and shared my fate; but I honestly admitted I did not see my way clear to run it, because I thought every man would have dropped at the door, and by hanging out I thought there would have been the opportunity of following them after. In addition to other disadvantages, I had been treated by the doctor for inflammation of my eyes, and the inflammation was gone, but my eyes were very bad at dark nights. I was guarding the bank at Wahgunyah. I was wearing a green cover over my eyes.

12190. Then your own opinion is that you were hardly fit to undertake such a service as that?—Had I calculated on only two being there, but I hardly think there was that, I might have made an attempt at going out, or had I calculated on the gang leaving; but the night was unusually dark. I might as well have thrown up my hands.

12191. Were they behind cover?—I could not say. There was plenty of cover beside the hut. They seemed to me to be right at the door. Any man who will take cover with a Webley revolver I will undertake will drop three men out of four as they come out, a man close up to the door under cover, and you need not expose your arm; and had any one escaped in the rush and gone to the back, they would probably have gone down the shafts; there were old deep shafts.

12192. This is an old deserted diggings?—By the front there was a drain, two or three feet deep, about four yards from the front, and going on from the yard, about five yards from the hut, there was an embankment of about three feet, so any man going out by the front would have very likely fallen down had he escaped.

12193. Then your opinion is, that you could hardly have escaped with your life?—I verily believe no man would have gone out of that hut alive had all the outlaws been there.

12194. Have you decided to leave the colony?—Yes.

12195. On account of this—Something to do with that, but I have means of my own and have better prospects; I am going to try my luck in the States of America. I think any man would have done the same in the same condition.

12196. You do not think it would have been wise to have kept a watch outside at night?—Well, we got instructions to keep no watch, but with the murders of the Mansfield police no party of police should have been sent to a place, either with a search or watch party, without the permission to keep a sentry. Had it been left to ourselves I would have kept a sentry, by all means, in the shed at the back, and he could have, at least, shot Byrne and would have saved Sherritt’s life, and he would have been a useful man to the police yet. There were two sheds at the back and also a tree with two forks immediately at the door—in the front there were three trees quite close to it. Now, a shot was fired over that hut during my absence at Wahgunyah, and I never knew anything of it till after the murder. It has also turned up in evidence that Jack Sherritt sent a letter to Mr. Hare warning him of a likely surprise, and Mr. Hare never told us of that, I got no information. The reason was that Mrs. Sherritt’s brother, twelve years of age, Barry, was going to school along with Denny Byrne, brother to the outlaw, and also at the hut at the same time. I told the boy not to come back any more, and cautioned Sherritt and Mrs. Sherritt not to let him come back any more, fearing he should tell who were there.

12197. Is that how you got news of their determination?—No; but I was afraid the boy might tell Byrne.

12198. Do you think a boy twelve years of age, going to school, and seeing strange policemen in the house, is likely to be silent to his schoolfellows?—It would be possible he was too young. Denny Byrne was then about fourteen, an old-fashioned boy. He used to speak to the boy that passed the hut, passing twice a day. I have also heard that Mr. Hare received information that the outlaws were about to do something to astonish the world. I heard nothing of it, although I was twenty-one days out in the bush.

12199. You consider Mr. Hare should have allowed the men to know what rumors were going about?—I think so. I tell you candidly I did not know the outlaws were in the country at the time. No information whatever was given to the men.

12200. Did Aaron Sherritt communicate with you whether they were in the country?—He told me honestly he did not know a single thing about them. He said, “My belief is, Harry, that they are in the ranges between the Rose River and Gippsland, and there is a fifth man, unknown to the police, supplying them with provisions. They may come round here once in three months, or they may not come. I have seen or known nothing of them since they passed on the way to Jerilderie. I was talking to Joe Byrne and Steve Hart then,” and it is also my own opinion that they never trusted him after he refused to go to Jerilderie.

12201. Did he get an offer from them to be one of the party?—So he told me.

12202. The place between the Rose River and Gippsland would be up towards Mount Typo?—Yes. I wish it understood that the Sherritt family did all they could to assist the police. The old man was most attentive in carrying provisions to the cave when Aaron was getting married.

12203. Was old Sherritt a policeman?—He told me he had been in the Irish Constabulary.

12204. Did you see Jack Sherritt and the one that joined the police?—Yes, I saw them in the depot.

12205. Would you include those two in your statement that you believe the family did all they could to help the police?—I believe they did, although they told some petty lies. Of course Aaron chiefly boasted of his past movements, but nothing to deceive me. He used a great deal of policy with the officers; for instance, on the night of Mr. Hare’s visit he told Mr. Hare that the outlaws were in the habit of coming about after his departure. I said, “Aaron, why did you tell Mr. Hare a different story?” “Well,” he says, “I must use a little policy.” He said at the house, “I am as true as you are; I am just working for the pay I am getting for my wife; I am as true as you are. I would take some other calling if I were dismissed from the service of the police. I am getting 7s. a day.”

12206. In the occupation of Sherritt’s hut, was it a matter of conversation with you and your comrades as to not keeping an outside guard?—It was immediately by the road, and we could not, during the day, keep one up; but, if I had permission, I would have kept one at night.

12207. Was it ever a matter that suggested itself to your mind, the inexpediency of not ordering an outside guard at night?—No, I cannot say it was. I said once to Sherritt, “It is a strange thing Ward gave us instructions to keep no sentry;” and Sherritt said, “Ward is a good-natured—fool; he has got no brains.” I had been so long in the bush, and round Sebastopol, I was beginning to feel no surprise, and not knowing the outlaws were in the country.

12208. That not being expressed by your comrades, did it ever strike you to report that in writing to your superior officer, you being in charge?—No.

12209. Did you ever verbally mention it?—No, I simply did what I was told, that was all.

12210. Water was not very abundant in the place; was there any water in the building at the time the attack was made?—No, only a little that was made into tea.

12211. Not a bucket?—No.

12212. Were you out with any search parties under Mr. Brook Smith?—Yes, I am independent of any officers now. My instructions, in going to the cave, from Mr. Nicolson were—“Should the outlaws go to Byrne’s, let you all fire on the tall man; that will be Ned, and then you will have so many boys to deal with. But should Byrne come alone, take him alive if possible, convey him to Beechworth by night; or if you cannot convey him by night, keep him all day until the following night. That is with a view of using him to assist in the capture of the three remaining outlaws.” I have also heard how Mr. Nicolson was called a cranky Scotchman by Sherritt. Well, I will state what Sherritt said of Mr. Nicolson to me before death. He said, “Nicolson is as cute as a fox; he would know your thinking. He would walk into the mouth of a cannon. I parted with him in Benalla, good friends, and he shook hands with me. This is his cap he gave me; I am wearing it; he gave his cap to me on leaving Benalla.” I will ask permission to make reference to Mr. Hare’s visit that time, as short as I possibly can. Mr. Hare, in his evidence, said the outlaws did not know the police... were in the hut, or they would have gone there. The outlaws asked for Jim Dixon; he is a constable, then stationed at Millewa, thirty miles away. Dixon was not in the hut at the time, but he had been in the Nicolson party some four or five months before with me. Their asking for him is a sufficient guarantee that he must have been seen by some person who conveyed the news to the outlaws. He must have been seen by the outlaws; and he joined as a probationary constable, and had a special down on me. Provision came out of Beechworth in the middle of daylight; that was wrong. There are several houses in view of the hut; they would have all known that Sherritt and the wife could not have consumed all the provision there.

12213. How often did they come?—Once a week, or every ten days. Mrs. Byrne has also stated, I believe to Constable Alexander now at Cashel, that her son Denny tracked us in the sand for a hundred yards every morning to and from the hut. Straps, I am also informed, have been found; I lost a strap myself at Byrne’s. I am convinced the outlaws knew we were there.

12214. In fact they came there to shoot the lot of you?—I can state the admission Ned made to me, Ned Kelly. I escorted him to Melbourne with Inspector Baber and two constables. He said, “Was Senior-Constable Johnson in the hut when Sherritt was shot?” I said, “No; why do you ask me that, Ned?” He asked me if I tortured Sherritt. He said, “What men were there?” I said, “I am sorry to say I was.” He said, “To have gone out in you light would have been foolhardiness; you would have all been shot but one. It was not our game to shoot you all. We wanted one man to go in and draw the police away from the barracks.” There is no doubt whatever but that the outlaws knew we were there. Mr. Hare said, in reference to young Byrne’s mare, that we did all we could have done. Sherritt was not there that night. About the lie that has been spoken of, I believe it was through good nature at the time that Ward told us to tell it. Mr. Hare said one constable took him astray wilfully. Well, that constable could not find the way if we were to go there again. He dare not keep, on the track, for fear of leaving tracks, at night. I could only find it by going a mile out of the way by Byrne’s Gap. He could not find the way. Though I was seventy-five nights there, I could find the way only by going a mile away. The constable told me only for a guess he never would have found it.

12215. About the Byrnes, how did they conduct themselves?—I cannot say of my own know ledge, but Sherritt told me they had a great deal of cattle about after the Jerilderie robbery. They were poor before that. They have got land there. I do not think they have got any land fenced in from the Government. There is a great plain, a common or reserve, I fancy.

12216. Up to the time of the robberies they were poor?—Yes.

12217. Is there an old Byrne?—He is dead. There are only Mrs. Byrne, Paddy, Denny, and one girl; she was at service. This grey mare Paddy purchased at Tarrawinge for £20. Mr. Hare said he gave us a blowing up. He spoke to me in the most friendly manner, so much so that I remarked to Sherritt that “Mr. Hare seems a nice man to speak to.” In reference to this statement of Mrs. Sherritt’s, about the police concealing themselves under the bed, that is totally untrue.

12218. That was the statement in the papers?—Yes. About the outlaws coming in. I only lost sight of the door once when I was kneeling on the bed, and there were three other men looking on then.

12219. Would you have shot them if they had appeared?—Yes. I was not taking any notice of the Outlawry Act having expired.

12220. Would you have shot them?—Yes.

12221. Were you at a disadvantage in rushing, having to go out into that lighted room and outside?—Yes. I think two men would have shot the whole gang if they were in the same position. I have told a man to each door. Reference was also made to me on the night of the 19th of June, when Mr. Hare and I were wheeling the barrow of wood. I will most likely be examined to and from the hut, and from the hut. Straps, I am also informed, have been found; I lost a strap myself at Byrne’s. I am convinced the outlaws knew we were there.

12222. Did they seem terrifically cut up at the death of Aaron?—Yes, they were pretty much so. I have a letter from Detective Ward which is very damaging to him. I wish to speak in the plainest terms of the Sherritt family, after the statement in the papers. The letter is as follows:—“Melbourne, May 9th 1881. Dear Armstrong, I saw Mrs. Barry and Mrs. Sherritt, they will tell the truth and carry on.”

you the particulars as to the opinion of the Board as to the four men’s conduct. Allen will make all right for you; stick to the truth. Please burn this letter and write me a short note as to how you are getting. Dowling in his cross-examination broke down and contradicted himself very often.” This is Mrs. Sherritt’s letter; that does not correspond with the last statement made by her—“Dear Henry, I wish to write you those few lines just to let you know that me and my mother will say all we can in favor of you and Alexander and the rest, and you may let Alexander know about it. I would not wish for anything that you and the other three would get into a trouble about that night when Aaron was shot; and my mother says she was very thankful to you and the others for not firing out that night when ye were hemmed in by the Kellys, for she and me would very likely be shot as we were out in the dark and it was better ye did not fire.” On the 6th of May I met Detective Ward at the Assize Court, Beechworth. He spoke to me in reference to the lie he told to Mr. Hare. I gave him no reply. He met me again at night, outside the court house, and got Senior-Constable Mullane to witness the conversation. He said, “I have seen Mrs. Sherritt and Mrs. Barry. They say you ordered Duross and Dowling out of the hut—they would not follow you—and they had their feet under the bed, crushing the women under it. Prove that like a man; study your own character; and come out scot-free.” I said, “Apart from an action the Government may take in reference to my conduct in connection with the murder of Sherritt, I do not want to remain in the police force.” I said, “I would stick at a lie independent of any person.” I left him then. On Sunday the 8th he wanted to see me at Senior-Constable Mullane’s room. I met him there. He said, “I have been out at Sebastopol. I saw Mrs. Sherritt’s father, and he said the women screened the police at Beechworth at the inquest, but they will do no longer if the next two men gave such evidence as the Melbourne men had given,” meaning Duross and Dowling. Mullane said, “Mrs. Sherritt made a sworn declaration before Mr. Ingram in reference to the conduct of the police at Sebastopol, which has never so far been published, fearing she will be pulled for perjury.” Ward and I left together. I said, “Ward, are you and Mullane together in this enquiry?” He said, “Yes; but Mullane is too conscientious.” (Mullane is a very upright man as far as my dealings are concerned.) I said, “What do you want me to do for you, Ward?” He said, “I want you to take me out of this lie before Mr. Longmore. Mr. Hare says it is only the concoction of those two men, the statement they made.” He said “Ah! man, look at Mr. Fincham there, too.” I said to him, “I will”; but I had no notion of doing it. He said, “If you do I will win the women over again to carry you and Alexander through. I have got Alexander right. I will get a statement from Mrs. Sherritt, which will prove it to you, and forward it to you at Wahgunyah—you will have to burn it. I will send you a copy of my own evidence from Melbourne; you will have to burn that also. I will get Hare to call Mr. Pat Allen to prove that you and Alexander are good men, and the two Melbourne men are no good. That will be you, Alexander, the two women, Mr. Hare, Pat Allen, and I, against the two Melbourne men.”

12223. Duross and Dowling?—Yes. I received that letter that has been read from Ward a few days after. At the time of Ned Kelly’s trial I was sent down to board at Bolam’s hotel by Senior-Constable Mullane. I saw Mrs. Sherritt there and we spoke about the matter. She said, “Armsrong, you will have to look out for yourself, Ward told me not to take your part any more; he said he would not. He is afraid he will get into trouble for leaving the camp without a sentry, allowing the camp to be stuck up, and Aaron shot.” She further said, “What a pity but what you told me what to say at the inquest.” I said, “Oh, my God, that would never do.” Mrs. Sherritt was only fifteen years of age when her husband died. She would be only too likely to assist any person who would invite her, to serve any policeman who would give advice in her favor. She gave us every assistance at the hut, kept a watch out for us, and always told us when any person was passing. Now Sherritt ventured opinions as to officers and their mode of search. He said, “No party of men on horseback will ever catch the Kellys.” He said, “In the first place they have not got the horses, neither have they got the riders—there are a few men in the force, such as Johnson and Lawless—they could ride them on level ground, but they cannot gallop down ranges like the Kellys. If a strong party is sent in the bush the outlaws will keep out of the way. If a small party, such as four, be sent the outlaws will surprise them and shoot them down.” He said Byrne used to practise riding down steep ranges; he said they would never he caught unless from direct information—they might be surrounded in a hut or shot at crossings.

12224. But never caught in the open bush?—No; and that is my opinion also, and Mr. Sadleir remarked the same. I was in a party he sent up to Rats’ Castle; Steele was in charge of the same party. Mr. Sadleir said, “Beat round there for about a week; you may drive them down, and they may be shot at some of the crossings.” The crossings were being watched at the time, but I never expected a party of men on horseback would ever catch the Kellys. Sherritt said the men who were along with me in Sherritt’s house were the best conducted men he had ever seen in the party, “and I will ask Mr. Hare to allow them to remain on horseback would ever catch the Kellys.” He said, “In the first place they have not got the horses, neither have they got the riders—there are a few men in the force, such as Johnson and Lawless—they could ride them on level ground, but they cannot gallop down ranges like the Kellys. If a strong party is sent in the bush the outlaws will keep out of the way. If a small party, such as four, be sent the outlaws will surprise them and shoot them down.” He said Byrne used to practise riding down steep ranges; he said they would never he caught unless from direct information—they might be surrounded in a hut or shot at crossings.

12225. Were you at the Sebastopol business when the thirty constables were?—Yes.

12226. Do you know anything about how the information was given that the outlaws were to be there or were there?—That was given by a man named ———; he is a person of little importance, a worthless fellow to the police.

12227. Was it authentic?—It was, but it was late; it was behind time.

12228. The information that the Kellys were at Sebastopol, to whom was it given?—I believe it was given to some of the constables.

H. Armstrong, continued,
21st June 1881.
12229. Do you know the name?—No.
12230. Was the information given late, or was the action upon the information late?—Well, I do not think there was a sufficient party at Beechworth at the time to go out in search.
12231. You believe the information was given in time, but the party was not strong?—I think by the time the information was given they had left.
12232. Who will be a constable who can give the information on that point?—Constable Timothy Cane. He is in the city now; he is a foot man, lately transferred from Beechworth.
12233. What time did you get to Glenrowan?—Nine o’clock.
12234. Was there much firing from the house after you arrived?—There was an occasional shot up to about one.
12235. Did you see any shots so late as one from the house?—I believe I did, but very few. There was one shot near where I was, near the tree where Constable Dwyer was with me, about one o’clock.
12236. Are you satisfied that shot came from the house?—I could not say for certain, but I am inclined to think so.
12237. Might it have come from beyond?—It might, but I am of opinion that it came from the house.
12238. Some have sworn there were no shots fired after eleven?—I think there were; I think up to one.
12239. What part of the house were they fired from?—Partly from the front, towards the railway-station.
12240. Did you see Mr. Sadleir about on that day?—Yes.
12241. Was he going about among the men?—He was. He went round the back, circling the outposts twice, with Mullane assisting him.
12242. Did Mr. O’Connor go about with him?—Yes, he was there at ten o’clock, when I volunteered first to go into the hotel.
12243. You did that?—Yes, the first.
12244. Where was Mr. O’Connor then?—Posted with Mr. Sadleir, on the Wangaratta side, at a tree about 60 yards from the building. He was firing at the hotel.
12245. What did Mr. Sadleir say when you volunteered?—He said, “There is plenty of time; we have all day.” He gave instructions to fire nine feet from the ground, and be very careful, and not injure the prisoners. They came out about half-past nine in the morning.
12246. Did those instructions remain in force after the prisoners came out?—No, I think not. The constables fired any place they thought the outlaws were likely to be.
12247. Is there anything you know with reference to the Glenrowan affair that has not been given to the Commission as you have seen by the evidence?—Well, I cannot say; there is a great deal of contradictory statements as far as I know.
12248. Are there any of those that you think of now that you know are wrong?—No, they were prior to my going there.
12249. There was very little done after nine o’clock?—Very little, and it is my opinion the outlaws were shot. I was close to the building when a heavy volley was fired, and I heard a great noise as if a heap of iron was thrown down, immediately after the volley. I went and told Mr. Sadleir I thought one of the outlaws was shot.
12250. Did you see the bodies?—Yes. Dwyer and I went in first at the back, after the priest—Father Gibney. I saw two bodies at the right-hand side, but I took no notice of them. I knew Hart, but I could not recognize him; they were in the little room to the right of the passage. I took very little notice because of the flames around us.
12251. They were shot together?—Yes.
12252. If Dwyer said they were one in one room and one in another?—I could not corroborate him in that.
12253. What he said was altogether wrong?—I could not say that; he might have seen more than I did. I believe they were both lying together.
12254. Every witness but Dwyer has sworn they were in that right-hand room?—Yes, I do not think Dwyer had much time to see where they were.
12255. It might have been imagination?—I think so.
12256. You and he carried out Byrne?—Yes. I took the armour off; the armour was on Byrne where he lay.
12257. On the 8th December 1878, you were then stationed at Wangaratta?—Yes, I believe I was.
12258. Do you remember Wild Wright coming there one night and stopping at O’Keefe’s hotel, at Wangaratta?—I do.
12259. Do you remember he missed two horses and the saddles and bridles?—I do.
12260. Were you sent by Sergeant Steele with Dixon to make enquiry into the loss of those things?—No, I was not.
12261. Did you find out anything in reference to those missing horses after that?—No.
12262. Or the saddles and bridles?—No.
12263. Did you hear anything about them after?—I heard a statement once, three months after.
12264. Do you remember a rumor about that, that the saddles and bridles were afterwards found in the closet on the Agricultural ground?—Yes, I have heard that. I think there was a man in charge of the gardens, and he told Steele about this saddle, and it was identified as one of Wright’s saddles.
12265. Do you know, in fact, that those things were found afterwards in this closet?—Nothing but what Steele told me.
12266. Were you at all aware of James Dixon having been sent by Steele to take this horse’s saddle and bridle away, in order to bring a charge against Wild Wright?—Oh, by no means.
12267. There is no truth in that?—None whatever; at least, I would be the wrong one to get up a trumped charge against any one. I think that is pretty well known.
12268. Were you selected on your entrance into the police for special service?—Yes.

H. Armstrong, continued, 21st June 1881.

12269. What was it?—I was told off for cab duty after I joined; that is a privilege, and then I was told off for plain-clothes duty with Sergeant Dalton.
12270. That was amongst the criminal classes in Melbourne, Little Bourke street and those streets?—Yes, and general duty.
12271. Here is a letter you have written to Mr. Nicolson, 31st May 1881, in which you write—“You also gave us instructions on that occasion to keep a vigilant guard or watch night and day, which order was also obeyed. A strict watch or guard would also have been kept by the men in Sherritt’s hut at the time of the murder, in accordance with your previous instructions, were it not that I had received orders from a person to the contrary.” Who was that person?—Detective Ward.
12272. “Who I suppose acted on the advice of your successor. Although no man looks on the conduct of the police at Sebastopol in a worse light than I do myself, I think those who sent us there with improper instructions, namely, to keep no watch, immediately beside Byrne’s, knowing Sherritt to be a marked man, made the first blunder and are not free from blame.” Why was he a marked man?—It was pretty well known he was in the employ of the police, and the shot fired over the hut would show he was a marked man.
12273. Your officers had not told you of that at the time?—No.
12274. Is that what you complain of—that you got no information?—Yes, I look on it as a general misfortune. It does not affect me; I will soon be where no one will know me.
12275. Have you seen your record sheet?—No.
12276. If you were in the same position again would you venture out under the same circumstances?—I believe I would, but I would be shot.
12277. It is right to tell you that your record sheet, from all your officers, speaks in the highest terms of your courageous conduct. You were one of the party going to search Rats’ Castle?—Yes.
12278. Were you aware how many were at Wangaratta on duty when you left it?—I could not say.
12279. Were you in Sergeant Steele’s party?—Yes, I was always with Sergeant Steele.
12280. Was it your impression that those were the traces of the Kellys at the time at the bridge?—Yes, I am thoroughly confident they were, but we were not going to Rats’ Castle at that time—we were going round to beat the ranges.
12281. Did you feel you were justified in going away from the tracks?—I did not hear what instructions Sergeant Steele got from Constable Twomey at the time.
12282. We have it in evidence that Mr. Sadleir gave the instructions?—Yes, he did, to go round to Yackandandah and the ranges, but Twomey gave those instructions to Steele at Wangaratta, in the train.
12283. Steele has said that, although he was on other duty, and could not turn round, he stated there was nothing to prevent him going?—Well Sergeant Steele, I think, would hardly like to disobey Mr. Sadleir’s instructions, I fancy. I could not give any other opinion on that. He was in charge of the party, and he thought he was justified in going on.
12284. You do not think it was an act of cowardice?—By no means; Steele is the wrong mark for that; in fact, I have noticed no cowardice. Any of the constables would have been only too glad to meet the Kellys on equal terms.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next at Eleven o’clock.

TUESDAY, 28TH JUNE 1881.

Present:

Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A., G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P., J. Gibb, Esq., M.L.A.

Francis Augustus Hare further examined.

F. A. Hare, 28th June 1881.

12286. Did you employ him to watch on behalf of the police, or to give any information?—I had better state exactly what occurred. He came to Benalla shortly after my arrival there on the second occasion, and told me he had given information privately concerning the Kellys, and said he was anxious to get his son into the police force. I told him we were not taking on any fresh men then, but that if he could give me any information concerning the Kellys that I would do what I could to get his son in the force; in fact, I would guarantee that he should be taken in. Knowing that he lived within a very short distance of the Lloyds, I said to him, “Would you have any objection to take a man to live with you who is in my employ. He is not a policeman, but he has been one.” We had some conversation about it, and at last he agreed to do so, and told me to send him as if in search of work; to come with an old horse that he could turn out in his paddock, without the Crown brand. I made all the necessary arrangements to send a man named Stevens to his house. The man remained there for some time, and left the day after the Kellys were captured. I think he was at Wilson’s place about ten or twelve days, not more. I do not think I saw anything more of Jacob Wilson.

12287. Is it your opinion that he was compelled to leave his selection through fear?—I cannot say that. I know nothing at all about his case whatever. He referred in his evidence to my having put my horses in his paddock. I did so; but I put my horses in many settlers’ paddocks whilst I was out searching for the Kellys. Some people there consented, and some I put in without saying a word to them about it, and I paid him for the forage I took for the police horses. It was with his consent I put the horses in. The man was particularly anxious to assist me—I must give him that credit—and did what very few other men would have done, that is, allowed us to send a stranger to his place; and he, I was told by Stevens, watched with Stevens at Lloyd’s house. That is all the information I can give on the subject.

12288. When you told him you would do what you could to get his son in the police, that was provided he was fit?—Yes, of course.

12289. Are you aware that he is ruptured, and unfit?—I heard Wilson say so here, but nothing beyond that.

The witness withdrew.

The Reverend Matthew Gibney sworn and examined.

12290. By the Commission.—What are you?—I am the Vicar-General of the Roman Catholic Church in Western Australia.

12291. We just want the few things you know yourself at Glenrowan?—Yes.

12292. Do you remember the taking of the Kellys at Glenrowan?—I came there by the train, I do not know the exact hour the train arrived, but I believe it was the first ordinary train from Melbourne. I was staying in Kilmore the previous night and started then with the train.

12293. It would be about 12 o’clock?—Coming on twelve, I think.

12294. Did you take any particular notice of what was going on at that time?—I did not hear previous to my getting into the train of the Kelly capture or that the police had found them, but when I came to Benalla I was told there that Kelly was taken, that he was wounded, that the others were stuck up at a place of which I could not remember the name then—that was Glenrowan. I enquired myself if there was any Catholic clergyman there, and I was told no; and then I made up my mind if there was not I would stay to attend first to Kelly, and then to any others I might be called on to.

12295. You were a witness of what occurred after 12 o’clock?—I was a good deal of the time.

12296. Where were you principally stopping?—I made my way into where Ned Kelly was lying. I understood he was in a dying state at the time.

12297. That was in the station?—Yes.

12298. Did you notice anything that occurred at Mrs. Jones’s hotel?—I observed that the police stationed around were firing into the hotel just as the train came up—in fact the firing seemed to be then vigorously carried on.

12299. All round?—All round. It took me some considerable time to get into where Ned Kelly was lying. There seemed to be a great press of people about the windows and door, curiously trying to see him; but I think it was a Dr. Nicholson to whom I was very thankful for the manner in which he assisted me to get to Kelly, and attended to any call now and then when, as I thought, Kelly was in a dying condition—he was fainting, he was always ready to attend at any call to give me any assistance he could.

12300. Did you hear anything during the afternoon about the proceedings of the police with reference to the Kellys?—Well, there were just some few incidents came under my notice that I do not think they were stated, as far as I could see, correctly. That is, I was told that Kelly’s sisters were coming on the scene. It would be some considerable time after I had attended to Ned Kelly.

12301. Some time in the afternoon?—Yes, and I was then glad to find that because I thought she could proceed to Mrs. Jones’s house safely to speak to the men. I stepped forward and asked her would she go to her brother and tell him there was a Catholic priest here who was anxious to come and see him, and to ask him would he let me in. She said, “Of course, I will go up and see my brother.” She was very excited. She started then for the house but was stopped.

12302. By whom?—I could not say. I did not know any person on the scene—by some police authority, I suppose, so I was told. The officer in charge of the police was off in one direction of the semi circle which the police formed, standing in different groups here and there behind trees. I was told he was off.
in that direction, so I went on from one group of police to another to find the officer in charge. And when I had gone to the extreme end there, I was told he was not there, so I was directed then on to the other end, and when I came to the last body I was told that was he—I think Mr. Sadleir; and then I sent the girl to ask (I did not go myself) for permission for her to go up to the house, mentioning that I advised her to go; and she went and she was told she would not be allowed to go. I was strongly inclined to go myself prior to that, but when I had been with Ned Kelly, after I had attended to him, I asked him did he think it would be safe for me to go up to the house and to get this man, his brother, I think, to surrender. He looked very steadfastly at me, seemingly reading me, and he said, “I would not advise you to go, they will certainly shoot you.” I said, “They would not shoot me if they knew I was a priest or a clergyman;” and he said, “They will not know what you are, and they will not take time to think.” I saw that I could not justify myself in going up as long as I did not see the probability of doing any service. That alone was what kept me back during the course of the day. I was surprised a good deal that there seemed to be no sign of truce at any time offered; there was no signal given that the men might see, that they might have the idea their lives would be spared if they came out. I was rather surprised at that, and remarked it repeatedly, but still I did not know whether it was to anyone in authority or not, because there seemed to be an incessant feeling of anxiety in the minds of those men that were around.

12303. Did they seem to be under any control?—I could not say that they were guided by any orders. I could not make a statement on that subject.
12304. Did they seem to have the appearance of being guided by orders?—I do not think they had. I do not think really that there was any disciplinary order guiding them, as far as I could be a judge.
12305. In point of fact, that there was a want of generalship?—Oh, that was evident.
12306. They seemed just to be shooting away at random?—Firing at the house was the only thing that anyone could say there was any uniformity about.
12307. Just firing at the house?—Yes.
12308. Did you hear any shots fired from the house after you arrived?—I repeatedly tried to ascertain for myself whether there were, and I could not. Sometimes there would be shots fired that I could not really say whether it would be from the house or not, but the reason of that was that sometimes, in my position, the police were above and beyond the house, and I could not really say then whence the sound came.
12309. So far as you know there was no further attempt made to communicate with them after Mrs. Skillian and the sister came?—No further attempt was made to communicate with them that I saw or heard of, only that, until the house was set fire to.

POLICE. 3 k

28th June 1881.

12310. Did you feel it your duty to rush in to see them when the house was fired?—It was at that particular time that the crisis occurred that then buoyed me up to do what I did, when the house was being set fire to. My feelings revolted very much from the appearance it had, and I was wishing in my heart that it might not take fire. That was my own feeling in the matter; and then I should not have gone but that when the fire seemed to have taken well, just as it seemed to break through the house here and there, there was a volley fired into the house, and I then said to myself, “These men have not five minutes to live. If they stop in they will be burned, and if they come out they will be shot.” That was what decided me, and I thought then they will be very glad to get any service now—they will be very glad to see anyone coming to them.
12311. Did you go in at the front door?—I was then close down to the gate at the railway crossing, and I started from there direct for the front of the house. I think I might be about half the distance between where I started from and the house when I was called to. I was told afterwards it was Mr. Sadleir who called me not to go there without orders, without consulting him—that I should not go there without consulting him.
12312. You were told afterwards it was Mr. Sadleir?—Yes; so I stopped then a few moments, and stepped towards him, perhaps two or three paces, to remonstrate with him. I said something to this effect, “I am not in the police service, I am going on my duty, and there is no time to lose.” So he did not interfere with me further, and I walked on. As I was going on towards the house there was a large number of people about. I am not a very good judge of numbers that way, but I thought there could not be less than 500 or 600 people.
12314. Did you see the two young men when you went in?—When I was going up towards the house the excitement of the people was very great, and they clapped hands as if I was going on a stage; their excitement was high at the time. I went in then on what I think was the room on the right hand side, and it was quite vacant or empty. It was the other end of the house the fire was set to, and then when I came inside I called out to the men that I was a Catholic priest, and came to offer them their life, and asked them for God’s sake to speak to me. I got no answer of course, but I thought to myself that they might be on their guard, watching to see whether I was what I said I was. Then I found first the body of Byrne. There was a door leading out of this room towards the door. His body was lying there where he had fallen in a straggled kind of way. He seemed to have fallen on his back, like on his hip. He must have died soon, because he was just in the same position as he fell; he was still lying, and his body quite stiff.
12315. Did you see him fall?—No, he had fallen in the morning. I heard when I came there that he was shot, and that he could not have lived long after he fell. When I found this man’s body, that part of the house was blazing furiously just before me. I did not think that I would go in then if I got any other passage around, so I went into another back room that was off the one I entered first, and there was no exit out of that—no door—so I had to come back to the same spot again, and the place was blazing considerably. I was afraid at the time that I might be caught with the flame; I just blessed myself in the name of God and rushed through. Then when I came in that passage down from the bar towards the back of the house there was a little room to the left hand, and I spoke again to the men inside. I got no answer, of course, and I looked in upon the floor and found the two corpses lying together.

12317. At the time you saw the two corpses lying in that room, had the fire taken sufficient hold of the building to have destroyed those two corpses by fire, or are you under the impression they were dead prior to the fire?—Oh! I am certain they were dead.

12318. But we want your own impression whether their death was caused by the fire, suffocation, or any other means?—My impression is that they certainly were not killed by the fire—were not suffocated by the heat of the fire. I myself went in there, and stopped there safely, and just when I came into their presence they were very composed looking, both lying at full stretch, side by side, and bags rolled up under their heads, the armour on one side of them off. I concluded they lay in that position to let the police see when they found them that it was not by the police they died; that was my own conclusion.

12320. At the present time?—Yes, I took hold of the hand of the one that was near me to see whether or not they had recently killed themselves—whether there was life in them, and I found it was quite lifeless. Then I looked at his eyes, and I found that his eyes showed unmistakable signs that he was dead for some time; and then I went to the other to touch him. I satisfied myself that life was completely extinct in both of them before I left, and at that time this little room they were in the fire was just running through it. I saw that the roof itself was sufficiently safe, that I was in no immediate danger. It was very hot, but still I saw I was not in any immediate danger of being caught.

12321. At the time that you entered the little room at the back of the building where the two corpses were lying, had the two men been living, there was sufficient time for them to have escaped with their lives from the fire?—Oh yes, there was if there had been life in either of them. I would have had them out myself, and I was perfectly satisfied that they would be taken out. I looked upon it that my own purpose was realized, that I had satisfied myself that what I came to do was over, that it was too late, and then I said I would give word to the police of course as so as I found how they were. I walked out the back of the house, that was the nearest way then, and called out to the police that the men were all dead inside.

12322. Did they rush to the building then?—There came two or three running up very soon after. The first man, I suppose he was a policeman, that came up, it appeared to me he was determined to have a shot into one of them. That was just the impression I had at the moment.

12323. He had his revolver ready?—Yes, he had his revolver ready, and specially so it appeared to me. I laid my hand upon his arm that way, and said, “Do not fear, they are both dead.” That was at Byrne’s body; he could not see the other two from there. So then I believe it was the time they rushed in, and pulled out the body of Byrne. Of course the crowd came running then quickly, and I was certain that they would have taken out the bodies. I was perfectly satisfied they would have done so, and there was plenty of time; but then I did not make sufficient allowance for appearances, or of the fact that I had an advantage over the police just then. I knew the room had not been burnt through; though burning, it was not burnt through.

12324. Then from the way in which they were lying, with a pillow of bags under their heads, you came to that conclusion it must have been arranged before?—That they laid it out, and that they could not have been laid in such a position except by design.

12325. Did you notice if they had any weapons in their hands?—I did not see any, and I cannot say that I saw any sign of blood; in fact, my impression was that they must have laid the pistol upon their breasts to that conclusion it must have been arranged before?

12326. I think about how long were you in the house altogether?—That is not at all a question I could answer.

12327. And then you went out at the back door?—I went out the back, after having found the three bodies.

12328. Did you come through again out of the front door?—No, I went into the room off the first room, and thence into a room off that, thinking I could get out that way without passing through the flames, because that was the end of the house fired first, and the fire was worst there; and the spirits might have caught fire, I thought; there was a sheet of fire.

12329. About how long were you in the house altogether?—I could not really say; perhaps I might have been from eight to ten minutes I think so.

12330. Would the time not seem to be longer than it really was?—It might appear to me longer, because all that I did, when I found Byrne was dead, was to pass on then to get the others. I went into the back room, as I said, off the one that I entered first, thinking to go out that way.
12331. You could have done all that in five minutes?—I daresay I could.
12332. How far were the police from you when you came out and said the men were dead?—There were none of them I saw nearer, I should say, than between 20 or 30 paces.
12333. There was no effort made by them to come up till you told them?—No, there was no man came up with me, or that I saw, till the first man that reached me after I came out of the back, and called out to them. He was the first man I saw come to the house. I think there were three that ran up after that. That was after I came out. My great object in going, of course, was to see to get those men time for repentance; and I would have preferred much to have seen them executed rather than to have seen them destroyed in that manner.
12334. Although you saw no firearms about them, you still think they committed suicide?—From the position; I could not judge of anything except from the position in which they were lying. They lay so calm together, as if laid out by design.
12335. It had all the appearance of a pre-arrangement?—It had. I saw sometimes in the press different remarks about casting censure upon this Police Commission, that they had not given me any portion of the reward. Now I wish to make a statement on that matter. From the first I never intended to receive anything of that reward, though I might be considered entitled to it. I never thought myself for a moment that I would accept any portion thereof; and my reason for that is simply this—that it is better for society at large that we should be (the Catholic priesthood, I mean) free of any charge of taking any money that is offered as a reward, because we can more readily move in the matter; we can approach them with some amount of confidence on that account. Of course I merely make the remark with your permission, that it, was my own determination; and if you had not given me the opportunity of saying so, of course I would never make such a remark, because it might not be understood in the way I intend it.
12336. This is not the Commission that allocated the reward?—Indeed 12337. That was a Board appointed for the purpose; but your object in stopping at Glenrowan that day was in your capacity as a Catholic priest?—As a priest.
12338. Your duties as a priest were paramount to all other considerations?—It was only that that kept me there and actuated me at all. There was another thing, I thought I might also remark. I thought it strange that as I was the principal witness in finding those bodies, that I had not been in any way consulted in the matter, that I had not been referred to at all as a witness. I did not see any reason at all why I would not be at least so far consulted in the matter, or spoken to, to hear what I had to say on that. Of course I was the witness of the manner in which those bodies were found, and the first witness.
12339. We fully intended to call you, but we did not know at first you were in the colony?—I referred simply to the inquest.
12340. And you were on the ground at the time?—I went on to Albury.
12341. But they could have found you?—Yes. I think I might say too, with your permission, that in order that it may not appear strange why I should be so far away from my own place, that my object in visiting Victoria has been collecting for the orphans institution, of which I am the certified manager myself in my own colony. It might appear a strange thing for me to be away so far from my own duties.
12342. Did you tender any advice or suggestion to the police officers during the day in any way?—
Well, I did not find or see any of them. I exposed myself very considerably in trying to find one of them, because in going from tree to tree if the parties had been alive inside, as was supposed, they might have said, “He is one making himself very busy giving general directions, going from place to place, from one officer of police to another.” They might leave picked me off; but still I was very intent on trying to have the sister was after I came out. My great object in going, of course, was to see to get those men time for repentance; and I would have preferred much to have seen them executed rather than to have seen them destroyed in that manner.
12343. You did not find him on the scene of the fight?—He was with the party at the opposite end.
12344. Did you notice the black trackers there?—Well, as I was passing along in the front of the house, along by the railway line like—I was questioning myself afterwards about that—I think I saw some of them lift their heads and look up to me from a kind of gulf or hole they were in. I could not say for positive now, I did not pay any particular attention to that.
12345. You did not notice whether there was any particularly heavy shooting from there or not?—
No.
12346. Is there anything further you wish to add?—I do not think there is anything further. There is one thing, which is hardly relevant to the matter. There was a report spread at the time, after I had been attending to Ned Kelly. Of course I was a very considerable time with him before I moved out at all, trying to prepare him for his last, because I thought he was in a dying state, the doctor could not give a decided opinion as to the result. After that I came out and heard there was a report he was cursing and swearing just after I came out. I said, “My labor is lost if that is the case,” and I made my way back, and asked the policeman in charge of him to tell me was he making use of any bad language or was he disturbed.

He said “No,” and I asked Kelly myself, and he said “No.” Then I came out and challenged the parties, and said the man was bad enough, and not to tell lies about him, and afterwards I found it had been telegraphed, but these are points that are of no importance. I forgot to mention anything about Cherry, the man that was taken out of the house. I was aware that he was wounded in the house almost from my going there. Some parties met me and told me this man, a platelayer, was shot by the fire of the police upon the house, and he was wounded, and I knew that from their information that he could not possibly come out, that he was inside incapable of moving himself, and yet they said he had not died. Well I did not find him in any of those three rooms. I came to where the bodies of the outlaws were, and I had already passed through the house, and it was a party that had been bailed up with him that knew where he was, ran and took him out.

12347. From an outhouse?—I fancy so. I believe he would have been burned; that he is the only one that would have been burned alive if I had not come up.

12348. You mean he was the only one whose life would have been sacrificed by the effects of the fire?—Yes.

12349. You saw him when he was brought out?—Yes; I attended to him as well as I could, and ministered the sacrament of my own church to him as far as I could.

12350. He made some remarks?—Not to me. He seemed to be conscious, but not able to speak.

12351. You said you went in at the front, and not at the back; did you not afterwards appear at the front door, and hold up your hands in this manner—[explaining by gesture]?—No; it was at the back. When I was going in I held up my hands, and kept my hands in such a position going into the house, so that the parties observing me might perhaps be justified in saying that I came back, from the fact that I turned back from the room I first entered, because I was standing between the people and the blaze, and every movement of mine, I believe, they could see with the strong light that was beyond me. They might, in the excitement of the time, think I came out. I did not come out of the house at the front.

12352. Did you appear at the door?—No.

12353. What intimation had the police from the front that it was all over, that caused them to go up to the house?—When I saw the others running to the other side, I suppose I called out to the police. They were on my right hand as I went up. After I came out, I turned to them then and called out, I dare say they were watching anxiously, and the first of that party then came running, and they all rushed after. I did not come outside the house until I came out of the back.

The witness withdrew.

C. Johnston,
28th June 1881.

Charles Johnston further examined.

12354. By the Commission.—We want to examine you particularly upon the time you were in pursuit of the Kellys and anything else you may desire to say?—Yes.

12355. Do you remember the time when it was supposed the Kellys had passed Wangaratta, and a party was sent out after them in charge of Mr. Brook Smith?—I do.

12356. Can you fix the date of that?—I can; it was on the 6th of November 1878 that we left Wangaratta.

12357. That was almost immediately after the murder of the men in the ranges?—Yes, immediately after.

12358. How many of you were there in the party?—There were twenty-two.

12359. Did you come upon any tracks?—I might say on the afternoon of the 6th we divided when we went about twenty miles from Wangaratta, at the station where Morgan was shot; I do not remember the name of it.

12360. Pechelba?—Yes, where Morgan was taken. Mr. Brook Smith took one party, and Mr. Kennedy—who was then a first-class detective—took the other party.

12361. Did the parties go in different directions?—Mr. Kennedy’s party went across the ranges towards Lake Rowan. Mr. Smith’s party went on to Yarrawonga. I was with Mr. Smith’s party.

12362. Did you come upon any signs of the Kellys having been recently at the place, or did you hear anything?—We heard nothing until the morning of the 8th. I might mention we went to Yarrawonga on the night of the 6th, and we remained there during the night. The following day we left Yarrawonga and arrived that night at Lake Rowan. Coming back towards Wangaratta on the morning of the 8th we passed Mr. Ryan’s place at Lake Rowan. After coming across the ranges I saw the stockyard, which I went into, and I found that horses had been recently in the stockyard. That would be within 48 hours prior.

12363. It might have been a shorter time?—It might have been; but I think it would be within 48 hours.

12364. Was there anything remarkable about them?—There were some of the horses shod and some unshod. I told Mr. Smith that there had been some horses in the yard. I do not remember what answer he made, but he had gone on in front with some of the other men, and about a quarter of a mile from the stockyard I picked up the tracks again of five horses. I coo-ee-d on Mr. Smith and brought him back, and pointed out to him that I believed those were the outlaws; and he concurred with me that it was so.

12365. You mean the outlaws’ tracks?—Yes, the tracks of their horses. There were three of them riding singly, and there was evidently a pack-horse beside one of the others. The ground was very soft, and on the flat country it was easy tracking them. We traced them on to the Warby Ranges, somewhere about, I should say, about 25 miles. A man named Dixon and I did the tracking.

12366. Would it be going in the direction of Greta?—It would be partially, but they would have to go round a considerable distance to get to it. It would be going in the direction of Wangaratta more from Lake Rowan.
12367. Further north?—Further north.
12368. But would it be in the direction taken by men who were endeavoring to evade observation to get to Greta?—It would. It would be a very good outline to follow.

12369. Did you think they were then disappointed in trying to get home, and were trying to get back again?—That is my impression, that they had tried to get across the Murray and found they could not and were making back to the ranges, and that they had called at Ryan’s, at Lake Rowan, to get provisions. That is my impression.

12370. What followed?—Night came on, and Mr. Smith deemed it desirable that we should return to Wangaratta, as we had no provisions.

12371. The night of the 8th of November?—That was the night of the 8th of November.
12372. You say “deemed it desirable”—how do you arrive at the conclusion he did that?—Because we had no provisions, and night came on, and we had no trackers.

12373. What did he say that made you aware that he “deemed it desirable”?—From what he said, We will go to Wangaratta to-night and get the black trackers, and be able to run the tracks to-morrow.”

12374. From the impression you formed on the night of the 8th November do you believe then you were on the tracks of what you supposed to be the outlaws?—I do.

12375. Were you enabled then to form any opinion of the probable time they had passed those tracks up to that point?—I do not believe they were more than 48 hours in advance, that is at the time and from the appearance of the tracks, and from certain hairs that were on the fence, showing that they had taken the brush fence—white hairs, where the horses had scratched themselves crossing the fence. We knew there was one of the police horses had white legs, and there were some white hairs on this brush fence.

12376. One of which police horses?—One of the horses that were taken from the murdered police. There was a chestnut gelding, M 42, with white legs and face; that was the horse I supposed that had left the hair on this brush fence.

19377. Do you know whether that horse was shod or unshod?—I could not say, because all the horses had gone across, and he was the only horse that could have left white hairs.

12378. You last stated that it was coming on night, and Mr. Smith told you it was desirable to go into Wangaratta to get black trackers?—Yes, and to get provisions.

12379. Did the constables agree with that?—Yes, we all agreed that night to go.
12380. Did you go?—We did go.
12381. What time did you reach Wangaratta?—About nine o’clock at night.
12382. How far was that from Wangaratta?—About between nine and ten miles.
12383. Did you see any superior officer when you got to Wangaratta?—I did not.
12384. Was there any officer there?—Mr. Smith told me that Mr. Nicolson was there.
12385. Did you see him?—I did not see him that night.
12386. Where did you go to?—To Kitts’ hotel, where we were putting up our horses.
12387. Did you receive any instructions?—Mr. Smith came and told me to have the men ready at four in the morning, that he had received instructions from Mr. Nicolson to pick up the tracks and follow them.

12388. Did anything occur till that time?—No.
12389. Did you get up?—Yes; I got the horses together and men ready, and called on Mr. Smith. There were seven horses and men.

12390. What time did you call Mr. Smith?—About four o’clock. He was sleeping in one of the rooms at Kitts’ hotel.

12391. Did he get up?—No. He said he would get up immediately. I waited for an hour and re-called him about five o’clock. He told me he would get up immediately.
12392. Did he?—Not till about seven o’clock.
12393. What did he do then?—He came out and told me to proceed out as far as Bryan’s place—that is, Morgan’s Gap—and that he would follow.

12394. Did you go?—I did. I arrived at Bryan’s about nine o’clock.
12395. Was your officer there before you?—No, I did not see him until night. I remained there until one o’clock, and then I suggested to the men the advisability of going on and picking up the tracks and fighting the outlaws, and they all agreed with me to go and we did go.

12396. You were delayed until that hour by your officer?—Yes.
12397. Did you pick up the tracks?—Yes; we took them up in the direction of the Warby Ranges, and to a point above Bryan’s house.

12398. Is that the orange grove?—Yes.
12399. Did the tracks you were then following correspond in every particular with the tracks you had been following the previous day?—Yes, exactly, and we followed them to the summit of the range immediately over the orange grove over Bryan’s place, where they had evidently camped—where the horses had been camped for the night.

12400. What hour was it when you found the tracks there?—About four in the afternoon.
What did you do then?—We searched about for about an hour, and different tracks were about where the horses had been grazing, and we picked up the pack-horse.

We were then searching about for the tracks; ‘the horses had been out—all loose?’—Some of them had been loose, and we wanted to find out what direction they had gone.

Where was Mr. Smith then?—I do not know.

What did you find then?—We found the pack-horse, B 87. That was the pack-horse that was taken from the murdered police.

Was it Kennedy’s pack-horse?—It was.

Was he the one with the white legs?—No.

What did you do with the horse?—Left him there until it was dark and took him down. My intention was to put him in the paddock, and leave him there until I sent one of the men in for provisions to Wangaratta, so if we went further on we could remain at night.

To keep on the tracks?—Yes, at the foot of the range, to pick up the tracks immediately the next morning.

Did you do that?—No, we met Mr. Brook Smith. It was just getting dusk.

Was this the first time you saw him after seven o’clock, when he ordered you to take the men?—Yes.

What did he do?—He rode up and gave the order—’Halt; form up. Any applications or complaint?’

Did you form up in line?—Yes.

Were there any?—I said there were none that I was aware of. I said we had got one of the horses that were taken from the police. He said, ‘Who found it?’ I said, ‘The party was all together when we got the horse in the ranges.’ He said, ‘Right; proceed to Wangaratta.’

Did that mean to face right?—I do not know what he meant by the word “right,” but that was what he said—’Right; proceed to Wangaratta.’

Is that the word of command?—’Right’ is not; ‘Right face’ is. He meant, I presume, that it was right we had the horse, and we should proceed to Wangaratta.

Did you go there?—Yes, we took the horse.

Did you see any superior officer there?—Mr. Nicolson, about ten at night.

Was Mr. Smith present when you saw him?—Yes.

What did Mr. Nicolson say?—Mr. Smith told him about the finding of the horse. Mr. Smith had sent word when we were about three miles out of Wangaratta—sent in word by one of the men to tell Mr. Nicolson that one of the police horses was recovered.

Did Mr. Nicolson meet you there?—No, he sent a message back by the man not to mention it anywhere that the horse was found. We went to the stable then, at Wangaratta, and left the horse we found at the police station. We stayed at the hotel where we had been stopping. After we had dinner I went with Mr. Smith and saw Mr. Nicolson.

Was it ten o’clock at night?—It was about eight o’clock when we had our dinner, and I went about ten o’clock with Mr. Smith and saw Mr. Nicolson. He told him to proceed in the morning the first thing, and follow the tracks on.

Did you say anything to him about your desire to have black trackers?—We had the trackers then; we got the trackers the previous day.

Is that all Mr. Nicolson said?—He had some conversation with Mr. Smith.

Did you hear it?—Some of it. I heard Mr. Smiths say to him, “If we get on to the outlaws what are we to do?” He said, “My men will shoot them.” Mr. Nicolson told him to obey the orders he had given him to proceed the first thing in the morning and follow the tracks on.

Did he say anything about whether he was to shoot them or not?—He did not say. I went back to the hotel.

Nothing occurred with regard to that until you got up in the morning?—I did not hear anything until I got up in the morning at a quarter to four. I got the horses fed, and the men all out, and got them their breakfast.

Were the men all armed?—They were.

How?—I had a repeating rifle, revolver, and I think there were two repeating rifles. A man named Cameron had one.

Had you any conversation with the men as to your belief that you would overtake the outlaws or not?—We had.

What was your opinion?—That we would proceed on, and that we would overtake them before they would get very far, as I believed we were close on to them.

When did you start that morning?—We did not leave Wangaratta till after nine.

What was the reason of the delay?—Waiting for Mr. Brook Smith.

Where was he?—He was in bed.

Do you mean to say he would not get up?—I called him at four.
12435. Did you call him again?—I called him about six.
12436. Did you call him again?—No.
12437. Was he ill?—I am not aware of it.
12438. Was he fit for duty?—I do not know.
12439. What do you think?—It is hard to form an opinion. He was in bed.
12440. Did he get up at nine?—I saw him about half past eight.
12441. Did you see Mr. Nicolson that morning?—I did not.
12442. Do you know whether Mr. Nicolson sent to see if the party had gone?—I told Kitt we could not get away, it was a shame to keep us waiting. He said he would go and tell Mr. Nicolson.
12443. Is he an old constable?—Yes.
12444. Did he tell him?—I was told by the constable that was with Mr. Smith, named Broderick, that Mr. Nicolson came down to the hotel and ordered him off after we had left. The party was gone before Mr. Brook Smith started.
12445. Did Mr. Nicolson take any action from the time you gave him the information the night before that you had the police horse till you started the next morning, to see the party were off?—I am not aware of it. I never saw him. Mr. Brook Smith overtook me on the road.
12446. How far were you on?—We were about two miles out when he overtook us. He rode on in the direction of the ranges in front of us.
12447. Was he by himself?—Yes, he was; the party was after him until we got within about two miles of Bryan’s place.
12448. Was it where you left the tracks?—No, we wanted to turn off on to the left, and get up the gully, and not go near Bryan’s place at all, for the purpose of getting on the tracks where we had left them.
12449. Where had he lost the tracks?—About between four and five miles from Bryan’s place, further back in the ranges, about ten miles further back than we had tracked them. We turned to the right and went to Bryan’s.
12450. Contrary to the wishes of the men and yourself?—Yes, contrary to the wishes of the men and myself.

12451. In fact, contrary to your knowledge of what ought to have been done?—Yes, quite contrary to what we thought ought to be done.
12452. You had been over the ground and knew where you were going?—Yes. Dixon was the guide with us that thoroughly knew the country.
12453. He could have taken you to exactly the spot?—Yes.
12454. Mr. Smith ordered you the reverse way, and you were bound to obey the orders of your officer?—Yes.
12455. What occurred when you went back that ten miles?—We again picked up the tracks where we had left off the day that Mr. Smith was with us, and followed them on to where we had left them off the night we got the pack-horse.
12456. You had then done the ten miles four times over?—Yes. We then picked up the tracks again, and ran them in the direction of Taminnick station.
12457. That was on the Sunday?—Yes.
12458. That would be about the 10th P.—Yes, on the 10th.
12459. Was Mr. Smith with you at this time?—He was; he remained with us then.
12461. You had followed them up 2 ½ miles that day?—Yes, about that; the trackers were very slow. They walked; they could not track unless they were on foot. It was two of the Coranderrk trackers we had; and we camped at the Taminnick station that night, and the following day we picked up some tracks again, and ran them in the direction of Glenrowan. We started very early the next morning, just after daylight.
12462. Was Mr. Brook Smith with you then?—He was.
12463. You said going towards Glenrowan—that would be towards Greta?—Yes, going in the direction of Greta.
12464. Were they the same tracks you had before?—They were the same I believe. There appeared to be only the four horses then.
12465. What occurred then?—We got to Glenrowan, and from the enquiries we made we found that on the previous Friday night that three men had been seen near the railway station when the train came in.
12466. Was that on the Monday you ascertained that?—Yes, Monday was the 11th.
12467. Did you track those four horses to Glenrowan?—Not all the way, but we picked up the tracks in several places. It was very rough in some places and boggy in others. As I said when the train came in there were three men seen near the Sydney road, and some person came out of the train and went in the direction of where the horsemen were standing. We followed the tracks from where they had seen this person, and we found them going up on to the ranges again in the direction of a place called Hell’s Hole back on to the Warby Ranges again, but on the opposite side of the range to that where we found the tracks coming. This was the north side they were going up again.

12468. How far is Glenrowan from the place you first saw the tracks on the 8th November—how many miles?—I could not say round the range.

12469. How far from Bryan’s to Wangaratta?—Well, I would say it must be close on 40 miles.

12470. How far is it from Wangaratta to Glenrowan?—15 miles.

12471. That would be 55 miles?—It would be by the direct route.

12472. The tracks were much longer than that?—Yes.

12473. Will you proceed with your narrative?—I said the tracks were going in the direction of the Warby Ranges again.

12474. Did you find their footsteps?—The tracks of the four horses were going on to the ranges. From enquiries we made—that would be on the Monday—we found that a chestnut horse had come down from the side of the range down on to the railway, and was caught by some man and taken on to the range.

12475. What horse was that?—I do not know. I would infer from the description of the horse that it was the chestnut horse taken from the police, because he had white legs and white face. From the description of the horse, I was satisfied it was the horse taken from the police. Night came on, and Mr. Smith and I consulted what was best to do, and we agreed to go into Wangaratta.

12476. How far were you from there then?—About 11 miles. We went in, and Mr. Smith saw Mr. Nicolson, and it was then agreed on that a large party be taken out in the morning to follow those tracks up. Sergeant Steele and his men came out; Mr. Sadleir came from Benalla, and we all met where we lost the tracks on the morning of the 12th. They joined Mr. Smith there, and Mr. Nicolson and his men.

12477. You took the tracks on the morning of Tuesday the 12th. Did Mr. Nicolson, Mr. Sadleir, and Mr. Brook Smith accompany the party of police then in pursuit of the tracks?—Yes, all of them. We went then north—almost directly north—the tracks were going for some few miles, and the tracks led into some thick scrub. The trackers were very slow, and did not appear to like to go into the scrub at all, the two trackers we had. There was then some conversation between the officers which I did not hear.

12478. Do you know of your own knowledge, on the Monday night or the Tuesday morning, when you were at Wangaratta, whether Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadleir were informed that they had passed through on the previous Friday?—I do not know that they were informed that they had passed through, but I told Mr. Sadleir myself of the information we had gained when I met him, but I did not tell Mr. Nicolson myself. I presumed Mr. Smith told him. We turned back then, and Sergeant Steele and his men left us and went away. Where he went to I do not know. We turned back the same line as we had gone, just came straight back to where we had met them from Benalla and Wangaratta. I remained back with Nicolson, Mr. Sadleir, and Mr. Smith, with the men that we had with us, all with the exception of Dixon. He went on with Sergeant Steele.

12479. Did you not follow those tracks any further?—No.

12480. Was there any reason assigned why?—I did not hear of any. We sat down and had lunch, and after lunch Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson were riding in front towards Glenrowan.

12481. You sat down and had lunch—where did you take lunch?—On the side of the range.

C. Johnston, continued.

28th June 1881.

12482. How far from Wangaratta?—It would be about two miles from Glenrowan along the side of the range.

12483. After retracing the steps back?—Yes.

12484. What was done then?—After lunch I intended to go up the range; in fact, I intended to go on up the range on my own responsibility, on the Warby Ranges.

12485. To the place called what?—Hell’s Hole, at the back of Morgan’s Look-out. I was called by Mr. Sadleir, and we all went in the direction of Glenrowan. When we got out on the road, Mr. Nicolson turned round and headed for Wangaratta, and Mr. Smith told us to follow him (Mr. Nicolson), and we did so.

12486. Was there any reason assigned for stopping upon those tracks at this time?—I did not hear any.

12487. Did you feel satisfied yourself that you were doing your duty in turning back—that is, the police were doing their duty?—I did not. I consider the police ought to have stopped out and followed.

12488. And followed them?—Yes.

12489. On this particular day, the 12th November or some prior date to that?—On the 12th, the day we are speaking of.

12490. Was the scrub thick?—Yes, very thick; but I think by beating about outside we might have picked up the tracks again without going into the scrub.

12491. Did the trackers say they were away?—They said, pointing, “Him going away this way.”

12492. And did not give you any further information that they were near to it?—No.
12493. Could you not have followed those tracks through yourself? — I think we might have.
12494. And brought the blackfellows in the midst of you if they were afraid? — I think we might have been ordered to do so.
12495. And you would not, have had any objection to do it? — Not the slightest. The men were all very anxious indeed to follow on.
12496. Did they allow the officers to know they were anxious? — I told Mr. Smith myself that the men were anxious to go.
12497. What did he reply? — He said we must obey the orders we get.
12498. The track of the outlaws was completely given up? — The track of the outlaws was completely given up. I am not aware of its afterwards being picked up, because I was dissatisfied; and the following day applied and left for Benalla with three other men.
12499. Did you express yourself dissatisfied other than to Mr. Smith? — Not at that time I did afterwards to Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir.
12500. Did they say anything about it? — I complained on one occasion when I was talking to Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir that I had not been fairly treated at the Warby Ranges, and that if I was baulked again in the same way I would take the responsibility on myself, and go I complained also of Steele being allowed to go away and I was left back. Mr. Sadleir said he gave no orders to Steele to go away, but he went himself.
12501. Then if you had been left to yourself, or with a party of four or five others, you would lead us to believe you would have followed those tracks up until you lost them or found the Kellys? — I would, I would have traced them out of the ranges to somewhere else I would not have given them up at that time.
12502. Did it strike you there was any great remissness on the part of the officers allowing those tracks to be given up? — I struck me they were very remiss in their duty in allowing them to be dropped at this time.
12503. Do I understand you to say that if you were an officer of police placed in the same position again that you were on the 12th November 1879, when your officer instructed you to return, and you believing you were on the tracks, you would have disobeyed, and remained and traced those tracks? — I would have afterwards returned and followed the tracks.
12504. You were then under the impression that if the police had taken active and instant steps, you must have tracked them from that point? — I think if I and the men had been allowed to work as we would have wished from the 8th until the 13th or some later date, perhaps we would have given a very good account of what we would have done in the ranges with the Kellys, for I considered we were very close to the Kellys all through.
12505. The evidence you give now to that effect is a very severe thing for one in your position to say, that you were baulked by the officers — that they did not show the same energy in following the Kellys as the men themselves would have shown? — They did not on that occasion. I am alluding to the 12th.
12506. You have been stationed in the North — Eastern district from that time until very recently? — I was stationed in the North-Eastern district from the 29th of October 1878 until the 20th of May 1881, when I was removed.
12507. Do you know any case that had arisen since the 8th November 1878 until the capture of Kelly where the police had more reliable information than they had at that particular time? — I am not aware of it.
12508. Are you under the impression that if active steps had been taken at that time, the probabilities are that the Kellys would have been captured within three weeks or a fortnight after the murders at the Wombat? — They might, I believe. They might have been captured had we not stopped—been taken at the ranges at that time. I am satisfied that we were not more than forty-eight hours behind them. There was some orange peel on the side of the range and it appeared to be fresh.
12509. You mean they had obtained oranges at Ryan’s, and they had been eating them and thrown the peel there? — Yes, when we were camped on the hill: in fact, Ned Kelly told me at Beechworth that he did not sleep any that night; that he knew we were on to them; that they held their horses in their hand all through.
12510. Were you out any other times in the ranges? — I was.
12511. Under Mr. Hare’s system, with a large number of men scouring the bush? — I was out with Mr. Hare only once. I went with him once. I was invariably in charge of parties myself.
12512. Was it under his system you were out? — Yes.
No, only once when I was informed by one of the spies that he saw them that day in the Strathbogie Ranges.

12517. Did you believe him?—I did not. I did not place any confidence in him at all, although I was despatched with a party of men to the place that night.

12518. You did not find them?—No, and no trace of any tracks where he said he saw them.

12519. Did you consider that either the spy system, or going about with large parties, was at all likely to capture the Kellys?—I did not believe in large parties. I considered that six men and a sub-officer was quite sufficient.

12520. Would you consider six a large party?—No, I would not, to meet four men like what the Kellys were.

12521. Would that other system of attempting to detect them by agents or spies be a better way?—I think in moving about from place to place would be likely to keep them moving, and they might be dropped on by some other party, or by a reserve party, that would work in with the agents.

12522. Upon the whole, during all the time you were out, you never had the satisfaction of knowing you were close to them?—I never had.

12524. And they know all the paths?—They know all the bye-ways and gaps in the ranges where they would be likely to meet any offender who had stolen horses or cattle, and know the people. In fact, my opinion is that constables should have a general knowledge of the whole of the district in which they reside, and they cannot do that unless they do patrol work to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the people and their mode of life.

12525. If the police had been handled in that way at first, they would have been more likely to have come up to the Kellys than under any other system?—I think if they went with a thorough knowledge of the country, as they should have, and the people, they would have soon run down the Kellys.

12526. Have you been enabled to form any opinion since the capture of the Kellys, and all the information that has come to your knowledge since that, where the gang was likely to be secreted between the 12th November and the bank robbery at Euroa—have you any information or can you form an opinion as to the place?—I could not say myself. I have been informed that they were down in the Broken River, that will be in a line from the Warby Ranges to Euroa.

12527. They were not seen or anything known of them from the information you had when you got to Glenrowan on the 12th November until the time they stuck up the bank at Euroa on the 9th December. They must have been secreted somewhere between those dates. Have you been able to form any idea where they were secreted, residing, living?—No, I cannot form any idea.

12528. Do you think it is probable they were secreted somewhere at the back of the sister’s hut at Greta, in the ranges at the back there?—They might be.

12529. Is that a very probable place up there?—It is, between that and the back of Kilfern, and between that and Dedongadale station.

12530. As they were not seen at the time, and no one can give an account of where they were, is there any other place where they were likely to be secreted and obtain the assistance of friends to supply them with the ordinary necessaries of life even for a month?—Yes, on the Broken River and Strathbogie. It was said that Ben Gould was supplying them with provisions.

12531. I want you to consider about this particular time before they had means, where was time most likely place for them to have been between the Wombat murders and the Euroa affair?—With their friends at the back of their mother’s at the back of Kilfera; and at the back of Wangaratta, the Warby Ranges. Those are all likely places.

12532. In fact, they had friends and relations in different places?—Yes.

12533. If they were secreted at the back of their mother’s place at Greta, were they likely to be supplied with the necessaries of life from any other source than from their mother’s place?—Yes, the Lloyds and the Quinns. They could have been supplied from those or Mrs. Skillian.

12534. Then, if they were in the Warby ranges, at time back of Wangaratta, who are the probable parties?—The Harts and this Bryan I allude to.

12535. Then the Broken River?—Roddy Maker and others could supply them.

12536. At the time the bank was stuck up at Euroa, were you able to obtain information as to which direction they came from to the bank?—Yes, from the Warby ranges.

12537. Then, if they had been stationed there all that time after they came from the murders of the police, they would have been supplied with provisions from whom?—From Bryan, or the Harts, or Joe Byrne’s people, or this Maher on the Broken River.

12538. Would it be easy for four men, between the 1st November and the 9th of December, such as the outlaws were, to go unobserved from the back of Mrs. Skillian’s place to the place where you say they were likely to be stationed at the back of Wangaratta, and from there to the Broken River?—They could travel it at night.

12539. Either by night or day is it likely they would have been observed if they travelled from one point or the other within that month?—Well, I believe I could travel myself without being, observed.

12540. Is there any point now that you wish to bring under the notice of the Commission that we have not mentioned?—I do not remember anything just at present.
12544. Do you consider you have been unfairly punished in that?—Yes. I do consider I have been unfairly punished, because I consider they had no right to remove me till they had a station to give me.

12545. Is it considered a degradation to be removed from a district to the barracks?—Yes; it is looked upon as a punishment.

12546. Could you assign any reason in your own mind why you have been, as you say, punished?—I do not know with the exception that I applied to leave the district—

12547. Did you not make urgent application to be removed because you were in danger then?—No, not an urgent application. It was promised by Captain Standish and Mr. Sadleir that I should be removed from the district before the Kellys were captured.

12548. Have you noticed any appearances that would lead you to believe there would be another rising in the district?—I have not the slightest. I do not think there will be except some of the friends of the sympathizers he bailed up for cattle stealing, they may turn out then. They may do something that will make them fly to the bush.

12552. Did you know at the time you proposed to set fire to it that a piece of cannon had been sent for to Melbourne?—Yes, Mr. Sadleir told me he had sent to Melbourne for one.

12553. What did you expect would be the result of setting fire to the place at all?—I thought it would drive them out of the place, and then we would have the opportunity of either shooting them or apprehending them. I saw one of them, from ten to twenty minutes before I proposed to set fire to the building, at the door.

12558. Your are sure of that?—I am satisfied of it.

12559. What did you expect would be the result of setting fire to the hotel?—Yes, I wanted to rush the hotel.

12561. Did you, prior to the burning of the hotel at Glenrowan, make any propositions to Mr. Sadleir or any other officer to take any other steps prior to setting fire to the hotel?—Yes, I wanted to rush the hotel.

12562. Prior to setting fire?—Yes.

12565. Was it in consequence of your being acquainted with that fact that you proposed, as a last resource to Mr. Sadleir, that you should be allowed to set fire to the hotel in preference to its being blown down by this piece of cannon?—It was.

12567. What did you expect would be the result of setting fire to the hotel?—Yes, I wanted to rush the hotel.

12568. Your are sure of that?—I am satisfied of it.

12569. What did you expect would be the result of setting fire to the hotel?—Yes, I wanted to rush the hotel.

12570. Prior to setting fire?—Yes.

12574. I am satisfied of it.

Mr. Nicolson.—I wish to make a short statement. Since the last adjournment of the Commission, I observed in the press a statement that Mr. O’Connor had made to the effect that I had favored the proposal as to his appointment. Lest there should be any misconception on that point, I wish to state that I know nothing of his appointment, and had no knowledge of his appointment till it was made.

Mr. Nicolson.—I do not recollect that having been said—what paper did you see it in?

Mr. Nicolson.—Copied from one of the Melbourne papers into the Benalla paper.

Mr. Nicolson withdrew.
Mr. Sadleir.—I want to make an application. I see by the papers that Dean Gibney was examined yesterday, and as he is, I understand, travelling through Australia, I should like to have an opportunity of cross-examining him, as his evidence relates entirely as to what was done at Glenrowan.

The Chairman.—We will consider that, and see what we can do, and let you know at once.

Mr. Sadleir withdrew, and was again called in.

The Chairman.—The Commission have been considering the matter, and they think if there is any thing that you definitely refer to, that perhaps it would be better, in courtesy to Father Gibney, who is a stranger, that we put it in writing, and send it to him.

Mr. Sadleir.—That is a disadvantageous way for me to cross-examine a witness, but I shall be glad to do anything the Commission desire.

12560. The chairman.—What is the character of the cross-examination you desire?—Mr. Sadleir: Father Gibney’s statements are very general.

12561. Want of discipline?—Yes, that is one. I am at this disadvantage, too, that I have only the newspaper report of the proceedings, and that is necessarily brief. I should not take, perhaps, more than ten minutes with Dean Gibney. He stated some facts that are quite out of my recollection, though they may be perfectly true.

12562. Is there anything in what you have read or heard that you think prejudicial to you?—Certainly. I am at these disadvantages, that I do not know exactly what he said.

12563. The principal thing he said about you was that he did not observe that there was any management or control?—That is very serious.

12564. Is that what you wish to examine him on?—That and other points.

12565. There was another statement that he made, that when he went to see the officer in command, he was pointed to one group of men and they said he was with another, and he went to another group and found you. I do not think he inferred from that that you were not attending to your duty?—He is an educated man, and can perfectly well meet any cross-examination. I can trust him. He is not like any man under my authority, who may be suspected of being under terror of my authority over him. I would much sooner not tie myself to what I should ask him.

The Shorthand Writer will read over Father Gibney’s evidence to you, and you can write out any questions which you desire to be forwarded to him.

The Chairman read the following letters:

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN MR. O’CONNOR AND HIS GOVERNMENT.

(Dry.)

DR. MR. SEYMOUR,
Police Department, Superintendent’s Office, 29th March 1879.

I drop you a line to let you know how matters are here at present. The gang are supposed to be near about here, but nothing reliable has been heard about them since the Jerilderie affair. I have been out in the ranges for some ten days on the chance of cutting tracks, and did do so; but after following them for some days found them to be only stockmen, &c.; all the good derived therefrom consisted in my being able to show that my men could do what I stated they could. I believe we were looked upon with a little doubt at first, but now, from the Chief Commissioner down to the lowest man, one and all give us full credit for what we can do.

We are at present idle, as the Chief Commissioner thinks it folly to go from head-quarters into the ranges on a wild goose chase, as, in the event of reliable information coming to hand, I could not be found; whereas by remaining here, ready to proceed in any direction when good information comes, not a moment is lost. I will wire you the very first news, you may be sure. You can have no idea of the sympathy shown to these ruffians, even ladies look upon them as heroes, and all the lower class unite in trying to fool the police. Nothing can be kinder than the Chief Commissioner to himself and men; anything I want I have only to ask for and I get. My boys are very jolly and happy, but eager to be at work, which I hope will not be far off now.

Hoping to hear from you soon,

(Sd.) STANHOPE O’CONNOR, Benalla, Victoria.

I remain, truly yours,

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,
Benalla, 6th June 1879.

I will now return to the subject most at heart, viz., the Kellys.

They have never been heard of since Jerilderie, I mean never on undoubted authority. Any news we have ever got was three or four weeks old, and always came through three, four, or five people, and, when sifted, turned out to be lies. Standish will not listen a moment to the idea that they are in N. S. Wales, but persists in asserting that the outlaws are in Victoria. I do not think so, for the following reasons:—No four persons could hide so securely for such a length of time without information being received as to their whereabouts, or that some of the parties of police that are out day after day would drop across their tracks (old or new) or their camps. 2ndly, the outlaws are all men who can turn their hand to any kind of bush work, such as fencing, shearing, &c., and being so slightly known, could easily separate and take a job on a station in N. S. Wales. 3rdly, Twice we have had information that they were in N. S. Wales—first time on the 1st May, when they were seen near the Murray by a boy; this boy’s statement was backed up by a woman, the wife of a well-to-do farmer; but this information did not reach us until it was a month old, and during the interval there had been very heavy rain. The second information came yesterday, which states the Kellys have been seen at a station called Talarnobbin, and that they have been there ever since Jerilderie. The information appears good, and will be tested at once.

I think you will admit that what I say is feasible, or else how is it nothing can be heard of the dogs?

Yours truly.

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

Benalla, 4th Aug. 1879.

I drop you only a line to let you know that we expect to hear at any moment that the outlaws are at hand. We are all ready to start in twenty minutes’ notice. The boys are in good health and very happy. Hoping you are the same.

Yours truly.

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

Benalla, 22nd Aug. 1879.

I am glad to be able to inform you that we have done good work. On the 17th last, the bank at Lancefield was stuck up by two armed men, who took about £800. Every person thought it was the Kellys, and we were wired to proceed by special train; we were in the train in an hour and twenty minutes after getting word, horses and all. From where the train stopped to Lancefield is a distance of 18 miles; we arrived there in a little over an hour and a half, picked up the tracks, and followed them that day about 17 miles. There had been very heavy rain since the men passed, and so made the tracking difficult, considering the men (robbers) were on foot—we, nevertheless, stuck to them to within 10 miles of Sandhurst, where the robbers hired a spring cart and man to take them in. We then sent an express on to Sandhurst, to the police, that the robbers were in the town, and through this they were enabled to arrest the two men at 12 o’clock at night. From the chief down, we have been praised, and they all know now our value, and hope that the Kellys will give us a chance. I am greatly pleased of course, and I know you will be so. I have no doubt, or never had, that we can do the work if we can only get on the Kellys’ track.

I have nothing to feel but joy, except for the conduct of Senr.-Const. King. I can well do without him, and hope you will wire to me to order him back to Brisbane.

The Chief Comr. here has been very kind in the matter, and he has given me a capital man in King’s place, so I will be as well off as I could wish.

The boys are all jolly, and of course elated with our success.

I hope to hear from you soon. Good bye.

Yours truly,

(Sd.)

STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

We have reason to believe that the Kellys will show soon.—Yours, &c. (Sd.) STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

Beechworth, 14th Decr. 1879.

I received your congratulations contained in your letter dated the 1st Decr., yesterday. Many thanks for your kind advice contained therein; but you may be sure I will never give up the “catching of the Kellys” until they are caught. In reference to the Kellys, I must tell you that I am confident that they have not very long to run now, as when I explain to you what we have done in the work, I think you will agree. Up to the time of Standish’s departure from Benalla, nothing was done that was likely to bring about the capture; nothing, but men in large parties racing through the country upon no information, hoping against hope, to drop upon the outlaws. I remonstrated with the Chief, but anything, he thought, was better than staying quiet and working the detective business, as he was afraid that unless he made a great stir the public would think he was not doing his best. Since the Chief’s departure the Assistant-Chief Comr. Nicolson has been put in command, and his plan of working is just the very opposite. During the last three months, friends and relations of the murderers have been either bought over, or induced by promises to work for the police, the whole matter as to where the outlaws are, is reduced to a small circle of about 20 miles, and I trust, most sincerely, that a very short time will suffice to put us in possession of the information that we are waiting for, viz., some one to be able to point out the tracks of the wretches.

You will be glad to hear that the boys are all in good health and very jolly.

With kind regards to yourself.

Yours truly,

(Sd.)

STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

P.S.—I am only here for a few days on account of being nearer our work; Beechworth is about 45 miles from Benalla, and connected by rail.—(Sd.) STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

Benalla, 2nd June 1880.

For some time past the C. Commissioner has been proposing that a change should be made in the management of the Kelly work. This change took place to day and consists of the recall of Assist. C. Commissioner Nicolson to Melbourne, and Superintendent Hare taking charge of the business. This change is one only in name, as Mr. Hare only retired from this work last July. Under the present aspect of affairs I am afraid that there is very little chance of us gaining any credit. I am convinced of this, as the C. Commissioner told me that he could do the work without our assistance, and tried to do it upon one occasion when he thought he had received the straight tip. This and other matters, some of which you are aware of, strengthens me in my opinion. It is publicly known that the moment a few scruplers of boys can be collected, we are to go. Also, one of my men have been taken from me to make a beginning of a new team. I think you must agree with me that the sooner we leave for Queensland the better; in fact I strongly recommend that you should take the initiative by recalling us at once, or we will be told to go as soon as the other boys arrive.

I will require a month’s leave to arrange my private affairs in Melbourne; for this period I can retain the boys, as they really deserve a spell from their good conduct; or, if you like, I could put them on board a steamer for Brisbane.

Wire me your wishes as soon as possible. Hoping you and Mr. Barrow are well, and that I will see you both seen.

Yours very sincerely,

STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

(Copy.)

MY DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

I never saw such an attempt to try and do us out of all credit as the heads of this force did, but, owing to the prominent part taken by myself in the attack, they had to give in. If I had not known a great many men of some weight, who were determined to see that the credit should be given to whom it was due, I am afraid we should have been obliged to have taken a back seat. Even now I think that the distribution of the reward will be all on the Victorian side, unless an impartial board is appointed.

I will wire you any news. I think Standish will try to prove that I had nothing to do with the Victorian police, as that when Hare left I was not in command. This is, of course, absurd, as I was sworn in a member of this force.

Now I think if the enquiry should not be for a month or so, I had better bring my men back to Brisbane and return. Supt. Chomley says nothing could be kinder than you all to him when in Brisbane.

Hoping to see you soon.

6th July 1880. (Sd.)

STANHOPE O’CONNOR.

Address, “wire” or “letter,” The Ferns, Flemington, Melbourne.

That is the private correspondence. The following is the public correspondence:—

(Copy.)

D. T. Seymour, Esq., Commr. of Police, Brisbane.

SIR,

I have the honor to report that on Sunday the 27th June, at 7 p.m., I received a letter from Capt. Standish—(copy attached.) I saw Capt. Standish about 7.30 p.m., and informed him that I was most willing to assist him, but, as I was under marching orders, I should like the Chief Secretary to wire to you, so as to hold me blameless if I should be doing wrong in going. I, with my five troopers, left here by special train, at 10 p.m., en route for Beechworth. We arrived at Benalla about 1 a.m., and picked up Supt. Hare and six men. From here our train was preceded by an engine, as a precaution. When upon nearing Glenrowan station, the advanced engine was observed to have come to a halt, and then we found that a man had rushed out of the bush, and informed the advanced enginedriver that the outlaws had torn up the rails about a mile further on. Supt. Hare and I consulted, and we decided to draw the train. We went on up to the Glenrowan station, so as to enable us to get our horses to ride down the torn-up rails. While in the act of getting out the horses, a constable named Bracken, who had been stationed at Glenrowan, rushed frantically down to us, and said, “I have just escaped from the outlaws, who are at Jones’s public house; take care, or they will be off.” Supt. Hare and I started at once off towards the house, calling the men to follow us; but, owing to the confusion and noise in taking out the horses, I presume, some of them did not at once respond, as only Mr. Hare myself, three or four white men, and, I think, about two of my boys, were in the first rush. We rushed straight for the house, and, upon getting within about 20 yards of the place, one shot, followed by a volley, was fired at us from the verandah. We returned the fire, and before I could load again, Supt. Hare called out to me, “O’Connor, I am wounded—shot in the arm; I must go back.” I think the whole party were up by this time. I ordered the men to take cover, and I myself dropped down into a creek immediately in front of the front door, and about 20 yards from it; from here I kept a continual fire, until the outlaws were obliged to retire into the house; the others kept firing also. I then heard the cry of a woman in the house, and cried out, “Cease firing.” which cry was taken up by us all. I sang out, “Let the women out,” and they immediately came, and passed to the rear. Supt. Hare, after stating he was wounded, retired to the railway station, and, in about fifteen minutes, went off in the engine to Benalla, leaving me, as the only officer on the ground, in charge. I kept my position, and, in fact, shot Joe Byrne before we were reinforced, or—(of course we cannot say who shot Joe)—before another officer arrived upon the ground, which happened at about 5.30 a.m., when Mr. Sadleir arrived with reinforcements from Benalla, thereby leaving me with only twelve men, viz., my five boys, and seven white men, from about 2.30 until 5.30. During this interval I think I may say the heaviest of the firing was. Of course it is unnecessary for me to give my opinion upon the conduct of Supt. Hare, in running away to Benalla; I leave you to form your own opinion, when I tell you his wound is only through the wrist. Mr. Hare was only on the ground about three minutes. Ned Kelly, it appears, after going into the house, left by the back door, and was captured a few yards from the building. We then (Mr. Sadleir and myself) thought of rushing the house; but a senior constable proposed to fire the building, which was done, and, at about 4 p.m., we took out of the house the charred remains of Dan Kelly and Steven hart, and at the same time we recovered the body of Joe Byrne (about 4 p.m.) but not touched by the fire.

I will communicate further with you, as I see the credit which our party fully deserve the C. Commr. is reluctant to give us.

Your obedient servant,
Cease firing.' I sang out, 'Let the women out,' which grieved exceedingly the information that the outlaws were in darkness furiously; it lasted about a quarter of an hour, and during that time there was nothing but a bang.

At eight o'clock in the morning a heartrending wail of grief ascended from the hotel. The Argus, was fired at us from the verandah; we returned the fire, &c.; and a little further on you continue, 'I kept up a continued fire until the outlaws were obliged to retire into the house. I then heard the cry of a woman in the house, and I cried out 'Cease firing.' I sang out, 'Let the women out,' which was done, and they immediately came and passed to the rear.'

The Argus report of this portion of the affair is very different; it runs thus—"The police and the gang blazed away at each other in the darkness furiously; it lasted about a quarter of an hour, and during that time there was nothing but a succession of flashes and reports, the pinging of bullets in the air, and the shrieks of women who had been made prisoners in the hotel"; and again, "at about eight o'clock in the morning a heartrending wail of grief ascended from the hotel. The voice was easily distinguished as that of Mrs. Jones, the landlady. Mrs. Jones was lamenting the fate of her son who had been shot in the back, as she supposed, fatally. She came out of the hotel crying bitterly, and wandered into the bush on several occasions," &c. "She always returned, however, to the hotel," &c. How do you reconcile this statement with your report? But, supposing that the Argus version is incorrect, the matter is in no better light. The number of occupants, whether voluntary or compulsory, the strength and condition of the outlaws, the position of the passages and doors, and all information requisite to ensure the capture could have been obtained from Constable Bracken, who had himself been a prisoner, had a little more coolness and judgment been exercised on arrival at Glenrowan.

When the premises were set on fire, it appears that an officer of the Victorian police was present in command; you had, therefore, nothing to do with that matter, but it would have given much satisfaction here had you objected to such a course, which hardly seems to have been requisite when so large a body of police was present.

In replying to this letter, which you will be good enough to do without delay, you will be careful to obtain from all reference to others further than stating any orders you may have received. All that I have to do with is the conduct of yourself and the troopers placed under your charge.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

D. T. SEYMOUR, Commissioner of Police.

(Sd.)

Belle Vue House, Brisbane, 19th July 1880.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 15th July, calling upon me for an explanation of the part taken by the detachment of N. M. Police under my command in the late encounter with the outlaws at Glenrowan, Victoria.

My report of the 1st July, which you designate meagre, was written hurriedly to catch the mail, and being aware that I would return at once to Queensland I omitted details.

You particularize the features of the encounter requiring explanation as—

1st. The apparent total want of discipline or plan with which the affair was conducted, &c.

2nd. The indiscriminate firing which was permitted, whereby the lives of innocent persons were endangered, &c.

3rd. The seemingly unnecessary burning of the premises in which the outlaws and others had taken shelter.

Now, I think it only fair to recall to your recollection the fact that we were sent to Victoria to act as trackers. I was not entrusted with the command or the charge of the party, and was not in any way accountable for the proceedings at Glenrowan or elsewhere. As mentioned in my report of the 1st July, the party of police to which I was attached was under the command of the Victorian officer, Superintendent Hare, and I am unable to say what plan of operation he intended to adopt, as his being disabled at the commencement prevented him from giving me any information in the matter.
was at once stopped until the women were got out. When the women left the house I understood there were only the outlaws in it. The 20 odd prisoners were in a detached building, which I believe not a shot was fired into. The child of Mrs. Jones was wounded in our first volleys, when the gang were on the verandah. The women passed out of the house about ten minutes after the first shot was fired. I cannot account for the newspaper reports, but no women or children were in the house or houses ten minutes after the first shot, but they were crying out all round our lines, and probably the reporters at the station may have thought that they were in the house all the time. When Mr. Hare called upon me to come on and ran towards the hotel, I followed him, knowing that his men and my boys would follow us as ordered. As regards the burning of the house, I have merely to remark that I was not the officer in command, and was willing to form one of a storming party, but it was considered better to fire the house than to risk the lives of the constables. When we fired the building we were aware that only the two outlaws were in it alone, not as otherwise stated a lot of innocent men. I may state, in conclusion, that the house where “Cherry,” the wounded man, lay was another building, and was standing intact when we left the ground. I shall be glad to furnish the Commissioner of Police with anything further he wishes to know about this matter. I think the Commissioner of Police should express his approval of the conduct of the men under my command, as they behaved very well.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant.
(Signed) STANHOPE O’CONNOR,
Sub.-Inspector.

Ernest Flood sworn and examined.

12566. By the Commission.—What are you?—Senior-Constable of mounted police.
12567. Have you long been stationed in the North-Eastern district?—I went to the North-Eastern district in 1867, and I was removed from there in, I think, 1873.
12568. Was there any breaking up of stations when you were removed, or shortly after?—I do not recollect any particular breaking up of stations, but there were a good many removals of men from different stations.
12569. Do you know when Glenmore station was broken up?—No, I cannot say Personally.
12570. When did you go to that district the second time?—I went to the district after the Kelly outbreak. I first of all was taken up for temporary duty after the shooting of Fitzpatrick, and there was for six weeks at the time, and then after taken on the temporary duty during the great pressure of the Kelly outbreak, and before the capture of the Kellys I was permanently stationed in the district.
12571. What was your impression of the district when you were resident in it?—was it that they were law abiding, industrious, and honest?—When I was at Greta the greater portion of the people at Greta were law abiding and honest people, but there were a good number of cattle stealers and horse stealers, and a good number of the criminal class. It was also a resort for persons of the criminal class coming from other places.
12572. Were those persons friends of the criminal classes about Greta?—Yes.
12573. Relations?—Some were relations; but when you said “friends,” I thought you meant on friendly terms—visiting one another.
12574. And naturally you would think they would be concocting mischief when they came together?—Yes.
12575. They came for the purpose?—Yes.
12576. Did you know the Kellys?—Yes.
12577. Did you know the Byrnes?—No. Byrne had not done anything previous to the outbreak. I believe he lived a good distance from Greta; in fact, I think the member of the gang named Byrne was too young at that time to have anything to do with them. I was away for five years.
12578. Did you know the Harts?—No.
12579. Were the Kellys notorious as cattle and horse stealers?—They were.
12580. What was the method that they went upon?—It was generally thought that they used to take horses through the ranges to different parts and dispose of them.
12581. Towards Mansfield way?—In different directions.
12582. Would they dispose of them in Victoria?—Yes.
12583. Were they often suffering punishment for the depredations?—Yes.
12584. Did you prosecute the members of the Kelly family continually while you were in that district?—I did; a good number of them. I could give the names—[looking at his note-book].
12585. Try to do that, and give about the dates?—I arrested James and Dan Kelly when they were mere lads for illegally using horses in 1871. They were discharged on account of their youth and their intimacy with the owner of the horses—one of the brothers having been a servant of the person who owned the horses. Shall I give others?
12586. The Kellys—the Greta mob, as it is called?—Constable Mullane and myself arrested Jimmy Quin, the uncle, for an assault on an old man, and also on his own sister. I might point out that I got the information through being well liked by the people, and they having confidence in me to give me information. A man came there at night and gave me the information, and we started at ten o’clock at night, and I got to his sister’s place, and he had his horse saddled and bridled to get away. I took the saddle and bridle off the horse, and turned it adrift, and got a man to hold our horses. We searched then all through the night, and did not find anything of him, but felt certain he must be about the place; and in the morning I told the people about the place that I thought he had gone to Glenmore, and I told Mullane we would start for Glenmore after him, and we pretended to do so. We went away about a quarter of a mile, and returned in a gallop to the place, Mullane in one direction and I in the other. Mullane was about 100 yards ahead, and as we got close we saw Quin go under the bed, and Mullane pulled him out. This is the man who had evaded the police for years before.

12587. Is that the man who assaulted Constable Hall?—No I think that was Pat Quin. He is married to James Quin’s sister.

12588. Which is the next case relating to the gang?—Williamson alias “Bricey,” for aiding and abetting Quin in this case. Quin assaulted an old man over sixty years of age with a two-inch auger—bent the auger over his head, and assaulted his own sister at the same time. He got two years and a half for the assault on the old man, I think, and eighteen months for the assault on his sister; and while he was in gaol, a man whom he had previously assaulted with a bullock yoke came out from home, and he was brought out under habeas, and received an additional sentence. The next case was John Lloyd, for maliciously killing a horse belonging to a neighbor. He is married to Mrs. Quin’s sister. He got four years for that.

12589. Is he the father of young Tom Lloyd and Paddy Lloyd?—Yes. Then I got up a case once against James Kelly and William Williamson for cattle stealing. That is the brother of the outlaws and a person living in the house, but not known to us previous to that. They were convicted—got four years each. I found out the cattle were stolen before the owners knew of them being taken, and went to Wangaratta and got some assistance from the police there, and they were arrested. I gained the case against them. I think those are the only ones.

12590. Mose or less members of this family were arrested for criminal offences during the whole time you were there?—Yes, Ned Kelly was in gaol during nearly all the time I was at Greta. I only saw him once or twice after he came out, a few months before I left Greta.

12591. For what sort of offences?—For horse stealing.

12592. Did not those people and the relations keep you and other constables stationed there continually watching?—They did.

12593. Day and night?—On many occasions we were out at night; and on one occasion a detective was sent up to assist us, and we did some night duty then.

12594. When you were ordered from the district were there not petitions sent in from magistrates and residents to retain you in consequence of the way you had dealt with those criminals?—There were; but it was not exactly from Greta station, but ten miles from Greta, but still it was in the Kelly country; and my reason for leaving Greta of my own accord was the house was so unhealthy my family could not live in it, and I was anxious to be in a place where plenty work was to be done, where I could have a chance of being promoted; and I applied to go to Oxley, where the people knew me.

12595. Was not Oxley as much in the centre of the Kelly country as Greta?—Yes.

12596. And nearer to Glenmore?—Yes.

12597. Have you any information as to how those people came to that district originally?—No, I have not, except by hearsay.

12598. Have you any well authenticated rumor or hearsay that they were originally convicts in New South Wales?—No. I never heard of their being in New South Wales at all. The first I heard of them was their being about the Duck Ponds, or somewhere near Beveridge.

12599. When at Greta did you know Scanlan, the murdered man?—Yes.

12600. Where was he?—I do not know where he was at the time exactly, but I knew him before I joined the police force.

12601. Was he at Broken River?—No. Kennedy was there the most time I was at Greta.

12602. Is it a fact that Kennedy and you were continually after one or other of what was known as the Kelly mob?—Kennedy and I arrested two or three men for stealing a horse from the Kellys themselves, at the Falls River; and I know from conversations that I had with Kennedy that he was a good deal after them.

12603. That is only from hearsay and conversations with Kennedy?—Yes; he was never in company with me going after the Kellys themselves.

12604. How did the Kelly family support themselves when you went to Greta?—They seemed to have a very miserable way of living, and the general impression was that what they got they did not get by honesty. They were suspected of stealing sheep from neighboring squatters.

12605. Did the Lloyds live near them?—They did.

12606. Was Lloyd convicted of sheep stealing from Mr. MacBain during your time?—No.

12607. Do you know he was convicted?—I cannot swear it; I heard it only.

12608. It was stated at the time of the murders of the police that Ned Kelly had a very great down upon you, and would roast you?—Yes.

12609. Did you give him any reason for that—as a fact would it be justified by any reason to your knowledge?—The only reason he could have any personal animosity to me was through one occasion I met him at O’Brien’s, at the public house close by, and he pretended to be drunk on that occasion, and he made use of some insulting words to me, and I said to him, “You had better look out, Ned. Now you are out you had better keep yourself as straight as you can.” I said, “If I ever have to lay my hands on you it is not Hall you will have to deal with.”

29th June 1881.
12610. What did that mean?—That if I had to encounter Kelly I would give him worse than Hall did when he arrested him. When Hall arrested him he assaulted him, and Hall had great difficulty in taking him to the lock-up.

12611. Is that the only reason for personal animosity?—The only reason, except having prosecuted his brother, and the continual annoyance I was to them.

12612. The continual supervision you exercised over them?—Yes

12613. Do you think it was a wise course to reduce the police force in that district?—No, decidedly not.

12614. Do you know the constable that took your place?—I think it was Considine, and he was merely a short time when Thom went there.

12615. Do you know Thom?—Yes.

12616. Do you think all the stations that were there were required so as to be able to prevent the cattle from being stolen?—I do, and more stations.

12617. Have you any idea, in your own mind, what led up to the Kelly outbreak?—Well, my impression is that it, was the removal of a number of old constables from the district who knew the district well, and the taking of men to the district that did not know the district well.

12618. And that had not got those men under supervision?—Yes.

12619. Then it is not so much a question of the stations as having the right sort of men in the district?—I think it was a question of both. I think more stations were required, and the proper sort of men. Perhaps those brought were as good as the men that were taken away; but the men taken away knew the whole of the country, and had the confidence of the residents of the place. It takes a long time to gain the confidence of the residents of a place. I think Mr. Barkly had a great deal to do with the removal of men. I know he had me removed, and I was much aggrieved at the way he got me removed.

12620. What reason did he give you?—There was a charge preferred against me by a man named Brown, a squatter at Laceby, and an investigation was held by Mr. Barkley over it; and I was treated most unfairly in the matter. It was a thing I did not think I was guilty of. I was prevented from cross-examining the witness against me. Mr. Barkly very imperiously would not let me cross-examine the witness, or bring a person to disprove the statements, and he recommended me to be removed from the district for this offence. I could tell you what it was.

12621. That is not necessary—we have all the papers. He charged you with going in amongst his horses and disturbing them?—Yes; but I was not allowed to go in and disprove the testimony of a woman who swore an untruth.

12622. Where were you stationed in 1878, at the time the police were killed at the Wombat?—At Yandoit. I had been five years there and there was scarcely anything to do in that time.

12623. When did you next come to anywhere near the Kelly country after that date?—Within a day or so I was telegraphed to, and brought up immediately, that was the 26th October, to Benalla.

12624. From the 26th October did you keep a diary?—Not all the time.

12625. Did you at that time?—A portion of the time I was out with a party.

12626. I mean from the time you arrived at Benalla in 1878, had you a diary of what you did from day to day then?—No.

12627. Do you remember how you were engaged after first getting to Benalla?—I could not state exactly, but for a short time I was engaged in going out with small parties.

12628. Upon what information?—No particular information, only trying to find out any information we could from people; and on one occasion to find a log that was spoken of.

12629. When were you sent to discover that—what was the nature of the information you went to discover that upon?—This information was given by a prisoner in Pentridge.

12630. You do not know that of your own knowledge?—I do.

12631. How?—From correspondence I had.

12632. I want you to give us what officer gave you instructions, and what was the nature of the instructions?—I think it was either Captain Standish or Mr. Nicolson gave the first information about it.

12633. Who was the officer in charge at Benalla when you first arrived there?—I am not quite sure now.

12634. Captain Standish was not there then?—No. The information I got was before I went there.

12635. I want you to say who was the officer in charge at Benalla at the time?—I really forget.

12636. Was it Mr. Sadleir or Mr. Nicolson, or which, or both?—I really could not swear. Mr. Sadleir was there, I know, but whether Mr. Nicolson was I do not know.

12637. Who would give you information of any particulars suspected of the Kellys’ whereabouts—what particular officer at Benalla would give you that?—I got information from Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson on different occasions.

12638. About this log—what instructions, and from whom?—The instructions I got before I left Melbourne. I was ordered to come here, and I got them here.

12639. On what date did you leave Melbourne?—I have not got the date, but within two or three days of the murders.
12640. Was it before the 30th October?—Yes.
12641. Who gave the information in Melbourne?—I think Captain Standish.
12642. Before the 30th?—Yes.
12643. What was the nature of it?—To the effect that provisions were being placed in a log, close to the Eleven-mile Creek, for the outlaws.
12644. Did he show you any communication he had received from anyone?—Yes.
12645. Did he show you a sketch of the place?—Yes.
12646. That is only dated 30th October, and you left before that?—That is strange. I would like to see if it is the same paper, because I took one of the papers up with me.
12647. You received the document from whom in Melbourne?—I think from Captain Standish, not from his hands but through him. I believe it was from Mr. Nicolson, at the railway station at Spencer street, as I was going away.
12648. Can you say for certain which?—It came through the office in Melbourne, I know, but it is so long ago, and I never thought of being asked these questions.
12649. What was the nature of it?—It was to the effect that a certain log close to Kelly’s house, on the Eleven-mile Creek, was a likely place for provisions to be placed for the Kellys.
12650. When you arrived at Benalla what did you do with that particular document?—I showed it to the officer in charge.
12651. That would be Senior-Constable Whelan or Mr. Sadleir?—No, the superior officer in charge.
12652. What instructions did he give you on that, if any. Would it have been Mr. Nicolson; did he go up in the train with you that day to Benalla?—I do not think the same day, but he was up very soon after.
12653. After you gave this document to the officer in charge at Benalla did he give you any instructions?—Not at that time; but a few days afterwards I was instructed to visit this place and find out the log, and to examine it.
12654. Tell us what they were, if you can remember the nature of the instructions of the officer then at Benalla?—I think on the particular date we went out we had instructions to make enquiries near Winton’s, about the report relative to the Kellys having been seen there, and then, in coming home, to come by the Eleven-mile Creek and to examine this log.
12655. Did you find the log?—I did.
12656. How far was that log from Mrs. Kelly’s place?—About 400 or 500 yards.
12657. On what date did you discover the log?—I do not recollect the date.
12658. Was it within fifteen days after the 1st November?—It must have been.
12659. Were you furnished with any other information beyond the fact that there was a log there?—There was information as to the sort of ground about where the log was so that we could find it easily.
12660. What was the log supposed to convey to you?—It had a large hole in it—a hollow log—and it was a likely place to have provisions left for the outlaws.

12661. Where were those provisions coming from?—Supposed to come, I think, from Mrs. Kelly’s children.
12662. Did you read the document that was placed in your hands in the office in Melbourne?—I did.
12663. Did that document state that provisions would likely be conveyed from Mrs. Skillian’s place to the log?—I think so.
12664. That this log would be a likely place for provisions, that the outlaws would come down for from time to time at night?—Yes.
12665. Did you receive any information from your officer after your arrival at Benalla and till the middle of November that provisions were so conveyed at night?—I do not recollect.
12666. Is it likely you would have forgotten it if he had done so?—I think it is scarcely likely I would have forgotten it.
12667. Were you or any other police constables at Benalla appointed to watch Mrs. Skillian’s place to see if she conveyed provisions there?—No.
12668. You simply went to discover the hollow log where it was indicated to be?—Yes; and at the same time to report to one of the officers at Benalla if I was certain no provisions had been placed there from the appearance of the hollow log.
12669. Do you think if you thought over the circumstances, and had some little time, you could supply the date?—Not the date of that, because at that time we were going in and out of Benalla, and kept no dates. The duty was put to us in Benalla, and therefore we kept no dates.
12670. It is important to find out those things, and we want you to be as careful as you possibly can?—I am as careful as I can be. Those dates ought to be in the books at Benalla.
12671. Who was with you when you discovered this log—can you remember that?—No, I really cannot.
12672. Was Mullane with you?—I believe he was.
12673. Was Strachan with you?—I think not.

Ernest Flood, continued, 29th June 1881.
12674. How many should you imagine would be with you in that particular party?—I think about five or six.

12675. You found this log on returning from Winton, on your way back to Benalla?—Yes.

12676. After finding that, how long did you remain in the locality?—I think we returned to Benalla that day.

12677. There was no watch party appointed to watch?—No.

12678. Do you know whether any watch party went out from Benalla from the time of your arrival and the time of the bank robbery at Euroa for the purpose of watching Mrs. Skillian’s hut?—I do not know of my own knowledge. I was not one of any party. Relative to the log, if we had found any reason for remaining to watch the log, we would have done so. We were at liberty to do so.

12679. You do not know of any search party appointed for that purpose?—No.

12680. What was your special object in going to Winton?—We were sent there relative to a report which had come to some of the officers that the Kellys had been seen near the railway at Winton.

12681. When you got to Winton you failed to discover any traces?—There was no foundation for the information that was received about that.

12682. And on your way back you just made a search casually for this log?—I could not say whether it was casually on account of having this paper in my possession, or whether we had orders about it.

12683. You are certain you made your superior acquainted with this paper?—Decidedly; and I know that copy was given very much for my own information, and I know a copy was going to the Benalla office, and that paper with the plan was the one I had.

12684. Did you consider that was important information?—Decidedly, I did, at the time.

12685. And you made up your mind, after examining the log, that it had not been used?—Yes; the log was full of dust and cobwebs, and had not been used.

12686. Did it look as if it might have been used by the very man who gave you the information?—There was a big log with a large hollow in it.

12687. Are you certain that was the log?—We were quite certain from the description given in the correspondence we made ourselves quite certain that it was the log.

12688. Do you consider now that the Kellys were in the district all the time?—I believe that they were most of the time, and housed by their friends the whole of the time, except the short time they were in New South Wales.

12689. Do you think they were back in the ranges, or in amongst their friends?—With their friends. I do not think they were in the ranges at all, except in taking a run from one friend to another.

12690. How was it the police did not get better information about their whereabouts?—The principal thing was the way the names of informants were given in the papers. The people were frightened to give information, and also the terror that those men had struck into the people.

12691. Was there no chance of the police seeing them at all?—No chance whatever of the police seeing them. I was the first to whom information was given that Hart was the third man; but although I had the confidence of the people there, that was the only information I got. The people were frightened to give information.

12692. Why should the police have no chance of seeing them?—We had no information.

12693. But by searching those sympathizers’ houses?—We did search their houses. We watched about their places at night—watched several places, and with no good result; but the sympathizers were very numerous.

12694. What led you to believe they were living upon their friends if you could never detect any of them?—From what I have heard since.

12695. In watching those places, did you search the houses before leaving after watching all night?—No; in most cases where we watched places, we either saw through the window or through the door or cracks. I did not allow them to know we were watching. I recollect, on one occasion, when I was out with Mr. Nicolson that plan was adopted—placed our horses some distance away from the house, and then went there after dark; and, through the window or cracks in the door, looked into the place and listened to the conversation.

POLICE. 3 M

Ernest Flood, 29th June 1881. 458

continued.

12696. Were you out with search parties with Mr. Hare?—No.

12697. With Mr. Sadleir?—Yes, I was out with Mr. Sadleir and the black trackers nearly all the time they were out in search parties.

12698. And you never got anything to lead you on at all in going to those houses?—Nothing whatever.

12699. The outlaws may have been in the houses all the time if the houses were not searched?—I believe it was possible for them to be about some of their friends nearly all the time.

12700. Did you consider the going about in large parties a good method?—No, I did not.

12701. What method would you consider now, if there was an outbreak, would be the most effectual?—I suggested a plan, on one occasion that I had charge of a party myself, that was that we go out at night, leave our horses all together, and go out to some place that we had information that they were in the habit of making, and pass through and secrete ourselves, and have provisions brought to us there at night. I sent in that report, and it was arranged that the sergeant at Wangaratta was to arrange with me whenever I thought a suitable opportunity occurred for this arrangement of mine; but the Jerilderie robbery took place very shortly afterwards, and it was never referred to afterwards.

12702. Would you consider that mounted constables patrolling the district would have as good information as could be got by any others now—that they would be prepared to catch any outlaws that might go out into the field?—I do not think whatever knowledge the police had of the at that time would have been of avail in catching the Kellys; but I know it is very important for the police to know the bush and the people, not to catch the Kellys but to prevent men going through the bush, and sweating horses and cattle and illegally using; but I do not think whatever knowledge they had, however good then, that it would have led to the arrest of the Kellys.

12703. Do you think all the information that was given did anything towards the arrest of the Kellys?—I do not think it did. I think it was just by a fluke they were caught.

12704. Was it not money thrown away appointing those agents, and having large parties?—When I made use of that expression I did. I meant really the result—the taking of them, but as to whether it was any use doing it I do not know.

12705. Do you think you will be able to remember or get any information further about that log business?—The only way would be to get the books from Benalla, and find out the dates. It must be in the books at Benalla—the date I went out there. There is a record kept of the duty of the men and horses too.

12706. Were you considered an active man when you went into the force?—Yes, always considered a most active man.

12707. A good bush rider?—Yes, a first-class rider.

12709. An ordinary man who knows little of riding would be of very little value?—It would be much better if he were a good rider. I know that one time it was also an offence to jump a horse over a fence, and I think it is a very good thing that mounted men should be able to take fences. For my part, I always had a horse able to take fences, and I am able to ride him over them.

12710. Is there anything, with reference to this whole matter of the Kellys, that you would like the Commission to know that we have not asked you about—anything of importance?—There is one thing I wish to mention—the evidence of one constable taken here, who stated he thought Mrs. O'Brien, of Greta, was a very great sympathizer. I think that most unfair to Mrs. O'Brien. During the time I was at Greta Mr. O'Brien was alive, and I consider that Mr. O'Brien was always a friend to the police—a very straight forward man, and not in any way a sympathizer with the Kellys, and I believe Mrs. O'Brien to be the same. If she showed any sympathy to them it was through fear, because of her having property there. With reference to the force do you mean, or the capture of the Kellys?

12711. Either of them?—I think there ought to be some standard for promotions in the service.

12712. You have got your regulations, have you not?—Yes.

12713. We are not dealing with that branch of the subject at present?—Yes.

12714. There is nothing else of great importance you wish to say?—No.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o'clock.

TUESDAY, 5TH JULY 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;

G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A., G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.,

Mr. Sadleir stated that the evidence of Dean Gibney had been read over to him by the shorthand writer, and he now again applied that the witness referred to should be recalled for the purpose of cross-examination by him (Mr. Sadleir).

The Chairman read the list questions which Mr. Sadleir handed in as the ones he desired to put to Dean Gibney.

Mr. Sadleir was requested to retire.

The Commission deliberated.

Mr. Sadleir was again called in and informed that the Commission had decided to grant his request for the recall and further examination of Dean Gibney.
H. M. Chomley further examined.

12715. By the Commission.—You see by that letter of Mr Sadleir’s that he desires to be employed again in the force?—That is the letter I forwarded, I presume?

12716. Yes?—Yes.

12717. You gave evidence some time ago. You remember giving evidence here that the business of the country could be carried on without the presence of this gentleman?—No, the question asked me was, was it absolutely necessary that Mr. Sadleir should come back.

12718. At that time?—Yes, and I said it was not absolutely necessary he should come back then.

12719. Has anything arisen since to create a necessity?—Two or three officers are now wanted. Mr. Babington of Ballarat died about a fortnight ago.

12720. I see you made no recommendation with your submission?—No, I did not consider it my duty to do so.

12721. Is it absolutely necessary for those officers or any of them to come back?—We are getting very short-handed. It is not my duty to state that any officer is necessary; I state facts.

12722. I bring to your notice the recommendation of the last Chief Commissioner of Police upon the last Estimates. This is a note positively for Parliament. I see eight superintendents, eight inspectors, and six subinspectors are provided for. At the bottom there is a note—”As these officers attain the age for superannuation the number will be reduced to sixteen?”—Yes, I do not agree with that; we are now, including myself, only sixteen altogether, and I say that is too few I have got this ready for you, it is in a paper. There is what it was at the end of last year, twenty-three officers, and now you will see there are only sixteen at work.

12723. What is Mr. Larner doing?—He is a superior, those five officers are there.

12724. What are those sixteen—Larner, Toohey, and Kennedy?—That shows all the officers on duty now in July.

12725. What are those three doing?—Doing duty in the city. Mr. Kennedy has gone to Ballarat.

12726. Is he doing Mr. Babington’s duty?—Yes.

12727. Mr. Babington and Mr. Hare?—Mr. Babington is dead and Mr. Hare relieved for the time being.

12728. Two are sick—what Smith is this?—That is Mr. Brook Smith.

12729. You have sixteen altogether?—Sixteen including myself.

12730. Two sick and one dead since, and three relieved; do you think that sixteen, as the recommendation made to the Chief Secretary and upon which the Estimates came to the House, is too small for the public service?—I think it is decidedly. You see that will show what the police force is—handing in another paper. There is the average of officers to men in all these services. In Dublin it is one to every twelve.

12731. London, one to seventeen; New South Wales, one to thirty-three; South Australia, one to thirty-five; Irish Constabulary, one to forty-two; Victoria, one to fifty?—As we are at present, one to sixty-nine.

12732. May it not be that in a colony like this, where we are supposed to have a better class of police than in some other places, it does not require so many officers to manage the men. Is it not a fact that we are credited with having a very superior body of men in the police to what they have in other colonies?—I cannot say from experience. I think we have.

12733. If that is the case, is it necessary to have so many officers to manage the men in proportion?—No, but look at the proportion.

12734. Certainly 100 good men would not require so many officers to manage them as 100 bad men?—No. I have given some different places, New South Wales, Adelaide—why should they be so very much behind us?

12735. Surely you would not compare the New South Wales to ours?—I cannot flatter myself that we are so very much ahead of them.

12736. Take the Tasmanian men as a body of police, do they anything like compare with our men here?—They are a different style altogether—they are not a body of police, they are simply men under the municipal councils.

12737. Do you think that these gentlemen should return to duty at once now?—I do not know. I am not prepared to say whether they ought or not. All I can say to the Commission is, that I think we are short-handed.

12738. Can you get on without them for another month or two?—I think we can.

12739. There is nothing special?—Nothing special.

12740. Would the public safety be endangered by these men being inactive?—I do not think so.

12741. I would like you to express an opinion, as Acting Chief Commissioner, of this—would the public safety be endangered by these men remaining away?—Certainly I cannot go so far as to say that. I do not think it will be endangered.

12742. You have to deal with the present; you know exactly, or ought to know, the present state of the efficiency of the police, both officers and men?—Yes.

12743. You ought to be able to say whether the public safety would or would not be endangered?—Not be endangered, but things are getting behind.

12744. How are they getting behind?—The other day a complaint was made to me by the police magistrate that a man was stabbed; and I sent for a report, and the constable reported that the man would not prosecute and made very light of it; and I referred it back to the police magistrate, and he went and made enquirs; and then I referred to Mr. Winch and asked him to go on with the case and send up an officer to prosecute.

H. M. Chomley, 5th July 1881.

12745. What officer did he send?—Mr. Kennedy, and the man is committed for trial.
12746. Was the officer of the district Mr. Babington?—There was no officer in the district.
12747. Was Mr. Babington the officer of that district?—No, it was Mr. Hare’s district. There is no other officer in it; no officer at all in it now.
12748. In March last this Commission sent in the following resolution to the Chief Secretary:

“That the Chief Secretary be requested to allow the following officers of police leave of absence pending the result of the enquiry, Mr. Nicolson, Acting Chief Commissioner of Police; Superintendent Hare, and Superintendent Sadleir.”

To that immediately the following answer was received:—“I have the honor, by direction of the Chief Secretary, to inform you that he has approved of the recommendation of the Commission that leave of absence be granted to Mr. Nicolson, Acting Chief Commissioner of Police, and Messrs. Hare and Sadleir, superintendents of police, and leave is granted accordingly.” You were examined at the time that recommendation was sent in, and your answers appear upon the notes. Now has anything occurred to your knowledge since then to render it desirable in the public interest that this Commission should change their recommendation?—No, I do think so; we can carry on as we are, I think, but it depends upon how long it is to be.

12749. I ask has anything occurred since the resolution to induce us to change our minds?—One officer is sick and one officer is dead since; there are two short.
12750. Do you think that the public interest absolutely demands it?—The police force will go on to a certain extent for twelve months, or longer perhaps, if we had no officers at all, but things get worse every day; the men are getting slack and so on. We could go on for a month or two, but if it is to be long—12751. I see Mr. Kabat is in Gippsland—is that North and South Gippsland?—He has the whole of Gippsland.
12752. Does Mr. Kabat report from time to time where he is in the districts?—Yes, his returns come in of the stations he has visited.
12753. Does not Mr. Kabat spend about eleven months out of the twelve at Sale?—I do not think so. I was looking at his returns the other day and he seems to visit a great number of the stations.
12754. Is there a diary kept by the superintendents showing where they visit?—No.
12755. You have put this before the Chief Secretary without any recommendation—we noted that when it came?—I have simply forwarded the paper; it was not my business to recommend.
12756. You see the position it places the Commission in—if we relieve one from the leave of absence would not the other two justly claim it?—Yes, certainly; I see a difficulty myself.
12757. If Mr. Sadleir returns to duty where would you send him?—I have not made up my mind at all about it.
12758. Mr. Berry has put a minute here that he should not be sent to the North-Eastern district?—Yes.
12759. Do you know whether Mr. Sadleir has asked to be relieved from the North-Eastern district?—Yes.
12760. Have you got the correspondence?—I put it in here. I gave it to you; it was handed in here the last day. It was a private letter to me when I gave evidence about the Kelly scare; it was the latter part of the letter.
12761. I heard from the Chief Secretary, a long time before, that Mr. Sadleir had written a letter imploring his removal from the district, as he was in danger of his life?—That was the only letter. I telegraphed up and got an answer that there was no such letter in the books, and the only letter I had was the one I gave to the Board.
12762. Did you at any time prior to the 27th of June lead Mr. Sadleir to believe you would recommend that he should resume duty?—Never.
12763. Neither by word of mouth nor writing?—No.
12764. And the request was made solely upon the part of Mr. Sadleir himself?—Soley.
12765. And from no intimation from yourself?—Certainly not.
12766. Did you consider that the public service demanded from you that you should make an application for an increase of officers to the Chief Secretary?—No.
12767. Then Mr. Sadleir has taken this action altogether of his own accord?—Certainly he has. I wish the Commission to remember that had there been no Commission and had there been only sixteen officers I might have taken other steps, but I did not want to do anything to embarrass the Commission in any way.
12768. In point of fact you are under the impression that sixteen officers is not sufficient?—I am; but the Commission is sitting here and they ought to know. I do not want to embarrass the Commission in any way.

The witness withdrew.
On June 28th 1880, that all the innocent persons except Cherry had left the house. I was looking at the house from the direction of the railway gate. I saw you there with a party of men, and then I sent to Mrs. Skillian to go on now and ask if she might go to the house. After the house had been set fire to I believe I saw you twice. I said I saw you. I believe it was pointed out to him with my own duties. I might have been perhaps an hour. or it may be more—an hour and a half, perhaps, in attendance on Ned Kelly. In my endeavor to get to him I was, perhaps, ten or fifteen minutes before I could get in, and then I was, I dare say, three quarters of an hour with him, attending to him with my own duties. I might be more, but I believe it was not short of that time. After that time I went over to the hotel on the opposite side and spent about perhaps five or seven minutes there it might be more. I met a reverend gentleman there of the Church of England, and we walked down to where the line of railway had been torn up, and then came back to the railway station.

12769. By the Commission.—Mr. Sadleir who had charge of the police at the taking of the Kellys, thinks that some of your statements might be prejudicial to him, and he desired some questions to be put to you; and he has given the written questions here so as to elucidate his meaning in any possible way that can be done?—I may remark that if any word of mine would wound, which is not necessary for truth, I hereby desire to record my wish to blot it out.

12770. The Commission consider that you did exactly what was your duty in everything that you said, even if a wrong impression has been created. Mr. Sadleir was not present, and he desires that these questions may be put. That is the whole thing, and we thought it well to have the matter brought under your notice; and we are much obliged to you for coming again. I will just put the questions as they have been written down, and those are the questions you are supposed to reply to. The first question is, “Were you aware, before your arrival at Glenrowan on June 28th 1880, that all the innocent persons except Cherry had left Mrs. Jones’s two hours or so before”?—I was aware on my arrival there—I became aware of it soon—at least that the innocent people had been allowed to remove from the house sometime about half-past nine or ten o’clock, some two hours before I came, that would be; but I heard there was one wounded man there—I believe it was Cherry.

12771. The second question is, “When did you learn that I was” (that is Mr. Sadleir) “the principal officer on the ground, and where was I then”?——I could not say for certain whether I learned the name of the officer in charge before the time that Kelly’s sister came on the ground. Then I knew for certain, as I made enquiries in order to find the officer in charge.

12772. The second portion of the question is, “and where was Mr. Sadleir then”?—I was directed to Mr. Sadleir then by parties on the cordon, the line of police in the direction in which I found that Mr. Sadleir was not then.

12773. The third question is, “Where were you mostly from your arrival at 12 o’clock until the time approached when the house was set fire to”?—I might have been perhaps an hour. or it may be more—an hour and a half, perhaps, in attendance on Ned Kelly. In my endeavor to get to him I was, perhaps, ten or fifteen minutes before I could get in, and then I was, I dare say, three quarters of an hour with him, attending to him with my own duties. I might be more, but I believe it was not short of that time. After that time I went over to the hotel on the opposite side and spent about perhaps five or seven minutes there it might be more. I met a reverend gentleman there of the Church of England, and we walked down to where time line of railway had been torn up, and then came back to the railway station.

12774. The fourth question is, “Do you remember seeing me” (Mr. Sadleir) “about the platform”?—After the house had been set fire to I believe I saw you twice. I said I saw you. I believe it was pointed out that was Mr. Sadleir on the left hand side of the house looking at the house from the direction of the railway gate. I saw you there with a party of men, and then I sent to Miss Kelly to go on now and ask if she might go to the house.

12775. The fifth question is, “How long before the house was fired did Mrs. Skillian or Kate Kelly, Ned Kelly’s sister, arrive on the ground”?—It was Miss Kate Kelly.

Mr. Sadleir.—I never saw her, I saw Mrs. Skillian approaching and turned her from the house.

The Witness.—Understand I was told it was Kate Kelly, I saw them both.

12776. Mr. Sadleir.—My question is to elicit when the woman that approached the building—that is the one I refer to?—I never had any doubt it was Kate Kelly.

Mr Sadleir.—My question is with regard to the woman that approached the building from the railway gates. It does not matter if we both understand we mean the same person.

12777. By the commission (to the witness).—You sent on the sister to Mr. Sadleir; and I think what time Commission have to do with is, how long before the fire was it she went to Mr. Sadleir?—I believe tile man had already come back from the house. I think he had already returned from the house—the one that set fire to it.

12778. It was just at the time the house was set fire to?—I was coming round with this woman to find Mr. Sadleir, I saw the man running from the house after setting fire to it. It was only then I became aware the house was being fired. When I made an effort to get this woman to approach the house I did not know then the house was being fired, but I had heard that there was a cannon on the way.

12779. This is number six, “In the interval between her arrival (Ned Kelly’s sister) and your approach to enter Mrs. Jones’s house, did you see me” (Mr. Sadleir)—Not at the time that I was called out to—that is I did not see to take notice until the time I was called out to by Mr. Sadleir, that I should not approach there without his permission, or some words to that effect.

12780. Question seven, “Please to describe where you went to search for me and say whether this was after Mrs. Skillian’s arrival or not”?—That is a question I have already answered.

12782. Question nine, “Was it not possible that while you were so engaged, or even before your arrival on the ground, or after that, the police were acting on definite orders without your knowledge”—It was quite possible that they might be acting under definite orders. I have not made any remark that I know which would show they were not acting under definite orders. My remark. I think, was to the effect that the only uniformity I observed was in time intermittent firing at the house—that there was uniformity in that. They used to begin at the one end of the cordon and fire all round till they reached the other. But what I generally felt impressed with was (as I might say a post factum witness of the scene) that firing had commenced at the house when I believe it ought not to have done—that is when all the innocent people were there. I maintain that as it was the practice of those men to stick people wherever they came to it was not a fair timing to fire into the house while the innocent people were there. This is where I think discipline was wanting; and then continuing till the people burst out of the house, and then firing at them as they burst out. I am referring now as a post factum witness—one that came there and heard what had been going on.

12783. Number ten is, “Might not the outlaws have been called on to surrender without your hearing”?—Quite possibly, but in reply to that I might say, that if I understood they were called upon—the idea they were called upon I would look for occasions sufficiently long for them to see that they were not fired I would look for periods of time to be given them to come. Of course I cannot say exactly what length of time there would be or what time there was between one volley and the other. I can simply give my impressions in the evidence I give.

12784. Question eleven, “Please to describe the particulars in which you observed the want of generalship, bearing in mind that the outlaws were in impenetrable armour and the difficulty of knowing in what part of the building they were hiding”?—I think I have already answered that question in my general remark upon the way the thing, just as I came there, impressed me, and it was continued while I was on the scene. I looked upon the matter as being one which began in a blunder (I am simply stating my impressions), and that it was continued on until they were with difficulty allowed to go beyond the bounds of the house they were confined to. Some described their condition, lying on the ground. Reardon described the condition of the women and children on the ground, and he was there until some one threatened to kill him by firing on him if he stopped; and then there was such an uproar on the part of the people confined in the place, that at length they were allowed to come out and throw themselves on the ground. Now, I could not for the life of me, make out how it was possible that the people would be confined to that house for so many hours, and the police would be there, and that they would not have known the condition of affairs in that house.

12785. By Mr. Sadleir.—What do you mean by the “beginning”?—I refer to the volleys that were fired upon that house while the people were confined in it.

12786. Does that include the first attack?—Well, I daresay it will. There were more innocent people in that house than there were guilty—and if the police were to fire indiscriminately on us here what would we say?

12787. By the Commission.—When the first attack was made, you understood we have it in evidence, the police did not know that there were people in the house, and the first volley was fired from the house upon the police—you would not have such a strong opinion as to the first attack on the house?—Surely no one could have any misgiving about Mrs. Jones and her family being there.

12788. This was the first five minutes, when Mr. Hare rushed up and the order was given to cease firing and surround the house; you mean after they knew the people were in it?—It was considerably before I came there; but I remarked already that I informed my opinions, as I might call myself, a post factum witness.

12789. You simply said there should not be indiscriminate firing upon the house when there were only two outlaws and a lot of innocent people in?—If there was one innocent life to be lost amongst them I would say the guilty ought to be spared for the sake of the innocent.

12790. Do you think there was any chance of the outlaws escaping at all if there had not been a shot fired after you came?—I thought a guard might have been kept round the place, and the outlaws kept there without firing a shot, and in that condition it would have been impossible for them to have escaped.

12791. By Mr. Sadleir.—Not even in the darkness of night?—Well it would be hardly my place to say what would be another person’s disposition in the matter, but I simply say my own.

12792. Are you making allowance for the darkness that men might crawl through the fence and might be mistaken for one of the guards. If we had let them stay after daylight would there not be the possibility of 6th July 1881.

Rev. M. Gibney.
their escape?—Then there would certainly have been the possibility.

12793. By the Commission. — We have it in evidence from Mr. Hare’s official report that there was a very large number of prisoners confined at the house when they went to it at the first moment. Bracken, when he came down to tell about the Kellys, told them also that they had a very large number of people in there. He said, “Mr. Hare, I have just escaped from Jones’s hotel, where the Kellys have a large number of prisoners confined.” There is one more question, “What was the condition of the bodies of Dan. Kelly and Hart when you touched them; were they stiff as if they had been any considerable time dead?”—They were not stiff. I took hold of the hand of the one next me and it seemed limp, but from the pallid appearance and coldness I thought that it could hardly have been immediately before, only a short time dead; they would not have such a settled look upon their countenances if they had not been some considerable time dead.

12794. Was the hand cold? — No, I do not feel able to say cold.

12795. Were the flames broken through? — They were. I could not judge of my own feeling in the matter. It would not be well for me to say I could judge of my own touch, because I was hot and excited. I am told that a few minutes might cause the appearance that I saw. That is, that if those men were in terror for a good while before and lay down, and if they were wounded and lost blood, and so on.

12796. You saw no marks of fresh blood? — No.—(To Mr. Sadleir.) — Is there any other question you wish put?—

Mr. Sadleir. — No. I wish to thank Dean Gibney for the trouble he has taken in coming here.

12797. By the Commission (to the witness). — With reference to seeing Mr. Sadleir at first—what time did you see him?—I saw him to recognize him for the first time when I was going with the woman Kelly in search of him. He was pointed out to me then standing with a party of men on the left-hand side.

12798. That was after the house was set fire to?—It was just as the man came running down. I saw him then again when I was going up to the house, when he called to me to stop in my course; and then I thought I would have gone to speak a word or two to him at that time, only I thought if those men were observing me from within, they would say I was one of the police and was coming with a message from them, and would have been more determined to take me down; that flashed across my mind, and after walking a pace or two towards where Mr. Sadleir was, I stopped, and he then kindly gave me leave to go on. The next time I saw him was above at the house, after I had gone through, and he very kindly indeed, without demur, thanked me for what I had done; for whether those men were burned alive or not, no one would have known if I had not gone in. Then the man Cherry was found; and I moved away from the scene after that, as I have already told you. I met Mr. Sadleir again when I went to attend to Cherry. He wanted to stay me for a moment, and asked me about the condition of the bodies inside; and I said I had to attend to this man, and would explain after. In fact one of my impressions at the moment was that this man was one of the party of the bodies that I met inside, and that he had life in him, and he was taken out, and I said to myself—“Is it possible I did not observe that, because I was certain they were dead?” Again I saw Mr. Sadleir when the whole thing was over, and he took occasion to thank me then again; and I considered he was certainly very complimentary to me. He called me by a name I never got before—“a hero.”

Mr. Sadleir. — He knows the views of people in his ministerial capacity—would you ask whether it was an act to be reprobated my giving up the bodies to the friends.

12799. By the Commission (to witness). — That is only a question of opinion. We will ask your opinion whether you consider it was an act to be reprobated giving up the charred remains—the dead bodies—to their own people!—Well, at the time I had not given the matter consideration, but afterwards, if I had been asked at the moment then what I would do, I do not think I would be able to say plainly...

6th July 1881.

I said it was no use talking that way, that I had to do my duty; and Dan says, “Shut up, mother, that is all right.” I was scarcely in the place three minutes, when Ned Kelly rushed in and fired a shot at me, and said, “Out of this, you ——.”

12823. Were you sitting down at the time?—I was standing up; Dan was sitting down to have something to eat. I was standing up alongside of him, with my right side to him.
12824. How far was Ned from you when he fired?—About a yard and a half from me; he had just come from the side of the hut door. As soon as he had fired the first shot Mrs. Kelly seized an old shovel that was at the fireplace, and rushed at me with it.

12825. He missed you the first shot?—Yes. She rushed at me with this shovel and made a blow at me, and smashed my helmet completely in over my eyes; and as I raised my hand to keep off the shovel Ned fired a second shot, and it lodged in my wrist. With that I turned to draw my revolver, and just as I slewed to the right Dan Kelly had my revolver pointed at me. He had snatched it while my attention was drawn to his mother and Ned.

12826. Where was Williamson?—He had come to the door of the bedroom, and Skillion; they both had revolvers in their hands; they were not in the hut when I came in.

12827. Were they in the hut when you were fired at?—Yes, just as the third shot went off.

12828. Was Skillion in the hut?—He came to the hut as soon as Ned Kelly had found out it was me. Williamson came out of the bedroom door and had a revolver in his hand, and Skillion just came to the door while he was forcing himself in where Ned was standing.

12829. Then you had three men to fight besides Mrs. Kelly?—Yes; and Ned Kelly said, “That will do, boys.” If he had known it was Fitzpatrick he would not have fired a shot.

12830. When you left Benalla that morning were you under instructions to do a certain duty?—Yes.

12831. Who gave you the instructions—Sergeant Whelan.

12832. What were the instructions?—The instructions came from head quarters.

12833. What were they?—To take charge of Greta police station temporarily in the absence of Senior-Constable Strahan.

12834. Was Strahan away from his station?—He was.

12835. When you left Benalla it was for the purpose of taking Strahan’s duty?—Yes.

12836. Did you ever do that duty; was it your first time of being ordered to do duty of that character, sole charge of a station?—Yes.

12837. Would it not have been your duty to have gone direct to take charge of the station where the man was not in charge?—The sergeant agreed with my suggestion by telling me the complaint against Dan Kelly, and to be careful with him.

12838. Did the officer at Benalla, Sergeant Whelan, know, when you left that morning, that you were to arrest Dan Kelly, if you got the chance?—Yes, he was aware of it.

12839. How was he?—Because I told him if I saw him on my way I would take him into Greta and bring him into Benalla and remand him to Chiltern the following day. I suggested that to him.

12840. Have you read Sergeant Whelan’s evidence on that point?—No.

12841. Then you say you had told the officer who gave you the instructions that you would arrest Dan Kelly if you got the chance?—Yes.

12842. Was it he who told you of the warrant being out, or did you yourself see it in the Gazette notice?—I fancy I saw it.

12843. Did you go direct from Winton to Greta upon the Greta road that morning?—Yes.

12844. Were you at Lindsay’s public house on that occasion, on the morning of your being shot?—No, not in the morning, it was in the afternoon.

12845. When you left there, what road did you go to Greta?—I turned off to the right by the Eleven-mile Creek.

12846. Did you go off that road to Kelly’s house, or were you passing by the house; did you go by the slip-panel into his paddock?—No, I kept the road round the front past the place, and would have passed it if I had not intended to call there; I went to the back of the house.

12847. Was your officer quite aware that you were going to call at Kelly’s house on your way to Greta?—I told him so.

12848. Was there a lock-up at Greta?—Yes.

12849. You know that?—Yes.

12850. Then it was your intention, with the knowledge of your officer, to arrest Dan Kelly on your way to Greta that morning?—Yes.

12851. On the morning when you left Benalla did you see McIntyre?—No, I do not think so.

12852. When you got your instructions from Whelan to go and take charge of the station, was McIntyre, from Mansfield, then in Benalla on duty; did you see him that morning you were ordered to go to Greta?—I do not know whether he came in that morning, but I recollect his coming in from Mansfield. I only returned from duty that morning.

12853. Had you a conversation with McIntyre that morning in Benalla?—I think not.

12854. Will you say you had not?—I could not really tell you.

12855. Did you know that McIntyre was in that day from Mansfield?—I do not recollect it.

12856. When you got fired at that time what occurred?—Ned Kelly prevented them from doing any more, and I fell down on the floor insensible.

12857. What really did occur afterwards?—After I got up Ned Kelly examined my hand and found a bullet in my wrist, and said, “You must have it out of that”; and I asked him to let me go into Benalla to let the doctor take it out, and he refused; and I saw he was determined to take out the bullet. He wanted to take it out with a razor, and I took out my penknife and he held my hand and I took it out. It was not very deep in; it was a small-sized ball.

12858. You did not take Dan Kelly at that time?—No.
12859. What did you do after—did you leave the house immediately?—No, I could not leave for some time. They kept me till eleven o’clock after I came round, and would not let me go.
12860. What time did this occur?—Just at dusk.
12861. Where did you go to from there?—To Winton—through Winton to Benalla.
12862. And you reported what occurred?—Yes.

12863. You said that Williamson and Skillian had revolvers — how do you know they were revolvers?—I could swear it.
12864. You have sworn it?—Yes.
12865. What position were they in?—Just coming in; Skillian alongside with Ned Kelly with a revolver in his hand, and Williamson came in out of the bedroom with his revolver.
12866. How long before that had you seen Williamson chopping wood?—Fifteen minutes.
12867. Had he a revolver then?—No, I did not see one.
12868. How did he get into the house before you did?—I do not know.
12869. Were there two doors?—There was only the entrance.
12870. How did he get in before you and Dan Kelly?—He may have removed a sheet of bark at the back and come in. I did not see him come in.
12871. Were you under the impression that they had made up their minds to resist the arrest of Dan Kelly?—No, I did not think they would. I was on friendly terms with them in this respect, that I had arrested Ned Kelly for being drunk and I never pressed the charge against him; and he said I was the only man in the district any good. Shortly after that Jack Lloyd, Tom Lloyd, two young fellows, and Dan Kelly committed an outrage at Winton.
12872. What was the nature of that?—One was charged with attempted rape and the others with burglary. I think it was mentioned in the warrant.
12873. Whose house was that?—Goodman’s and Joe the hawker. He had a small store in Winton. There were warrants issued for their arrest. The police were some time in pursuit of them and could not get any trace of them at all; and I was going to Benalla on, I think, the second or third week after the warrants were issued and met Ned Kelly. He told me that Inspector Brook Smith had been speaking to him and asking him to give the boys up, that it was no use keeping out of the road. He said he would not give them up to him, but he said if he gave them up to anybody he would give them up to me; and he said he would keep them out of the road for a twelve month in defiance of all the police, so I advised him to make them give themselves up. I told him I did not think there was anything serious against them, so accordingly the following morning he brought them into Benalla, came galloping up to the police station and told me he wanted me, so I went down the street with him. He said the three of them had ridden in that morning from their own place or wherever they had been hiding the period they were out; so I arrested the three of them, read the charges to them, and brought them to the lock-up.
12874. Where had they been in the meantime?—Planted in some of their haunts about the bush, or with some of their relations about the Greta district.
12875. Were the police searching for them?—Yes.
12876. And could not find them?—No.
12877. You said if Williamson got into the house he might have got through by removing a sheet of bark. Was the house bark or slabs?—Bark and slabs.
12878. Where was the bark, on the side or on the roof?—There was a bark partition. How I know that is that the first shot fired at me grazed the bark behind my back, and lodged in it. I cannot say whether the outside walls were of bark.
12879. Then they had no particular reason for firing at you?—Any constable would have been in the same position.
12880. In your letter to the Commission you stated that you could give information with reference to the first outbreak that would throw light upon the cause of it?—No more than merely that the officers could have taken measures to prevent such an outbreak. There was a deficiency of police in the Greta district, where crime was being committed and horses stolen nearly of daily occurrence.
12881. Who was the superintendent of the district at the time?—Inspector Brook Smith was in charge during my time there, and Mr. Chomley at another portion of it.
12882. Who was in charge of the Greta district at the time?—Constable Thom was stationed at Greta.

A. Fitzpatrick, continued,
6th July 1881.
12886. At the time you went to Mrs. Kelly’s hut?—Yes. Shortly after the outrage was committed on me Jack Lloyd was arrested and was discharged.

12887. What had that to do with the outbreak?—You see this warrant was issued—this was the ground of the warrant being issued—and they were actually against Dan Kelly and Jack Lloyd if I had brought them up at that time.

12888. How would that account for the outbreak—the mere fact of being taken up on suspicion would not justify them in taking to the bush. Had the arrest of Mrs. Kelly anything to do with the outbreak?—No; Ned Kelly told me distinctly, previous to that, that he was persecuted by the police, because he could not do as he liked; anything that occurred he was put down for it.

12889. Had the police good reason to believe he was a criminal?—They had every reason.

12890. Then there could be no persecution in trying to get him up for crime when they supposed he had committed it?—No.

12891. That does not clear up any points with regard to the outbreak. How long have you left the force?—I was discharged in April last.

12892. What for?—On the report of Senior-Constable Mayes, at Lancefield; and I asked the Chief Commissioner if he would kindly inform me why I was discharged from the police force, and he told me. He said, on the recommendation of and communication from Senior-Constable Mayes, of Lancefield, stating that I was not fit to be in the police force, as I had associated with the lowest persons in Lancefield, and could not be trusted out of sight, and never did my duty.

A. Fitzpatrick.

6th July 1881.

12893. Had you any opportunity of reply?—I never had the slightest opportunity at all. I applied for a board of enquiry, and the Chief Secretary (Mr. Ramsay) declined, as he had left all power with Captain Standish. Notwithstanding that, there were two petitions got up on my behalf by the residents of Lancefield and Romsey, asking that I might be reinstated.

12894. You think you were harshly treated?—I did, indeed.

12895. How long were you in the police force?—Over three years.

12896. Did you plead guilty to charges of misconduct during that time?—I did, foolishly.

12897. How often?—I could not tell you how many times, but they were very trifling offences. I was charged with merely laughing in the depot—the hospital—after the lights were put out. I was fined five shillings. Then Mr. Hare said, “I will keep you in my district.” I was in the hospital then with my leg severely injured.

12898. Did you plead guilty to neglect of duty during the three years?—Yes, for missing the train once or twice in Sydney.

12899. Are you aware that the Inspector-General of Sydney wrote to complain of your misconduct in Sydney?—Yes.

12900. Were you charged with being in a house at unlawful hours when you had no business there?—That was in Lancefield. The charge was not proved.

12901. Were you charged with being away at night on the premises of Morris Casey?—Yes.

12902. And causing trouble and annoyance to his family?—That was preferred against me, but I pleaded “not guilty,” and there was no finding at all.

12903. Those are all the charges during the three years?—Yes; there were a lot of charges brought against me, but they really amounted to nothing. Superintendent Hare said he would keep me in his district, and put me under a hard man that would watch me night and day. He accordingly sent me to Lancefield, and the first charge against me there was neglect of duty at Lancefield, being reported by Senior-Constable Mayes.

12904. What was Senior-Constable Mayes’s charge against you?—For neglect of duty.

12906. What was the nature of the neglect?—There was an assault, one swagman struck another, and the swagman came and asked me to arrest this other man. I was in uniform at the time, and I declined to arrest him as I did not see the assault committed; and I said, “If you swear an information and get a warrant I will arrest him, or if you give him in charge and sign the sheet I will arrest him.” He would not do either, and came and told Senior-Constable Mayes I would not arrest him. Mayes sent a foot man to arrest him, and he was brought up and fined by a justice of the peace; and Mayes reported me to Superintendent Hare, and he referred it to Sub-Inspector Baber, of Kilmore, and he came over and heard the ease; and as far as I remember the minute on the charge exonerated me from all blame. That is one of the charges that has been brought against me.

12907. Mr. Hare had nothing to do with bringing the cases before the court?—I was heard by the police officer of Kilmore—Sub-Inspector Baber. It was heard at the police station at Lancefield.

12908. Did you say the constable at Lancefield, Constable Mayes, charged you with keeping company with undesirable characters?—So Captain Standish told me.

12909. Did he tell you the Chief Commissioner of Police in Sydney charged you with associating with improper characters?—No, he did not tell me that.
12910. Did you ever hear of that before?—No; that is the first I heard of it about the Inspector-General of Sydney. To the contrary of those reports of Senior-Constable Mayes, there are petitions of 200 respectable citizens of Mansfield and Romsey, and nine justices of the peace asking for my reinstatement.

12911. Where was that sent?—Through Mr. Deakin, to be forwarded to the Chief Secretary's office, and there was a formal acknowledgment sent to say the petition had been received.

12912. That was about the time you were discharged from the force?—Yes.

12913. How long were you in Lancefield?—Nine months. In connection with this Kelly affair, through my being mixed up with them, it has damaged my character greatly, and gained me a great many enemies in the working class whom I have had to mix up with on the Lancefield line and other places. When I went to Mr. Robb first "they swore vengeance on Fitzpatrick"—that he was the prior cause of driving the Kellys out. Many did not believe my statement a single word.

12914. Were those people sympathizing with the Kellys?—They repeatedly stated what they would or would not do to me. I was six months thrown out of employment after I was thrown out of the police force, and I had my mother, and wife and child to support, besides myself. It was very hard. I had not a chance to defend myself against any charge. I am out with Mr. Falconer at present, railway contractors.

12915. Were you never told in Sydney, by any officer of police there, that they complained of your conduct?—I was.

12916. Who told you?—Inspector Mager, I think. He told me that I was reported to the Chief Commissioner over here.

12917. By whom?—By Inspector Green, I think, there.

12918. For what?—For being in the premises of a tobacconist there, and accusing me of telling a young woman to run away from his place—this tobacconist's housekeeper.

12919. Anything else—did he tell you that Inspector Green would recommend your removal from Sydney?—He did not.

12920. Did you expect, in consequence of that complaint, you would be removed?—No. It was only a trumped up charge.

12921. Were you ever brought before any other officer there—did they ever complain except this time?—They complained of my missing the train. I had to work about twelve or fourteen hours a day.

12922. You had the opportunity of answering the charge at Sydney?—I did write out a report in reference to that.

12923. Would that have the effect of making you more careful in future when you were charged with the same offence at Sydney and Lancefield?—I considered I did my duty as straightforwardly as any — police constable in Victoria. That has been testified to by respectable citizens, and there was not a signature put to that but expressed the wish that I should be reinstated or heard. I was there nine months. That accounted for the time I was at Lancefield, where the charges were preferred against me.

12924. They did not know of the charges at Sydney?—They deal with the charges against me at the time I was at the place. I had not the slightest opportunity of defending myself when the Chief Commissioner sent a communication, and I was instructed by Senior-Constable Mayes to proceed to Melbourne from there. The late Sergeant Porter had my voucher made out to be stationed at Romsey, temporary duty for a few days. That night a telegram was sent to the police depot, stating I was to be discharged from the police force to-morrow. That was Tuesday. I asked Captain Standish to tell me the reason why, and he just explained that he had received this communication from Mayes; and I understood from Captain Standish that was the sole reason I was discharged from the police force; and I think, as against that, those 200 petitioners ought to go further than Constable Mayes. It is hard my character should be blackened. I might have erred in small things. There are many constables in the force who have done more serious things than I did, and have remained in the force and got promotion.

12925. In your letter you said that you would give information that would go a great way towards clearing up the question of the cause of the outbreak of the Kellys. Now it is no clearing up to say they were criminals and that there were warrants against them. You also mentioned the conduct of the police officers in charge at the time. What conduct of the police officers in charge have you to deal with what was on your mind when you wrote that?—Aaron Sherritt, the man that Detective Ward seemed to be able to get his information from, told me whilst stationed at Beechworth that he could lead me to the Kellys in a very short time. He told me that he had received this communication from Mayes; and I understood from Captain Standish that was the sole reason I was discharged from the police force; and I think, as against that, those 200 petitioners ought to go further than Constable Mayes. It is hard my character should be blackened. I might have erred in small things. There are many constables in the force who have done more serious things than I did, and have remained in the force and got promotion.

A. Fitzpatrick, continued.
6th July 1881.
12929. Did he give any reason why not?—He said, “Oh, we will put that down as worthless.”
12930. That he looked upon it as no information worth having?—Yes.
12931. Did Aaron Sherritt at any other time tell you that Ward and Mullane would receive no information from him?—He did. He used some threats towards them that he would like to put a ball through either of them.
12932. Did he inform you that he would not give them information?—He did.
12933. Did you tell any other officer in charge?—Detective Kennedy was the only man I told. There might have been some of the other constables I was riding with heard me mention it to him.
12934. And he said it was no use?—Yes.
12935. When Detective Kennedy did not make any move the officer in charge could not know what Sherritt’s state of mind could be?—He was supposed to report all information he received to the officers, as far as I understand. I let the matter drop at that.
12936. Do you know whether he did report it?—I do not.
12937. You never enquired?—No.
12939. There were not sufficient efforts then?—There were no search parties engaged outside the station then. It was just before the constables were shot. The search parties seemed to cease for some time. They organized parties after the time they shot me, but there were none during the hearing of the case at the Assize Court. I know very well it was not kept up with the same activity after the first month or six weeks as it was at first. Had it been so they could not have camped where they did.
12940. Were you aware where they were camped?—I was not aware where they were camped at the time.
12941. Was there a proper search for the Kellys at the time there was a warrant for their arrest?—The only search parties were Lonigan and myself from Benalla; and I was given to understand that Mr. Sadleir had a party of police from Mansfield and a party from Greta, and Inspector Brook Smith had some from Beechworth.
12942. And did Kelly seem to make a boast of it at that time that they could not catch them?—Yes, Ned Kelly said he would keep them out for twelve months.
12943. If you had gone to Greta to relieve Strahan, how many mounted constables were left at Benalla then?—One.
12944. Is there anything else you would like to inform the Commission upon with reference to the Kellys—any other point. Were you out in any of those search parties?—Yes.
12945. What time were you out?—I applied to Superintendent Hare—I was in the depot at the time the four men were shot—to be allowed to go up, as I knew the four outlaws, and I would know them at a great distance. This was after the police were shot—two or three days after.
12946. You sent in an application in writing?—Yes.
12947. What did you say in it?—I asked Mr. Hare to be good enough to allow me to proceed to the North-Eastern district. I could not give the exact words. It was for Mr. Hare to allow me to go up there in search of the Kellys, as I had known them.
12948. You said just now the four outlaws?—I did not say that in my application. They were not outlaws then.
12949. Did you know who the men were that shot your comrades when you applied to go up there?—I knew them.

A. Fitzpatrick, 6th July 1881.

12950. Did you know Byrne?—No.
12951. Did you know he was one of them at all?—I was called upon for a report, asking if I knew those men, and I, by the description given, thought one of them was King, and another of them was—I do not know whether I mentioned Byrne or Hart, but I fancy I did. According to the description I knew the two Kellys were there; of course I mentioned their two names.
12952. And did you say you thought one of the other men was King?—Yes.
12953. The constables did not know who they were at the time?—No; but I was called upon for a report, to see if I knew those men from the description McIntyre had given of them.
12954. Were you sent up?—Yes; Superintendent Hare sent me up some time afterwards. He put it off a day or two before he sent me up.
12955. Were you in any of the search parties?—I was in Sergeant Steele’s party and Inspector Brook Smith’s.
12956. How many?—I think there must have been about twenty-five. The first or second day I went out with the party. Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson, and Inspector Brook Smith, and Sergeant Steele, were in the party, besides my other comrades, the mounted men. We went to the Warby ranges that day, from Wangaratta, on some information that was given.

12957. Were you with the party, while Mr. Brook Smith was in charge, when they were supposed to be close upon the tracks of the Kellys, when the pack-horse was found?—No; we went out the following day. I think this was the day I am referring to.

12958. Were you with the party when they came to the tracks in the brush, and the blackfellows were unwilling to go in?—No.

12959. Were you ever out with Johnson?—I was with Constable Charles Johnson. He was in charge. We were just sent from Benalla to Lake Rowan. There were two other constables, and himself and I with them; there were only four of us, sent there to seek information on a Sunday afternoon. We just went down to some of the Kelly’s friends there, to see if we could see any strange horses about, or get any other information there.

12960. What were you supposed to do with a large party of twenty-five?—Some information that was received I never became possessed of it, but it appears that tracks were seen and picked up on the Warby ranges. This day the party had made it up to follow the tracks, but under some mismanagement or other the party got separated, and Sergeant Steele and some of us were riding wide apart in the bush. I got separated, and went up the hill, and lost the greater part of the party. I was with Sergeant Steele and four other constables. We camped out that night, searching the creeks and ranges.

12961. How long were you lost?—We were not lost as it were, but we just lost a portion of the party, or they lost us at that time. Of course we never went to look for them again. Sergeant Steele acted in charge.

12962. Where did you go in the evening then?—Into Wangaratta.

12963. Did you see your comrades then?—Yes, that evening.

12964. Did you have any conversation with them?—I spoke to some of the men, and just said—asked, “Where did you get bushed to?” something like that as to missing us.

12965. Did you have any conversation about the tracks?—No, I just asked them if they had found anything, and I think they were unsuccessful that day.

12966. They were a good many days?—A good many days unsuccessful, but they might have got some clue to some tracks, or information they had received from time to time. It was badly managed; the parties having to proceed from Wangaratta up to the head of the King River. It was a day and a half journey for the men and horses, and necessitated pack horses, and the men had their rifles and revolvers and ammunition. The horses would never have been able to follow the Kellys if they had come across them after riding the long journeys. If there could have been a temporary station at Glenmore, where the police could have camped, and kept provision there for the men, they could have scoured that country far better than what they did.

12967. Was it ever suggested to them—do you know?—I do not know I am sure.

12968. Did the men always return from the head of the King to Benalla, or any other head quarters?—We have camped out. In Sergeant Steele’s party I was with there were eight or ten of us. We camped out on two different nights at Dedongadale, near the Broken River—the continuation of the Buffalo River—a branch off that river.

12969. Did you consider the practice of sending out large parties a proper one in searching, or likely to be successful?—No.

12970. How many do you consider ought to constitute a party?—Eight; not more than that, or less. It would have made a good search party.

12971. Would not the dust or the noise of eight men riding together be detected very quickly by the outlaws?—You could hear our men coming for some miles through the bush even if there were only two even; if you were lying silent you would hear them coming through those hilly ranges.

12972. Did the police usually follow the tracks?—They did in any parties I was with if they thought it likely they were Kellys’.

12973. It was reported that the Kellys could always see the dust of parties as they passed along—would that be so as a rule?—It would be from the hills where they were. They could not notice unless they had a telescope. They could not identify the persons from where they would see the cloud of dust. You would see it for miles, and that may arise from a team of horses or a bullock wagon going along those bush roads in the summer time.

12974. From the ranges constables were coming up in a body, and could be distinguished at a distance?—They could be.

12975. Did not the search parties travel at night time, very often, so they could not be seen?—They would never travel in search, as it were, only to places where they thought they could get particular information, just close round the district.

12976. You said you camped at Mount Typho at Dedongadale. Where did you come from that morning?—From Wangaratta.

12977. What road did you take up to that place?—The first day we went from Wangaratta we camped at Whitefield.
12978. You told the Commission just now it would be more desirable to have a station at Glenmore?—Yes.
12979. Do you know where Evans’s station is at Whitefield, on the King?—I know the place we camped at.
12980. Do you know there was a police station close to that, called Hedi?—Yes, we called there.
12981. Do you know Kerr’s public-house there?—I know the hotel we called at.
12982. Do you know there was a police station there?—Yes, we were at it.
12983. Do you know how far that is from Glenmore?—About eight or nine miles.
12984. Is not Hedi called the head of the King?—Yes.
12985. Is that where the Kellys’ uncles and relations live?—Yes, the Quins.
12986. You know that?—Yes.
12987. And there was a station there when you went up there?—Yes.
12988. What constable was there?—Carroll was there then.
12989. Were any of those stations closed before the Kelly outbreak?—Glenmore station was broken op prior to the Kelly outbreak.
12990. Did you call at the Hedi station at that time?—Yes, coming back—as we were returning.
12991. What constable did you see then?—Carroll.
12992. Was he by himself?—I think there was a foot man there; I am not certain.
12993. You cannot say how many men?—I know there were not more than two. The large party stationed there was stationed there afterwards. There was not accommodation there for a lot of men to remain there.
12994. For a large body to stay for a fortnight or a month?—No, not the accommodation for the men and the horses. I wish to bring something under your notice with respect to my discharge from the police force, and to ask you to be kind enough to look into the case for me. Considering the petition of the inhabitants, surely some notice should be taken of this petition contradicting the report on which I was said to be discharged. My character has been greatly injured in the country through being discharged from the police force and being mixed up with the Kellys.

The Chairman.—The Commission will obtain and examine the papers in connection with your case.

The witness withdrew.

A sine die.

(Taken at Beechworth.)

WEDNESDAY, 20th JULY 1881.

Present:

Robert Alexander sworn and examined.

12995. By the Commission.—What are you?—A mounted constable.
12996. Were you one of the party that was stationed in Sherritt’s hut at the time of the murder of Sherritt?—Yes.
12997. Have you any reason to believe from what you learnt or heard that it was known you were in the hut?—I believe it was known.
12998. Do you think, from circumstances that came under your own notice, that it was possible that the outlaws had full knowledge of your being there?—Well, I think they must have.
12999. You received provisions regularly?—Yes.
13000. And they came during the day?—Yes, we usually brought the provisions to the hut.
13001. Who usually brought the provisions to the hut?—They came—I do not know the name of the party—they came by a spring cart. I think Mr. Reynolds of Beechworth brought them.
13002. Then, if it was your opinion that it was known you were there, you might expect to be attacked at any time?—Yes.
13003. At the time that Sherritt was shot was there any length of time between the first notice that Sherritt got of the presence of the outlaws and the time he was shot?—I do not quite understand you.
13004. He was asked to open the door?—Yes.
13005. How soon after that was it he was shot?—About a minute.
13006. You had all gone into the inner room to escape notice?—There were three, Armstrong, Dowling and I in the inner room, and Duross in the sitting room. As soon as Sherritt spoke to this man at the door Duross came into the room where we were.
13007. Could he be seen from the outside going in?—Oh, yes, he could.
13008. There has been a good deal said about your conduct under the circumstances. Did you consider if any of you came out that you would be liable to be shot on the instant?—Yes, I think we would have all been shot.
13009. Did you understand that the parties outside were near the premises?—Yes, when Mrs. Sherritt went outside the house they got close to the house, and when she came inside they kept away from the house. It was by the sound of voices that I judged.

13010. Had you the impression that they had full control over the house from the front door and back?—Yes.

13011. Were the doors wide open?—About half open. I have a plan—[producing the same].

13012. You have been thinking over this a good deal—do you think if you were in the same position again that you would be justified in doing as you did?—It would be according to who would be in charge—according to the person in charge I would act.

13013. Would you have gone out if you had been asked to go?—Yes, I said I would go.

13014. Armstrong was in charge?—Yes.

13015. Did Armstrong consider, when you spoke of it, that you would be running an imminent risk of losing your life?—I believe he did.

13016. Do you remember?—He said the party was too small, and if we kept our ground as we were we would do very well.

13017. Did the outlaws fire at the house?—Yes.

13018. Do you know how the house was built?—Weatherboards, lined with saplings; the saplings were about a foot apart, the interval between was filled up with clay; the weatherboards were overlapped outside; the weatherboards were nailed to the saplings inside across—it was that way all round.

13019. Then a bullet would hardly penetrate?—Three bullets went through the back wall of the bedroom, and one through the front wall; it went right through the boards. There were four or five hit the knots on the boards, and did not go through.

13020. Could you not at any time have got into the sitting room so as to put the fire out and the light—if you had made a rush, would they have been able to shoot you in the sitting room?—The log was burning, and the fire was a very large one; it would not have been possible to put it out at all, and there was a candle-light on the table, and one of the men was right opposite the front door, and one opposite the back.

13021. How is it you did not go out at all during the morning?—We heard voices on to daybreak almost; there were parties walking about; there must have been above a dozen or more, to my reckoning, by the sound of the voices, and walking about. I was quite willing to go out if Armstrong and the others would have, but they would not. I told Armstrong that Mr. Hare would be wild if we did not get the men, and he said we would do very well as we were; and I thought, as I was in charge, I would be wrong in going against what he said.

13022. One of you got on a bag, and shut the front door—could you not have done that earlier in the night?—Armstrong shut both doors by pushing them to with his breech-loader.

13023. Would that not enable him to get outside the bedroom any time during the night?—The doors were put to and opened again about half.

13024. Would you have been in any better position if you had got into that other room?—Well, I do not think we could have been in a better position, because there was a window in each room. We would have been in the same position as in the bedroom.

13025. You did not fire any shot at all from the inside?—No; Armstrong said not, lest we should shoot some civilians. I got on a box behind the partition wall, and told him I could get a shot at the man at the back, and he said not to fire, for fear of hitting any civilians. We had breech-loading shot it was no use trying to fire through; there were no rifles.

13026. Have you thought since how, if you were in the same position, you could have done better?—Yes, if the man in charge acted along with me, I would act better—I still am of that opinion.

13027. You think, if you had all acted together, you would all have rushed out?—I would have been willing to do anything; but the others would not work, and I did not like to go against the man in charge of me.

13028. What was the nature of the ground behind the house; was it an old diggings?—On the left it was diggers' holes, at the back it was scrubby, and at the right it was scrubby and diggers' holes; and there is a water-channel right before the door, perhaps two to three feet deep.

13029. Then any one outside had good cover?—Very good cover.

13030. If you had gone outside in the dark—made a rush out—do not you think you would have had an equal chance with the outlaws?—Once we got outside the door we would have been right, and would have had as good a chance; but the other men were not willing to go out, Armstrong especially. I spoke to him several times during the night about it, and he always put me off, and said we could do nothing—the party was too small. I said Mr. Hare would be wild.

13031. Why did you think it advisable to send by a Chinaman instead of by yourselves?—It was Armstrong thought of that. He said, “Boys, do not separate, because they stopped so long at Euroa and Jerilderie, they will be bound not to give in to us yet.” He thought they were close handy. This is the statement I made myself of the whole case—[handing in a written paper].

13032. Then you consider it likely the Kellys must have known you were in the hut?—Yes, I think so, because Byrne's brother used to come round the back.
13033. Do you remember making any report upon the proceedings that occurred there?—I do.

13034. You were called upon?—Yes, I remember making some short report.

13035. Did you make one?—I did.

13036. Was it accepted?—I believe it was, for I had not it returned to me.

13037. Do you remember Mr. Hare coming out one time to the hut?—I do.

13038. Did he find you all in the hut, or were you watching?—No; Duross, I, and Mrs. Sherritt were in the hut; the others were out with Sherritt getting firewood.

13039. Was it suggested to you by any one that you should go away as fast as possible and report you were watching the hut—that is, Byrne’s hut?—No; Detective Ward came into the hut and said, Hare is outside, say they are gone down to watch Byrne’s.” That meant the others, Armstrong and Dowling and Sherritt, I understood.

13040. And they in the meantime had not gone?—They were out cutting firewood in the bush.

13041. What did you do?—Mr. Hare came in and Duross, and he had some conversation, and during the time they were talking Mrs. Sherritt came out to where I was, and then went to where the men were cutting wood. After a few minutes Mr. Hare called me in and asked me if I had not gone to watch Byrne’s, and I told him I always went with the others. I did not hear the conversation he had with Duross.

13042. You did not say yourself that the others had gone down to watch the hut?—No.

13043. Did Mr. Hare ask you where the others were?—No; he only asked me why I had not gone down, and I said that I always went with the others.

13044. Would you lead him to understand by that that the others had not gone?—Yes, I would.

13045. Did the others go immediately and get down there before Mr. Hare?—I understand so. Mr. Hare and Duross and I went down, and we had great trouble in finding the way. He asked the best way to go; I said, “By the foot-bridge behind Byrne’s, or the bridge by Julien’s;” and he said, “We will go by Byrne’s;” and when I had gone some part of the way, he asked my opinion of Sherritt, and I said I thought he was true sometimes and sometimes not, by his conversation. He said then it was too light to go by the foot-bridge, that some one would see us, and I said, “Sherritt sometimes says to cross the creek,” and we went down to the creek and got across; there was no track; it was all across the bush. I had great difficulty in finding my way. I went away some distance and got to the track by the road, and went down 150 yards and saw Byrne’s a little to the left, and I found Sherritt, Armstrong, and Dowling there, and I had no more conversation with Mr. Hare.

13046. Then they had arrived on the ground before you?—Yes.

13047. How long did it take you in going?—I daresay an hour, because it is about two miles, and there was no track, and I had in consequence great difficulty in finding my way; in fact I told Mr. Hare I did not think I could find my way that way.

13048. Did Mr. Hare go away with the impression that those men were watching?—I could not say, because he spoke to Armstrong.

13049. Then, if he spoke to Armstrong and he did not tell him that they had been there, Mr. Hare must naturally have gone away believing that they had been there?—I could not say what Armstrong told him—I did not hear the conversation. I know Duross, after he had gone, said he was sorry he told him the men had gone. I said he was foolish to do it for the sake of Ward or anybody.

13050. Did he say who told him to inform?—He said Detective Ward. Of course Duross wanted me to say so, and I said, “No, I do not do that for any person.”

13051. If you had been doing your duty you would have been down at the house watching at that particular time?—No, it was just a little after eight then, and we never went down till about eight o’clock.

13052. Why should you see Mr. Hare when you were not expected to be there?—It was on account of the others—Armstrong went down, I always went when he went down.

13053. Were you under the impression that Sherritt knew that the outlaws were about at the time: after the affair was all over, do you think that Sherritt was false, and knew they were there all the time?—I do; because always, when going to Byrne’s, he carried a towel in his hand, and I said to Dowling, “That must be a signal he has got,” and we did not like to mention it to him; he always was swinging this about going forward in the bush.

13054. Did he ever tell you the outlaws knew where you were?—No, he never mentioned that. Byrne’s brother, coming from school, used to come at the back opposite the house, and make observations of the police; and Paddy Byrne, the other brother, stopped in front of the house, and would stop talking to any person.

13055.—6. That would lead you to the impression that they were watching you?—Yes, I believe they knew we were there.

13057. Why, if Sherritt was working with the outlaws, did they shoot him?—I could not form an opinion on that; I understand there was a party came up about a month before that, and Sherritt was among them, and they came on the ranges near Byrne’s; and Sherritt made the remark to Constable Arthur—he said he was done now, it was all up with him now after the party coming up—the party of police.

13058. What did Arthur understand him to mean by that?—That the Byrnes had seen him there, and... they would lay the outlaws on to him.

13059. You may read your report;—[The witness read as follows:]—"I arrived in Wangaratta about 4th of November 1878; was one of Inspector B. Smith’s search party."

13060. Were you out with Mr. Smith when he was out on the Warby Ranges?—Yes, I was.

13061. Did you follow up tracks then?—We did. We came on some tracks of horses; we followed them up to a gully near Mr. Newcombe’s—the black boys lost them there, it coming on dark. We stopped at Mr. Newcombe’s that night, and the party came into Wangaratta the next day, and never went back to search for the tracks.

13062. Were you not with the party that went out the second time to get on that track?—I do not remember.

13063. Were you with the party that found the lost horse?—Yes; I started with the first party—about eleven of us altogether.

13064. How long did you follow those tracks up?—I think they were followed up for two or three days.

13065. Were you allowed to remain out on the track to commence early in the morning?—No; we always came into Wangaratta every evening.

13066. How far away were you?—It might be ten or twelve miles.

13067. Then you rode that distance, and back the next morning, to get to the same point?—Yes.

13068. Did you get out as early as you arranged?—No; he always woke us early, and kept us waiting for two or three hours. We would be up at four or five, and Mr. Smith would not start till eight or nine in the morning.

13069. Was he called?—Yes, some man called him. Johnson was senior man in the party.

13070. Do you know whether Johnson called him or not?—I could not say for certain. We all clubbed together, and told him one day it was no use going with him; we said we had better go home. I think Johnson and Constable Couch were spokesmen.

13071. And you all led him to understand that he was not leading you after the Kellys, as he said?—We had to get up at four, or five, or six, and we would not start till eight or nine, waiting for him.

13072. Did you come close upon the tracks at any time—where you say the black boys lost it—did you come to the scrub where they were afraid to enter?—No; we came down to this gully, and the black boys got on their knees, and got their revolvers out. They would not go before us; we had always to go beside them—that was in the gully by Newcombe’s. That was the last of the tracks.

13073. Did you continue to follow them yourselves?—The black boys lost them at the gully by the sheep tracks, and, as it came on evening, Mr. Smith said we had better stop at Newcombe’s station, that was about half a mile from the gully.

R. Alexander, continued,
20th July 1881.

13074. Did you go for the tracks next morning?—No, we went back to Wangaratta. I cannot remember the route exactly.

13075. Do you think you could have followed the tracks yourself?—A flock of sheep had passed over. I do not know what we could have done the next day, but in the evening we could see them, for they were quite fresh; but the black boys were awfully frightened. I was told since that the Kellys were not a mile off at the time; in fact, Newcombe told me himself that they were in the ranges at that time.

13076. Did he tell you that night?—No. Ned Kelly also told a party that he saw us there, and that he would have killed four of the party if each of the others would take two of us.

13077. What condition was the horse in that was picked up?—Its feet were very sore, all cut with stones, bleeding.

13078. All the appearance of being recently left behind?—Yes.

13079. What officers were with you when you left the tracks that night?—Inspector Brook Smith was in charge, Senior-Constable Johnston, and other constables.

13080. Were there any other officers with you?—No.

13081. Was Sergeant Steele at Wangaratta at that time?—I could not say.

13082. You had better go on reading?—"Until June 1879; was then ordered on transfer to Milawa; while there assisted in guarding Oxley bank and regular police duty. In April 1880 was ordered on transfer to Beechworth. About the 3rd of June was sent to Aaron Sherritt’s house, Sebastopol, with three other constables, for the purpose of watching Mrs. Byrne’s house, in case the outlaws should come there. My orders were if Byrne, the outlaw, should come alone to rush him, secure him, so that he could make no noise, and bring him into Beechworth; if the four should come, to shoot Ned Kelly by all means. Remember Superintendent Hare and Detective Ward’s visit to Aaron Sherritt’s house on the 19th of June 1880, about eight o’clock in the evening. Detective Ward came inside; speaking in a whispering manner said that Mr. Hare was outside, and for us to say that they were gone to watch Byrne’s. Presently Mr. Hare came inside; while he and Constable Duross were talking. Mrs. Sherritt came out and went towards where Sherritt and the others were cutting firewood in the bush. Did not hear the conversation between Mr. Hare and Constable Duross. Shortly after I was called inside. Mr. Hare asked me why I had not gone to watch Byrne’s; said, ‘I always go with the others.’ ‘What way did we generally go?’ Said, ‘Sherritt leads the way across a creek and through the bush. ‘And could I take him to where we were accustomed to watch?’ Said, ‘I could take him two ways, one way by a bridge near Julian’s, the other by a foot-bridge just behind Byrne’s house.’ Mr. Hare said, ‘We will go by the foot-bridge.’ We started, I leading the way, Mr. Hare and Constable Duross coming behind. When we had gone some distance from Sherritt’s house, Mr. Hare asked me if Sherritt was true to us. Said, ‘Sometimes I thought he was; again, judging by his conversation, I thought different.’ When we had gone a little further, Mr. Hare said, ‘We cannot go by the foot-bridge, it is too light, some one will see us.’ I said, ‘The creek is close by.’ Waded across, found very great difficulty in leading tile way, as there was no track. Did not say to Mr. Hare that I knew or could take him this way; still I was determined to do the best under the circumstances. Came near a hut, saw a light in it, stopped, and said, ‘We had better go round by the back.’ Led the way until I came to a track going towards the right; led on down this track about 150 yards; could then see, by the diggings close by, Mrs. Byrne’s house was to the left. Came back along this track a short distance, then crossed over to where Sherritt and we ourselves used to watch, but found Armstrong, Dowling, and Sherritt were already there. I reckon the distance from Sherritt’s house to Byrne’s about two miles. After Mr. Hare had gone away, Duross spoke about having told Mr. Hare that the others had gone to watch Byrne’s. I said he was very foolish to say so for the sake of Ward or any one else. Remember the 26th of June 1880. I was in Sherritt’s house that evening, having just had tea. Was in the bedroom with Constables Armstrong and Dowling; Armstrong, having his blanket spread over Sherritt’s bed, had lain down; I and Dowling, having our blankets spread on the floor, were lain down also. Mrs. Barry, Mrs. Sherritt, and Sherritt himself were about having their tea in the sitting-room; Constable Duross was there also. Presently some one rapped at the back door, said, ‘Aaron, I have lost my way’; the voice seemed to me like a German’s. Sherritt did not seem in a hurry going to the door, for Mrs. Sherritt said, ‘Are you not going to show the man the way?’ Heard Sherritt walk towards the door. Duross came into the room where we were, and let down the calico screen attached above the door. Heard Sherritt and the German talking at the door, but did not take particular notice what they were saying. Presently a shot was fired, then another immediately after, from towards the back door. I sprang up, pulled the screen aside, saw the women jumping about and screaming; thought a revolver had fallen accidentally and gone off, frightening them, until Mrs. Barry sang out, ‘Joe, do not shoot me;’ rushed back for the breech-loader, which I had left standing against the wall behind me along with my ammunition; the ammunition having been misplaced by some of the others in their hurry caused me about a minute’s delay searching for it. Heard this person say, ‘I will not shoot you, Mrs. Barry; open that door.’ Got up on a bag behind the partition wall (it was as high as the wall-plate and made of boards), in a position so that I could fire over it. Mrs. Barry and Mrs. Sherritt were both outside. Saw both doors were about half open, and they opened backwards towards the partition wall, so that I could not get a glimpse outside. There was also a log burning in the fireplace and a candle alight on the table. Heard this person talking to the women outside. Presently this person sang out, ‘Look out for that window in front.’ Some person in front answered, ‘All right’; there was a window in front side of bed room and also one in sitting-room, but neither of those two persons were in line with me and either of the doors. The walls were composed of weatherboards, overlapped and lined with saplings about the thickness of one’s arm, might be six inches apart, the space between each filled up with clay; the roof was shingles. I said to Armstrong, ‘I cannot get a shot at that fellow,’ might shoot some of the civilians; then watched for an opportunity if this person in front should come in line with me and the front door, as I heard the women at the back of the house. Presently this person at the back said, ‘If he does not come out, I will riddle the house.’ Mrs. Sherritt came in two or three times; wanted Duross to go outside. The last time she came inside said, in a loud tone of voice, he was wanted outside, then, in a low tone, for him not to go out. Heard a whistle and the words, ‘I will soon make you come out’; some shots were fired at the same time. This person said, ‘You must be a— to guard yourself with a woman.’ I spoke, to Armstrong that, if possible, we might be able to do something. Dowling said to keep quiet and not be talking—that they might hear us outside. Armstrong asked each of us if we would go outside; I and Dowling answered yes, but I could not hear what Duross said, for he was sitting at the end of the room (see form attached). I was sitting at right side of door, guarding front sitting-room door; Armstrong was lying on his chest guarding back sitting-room door; Dowling was in a similar position. Armstrong said, ‘We will wait for a better chance.’ I said to Armstrong, ‘Mr. Hare will be wild with us if we do not get a man’ (an outlaw). Armstrong made no direct reply just then, but frequently said our party was too small—if we kept our ground we would do very well. During this time, Mrs. Barry came inside two or three times, wanted Mrs. Sherritt to come outside; heard Mrs. Barry ask this person not to burn the house; the last time she came in Dowling advised her to go under the bed for safety. Presently this person sang out, ‘Come out, I will shoot you down like b—— dogs, I have plenty of ammunition.’ Armstrong said, ‘Will we surrender?’ boys, we will all die together.’ To my reckoning it would be between seven and eight o’clock then. During all this time I had no conversation with the women, expected to see the house in flames every minute, heard persons talking outside, thought the four outlaws were there and some of their friends also; saw Armstrong shut both doors by pushing them to with his breech-loader, the candle having burned out itself. I spoke to Mrs. Barry, she said, ‘Poor Aaron was shot.’ I did not think he was dead until then, thought he was pretending for fear they would shoot him. Mrs. Sherritt did not answer for some time. Still heard parties about from then until dawn. I and Armstrong wrapped the dead body in some blankets. When day was breaking, I went outside, saw a few branches of trees laid against one end of the house, but were too green to burn; also a small cask had been broken up and laid against front side of the house, but it was too damp to burn. Saw men’s tracks about and also at a tree on the road side; saw mark of a bullet through front wall of bedroom, about two feet and a half from the ground; three or four had gone through back wall of bedroom, others having hit knots in the boards glanced off; one right through both doors. Armstrong said ‘Boys, we will not separate, for they having stopped so long at Euroa and so long at Jerilderie, they are bound not to give in to us.’ Shortly after, a Chinaman happened to pass by, was called inside. Armstrong gave him some money if he would take a note to Mr. O’Donoghue, schoolmaster, at the Woolshed. Mr. O’Donohue came, and said he would go to Beechworth. About half-an-hour he came back again, said his wife would not allow him to go, or something to that effect. Shortly after another person was asked if he would go to Beechworth, he said he would go by Wooraggee. Armstrong gave him a note for Beechworth police, and he went away. Heard some of the women say there might be poison in the articles on the table (the table would be about a foot and a half from front door, right under the window). I am quite positive neither Joe Byrne nor Dan Kelly were inside the house during the night, nor any one else except those who were in it previously. None of the women, to my belief, were outside the house until about ten o’clock in the day. After waiting some considerable time for the Beechworth police, some others were asked if they would go, but refused; Armstrong then went himself. On that evening we were relieved by some constables from Beechworth. On Monday morning, 28th of June, was one of the Beechworth party which arrived in Glenrowan between eight and nine o’clock. On arrival at the Glenrowan railway station, Superintendent Sadleir stationed us at the Wangaratta end of Mrs. Jones’s hotel, and said to fire high, as there were civilians inside. I fired about ten shots at a port hole in back wall of kitchen and at the skillion. Was told the two outlaws were there. About half-an-hour before the fire occurred, was ordered by Senior-Constable Kelly to relieve the constable on guard in the room with ‘Ned Kelly’ and two civilians, who had been in the hotel; remained there until the proceedings closed.”

13083. By Mr. Nicolson.—The Chairman asked you a little ago what you would do under similar circumstances again. Your answer to that was not quite direct. Have you considered, suppose you were placed in the same position, what you could have done that would have been better?—I would act according to the instructions of the man in charge.

13084. You mean to say you would not act with more decision than you did on that occasion—is that what you mean?—No; I mean that I would do as I was instructed by the man in charge of me.

13085. About the Warby Ranges, you were asked about the finding of the horse?—Yes.

13086. There is one occasion you have omitted to speak about, as to which the Chairman wished, I think, an answer from you; it is about the last expedition the party were out on, when Mr. Sadleir and I accompanied you—do you not remember that?—I was not at the time in Sherritt’s hut.

13087. No, I mean at the Warby Ranges, when you found the horse?—Yes.

13088. Do you remember the party going out afterwards—about the last party that went out—and Mr. Sadleir and myself were with you?—I remember two parties—your party and Mr. Sadleir’s party—meeting in the ranges, and Sergeant Steele was there at the same time.

13089. That was what the Chairman was asking about. Will you relate to the Commission, as far as you can, what occurred?—I remember meeting you on the ranges on that day, and Sergeant Steele took his party over the ranges, and Mr. Sadleir’s party came back looking for Steele’s party, but could not find them.

13090. Were you not down following some tracks previously?—Yes, that was with Inspector Brook Smith.

13091. But with Mr. Sadleir and myself, and Steele’s party, previous to that?—I remember following a blazed track I do not remember what you speak of.

13092. Your recollection seems to be indifferent?—I do not remember. All the tracks I remember were with Mr. Brook Smith.

13093. By the Commission.—You never followed those tracks up afterwards?—No; I cannot remember it.

13094. By Mr. Nicolson.—Were you not out following tracks that morning, when Mr. Sadleir and myself were with you?—I cannot remember.

13095. There is one important thing about that hut—you say you had suspicions that your presence there was known?—Yes.

13096. What orders were given you when you were placed there about precautions against surprise, and what precautions did you take, especially after you became aware of the danger—did you appoint a guard outside, or anything?—No, there was no guard put outside.

13097. By the Commission.—Did you hear whether there were any instructions to have a man, or not have a man outside?—I never heard.

13098. By Detective Ward.—You remember the night that Mr. Hare and I went down?—Yes.

POLICE.
20th July 1881.

Anton Wicks sworn and examined.

Anton Wicks, 20th July 1881.

13100. You say I spoke in a whispering voice—did I enter the house at all—who met me at the door?—You came inside the sitting-room. It was not I met you at the door; it might have been Duross, I am not certain.

13101. By the Commission.—You are certain Detective Ward was inside?—I am certain he was inside the sitting-room.

13102. By Detective Ward.—How far in did I go?—I remember the position because you shook your hands this way—[illustrating by gesture]—and said, “Say they are gone down to Byrne’s.”

13103. What did I say?—You said, “Mr. Hare is outside, say the others are gone down to Byrne’s.”

13104. Was I not asked something?—You might have spoken to Duross, that is all I heard.

13105. How could you not hear all?—I was in the inside room, in the bedroom; I just came out in time to catch that part of the conversation.

13106. Tell all the conversation you heard?—I had no conversation with you at all, but I heard you say this, and it was as much to me as Duross—it was to both of us.

13107. Mrs. Sherritt would hear all that?—She was in the sitting-room.

13108. You say you heard me say to Duross, “Say they are gone down”?—Yes.

13109. You heard nothing more?—Duross asked me to say so, and I said I would not.

13110. When did he ask you to say that?—After you had mentioned it, and I think you had gone out again.

13111. I did not say that to you?—Yes, you said it first before Duross and myself. I heard you say the words myself, and Duross he said it a second time, and I said I would not.

13112. Then when Mr. Hare asked why did not you go down, why did not you tell him then?—He asked me why I had not gone down, and I said I always went with the men.

13113. Do you know what the instructions were—what hours you were to go down, and what you were to do?—The only instructions I got were, they were given to me by Senior-Constable Mullane in the office, that was before we went at all; he said we were to go down, and if we saw Byrne to rush him to prevent him from singing out.

13114. By the Commission.—When were they supposed to be in this hut?—I would not be certain, I think it was about eight o’clock he said.

13115. By Detective Ward.—What hour did you go on every other night?—Well, we went between eight and nine generally—we never went before eight o’clock that I can remember.

13116. By the Commission.—Then Mr. Ward must have considered you were not doing your duty when he told you to give that answer to Mr. Hare?—I could not say.

13117. By Detective Ward.—Then you were no later that night than any other night?—Well, we might be a little earlier—I never took notice—I was acting under Armstrong’s instructions.

13118. Then it was about the same time?—I never took particular notice.

The witness withdrew.

Anton Wicks, 20th July 1881.

13119. By the Commission.—What are you?—A miner, and working on the roads sometimes.

13120. Do you recollect going to Mrs. Sherritt’s door and asking the way one night—the night that Aaron Sherritt was shot—were you present?—Yes.

13121. Why did you go to the door that night?—I was stuck up.

13122. By whom?—By Byrne and Dan Kelly.

13123. How many of them were there?—Two, that I saw.

13124. Did they tell you you must do that?—Yes.

13125. And Sherritt came out?—Yes.

13126. Who shot him?—Byrne.

13127. Did you see anything further at the place that night; did you stop there all night?—No, about six o’clock I came before the door, and about nine o’clock I left the place.

13128. They allowed you to go away?—I got home at half-past nine.

13129. Where were you stopping when you went away?—I came home.

13130. How far was that from the place?—Over a quarter of a mile.

13131. What were you doing between six and nine—what did they do with you?—They stuck me up and asked for my name.

13132. I mean after you got to the hut—what did you do after Aaron Sherritt was shot?—I came home, I stood an hour or two with the people outside.

13133. Who were outside besides Byrne and Kelly?—Byrne was with me, and Kelly was in the front of the house.

13134. Did Byrne keep you there all the time?—Yes, three hours.

13135. Just kept you there waiting for them?—Yes.

13136. Did you hear any conversation with Mrs. Sherritt or Mrs. Barry?—No, Mrs. Sherritt and Barry were coming out after Sherritt was shot.

13137. And going in again?—Yes; the bushrangers let them in again.

13138. Had you not a chance of escaping all that time?—No, Byrne was always quite close to me—as close as I sit next to this man here—I was handcuffed.

13139. What did you do after nine o’clock when he allowed you to go?—He allowed me not to go at all—he left me standing. He shipped me a little way in the bush, and about fifteen minutes before they had taken the handcuffs off and left me standing there, and I stood about fifteen or twenty minutes by myself, and I went round home through the bush.

13140. Did you go to your own hut?—Yes.

13141. And remained there?—Yes.

13142. Could not you have told somebody about what had happened?—I was so frightened, I ran directly home.

13143. Were there any other people there besides Byrne and Kelly?—No, not that I saw. I heard Byrne call out, “Dan, stand and watch the window.” That is how I know it was Dan.

13144. Were they on horseback when they stuck you up?—Yes, three horses—Byrne was leading one horse.

13145. Was there anything particular about their appearance—had they any armour?—I think not Byrne—I think Kelly might; he looked very stout.

13146. Had he nothing on his head?—No, I could see his face.

13147. Did you see them try to set the house on fire?—No, I did not, he always called out for two men and said, “Mind, I will set the house on fire if you do not come out,” but he never began to do it while I was there.

13148. Did he say there were police in the house?—No, always two men he wanted out.

13149. Had you seen Byrne before?—Yes, I knew him since a child; he was a neighbour of mine about half a mile.

13150. Did you not hear Mrs. Sherritt and Byrne talking at all?—Yes, they were speaking and crying.

13151. Did you hear what they said?—Byrne asked who were there, and she said “A man in there looking for work,” and he said always, “Bring the men out,” and he sent Mrs. Sherritt in to bring the men out.

13152. Did you know there were policemen in the house?—No, I never did, and never heard it.

13153. Did you hear any one say there were policemen about there?—No, not till after the murder.

The witness withdrew.

Mrs. Sherritt, senior, sworn and examined.

13154. By the Commission.—Where do you live?—On the Sheep Station Creek.

13155. That is near the same place where your son lived?—Yes, about a mile from my son’s selection.

13156. Do you remember anything connected with the Kellys about the time they came to your son’s hut?—After they were out?

13157. Yes?—Well, the first thing I heard of them was, I think it was on a Monday, they fired off eight shots on the top of the hill close to my son’s selection.

13158. How long was that before they shot him?—That was at the beginning of the outlaws. I did not keep any exact date.

13159. Did you hear why they fired those shots?—I did not till some time after, and then I heard that it was that if my son was about it would draw his attention, thinking he would go to see who was firing, but he did not go at that time.

13160. Can you form any idea how long that was before he was shot—six or twelve months?—It was when they first turned out.

13161. They had nothing against him at that time?—Oh no, they were friendly with him then, I believe.

13162. Did you ever hear what caused them to be unfriendly with him?—Well, what I heard was that Mrs. Byrne, the outlaw’s mother, discovered that he was assisting the police, by some means or other.

13163. Did you hear what time it was she discovered it?—I believe it was some time—I could not exactly say, but not very long before she suspected him, after he began assisting the police.

13164. Do you know when he first began to assist the police?—I do not know myself when he did.

13165. Do you remember them threatening they would shoot him or anything of that sort?—Yes, they threatened to shoot him after he quarrelled with Mrs. Byrne, but not after he made a present of a horse to Miss Byrne, and then she exchanged this horse for another, and the one she got in exchange for that one my son took it and sold it, and then Mrs. Byrne took out a warrant for him and the police were striving to arrest him on this warrant, and they did so, and he stood his trial in Beechworth and was acquitted.

13166. How long was that before he was shot?—Eight or nine months perhaps, because when the warrant was out for him Ned Kelly came to my place, and I was not in the house the same afternoon as he came, and there was only two children in, and he said that he had a mob of cattle at the back of the hill, and that he wanted to get Aaron, as Aaron was a good bushman, to show him the way by the head of the King. So on that occasion when he came that afternoon he took the baby, a child of four or five months, in his arms, and he said he was hungry. And there was some bread in the oven baking, and there was some dough in the dish, and he took some of the dough up, and he flattened it on the table and pulled out the fire with his foot and cooked two or three pieces. He was alone, I think it must have been Dan.

13167. This is what the children told you?—Yes.

13168. How old were the children?—Fifteen. And then he made some tea, and he said he was sending this tea up to his men that he had on the hill; and he had a flask of brandy in his pocket, and all the time he was inside he kept the baby in his arms, and he filled out a tumbler of brandy and put it on the cupboard, and told the children to give that to Aaron, and that a gentleman was there who wanted him to assist him with some cattle, and he would be back in the fortnight or three weeks. Aaron had not been taken up at that time. He said he believed there was a warrant out for Aaron, and the best thing he could do was to come along with them; that he was accustomed to cattle and had been in the bush a long time, and would be of use to them.

13169. That was a friendly act you think at that time?—I do.

13170. Why did he keep the child in his arms?—I do not know. He nursed the baby, and made one of the little girls put the kettle on and make the tea.

13171. Did you see or hear anything of them shortly before the time Aaron was shot?—Yes.

13172. How long before?—Well, it might be a month or not quite so long.

13173. Before I come to that question, I want to ask you was there any intimacy between him and Miss Byrne at the time he made her the present of a horse?—Yes, he was an admirer of hers, I understood.

13174. Did you ever hear whether he had proposed marriage to her?—I believe Mrs. Byrne fully expected he would marry her daughter, but I do not know whether my son had made that offer.

13175. Do you think the quarrel with him originated in having left off addressing Miss Byrne?—I could not tell you that, I think it was on account of him assisting Detective Ward. She had a great dislike to Ward, and how she found out that was with a schoolmate of my son’s named Wallace; the State school teacher Wallace told her.

13176. Have you got any proof of that at all?—Only that she said so. I owed a draper in Beechworth a bill,—I hope my evidence will not be published in the papers.

The Witness continued as follows:

And the next afternoon after what I have mentioned Wallace chanced to come to the place, and previously to this he used to come to my place at very unreasonable hours, but this afternoon I gave Detective Ward a cup of tea, and Wallace also, and the draper. The next day or two my daughter went down to Mrs.
Byrne’s, and she asked how it was we were so friendly with Ward, the detective, to give him tea, and that Jimmy Wallace had been there and told her so; and Wallace used to come to the place and used to tell my son he was writing a book, and for my son to give him all that he knew—the particulars of what the police were doing—and that when he sold this book, if he got good sale for it, that Aaron should have half the profits.
And one night in particular he came, and my son had been out and had a pair of blue blankets—he used to take them in the bush with him, he laid them down on the hearth, and Wallace came about two o’clock in the morning. Then I heard he told Mrs. Byrne he could not make out what the Sherritts were doing, as he found Aaron in the ash corner. But he was not there, he was lying on the hearth. He was trying to make little of my poor son, I suppose.

13177. What further occurred to lead you to know that they knew about helping the police?—Only that.

13178. Did Wallace, from what you heard, in your opinion, lead Miss Byrne to understand that he was helping the police?—Yes, I do believe he did.

13179. Have you any reason to think that?—No; the only reason I had is that Byrne the outlaw came, and he met the children going to school, and he told them to tell their mother to tell Aaron not to sleep inside for a fortnight, because that Kelly was coming in to shoot him, and I thought it was Wallace. I only suspected it myself that it was Wallace.

13180. Byrne and Sherritt were very friendly?—Yes, and Wallace, too, was an intimate friend. But my son was an innocent fellow, and easily led astray. If you asked him a question, he would tell it to an intimate acquaintance like Wallace.

13181. Then from all that you have heard you consider that Wallace acted as an enemy?—I do believe he did, but nobody told me, I only think so myself.

13182. Do you know anything of what occurred about the time that Byrne shot him—did you hear anything of their movements?—I heard what I told Mr. Superintendent Hare. I heard a short time before my son’s death that they were going to do something that would astonish not only Australia, but the whole world.
It was from Byrne’s sister I heard that.

13183. And they gave no notice at all other than that he should not sleep in the hut?—No.

13184. Until they came upon him?—Yes, Byrne came to me at Miss Byrne’s. My son John, he came to Beechworth, and he was doing a bit of ploughing at home. He came to Beechworth, and did not come home that night; and I got up very early in the morning, and I went out to his room to see if he had come, and I saw his bed had not been disturbed; and then I went out to listen if I could hear the horse-bells of the horses ploughing; and I went along my own paddock fence, and I could hear the bells still further on. It was the horses had got into a paddock belonging to a man named Murphy that my husband had bought, and I went to bring the horses home; and it seemed to me that Byrne was waiting to see who would come over for the horses. But when I went over there there was an old call pen, and three or four old sheds. And I saw the man first, and then a man with a horse’s bridle on his arm, and this was Joe Byrne. And as soon as he saw me he got up and came over and spoke friendly enough to me; and he said he had come to take my son Aaron’s life, and also Detective Ward’s. He said, “Those two had them starved to death.” And he said that Ward went about the hills like a black tracker; and that if he had them two out of the way, and also Senior-Constable Mullane, he said he could go where he liked. And I begged him not to take Aaron’s life. I said, “He has no harm; he would not hurt you.” And he said, “You need not try to impress that on my mind, because I tell you now that there was Ward and him and Mr. Hare very nearly twice catching us, and that tells you whether they will hurt me or not.” Then I strove with him—I don’t know what I said—not to take poor Aaron’s life. So when he had done I said to myself in the first place when he went away, “I will run down and tell Aaron. I do not know where his hut is; I think I can find it out on the Woolshed.” Then in place of that I brought the horses home, and came to Beechworth; and on my way I met my son John. He was on horseback, coming home; and I told him to go back and tell Ward what Byrne had said. Then when I had sent the message into Beechworth I got frightened myself, and got my horse to come in, and told Detective Ward. A few days after that Mr. Nicolson sent down for me, and I came up and told him just what passed; and said that my son would lose his life if he was not removed from where he was.

13185. Then you did not know anything at all of their coming to the house that night?—No; only I heard they were going to do something. Oh, if I had only known it!

13186. Did you hear whether it was known the police were about the house?—I am sure I did not.

13187. Did you know the police were in your son’s house?—I did, because my son knew he could tell me.

13188. Did any of the little ones know?—Not one of the little ones.

13189. Did Joseph Byrne lead you to believe that he knew there were police about?—No.

13190. Did you know where the outlaws were then?—They were round the district for months before they were taken.

13191. Did many people to your knowledge know whether they were about?—I do not know whether many knew, because I do not think they put confidence in many.

13192. It was generally known they were in the district?—I do not know that people knew, but Ward and my son and myself knew that they were in it.

18193. Did your son know it was Kelly that called at the beginning?—He called several times after that.

13194. Was it reported to the police that Kelly was there?—Yes, by myself.

13195. Soon after?—Well, I forget now how soon, because the outlaws watched my place that time three days, that was what I was told.

13196. How long was that before your son was murdered?—It was the time of the warrant.

13197. Did you know anything about the party of police in the cave?—Yes, I knew it myself; but none of my small children knew anything about it.

13198. Did you know whether there was anybody else about knew that they were there?—No, I am sure there was no one knew except the police themselves.

13199. Was it not there that Mrs. Byrne saw your son?—Not in the cave. It never was discovered except through the police themselves. It could not be discovered without my knowing it.

13200. Were their tracks discovered?—Never that I heard of.

13201. By Mr. Nicolson.—There was one of your daughters in the habit of going to Mrs. Byrne’s?—Yes.

13202. That was with the knowledge of Detective Ward?—Yes.

13203. Going regularly, frequently, under your direction and the sanction of the police?—Yes, but as to any one knowing anything about the cave, the cave never was discovered until after the police left it.

13204. Have you had conversations with Mrs. Byrne since, about the cave?—Nothing concerning the cave; but I know perfectly well the cave was never discovered.

13205. Do you know from Mrs. Byrne that she never knew?—All I know is that the cave was never discovered except through the police. It was discovered some weeks after the police had left it, and it was through some empty tins that rolled down the side of the hill, and during the time that the police provisions were in my place, I never was discovered sending the provisions. I used to go myself and carry to a certain place and leave it for my son, for fear he would be discovered, and I baked the bread; and sometimes, if they ran short of anything, I would send to Beechworth for it.

13207. Did any person request you to do so?—Detective Ward; and then also, before my son’s murder, my daughter called at Mrs. Byrne’s—one of my sons was working and I used to send him his provisions from home, and this girl used to go once a week, or sometimes oftener, on horseback, and on her way she would call at Byrne’s, and this night she called on her way home, and who should come up but Joe Byrne, leading a horse, and Dan Kelly. Each of them was leading one and riding another. Mrs. Byrne then came out—there was a whistle—it is a very thick scrubby place, and after a little bit Ned Kelly and Hart came on foot, from the back of the place like, and those two came up the front of the house like, so, and got their provisions. There was some bread and I think it was boiled bacon, and then Patsy Byrne went up the Woolshed and he brought down something in a bottle and gave it to them, and Patsy—Joe Byrne’s brother—said, “Which way did you come?” and Joe says, “The way we always come. We came down the steepest part of Wall’s Gully.” I came into Beechworth and told you that, Mr. Nicolson.

13208. That was on a Saturday morning?—I do not remember the date.

13209. By the Commission.—How long was that before the murder of your son?—Not long; it might be a month or a little more.

13210. Did you know where they came from at that time?—No, but I had heard that they were supplied with provisions from a woman that lived near Chiltern that was an old sweetheart of Byrne’s.

13211. They were supposed to be camped in the ranges?—That is what I heard.

13212. By Mr. Nicolson.—What you told me on the Saturday was your meeting with Joe Byrne at Murphy’s hut?—I went to bring over the horses to plough.

13213. How long did that occur before you saw me?—I could not tell you how long.

13214. Was it the same day you saw me?—No, I do not know. It was not the same day. There came a mounted man down with a letter, and I came up, but I cannot remember the day.

The witness withdrew.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior, sworn and examined.

13215. By the Commission.—You are the widow of the late Aaron Sherritt?—Yes.

13216. How long were the police in your house before the murder; do you remember?—To the best of my knowledge, I think they were there over six months.

13217. Remaining there all the time?—Not all the time; some of the time they left and came to Beechworth.

13218. They were most of that time in the house?—In the daytime they were there.

13219. And out watching at night?—Yes.

13220. And they kept inside during the day?—Yes.

13221. Had you ever any information or any knowledge that led you to believe that either the Kellys or Joe Byrne knew that the police were there?—No. I do not think they did.

13222. Did Patsey Byrne ever stop watching the house as he passed you?—Not to my knowledge; I never saw him.

13223. Did you ever see Joe Byrne watching the house?—No, I never saw him there at all.

13224. Do you think it is likely that men could be kept in there for six months without it being known at all?—They could if they had kept quiet; by keeping in in the daytime and going out at night I do not think they could have been discovered.

13225. Were there young people coming by there?—They never came there while the police were there; none of the Byrnes.

13226. Were there any children going to school with the Byrne family who would have known anything of that?—There were children going from Sebastopol along with the Byrnes, but they never came to the house. They passed the house in the main road, but never came near it. It was about six yards from the main road.

13227. Did you get any information that would lead you to believe that the Kellys intended to shoot your husband; before that night did you ever hear of any threats being held out against him?—No, not any threats, but his brother William told me how Aaron got threatening letters, but I never saw them or was told about them by my husband.

13228. Did he seem to be afraid at all he would be shot?—Well, he did not seem to be afraid. He seemed to be afraid if he went out in the bush, but he never thought of their coming to shoot him at the house the way they did; he never once thought of that.

13229. We have it from Wicks that he came up to the door—did Joe Byrne shoot your husband immediately he went to the door?—Not immediately. He spoke a few words before he fired the shot.

13230. Did you hear the words that were said?—Not that Byrne said; it was Wicks that spoke; he mentioned something about losing his way, and asked my husband if he would come out and show him the road.

13231. Byrne did not speak to him?—Not to my knowledge.

13232. You had four police in the house that night?—Yes.

13233. Did you go out to speak with Joe Byrne or Ned Kelly after they had shot your husband?—It was Dan Kelly was there. I was speaking to Joe Byrne.

13234. What did he wish you to do?—He told me to go in and bring out the man that was in the room. I told him it was a man came there looking for work.

13235. Did he persist in saying he must come out.?—He sent me in three times, and told me if he did not come out he would riddle the house, and he would shoot both me and my mother.
13236. What did you do?—I went in, when he sent me in the first time, and told the men to come out.
13237. Why did Byrne want this man to come out?—When I said there was a man looking for work, he said, “Tell him to come out till I see this man who is looking for work.”
13238. Had he any idea the police were there this time?—I do not think so.
13239. Did you go in and ask them to come out?—Yes; and they asked me who was there.
13240. And what did you reply?—I said that I thought it was Joe Byrne and Dan Kelly that were there.
13241. Did the police ask how many outlaws there were?—Yes. I said I could only see two, and Wicks.
13242. Did you know that Sherritt had been asked to keep away from his hut for a fortnight—some time before that—for fear he would be shot?—No.
13243. How long were you married before your husband was shot?—Six months.
13244. Did Joe Byrne say he did not want to shoot you, and would not shoot you?—He kept threatening us all the time, and saying he would shoot us if whoever was in the room did not come out. He said one time, when my mother was begging of him not to shoot us, he would not shoot her or her daughter, but he would have whoever was in the room out.
13245. Did you consider that they would have been in great danger if they had come out?—Well, I think if they had come out he would have shot them down the minute he saw them.
13246. They were out in the darkness, and could not have seen?—Not very well; but, at the commencement, he was standing inside the back door just about a step in; he could have been seen by them.
13247. Was the door open so that it would hide his body from the bedroom?—It was not opened wide; it was just pushed aside.
13248. Did the door open to the wall of the bedroom?—Not quite; it was about half open.
13249. What did the police do when you went in to tell them to come out?—They told me to keep out of the road, or I would be shot.
13250. They would not come out?—No.
13251. I think you have mentioned that they compelled you to stop in the bedroom afterwards?—I was sent in three times before they kept me in; it was the third time I went in they told me I had better stop in.
13252. And what time did the outlaws discover there were police in the bedroom—did they ever cry out that there were police, and that they wanted them out?—Not while I was outside.
13253. Did you hear them say that at any time?—No. Oh, I heard Joe Byrne sing out to some body at the back in the scrub to come out, that there were —— dogs in the room, and they would not come out. I do not know whether he meant police or not.
13254. Could the police have had any opportunity of shooting any of them at all from the bedroom?—No.
13255. Would they have had if they had rushed out into the sitting-room?—Well, I think if they had rushed out into the sitting-room they would have been shot.
13256. Is there anything connected with the matter that you remember that you have not put in your letters. There is some report here from the Ovens and Murray Advertiser, I suppose that is as far as you know the true report of what happened?—Yes, I could not very well remember at the time what had happened, I was in such a state.
13257. Did they put you under the bed for safety?—They told me I had better remain there under the bed; that the outlaws would not burn the house down while there were women in.
13258. Who first told you to go under the bed?—Constable Armstrong.
13259. There was not much room in the bedroom with you all there?—Oh, there was not much room, but still they thought it was better for me to go under the bed, because I wanted to go out.
13260. Then there was the danger of your being shot if they fired at the house. I suppose they thought you would be in danger of being shot if the bullet passed through?—Yes.
13261. Were you greatly inconvenienced by being put under the bed?—While I was in the place, during half the time, I think I took a weakness while I was under the bed, and my mother was calling me to come out, and was trying to pull me out from under, and I could not very well hear what she was saying.
13262. From all you saw, you do not find fault with the constables for not going out of the bedroom?—No, I do not find fault with them for not rushing out, because if they had they would have been shot. There was a chance in the commencement, but I do not think they had their firearms ready at the time.
13263. You think they could have shot Joe Byrne when they were if they had been prepared just on the moment?—Yes.
13264. During the time they were out in the night, watching those places, where did they sleep in the day?—In the bedroom.

13265. Your husband was out with them in the night?—Yes. They used to lie on the floor, and sometimes on the bed in the middle of the day.
13266. Did Sherritt tell you that he thought the outlaws were about the district?—He always kept saying they were about somewhere. Mrs. Sherritt, junior, continued, 20th July 1881.
13267. Close to Mrs. Byrne’s?—Not close, but he seemed to think they were about on the ranges.
13268. Had he any means that you are aware of of finding out where the outlaws were?—I do not think so.
13269. Is there anything that you wish to tell the Commission at all that you think of—you have an opportunity now?—Yes.
13270. Have you anything you desire, because we could make it in private here, so that the public would know nothing about it—you wish that?—Yes.

The room was cleared.

_The Witness._—I hear a great many reports going about since my husband’s death—some of his people, I believe it was, have been putting out reports.

13271. Of what nature?—I heard of how they sent a letter to Mr. Nicolson, stating that I made it known about the police being at my place.

13272. You wish to contradict that?—Yes.

13273. You never did make it known?—I always denied it. If anyone asked me if he was in the police force, I always said he had nothing to do with it, because I was afraid of his being in danger.

13274. Did you form any idea of why they shot him?—It was because he assisted the police.

13275. Did you hear any remarks at all amongst the people or learn from them that he was not faithful to the police at any time?—I have not heard any remarks except what I have seen in the papers about the police at Wangaratta and Beechworth, saying they had not faith in my husband; but I think he risked his life for them and lost it.

13276. You are quite satisfied he was quite faithful?—Yes, because he went in great danger. I never knew in how much danger till after he was shot. He would go out day and night, and would pretend he was after cattle, and instead of that he was looking for tracks of the outlaws. I suppose he got orders to do it.

13277. Did he ever make any remark to you that he was in great danger?—Well, once or twice he said if he met the Kellys that he thought they would shoot him before any of the police.

13278. He did not remark that they got to know about it and he would be sure to be shot?—He always seemed to hide it. He tried to persuade their friends he was not with the police.

13279. He went out as a guide with a party about a month before he was shot did he ever make any remark that he believed now that the Kellys or their sympathizers, any of them, knew he was with the police?—Not to me—never. I heard a great many reports about what Mrs. Byrne used to say that he was with them, but of course I never heard them myself—only reports that went about.

13280. There is a very delicate matter that we will refer to that we have some evidence about. Were you ever made aware whether he was on any terms of intimacy with Miss Byrne before?—Not to my knowledge; he knew her well, but I could not say any intimate terms.

13281. We heard he made her a present of a horse?—I heard something about that myself, but I did not believe it.

13282. We learned he had made a present of a horse to her, and that she exchanged it for another, and then he took her horse, and they got a warrant out for him, and he was acquitted. Of course the result of that trial proved that he had not done so. Did he ever say anything to you about that—that the Byrnes were annoyed with him?—He never said anything about that to me.

13283. Did you know Byrne’s family?—I knew all of them. They used to go to the same school as I did—the sisters and brothers.

13284. Were they cold to you after your marriage?—They never used to speak to me scarcely after I was married—I saw them very seldom. Before that they were on intimate terms; but it was very seldom I saw them, because they did not live near to us.

13285. We did hear that there was a religious difference between them—were you and he Protestants?—I am a Catholic.

13286. He was a Protestant?—He said he was nothing. His people said they were vexed about the religion, but I did not think it; I think it was because he left off working for them. He was not friends with his people since he was married, and to my knowledge he never spoke to one of them.

13287. Was he not friendly with his mother?—I think not. He and she had some quarrel after the marriage.

13288. Did he let you know he was not on friendly terms with them?—Yes, he told me not to speak to them—not to go out to the place.

13289. That would not be on any religious point?—No.

13290. Because if he was speaking to Miss Byrne before, she was a Roman Catholic also?—Yes. He seemed to be well satisfied. He said he would turn a Catholic just the night before he was shot. It was on Friday night. He said he would get the horses next day and come up to the Catholic chapel at Beechworth, so he seemed well satisfied with the religion.

13291. You were born near that place?—Yes. I only knew my husband two months before we were married.

13292. You did not go to school together?—No.

13293. Your opinion is that he was shot on account of giving information to the police?—He was assisting them. I used to go out on parties, leading them to the ranges—this was before I and he were married—and he was out once or twice afterwards.

13294. It was not because he did not marry Miss Byrne he was shot?—Oh, no; it was not on that account at all. I fancy, myself, that there was information given to sympathizers, and then it was taken to the outlaws, that he was joining the police, and assisting them to capture the outlaws. That was my belief, and I heard it from many a one.

13295. Have you any knowledge of anyone who was likely to give that information?—Well, there are plenty of sympathizers about the Woolshed, people who would sympathize with the Byrnes, and I think they would tell the outlaws.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior, continued, 20th July 1881.

13296. Mrs. Sherritt, senior, has said that she knew that they suspected him?—I dare say they had suspected him when he would not join them to go to Jerilderie that time. They might suspect him, but I do not think they would know unless the friends conveyed it to them. I heard they asked him to go to Jerilderie.

13297. Did he tell you that himself?—Yes.

13298. Do you know Wallace the schoolmaster there?—Yes.

13299. Did he come to your place during the time the police were there?—No, he came to my mother’s place.

13300. He did not come to your own place after you were married?—No.

13301. Did he ever make any remarks that led you to suppose he was favorable to the outlaws?—No, he seemed to have a hatred against them, and I do not think he knew where they were or anything about them. Some people seemed to think he was assisting the outlaws, but that was false. I heard something about his being a sympathizer, but I do not know how true it is.

13302. You never had any opportunity of judging of that after you were married?—No.

13303. Are you on friendly terms with Mrs. Sherritt, senior, now?—No, I have not spoken to her since I was married. There was one of his brothers used to slip down for two or three weeks. He used to stay at my place during the time the police were there.

13304. Did he stay in the hut at night?—He used to sleep at the place at night time while they were away. He was splitting in the bush with another young man.

13305. Would he know they were there?—He knew very well they were there—of course he saw them there when he was stopping there.

13306. Is there anything else you wish to say?—No.

13307. Are you living at Beechworth now?—No, I have been living with my mother. I have not had good health since my husband’s death. My mother lives on the Woolshed.

13308. Does your own mother know any more about this than you do?—Well, she can remember a good many things I have forgotten since then. I was in such a state at the time that I could not remember half what happened.

The public were again admitted to the room.

13309. By Detective Ward.—You remember the night that Mr. Hare and I called at your hut?—Yes.

13310. Who was in the hut at the time?—Constables Duross and Alexander.

13311. Did you hear me say anything to the men?—I was there when you came in; you asked where they were.

13312. Who answered?—I think Duross said they were out cutting firewood.

13313. Then did you hear me say anything to them; if so, tell the gentlemen present what I said?—You had not time to say much when Mr. Hare came in after you.

13314. By the Commission.—Do you remember anything that Detective Ward said immediately, after that?—No, I do not.

13315. By Detective Ward.—Mr. Hare came in immediately after—whom did he speak to?—To Duross.

13316. What did Duross say?—He asked Duross where were the men, and he said they were out watching, I think.

13317. Did you hear me tell Duross to say that the men were watching Mrs. Byrne’s house?—No.

13318. It I did say that, would you hear me?—I think I would have heard you, because I was standing just at one side when you came in.

13319. By the Commission.—Had Detective Ward any conversation with Duross, to your knowledge when you were not close to them?—Not to my knowledge, and could not have any conversation with him while I was there.

13320. You were in the room all the time?—Yes.

13321. Do you know whether Ward met Duross at the door outside before he came in?—I could not say.

13322. By Detective Ward.—Do you remember me asking where the men were?—Yes, and I told they were out cutting firewood, and you told me to run up and tell them to come down as quick a they could and go to Byrne’s.

13323. You came down with them after you found them?—Yes, I met them coming down—Constables Armstrong and Dowling.

13324. Mr. Hare, Constables Alexander and Duross, had left then?—They had left then with Mr. Hare.
13325. Will you tell what I said to Armstrong and Dowling when I met them?—Told them when you met them outside to go as quickly as they could to Byrne’s, and he there before Mr. Hare and the others.
13326. Did you hear me say anything that Duross had told Mr. Hare anything?—No, I do not remember anything more.
13327. By Constable Alexander.—Had I any conversation with you the night Byrne and Dan Kelly were outside of the hut?—No.
13328. I did not refuse to go out?—No. I heard you say if Armstrong went out you would go out, and you said Armstrong would not go out, he thought it better to wait till morning.
13329. Whom did you ask to go out when you came in?—Armstrong.
13330. Whom did Byrne want outside?—Duross, and it was Armstrong I met first when I came in.
13331. By the Commission.—Did Byrne understand that Duross was the man looking for work?—He did not know.
13332. How do you know that it was Duress that Byrne wanted out?—Because I mentioned the man’s name. I said his name was Duross, and I said he was a working man, and he came that evening looking for work.
13333. By Constable Alexander.—Did you hear Detective Ward whispering to Duross when he came in (on the 19th)?—No, I do not remember he whispered anything that I could hear.

The witness withdrew.

William Henry Foster sworn and examined.

13334. You did not hear him say anything after he asked where the others were?—No, I do not remember him saying anything after that.
13335. Did he whisper anything either?—No.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior,
20th July 1881.

13336. By the Commission.—What are you?—Police magistrate and coroner.
13337. You have been for some time in this locality?—I have been here nearly three years and a half.
13338. I think you heard those cases that were tried of the Kelly sympathizers?—I did.
13339. Did you form at that time any strong opinion as to what was the cause of the Kelly outbreak in this district from the evidence that came before you?—As far as the sympathizers were concerned, during the time they were there, there was scarcely any evidence taken at all. It was merely sufficient to justify a remand in the first case, and then that was repeated from time to time for three or four months, I think.
13340. In passing through the country as you have been, and learning a good deal of the feeling of the people, have you formed any opinion as to the cause of the outbreak?—I have heard it frequently attributed to the occurrences that took place at Ned Kelly’s hut at the time of the shooting of Fitzpatrick.
13341. Do the public generally understand that the Kellys and Byrne belong to what may be termed the criminal class?—I think so.
13342. Had they been concerned in trials for cattle stealing?—I think so, and together, I think. It must have been for some time, for I had not been here long before I heard their names connected with the criminal classes, and the Sherritts also. Aaron and others were before me at the police court.
13343. We have it in evidence here that Aaron Sherritt was brought to the court on warrant for having stolen a horse from Byrne?—I think I heard the case myself.
13344. That case would hardly justify you in looking upon him as a horsestealer?—No, I think not that alone. It was by general rumour that I formed the opinion more than by any actual knowledge on my own part, that the family generally were considered loose characters.
13345. I suppose you do not know anything whatever of the state of the district before the Kelly outbreak?—No, I have not been in the district for twenty years except a very short time.
13346. We have it in evidence that one or two police stations were closed—Glenmore and Greta; do you think if those stations had been kept open it would have prevented an outbreak?—It certainly would have been well if they had been kept open, in my opinion.
13347. You think the police would have had a better command of the district?—Yes, I think so.
13348. We intend, when we enquire into the management of the police force generally, to go into the question of whether it would be better under general government or local government. Have you formed an opinion whether the police might be more efficient under local supervision than being under the general head in Melbourne?—I think decidedly the latter. I understand you to mean a constabulary under the control of the municipal bodies as compared with a constabulary under the Government control.
13349. Yes, that they should form boards of the several municipal bodies, to take police districts for instance?—I think the administration of police should be under Government, as opposed to municipal management.
13350. Of course the telegraph is through the whole colony, and information can be sent to head quarters very quickly. Have you formed any opinion whether there is at all likely to be another outbreak?—If I were to offer an opinion, it would be nothing but my own ideas to go on. I would say, if a gang were formed, that it would be probably with the object of swooping down on some bank; but I do not imagine they would ever go to the length the Kelly gang did.

13351. Do you consider that the fact of the Kellys having obtained the plunder tended to keep them in the field so long?—They could not have remained so long without the money; to have secreted themselves and evaded the police for such a length of time must have cost a great deal of money.

13352. You have heard a good deal of the police movements after the Kellys: do you consider they were specially active and energetic after the Kellys?—I think the best was done that could be, as far as my observation went, which was not very great. I may add to that, that I have never seen any reason to suppose otherwise than that the police had every desire to effect their capture.

13353. I think that is the general feeling, only we have very important evidence here, given by the police themselves, that some of their officers could not be got out at all after the outlaws?—I merely speak of my own experiences.

13354. Do you think the system that was adopted was the best under the circumstances?—The circumstances of the case were so exceptional that it was very difficult for anyone to map out a direct line of conduct; but I am satisfied the efforts that were made were made with an earnest intention to effect the capture of the men. But the conditions of the case were very exceptional; it was difficult to say how best to go to work.

13355. Do you know if there were very strong feelings of hostility evoked towards the Government by the sympathizers being brought up in the way they were—that is, among that class?—There must have been some feeling of the sort, but to what extent it prevailed I do not know. I know the sympathizers themselves were very indignant at their detention; or, if there had been some feeling of the sort, but to what extent it prevailed I do not know. I know the sympathizers themselves were very indignant at their detention; one of them threatened me in this court.

13356. Have you any suggestions that you think would be valuable that you could offer to the Commission, in case there should be another outbreak, as to the course that ought to be pursued?—My opinion is this—that, in order to prevent such an outbreak, parties—say four to six constables—should be stationed at places so that they could communicate from time to time with each other. They might patrol the districts where it was expected anything of that sort might break out, and not less than four men should go together.

13357. Have you seen the progress report of the Commission—we have already recommended that the police should regularly patrol the districts, and meet at certain points, and exchange intelligence?—That is my own idea.

POLICE. 3 p

W. H. Foster,

13358. And Mr. Montford, I understand, is now acting on that, so that they will become acquainted with the place and people?—Exactly; and be in frequent and easy communication with each other.

13359. Have you seen anything that leads you to suppose that there is a likelihood of another outbreak?—No, I have not.

13360. The people themselves are perfectly quiet, as far as you know?—Yes. It must be borne in mind that the Kelly country, so called, is not in Beechworth, and this place was not so frequently visited by them.

13361. They were a good deal about Sebastopol?—Yes.

13363. There is not anything else you wish to say?—I can, if you wish, give some information as to the Sebastopol affair. I was the first man there after the murder. It was on the Sunday, about a little before one o'clock, Mr. Cheshire, who was then in charge of the telegraph station here, came to me. He was very much excited, and said, "The Kelly gang have shot one of the watch party down at Sebastopol." He called me out first and said privately, and I said, "One of the police?" And he said, "No, a man who is helping." I said, "Would you know his name if you heard it?" and he said "Yes." I said, "Aaron Sherritt," and he said, "Yes, Aaron; that is the name." I knew he was operating with the police, and it occurred to my mind he would be the man. I enquired where it was, and immediately ordered a vehicle, and took down the clerk with me and my pagers, and got to the spot as quickly as possible. When I got there, I found a crowd of about 100 or 120 men, women, and children about, and the hut closed. I demanded admission. I announced that I came there as coroner, and was admitted by the police, and went into the hut, and found it in darkness or almost dark. I asked for a light—no, first the question I asked was, "Who is in charge?" and one of the constables said, "I am." At that time I could not make out one man from the other. I said, "I want a light." He said, "Well, we do not care much about a light here, sir." I said, "Well, you must get it." A light was then procured. While the light was being got I said, Where is the body?" and one of them said "You are almost standing on it." I turned round, and by this time my eyes had become accustomed to the darkness, and I saw the corpse close to me. I distinguished the man's teeth, and one of his eyes, all the rest was blood. I then interrogated the men there, two or three of them, and I also spoke to Mrs. Barry, made such enquiry as I could. I cannot remember exactly what questions I put, but they were with the object of ascertaining how the thing occurred, and how it came that the police had not made any attack upon the Kellys. I should like to explain that—I drew this sketch of the building just now. I would like to explain the position of parties.—[The witness handed in the same and explained it.]—My opinion is, had the men made a rush and gone out they would have met a certain death, because those men had only to step a yard or two back and they would be invisible on account of the darkness of the night. The police would naturally suppose there were four outlaws there. This room, according to the enquiry I made immediately after, had had a bright fire in it, and a lighted candle. One of the constables stooped down and pointed to the left eye of the corpse and said, “That is where he got his death wound.” As a matter of fact I learned at the inquest that he received two shots; one entered just above the collar bone and passed backwards through his body, the other went in just above the navel and broke two ribs and went through the kidney. I took that to be the second shot, and he fell back then. As a matter of fact he had no wound in the head at all, but it looked just as if that was where he had been shot, as it was covered with blood.

13364. Were all the four constables in the room at that time?—I could hardly see when I entered. It would be about a quarter to two when I arrived.

13365. What made it dark?—There was only a small window, and, if I recollect rightly, it was covered with calico, not glass. Before I left the hut I made what enquiry I could, and asked the men if they wanted anything, that I was going back to Beechworth and could convey any message, and they said no; and I said also to one of the men, “I feel sorry for you men, you seem to have been caught in a trap”—I think those were the words I used—“without any show”; and the constable I spoke to said, “Thank you.” I was struck with the position myself; they were placed at great disadvantage.

13366. Did it suggest itself to you that constables placed in that position ought to have a sentry in the dark outside?—I think it would have been better.

13367. We have it in evidence that they usually had a sentry, but they were forbidden in this case?—I was informed that the men had strict instructions to remain secreted, and not to let their presence be known; that would perhaps account for the sentry not being employed.

13368. Did you get any further information?—I was going to finish. Before I left, after asking whether they wanted anything, the crowd, somewhat over one hundred, were somewhat clamorous to get in; and I asked the police what they were going to do about these men, and they said it would be better to keep them out; and I said, “Yes.” I said, “Keep them out, I am in charge of the body as coroner”; and I announced to the crowd, “There are four armed police inside; they have my orders not to let anyone enter, so you had better go home”; and fully half of them started before I left. I then started for Beechworth, and about a mile from the hut I met the police from Beechworth—Senior-Constable Mullane and Constable McColl, and others I forget. I do not know that I could give any further information about the proceedings that day. I came back to Beechworth, and about, I think, twenty minutes to six the following morning I was in bed, and I heard a very loud rap at my door, and, before I had time to think about anything, a second and then a third. I jumped to the conclusion that the house had taken fire, and ran down stairs just as I was, and there met, in my own room, Mullane and Ward, who told me of the Kellys being at Glenrowan. Their principal object in coming to me was to ask whether the four men down at Sherritt’s hut, who might he wanted to attend the inquest near Beechworth that day, would have to remain, or whether they should go down to Glenrowan. I said, “Send them to Glenrowan; the inquest can be adjourned, and the fight cannot.” I think those were the words I made use of. Had it been in my power to have gone, I certainly should have gone down also; but while we were talking I heard the whistle of the engine, so I concluded the police would ride down, and I had not the means of riding—afterwards, I learned they had gone by train.

13369. You could not form any opinion upon any point that could have been better carried out than what it was with reference to the hut?—If the approach of those men had been anticipated, of course they could have made better arrangements; but, as I take it, this was called a watch party, and I understood their proceedings were to keep under cover in the daytime, and proceed at night to watch Byrne’s hut, and certainly that was a very wise measure.

13370. I suppose you did not hear anybody saying that their presence was discovered—that it was known there were police there?—I did not hear it; there were all sorts of rumours about in those days.

13371. By Mr. Sadleir. How long have you known me?—Over twenty years.

13372. You have acted as police magistrate in the Gippsland district and this district for several years, where I was in charge of police?—That is the case—four or five years in one place, and about three in the other.

13373. Does your position enable you to form an opinion as to my ability and conduct as a police officer?—I have had during the periods I have been in those districts with Mr. Sadleir every opportunity of observing the mode in which he has discharged his duty. I look upon Mr. Sadleir as a man of high integrity, and a thoroughly conscientious officer, and I am satisfied his duties have been always discharged to the best of his ability. I have a very high opinion of Mr. Sadleir.

The witness withdrew.

Mrs. Ellen Barry sworn and examined.

13374. By the Commission. You are the mother of Mrs. Sherritt, junior?—Yes.

13375. Were you often at Aaron Sherritt’s house during the time the police were there?—Yes, I used to be pretty often there.
13376. You were aware the police were there?—Yes.
13377. Mrs. Sherritt had a difficulty in remembering several things that occurred, and said you would most likely have a better recollection of them than she had?—Yes.
13378. Do you remember provisions being brought to the house?—I do, on some occasions; but then I had never been there when provisions had been brought to the place.
13379. Did you know who brought them?—Yes; a man of Mr. Allen's, the storekeeper, used to.
13380. Did he bring the provisions at night or during the day?—In the daytime. I know he did sometimes, for I used to see the cart going down.
13381. Are you aware whether anybody about knew that the police were in the house?—Well, I do not know of anybody knowing that, unless Aaron's own people knew that they were there. There was a brother of his used to sleep in the house.
13382. Do you know of any outside, besides the two families, that knew that?—No, I do not. I do not think, from what I have heard about the Woolshed since Aaron was shot, that any of the Woolshed people knew it.
13383. Was it possible that Joe Byrne himself might know it?—Well, I could not say.
13384. You have not heard?—No, I have never heard.
13385. We have it in evidence that his brother used to sit on horseback at the back of the house and look at it?—I have often seen him pass and ride on horseback myself, and his youngest brother and sister used to go to school by the place mostly every day, but I never saw them to be watching the place myself.
13386. You remember the night of the murder—you were there?—Yes, I was just about a quarter of an hour inside when a knock came at the door, and Aaron asked who was there. His wife asked who was there first, and this German answered, and she said, "It is Anton Wicks, he has lost his way." Aaron went to the door, and Wicks said, "Come and show me the way, I have lost my way," and Aaron opened the door, and I went to the door with him, and he mentioned a sapling as he was going out, but that was out of a joke. I went with him just to the door behind him. I heard Aaron say, "Who is that?" and as he said the words he seemed as if inclined to come in again. He just had that word out of his mouth when the shot went. I just stood on one side of Aaron and stepped backwards into the middle of the room, and there was another shot then fired through the door, and my daughter was standing just behind the door, and the shot passed her face, and she went back into the bedroom. Aaron stood on the middle of the floor, and I was looking at him, and could see no mark on his face, and I heard no noise. I turned round, and there was a man standing with his back to the door, and he fired a second shot at Aaron, and he fell on the floor.
13387. Did Aaron make any remark?—No, he never spoke, not a word.
13388. Did you know at the time who fired the shot?
13389. Did you know the man who stood at your side?—Not at that time, but I would after Aaron falling on the floor. He stumbled some time before he fell, and then he fell backwards. I went and stooped down, and knelt down just by his head, and I could see he was dying. This man called me by my name, and he said he would put a ball through me and my daughter if we would not tell who was in the room. Duross stood on one side of Aaron and stepped backwards into the middle of the room, and there was another shot then fired through the door, and my daughter was standing just behind the door, and the shot passed her face, and she went back into the bedroom. Aaron stood on the middle of the floor, and I was looking at him, and could see no mark on his face, and I heard no noise. I turned round, and there was a man standing with his back to the door, and he fired a second shot at Aaron, and he fell on the floor.
13390. Did you go out to see this man outside, once or twice, during the night?—Yes, I asked Byrne to bring the man out of the bedroom, for my daughter had told him it was a working man looking for work and doing; they were stooping looking for firearms, and beckoned to me to go outside.
13391. Did he tell you with what object he wanted you to open the front door?—No. I could see a man with the gun just in front. I asked him to let me outside, and he said, "All right." So when I went outside I saw Wicks standing by the chimney outside.
13392. Was Wicks handcuffed?—Yes, he was, but I could not see at the time, it was too dark; but I could see Byrne taking them off.
13393. Did you carry any message from the men to the me in the bedroom?—Yes, Byrne said to me outside, "I am satisfied now I wanted that fellow."—that was Aaron. "Well, Joe," I said, "I never heard Aaron say anything against you." And he said, "He would do me harm if he could; he did his best."
there more, and I said no. He said, “What are their names?” and I said, “I do not know.” He said, “How green you are; and if you be telling me lies I will murder both of you.” So after she coming out he asked her again. Then he sent my daughter in, after a bit, and while she was in he heard them whispering and the clicking of the guns. So when she came out again, after my telling him there were two men—I was frightened to say one after he heard the clicking, because he would have murdered me. She came out, and he asked how many were in the room, and I nudged her, and she said nothing. And he said, “If you tell me lies, I will be murdering the both of you.” He fired through the place again, and said he would riddle the —— house; and he sang out to them to come out or he would shoot them down like —— dogs.

13397. What was the house built of?—Weatherboards and shingles.
13398. And how was the inside finished?—A kind of plaster inside the weatherboards.
13399. Were there any sticks nailed on to the uprights to hold the plaster?—Yes, I think so; it was weatherboards all round.
13400. What happened then when the police would not come out?—He used to place me in front of him, and when he sent me in he used to put my daughter in front of him—that was Byrne, but Kelly did not do that; and he went round soon after that to look for bushes to set fire to the place.
13401. Could the police have fired at them at any time with certainty?—If they had their firearms ready at the time Byrne came in after Aaron, if they had come to the door and fired then; but they could not have had their firearms ready then, it all happened so quickly.
13402. What did the police do with you?—Byrne sent in my daughter after some time, and she was kept inside.
13403. Did you go in after that?—I did after some time.
13404. Did they keep you inside sometimes?—Well, they just got me by the clothes, and one of the men—Dowling—said, “Stop inside, and if they set fire to the place, they would let the both of us out.” They said they did not think they would set fire to the place while women were inside, so I stopped in.
13405. Did they put you under the bed for security?—No, I was not under the bed, I was alongside.
13406. Duross put his hand to me and just shoved me slightly, but not under the bed. My daughter was under the bed.
13407. Do you remember what occurred after?—Before I came in the last time, Dan Kelly had the bushes outside the room where the men were; he took out a box of matches and struck a match, and the wind blew it out. When I saw him strike the match I said, “If you set fire to the house, and the girl gets shot or burned, you can just kill me along with them.” Dan said nothing at the time, but some time after he sang out to Byrne to send me inside, and I said it was no use my going in—that I would be burned with the rest; and he said he would see about that. So I went in, and we all remained inside till daylight.
13408. Did you think they would be able to burn the house at the time?—Well, I could not say, I am sure. Byrne asked me if there was kerosene in the place, did we burn it; and I said, “No, we burn candles.”
13409. Did the police have any consultation as to what was best to be done when you were in the room?—Well, I heard Constable Armstrong say, “Well, boys, I will go out, if you will come with me,” and the other men said they could do no good, that if they went out they would be shot, the night was too dark, and that they had better wait till morning.
13410. Was he not in charge?—Yes.
13411. Are you quite sure he said that?—Yes, I am quite sure he said that, because I heard it. I was not far from him at the time.
13412. Did any of the constables offer to him to go out while you were there?—No, I did not hear any, but of course I was the last that was kept inside. I do not think the men would have had any chance of doing anything by rushing out; I think they would have been shot; the night was very dark.
13413. They would be long enough in the light for the others to take aim?—The only chance was in the commencement, when Byrne came and shot Aaron.
13414. Was the front of the house guarded at all while Kelly was gathering the bushes?—I only saw the two.
13415. Did you tell the constables about the fire?—They could hear it themselves, and could hear them talk; they did not ask me who was outside. I am sure they must have known it was the outlaws.
13416. Did they ask the number of people?—No, they did not, but I thought the four outlaws were there myself. During the night, some time after I had gone out, they were going to take the handcuffs off Wicks, and Byrne put his hand in his pocket and searched for the key, and said, “I have not got the key.” Dan searched his pockets, and he had not got it, and he went round to the front of the place, and after some time came back and handed the key to Byrne, and he took the handcuffs off Wicks. Byrne said to me at the time, “Do not be frightened, I will not shoot you, I only want the men in the house. Here is a man (Wicks) who tried to lag me for taking his horse, but I am not going to shoot him.”
13417. Did you ever hear any cause assigned why they wished to shoot Aaron Sherritt—any reason?—Well, no, unless they shot him for being with the police. They must have discovered it some way.
13418. You did not hear how they discovered it?—No.
13419. Did you ever hear of a quarrel between Mrs. Byrne and Aaron Sherritt, about a horse?—Yes, I heard something about it.
No, I did not ever hear anything.

13423. You did not live with your daughter, you were only visiting that night?—Yes. I lived a mile further up the road, nearer to Beechworth.

13424. How far is it to where Aaron lived from here?—About seven miles.

13425. Have you heard any reports lately that the sympathizers, or any of them, are likely to break out again?—Well, no; unless what I see in the papers sometimes.

13426. Everything seems to be quiet in the district?—Yes.

13427. Is there anything that has occurred that you have seen misrepresented in the papers that you would like to speak of?—Yes. Constable Duross in his evidence said that Byrne was sending me inside to see if the bullet had gone through the room, and I said I was frightened they would shoot me. It was to the side of the room he was sending me to, to see if the board was knocked off, and once after he fired two shots. I was frightened it might be off, and that the police might think it was one of the outlaws coming, and fire. At this time the outlaws knew there were men in the room.

13428. That was simply he did not exactly catch what the message was?—Yes. I came back and told him the board was not knocked off.

13429. What object did you think the police had in keeping you in?—I think it was done to prevent the outlaws setting fire to the place. After the police kept my daughter in, when I saw Dan gathering up the bushes, I said to Byrne for them not to burn the house. They wanted to, and I said, “My daughter will be burned,” and he said, “Well, call her out.” So I called out to her, and she answered me a couple of times, and after that she did not answer. She said she would not be let; and Byrne said they were cowardly dogs screening themselves with a woman, and Byrne loaded his gun and said he would riddle the —— house. I said, “Do not fire through the room, or you will shoot my daughter,” so he did not fire through the room after that. There might have been shots fired in the front of the place, but I did not know about it. He said when he came first, after I went out first, that I had not a good word for him, and that he was told my daughter used to go about blowing about what her husband would do when he would catch him. But that was all false, and I said, “I never said anything about you, Joe, except, when I heard you were with the Kellys, I said I was sorry you had not more sense.” That was when I heard it through the children at the school that he had joined the outlaws.

13430. Did you ever see Wallace, the teacher, about?—He came to my place a couple of times to see Aaron. I do not know what business he had, and he called Aaron out. Aaron was living with me for a few months after he was married before he went to live in this house. Aaron never told me what passed between them.

13431. You never heard Wallace speak himself?—No, they never talked inside.

13432. By Constable Alexander.—Which of the police was the means of keeping you in the house?—Constables Duross and Dowling. It was between the both of them.

13433. Did I interfere in any way?—No, you did not, you were over the other side of the room.

13434. Did I say what when Armstrong asked me to go out?—Well, I do not know exactly what you said, but I heard Dowling and Duross say they could do nothing by going out.

13435. You did not hear what I said?—No, I could not hear well what you said. I do not know whether you spoke or not. I was next to those two men.

13436. Are you sure Armstrong volunteered to go out?—Yes.

13437. Are you sure he did not ask us if we would go out?—He said, “Well, boys, if you will go out, I will follow you,” and a couple of the men said they could do no good, the night was too dark.

13438. Did I say so?—I did not say you said so.

13439. By the commission.—Is there anything else you wish to say?—There are a couple of words I would like to say privately.

The room was cleared.
13443. How old was he?—I think twenty-five years.

13444. Would they have been better satisfied if he had married Miss Byrne?—I do not think they eared for him to get married at all, that is about the size of it.

13445. Your daughter was just about six months married?—Yes.

13446. Is there any reason that you can assign other than that for their differences with him?—No; unless just that they were not good friends with him.

13447. You do not think his own friends would let the outlaws know he was harboring the police?—I do not know; but I know he seemed in dread of them, and he thought his brother John had a down on him. Of course I mentioned it to a sister of his since, and she used to say he said it out of a lark; but still Aaron always said it was he that took the saddle. John was down with the police with horses once.

13448. Mrs. Byrne was prosecuted for having that saddle?—Yes.

13449. Did Aaron appear to be in dread of his life, or afraid they would shoot him?—No, he did not; but for about a couple of weeks before he was shot he seemed to be looking downhearted; and I said, “You do not look well”; and I said, “Perhaps it does not agree with you to be out at nights”; and he said it did not matter; and I had a dream of bad before that—I dreamed that the Kellys came and stuck up his place, and I told him that, and he said, “That is how I believe it will be before long.” That is all I ever heard from him.

13450. He never made remarks to lead you to believe he knew where Byrne and Dan Kelly were staying?—No. I said at one time that the Kellys had left the country—at the time there was not much about them in the papers—and he said, “They have not left the country, and you will soon hear of them turning up again,” and that was about three weeks before he was shot.

13451. Do you think he gave all the information he could to the police?—I do, because he believed in the police, and I believe he did all he could for them.

13452. Did you ever hear anything about the Kellys having armour before they came out at Glenrowan?—No; the two outlaws at Aaron’s had no armour on, for they looked too slight for it.

13453. You never heard who made the armour?—No, I never did.

13454. Is there anything else you wish to say?—No.

13455. Is your daughter living with you now?—Yes; she was not very strong, and I have a large family to look after at my place, so I could not stay with her at Beechworth. She has not had good health since the occurrence.

13456. Do they keep the selection on where he was shot?—No, he sold that before he was married.

The witness withdrew.

Patrick Allen sworn and examined.

Patrick Allen, 20th July 1881.

13457. By the Commission. What are you?—A storekeeper in Beechworth.

13458. Do you remember the time when the police were in the cave?—Yes, very well.

13459. And in Sherritt’s place?—Yes.

13460. Were you supplying them with provisions in both cases?—Yes.

13461. Take the cave first—how did you bring the provisions to them in the cave?—Well, I sent them on a good many occasions as far as Mrs. Sherritt’s house, and then they were to be taken from there by Mrs. Sherritt’s people.

13462. How far is the cave from Mrs. Sherritt’s?—About two or three miles; somewhere about that.

13463. The provisions went out during the day?—Yes, and sometimes at night. I might state I generally sent out my cart often that way, and that at the time there were not many remarks passed on it going up.

13464. During the time they were in the cave, and you were supplying them with provisions, did you hear any remarks made that would lead you to suppose it was known they were there?—I never heard the slightest remarks. I do not believe it was known they were there.

13465. You knew they were there?—I did. I might say, before going any further, that I do not wish my name to appear at all in the papers over this affair, because I have lost a good deal over it already. What I did all along was because of my friend Detective Ward, whom I have known for nineteen years.

13466. I suppose you supplied provisions to the police just in the way of business?—I have supplied the police for ten years.

13467. This was nothing extraordinary?—No.

13468. How would it affect you through the sympathizers?—Yes, there are plenty of them about here now saying I was helping the police. I am not one of those that is very much frightened about that sort of thing, but you may put it in this way, that it does not look well for a business man.

13469. But I presume you would have supplied anybody in the same way?—Yes. I am quite prepared to tell you anything at all that I can.
13470. Were you supplying the police when they were in Aaron Sherritt’s house?—Yes.
13471. You were aware the police were there all the time?—I was.
13472. Did you hear any rumour or any expression at all that would lead you to suppose that anybody else knew except those directly interested?—No, I never heard nor suspected that it was found out at all.
13473. At what times did you take the provisions to Aaron Sherritt’s place?—Well, it was generally in the daytime, but, at that time and since, I was sending my cart down to that place, and was supplying nine or ten families down there, so there was no remark about my going there.
13474. Do you think it was possible people would notice your going to Aaron Sherritt’s?—I do not believe it. I never anything to lead me to that conclusion. I had sent things for himself before, and I was supplying other families within a quarter of a mile of the place. In fact, if I had no goods for him I used to get the boy to call at other places, and always covered over what he had in the cart, in order that it would not be seen. I got orders from Mr. Ward to keep it as secret as possible, and it was my interest to do so.
13475. Do you know anything of the Chinese storekeeper on the Buckland who is said to have supplied provisions to the Kellys?—No.
13476. Had you at any time any information with reference to the outlaws, whether they were out in the country?—I have had information several times from Sherritt who was shot. He brought information to me for Detective Ward, simply because he was frightened to be seen speaking to Ward, and he often came to myself and left messages, which I conveyed to Ward, and never told to anybody else.

13477. Did they ever turn out any good?—Yes, I believe a great many things he told me were proved to be true after.

13478. Did he tell them within a reasonable time, so that the police could act upon them?—I never knew him tell anything that there was not action taken on as soon after as possible.
13479. Then it was pretty well known that they were not out of the country?—That was the general opinion—that they were in the country.
13480. I suppose you are about a good deal among the people now?—Yes.
13481. Meeting everybody and speaking generally over these matters. Is there any apparent fear at all of another outbreak?—I do not think so—not the slightest here.
13482. You think the place is just as quiet as ever it was?—I think so.
13483. And likely to remain so?—I think so.
13484. Do you think a reasonable terror would be in people’s minds on account of the punishment those men got?—Oh, yes, I think that would have a good deal to do with it. Here about Beechworth we were never very much frightened; it was more down the other way, towards Greta.
13485. But you would hear if there was anything moving?—Yes.
13486. There seems to be another idea—that they have not a leader they would have confidence in to bring them through as Ned Kelly did?—Yes, that is the general opinion, unless his brother did it. I think they have had quite enough of it.
13487. Have you anything you wish to add?—I just might simply state as to what appeared in the public press. A constable, giving evidence before you in Melbourne, stated that Detective Ward, or that some one said that Detective Ward, kept the officers running about simply to give me custom. That was a very false statement to make, and I wish to say I have been living in Beechworth for eleven years, and could call in all the officers. Though Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare did not know me personally, they have placed a great deal of confidence in me, as I was getting information and giving it to Ward, and keeping it quiet all along, and I think it is very bad for a fellow like that to make such a statement. Of course, if the police did not come to me, whom would they come to to keep it quiet after I had served them for ten years, and no one could keep it quieter than I did? That statement is a thing that annoyed me there is no foundation for it in the world. This very man that made the remark was one of the men who were there at Sherritt’s but the night he was shot. I can prove beyond a doubt, if there is any doubt in your minds, that my transactions with the police force were legitimate from beginning to end.
13488. There is not the slightest doubt about that?—That is all right then.
13489. By Mr. Nicolson.—So far as you have had opportunities of knowing, are you aware of the time that the fact of the police being concealed in the cave became known to any of the public?—Not till it was all over, to the best of my knowledge. I never heard anything to show it was known they were there, and I do not believe it was known till after they had left.

The witness withdrew.

Enoch Downes sworn and examined.

The Witness.—Before giving evidence, I think it would be necessary not to publish it, because I am a truant officer travelling round the district, and it might injure me.

13490. By the commission.—It appears that you were at Byrne’s house prior to the murder of Aaron Sherritt—will you tell what occurred?—I had to investigate a case of default for absence from school on the 12th November 1879. I went there on horseback, and Mrs. Byrne was in the garden, so we had a little conversation. I asked about the reason of her boy’s non-attendance at school, and cautioned her in case of any further default, and said there would be no prosecution that time, that I merely warned her against any further default. After that she asked me if I would go inside and have a cup of tea. Patrick Byrne put the horse in the garden, and I went inside and waited till she made a cup of tea, and stayed there about a couple of hours while the horse was feeding; so the conversation came up about the outlaws. I was a little cautious first to start the subject, but gradually it came up, and the Lancefield robbery was just on, and we were joking and talking away, and she got a little lively, and she said the Lancefield robbers must be a lot of fools to lose the money after they got it. Then it came to her own son and reference to him, and I said to her, “Well, your son had no reason to join the outlaws—the Kellys; there is some excuse for them.” In fact, I spoke a little freely about the action of the judge in passing sentence on the Kellys’ mother at that time I spoke feelingly on the action, and I told her so very freely. I thought if policy had been used, or consideration for the mother shown, that two or three months would have been ample. So from that I spoke about her own son, that she was quite right in saving him if she could; well, she hesitated about that, and she did not know whether she would or not; and there was something I was satisfied about that caused her to make up her mind that she would let her son go. She said he had made his bed, and must lie in it—that was in reference to the horse-stealing case. She said it was a dodge of that—Ward; he was using all sorts of dodges to bring Joe back again to have revenge on Sherritt, but she said they would wait their own time, and I was satisfied from her words and actions that they intended to have Sherritt, and that Ward was not very safe. She said the horse-stealing case was a dodge to catch the outlaws; there was a horse-stealing case at the time against Sherritt by Mrs. Byrne. She said it was a dodge of that—Ward, but it would not take, and of course she was very revengeful. I was satisfied from what she said that they would come back for Sherritt, and Ward was not very safe. I communicated that information to Detective Ward. My reasons for doing so—I hesitated at first, for I knew that the gang intended to have revenge on Ward for the course he had taken in attempting their capture, and it was on that account I gave the information, and the other reason that they intended to have Sherritt’s life. I was not aware I was coming here to come back for Sherritt, and Ward was not very safe. I communicated that information to Detective Ward.

20th July 1881.

13493. That son remained at home after?—Yes.

13494. What led you to believe they had the money?—There was a change about the place, and I had repeatedly seen them when I had been down the Woolshed. One occasion there was nobody there, and I met the young fellows coming from Beechworth with drapery goods, and on another occasion I saw the improvements about the house. Another thing, so far as regards Mrs. Byrne’s action with Ward, I was satisfied that he was not very safe in going in that quarter. Since that, some time after, coming from the Woolshed, I saw Ward in the dusk of the evening going there. I thought to myself that he was rather foolish to go.

13495. They seemed to have a down on Ward?—Yes, what I have said was her words.

13496. You did not hear anything particular just before Aaron Sherritt’s murder?—No. I was not aware that there was any dodge at all, but Mrs. Byrne was right in her surmises, but I told Ward on that evening that there would be no fear of them coming back yet awhile for Sherritt. She said the dodge would not take, it was a matter of time.

13497. There was nothing further occurred within your knowledge or that you heard of just prior to the murder of Aaron Sherritt?—No.

13498. This was the whole?—Yes.

13499. You are through the district a good deal as truant officer?—Yes, I travel over Benambra and the Ovens.

13500. You hear people’s opinions pretty freely expressed?—Yes.

13501. Is there any idea that there is any probability of another outbreak?—I do not think so. There is a feeling of security. I do not think there is any idea of the sort I think the idea is the other way.

13502. That they would not be safe at all in breaking out?—Yes. I must say those police who travel round the district, so far as the heads of the police in charge of various stations, I am firmly convinced that a better class of men for the position could not be chosen. Perhaps I am wrong in giving any opinion of that sort.

13503. No, not at all. You have been round through the district a good deal, and would hear information about the Kellys—hear people speaking about them?—Yes.

13504. Have you ever heard yet, in your rambles, anything certain as to who made the armour for the Kellys?—No, I have not. It is out of my district; it is in Greta district.
13505. Are you sure?—Yes.

13506. Then you must have heard something?—Perhaps I am wrong in saying I never heard. A gentleman told me the name of the person that made it—a blacksmith at Greta. It was merely a rumour.

13507. You simply had the opinion that they had the intention to murder Aaron Sherritt?—I was certain of it.

13508. And you reported it as soon as possible?—I did of course; my district is not what is called the Kelly country.

Patrick Mullane, 20th July 1881.

13509. By the Commission. What are you?—Senior-constable of police, stationed at Beechworth.

Patrick Mullane sworn and examined.

13510. How long have you been in Beechworth?—I have been in the North-Eastern district since 1869, with the exception of about two years I was in the Geelong and Bourke districts.

13511. You were actively engaged during the whole Kelly outbreak?—I was.

13512. You remember the cave party?—I do.

13513. Were they under you?—I was at this station when they were sent out.

13514. We wish to confine ourselves principally to that matter, unless you have any important evidence on other points. Before dealing with that, is there anything you wish to speak of?—Nothing, except as to the different parties I was on.

13515. Were you out with search parties with Mr. Hare?—I was out with a search party when Mr. Hare was in the district. He sent me out on the Fern Hill.

13516. What number was in your search party?—I think eight and myself.

13517. Did you go out upon any information at all?—We did not, that I was aware of.

13518. You just scoured the country?—Yes.

13519. Did you think there was any probability of your getting up to the outlaws by that means?—There was a probability that we would get to them; but I think the principal object was to harass them, and keep them in the back country. There was a possibility of our dropping across them in many places, and we knew we were close to them at different times.

13520. Did you know anything of that at the time?—We did. I remember, with this party, going to Fern Hill, we came to a fire on the ranges, near a pool of water. Some of the wood had been thrown into the water to put out the fire. We put a tracker on the tracks, but he seemed not to our satisfaction to follow the tracks, as if he was not inclined to do so, and we had to drop the tracks, he did not follow them, though they were quite fresh at the time. I am confident the party that had been there were not twenty minutes gone, and they must have seen us or heard us coming.

13521. In what way did you go out through the country—did you follow the roads or spread out?—We went as quietly as we could, to prevent the press getting the information that we were going and we went back roads till we got beyond settlement, and then circled a defined portion of the country.

13522. How did you prosecute the search?—When we had got among the ranges we would spread out and cover as much ground as we could without losing each other, and search it along as we went.

13523. How wide would you spread over the country when you were out?—We would be at times thirty or forty yards apart and at other times not more than seven, and sometimes together where it was necessary for one to go on the track of the others to get through portions of the country.

13524. Were you out in any of these parties that Mr. Nicolson organized?—The first one I went out with was by Mr. Nicolson's directions, and he joined us himself afterwards. That was to the Murray Flats, on the 31st October 1878.

13525. How many were in that party?—I think seven or eight.

13526. Practically, at first the same system was followed by both Mr. Hare and Mr. Nicolson?—Yes, the same system of searching was followed at first, and then it was dropped afterwards.

13527. What change was there in it when Mr. Nicolson came up the second time?—He did not send out search parties, and he employed agents to obtain private information. Those agents were at different parts of the district, and he kept the black trackers in Benalla with Mr. O'Connor.

13528. Did you know that Sherritt was an agent?—I did.

13529. Did you know anything of his previous character?—I did.

13530. What character did he bear?—His character was bad. In connection with Detective Ward, we had him convicted at this court and sentenced to six months imprisonment for having meat in his possession for which he could not account. I may mention that he cut the brand from the hide of the beast, and that prevented us from bringing the more serious charge of cattle-stealing against him, and also Byrne, who was charged with him.

13531. Then did it not astonish you that he should shoot Sherritt—as if he doubted him?—No, it did not. At another time I arrested him for a serious assault on a Chinaman, but they were discharged at the sittings of the Supreme Court because the evidence was considered insufficient. They were committed for trial and afterwards discharged, and previous to that again Byrne himself was charged by Weekes with illegally using a horse of his, and he got the option of a fine and paid it.
13532. Did you go out during the time Captain Standish was up?—I did. Captain Standish was in Benalla during the time that the search parties were out.

13533. He continued acting upon the system of Mr. Hare; in fact, they were together at Benalla at the time?—Yes.

13534. Were you one of Mr. Brook Smith's party?—The only party I was with that he had charge of was one that started from Wangaratta one afternoon and went to Peechelba. There were fourteen or sixteen men, and the party divided there. We started from Wangaratta about three or four o'clock in the afternoon of, I think, the 6th November 1878.

13535. Will you describe how you proceeded, as nearly as you can?—We left Wangaratta; we were prepared to leave early in the day, but did not leave till three o'clock.

13536. How did you come to remain till three?—I did not know the cause of the delay, but we were waiting for Mr. Smith to start; and I believe he was in consultation with some other officer in Wangaratta at the time, but of that I would not be certain.

13537. Did you find any tracks?—We divided at Peechelba, and our party went to Lake Rowan and Mr. Smith's party to Yarrawonga.

13538. So that you had nothing further to do with that party?—No. Some time after I was with another party that started from Wangaratta with Mr. Brook Smith, and on that occasion Mr. Nicolson was with it, and we went to Warby Ranges. We joined Mr. Sadleir with another party from Benalla, and some tracks were pointed out to the black trackers. The tracks were followed for a short distance by the trackers; they then left off and went into a spring that was there, and, like the other occasion, they did not seem inclined to follow the tracks, and the tracks were dropped.

13539. Were they new tracks?—Perhaps a day or two old, or perhaps older.

13540. Could you have followed the tracks without the trackers?—We could not.

13541. Then, unless you have anything of exceptional interest, we will come to the cave party?—The first party left Beechworth for the cave on the 3rd of December 1879.

13542. How many were there in the cave?—Four went down—Alexander, Barry, Cox, and Canny.

13543. What was to be their special duty?—They were to remain in the cave during the day, and when night came on they were to watch Mrs. Byrne's house.

13544. How far was the cave from Mrs. Byrne's house?—About a mile or a mile and a half.

13545. Under what instructions were they?—Constable Alexander was in charge of that party. We were under the impression that Byrne used to visit his mother's house, and Alexander was instructed that, if Byrne was found coming to the house, he was to secure him, if possible; if the other outlaws and himself were in company, they were to fire at and shoot them—Ned Kelly in particular, the tallest of the men. They were to be on their guard, not to allow themselves to be surprised on any account; also, to keep away from observation, so that neither Mrs. Byrne nor any person else would be aware of their presence there. They got arms, and they were to keep them and be always ready in case any attack should be made on them.

13546. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was there a sentry to be kept at the cave?—I never heard of any instructions to keep one.

13547. Was there one kept?—I did not know of it.

13548. Do you not recollect that?—No.

13549. By the Commission.—Those were the whole instructions?—Yes.

13550. Did they adhere to those pretty carefully?—For two hours the man in charge was instructed to act by Mr. Nicolson and Mr. O'Connor, myself and Detective Ward, I believe, and the other men were called afterwards, before they started out, and all received those instructions.

13551. Did they carry out those instructions?—I am not aware whether they did or not. I never visited them in the cave afterwards; Detective Ward did so.

13552. Did you ever hear it was just possible they might have been found out there?—It was possible that they could be found out, but I never heard that they were until afterwards.

13553. What was the first notice that you got?—Some person telling either Captain Standish or Mr. Hare at the depot that the party were there watching.

13554. Did you hear anything at all about it outside?—I heard it from no person outside of Mr. Allen, the storekeeper from whom we got the goods, the Sherritt family, Mrs. Barry, and a Mr. Willis who came up to me one night from Wangaratta.

13555. What was he?—Saddler, and at one time hotelkeeper at Wangaratta.

13556. How did he come by the knowledge?—He said some person told him, but he would not tell me why. My belief at the time was that it came from some member of the police in the cave, because some of the Wangaratta police came up here on duty at the time. However, he said he was aware of it at the time, and he told me so. On the 1st of April 1880 that party was withdrawn from the cave.

POLICE

3 Q

Patrick Mullane, continued,
20th July 1881.

13557. Did none of the police ever tell you that Mrs. Byrne was watching them?—They did not; they gave me no information on that subject whatever, and the first information I had of it was when the reports were called for by Detective Ward after the party had returned from the cave.
13558. Did they give you any information then?—The reports were asked for by a telegram from Ward from Benalla, calling on the men who had been in the cave for separate reports. In those reports Constables Barry, Falkiner, and Alexander stated that they were under the impression, that they believed that Mrs. Byrne was aware that they were watching her house.

13559. Did you ever hear of one of them having met Mrs. Byrne?—I heard that Mrs. Byrne went into the camp of the men who were some twelve months out before watching her house also, but I never heard that she was aware of the presence of the men in the camp except what I state now through those reports.

13560. Did you ever hear of her coming to where Aaron Sherritt was lying on the ground?—That was the time I refer to.

13561. Was it the same cave?—No, a different place altogether.

13562. Did those reports come in to you?—They did.

13563. There were more than four men—there were two detachments?—Yes, one to relieve the other.

13564. Alexander, Hagger, Armstrong, Barry, Cox, Falkiner, McHugh, and Dixon. Those were the whole of the police there?—Yes, some of those men belonged to the station. Men were scarce, and the station men used to be out there at times to do duty.

13565. Did those men send in reports to you?—Yes, I received, I think, four reports.

13566. Whom were they from?—One was from Barry, one from Falkiner, one from Armstrong, one from Alexander, and one from McHugh. Falkiner’s report, I think, came a day or two afterwards.

13567. What did they report to you?—I received a telegram calling on me for a report as to the nature of their duties—“Call on the special duty men for separate reports as to the nature of their duty. Hagger knows what to say.”

13568. Were the reports all satisfactory?—The reports were not satisfactory that I obtained at first, and I returned Barry’s to give me what was called for—the nature of the duties they performed. At first I told Hagger to get those reports, as he was in the office at the time. I got the telegram, and I showed him the telegram, and told him to get the reports. He went to the barrack-room, and said the men did not wish to give them. He did not assign any reason, and I then went to the men and told them they would have to give them, that they were called on to give them.

13569. In what way were they not satisfactory?—Because they did not state the duty.

13570. That was all the reason?—That was the simple reason and no other.

13571. In what way were the reports returned—what was in them that was not correct?—The first report I obtained from Barry. I think it stated that he did not know what he was called on to report, but that he would speak to Mr. Nicolson and answer any questions he was called on. That was not satisfactory. This is one also that I noted and returned:—“I respectfully report to the Superintendent that I have this day been called on for a report by Senior-Constable Mullane relative to the special duty I have been engaged on since the 13th December 1879. I am at a loss to know what to report about, as I am under the impression the Superintendent is well aware of the duty I have been engaged on, and how it was carried on. As I am returning to Benalla this evening, I will be most willing to answer any questions put to me by either the Superintendent or the Assistant Commissioner of Police.” This is from Constable Falkiner, dated 2nd April 1880. My minute on that is:—“What Constable Falkiner, 2784, is called on to report is whether it came to his knowledge that the friends of the outlaws were aware of the presence of the police at Sebastopol.—P. MULLANE, M.C., 2/4/80.”

13572. What did Falkiner report?—I read his first report, and this is the second one:—“April 2nd 1880.—Report of Constable Falkiner (2784) relative to special duty, and Senior-Constable Mullane’s memo. on the attached report. I beg to report to the Superintendent that the Sherritts have been continually backwards and forwards together at Byr, and as much as sleeping together, and, from their intimacy together, it has been impossible to say this duty has been unknown to the outlaws’ friends.”

13573. Was that report expected?—Yes. Detective Ward arrived then from Benalla, and I handed over the reports to him.

13574. Did Constable Barry report?—He did.

13575. What did he report?—His report was something similar to that; but he reported he was not certain what to report. I almost forget what it was.

13576. Is that Barry’s—[handing a paper to the witness]?—The witness read the same?—Yes, that is it, and he then gave a second one [both inserted above].

13577. What did you do with that second one?—I also gave that to Detective Ward. I gave the whole of the reports I received to him.

13578. You do not know why that report was not amongst the papers that were in the police office?—I do not. Ward afterwards told me that the reports were required by Mr. Nicolson in order to make a good entry on the record-sheets of the constables, because their duties were of a severe nature.

13579. What the Commission have to deal with now is that those reports which you have in your hand now of Barry’s were amongst the reports; they were in Barry’s possession, and he handed them in to us; they found their way back to Barry?—My opinion is that the report did not suit, or that it was not what Ward wanted, that he went to the barrack-room and got other reports, and gave those back to the constables.

13580. But then there is no report from Barry at all?—That is all the account I can give of their getting into Barry’s possession.

13581. You do not know anything further about that?—No, I do not.

13582. Here is the report from Barry—[reading the same, inserted previously] see that that is a direct contradiction of the other returned?—Yes.
13583. He has given evidence that he was compelled to give that report?—He could not be compelled.
13584. Well, that the others were returned to him, and he was told they would not be accepted, and he was also told what report to make, and that was the report he made. He reported before that he believed they were discovered?—Yes.

13585. Now he reports under pressure this—you know nothing of this?—No.
13586. It is a fraud on the face of it?—Yes, it is, but he would not be compelled to do that if he did not like.
13587. It was to his advantage to send in a favorable report like that?—Yes, it would be to his advantage if the reports were required for that purpose. I was glad to hear that when I was told that by Ward, because the nature of the duties was very severe, and I was very glad to hear it was to be favorably mentioned. Of course if they were discovered there would be a certain amount of blame attachable to them, but it might be without any fault of their own.
13588. To your own certain knowledge, there were seven or eight people going through the country who knew they were there?—Yes.
13589. And whose families were going to school?—The Sherritt family went to a different school. The Barry family were going to school with the Byrnes, but I am not aware they knew all about the cave party.
13590. Did not Sherritt and Mrs. Sherritt?—Yes, of course.
13591. Then the Barry family were going with the Byrne family to school—I think the cave party was known to Mrs. Sherritt, junior.
13592. Mrs. Sherritt, senior, says she knew it well?—Yes, it was to there the provisions used to go. I was not aware that Mrs. Barry was aware of the cave party. I could not say whether Aaron Sherritt kept it a secret from his wife or not.
13593. That did not derogate in any way from the proper way the police did their duty, if those people did tell it outside?—Certainly not.
13594. That is why we want to know why a report was to be sent in that was not in accordance with this man’s idea of truth; why was pressure put on him?—I cannot tell. I may say I would have sent those reports to Benalla that I minuted if Ward had not appealed.
13595. Now coming to the Sherritt party. You had the ordering of the party in Sherritt’s house; they were sent out from here?—Yes.
13596. You were aware who were there and what their duty was?—Yes.
13597. Had they any instructions, written or verbal?—Verbal on both occasions. The same men were in charge at the house that were in charge at the cave, so the instructions for one party would answer for the other as well—they were alike.
13598. Were you aware at any time whether the Byrne family knew that they were in that house?—I was not.
13599. You heard no information at all that would lead you to suppose they knew of it?—I have not, and my conviction up to the present time is that the Byrne family did not know they were in the house.
13600. Had they any instructions to keep a sentry?—They had not. In my opinion, a sentry would defeat the object for which they were there.
13601. Suppose a man had been posted during the night in one of the back premises?—They were to leave the house after dark, as soon as it became dark, and go to Byrne’s; and a sentry was not considered necessary in the day; and it was so convenient to the road, that even if a sentry went out after dusk, it was very likely he would be seen, and that would spoil the whole arrangement.
13602. Then those men were not supposed to be in the house after eight o’clock at night?—After dark.
13603. Of course we have evidence that Byrne came about half-past six or seven?—Yes, six.
13604. And that the men were besieged in the house during the whole of that night?—Yes.
13605. Do you consider, from your knowledge of the police and the duties of the police, that those men did their duty?—I do not consider that they did do their duty. I do not think that any person would blame the men much for not going out during the night, for I think if they were to attempt it while the outlaws were there they had no possibility of escape between the two doors; but I do blame them very much when it got light in the morning that they did not leave the house and bring in information to Beechworth.
13606. It was about seven miles away?—Yes. Armstrong arrived from the Gap at half-past one; perhaps a little after.
13607. Would it not suggest to you the possibility of men being posted close about, that they would pick off any man trying to come, even though they did not appear about the house. That when that desperate act was done the men might be posted in advantageous positions for shooting the men down?—Yes, most likely when they committed that act they would remain there some time.
13608. I refer to daylight?—In daylight I consider they were on equal terms with them, and that they ought to be able to take their own part, and not only that but to attack and capture the outlaws.

13609. In daylight, if they had gone out, they could have defended themselves and taken the others; they could have put themselves in skirmishing order?—Yes, sufficiently divided; at all events they would have done their duty.

13610. Did you ever hear that Aaron Sherritt was very likely to be shot?—I did; Mrs. Sherritt, senior, brought that information in, and she told us it was given to her from Joe Byrne.

13611. You approved of the idea of keeping those men watching Byrne’s house, from information received?—I did.

13612. You expected them to come?—Yes, and not only that but I thought they would have got them long before; I never expected they would have had to wait so long, because from the information we received we were confident they were about the ranges.

13613. Had the Byrnes any dogs?—Yes.

13614. Did not they give alarm?—We poisoned the dogs at one time, but we considered it unwise because of the Act, and Mrs. Byrne being aware of the party being about would have done harm.

13615. Suppose you had gone over a wide area, and poisoned the dogs?—You might be doing an injustice to a man you ought not to injure. A man might be a friend of ours and have a good dog—I would not like to come and poison his dog. All that was considered, and it was considered advisable not to poison the dogs.

13616. As you were under the impression that Dan Kelly and Byrne were about that district, would it not have been better to pick six first-class men for that position, and not raw recruits from Melbourne?—It is not because a man is a raw recruit that he is a bad man; you cannot tell what a man is till he is tried. There was Armstrong himself; I do not think any man had a better character of being a good man than he had.

13617. You were saying that you had information about the determination of Byrne to shoot Sherritt?—Yes.

13618. What steps did you take upon that information?—That information was sent to Mr. Nicolson by a telegram, and he came up to see her a few days afterwards.

13619. Was it considered advisable to keep Aaron Sherritt in that very dangerous position?—I believe he was told about that, but he had no fear himself of the consequences; in fact he was the most fearless man that any one could come across, so far as the outlaws were concerned; he had no fear of them.

13620. Did that arise from courage?—I think from courage.

13621. Might there not be an idea in his mind that they would not shoot him?—I fancy after he was arrested for horse-stealing, and Mrs. Byrne turned against him so bitterly, that that idea had entirely gone from his mind.

13622. Did they want him to go to Jerilderie?—They did, he told me himself.

13623. What excuse did he make?—I do not know.

13624. They must have looked upon him as a criminal like themselves?—He was entirely in their confidence up to that time, and after the Jerilderie affair.

13625. Did he often give information to you in good enough time for you to get the benefit of it?—I think not at all times, the information would be two or three days old when we got it, except that information about his being shot, brought by his brother—that was the quickest we received.

13626. What value would you place on information about such men as the Kellys, that they had been three days ago at a certain place?—It would all depend on the man that gave it.

13627. What use would it be?—Very little good, still we would know they were in the locality; it would be of great advantage.

13628. They might be far away into New South Wales by the time you got it?—They might, but it would be satisfactory to know that.

13629. It might be telegraphed to all the districts to be on the alert?—It would be sent to the officers in the district, and no one else. I am not aware that we ever sent to Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare when they were in charge.

13630. You see the nature of the work the outlaws did here. It was on the Saturday night, and they were supposed to be about until daylight on Sunday morning, and on Sunday morning at two o’clock it was that they stuck up Glenrowan?—They must have gone from here during the night to Glenrowan.

13631. Voices were supposed to be heard?—Those may have been the voices of other members of the Byrne family, in order to keep the men in, but it was certainly not the outlaws.

13632. You see how little value three days’ information would be?—With information three days old it would then entirely depend upon the ability of the trackers.

13633. But the chances would be very slight indeed, in going through this thickly populated country, of picking up their tracks if they went on the road?—If they went on the road; still I have seen trackers track on the road. I saw the last trackers that came from Queensland—they tracked on the main road between here and Wodonga, and went three miles on it.
13634. How old was the track?—The day before.
13635. Then your impression is that those men should have made a move as soon as it became daylight?—Yes.
13636. And from what you know since, your belief is they would have met with no resistance at all?—Yes, because they were away at Glenrowan.
13637. How many miles is that?—By the road thirty-seven; they would make it a good deal shorter than that.
13638. Say thirty miles?—Yes.
13639. They were away thirty miles?—It would be less than that from the Woolshed; twenty-five.
13640. That would be, that from the time they shot Aaron Sherritt they were only six hours and a half until they were pulling up the rails at Glenrowan, because they had all those people in and had been up and down a length of time before information came to the police at half-past two. You see what little value with those men three days’ old notice would be?—But such a concerted plan as that would be a different thing from information as to where they might be casually passing through districts. It was portion of the plan they had laid down before, and they travelled at a good pace, but in other cases it would be different if they were only going from one part to another.
13641. The plan you refer to was that they murdered Sherritt to draw attention to it?—To bring the police up there and wreck the train on their way up, and that was a portion of the plan that Mrs. Sherritt heard—that they were to do something that would astonish the world.
13642. Suppose Armstrong had escaped just after the murder and informed the police at Beechworth, would not that have been an advantage?—It was no advantage as it was, but it might have been.
13643. Is there anything that you would like to inform the Commission upon?—No, I do not know that I am aware of anything else.
13644. Has this district been strengthened at all since the capture?—Yes, since Mr. Montfort came here the stations in the Kelly district have been strengthened.
13645. By about how many?—I believe there are two or three stations in course of erection now, and three or four men are to be sent to those.
13646. Did it ever occur to you that during the time Captain Standish was here the force in the district was nearly doubled?—A number of men had been sent to the district all through, but I do not know it was during the time of Captain Standish. The men were increased from the commencement and they were coming daily.
13647. But they commenced to decrease again the moment he left?—Yes, I think there was a decrease of men afterwards, I think some of the men were sent away. I know when Mr. Hare came up the second time the men were scarce, and we were compelled to keep three men on that duty at Sebastopol, but Mr. Hare said he did not like the idea of having three men there, and that another should be sent

13658. Would it lead to oppression?—I do not know that, because the colony is wide for them, and if they are prevented taking up land in this district they can go to another district and take up land there, so there would be very little oppression in that; but if they are allowed to take up land and gather in the district, it would lead to another serious outbreak, I think.

13659. Would it be a wise method to refer those applications in the first instance—not to allow men to pay money and refuse their license, but to refer in the first instance to the police officer?—I would not certainly refuse after they had laid out any money, or made improvements, or put up fences, or gone to any expense; but if they were referred in the first instance, before they were put to any expense, I do not think there would be any oppression in it.

13660. Immediately on making application?—Yes.

13661. By Mr. Nicolson.—You know the gully at the mouth of which Mrs. Byrne’s house is situated?—I do.

13662. Do you know the place called London, where it is very steep at the end of the gully?—Yes.

13663. That is the rooks; all the sides are very precipitous and steep—they are about what height?—They are very high.

13664. Are they nearly perpendicular?—There is only a little place that you can ride a horse, and then it takes a sure-footed mountain horse.

13665. Are you aware that Aaron Sherritt was able to ride down it, and the outlaws?—I would not say that they could.

13666. I saw Sherritt do it myself?—That is the gully getting down to Sebastopol?

13667. Down the steepest part—you say you doubt it very much?—Yes; all would depend on his horse.

13668. You know what sort of horses the Kellys had, and the class of men they were?—Yes.

13669. What chance would our men have in pursuing them through rocky, stony, rangy country?—There are some of our men who, if they had good horses, are better horsemen than they were, I have no doubt of it. I have hunted kangaroo with them, and I never saw them stop at anything.

13670. Are you aware, after the cave was abandoned, that some handwriting was discovered—did you hear of that?—I heard something about some letter being picked up on the flat beyond where the cave was; but who told me about it I could not tell. I did not hear whose letter it was, but a letter belonging to some one of the police.

13671. Did you hear what man?—No; I would not be certain if it was not Ward who told me, or some one of the Sherritts.

13672. When the cave party were in existence, and the relief party were in here, I was very often coming up to Beechworth?—Yes.

13673. Was I in the habit of conversing with those men?—Yes, you were, sometimes in my presence, and at other times wherever you met them, in the yard.

13674. Had they an opportunity of telling me anything they wished to report to me—anything particular?—Yes.

13675. They had every encouragement?—They had every advantage as far as I was concerned, because I would leave any man free to speak of any matter; if it was a private matter I would leave him free to do so.

13676. Did you ever hear anything from Sherritt to lead you to suppose that Mrs. Byrne had discovered the cave party?—No, I heard nothing to lead me to believe the police were discovered in the cave or in Sherritt’s house, and from the conversations I have had with Mrs. Byrne since, I am still more convinced that the presence of the police at either place was not known to her.

13677. By Mr. Hare.—Do you remember my second visit to Benalla?—Yes.

18678. Do you know the day I relieved Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

18679. Did you that afternoon receive a telegram?—I did.

18680. From whom?—From Mr. Nicolson.

13681. Is that the one I sent to the Commission?—Yes.

13682. That was giving you directions to do what?—I would wish to see the telegram; it was to send back Armstrong to the station; that there was no more money available for “Tommy or his friends.” We used to call Sherritt Moses and Tommy and all names:—“Send Constable Armstrong back to his station; withdraw the watch party and send them to duty.” Armstrong was one of the men in charge.

13683. What station was he to be sent to?—Wahgunyah.

13684. You received an order to send him from Beechworth to Wahgunyah?—Yes.

13685. Then what else?—To withdraw the watch party that was in the house. I may state that the watch party had been withdrawn from the house the morning, or the morning before, I got this telegram. It was withdrawn by order, I was informed, of Mr. Nicolson; that he told Sherritt to go back to the hut and tell the men to come back.

Mr. Nicolson.—I am glad that has come out, as I had forgotten it.
The Witness.—When Mr. Nicolson came up with the party of black trackers, he came to Sebastopol from Everton, and after the tracks were looked into, Sherritt was with him, he sent Sherritt back to the hotel to tell the men to return to Beechworth.

13686. What else?—That there was no more money for “Tommy” and his friends.

13687. What did you take that to mean?—I consulted with Ward. I would have sent Armstrong back to his station, and kept the party at the cave on duty; and “Tommy”—I would not guarantee any money for him—any money or payment until I should receive other instructions.

Mr. Nicolson.—There is no discharge in that.

Mr. Hare.—He could pay them off.

The Witness.—“Send Constable Armstrong back to his station, withdraw the watch party, send them back to duty—no more money for ‘Tommy’ and his friends.”

13688. By Mr. Hare.—Upon that you take it that you would have told him he was to be discharged?—Yes.

13689. Had you seen “Tommy” that night you would have told him?—Yes.

13690. And the next morning had not word come down to me?—Yes.

13691. By the Commission.—Would you have told him he was discharged?—I would not; I would have told him there was no more money for him.

13692. You would simply put him in possession of the words of the telegram?—Yes.

13693. By Mr. Hare.—Is it your impression he would have worked without money?—No; not without some other promise being held out to him.

13694. You mention that Willis said this party was known; are you aware that one of Mrs. Sherritt’s daughters was in Willis’s employment, at Wangaratta?—Previous to that she was, but not at that time.

13695. Do you know whether that girl was in the habit of coming up to Mrs. Byrne’s house to work for them?—I am not aware of it; I do not think she was.

Mr. Nicolson.—I trust the Commission see I had no occasion even to send that telegram.

The Chairman.—That does not affect the point at all that the men did their duty.

Mr. Nicolson.—It takes away the imputation that I was trying to thwart my successor.

13696. By Mr. Sadleir (to the witness).—You left Melbourne about the 30th of October?—Yes; I arrived at Benalla on the 30th.

13697. Do you remember receiving from Captain Standish information from the person named ——?—Yes; I remember the circumstance. We received that information from Captain Standish, at Spencer street railway station, when I was with Flood, on the 30th October 1878.

13698. Was there a reference to a log where provisions might be laid?—Yes, and other matters.

13699. Do you know whether that was acted upon?—I know that it was. I was not present when the log was searched for; but from the conversation I had with Flood afterwards, I knew that Flood was directed by you to come and see the log, and he found it.

13700. What did he give as the result?—I asked him if it had the appearance of any provisions being left there, and he said it had not. It might have been used at one time, but not at all recently.

13701. How long after the information came was the search made?—I think the day after; but it was immediately after—it was within a week.

13702. When were you first employed on the Kelly search, as the man in charge of the Kelly parties?—The first time I was placed in charge was by my going up to Fernhill station, I spoke of before where we found those tracks; that was the first time I was in charge.

13703. You were not in charge of the Murray party before that?—No, Sub-Inspector Kennedy was; he was detective then.

13704. When did you arrive at Glenrowan?—I think at a few minutes to nine o’clock on the Monday morning.

13705. Were Dowling and Duross and Armstrong and Alexander in your party?—They were.

13706. Did I meet you on your landing at Glenrowan?—You did.

13707. Do you remember jumping out of your train?—I do; I was next the door.

13708. Did you jump out; I do not mean an ordinary step, I mean a spring?—Yes, I jumped out.

13709. What directions, if any, did I give you immediately on your arrival?—As soon as I arrived on the platform I went into where Ned Kelly was and Sergeant Steele was, and you came in immediately. You asked how many men I had got. I said, “Ten and myself.” You then said, “Take them out and relieve the Wangaratta men; they have had no breakfast yet. There are a number of innocent people in the house. If you fire at all, fire breast high. Firing is not really necessary at present, except the outlaws come to the doors or windows, and then the men can fire at them.” I gave those instructions to the men and went and relieved the Wangaratta men, who were at that side, and placed the Beechworth men in their place.

13710. Were Dowling and Duross amongst the men you instructed?—Yes, they were; and, apart from my instructions, the men were about at the time when you gave me instructions, and most of the men could have heard it if they wanted to.

13711. Was not one of those men detained for a little to attend to Ned Kelly?—I think there was one remained inside, or was sent in from the field; I think he was sent in again.

13712. Do you remember my instructing any of those men to fire low in the early part of the day?—
Those instructions were given after the people in the house came out. You directed to fire at the chimney to see if the bullets would break the bricks and undermine it so that it would fall.

13713. At about what distance from the ground?—I think a few feet from the ground. It was where the chimney seemed to narrow from the foundation.

13714. Do you not remember me standing beside you at the time I gave those instructions and fired at the chimney myself?—Yes.

13715. So any instructions I gave your men to fire two feet from the ground, or anything like that, must have been after the innocent people came out?—Yes.

13716. You never heard of any instructions of that sort before they came out?—No; they we to fire high before they came out.

13717. Do you remember the top rail was in our way—will you describe exactly?—I know it was, but whether it was in the way as you describe I cannot say; I think the fire was underneath it.

13718. That would bring it between two or three feet between the two upper rails of the fence?—Yes.

13719. Can you say how I was employed at the time of your arrival—at the different times?—The first time I saw you was when the conversation I say took place, and soon after that I saw you near where I was standing. You were in company with Mr. O’Connor and Mr. Rawlins, and different times during the day.
You were out in the field the time the people came out of the house and examined them, and I was with you. You called me to be there to see the people to know who they were—the men who came out and lay down, and we called them one by one.

13720. Did you miss me from the sight of the men all day there for any considerable time?—Not for any considerable time, the side I was at. You would go to the railway station and then come up again. You were not at the other side of the house until a little before the house was fired; we went to the upper end where Constable Barry and others were, that was half round.

13721. And came back again?—Yes.

13722. Did I not go quite round preparing for the firing of the house?—Yes.

13723. Then it would not be true if I were said to be smoking all day long in the room where Ned Kelly was?—Well, I saw you smoking at different times.

13724. I know I smoked nearly all day, but was I most of that day on the platform or on the field?—In the field.

13725. Was there any man at a loss, to your knowledge, for instructions how to act through my absence?—I could not say as to the constables at the Benalla side of the house, but there were no men at a loss what to do with regard to instructions at the side I was. It was the Wangaratta and Beechworth men at that side, and they were at no loss for instructions.

13726. Was it not the general belief amongst us all that day that the outlaws were inside alive and ready to fight and defend themselves to the very last?—It was to the very last moment the belief. When one of the men came out of the house, I think he told us they were either on the rafters or in the chimneys.

13727. There were all sorts of rumours?—Yes. The roof was fired at then after that.

13728. Did you form any judgment at the time as to the desirability of rushing, apart from your opinions formed since?—I did not think it desirable to rush the house at the time, because I did not see the benefit; because we had them there, and I did not see the benefit of sacrificing honest men for the sake of getting those men alive. I knew they could not get away with the number of police there.

13729. Was it desirable or not to get them before nightfall?—Yes.

13730. Did I express myself about that?—I heard some constables express the desire to rush the house, I think, once or twice, and your answer was that you would not give permission to rush the house yet.

13731. Did you hear what my reasons were?—I do not think you gave any reasons in my presence.

13732. Can you say whether the outlaws were called upon to surrender?—I can. They were called on to surrender repeatedly, even after the people came out of the house.

13733. In what terms?—To surrender—to come outside; and if they did they would not be shot. I think it was Constables Mentiford and Armstrong. Armstrong repeatedly called out to them to come outside.
He was between the house and the railway station.

13734. More in the front of the house than we were?—He was further towards the front.

13735. Did you mention the terms of the surrender all?—I would not be certain with regard to the words used, but at all events they were called upon to surrender.

13736. You cannot say whether we offered their lives?—That of course was understood by every man in the place. I think it would be regular butchery if they were fired into after being asked to give themselves up.

13737. How long was the priest in the place?—He might be a minute, or five or six. He went in at one door, and went out at the other, through the house; and when he went out at the back, he said, “They are dead.”

13738. Would that take him more than twenty or thirty seconds?—I could not say exactly. It would take him more than a minute, at all events; in fact, from the state of the house, I think he went out for his own safety.

13739. You were standing beside me at the time he approached the house?—Yes. When the suggestion was made to fire the house, it was arranged to take the riflemen in front, to protect the man firing.
Then those were to fire as fast as they could, when Johnson was advancing; and Superintendent Sadleir and myself, and somebody else, stood directly at the Benalla end, to protect Johnson, in case he was fired at by the outlaws. While that was taking place, the priest advanced from the road, with the intention of going in, and you called him back and you said something to him, but what it was I have forgotten now but I think it was to prevent him from going in. Mrs. Skillian came at the same time, and she was ordered back at once, and was not allowed to advance. The priest then, after you told him, advanced again the second time, and went in through the door, and through the house, and came out through the back. When he advanced all the men advanced also close to the house, and, when he came out at the back, all rushed up. The body of Byrne was brought up.

13740. Were you and I amongst the men?—Yes; and Constable Gleny was one that helped to carry him out. A revolver fell as he was carried out. I think there was an objection made to firing the house at all, because Cherry was in the back, and it was a bark roof; and it was considered it would take fire, and the man might have been burned before he could have been removed.

13741. Who made that suggestion?—I was present when we were in conference, and then it was decided that the house being a zinc roof the fire would not extend so quickly, so that the man in the back could be saved.

13742. Returning to the few moments before the priest entered the house—as he first came into sight—were we quite sure the fire had taken then?—Quite certain; the smoke had gone through the roof and we could see it.

13743. Was not there a little doubt before that?—Yes. You said to me it had not taken, and then the next intimation was the smoke getting through the roof, and then we knew it had taken.

13744. Can you understand any member of the police on duty for all that day, from the early morning, being ignorant of the presence of innocent persons in that house?—I could not understand it, and I would not believe it. We knew they were in the house before we left Beechworth. I think Mr. Hare’s telegram stated so, or some telegram we received before we left Beechworth.

13745. By Detective Ward.—You remember the day that the cave party was broken up?—Yes.

13746. Did you see the men on that night—were you speaking to them then or the following morning?—Do you mean the cave party?

13747. Yes?—They came in that night, but whether I spoke to them then I cannot say. I saw them the following day undoubtedly.

13748. I went to Benalla in the morning?—I would not be certain—I could not say.

13749. You remember receiving a telegram from me?—I do; that is the telegram I refer to.

13750. Do you remember what time I came home to Beechworth?—The mid-day train, 2.20.

13751. Do you remember what you said to me just as I entered the office?—I gave you the reports and I told you, I think, that it was strange that those men would not give this information before, or something to that effect.

13752. Did you not tell me it is strange those men have not given this information to us before, if they knew anything about it?—Yes; I thought it very strange I did not receive any information about it.

13753. Did you not say, “Those are the men you have always been quarrelling with me about”?—Yes. You wanted more kindness than I could give; you wanted me to be kinder to them than I could possibly be in the treatment of them when they came to the station. I was against their going out rambling about the street, and I made them observe more discipline than you thought fair to the men.

13754. Did I not ask you on several occasions to allow them more liberty at night, on account of the duty they were doing?—Yes, and at all other times as well—more than I would give them.

13755. On that account was there any of those men on bad terms with you, and if so who were they?—I was not on good terms with Falkiner at the time.

13756. Any other?—No.

13757. What was the cause of your bad terms?—From many transactions about the station. He was more inclined to lead the men away, and not so well inclined to observe the discipline I wanted observed on the station. For all that, I may say the man is a good one.

13758. What is your opinion, whether, when you called for the reports, was it through a little quarrel that was between them that they gave those reports to you or through an honest legitimate knowledge of anything being known?—I could not say that.

13759. Tell me the exact words that Mr. Nicolson said as to what he wanted the reports for?—When I showed the reports you said those were not the reports required, and those required were for the purpose of making a good entry in the men’s record sheets.

13760. Do you remember when Falkiner was leaving, Falkiner and Barry coming to the office door, you and I in the office sitting?—I cannot say that I do.

13761. Do you remember Falkiner saying he would send me a report?—Yes. Falkiner did not send his report until next day.

13762. Do you remember my telling him to send it next day, that if he did not it would be too late, that I should send in my reports to-morrow?—I cannot remember that; it is a long time ago; but I know for a fact he did promise to send a report from Benalla, and that he did so.
13763. By Mr. Nicolson.—Had you occasion to bring any of those men, Falkiner or Barry, before me at any time—did I ever admonish or reprove them?—No; I am confident that neither of those men was brought up.

13764. Had you any reason to shield or hide from me anything whatever that was going on wrong in connection with this cave party or anything else?—I had no reason and nothing to shield.

13765. Were you not in the habit of speaking freely?—I was.

13766. The men too?—They had an opportunity.

13767. Was I not on as good terms as an officer could be with those men when I visited the station?—Nothing would lead me to infer anything else.

The witness withdrew.

Mrs. Sherritt, senior, further examined.

13768. By the Commission.—The Commission have been led to understand that you have something else you desire to say?—Yes. It is to mention a few remarks that my son made to me about what I told Mr. Nicolson when Byrne said he would take my son’s life. He said, “What did Mr. Nicolson say, mother?” And I said, “He said nothing, Aaron.” Then he said, “I will surely lose my life now.” So then, after Mr. Hare came into the district, I was speaking to him—I think on a Sunday—and on the following Monday I told Aaron, and he seemed to be very pleased. He said, “We will have them now, mother, because we have Mr. Hare in the district.” That is all I have to say.

13769. One of the men who was in the cave party reported to Detective Ward and to Senior Constable Mulhane that, from some words you spoke to him, he was under the impression that the existence of the cave party was known to Mrs. Byrne?—Never. It never was known.

13770. You have no recollection of ever saying anything that would lead to that statement?—No; because I am positive it was not known.

13771. Had you a daughter living with Mr. Willis at the time of the cave party?—Not at that time.

13772. Are you sure of that?—She lived with him for eighteen months. She might have been there at the time; I think that she was.

13773. Was it possible that your daughter might have heard from you about the cave party?—Well, it was an impossibility ever to think that the cave party were known, or even the existence of the cave, to any of the Byrne family.

13774. We have had evidence to-day that the fact of the existence of the cave was told to the police by Mr. Willis?—Well, I do not know how that could be.

13775. Your daughter was at his house; might it not come out quite accidentally, without a purpose—did not your daughter know of the police being there?—I could not tell you. I never heard of it before.

13776. It is most likely, as you were working and baking for them?—I worked for them and assisted them all I could.

13777. Then it is just possible, as you were working for them and bringing provisions, that your daughter at Mr. Willis’s might know it?—I will try and remember. I do not think now that she lived at Willis’s at that time. I think she had come home, and then she was for a short time with Mr. Foster.

13778. Is it not just possible that she might have known of it at the time, and it might have come to Mr. Willis’s ears?—I do not know how he found it out. I know it was not known to the Byrne family till weeks after the party left, but by asking Mr. Willis I suppose you can find out.

13779. We will have to ask him, because he would not tell where he got it from when he told the police. It is most likely we will see him?—He will be able to tell you.

13780. By Mr. Nicolson.—In any conversation you have had with Mrs. Byrne since Aaron was shot, has she shown she had a knowledge of the cave party?—No; she never even mentioned the cave to me.

13781. By the Commission.—Here is what Barry reports:—“But as to whether the friends of the outlaws were aware of our presence there, I am not in a position to state positively, as I never had an opportunity of going among them to enquire, but Mrs. Sherritt (senior) has made statements to me, which I afterwards reported to Detective Ward, which would lead me to believe that the Byrne family were aware of our presence?”—I have never, I think, spoken a word to that man on the subject.

13782. This is his statement at any rate?—There is no truth in it. I do not think I ever spoke half-a-dozen words to that man in my life. I just know the man by sight, and that is all. That is a man that I declare I never had a conversation with in my life.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Three o’clock.

(Taken at Beechworth.)

THURSDAY, 21st JULY 1881.
Members present:
The Hon. F. Longmore, in the Chair;

Mrs. Barry further examined.

The Witness.—As to what has been said about Aaron taking a towel as a signal to the outlaws, I wish to say that the police themselves used to take it on some occasions. Sometimes they did not take the same road as Aaron did, and they used to carry the towel to dry their feet. I have known them do that. Of course they might have given the towel to Aaron to carry for all I know afterwards, and, what is more, the police have never gone out with Aaron on duty except in the night-time, so I do not see how he could make any token with the towel in the night—that is an untruth safe enough.

13783. The next point is about how they were in the bedroom?—I thought yesterday I would have been asked the position of the men in the room when I used to be sent in after Aaron was shot. Byrne sent me in three times, and sent my daughter in three or four times, I am not sure which.

13784. Was there anything particular occurred?—The first time I went into the room the men appeared as if they were bustling about looking for their firearms, and the second time I went into the room Alexander and another man were sitting on the box in front of the door and their possum rugs round them, and I could not see the other men; I did not notice them in the room. I could not say where they were at that time. The third time I went into the bedroom (they had my daughter kept in this time, this was the last time Byrne sent me in) Alexander was at one side of the room, and the other constables were under the bed. Constable Alexander was at one side of the room where the bed was not, Constable Duross and Constable Dowling were under the bed, and their head and shoulders out at the side of the bed. I went to the two men, and they caught me by the clothes and pulled me to the ground.

13785. And you remained lying on the floor?—Yes; they did not put me underneath the bed. Duross just tried to shove me in slightly, but I remained where I was; in fact, I do not think I could get under the bed. Armstrong was at the foot of the bed, and my daughter was telling me afterwards that they had her between their feet and the wall, that they had her inside, and their feet were against her.

13786. Did they make enquiries when you went in how many men were out?—No, but I believe they asked my daughter, and she said Dun Kelly and Joe Byrne were outside; they did not ask me, but they just motioned me to go out. They could hear Byrne; he was talking at the top of his voice; and when Byrne came in after he fired the shot outside at Aaron—I did not see him fire it—and then there was another shot fired through the door, and then the man came and put his back against the door, and after he fired at Aaron, on the floor, he put his hands to his side and took something out of his bag or pocket and put it into his gun.

13787. What sort of gun was it?—It was a large gun I think it must be double-barrelled, because I noticed he always fired two shots and then reloaded it again; and then, at this time, after he reloaded his gun, I stepped over to the other side of Aaron. I was just behind Aaron’s head—he was lying at the time on the floor.

13788. Aaron never spoke?—No, not a word; but my daughter, after the bullet went through her, and I thought yesterday I would have doubted if the police had come to the side of the door any another shot fired through the door, and then the man came and put his back against the door, and after he fired at Aaron, on the floor, he put his hands to his side and took something out of his bag or pocket and put it into his gun.

Mr. Barry, 21st July 1881.

13789. You are quite satisfied the police were under the bed?—I am quite certain about the two men Duross and Dowling, and their heads out, and the guns facing them by the door, and that was when they put me down, and Dowling said if I did not keep quiet they would have to shoot me. He said, “You had better stop in, Mrs. Barry, and if you stop in the outlaws will not set fire to the place, while there are women in the place.” That might be about nine o’clock. I heard a dog barking through the night.

13790. What was the latest time you heard persons talking outside?—The first one I heard talking after I went into the bedroom was a German woman out at her wood-heap. I heard no one speaking besides.

13791. After you went in did you hear the outlaws—after Byrne sent you into the room?—No, I never did.

13792. Did you hear them go away?—No, I did not. We thought they were there, and through the night Dowling and Armstrong went out; the fire had burned down; the place was dark, and they closed both doors.

13793. Did they try to set fire to the place when you were outside?—Yes.

13794. We have heard of voices being heard during the night?—Yes, of course, that has been said; but I did not hear any, and I can hear as well as anyone. I heard the dog bark a few times during the night.
The dog was crying after I was going in, but that, I think, was the dog knew something was up. I think it was after Aaron he was crying.

13795. And they never moved out till morning?—They went out and closed both doors about eleven or twelve, I think. So in the morning they went out into the front room and shifted Aaron in by the wall, and put some blankets over him. He fell just between the fireplace and the window.

13796. It was the back door the man came to him?—Yes, and if the police did fire at Byrne at this time the front door was shut. It was some time after he shot Aaron. He ordered me to open the front door, and I saw the other man with a gun in his hand. Afterwards I heard Byrne call him Kelly. My daughter says that Dan Kelly was inside the front door and leaned his elbow on the kitchen table, and he was looking at Aaron and smiling, and nodded to her and said, “Good evening, ma’am,” and she just passed into the bedroom, and when she came out he was gone. One of the police in the morning asked for some drink, and there was some cold tea, and my daughter said not to drink it, for Dan Kelly was in there, and there might be poison in it.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior,
21st July 1881.

The witness withdrew.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior, further examined.

13797. By the Commission.—Do you remember seeing Dan Kelly the night Aaron was shot?—Yes, standing inside the front door, by the table; he had his elbow leaning on the table.

13798. How long was that afterwards?—I could not say; it was the second time I was sent into the bedroom to bring out the men; it might be a quarter of an hour.

13799. Could the men inside have shot him there if they had tried?—Yes; if the police had been looking out of the door or keeping an eye to the division—the partition that was between the two rooms—they could have had Dan Kelly very easily; but I do not think they were prepared at the time.

13800. It would not take them all that time to look for their arms?—Not at that time; there were two of them under the bed.

13801. Are you sure of that?—Yes, I am quite certain there were two under the bed and two lying on top; so that it was impossible to have either of the outlaws in the position the men were in.

13802. Were they in that position when Kelly was in the room?—Yes.

13803. When they put you under the bed, how did they get you under?—Constable Dowling pulled me down, and he could not put me under, and then Armstrong caught hold of me, and the two of them shoved me under, and they had their feet against me.

499

13804. Did they remain long in that position?—For two or three hours.

13805. Did you hear voices outside after you went inside?—No, only the dog howling; I do not remember hearing any voices.

13806. How long after your husband was shot was it you heard voices?—When my mother came in and remained—not after that—I did not hear anything. The second time I came in, Dan Kelly was by the table, and then, when I went out again, he was gone to gather bushes to set fire to the house. I wish to contradict a statement made yesterday by Constable Alexander, to the effect that my husband, when he was going to Byrne’s at night, used to wave a towel as a signal to show the outlaws that they were about. It was the police themselves that used to take the towel down to dry their feet when they went across the creek.
They used to have to walk through it, and they had to dry their feet on the opposite side, and I do not know whether they gave my husband the towel to carry, but they used to take it. I have often seen them taking the towel to dry their feet, and he used sometimes to carry them across to keep their feet dry. He did not mind the water; he would remain all night with wet feet.

13807. Were the police out any time during the day?—Yes, mostly every day; they were out every day. They were at the Sugarloaf some days, and stopped there till the evening.

13808. Were they seen much about the place during the day?—I could not say they were seen; but if there was anyone about, they could have seen them.

13809. There was nothing to prevent anybody seeing them?—No; the boys used to be about the bush looking for cattle, and they might have seen them.

Mrs. Sherritt, junior,
21st July 1881.

continued,
13810. Would they know who they were?—No, not by the way they were dressed; they had those long blue shirts.

13811. Is there anything else you wish to mention?—Constable Alexander said he believed my husband was in communication with the outlaws; that is an untruth; he never knew where the outlaws were. He suspected them being about on the ranges, but he never saw them; and otherwise, to my belief, he has put himself in more danger than any of the police or anyone else; and I think it very unjust, after all he has done, going through danger and one thing and another, to turn round on him and swear falsely, and say he was true to the outlaws and the police did not believe in him.

13812. Some say the other way?—Some say that.

13813. I think the officers believed in him?—They ought to, because he went in great danger, more danger than I could have imagined. In fact, I was in danger myself, cooking bread for the police, and staying in the house by myself at night till they came home in the morning. They generally came home about five o’clock in the morning.

The witness withdrew.

The public were re-admitted.

Henry Baber sworn and examined.

13814. By the Commission.—What are you?—Sub-Inspector of Police in the North-Eastern District, stationed at Benalla.

13815. By Mr. Sadleir.—How long in the service?—Since 1853.

13816. You have been for several months since the capture of the Kellys performing duty with me at Benalla?—Yes.

13817. You have been also several years in the district previous to that?—Yes, I lived several years in the district previous to that.

13818. Was I in the habit of conferring with you about police matters the last twelve months while you were with me?—Yes, I was, when at home, constantly in the office carrying on the duties under your direction.

13819. You were satisfied you had my confidence?—No doubt of it, in what was transpiring at that time.

13820. Was not the strength of the station at the time I was transferred greatly reduced?—Yes, the strength was being reduced at that time in compliance with the instructions from the Chief Commissioner’s office.

13821. And since I left it has been considerably increased?—Yes, about the middle of May it was considerably increased again.

13822. You had an opportunity when I was in service with you of judging of the treatment of the men under my charge?—Yes, certainly.

13823. Was my treatment of them perfectly just and considerate, in your opinion?—Yes, it was just, fair, and impartial.

13824. You have never known an instance to the contrary?—No; in fact, you always exhibited considerable kindness towards the members of the force.

13825. Were you able to judge whether the police throughout the district relied entirely on my judgment and experience in matters of difficulty?—I think they had every confidence in you.

13826. Do you think they relied on my confidence and judgment—was it apparent?—No doubt of it, that they did rely on your confidence and judgment, and I have always done so myself.

13827. Will you look at that list of persons whom I consider to be criminals?—[The witness did so.]

13828. Are there about sixteen persons mentioned there?—Yes.

13829. Do they still belong to the district?—I see one or two who may have gone to the shearing to New South Wales, but they are still connected with the district; it is their home.

13830. Do they form a very dangerous community?—Certainly; but the position of affairs has been very much improved since the middle of May; the accommodation of the force and stations have been increased in strength, and are therefore placed on a more efficient footing.

13831. Is it in consequence of that increase that they are more safe than when I reported on the security of the district?—The reduction was against your wishes.

13832. The enlargement I wanted was the extension of the boundaries of the district; do you consider the district, as it stands at present, of an unmanageable extent?—I do, certainly. I have a very fair knowledge of the district, and I think the district would be better worked if divided into two districts.

13833. Do you think it is practicable, with one district only, to maintain the efficiency of the police?—It could be better maintained if the district were divided, and it could be worked better from two centres than from one centre.

13834. Is not one effect of the enlargement of the district an immense amount of correspondence coming into the head office?—Yes, and therefore too great a strain on the head office; and you cannot keep the outlying stations so well under way.

Henry Baber, 21st July 1881.
13835. Is one of the effects of that great strain on the superintendent’s office to hinder him in visiting his out-stations?—Yes, and especially so with the additional anxiety of the Kelly affairs.

13836. Is the correspondence so great as to hinder the superintendent visiting when he ought to do?—It does. Things are cropping up continually that require his presence at head-quarters.

13837. By Detective Ward.—How long have you known me?—Since about the year 1869.

13838. Did I then come up after Power, the bushranger?—I really forget. You came in the ordinary course of things, and were stationed at Beechworth.

13839. During the time I was stationed under you, and since then, did you ever know me to mislead you or any other officer?—You were under my direction for several years, and performed your duty well. You were a little bit lax in discipline sometimes, but I had reason to be very much pleased with your conduct.

13840. What character did I bear when a mounted constable?—You were prompt in the execution of your duty, and you were very efficient in the detection of crime.

The witness withdrew.

Michael Edward Ward further examined.

M. E. Ward,
21st July 1881.
13849. Had they black trackers at this time?—I do not know whether they had. They had trackers, but, not the Queensland trackers. Then the next occurrence would be after I came out of the hospital. About the 12th February I received information from a storekeeper in Beechworth that one of the outlaws had been seen in Bowman’s Forest by a man named David Rae. This man came into town and stayed about all day in several public-houses, and told them all he had met Dan Kelly, and distinctly stated that he knew Dan Kelly. That night I started with two constables, and got to Rae’s, and saw him. He still said it was Dan Kelly, that he met him about a mile and a half from the Gap, and that he was riding a well-bred brown mare, that he had a valise before him, and that he could not be mistaken. From enquiries I made, I found that a constable left Beechworth on that morning riding a horse similar—a dark-complexioned man named Dungey—and I came to the conclusion that Rae was mistaken, that that information was false. There were several times then that I received information in which I would have to refer to my reports at the time, relating to duty I had to perform at that time and different people I had to meet. I never kept any books or records, only when I received information I would go down to the telegraph office and write reports, and if it was urgent send a telegram to the officer in Benalla. Then I received reports on several occasions of the appearance of the outlaws in and about Sebastopol and the Woolshed, reports which are all filed and I believe in the possession of the Commission at the present time. I always consulted with the officers I was stationed under, and whatever they thought best I always complied with their instructions and did as I was told. There were threatening letters sent to me.

13850. Did you keep any of them?—I sent them to the office, and I think they are all in the hands of the Commission. About that time there was a letter—that would be on July 2nd 1879—received by Aaron Sherritt, who was asked by letter by Joe Byrne to meet him. Aaron went, but reported that he failed to meet him. On July 10th, at Mrs. Jones’s, near Beechworth, it was reported that two children coming home from school met two of the outlaws on the road, half way between Mrs. Sherritt’s and the Reed’s Creek school; that they took some bread from them and ate it; but it being so close to Sherritt’s house, and for fear of any danger, we did not consider it advisable then to make any move more than to prosecute enquiries. On September 1st 1879 a threatening letter was received from Joe Byrne to “Moses,” and I received these instructions from Mr. Nicolson.—[The witness handed in the same.]

13851. That is to one of the secret agents?—Yes.

13852. This is as to one of the secret agents?—Yes. I got instructions and I followed them, and that was carried out; and everything appeared in the as requested.

13853. Did that letter come from Byrne?—That letter came from Byrne, offering a reward of £8,000 for the apprehension and delivery in Strathbogie Ranges of Captain Standish, Senior-Constable Mullane, and myself.

13854. That was a sort of counterblast to the Government reward?—Yes, that was it. Then we continued our enquiry and did everything we possibly could, up to about the 10th or 11th of November 1879, when Jack received another letter, stating that Joe Byrne wanted to meet him about twenty miles from Wangaratta or Lake Rowan. The letter was handed to me by the Sherritts, and I forwarded the letter to Mr. Nicolson, and here are the instructions I received from Mr. Nicolson how to act, and I acted upon it—[handing in the same]. Jack returned, and stated to us that he saw Byrne: he did not meet him on the night that he promised to meet him; but on the following morning, when he was returning back to Wangaratta, Joe Byrne suddenly came out of the bush, just at the turn of the hill, or in a gully like. He stated then that he was evidently after riding, as blood was on his spurs and trousers. They had a conversation, which will be found in my report to Mr. Nicolson. At that time, after we found what the motive was, that Joe Byrne wanted to know about the banks, we then took every precaution to guard the banks, and I myself, in Beechworth, saw all the managers, and had a consultation with the postmaster, Mr. Reverell, who was then stationed here, and he devised a scheme by which we could erect telegraphic communication between all the banks and the police station, by wires being placed, and the uniting of these wires would cause an alarm at the bank and station, at any hour of the day or night that the Kellys were likely to come. If they came to one of the banks, the station bell would ring, and we would be all then on the alert. I wrote that report, and forwarded it to Mr. Nicolson for his approval, and it was approved, and the banks paid the expenses. Telegraphic communication was immediately placed between the banks, and has been there since then. It was put up secretly at night, and was not to be known to any person but the bank managers, the police, and the Telegraph Department.

13855. That was in Beechworth only?—That was in Beechworth only. All other banks were warned and guarded against the danger. We received information that they were going to take Oxley bank, but we afterwards heard that, on account of their seeing three policemen there in the morning when the bank opened, they thought it would not be worth while for the amount of money they would get there. Byrne also wanted to know how much money they would likely get in Eldorado bank, and “John Jones” was directed to inform them that there would never be more than ten, twenty, or thirty pounds found in that bank. When we heard of them coming to Beechworth, and that they would have two men to join them, I reported the matter to Mr. Nicolson, and in reply here is the confidential note of what I should inform the secret-service men to tell them—[handing in the same]. While this correspondence was going on, our secret-service man became very frightened that he would at that time be carried away by the outlaws, and on the 15th November, from information we then had from this secret-service man, I reported the matter to Mr. Nicolson, and in reply here is the confidential memo., with instructions. In the latter part of it it states, “I cannot promise that Detective Ward will form one of the pursuing party, especially as Inspector Smith has to leave Beechworth on Monday. I feel it is but fair to mention this. At the same time his interest in the capture need not suffer by such an alternative; and as the decisive moment seems approaching, I hope he will take every precaution to maintain secrecy and to secure decided action now if practicable.” On 4th October here is another confidential document that I received before the other that I received from Mr. Nicolson, with instructions to the secret-service man—[handing in the same]. Then there is very little more during that year, with the exception of routine business and my reports, and in those all the particulars will be found until the establishing of the cave party by Mr. Nicolson on the 27th December 1879. That was in consequence of these reports that we formed the cave party, in consequence of several reports that came in, and we not being able to take action, the reports coming three days too old, and the danger that might result if we made a mistake, that is to the Sherritt family. The cave party was carried on by four men going out and remaining a week, and being relieved, by four others, and coming in and remaining in Beechworth, and then returning to duty. Before the men were sent out Mr. Nicolson, O’Connor, myself, and Senior-Constable Mullane were all in the office at Beechworth. Mr. Nicolson first spoke to Alexander, and told him the object of this cave party, what the object was, and gave the men instructions in writing. He called them each in separately. These are the instructions he gave to me to give to the men on going. These were given to them—[handing in the same]. That duty was carried on with the assistance of Aaron Sherritt, he going with those men at night—he would go down at night-fall himself, watch there until about eight or nine, when the men would all come down, and they would watch there. Their instructions were to remain there till four or five in the morning, and they were to attend to those instructions given. They were to leave before daylight, in order that they would not be observed coming away. The difficulty then arose as to how we could convey provisions to them; and, in consequence of not being able to light a fire, we had to supply them with porter, ale, and whisky, preserved meats and fish. We got a couple of spirit lamps for them, in order that they would be able to make a cup of tea in the morning when they came in, without any light being seen. On the first occasion when it was established we sent out the provisions on pack-horses for a few nights, but it was found that we could not do that long without being noticed by a person named ——, who was a friend to Byrne. He lived alongside the bridge that we had to cross. The storekeeper who had been supplying the police ten years, Mr. Allen, I made arrangements with him, as he had been serving Mrs. Sherritt for years, to forward the things down to her, and made arrangements with Mrs. Sherritt and one of her daughters and one son for those things to be laid at a certain place, wherever they would appoint, and her son Aaron to come and take them; and that was done with the greatest secrecy, that is as far as it ever came to my knowledge. The cave party was called in on the 1st of April. There came in one evening Falkiner, Hagger, Dixon, and McHugh. I saw Hagger on that night, and I said to him, “Hagger, I am sorry that you have had no luck. It is a strange thing, after the good information, that there has no luck come of it. “You had better leave a memo, stating the time that you were employed on this, and the nature of the duty, and I have no doubt Mr. Nicolson will make a favorable entry on your sheets. I am going to Benalla first thing by train, and I will see him.” I left at six o’clock for Benalla on the morning of the 2nd.

13856. Did you know at this time why they had been removed?—Under instructions from Mr Nicolson they were removed. I do not know what the reason was.

13857. Mr. Nicolson requested you to have the party removed?—Yes; he gave instructions to call in the cave party.

The Witness.—On my arrival there I saw Mr. Nicolson. He told me that the men would be all called away for the present, and for me, on my return, to read this memo, to the men that were engaged on the cave party:—“Benalla.—Memo.—Warn all concerned to keep secret the duty they have specially been employed upon in the watching party, Beechworth Sub-District.—(Sd.) C. H. NICOLSON, A.C.P., 2 April 1880.—To Detective Ward.” I then said to Mr. Nicolson, “The men that have been engaged on that cave party have had very severe duty to perform. When you were up the other day you said that when it would be over you would make a favorable entry I wish you would do that.” Mr. Nicolson said, “You can write a report of the men that were employed on that duty, and the time they were employed, and how they carried out the instructions, and forward it to me.” I was then returning by the mid-day train, and on my way to the railway station I called in at the telegraph office, and wrote a telegram, of which a copy was produced by Senior-Constable Mullane yesterday. The wording I do not remember, and I would like to see it.—[The same was handed to the witness for inspection.] “Call on the special-duty men for separate reports as to the nature of their duty. Hagger knows what to say.” That is signed by myself. My reason for sending that was simply that I had no record of the men who were engaged, or no opportunity of getting their names, as I had arrived by the twenty minutes past two train, and Mr. Nicolson told me the men would be leaving that day by the mid-day train. I would like to see the memo. that Senior-Constable Mullane put on Constable Barry’s report. I presume, on the arrival of my telegram, that Mullane did call for the report, which he did receive, and this memo, was put on:—“I have called on Const. Barry (2710) for a report relative to how the special duty at Sebastopol was performed, and whether it came to his knowledge that the Byrnes, or any of the friends of the outlaws, were aware of the presence of the police at Sebastopol.” How Senior-Constable Mullane arrived at that decision I cannot say. I sent the telegram before, and I do not know what time those reports were received. I did not instruct him to call for it. On my arrival in Beechworth, at twenty minutes past two o’clock, I went into the office, and on my arrival there saw Senior-Constable Mullane. He said to me, “I received your telegram, and called for reports. See what your friends have done, whom you have always been standing up for,” handing me the reports of Barry, Falkiner, and his own file, which is there, with the recommendation about Canny, the special man. I read the reports, and Senior-Constable Mullane’s remarks on the reports also. I said, “That is not required. All I wanted is the names, the time they were employed, and if they did their duty in accordance with directions given, as I want to furnish a report to the Assistant-Commissioner, as he has promised to place a favorable entry on their record sheets.”

13858. Before you go any further, I would ask you the meaning of this in your telegram: “Hagger knows what to say”?—Yes, on their arrival from the cave at night, when Hagger came in, I said to him, “You have had very severe duty. I am sorry you have not had better luck, and I cannot see the reason you did not do some good. I am going to Benalla in the morning.” I said, “I will speak to Mr. Nicolson to have a favorable entry placed upon your sheets; you can send in a short statement of the time you were, employed and the nature of the duty you performed”—that is what it refers to. I then walked up to the barrack-room and showed that order of Mr. Nicolson’s—read it to them. As to the caution about being careful as to secrecy, and not to let anybody know what duty they were on, some of the men were in the barrack-room—Falkiner, Barry, and Alexander senior, and I do not know who else—when I came in; they were sitting at the table. I had one of the reports with me. Barry said to me, “There has been a lot of trouble over these reports.” “What trouble?” I said. He said, “We were called upon to give report and we did not know what the meaning of it was.” “The meaning,” I said, “was that Mr. Nicolson directed me to submit all your names, the time you were employed on this duty, and the nature of the duty, and he would place a favorable entry on your record sheets.” “Well,” he said, “if Mullane had told us that, there would have been no trouble about it.” “Give me my reports,” he said, “and I will do that.” I handed him back his reports; I walked back to the office. A few minutes before the train started Falkiner came to the office door; he called me to the door. “Ward,” he said, “I have not time to write a report; I will send you one from Benalla.” “All right,” I said, “if you do that, I will keep back my report until to-morrow at the second train.” This was on the evening of the 2nd. I said to him, “Here are your reports.” He says, “No, keep them”; and on Saturday the 3rd I waited until the very last minute that the mail would close, and finding that Falkiner’s report did not come, I forwarded the other reports to Benalla. On Monday the 5th I received this report from the post office:—“I beg to report for the information of the Assistant Commissioner of Police that I have been on secret duty since the 13th of December 1879. I have at all times carried out the instructions received from the Assistant Commissioner of Police relative to that duty. Though not successful, this duty has been carried out with the greatest of secrecy with the members of the force whilst engaged on that duty.” I received that on the 5th, and my report had gone in on the 3rd, and, through some neglect or pressure of business, I never thought of those reports until the day that Falkiner was examined, when I went back and found them amongst my papers; through neglect of mine or the pressure of business, I could not tell which, but until that day I never saw or thought of them till Falkiner was examined, when I went back and looked among old copies of reports, and I found them. It never gave me a thought until then. That was on the 2nd April. From that there is nothing particular to mention until about the 17th of May, when I received a report from Mrs. ——, stating that Mrs. Byrne had written to ——, a girl of about seventeen, a daughter of Mrs. ——, who has been my agent right through the time of the cave party in communicating with Mrs. ——, going to her house and bringing the news back to me. The letter from Mrs. Byrne said she wanted to see, the business was to know if the boys (meaning Dan or Joe) would call, to be careful not to let them stay long, as she believed that Aaron was working for the police; that they called about a week previous, near Chiltern, at “Lord Byron’s”; that they were miserable and ragged, and in want of food, and they took a lot of food from “Byron’s” with them; that they gave a letter to Mr. —— to deliver to Mrs. Byrne; that Mrs. ——, not being good friends with Mrs. Byrne, she took the letter to ——, and the letter was delivered through —— to Mrs. Byrne. The next information was that on the 26th or 27th —— came into Beechworth and told me she saw Joe Byrne; that she went out to look for the horses; that he was at —— hut; that he said he came to shoot her son, and that she craved of him not to shoot him, and more to that effect. I telegraphed to Benalla to Mr. Nicolson, and I immediately went to Sebastopol, saw Aaron, and told him to go at once to —— hut, try and pick up the tracks, and see what direction they were going, and to report that night to me; that I would meet him below the Lazzarino. He did so, and he reported to me that he traced the footmarks of the horse in the direction of Mrs. Byrne’s. Mr. Nicolson came up the following day, and I sent for ——, and had an interview for a few minutes; and after that Mr. Nicolson said to me, “Ward, that woman is telling the truth, everything is right.” He requested me to go and see if there was a letter for him at the police station. I took the letter down to him; he opened it. He then said, “Ward, I am leaving. I have to go.” I said, “It is a pity, just now, after having such good information.” That would be on Saturday, I think, or Sunday.
13859. Where was he going?—Leaving the district altogether. On Saturday he forwarded a man from Benalla to me—“Renwick,” giving me instructions what I was to do with him. I accompanied “Renwick” to very near Sebastopol on Sunday morning.

13860. Was “Renwick” one of the agents?—Yes. He returned in the evening; he informed me that he saw one of the outlaws on the side of the range, on the right-hand side of Mrs. Byrne’s, going up the gully; that he saw a greyhound with him, and he was certain it was one of the outlaws. From the description he gave me, and the description of the dog, I disagreed with him at the time, and I said, “Renwick, I do not think you can be correct; it will be Patsey Byrne, for he has a dog of that description.” “Renwick” replied, “I know it is one of the outlaws; you are frightened to follow them to catch them; I will never work another ‘rap’ if you do not take this opportunity.” I reported the whole matter to Mr. Nicolson by telegram, and he made arrangements. I used to just go in to the telegraph office for quickness and send these. Mr. Nicolson telegraphed back to me asking me could “Moses” meet him at Everton, and Senior-Constable Mullane, on the following morning; I forget the time now. I replied “Yes,” that I would go and see “Moses” on that night. I did so, and made arrangements, and on the following morning, in accordance with instructions, “Moses” and somebody else met Mr. Nicolson, and they made search, I believe, without any success; they found that it was Paddy Byrne; I believe it was Paddy Byrne. On that evening—that would be the 1st June 1880—I received a telegram from Mr. Nicolson, “Urgent.—On Sunday, as one of the men was passing up the head of Byrne’s Gully, to the table land, he heard a dog bark about sixty yards off; on turning round he saw a man hide behind a rock; the description answered that of the outlaw Byrne. The trackers and six constables went up with Mr. O’Connor and myself next morning, and upon examination and ascertained that it was not the outlaw nor any of the gang.—C. H. NICOLSON.” On the evening of the 2nd of June, after coming in off duty—I think I came from Oxley that day—I called in to Mullane’s private house. He said, “Ward, I received a telegram from Mr. Nicolson.” “Yes,” I said. He said, “He directed me to send Constable Armstrong to his station, to place the other men on duty; there is no more money for Tommy or his friends, Ward already instructed.” “Yes.” He had sent a telegram ordering Armstrong to his station, and sending the special men to duty.

I must tell you that my duty, when in Beechworth, was to attend at the telegraph station at ten o’clock every night to speak to Mr. Nicolson, Mr. Hare, or whatever officer it might be, and communicate any intelligence, and all surrounding stations, to know if there was anything fresh. On the night of the 2nd I received instructions from Mr. Hare to proceed the following morning to Benalla to see him. I did so, and on my arrival, when I got near the police station, I think, Mr. Hare met me, and we walked out on the Sydney road. I said, “It is a pity that the reward is off, we have splendid information.” “Oh,” he said, “it is not off; I can tell you privately that the reward is all right.” I said, “Mullane told me last night that Mr. Nicolson sent a telegram ordering Armstrong to his station, and sending the special men to duty.” “No more money for Tommy or his friends, Ward already instructed.” I must tell you that at the time that Mullane told me about this I said, “I have not been instructed.” That is the only telegram I ever received; and on the 1st Mr. Hare said, “What have you done?” “Oh,” I said, “I have done nothing; I stick to Tommy by all means.” “Well,” he said, “did you see the telegram?” I had not seen the telegram. I said, “Mullane told me the contents; I have not seen it.” He said, “I will make enquiry when I go back.” He said, “When was it sent, and where from?” I said, “I do not know any more about it than what Mullane told me.” He then told me—he said, “It will take me two or three days to read over the papers—you get back; keep the agents on.” I told him then what had told Mr. Nicolson and me with reference to Joe Byrne. he said, “You go back, keep the agents on, I will be up in a day or so. I intend to call the heads of all the different parties in, Senior-Constable Mullane, Sergeant Steele, and yourself, and let us have a consultation. I intend keeping three standing parties of police, and two black trackers at each station, that at any time you receive information, all you will have to do is to telegraph to me the direction you are going, so that I will know, and you start in pursuit.” “All right,” I said. I returned to Beechworth, and on that afternoon three men were sent down to Aaron Sherritt’s hut to watch. Mr. Hare asked me where could they stay. I said, “In Aaron’s hut,” where we could get a place to put them in the day-time. I said they could stay in Aaron’s place in the day-time, that I would see it secure, and leave at night, go down to Mrs. Byrne’s and watch all night. He said, “That is all right for the present, but I will be up myself.”

13861. Just say what was done?—The three men were sent down, and, in a few days after, Mr. Hare came up, on the 4th or 5th, and, by appointment, met Aaron Sherritt at the powder magazine. The watch was kept on. Mr. Hare telegraphed to say to send another man: “Three men are not enough. I will send you more men as soon as I can arrange.” That was done. Constable Armstrong reported to us that Patsey Byrne was seen going away at night, riding the grey horse—I cannot remember the date—and I, on receipt of the report, immediately went down and saw Aaron, and told him to go to where they saw Patsey Byrne last, and to try and trace the tracks of that horse as far as he could, and also to watch the horse coming home. Aaron returned to me on the night of the day I saw him, and told me they could find no tracks of the horse, and that there were two trackers sent up to Beechworth from Benalla; but on the arrival of the trackers I received a report to say the grey horse was home, and then I knew it was no use to send the trackers down; consequently, there was nothing done, and the trackers returned to Benalla. On the 19th Mr. Hare came to Beechworth, and about seven o’clock (I saw him about four) we started to visit the men at Aaron Sherritt’s hut. We arrived about eight, and Mr. Hare said, “Go in and see the men—tell them I am here.” I rode my horse up to the house, hung the horse on the fence, and went to the door, and was met by Duross. I said, “Duross, Mr. Hare is here; where are the other men?” He said “They are out.” “Where?” I said. “Watching.” “What are they watching for?” I said. “Who is in?” He said, “Alexander; he is in the room. What will we do?” he said, “what will we do?” I said, “Why do you separate; what is the reason for that?” Mr. Hare came up; he said “Ward, what is this; what is wrong?” and he spoke to Duross. He said, “Duross, where are the other men?” “They are
Mr. Hare said, “Can you take me down?” “Yes,” Duross said. Alexander walked out side. Mr. Hare said, “Ward, you remain here, and I will go down.” “All right, sir,” I said. They immi diately started, and I said to Mrs. Sherritt, “What time did the men go down?” She says, “They are not down at all; they are cutting wood in the bush.” “Go and tell them to come in to me at once,” I said. “Tell them that Mr. Hare and I are here.”
Armstrong and Dowling came down, and I said to Armstrong, “How is it that you men separate?” He said,
“We had to get some firewood.” I said, “Duross told Mr. Hare that you were gone down to watch, you know.”
I said, “The instructions that I gave you—eight o’clock on a week night, and nine o’clock on a Saturday night—as you said that the children coming up to the township might see you.” “Yes,” he said, “and it is eight at night we went every night, but the Chinaman saw us going across the creek last night, and that is the reason we are going to be later to-night”; and I said, “Go down at once, and be careful, as the other two men are there, that they do not take you for the outlaws.” Mr. Hare, after about a couple of hours, returned and said, “They were there before me.” I said, “I sent them down—they were out cutting wood.” He said, “Those two men that took me down lost their way, and I have been for hours trying to find the place—how is it they did not know the way?” “I do not know,” I said. He said, “Why did Duross tell me a lie?” I said, “I do not know why—their instructions are eight o’clock or nine at night, as Armstrong complained of the Byrne family coming up to the township at night.” “Well,” he said, “I will give a blowing up to Duross.” I said, “Do not do anything of the kind at present, for it is very difficult to find men that will work together on this duty.”
Nothing else occurred until Sunday the 27th of June Armstrong came into Beechworth at about 1.30 p.m. I was at dinner, and I was sent for and informed that Aaron Sherritt was shot. The postmaster here tried to telegraph the Benalla telegraph station, but he could not do so. I then requested him to get Melbourne, and report the matter to Captain Standish. He did so, and he told me that at about three or four o’clock Melbourne was able to get Benalla. I remained telegraphing and answering queries from Mr. Hare and all the other officers until about two o’clock in the morning. I despatched a party of police, Senior-Constable Mullane and party immediately proceeded to the scene of the murder. Mr. Sadleir, at about two o’clock in the morning, I think, directed me to remain in Beechworth, in the office, to send Mullane home, to have the rest in order, to be able to go out with a party in the morning, and I returned. That is the whole.

13862. You were not at Glenrowan?—I was not. Then, when Mr. Sadleir gave me that order that Mullane was to go out at about four in the morning, of course I was the whole night in the office and until one the next day, and Mr. Hare sent a telegram; he said, “Ward, all is right—we have them safe; muster all hands and take them to Glenrowan.” I then despatched a messenger to Aaron Sherritt’s hut—John Sherritt I sent down—and he recalled the men, and we arranged for a special train. The men I sent down from here arrived in Glenrowan about nine, Senior-Constable Mullane in charge.

13863. When Mr. Hare came back from Byrne’s house, was he under the impression that the other two constables had been there all the time?—No, I told him not.

Mr. Hare.—I stated, in my evidence, that Armstrong stated about it to me.

13864. By the Commission (to the witness).—Do you positively swear that you did not suggest to them, in any shape or form, to say that they were down watching?—I do; I never did to my knowledge, because I had no reason to do so—I had nothing to gain in any way; my instructions to them were eight at night; and Armstrong, some time previous to this, said, when he came in to tell me about the grey mare, that nine o’clock would be early enough on the Saturday night, as Denny Byrne and others were passing up and down the road.

13865. When Duross swears that you told him to say that they were watching he swears a false hood?—He must, because I could not tell him that; I had no motive in telling him that.

13866. Duross swears, at question No. 3772, “Detective Ward, as soon as he burst in the door, said, ‘Where are the men?’ I said, ‘Chopping wood at the back’; and he said, ‘Say they are watching

Byrne’s house—here is Mr. Hare.’ He put the words into our mouths, and we went and told it.” You swear that those were not the very words?—I have given the words I said; I did not enter the house. I am only speaking from memory of all those things. On the 20th—that was Sunday—after having a consultation with Mr. Hare. Senior-Constable Mullane and I spent the whole Sunday in the ranges, trying to get a secure place where we could take the men away from there.

13867. You swear that you did not suggest to Duross to say the men were away?—No, I did not.

13868. That is a point-blank denial of what Duross has sworn. What message did you send to them by Mrs. Sherritt?—Told them to come down to me at once—that Mr. Hare and I were there; that was as soon as I found out where they were.

M. E. Ward, continued.

13869. Had you any conversation with Dowling when he came down?—No, I did not speak to Dowling at all; I spoke to Armstrong, and told him that Duross told Mr. Hare that they were down watching, and I told them to go down at once and be careful, as Mr. Hare was gone down, and see that they would not be taken for outlaws.

13870. Then if Dowling swears he was standing by when you gave that order he swears falsely too?—Yes.

13871. The statement is this—"Did he suggest to you then that having told that to Mr. Hare it was absolutely necessary for you to go on?"—Yes, he told us to clear out. I told him there was no necessity to tell Mr. Hare a lie, and to tell the truth. He then said to me, '—— it! go on, and do as I tell you.' I and Armstrong then left, and had taken up our posts some three or four minutes previous to Mr. Hare coming along.—You obeyed that command?—Yes; when I saw Mr. Hare I was going to stand up, but he made a sign to me to remain where I was, and passed on to Constable Armstrong. I do not know what took place between Mr. Hare and Armstrong.” Then that narrative, so far as you are concerned, is false?—I never spoke to Dowling. I spoke to Constable Armstrong, who was in charge.

13872. Why did you hurry them down when Mr. Hare had gone?—Simply to be careful that Mr. Hare would not shoot them if Mr. Hare got there first.

13873. Had you any idea that they were to be on the ground before Mr. Hare?—No, not the slightest. I told them to hurry down.

13874. Was Duross supposed to know how well as all those other men?—They were supposed to be there every night.

13875. As a matter of fact, they should have been down before Armstrong and Dowling were down if they had not missed the way?—Yes, they would. Alexander ought to know his way, because he was there the longest. I think Duross was the shortest. They were asked the question by Mr. Hare if they could take him.

13876. Did Duross distinctly tell you when you went in that the men were watching?—Yes.

13877. How did you find out they were not watching?—After Mr. Hare left Mrs. Sherritt told me.

13878. Dowling says that Mrs. Sherritt came up with instructions from you to them to hurry on and get across?—That would be inconsistent. After Mrs. Sherritt told me this, I said, “Where are their arms?” and the arms were in the room. I saw them there. If they told the truth, there was no blame whatever to the men, because they were acting according to instructions, and I had nothing to gain in the world by those men, whether they were in or out; it did not matter to me as long as I obeyed instructions from Mr. Hare.

13879. Were those men thoroughly acquainted with the road; are you under the impression that they led Mr. Hare purposely astray, so as to let the other men get down before them?—No; I do not think those men would do that.

13880. They would do anything if they would tell a lie in the barefaced way they did, and charge you with suggesting the falsehood to them?—Well, I should have had some motive in order to tell this lie, and you plainly see, and Mr. Hare will tell you, that I had no motive in it, and it is my opinion that it was only when those men were caught in the hole, and finding I was always willing to be kind to them, that they bring this in as something to screen themselves. Duross was the man I spoke to; Alexander was in the room at the time; Mrs. Sherritt was in the kitchen. I had nothing to gain by it.

13881. Did you ever go round there in the daytime?—No.

13882. Not along that road?—I might ride past. I did ride past in the daytime sometimes. I went down and inspected a couple of times in the daytime. I bought three or four yards of calico, and nailed it up to make a screen, so that if any person came they would not be seen, and gave strict instructions for them to remain in the room.

13883. Did you ever hear whether they were out during the day at any time?—No, not at that time.

13884. Did they remain secret in the house all day?—They remained there—I never found them out when I was down—they did as far as I know; I could not know. I was frightened to go near the cave party for fear, because everybody had an eye out, and saw if Ward was going down there must be something up. In fact, I had to take three or four greyhounds with me anywhere I went, as if for sport, because everywhere Ward was going there was something up they said. I specially asked for two secret- service men to come from Benalla to the Woolshed, Sebastopol, Reed’s Creek, and the Woolshed, to remain there for a few days to try and ascertain if there was any knowledge of the police being in the locality, and not to allow those men to know what duty they were on, but to go to the residents about there, so that if there was any danger of the police being discovered I would withdraw them.

13885. Does that refer to the hut?—No, to the cave.

13886. We had information given to us to-day, sworn, that those men were out cutting wood during the day, and hallucinating as if they were horses or bullocks, and wheeling it in with a barrow; did you know of this?—No; their instructions were simply to keep in during the day.

13887. What time was it during the night you found them out wood-cutting?—Eight o’clock at night.

13888. Just about the proper time to be leaving?—Yes. They had to cross the creek, and they had to take a towel in their hands to dry their feet; that night Mr. Hare came in wet up to his knees.

13889. You state upon your oath that all that those men state about your suggesting a falsehood to them is all wrong?—Yes, it is.

The witness withdrew.
Francis A. Hare further examined.

13890. By the Commission.—Did this man tell you that any of the party were over watching at the time?—Most decidedly he did.

13891. And did you find them watching when you went there?—I did.

13892. Did Alexander say anything to you about the matter?—Armstrong did: he told me. I said, “Why did you leave the two men behind?” He said, “Mr. Hare, they have misled you, or told an untruth. I was chopping wood when you were at the hut.” I said, “Do you mean to say that those fellows deliberately told me a lie?” And he said he was at the back of the house, and Ward sent him on as quickly as possible, and he was not going to tell a lie for anybody.

13893. Did he say why he was sent so quickly?—No; he said Ward sent him on to meet me there.

13894. Did you mention it when you came back to the hut?—Yes, to Ward. I said, “What in the name of goodness could induce those men to tell a lie to me?” “I don’t know,” he said. “I found them, and sent them on to the place.”

13895. Did you question the men afterwards?—No. When I got to the hut I heard Ward say, “Where is Tommy?” and I did not see him come forward. I then heard him say something to another man; and there was an answer—a whisper. I was standing in the road on my horse. I do not think he could have been up there thirty seconds, nor was he out of my sight. When I heard the whisper, I pushed my horse up as quickly as I could, and said, “What is all this whispering about?” And I called one of the men—Alexander or Duross—and said, “Where is Tommy?” “He is away watching.” “What are you doing here by yourselves?” I said. He said, “Tommy said it was too light for us to go altogether, and told us to come on by-and-by.” I said, “Can you take me to where they are watching?” One of them answered, “Yes”; and I said, “Then come along.” He said, “You will have to cross a very deep creek; and we cannot go across the bridge to-night, it is too light.” And I said, “Never mind—go as you usually go, and I will follow”; and Alexander took the lead, and Duross followed behind.

13896. Did you start to go by the bridge?—No; they suggested it was too light—the Chinamen would see us. I said, “Never mind the creek, or anything else I will follow.”

13897. How was it you got astray?—Going over that creek we got in among a lot of holes. He lost his way several times, all the time leading me to believe that Sherritt and the other men were there; and it was not till I got to the spot that I saw Armstrong. I went straight up to him, and I said, “What do you mean by leaving your men behind you, and coming here yourself?” And he answered, “Oh, I did not. I was chopping wood; and I am not going to tell a lie for anybody.”

13898. Did he lead you to infer who that “anybody” was?—He led me to infer it was those two men. He did not lead me to infer it was Ward.

13899. By what did he lead you to infer the two men?—Because it was the two men that told me this.

13900. Did you tell him the other men told you so?—Yes; and he must have heard it from Ward also.

I never had the slightest suspicion that Ward had suggested it till I heard it in the evidence here, and then I thought, “Could Ward have concocted the thing so quickly!” because I was not the distance of this room away from him, and I do not think he was thirty seconds away.

13901. Then your opinion is that those men did it?—I am giving facts; but I cannot say anything about that.

The witness withdrew.

Robert Alexander further examined.

13902. By the Commission.—Will you say, in a few words, what happened as to those points just referred to?—Detective Ward came to the door, pushed the door in—I did not see him, but I think so. I heard the door burst in; he spoke to Duross; I could not hear what he said to Duross; he came into the sitting-room and he put his head into the bedroom door and shook his hands and said, “Say they are gone down to watch Byrne’s.” Duross said to me afterwards to say they are gone down to watch Byrne’s. I said I would not. Mr. Hare then came in, and he and Duross had some conversation. I do not know what it was.

13903. Did you tell Mr. Hare any time during the night that the others were down there watching?—I did not. He spoke to me and asked me could I take him down. I said I could, two ways, one by a bridge near Julian’s, and another a foot-bridge behind Byrne’s. Mr. Hare said, “We will go by the foot-bridge.” We started, and when we had gone along a piece, some distance from the hotel, he asked me my opinion of Sherritt. I said I thought he was true to us, otherwise I thought not by his conversation. We went a piece further on, and Mr. Hare said it was too light to go by the bridge, “We will have to go another way.” I said, “The creek is close by.” He said, “We will go across the creek.” We got across, and on the other side it was very scrubby and full of diggers’ holes, and in the dark I had very great difficulty in finding the way; in fact I thought I would not get there at all; I only undertook to get there the other two ways—the bridges.

13904. There is no charge of your misleading or delaying. It is supposed to be want of ability to find the place?—Yes, I could not find the place.

13905. Did you at any time, as you were going, lead Mr. Hare to suppose that those two men were watching?—The thing was never mentioned. He never asked me, and I never told him. He asked me why I had not gone down to watch, and I said I was going down with the others.
13906. Do you swear positively now that Ward told you that you must go—the others were gone?—I swear he said to say they had gone to watch Byrne’s. I lay my life on that. I took it for granted that he meant to say to Mr. Hare that they had gone to watch Byrne’s, and he said it five or six times in the hearing of us all—to Duross particularly. I was present at the time.

13907. By Detective Ward.—How is it that you say that, and you did not hear what I said at first—what did I say first to Duross?—I heard the door burst open, and then I came out into the sitting-room to see who it was.
13908. Are you certain the door was closed?—The upper hinge was broken, or the door caught in the floor, and I heard it scrape open.
13909. What did I say to Duross?—I could not hear what you said to Duross; I only heard the door open.

13910. What did he say to me?—I could not hear it; he said it in a whisper.
13911. It is a strange thing you could hear one thing and not another;—how long did this talking take altogether?—I dare say inside a minute—a very short time.
13912. When Mr. Hare distinctly states he never lost sight of me, how could I go inside and have this conversation with you and Duross?—Mr. Hare was close behind you. He might see at a distance, but you said this before he was in after you.
13913. Where were you when I went in?—In the bedroom.
13914. Did I speak to you at all?—No, you did not; you spoke in my presence.
13915. Who was present as well; was not Mrs. Sherritt in the sitting-room as well?—Yes.
13916. Would not Mrs. Sherritt hear it if I said that?—You said it in a whispering manner.
13917. How is it that you heard it then?—Because we were pretty close together; I saw the position of your hands.
13918. And you say you came to the conclusion that it was Mr. Hare they were to tell; you did not hear me say Mr. Hare?—No, you said, “Say they are gone down to watch Byrne’s,” and I took it for granted you meant Mr. Hare; and Duross wanted me to say so, and I said I would not say it.
13919. When did he say that?—After that; the time we were getting the guns before we started.
13920. You heard nothing then during this minute only my waving my hand and saying, “Say they are gone to watch Byrne’s”?—Yes, I lay my life I heard that.
13921. What motive would I have for saying that?—I could not tell.
13922. The Chairman.—You must not ask that. You must deal with matters of fact. (to Mr. Hare)—Did any of those men tell you that those men were watching?—Certainly.
13923. Did Alexander tell you?—I walked with Alexander all the way from the house.
13924. Be positive if you can?—I cannot say that positively after hearing his evidence, but without hearing his evidence I would have, because it was in my mind; but hearing him swearing that, I would not like to swear it. I thought he led me to believe, up to the time I got to the ground, that they were there.
13925. Do you remember putting the question to him why he was behind when the other men were gone?—Yes.
13926. Do you remember his reply?—No. I said it to the two of them. I do not know that he made any reply, but certainly they both led me to believe what I have said. My impression was that he, more than Duross, did so.

13927. By Detective Ward (to Mr. Hare).—Do you think, hearing the evidence you have heard, that I had time to talk all that I said just now?—I do not think I lost sight of you.
13928. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—Could he have said that in that whispering tone while you were on the road and have made that arrangement?—Yes, he could have done it.
13929. By Detective Ward (to Mr. Hare).—Now, admitting that all this was said, was there any blame due to me whether they were in or out?—No.
13930. Do you know of any motive that I could have in telling those men this; in putting that false oath in their mouths?—No. I expected from what Ward had told me to find them all there alone, those four men; I never thought I would have to go down to Byrne’s place. When I found this division, as I thought, of the party, then I made up my mind to see what they were doing.
13931. During the time I was employed under you at any time did you ever find me to tell an untruth, or in any way mislead you, or to in any way keep anything back?—As far as I know, not in the slightest degree. I never knew you deceive or tell me a lie or to hide anything from me, as far as I know.
13932. By the Commission (to Alexander).—Were you or any of the party out at any time during the day cutting wood or wheeling a barrowload of wood?—We were.
13933. Did you consider at the time that it would possibly be the means of disclosing the fact that you were there?—No; when we saw any person coming, we always hid. It was I and Duross and Armstrong and Dowling that used to get wood. The reason why we were so late that day Mr. Hare came was that we could not get a chance during the day.
13934. It would be quite true that you were out during the day?—Yes, Armstrong was quite agreeable we should go out.

13935. By Constable Alexander (to Mr. Hare).—What did I say to lead you to believe that the men were watching?—I do not remember the words, but you were walking beside me that night and Duross behind, and you led me to believe, by implication at any rate, that we were to find the men there.

13936. What did I say?—I cannot tell you. It is thirteen months ago, and I cannot tell what you said.

The Chairman.—Mr. Hare was led to believe at the hut that the men were there, and he was not informed to the contrary on the way down.

Mr. Hare.—That is it.

13937. By the Commission (to Alexander).—In your evidence you did not say you informed him to the contrary?—No.

The witness withdrew.

Patrick Mullane further examined.

13938. By Detective Ward.—With reference to the reports referred to by Falkiner and Barry, had I any power or control over those men that, by bringing pressure to bear, it would make them give an untrue report?—You had no official pressure to bear on them. They were altogether beyond your control, they leaving the station next day, I believe.

13939. At any time those men came in from the cave party, were they not entirely under your control?—They were.

13940. Might I ask one question with reference to one of the party who was there—that is Armstrong. Do you remember May, this year, Armstrong guarding the jury window in this court?—He was here on duty, and so were you at the time.

13941. Do you remember the three of us standing and having a conversation with reference to what Duross swore?—I do; there was a conversation.

13942. If so, will you state to the Commission what Armstrong said on that occasion?

The witness withdrew.

508

Patrick Mullane, 21st July 1881.

The Chairman.—You will have to be careful.

The Witness.—I know, and it is difficult for me to tell it. I fear I can hardly tell it without my memory being refreshed in some way.

13943. By the Commission (to Detective Ward).—Do you mean to put the question did Armstrong acknowledge anything?

13944. By Detective Ward (to the witness).—Did he acknowledge or contradict anything?—I think Armstrong said that Ward never told him to tell a lie to Mr. Hare.

13945. By the Commission.—Have you a clear recollection on that?—I know that was the subject they were speaking of at the time.

13946. Are you certain of that, because it is very particular?—Armstrong said he never told him to tell a lie to Mr. Hare.

13947. Did Armstrong say at that time who induced him to tell a lie?—I know Armstrong was condemning the evidence of Duross about this very lie; and he seemed then to agree with Ward’s view of the conversation on what took place, and he was condemning Duross’s action in the matter.

13948. By Detective Ward.—Did he say Duross had no right to tell this lie to Mr. Hare, because they were not to be down till eight or nine o’clock?—He did say that when Mr. Hare went to the hut they were not supposed to be down. I do not know the exact conversation; but I know that Armstrong differed at the time from the evidence that was given at the time. I would like Armstrong to be present. They were speaking over the matter, and Ward felt aggrieved at this evidence given by Duross; and Armstrong agreed with Ward’s view of the matter.

13949. Did I not ask Armstrong in your presence, “Did I tell you that I told Mr. Hare that you were gone down”?—I could not tell that; but, as I said before, it was a conversation, and the recollection I have of it is what I have said.

13950. Did he say Duross told a lie?—He did not say Duross told a lie; but he agreed with you that Duross was wrong. I could not give the exact conversation.

13951. By Mr. Nicolson (to Senior-Constable Mullane).—With reference to the allusion of the man Wallace knowing the cave, will you inform the Commission whether you alluded to the cave, or what?—That Wallace knew of the hut party.

13952. You did not refer to the cave?—I could not say that; I meant the hut party.

13953. Not to the cave?—No.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow, at Wangaratta, at Ten o’clock.

(Taken at Wangaratta.)

FRIDAY, 22ND JULY 1881.
13954. By the Commission.—What are you?—Station master at Wangaratta.

13955. We want to know from you the exact hour at which the special train started for Benalla on Monday morning the 28th June 1880?—At 5.20 the train started for Glenrowan.

13956. How long would it take the train to go?—About twenty-five minutes.

13957. Do you remember how many passengers were in it?—I remember three, but I am not very sure about the fourth. There were two constables; Walsh was one. I know the appearance of the man very well, but I did not know the other. I think Mr. Marsden, the clerk of courts here, was one. There were three passengers and twelve constables and Mr. Marsden.

13958. Do you know whether the mounted troopers had gone away with their horses, any of them?—None had gone. I did not know until those constables came to go with the engine. I expected more, but in asking for the sergeant and the others, they answered me that they had gone by road, on horseback.

13959. Did they say how long before?—They may have done so, but my attention was taken up with the engine and train, and I cannot say.

13960. It has been stated that you gave notice that you saw the outlaws at one time?—No, that is a mistake. Information was given me by one of our employ that they had been seen by two young men named Delaney, living close by the station. The story given by the platelayer was that that morning, at four o’clock, the outlaws, instead of going through the railway gate, had swam the One-mile Creek, and crossed by the back of the hospital, behind Delaney’s house; and that these young men, who knew them and Steve Hart, looked at and recognized the outlaws, and that they were armed. I asked if this information had been conveyed to the police, and the answer was no, and he did not think it was likely to be, from the source it had come. I came down and gave the information to Constable Walsh myself. Then, on returning to the station, I thought I would have a conversation with the station master at Benalla, and I switched on the instrument for that purpose. To my great surprise, he was calling me, and proceeded to send me a message to the effect that a special train of constables was to leave that night for Beechworth, and to be on the look-out. Before he came to the word “Beechworth,” I made sure that the police had conveyed the information I had given them to Benalla, and that they were already acting upon it; but of course when the message said “to Beechworth,” I saw then it had nothing to do with my information.

13961. You know nothing personally about them?—No. When he was done with his message, I then asked him to listen to what I was going to tell him, and I gave the story to him, and his answer was that Mr. Sadleir and Sergeant Steele were beside him then, and would give them the information, and I said, “Certainly,” and to add that by the time they reached Wangaratta I would have obtained further information. So I went out in the middle of the night with a constable, and we saw a ganger and the young man who got it from the Delaneys. After the constable heard these two persons make their statement, I asked him if he would go to Delaney’s with me, and he said he did not think it necessary; indeed he thought it better to leave them alone, as they had been so quiet in the matter. When the special train arrived, I told the story and all about it to Sergeant Steele, and he seemed to attach considerable importance to it, but thought he had better carry out his instructions. I remember that he was very pointed in telling the constable to be there on his return into the camp, to have the thing acted on, and it seemed to him that it called for immediate attention. I remember that very well, but away went the special at all events, and the Kellys were down the other way.

13962. Were you aware of the strength of the station here at that time?—No, I could not say.

13963. This was after the murders of the constables?—It was the second Sunday, I think, after the murders—Sunday the 3rd November 1878.

13964. Then Sergeant Steele did not take any measure himself?—No.

13965. Did he give any reasonable excuse to your mind for not doing so?—Nothing, except that he had received his instructions to go on to Beechworth.

13966. Was there any special necessity for the train to have gone on—could it have been delayed an hour?—It could have been delayed one, or two, or three hours, as long as they liked.

13967. How long would the special train remain that morning before they started?—I should say they took fifteen minutes quite.

13968. Is there anything particular that you know about the affair that you desire to speak of?—Nothing. I had a little to do with the police all through, but nothing of very great importance. When the Glenrowan affair commenced, it was I, in fact, that set the wires in motion when the information was sent down from Beechworth of the murder of Sherritt, as to telegraphing about it to the police authorities.

The witness withdrew.

Frederic John Marsden sworn and examined.

By the Commission.—What are you?—Clerk of courts and receiver and paymaster here.
13970. Were you in the train that took some constables down to Glenrowan?—Yes, I was on the engine.

13971. Do you know what time you left—did you keep a record?—No; I should say I left here to go to the station between four and five.

13972. Was it daylight when you arrived?—No.

13973. You were present, I think, at the encounter with Ned Kelly?—Yes, I was.

13974. There are some disputed points in the evidence with reference to the revolver that Ned Kelly had—did you get a revolver on that occasion?—I did.

13975. How did you become possessed of it?—I got it from Sergeant Steele; he handed it to me. I ran up when Ned Kelly was knocked over, and Sergeant Steele was kneeling on Ned Kelly, and he handed me the revolver. I was in company with Dr. Nicholson.

13976. What did you do with it?—I parted with it; I do not know to whom I gave it.

13977. Upon that occasion?—Yes; it was being shown round, I remember distinctly.

13978. And you lost it altogether?—Yes.

13979. Had you any idea whether Ned Kelly had more than one revolver?—No; I only saw the one.

13980. Were you a witness of the attack on Mrs. Jones’s house?—Yes.

13981. Did you see anything that struck you as extraordinary about it?—Nothing except the shooting at the house, that struck me as being very extraordinary.

13982. So much of it?—Yes.

13983. Had you formed any idea at the time as to the position of parties?—When I got off the engine, and Mr. Rawlins met us with a lantern, I was under the impression the house was full of sympathizers, who were prepared to resist—that was the first impression I had.

13984. You found out afterwards that it was not so?—I found afterwards that it was not.

13985. Did you think there was a considerable amount of shooting kept up at the house during the day?—It seemed rather extraordinary so much firing.

13986. How soon did you become aware that Joe Byrne was killed?—We heard it in the morning soon after Kelly was captured.

13987. Did you hear it from the prisoners when they came out?—No, I do not think I did. I cannot say from whom I heard it, but it was reported at that time that he had been shot.

13988. And was lying dead upon the floor?—Yes.

13989. Were you in a position during the day to ascertain whether a shot was fired from the house or from the police—could you tell when the last shot was fired from the house?—No, I could not say for certain.

13990. Were you up at the beginning of the capture of Ned Kelly close enough to observe before he fell?—Oh, yes.

13991. Will you describe what occurred then, as near as you possibly can?—Yes. Ned Kelly came down the hill, like towards the house, and there was one of the men from Wangaratta I knew, Constable Healey, he seemed to come in contact with him.

13992. Would he be the first?—There were a number of them firing at him. I saw Montifort also firing. He was very close to where I was.

13993. Did you see Constables Phillips and Arthur there to know them?—I know Phillips. I do not think I know Arthur.

13994. Did you see Phillips about?—I do not remember him particularly. At this time I remember seeing Healey, Dowsett, and Montifort.

13995. Where was Dowsett?—Between the line of the railway fence and Kelly.

13996. When Kelly fell, how far was Dowsett from him?—Very close; perhaps between 20 and 30 yards.

13997. How did it appear to you that Ned Kelly fell—would it be a trip or apparently falling from a gunshot wound?—Shot, I should say, decidedly.

F. J. Marsden, 22nd July 1881. 13998. Did it not strike you he tripped coming down?—No, he sat down behind a log and after a while came on again.

13999. Did he fall with his head downhill or up?—Downhill, I think.

14000. Towards the railway?—Yes.

14001. Were you near enough to see whether his helmet fell off or was taken off?—No.

14002. You do not know whether Dowsett seized the revolver out of his hand or not?—I should certainly say he did not.

14003. Were you close enough to say that with certainty?—I cannot say who took it; I only know who gave it to me. Sergeant Steele fired, and then rushed to him when he fell.

14004. Did you see anything at all of Reardon and his son or their movements when the men came out of the house?—No, I do not remember it.

14005. Did you see Mrs. Reardon?—I saw her on the station.

14006. You did not see anything that occurred when she was coming out?—No, I saw her run out.
14007. Did you remain on the platform?—The greater part of the time, and I was just at the fence at one time.

14008. Did you see Mrs. Jones at all?—Only on the station. She came across and commenced to abuse Sergeant Steele.

14009. What did she say?—Called him a dog for shooting at them.

14010. For what?—She seemed to blame him for having the men there shooting.

14011. It was simply a general accusation?—She personally accused him, and abused him because he was about the first one she saw that she knew, and thinking he was very active. I handed Sergeant Steele my knife to cut Kelly’s armour off.

14012. Did you see Steele excited about the place?—No, he seemed to be rather the reverse—very cool.

14013. By Sergeant Steele.—When you got to the Sydney crossing, about a mile from the hut, Mrs. Jones’s, did you enquire whether the police had passed through there?—No.

14014. Did you hear anyone make enquiries there?—No. I understood the police had passed through ahead of us.

14015. Do you recollect when I handed you the revolver making any remark about the revolver?—Yes; I remarked about it having “Sydney” on it, as if it belonged to New South Wales or something.

14016. By the Commission.—Where was Sergeant Steele when he said that?—He was over the body of Kelly.

14017. By Sergeant Steele.—Did you see me previous to my firing at Kelly?—I saw you coming towards him from the house when he was coming down the hill.

14018. At that time, did you see any constable in the act of rushing him?—No, certainly not, I saw Dowsett and Senior-Constable Kelly firing at him.

14019. But had they started to come from under their cover at the time I fired the last shot at Kelly and he dropped?—No, I should say not.

14020. Did you see Senior-Constable Kelly coming to my assistance after Ned Kelly had fallen?—Yes, he was up before me a long time.

14021. Had he his rifle in his hand?—I could not say, there were so many guns and rifles. I could not say who had a rifle and who not.

14022. Could you say from Ned Kelly’s demeanour that he had been wounded previous to my shooting—did he appear like a man who had been disabled?—I knew he had been shot.

14023. But from his demeanour at the time would you say he was a wounded man then?—No, you could not tell. He tapped his armour on the breastplate, and said, “Come on, you dogs.” You could not tell. I was some distance off.

14024. You were in company with the newspaper reporters, who gave very full evidence in this case?—They were along with us, and had not an opportunity of knowing as much about it as I had, because they did not know the men, though they could see as well as I could.

14025. It was daylight?—Yes, just dawn.

14026. By the Commission.—Did you see Senior-Constable Kelly at all?—Yes, he was firing. He and Dowsett were rather conspicuous.

14027. And Healey?—Yes.

14028. By Sergeant Steele.—I want you to do is to describe the direction from which Senior-Constable Kelly ran when Ned Kelly fell?—He was between the railway station and the hill down which Ned Kelly was coming, and you were between the house and the hill. Ned Kelly was coming down at an angle.

14029. Do you remember making any remark when you first ran up to me in reference to the capture of Ned Kelly?—No.

14030. Did you notice when you came up I was knocked down, and the other men rushed up—did you see me run down?—Yes, I saw you stumble.

14031. Did you hear me complain of being hurt?—Yes, you complained of having hurt yourself—your knee, I think, you said.

14032. Did you see the revolver by my side when I got up off the ground?—No.

14033. Did you hear me make any remark to you and Dr. Nicholson, and show you my hand where the mark of powder was on it?—Yes, you said the pistol had gone off in your hand.

14034. I said, “See where the wretch fired at my hand”?—Yes, you said it went off just as you got hold.

14035. Have you any recollection of a person putting his hand out to take the revolver, and I said, “Do not touch that, that is my property”?—No.

14036. Do you recollect my handing you the revolver to take care of it?—Yes. I have already said that.

14037. You remarked it was a New South Wales revolver?—Yes.

14038. Why did you say that?—Because I looked at the plate on the side; “New South Wales” was written on it, I think.

14039. What sort of revolver was it—a Webley or a Colt?—I would not be able to say. It was plated at the side.

The witness withdrew.
William Willis sworn and examined.

14040. By the Commission.—What are you?—A saddler at present.

14041. There has been evidence given in Beechworth that you told a certain party that you knew of the police being in Aaron Sherritt’s hut?—Yes, I knew it well.

14042. Have you any objection to tell the Commission where you got the information?—I have. I was told as a friend, and the information was given to me in order to benefit me, because I had an order made by the bench.

14043. Would you have any objection to give it privately?—I would not like to, because I was requested not to, and it was on those grounds I received that information. Perhaps the police authorities are of opinion that it was a constable that gave me the information. Now, it was no constable.

14044. What did the party tell you?—An order was made by the bench that Sherritt was to get a month in Beechworth gaol if he did not pay me what he owed me. The order was forwarded by Mr. Langtree, my solicitor, to a man of the name of Phelan, to serve. He was dog officer at Beechworth.

14045. What did the person tell you then?—Phelan kept the order for about a fortnight or three weeks, and he said he had his son watching this Sherritt. When I was telling a friend of mine, who was asking if Sherritt had paid the amount, or if the order was served, I said, “No, Phelan has got the order”; and he said, “He will never serve the order, he is frightened. If you go up yourself, you need not be frightened to go to Sherritt’s house, because he is well protected, and he will not do anything to you, inasmuch as he would be too frightened.” He said there were four constables in the house, and that Sherritt did not go out only at night, and that I need not be frightened.

14046. Did he tell you from what source he got that information—whether he knew it of himself?—He knew it of himself. The party was a man who would not injure Sherritt, neither would he injure the police; and this was strictly private. It was known to no other person but himself and another, and they were all the members of his family. They were friends of the police and friends of Sherritt. I will go as far as to tell that.

14047. He said it was only known to another?—He did not tell me that; but I know it was to a member of his family.

14048. Did he lead you to understand that it was known outside at all?—No, he did not; but I went to Beechworth to serve this warrant on the Friday, and on the Saturday night Sherritt was shot. I would have been down on the Friday night, only Phelan had the order, and he was out of Beechworth.

14049. You did not see Sherritt at all till he was shot?—I did not; but I was speaking to a friend of mine in Beechworth, and telling him what I intended to do, and I said, “You had better keep this quiet.” “Oh!” he said, “you need not be particular about it, it is well known to everyone in Beechworth the police have been there for weeks and weeks.”

14050. Did you hear from any other source that it was known?—No. I thought it was strictly private, inasmuch as no one knew it from me except Constable Walsh, and I did not tell him who told me. I told him and Mr. Langtree, and my wife, and no other.

14051. From what your friend in Beechworth said you inferred it was generally known?—Yes, it was well known throughout Beechworth.

14052. Then you did not go down to serve the order at all?—Well, I went to see Senior-Constable Mullane, whom I have known for years, on Friday night, and I told him my errand, and he said he would have served it; and I said the police were protecting Sherritt, and would not do that part of the work.

14053. Did you tell him you knew?—I did not tell him I knew police were there, only some parties. He said he would attend to the order next week.

14054. Did he lead you to understand that he was surprised at your information?—No; but since he said he was surprised how I knew it. Do not go away with a false impression. The information was received by me from this party, who was a very near friend to the man who was shot, and also a friend to some members of the force, so far as the officers were concerned, and also a great enemy to some of the officers—one, I believe, who would do anything to injure some of the officers of the force. I got it from a reliable source; just the same as from Sherritt himself.

14055. Have you any objection to give the name of the gentleman on Beechworth who said it was generally known?—Well, I know he is a man who would not care to have his name brought forward. He is a man holding a very prominent position in Beechworth at the present time.

14056. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you recollect writing me a letter in December last?—I do.

14057. And another in March?—Yes.

14058. Have you any objection to my handing those two letters to the Chairman?—No; if those letters are kept apart from some gentlemen in the room.—[The same were handed to the Chairman, and perused by the Commissioner only.]

14059. By the Commission.—Had you a daughter of Mrs. Sherritt’s living with you at one time?—Yes, for eighteen months; and it was through her I allowed this brother of her’s to get into my books.

14060. Was she living with you at the time Sherritt was shot?—No, she had left some time before; but a better girl never entered the house. She was different altogether from the brother. The brother used to come down sometimes to Benalla, and used to stop a day or two in the house, and put up his horse, and stick up everything in the house, and pay for nothing.

Sergeant Steele produced the Occurrence Book of the station, showing the names of the constables and officers at the Wangaratta station on the dates referred to in the evidence.

Arthur Loftus Maud Steele further examined.

14061. By the Commission.—You desire to make some statement, we believe, with reference to the statement of Constables Phillips and Arthur. Did you make any exclamation at any time about having shot Mrs. Jones?—I never mentioned to Arthur, either directly or indirectly, or in his hearing, to my knowledge, of having fired at Mrs. Jones.

14062. Did you mention it to anybody?—Not that I am aware of. I merely made a remark it was a wonder that Mrs. Reardon was not shot in escaping from the house, because they were firing all round; but it was some time after that I said that.

A.L.M. Steele, 22nd July 1881.
Constable Johnson that I took upon myself to abandon the others and go away myself. It was nothing of the sort.

14076. It was a case of missing each other?—Yes. I never took upon myself to go away; I would not think of doing away without instructions from my superior officer.

14077. By Mr. Sadleir.—There was no design?—No, certainly not. Constable Johnson demurred at it.

14078. By the Commission.—Did Constable Johnson assign any reason for his having said this?—Yes; he said, “Steele, you beggar, you thought you would drop on them, and have all the credit yourself.”

14079. Did you expect to drop on them at any time?—I had no faith in it when the blacks seemed to make nothing of it. My impression was the outlaws had gone from there before, which was afterwards verified.

14080. By Mr. Nicolson.—You remember us coming to the end of the search?—Yes. The black trackers knocked about for some time, and could not make anything of it. There were footmarks in the grass—long grass.

14081. In whose hands was this search?—Who was in charge of the trackers and party of men—what officer or acting sub-officer?—There was a man there, I forget his name—a man named Cameron was in charge of the blacks. He understood their language, and he worked with them up the tracks, but they found nothing—they could not make anything of them after an hour or two hours’ search, and then we thought to go and search this place on the hills.

14082. Was not Constable Johnson in charge of those men who were tracking in this party?—Yes, it was Johnson’s party.

14083. And we went out with that party to enable them to satisfy themselves about the track?—Yes.

14084. Were they allowed to complete their work?—No person interfered with them in any way.

14085. Was there any scrub there?—No scrub at all—some of that tufty grass—little bushes of that 14086. Was there any indication or any expressed feeling to convey the idea that the offenders were there about?—Not a bit. Of course a great many of the men were sick and tired of waiting about that, thinking it ridiculous to look in such a low flat place, with farms about, for the men.

14087. Do you remember just before going through the bush they were leading us jumping a bush fence?—I do.

14088. Do you remember our running along a fence of sawn timber just close under the hill?—Yes.

14089. And there the fence ended?—Yes, and there was a gate.

14090. Was it near there they concluded their work—how far off from that?—I should think some distance. There was the mark of a horse going some distance outside the fences, but there was a lot of traffic there between the range and the farm.

14091. Two or three days previous to that a horse had been taken in?—Yes.

14092. How long had that horse been out?—He must have been out a good time. He was very poor, with raised scabs, as if after being driven hard and allowed to remain out in a shower of rain. The horse looked wretched when he was brought in.

14093. What was your opinion as to how long the horse had been cast off?—Three or four days, perhaps more.

14094. This search was subsequent?—Yes.

Mr. Nicolson.—I wish to state that this occurred on the 12th. I was at Barnawartha on the 23rd November, on the Murray, and I was on the return back from there and had been at Benalla. I came up from Benalla to Wangaratta. I have already stated in my evidence I found this search party had come in and been humbugged, as already described. I had information at this time, I believe, and I had it in my book, that the outlaws had abandoned the horses days previous to this.

14095. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—Is this the horse that Johnson referred to?

Mr. Nicolson.—Yes.

14096. When was this search made—was it after Johnson reported that Mr. Brook Smith would not follow on?—He had not reported that to me then. The men were in a state of considerable excitement about the matter, and to satisfy them and give them every chance possible, although I knew myself there was no chance of the Kellys being there, because I knew three days before the horses had been abandoned, still I took them out, and we went in a large party, and took Sergeant Steele with a large party, to cover as much country as possible and to satisfy the men, and I allowed them to do whatever they liked, and they made nothing of it, as I expected. I never drew them away—there was nothing to draw them away. It was too late to do any good, the Kellys had passed there several days before. I can produce the informant that gave the information that the horses had been abandoned on the 9th.

14097. Was this before the black trackers came?—Yes.
14098. The trackers proved of no service to you on that occasion?—No.

Mr. Nicolson. I do not believe they were acting under funk at all. I formed the opinion since then—nothing of the kind struck me.

Mr. Sadleir. I saw the beaten tracks as plain as this carpet. They would not take them. They had us in the swamp before they could explain themselves.

Sergeant Steele. I understand Mr. Brook Smith found those tracks the day before, and we went the following day, and he showed them to us. I wish to examine Mr. Sadleir now to corroborate my statement about shooting at the Glenrowan hotel. I mentioned to him at the time that I thought I had shot Byrne. It is a very serious charge for a man to say that I made use of language that I never heard or thought of. It is something preposterous. I was as cool as possible the whole of the time, and I never drew a revolver and caught hold of one of the men’s revolvers who was going to shoot at Ned Kelly.

14099. By the Commission.—You fired at a man who you say was crawling on the ground?—Yes.
14100. We had about five or six witnesses who have all sworn that that young man was coming along with his hands up, and he turned round and ran back when he was threatened!—It was an utter impossibility—no one on the ground could say that except myself. If you knew the situation—
14101. We know the situation. The question is did that young man fall when you fired?—He did not.
14102. We have it in evidence from several that that young man was following his mother, leading the child, and that he had the other hand up, and when you cried out and threatened them he ran back, and then you shot him through the shoulder, and he fell at the door?—That is not true. I fired—I believe that is the man, but no person knew till I told Dr. Hutchison, and he elicited from him when he was shot. There is another man named Brady who was at the hospital who can corroborate this statement.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Thursday the 28th July, at Eleven o’clock, in Melbourne.

POLICE.

514

THURSDAY, 28th JULY 1881.

Present:

The Chairman read the evidence of Mrs. Barry and Mrs. Sherritt, junior, taken privately at Beechworth.

The Chairman also read the following declaration made by Constable Alexander at the request of the Commission:—"I, Robert Alexander, of Glenrowan, in the colony of Victoria, make oath and say: 1st. That about ten minutes after the second shot was fired by the outlaws at Sherritt’s hut I aw Constables Armstrong and Dowling partly under the bed, lying on their chests. Constable Duross was sitting at the end of the bedroom near the bed. I do not know who put the women under the bed. 2nd. Dan Kelly did not come into the sitting-room; had he done so, I must have seen him or heard his footsteps.

—ROBERT ALEXANDER, M.C., 2755."

Michael Edward Ward further examined.

14103. By the Commission.—You remember asking for a report from the constables who were in the cave, known as Mr. Nicolson’s cave party?—I sent a telegram for that.
14104. That was from the whole eight that were there?—From the whole.
14105. What induced you to adopt that unusual practice?—On account of the time I had arrived and the time the train would start.
14106. No, I mean what induced you to adopt that unusual practice of asking constables on duty to send in a report?—They were not on that duty then; it was after the duty was over.
14107. I will put it another way. Is it usual when constables have been on duty to ask them to send in a report that is to be filed in the office?—No: if I had been at home, I would not have asked them for a report; I could take their names then and submit them myself.
14108. Then it was because they were there in your absence, performing a duty, that you asked them for a report?—Yes, knowing they were about to return to their stations on that day, and that I would not have an opportunity of seeing each of them, nor time to speak to them.
14109. I think we have it in evidence that you said it was for the purpose of getting a good entry on their record sheet?—Yes; all that was some time before the affair at Aaron Sherritt’s hut.

14110. Were you led to understand by anything that occurred that it might possibly be known that the men were in the cave?—I was not. Had I been led to believe, or informed of anything of that, I should have immediately communicated with the officer, and had them withdrawn. I might state that I tested it in every way I could. Having asked Mr. Nicolson, I got a man from Benalla to come up, who was directed to proceed to Eldorado, Woolshed, Sebastopol, and Reed’s Creek, and try and find out if any of the outlaws or their friends knew what the opinion of the people was. The man did not know that the police were out.

14111. He went out to find out if they understood that there was any plan laid for their capture?—Yes.

14112. Without his knowing of the cave party at all?—Yes, without his knowing of the cave party at all; and after staying a few days at Mrs. Chappell’s, who lives opposite Joe Byrne’s mother’s place, he ascertained from Mrs. Chappell that the Kellys were still in the country, that they were going to do something good, that Mrs. Byrne’s people were in great joy—they were not one bit frightened of being caught—that the outlaws would astonish the world the next thing they would do.

14113. When you called upon Constable Barry for his report he gave you a certain report?—Which report would that refer to?

14114. April 2nd—there are three reports?—I was not at home when the two first reports or the memorandum that is on that was put on. I was in Benalla then.

14115. Did you tell Barry that report would do?—I went up to the room and I said, “This is not the report that I require; I simply want the names of the men and the time they were employed on the secret duty, and how they performed it, as Mr. Nicolson will put a favorable entry on your sheet.”

14116. Did Mr. Nicolson desire that report?—He did not ask for the report; he told me to submit the men’s names, and I was not able to do so without calling upon them or seeing them, and I was frightened they would have left before I got back.

14117. Did you see Constable Barry’s second report?—Yes; I saw the first and second.

14118. And told him those were not the reports required?—Yes; and also Barry said, “Why did not Mullane tell us that, instead of putting this memo. on? Had he told us what he wanted at first, we would have given him it.”

14119. Did you ever tell a superior officer that Barry reported that he believed it was known the were in the cave?—No.

14120. How do you reconcile that with your report that you sent in here?—“I am pleased to be able to state that the conduct of the constables has been everything that could be desired for care and secrecy; they performed their duty to the satisfaction of the men placed in charge of them from time time. * * * They willingly obeyed all orders given by me by the instructions of the Assistant Commissioner; and although the duty has been very severe, their disposition was good, as they were in great hopes of being successful, although it has been a failure”?—They always were careful.

14121. But then it came to your knowledge that one of those men said that he believed that their presence was known?—Yes, in that report.

14122. He stated in his report, “But Mrs. Sherritt, senior, has made statements to me, which I afterwards reported to Detective Ward, which would lead me to believe that the Byrne family were aware of our presence”?—But he never did make any statements to me; he never told me that; had he done so, I would have reported it at the time.

14123. You swear he never told you that?—He never told me anything about Mrs. Byrne; he only told me that Aaron Sherritt was absent on two nights. I then wrote him a letter, which letter he afterwards produced. Barry was never supposed to see Mrs. Sherritt.

14124. Have you any idea what could have induced Senior-Constable Mullane to have written this— “I have called on Constable Barry, 2710, for a report relative to how the special duty at Sebastopol was performed, and whether it came to his knowledge that the Byrnes, or any of the friends of the outlaws, were aware of the presence of the police at Sebastopol”?—I have not; for I told Mullane in the office, when I came home, had he attended to my telegram and spoken to Constable Hagger, he would have told him what was required.

14125. We want this cleared up, because I may tell you it has a very ugly face upon it?—Well, I am willing to do anything I possibly can in the world; I am telling you the truth, and am not frightened of any man for the truth.

14126. The simple thing is, on this 2nd of April 1880, you had a report in your possession which states it was the belief of the man who made the report that their presence was known, and you say nothing whatever of that to your superior officer; how do you account for that?—Well, I did not see my superior officer again, as Mr. Nicolson was away, I think, on the 3rd.

14127. But how could you refuse his report when he said that?—I did not refuse it; he took it back.

14128. Of course, at your instance?—The moment I told him what was wanting, he said, “Give me that back, and I will make another report.”

M. E. Ward, continued.
28th July 1881.
14129. He made a report that did not suit the view you had at the time?—It did not suit Mullane.
14130. It did not suit your own view; did you see both reports?—I saw both reports.
14131. And you told him those were not what were wanted at all?—Yes.
14132. Having had that information before you, and having seen that Mullane asked him for a certain thing, which he did not give, in his third report it must have come fully to your knowledge that that man i it was known they were there?—Well, my reason 14133. It must have been then in your knowledge that the man believed it was known he was in the cave with the party?—If the six said that it was known they were in the cave, I would not believe it, with the strict enquiry I had made myself.
14134. Barry, in his evidence, said, “I handed that to Detective Ward on receiving the others back. 7537. Did he wait while you wrote that?—He asked me to write it. 7538. Did he wait while you wrote it?—I wrote it in the barrack-room, and met him that evening and gave it to him, or the next morning, in the street. 7539. Did he dictate something like the wording of the report that would be acceptable to him?—He gave an idea of what should he said, but did not dictate it”?—I said, as I say now, what was required was the names of the men, the time they were engaged, and how they performed their duty, as Mr. Nicolson would put a favorable entry on their sheet. I then walked out of the barrack-room to the office. I did not say I would not accept it; I said that was what was required.
14135. But you refused the other because certain matter was in it?—I took it back to Mullane and showed him the mistake.
14136. You handed back the report?—I handed back the report, because he asked for it.
14137. You told him what you wanted, and he prepared another report?—Yes.
14138. How do you account for the fact that you gave him back the report, the first report that he wrote, saying that would not do, and the second you returned saying that would not do, and you told him how to write the third report—according to your own statement;—how do you account for having all that knowledge before you in writing, and not allowing your superior officer to know it?—From the time I received this from Mullane I walked to the barrack-room and told Barry what I wanted, and he then said, “Why did not Mullane tell us that?”
14139. But here is the point—you forgot to give in that report?—He asked that back from me.
14140. What right had you to give it to him—that was his report?—I do not know what right I had, but I did not call for the report; it was Mullane.
14141. You have reported favorably upon the whole of that arrangement. A constable who was in the cave doing duty there says he believes it was well known they were there, and you did not send it in?—Why did not he report it to me—the cave party was over?
14142. Why did you not report it to your superior officer when he gave it?—Because I thought it was in consequence of a row between Barry, Mullane, and Falkiner, and having the reports of five other men, men who were in charge, whom I placed implicit confidence in, it was their duty to always report the moment it became known.
14143. You sent in this report after you had this No. 2 report of Barry’s in your hand?—Yes.
14144. Which says he believed it was known he was there. You asked him to provide another report, which he did, and then you sent in a report in which you say, “Constables Hagger, Alexander, Armstrong, and Barry performed their duty to the satisfaction of the men placed in charge of them, and willingly obeyed all orders given by me by instructions of the Assistant Commissioner,” and so on. Those reports were not attached?—Those were not; they were in Barry’s pocket.
14145. Barry gave those, and you said they would not do?—He gave them to Mullane, and he gave them to me, and I returned them to him when he asked me.
14146. After having seen that, and decided that that report could not go in, you furnish this report, leading the Assistant Commissioner of Police to understand that everything had gone right?—That report is correctly true, as far as they were concerned; they did everything I asked them to do they told me they carried out the orders given; if they did not do it, they should report to me.
14147. Then we come to the one simple question, and the answer must be simple, that you were aware those men believed that it was known they were in the cave, and you did not report?—No, I did not report that.
14148. Were you aware it was reported at the depot, or known at the depot, that the presence of those men was known in that district?—I heard so.
14149. When?—I could not say what time, but I heard it.
14150. Do you remember how you heard it?—I could not tell how, but I remember I heard it.
14151. You cannot remember whether it was during the currency of the cave party, or after it was broken up?—I could not tell which. I know it was spoken of to me at Wangaratta before that, and I sent in a report and had it investigated. Steele said to me, “The men are having a severe time in the cave.”
that everything has been done to your satisfaction, and you have the information before you, in your own hands, that it is believed the party were known to be there?—It was broken up then. They never said this until the party was broken up. What was the use of my having men there if they knew this, and did not come and tell me until the row commences between the non-commissioned officer and two men? Those constables themselves will tell you that it was Mullane that did all, and not me.

14154. What do you mean by doing all?—The way he asked for the reports, and the crossness, and the animus he always displayed towards them.

14155. We have no writing to show what Mullane was to ask for?—Where is my telegram? My telegram does not in any way direct Mullane to put any memo, like that on.

14156. On the first report Mullane puts this memo.: “I have called on Constable Barry, 2710, for a report relative to how the special duty at Sebastopol was performed, and whether it came to his know ledge that the Byrnes, or any of the friends of the outlaws, were aware of the presence of the police at Sebastopol.” That brings out a second report from Barry. Barry’s first report says he does not know what to report. The second report is “But as to whether the friends of the outlaws were aware of our presence there, I am not in a position to state positively, as I never had an opportunity of going among them to enquire; but Mrs. Sherritt, senior, has made statements to me, which I afterwards reported to Detective Ward, which would lead me to believe that the Byrne family were aware of our presence”?—He did not do that to me.

14157. The simple point is this, that that report was given to you, and you would not accept it, and you failed to let your superior officer know that such a report had been given to you, and let him remain in ignorance that one of the party there, at all events, considered that their presence was known?—But I knew that he did not speak to me. If you will please look at my telegram, you will see that my telegram in no way authorizes Mullan in any way to call for this.

14158. Your telegram runs:—“Call on the special-duty men for separate reports as to the nature of their duty. Hagger knows what to say.” Armstrong, in his evidence, said that you instructed him not to appoint a sentry at Sherritt’s hut?—They could not have a sentry; they were supposed to be inside all day.

14159. It was you who gave the instructions to them?—Yes.

14160. What were they?—My instructions to Armstrong were to go to this hut, to secrete themselves there in the room during the day, and between eight and nine o’clock at night to go down to Mrs. Byrne’s house, and there watch till a little before daylight in the morning; to be back in the hut before daylight, and to keep themselves quiet during the day. I bought calico for the door and blinds for the window, in order to have them not seen.

14161. They were by no means to leave the house during the day?:—By no means to leave the house during the day. There were only three sent first, and Mr. Hare sent a telegram to me to say, “I am frightened three men is not enough; it is not safe; send one immediately; I will send you a man as soon as I can;” and I did so.

14162. You were not aware that the men left the hut at any time during the day?—No.

14163. You have heard it since?—Yes. I would not have had them do it for anything, the place was so open; and if I went down there, everybody knew Ward. I might tell you that on one occasion I was going down there Mr. Hare put me in the boot of the buggy while I was going there. I was so well known that I had to be always doing my work by night. I might tell you also that Comyn and Ryan, two constables I had sent down there Mr. Hare put me in the boot of the buggy while I was going there. I was so well known that I had so open; and if I went down there, everybody knew Ward. I might tell me until the row commences between the non-commissioned officer and two men? Those constables themselves will tell you that it was Mullane that did all, and not me.

14164. By Mr. Nicolson.—Aaron Sherritt was absent about two nights you say—was that on the occasion of his marriage?—Yes.

14165. And you said you replied to Barry by letter?—Yes.

14166. Will you shortly relate to the Commission about the trouble the police had—you and Mullane—with reference to Aaron about the time of his marriage?—At that time we had a great difficulty to contend with, on account of Aaron Sherritt getting married to a Roman Catholic girl against the will of the parents.

14167. Did that interfere very much with other arrangements?—It did.

14168. Is that the matter that is referred to in Barry’s letter?—Yes.

14169. By the Commission.—Is that what Barry refers to when he says, “From the conversation of Mrs. Sherritt”?—No, that refers to one occasion. I took a copy of Barry’s letter.

14170. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember Aaron Sherritt being brought in by you to see me?—I do.

14171. From what was said to him, did he settle down to his work shortly afterwards?—Yes.

14172. And lived with his wife—he had been apart from her for a few days?—Yes.

14173. Following on that was there any jealousy between his father and mother and brother and himself?—There was a great jealousy.

14174. What was the cause of that jealousy?—The marriage of the son to a Roman Catholic.

14175. The immediate cause—was there anything about the earning of the reward?—Jack Sherritt said that we thought too much of Aaron, and that Aaron would get all the reward, and he would not get any.

14176. Were you aware that Mrs. Sherritt, senior, ever told Barry anything?—No.

14177. Did Mrs. Sherritt, senior, ever deny that?—Yes, she said the never spoke to Barry; she said that in her evidence.
14178. Now are you aware that occasionally, from almost the first week that the men were stationed at the cave, there were little grumblings?—Many grumblings amongst themselves.

14179. I mean about the work, and so on?—Yes.

14180. That was a part of the work you and Mullan e had to perform, to keep them at the work, and keep them from becoming discontented?—Yes; I must say the work was very severe on the men.

14181. Have you reason to believe that the cave party were discovered before the police were withdrawn?—In my opinion, from what I heard since, I believe it was never discovered by the friends of the outlaws until after the police were withdrawn.

14182. By the Commission.—Upon what do you found that opinion?—Upon what happened after—what came to my knowledge after the cave party was withdrawn, from enquiries made. I made several enquiries; in fact, the schoolmaster on the Woolshed said to me, "Ward, if you place confidence in me, I could do some good for you." I said, "What do you mean?" He said, "In having those police watching." I said, "You would be the wrong man for me to place confidence in."

14183. By the Commission.—This man was a sympathizer with the Kellys?—Yes.

14184. His answer would lead you to believe that he knew nothing about the police being there watching?—Yes.

14185. By Mr. Nicolson.—According to your knowledge, did the Chappells know nothing about it?—I could not say. I never went there after I found him out in betraying me in something else.

14186. You had enquiries made all round the area?—I had careful enquiries made.

14187. One of the constables, I forget whether it was Barry or Falkiner, alluded to a child passing backwards and forwards between the Sherritt's and Byrne's; what girl was that?—Ann Jane Sherritt, by my instructions, going to Mrs. Byrne's.

14188. What is the character of this girl with reference to secrecy and cunning?—She is a secret, cunning, good girl, and I have proved her to be that.

14189. Did you on more than one occasion ask me to have an interview with her to see what extraordinary secrecy and acuteness she possessed?—I did repeatedly; I proved her to be true to me.

14190. Did not the safety and lives of the Sherritts depend upon the secrecy observed?—Most undoubtedly so. On one occasion Ann Jane Sherritt said she received a letter from Mrs. Byrne to go and see her, and Mrs. Byrne told her then that Joe Byrne and Dan Kelly called at the Black Dog Creek. Joe Byrne gave a letter to Mrs. Byron to deliver it to Mrs. Byrne. Mrs. Byron, not being on good terms with Mrs. Byrne, she sent the letter by her husband to Batchelor, who lives next door to Byrne, which he delivered to Mrs. Byrne. We had enquiries made, and found that Byron was at Batchelor's just about the time, and that is how I proved her to be true to me.

14191. You have other proof besides that?—Many others, but that is one fact. The day after I was examined in Beechworth I saw Mrs. Barry. She told me that she was in the hut on the night that Mr. Hare and I visited there, that the constables accused me of telling them to tell a falsehood. I do not remember seeing her there.

14192. The Chairman.—She said she heard whispering, but did not know what it was.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next at Eleven o'clock.

TUESDAY, 2ND AUGUST 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A., Hon. J. H. Graves, Esq., M.L.A.,

Frederick Alfred Winch sworn and examined.

[The room was cleared.]

14193. By the Commission.—What position do you occupy in the police?—Superintendent of police. I am the senior superintendent in the force.

14194. In charge of the Melbourne and Bourke district?—Yes.

14195. We have had certain statements made by Captain Standish and by other officers of the police speaking slightingly of certain officers, showing there was a disagreement in the force between the officers?—Yes.

14196. And we would like to know if you have any information to give the Commission on that point?—As to the want of harmony or otherwise between the officers?

14197. Yes—are you aware that it existed?—I am quite well aware that it has existed for some time past.

14198. Are you aware when it commenced?—I think it has existed now for some years past.
14199. Can you give about the time?—I cannot say exactly how long, but it has been quite patent to me and other officers that there has been a want of harmony existing for a considerable time.

14200. Cannot you say how long—was it two, three, four, five, six, or ten years?—I should say for the last four or five years at least.

14201. Have you any idea of what first led to that want of harmony?—Well, my impression is that it was brought about owing to Captain Standish’s action in extending so much favor and consideration towards one officer in particular.

14202. You had better name the officer—in fact it will be necessary for you to name him?—I have no hesitation in naming him. I mean Mr. Hare.

14203. Have you any idea how it exhibited itself in the first instance?—It seemed to me that whenever there was any particular duty to be performed which would bring an officer to the front, Mr. Hare was invariably selected over the heads of others, his seniors, who ought to have been called upon to do that which he was detailed for.

14204. Could you specify any of these?—I can. One case was in the matter of Power the bushranger to begin with, and subsequently in the matter of the Kellys.

F.A. Winch, continued, 2nd August 1881

14205. In the matter of Power I think Mr. Nicolson has given evidence that as senior officer he went up to the hut?—Yes.

14206. And he asserted his right when he was on the ground?—So I have always heard.

14207. Had Captain Standish taken that right from him by any overt act before they went up?—I cannot say. I was not in Melbourne at the time; I was at Castlemaine. What I mean to say is, that the selection of a particular officer for a duty of that sort, which, if carried out successfully, must give that particular officer kudos, was not fair to his superior officer, who ought to have been selected for it.

14208. We must have something more than mere feeling. How do you arrive at that opinion that Captain Standish specially favored Mr. Hare in this particular business?—As a matter of fact he was selected for it; that is all I know.

14209. And as a matter of practice do you say that Mr. Nicolson should have been chosen for the duty?—I think so. Certainly he was a senior officer, and should take precedence over a junior in a matter of that sort; and he is a man of great experience in such matters, and a man of indomitable pluck, as I know.

14210. We have plenty of evidence, and this feeling exists very strongly?—Very strongly.

14211. Can you give us any evidence of Mr. Hare’s conduct as to whether he, on his own behalf, did anything unfair in the matter to get himself selected?—Certainly not to my knowledge.

14212. Are you aware whether Mr. Hare ever prompted, or used any influence with Captain Standish that would be to the detriment of other officers?—I cannot say that.

14213. Or on any occasion interfered with the discipline of the force?—I cannot say that either. Mr. Hare is not recognised as the head of the department, but it was pretty well known that very little was done in respect to the department without consulting Mr. Hare, and the officers generally looked upon it that he really had more to do with the whole conduct of the force than Captain Standish. That was the general feeling of the officers throughout the force.

14214. In point of fact the feeling through the force was that Mr. Hare was really the moving Acting Commissioner of Police?—Yes.

14215. And in consequence of that was there a feeling against Mr. Hare?—Thero was no doubt a feeling of jealousy amongst other officers, senior and junior to him, that he had too much voice in the general control of police affairs.

14216. Then this feeling has gone further than as between Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare. It has been participated in by other officers?—I think so. That has been the feeling generally.

14217. Did that feeling go downwards in the force, are you aware—that is, were there men in the police force who seemed to take sides—that is, the constables?—I do not know; I never heard an expression of opinion from any constable or subordinate on that point. That would not be likely to come to me.

14218. Do you think that, in the position that Mr. Hare then occupied, being, as you suppose, the favorite of the Chief Commissioner, he did more or less than you would have done had you been similarly circumstanced?—I cannot say. That is a hypothetical case. I do not see how I could answer that.

14219. Did he do more than you would have done if you had been brought into a similar position with Captain Standish?—I cannot say that. If Captain Standish had taken me into his confidence in the same way as he did Mr. Hare, no doubt I should have given the best advice I possibly could, and done the best I could for the service generally.

14220. Are you aware of any instance where Mr. Hare had shown any superiority in his judgment that would lead him to be looked up to as being worthy of more confidence than the others?—Certainly not. There are officers in the force who have done a great deal more than Mr. Hare ever did—much more duty, and more important duty, in respect to the capture of bushrangers and others.

14221. Then the feeling in the force is that the chance of promotion was interfered with by this apparent favoritism to one officer?—Yes, and my opinion has been much strengthened by the evidence given before this Commission, by which it appears that Captain Standish had proposed Mr. Hare to be the Commissioner in his place, if anything happened to him; so that, in fact, Mr. Hare carried in his pocket the Chief Commissionership.

14222. That led to the disaffection that has existed since that period?—Yes. I felt it, as the senior officer of the force next to the Commissioner, that he was chosen in this matter of the Kelly business to be sent up there over my head, because, I unhesitatingly say, when Mr. Nicolson was recalled I anticipated that I should he the officer sent, instead of which Mr. Hare was sent up; and I believe positively that Captain Standish intended all along that, if impossible, Mr. Hare should be at the capture of those men. I think, in that aspect of the thing, I was treated very unfairly in the matter, because I have been twenty nine years in the police force now, and have captured bushrangers personally over and over again, and have had great experience in the early days of the goldfields in such matters, and I could not make out how I was passed over in that way. I felt it a great grievance.

14223. Was that a general feeling?—Well, I know all the other officers expressed their great astonishment at the way I was treated in the matter.

14224. Would the fact of that jealousy existing, and Mr. Hare being placed in the position you have described, have a tendency to prevent him from obtaining information he might otherwise have obtained from officers subordinate to himself?—I do not think that. I can say this, that, although I was senior to Mr. Hare by many years, although I felt aggrieved that he was sent there instead of my being sent, still I obtained valuable information in Melbourne here, every part of which I at once furnished him with.

14225. Then what you say is meant to be a reflection only upon the Chief Commissioner, and not in any way upon the fitness of Mr. Hare?—Not at all.

14226. You do not wish to reflect upon him?—Not in the least; but I think I may say, without egotism, that I am not only just as good as he, but also, I have had greater experience in such matters.

14227. But it is the case that it had a bad effect upon the three generally?—Yes, it simply amounts to this—if anybody was captured this officer would naturally get great credit for it, and possibly advancement; therefore, if the officer senior to him is debarred from distinguishing himself in that way, it is unfair, and I consider they dealt with me in that way unfairly.

14228. You are aware that there was a superintendent in the North-Eastern district—Mr. Sadleir?—
Yes, I know Mr. Sadleir; he was a subaltern of mine for a long time.

14229. Has any reason come under your notice why he was not entrusted with the capture of the outlaws in that district?—No, I have heard no reason; all I know is he was superseded.

14230. He was not exactly superseded, for he was acting with that officer?—But he was acting under the control of the officer sent up.

14231. He was not consulted officially?—No.

14232. Are you aware that Mr. Nicolson was visiting superintendent of the different districts?—Yes, and he was the Assistant Commissioner of Police. His old title was the Inspecting Superintendent, and that was altered afterwards to the Assistant Commissioner. He was supposed to visit the districts throughout the whole colony, and report on everything.

14233. Was he ever interfered with in that duty by any police officer?—Not that I am aware of.

14234. Was he at any time, to your knowledge, recalled from any district that he had gone to inspect, and without any reason assigned?—I am not aware of that. He was recalled from Benalla over the Kelly business, but as to the other times I do not know.

14235. Do you know if there was any dispute at all at the time of the capture of Power as to who should be entitled to the precedence on account of that—the credit of that?—Yes, I heard so. I do not know for a fact, but I always heard there was a difference of opinion between Mr. Hare and Mr. Nicolson on that point.

14236. Mr. Hare claimed it?—Yes, he has claimed it; but, to my mind, there is very little praise due to either in the matter, for Power was betrayed into their hands. Those gentlemen were led to the spot where he was lying, and they had merely to rush on him. There was no particular acumen displayed, and no special danger at all.

14237. No skill whatever?—Not the slightest. I do not think there was the slightest praise due to either for it.

14238. The statement about the favoritism was in consequence of favoritism in the Power and Kelly business?—In the Kelly business. Mr. Nicolson was first sent up; he was recalled, having failed to do anything apparently. After that Captain Standish went up himself, taking with him Mr. Hare. After wards, when Captain Standish and Mr. Hare came back, Mr. Nicolson was again sent up; Mr. Nicolson was then, after a time, recalled, and then to my astonishment Mr. Hare was again selected and sent up.

14239. Which you considered unfair?—I considered that it was a slight upon me as a senior officer, and entitled to anything of that sort. I was never consulted in any way. I should have thought, after a time, recalled, and then

14240. Have you anything to do with the detectives?—No. I am the senior officer in the department

2nd August 1881
F.A. Winch,
next to the chief. I am next to Mr. Nicolson. I joined the force on the 6th September 1852, nearly twenty-nine years ago.

14241. Are you senior to Mr. Nicolson?—No, he is senior to me.

14242. Then your feeling in the Kelly business was this, that without expressing any opinion as to whether it was wise to withdraw Mr. Nicolson, you say that, instead of Mr. Hare being sent at that time, if any other officer was sent you should have been?—I think I should have been sent to begin with, and if not I, Mr. Chomley, who is next to me, ought to have been sent. I do not see why Mr. Hare, having failed the first time, should again have been selected for this duty.

14243. Did you join as a cadet?—I did. I was a cadet from September the 6th until the beginning of November, when I was appointed as a lieutenant of the mounted police.

14244. Did Mr. Hare join as a cadet?—I think not.

14245. One return shows Mr. Nicolson having joined on the 1st December 1852 as a cadet, is that senior to you?—That is junior to me.

14246. If Mr. Nicolson joined as a cadet on the 1st December 1852, would he be junior or senior to you?—Junior of course in service.

14247. According to the last estimates of Acting Chief Commissioner Nicolson you were the second then?—Yes.

14248. And you are the senior officer now in the service doing duty?—I am the senior officer of the whole department.

14249. Was Mr. Nicolson promoted before you?—He had charge of the detective department, and it was a separate branch altogether, and he got pushed on in that department, and was promoted to the rank of superintendent, I apprehend, before I was.

14250. You were senior to him in joining the service?—Yes, by some three months. I am senior to Mr. Chomley by some two years in our present rank, and yet he is placed over my head. He is Acting Chief Commissioner and I am still superintendent. He got his present rank—that of superintendent—two years after I did.

14251. Are you aware whether this system of favoritism on the part of Captain Standish has obtained towards others besides towards Mr. Hare?—I am not.

14252. In the question of the minor appointments and promotions?—I could not say that. I do not know anything about that.

14253. Your attention has been drawn to this more particularly in consequence of his being your junior?—Yes.

14254. Has Mr. Hare performed any actions in the shape of encounters with bushrangers?—None that I am aware of. The only thing I am aware of is what he said himself, that he captured some intended burglar or another at Benalla, and he intended to throw somebody overboard if he had come there, but he did not come. I do not know what he has done to be chosen over me.

14255. You do not know anything in which he has specially signalized himself?—No. It is not a graceful thing to blow one’s own trumpet, but I could point out where I have done those things over and over again.

14256. Has it come to your knowledge that Mr. Hare has used his influence with Captain Standish in any way for his own benefit or the benefit of his friends?—No.

14262. You mean promotions?—Yes, promotions; and formations of new stations, and generally anything that might crop up.

14263. And appeals against punishments?—Exactly.

14264. And consultations about such matters as this last Kelly outbreak?—Yes; I think there was a great want of caution and judgment shown there in not consulting with officers who had long and large experience in matters of that description.

14265. You are under the impression that if, during the Kelly business, the Chief Commissioner and the two next junior to him had been consulted, a better state of things would have been brought about?—I am sure of it. I do not think that Captain Standish has the slightest knowledge of police affairs at all. He is a capital fellow in his office, but as to actual police work he knows nothing about it at all.

14266. Might not that want of police knowledge and the favoritism you have spoken of have been the cause of a great deal of the trouble in the force at the present time?—I think so, certainly.

14267. Are you on good terms with all your brother officers?—I am on the most cordial terms; I never had a quarrel with any of them, from the highest to the lowest.

14268. Do you consider such a state as that—mutual good feeling between the officers indispensable for the public service?—Most indispensable. I think without harmony and brotherly feeling between each other the public service must suffer.

14269. Do you think the want of that during the Kelly outbreak prevented the ends of justice being met earlier?—I think it very materially affected it, but it seemed to me to begin about the Kellys; there was a great deal too much fuss about them. Had there been the go and dash about the police that there was in the early days, the thing would not have lasted any time. I know in my day they would just have sent us out and told us to bring them back, and we would have done it.

14270. Told you to make those men amenable to justice, and held you responsible?—Yes; we turned out at once, day or night, and in nine times out of ten we used to bring the offenders back. I could not understand this shifting the head-quarters and taking troops up and all that sort of thing; it astonished me. I understand that this evidence of mine is not going to be published, because it would place me in a very unpleasant position, having to speak of my late commanding officer.

[Commission directed that the evidence should be printed in the usual course.]

14271. Have you any instances in which you consider Captain Standish set you aside when you thought you should have been employed?—Yes, there is Weiberg’s case.

14272. Did you give Captain Standish information about Weiberg?—Yes, most reliable information.

14273. How did you come to be in the Gippsland district at the time?—I was on leave of absence at that time with Mr. Kabat.

14274. Who was the superintendent in that district?—Mr. Kabat.

14275. Were you acting in concert with Mr. Kabat?—I was.

14276. How did Captain Standish treat your information?—He treated it by telling me to come to town to see him. I telegraphed to him the information. I said that I had accurate information, and proposed getting a warrant for the arrest of the man Weiberg.

14277. Did Captain Standish assign any reason for not giving you the opportunity of arresting Weiberg in company with Mr. Kabat?—I first of all telegraphed that I had this information, and then received the reply that if I did go and arrest this man it would interfere with steps that he was taking in respect to Weiberg, and he directed me then to go down to town and see him.

14278. Did he consult you before he took any steps?—I went to town and saw him the first of all, and, having written to him on the subject, and then he got from me all the information I possessed, and a portrait of the criminal and other information, and having done that I returned to Gippsland to my leave, but I was directed positively not to take any further action in the matter, and subsequently Mr. Secretan was sent a day or two afterwards, I think, with some others, and they met Weiberg on the road and arrested him.

14279. They did not get the money?—No.

14280. You consider that, in justice to you, you should have been allowed, as the senior officer, to go?—I do. I think, in the first instance, from the information which I had, and from my request, I ought to have been allowed to go there and then from Sale, where I was, without coming to Melbourne at all.

14281. Supposing that the Chief Commissioner, on receiving that letter from you, felt that the officer in charge of the district was responsible for the detection of crime and arrest of criminals, he would have left it to Mr. Kabat?—Yes.

14282. But he was passed over also?—Yes, but in my action I was in consultation with Mr. Kabat all the time, as we were to go together.

14283. You agreed that you and Mr. Kabat should take equal action?—I did nothing without consulting him. I was in his district.

14284. If the officer is in charge of the district and responsible for the detection of crime and apprehension of criminals, if another officer is sent to discharge those duties, does it not really override his authority and supersede him?—It does. It is a cruel thing done to any officer. Either he is fit or unfit—I think it is most unfair. Mr. Kabat is capable of performing any duty that might devolve on any officer.

14285. In the Benalla district Mr. Sadleir was the superintendent and Mr. Hare was a superintendent, and, if any officer was sent into that district over Mr. Sadleir’s head, it superseded him in the performance of duties devolving on him by law?—Yes.

14286. Do you know the duties of inspecting superintendent?—Yes.

14287. What are they?—To visit and inspect the different districts throughout the colony, to carefully supervise everything, and report upon it.

14288. And to furnish a return?—Yes.

14289. To forward a report to the Chief Commissioner as to the districts?—Yes.

14290. If you had been allowed to take action at the time for the arrest of Weiberg, do you think you would have got the money as well?—My firm belief is if I had been left alone in that matter I should have got Weiberg and all the money except that which he spent in rations and all that sort of thing.

14291. In giving evidence one of the officers stated that his district had been very seldom visited by this inspecting superintendent. Has your district been visited constantly by the visiting superintendent—the Melbourne district?—Only once since I have been in charge of it.

14292. How long is that?—Since 1873. I think that is one of the greatest blots in our department— the want of supervision.

14293. Just how read that Regulation 38?—“When inspecting a district or station, it will be more particularly his duty to see that the officers and men are properly dressed, and that their general appearance and demeanor are such as they should be; that their arms and accoutrements are kept in good and serviceable order, and that the men are supplied with a suitable supply of ammunition; that the strength of the police is equal to the requirements of the locality; that the duties of the station are properly distributed among the men, the system of beat duty followed in Melbourne and the other large cities, towns, or boroughs, being adopted wherever practicable.”

14294. That is the duty, by law, of the inspecting superintendent?—Yes.

14295. Can that be discharged by a man visiting but once in the time you have mentioned?—Certainly not. There should be a constant and active supervision through all the districts. That is one of the blots. If a competent officer were to travel now, and go to the different districts, I believe he would find things in a shameful state. The postal department have three or four inspectors always on the move, and why should not the same course be pursued in the Police Department.

14296. Do you consider that at any hour that the inspections should take place, that it should not be at fixed times?—No, at uncertain times. The inspecting officer should leave town quietly, and without anybody knowing where he is off to, and then judge for himself without people being forewarned that he is coming. Allow me to hand in a document here, which I think the Commission should have. It is in connection with the Kelly business. It was an affidavit which I took from a man of the name of William Williams, in respect to the shooting of that Constable Fitzpatrick.—[The affidavit was read. Vide Appendix.]—There was a great deal of talk that this business was owing to the misconduct of Fitzpatrick. You will see by that document that that was mere nonsense.

14297. Superintendent Sadleir was to some extent set aside in this Kelly business. Have you had any experience of him as a police officer?—Yes; he was a subaltern of mine for some time.

14298. What was his general character as an officer?—You see this is a question that I would not like to have an opinion of that sort or the other. I have no objection to give my private opinion in the matter, but I would not like to have an opinion of that sort go forth.

14299. The Chairman directed that the witness’s further replies to the question should be taken down by the shorthand writer for the use of the Commission only.

14300. Do you know a police officer of the name of Nicholas?—Yes.

14301. Are you aware that he, at the time of Power’s capture, was in charge of that district at the time of Power’s capture?—No; but I should think Mr. Nicholas would be quite unfit for work of that sort.

14302. Do you know he was in charge of that district at the time of Power’s capture?—No; but I should think Mr. Nicholas would be quite unfit for work of that sort.

14303. That is the gentleman—[handing a letter to the witness]?—Yes, that is his signature.

14304. Do you see he complains of another officer being sent to discharge the duties in his district?—Yes, I see that.

14305. Do you think that superseding him is justifiable conduct?—I certainly do not.

14306. Suppose an officer in charge of a district, like Mr. Sadleir, had private information sent to the Chief Commissioner or the department that a criminal is in his district, and he is not made amenable to justice, is it not the duty of the head of the department to communicate at once to the officer in charge to make him amenable?—Certainly to the officer in charge.

14307. There is a record kept of all police?—Yes.

14308. It has been made a complaint that men are prejudiced by records placed on that without the slightest knowledge of the men, so that after years of service, a record might be there that they might not have opportunity of answering—are you in the habit of making records on the sheets of men?—Yes; that is my duty.

14309. Do you inform the men what is the character of the records?—I think the correct and only fair practice is, if you have anything to say against a man, you should make him aware of it. That is my practice, and I think there should be an order to that effect, and a man should have a copy of the record.

F. A. Winch, continued, 2nd August 1881

14310. What is the severest record known to the service to prevent a man’s promotion—would cowardice be?—Certainly; that ought to result in the man’s immediate dismissal.

14311. Should that be considered any bar to his promotion?—Yes, certainly, cowardice.

The public were re-admitted.

14312. You have expressed your opinion that the police force ought to be governed by a chief commissioner and two assistant commissioners?—Yes.

14313. And that they ought in all matters of policy to consult together before anything was settled?—Yes.

14314. Have you any idea in your own mind as to what ought to be done now to make the police more efficient. You say they ought to consult, and you think the superintendent in each district ought to have charge of that district, and carry out all matters connected with it?—Yes.

14315. Can you inform the Commission of anything that you think would assist in bringing the police into a better state of organization?—I think the organization as it is would be perfectly effective if it were properly carried out, but there seems to have been an interference with officers having charge of districts, from time, which of course is detrimental, and rather against the officer having charge. I think in the event of any particular crime being committed in any district, information having been received in Melbourne which would lead to the detection of the criminals, that that information should be supplied to the officer in charge of that particular district, for him to work out the problem if the information would assist him to arrest the criminals, without the assistance of other officers sent up for the purpose. An officer in the district, knowing the country and everything, having received information which might have been got in Melbourne, should be better able to work it out than a stranger being sent up there.

14316. Then if an officer seemed to fail in his duty, your position would necessitate his removal from that district?—Yes, precisely, if he failed after getting the information; if he then failed in doing what was requisite it would be time to see what should next be done, either supersede him or do something else.

14317. You think the present organization of the police is sufficient for all practical purposes?—I think so; if properly carried out it could scarcely be improved upon.

14318. Some people in speaking upon the question have said otherwise?—I qualified this as to the organization, because I may have something to say afterwards about the detective department as a part of the police force.

The witness withdrew.

Thomas McIntyre sworn and examined.

T. McIntyre, 2nd August 1881.

14319. By the Commission,—What are you?—Mounted trooper.

14320. Were you at the Wombat Ranges at the time that Kennedy, Scanlan, and Lonigan were shot?—I was.

14321. You were one of the four?—Yes, I was.

14322. I see that you have retired from the force, on account of ill health?—Yes.

14323. The papers have been sent down to us, asking us to look over the matter and to report as to the special circumstances of your case?—Yes.—[The papers were read.]

The Chairman stated that, after due deliberation, the Commission had decided that it did not come within the scope of their enquiry to deal specially with this one case as requested.

14324. Before you went out that time to search for the Kellys in the Wombat Ranges, had you any knowledge of any circumstances that led to that outbreak in the district, or did you just go out without any previous knowledge of the Kellys?—I had no previous knowledge of the Kellys except through the medium of the Police Gazette and the newspapers.

14325. Then you are not in a position to give the Commission any information as to what led to the outbreak?—No.

14326. Had you been stationed in the district long?—I was there twelve months, but the criminals came from a different district, and the crime was not committed in the police district in which I was.

14327. Then you have nothing to tender as to whether the withdrawal of the police protection from some parts, or the interference of the police unnecessarily, had anything to do with it?—No, that is altogether beyond my knowledge.

14328. You were present at the time when your comrades were shot?—I was.

14329. What time of the day was it?—About five o’clock in the afternoon.

14330. If the reports are to be relied upon, it is stated the police were scattered all round about; some of you were away?—Yes, that is true.

14331. And some of you were shooting at parrots?—Yes.

14332. You were the only one in the camp?—I and Lonigan were in the camp; the other two were out on patrol.

14333. Were there any regulations bearing you out?—No.

14334. What were your instructions when you were sent out?—The instructions I learned from Sergeant Kennedy were that we were to meet a party of police at Hedi, and after a consultation we were to search the bush.

14335. In the meantime you did not anticipate any danger when you were out?—No.

14336. You were just travelling through the country in the usual way?—Yes.

14337. In fact the attack upon you was a complete surprise?—A complete surprise.

14338. You never knew of your own knowledge that any policeman was charged with any wrong towards the Kellys?—No, I did not.

14339. You and Lonigan were left at the camp?—Yes.

14340. Whilst Kennedy and Constable Scanlan went away?—Yes.

14341. Can you inform the Commission what led to the separation of the party, or what object Kennedy and Scanlan had in separating from the party on this occasion?—Well, Sergeant Kennedy told me he would patrol that day, and he told me to do the cooking during his absence, and Lonigan to mind the horses, and he and Scanlan would patrol the neighboring country about.

14342. Did he specifically describe to you or your comrade the object of their leaving you on that occasion in the patrol they were about to make?—No, I think not; but we understood he was going out on patrol to make himself acquainted with the surrounding country, for the purpose of pushing further into the country.

14343. Not to catch the Kellys?—No.

14344. What was the special object of camping on this ground?—That I cannot say. I expected to go to Hedi station. I was surprised at our camping. I asked Kennedy, in a jocular manner, why he came there, and he said, “If we meet the other party of police, we will find they are out of tucker and they will eat us out.”

14345. Then, within your knowledge, are you aware what was the object of Sergeant Kennedy and Constable Scanlan in leaving you in charge of the camp and proceeding where they went to?—Well, I think it would be no unusual circumstance, if four men went out, for two to go and look at the neighboring country, because we had a pack-horse and tent, and it was necessary to leave some men behind to watch the place.

14346. I mean what object did you suppose the Sergeant and Scanlan had in leaving you at the camp there and in going in the direction they did?—Well, at that time I thought they were merely patrolling.

14347. For what object?—For the object of searching for the outlaws, or to make themselves acquainted with the unknown country, so that we could push forward the following day and know how to get back.

14348. Was there any previous information received, as far as you know, of the Kellys being in the neighborhood in which you were camped?—None, to my knowledge.

14349. Did Sergeant Kennedy give you in starting any specific instructions as to the course you were to adopt in his absence?—No.

14350. Did he give you any intimation whatever as to the object he had in view in going in the direction he did?—I recollect the only words he said he was going on patrol with Constable Scanlan.

14351. Did he say how long he would be absent?—He said possibly all night, because if they got lost they could not get home till morning.

14352. Did he take provisions?—Some lunch for himself and Scanlan; sufficient for that day.

14353. He gave you no information whatever as to the object they had in view?—None but what I have said.

14354. Did he caution you as to the necessity of being prepared for any sudden attack you would be liable to from the outlaws being in the neighborhood?—No; I do not think he could have apprehended any attack himself.

14355. Is it your opinion that he had no knowledge or suspicion the outlaws were in the neighborhood at that particular time?—Well, from what has come to my knowledge since, I do not know what to believe; I do not know what to think.

14356. You were left at the camp, and there were no instructions as to the course you were to take in case of a sudden alarm?—No.

14357. Do you mean to say you had no information given you as to the object your two comrades had in leaving you then?—None, except what I have said, on patrol to get acquainted with the country; that is my supposition. I imagined at the time, and do so still, that that was their object.

14358. Had there been any conversation between the officer in command of the party and the men of whom the party was composed, as to the course that was to be pursued, the spots that were to be visited, and the objects in visiting?—No, there was no conversation with regard to that. We were all experienced men, and I suppose Sergeant Kennedy knew that.

14359. Were there no order or discipline of any kind in a party sent out for such a dangerous project as to capture dangerous men?—There were no orders that I can remember.

14360. Were they known at the time to be men of murderous propensities?—After the attack on Fitzpatrick certainly, but we never expected an attack. We thought they might defend themselves if we attacked them.

14361. You went out, as far as you are concerned, under the impression that you were engaged on a dangerous project?—Yes.

14362. Were you armed?—Yes.

14363. With what?—Revolvers.

14364. What were the others armed with?—They each had a revolver, and we had a Spencer repeating rifle and a double-barreled fowling piece; but they were carried on the pack-horse.

14365. Each man when he joined this expedition was fully under the impression that the men he was in pursuit of were of so dangerous a type that they might require firearms in self-defence, to protect themselves?—Yes, that was the impression. The impression was that it would be difficult to take them—that they would defend themselves; but not that they would attack us.

14366. That having been guilty of an attempted murder, they might be guilty of another murder?—Yes.

14367. Under those circumstances did you not feel the importance individually, apart from any official instructions you might have received, of being constantly watchful against a sudden attack from men of that character?—I did not anticipate that we were close to them, because they never, to our knowledge, came to Mansfield. We thought we would have to go twenty miles into the bush before we got to their haunts.

14368. When the party were selected, were they told the nature of the work, and the object?—Yes, I was told it was in search of the Kellys.

14369. Had Sergeant Kennedy any knowledge that there were any camps of the Kellys in the immediate neighborhood?—I do not know; I think not. Of course I cannot say what knowledge he had.

14370. Have you any recollection of having heard that the late camp of the Kellys was shown there previously to your starting?—No; I know he was shown out to that place by a squatter.

14371. From what you know now, and from your memory of the whole proceedings, are you under the impression, in the slightest degree, that those two men, Sergeant Kennedy and Scanlan, were decoyed from the camp, with the view of subsequently attacking the whole party, and overcoming and murdering the whole of them—did you ever hear anything that would lead you to suppose that?—I have no definite opinion on that subject, because there are some things that would lead me to believe so, and some not.

14372. Of your own knowledge, either before or subsequent to the event—the murder of the police—are you now under the impression that those men were purposely decoyed for the purpose of the party being subsequently attacked and murdered?—It is a matter I have no definite opinion upon. I will tell you my reasons.

14373. Have you ever heard from anyone that such was the intention?—I have heard it publicly spoken of amongst the constables that Sergeant Kennedy and Constable Scanlan knew they were in the neighbourhood and did not impart the information to me or Lonigan—to me they certainly did not impart it.

14374. Did you ever hear that those men were decoyed into the position—that they went for the especial object of leaving the two who were to camp to become an easy prey to the attack of those men?—Yes, I have heard so.

14375. How does that coincide with the evidence that Kennedy and Scanlan went away of their own free will and told you nothing about it?—Decoy would not be the proper word. He might have been decoyed with previous knowledge, obtained before he came to the ground. I would say he was induced, not decoyed.

14376. Might it be possible, as you say Kennedy and Scanlan took provisions with them, that their desire might be to catch the Kellys themselves without your being present?—Yes, that is possible.

14377. Did that strike your mind?—No, not at the time.

14378. You had confidence in one another when you were out?—Yes, I had.

14379. You have no belief now that Kennedy went away for the purpose of getting any special advantage for himself to lead you to that belief?—I think it is very strange they went to that neighbourhood instead of continuing the direct road to Hedi.

14380. You think it is possible, then, he acted from knowledge?—I do; but against that, on the evening that we arrived there he asked me to fire a shot at some kangaroo near the camp, and I think, if he knew the Kellys were in the immediate vicinity, he would not have asked me to fire a shot.

14381. Do you think the Kellys premeditated the murder of the whole party?—I do not think they did.

14382. Would it be an impulse on their part?—I think they intended to take our horses and firearms, as Kelly himself said that was his intention, but I think he did not care much whether he shed blood or not—just allowed himself to be led by circumstances whether he would or not.

14383. He placed himself in a position to shoot you all from good cover?—Yes.

14384. And he did not apparently attempt to take the horses?—They took the horses afterwards.

14385. I mean they were not acting like men who came to steal horses alone?—No, they could not have stolen the horses without our knowledge.

14386. Had you seen Kelly before?—No.

14387. You did not know who they were?—I knew them from description and from family likenesses. The very first intimation we had from them was to “bail up,” and we looked round, and they had their arms presented.

14388. Can you give any fresh information that has not been given to the public. I suppose you have read the evidence with reference to that?—No, I cannot think of any that would be useful.

14389. I suppose what we have got is nearly all that can be got?—Yes.

14390. By Mr. Sadleir.—Did you know that Sergeant Kennedy had some instructions from me?—Yes.

14391. Did he read them to you?—Yes.

14392. Can you say when you first read them—“It seems to be certain that ‘Ned Kelly’ is in the neighborhood of Greta, or from thence to Connolly’s and the bogs near the Wombat. I am very anxious to make some special efforts to have the matter set at rest, and his apprehension effected, if possible. I have consulted with the senior-constable in charge at Greta, and it appears that there is not much likelihood of him and the constable with him there doing much towards arresting Kelly, or even disturbing him from the neighborhood. It has been proposed to collect, for the purposes of a thorough search, what constables are in the district who know Kelly personally, sending say two of them to Mansfield to act with Sergeant Kennedy from that end, and the others to act with the Greta police, and to search simultaneously up and down the King River and neighboring places. I shall be glad to receive any suggestions that Sergeant Kennedy may have to offer on the subject, and whether he is of opinion that anything might be gained by his coming here for a day or so to consult with the sub-officer taking charge of the party starting from the Greta end—that is, supposing this expedition should be determined on.” Did you hear of that?—I did not.

14393. Did Sergeant Kennedy convoy to you any caution as to the matter being dealt with by every one concerned as confidential?—Yes, he said it was confidential; that our departure was not to be made known; to go as quietly as possible.

14394. Did you exercise any precautions?—Yes; started before daylight.

14395. Did you communicate your purpose to anyone?—No, I did not.

14396. Are you aware whether it was communicated to anyone?—I have not heard. I think it was not, to the best of my knowledge.

14397. Do you remember any conversations with Sergeant Kennedy on the subject. Did he ask your opinion anyhow, one way or the other, in view of this journey?—He often spoke about the Kellys, even before that.

14398. In view of the instructions he had received to go out at some future time, did he consult and take your opinion?—We spoke about the matter very freely; but I do not remember being asked for any opinion.

14399. This is his report—[reading the same, vide Question 1741 above]. Did Sergeant Kennedy ever speak to you in that strain?—No; I certainly cannot remember that he did. He said he supposed them to be in that immediate neighborhood. He said he received instructions from you to go to Hedi and meet the other party of police, and hold a consultation as to the best way to scour the bush.

14400. You are not aware that Sergeant Kennedy, shortly before he went out, came to Benalla to meet the man in charge of the Greta party?—Yes.

14401. Did he tell you any of the proceedings determined on by those men?—Only what I have said that our two parties were to join at Hedi and have a consultation.

14402. You do not mean that the object was to meet there and go back?—No.

14403. What was the object?—It was thought, as far as I could understand, that there would be a consultation held and some plan adopted for a thorough search.

14404. When the two parties met?—Yes.

14405. By the Commission.—Did you think his conduct strange in leaving you where you were and going out into the ranges with Constable Scanlan without letting you know anything at all of what he was going to do?—No, I did not think at the time it was strange. He told me he was going to patrol the country.

14406. You should give the exact meaning of the word patrolling—is it looking over the country and so on?—Yes, and searching for the Kellys.

14407. You understand then he was going to search for them?—Yes, to search for them and make himself acquainted with the country. I did not know they were in that neighborhood, and I thought he did not at the time.

14408. Did you ever hear that a man named Tolmey showed where the Kelly camp was?—No, he showed the place where we were to camp ourselves.

14409. By Mr. Sadleir.—The country lying towards Greta from where you were, was that almost unknown to you?—Yes; Kennedy and I had been over it before, but we followed a blazed line to Glenmore. The country to Greta we did not know.

14410. By the Commission.—Is it the mountainous country?—Yes, rangey.

14411. Difficult to ride through?—Yes.

14412. With regard to that watch of Sergeant Kennedy’s—did you ever see that?—Yes.

14413. Was there any inscription on it?—That I could not say—it was not a presentation watch.

14414. You are sure of that?—He told me so himself.

The witness withdrew.

James Wallace sworn and examined.

14415. By the Commission.—What are you?—State school teacher at Yea, formerly at the Hurdle Creek, Oxley, near the King River.

14416. You are aware that the pursuit of the Kellys was carried on very actively some time ago in the North-Eastern district?—Yes.

14417. The Commission understand that you were in communication with the police upon some occasions?—I was in communication with the police, but was never in their pay. I never asked for any pay nor received any. I declined the offer. I did receive some money, but only for actual expenses.

14418. How much did you get?—I could not say.

14419. Would you be surprised if you heard?—From £70 to £80, I daresay, altogether.

14420. You say you were not specially employed by the police?—I was not employed; not receiving any remuneration whatever, and I was paid my actual expenses.

14421. What agreement did you make when you agreed to give them information?—I will read an extract from my diary at the time I made the arrangement with Mr. Nicolson.

14422. Had you any arrangement with any one before Mr. Nicolson?—No, none whatever.

14423. No other officer?—No, none that I remember.

14424. What led to any communication that took place between you and the police?—In December 1878, after the commission of the Mansfield murders by the Kelly gang, and seeing the difficulty the police had in capturing them;—hearing also that they would commit further outrages, and knowing I might be able to assist in the suppression of crime, I wrote a letter to Captain Standish offering my assistance to him. Of course I understood the offer to him that it was free, gratis, not with any intention of participating in the reward or receiving any remuneration for my services.

14425. What motive had you?—Simply in the interests of society, to suppress crime.

14426. What special qualification had you?—I knew Byrne; he was an old schoolmate of mine, and I knew the country. I had my suspicions that Byrne was one of the gang, and I knew the places they would be likely to go to, and the ranges they would be likely to frequent, and the friends who would be most likely to assist them.

14427. Have you a copy of that letter to Captain Standish?—No.
14428. The first letter you wrote to Captain Standish was of what nature?—Offering my services.
14429. To do what?—To assist them in capturing the outlaws.
14430. Were you acquainted with either of the Kellys?—No; not at all.
14431. Having made the offer to Captain Standish in writing, what answer did you receive?—I received a very courteous reply from Captain Standish declining my offered services. He would be very glad to hear anything, but he at present did not require anything further.
14432. Have you preserved that letter?—No, I did not think it desirable to preserve any.
14433. Having declined that, what led you subsequently to offer any assistance to the police?—On the 23rd July 1879, I was honored by a visit from the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Mr. Nicolson. He said he called to have a few minutes' conversation with me in reference to the outlaws. He remembered seeing a letter from me in December last.
14434. That is the letter you have already alluded to?—Yes. He referred to the fact of my having been a schoolmate of Byrne's, to my knowledge of the district generally, and asked me when I had seen Byrne last, and several other particulars. He wanted to know my impression as to the present whereabouts of the gang. I gave it as my opinion that they had gone into winter quarters; that is, that they were not travelling about, but were settled for the winter. I told the impressions and facts I had as regards their previous movements, life pursued, tactics observed, and mode of living, as far as I could learn from hints let drop by their friends.
14435. You say you told him the facts?—No, I did not mean the facts exactly, but the impressions I formed—that would be a better word.
the immediate vicinity of Sherritt’s, down towards the Yellow Creek, and frequently were in the ranges between Sebastopol and Chiltern.
14461. That was all within one neighborhood, a radius of how many miles?—Fifteen miles.
14462. Did Sherritt give you any other information as to what the outlaws were doing or likely to do at this particular time?—Perhaps not at that particular time; I did not make a note of it, but I know he frequently spoke of them.
14463. At this time?—Yes, he did. He said they did not remain long in one place; they beat backwards and forwards, sometimes in Sebastopol and sometimes in Greta, but still within this radius of fifteen miles round there.
14464. Did he give you any other information of an interesting character at this time?—Yes, he spoke of the murders at Mansfield, and stated that he (Sherritt) had Kennedy’s watch in his possession.
14465. Did he show it you?—No, he did not; he promised frequently to do so, but did not.
14466. Did you ever see that watch?—No, I did not. I should have secured it if I had.
14467. Did you ever hear of the history of the watch?—What do you mean by the history?
14468. Do you know whether the watch was a presentation watch?—Aaron said there was an inscription on the watch—stains on the watch—and wished to know from me what would remove those stains.
14469. Did he tell you what the inscription was?—No.
14470. Did you ever hear of what it was?—No.
14471. Did you hear what the inscription was that would lead you to remember if it was a presentation watch?—Subsequently I did. I think, in speaking to Mr. Nicolson, he said it was a presentation watch with an inscription on it.
14472. Sherritt asked you if you knew anything that would take off the inscription?—He used the word “stains.” I understood him to mean inscription by that. Sherritt was guarded and cunning.
14473. Did you give him any information about that?—None. I advised him to hand over the watch to the police for the sake of the widow.
14474. Did he give any other information then?—Since I frequently stayed for hours and talked for hours, he must have done so.
14475. I want you to confine yourself to that one interview?—I cannot do that.
14476. That must have been the most interesting you ever had?—Not by any means.
14477. I cannot help thinking during the public excitement you would attach greater interest to that one than any other. Does your memory lead you to narrate to the Commission any other subject-matter of interest which Sherritt talked of at that time?—He told me he was then in the employ of the police. I might simplify matters considerably by saying that when I was young I used to dabble in mesmerism. Aaron Slierritt, being, of course, a schoolfellow, was often with me in those experiments, and he was a “subject” of mine. Naturally he had a great deal of confidence in me, and I had an influence over him, and he would frequently come there, and if I wanted to get any information out of him I could do so.

527

14478. Did you mesmerize him then?—No; I did on former occasions. His confidence in me was the result of that in former years.
14479. He did not narrate anything of importance about the outlaws on that occasion beyond what you have said?—Only just that they proposed sticking up other banks; but really I had so many interviews I could not fix upon that particular interview.
14480. You are not mistaken when you say on that occasion he said the outlaws intended sticking up other banks?—Yes, that information was conveyed in my confidential letters to Mr. Nicolson.
14481. Having got that information, what action did you take?—At that time I believe I was in communication with Mr. Nicolson.
14482. You cannot fix the date of this interview?—I cannot possibly; it is two years ago.
14483. How many days after this interview did you interview the police and give the information that was of so interesting a character?—That would appear from my letters, which you have in your possession.
14484. The information you conveyed was in writing?—Most probably.
14485. Was it, or was it not?—I cannot say. I frequently had interviews with Mr. Nicolson, and frequently wrote letters to him.
14486. Did you, after this interview, have any personal communication with any officer of the police or any agent of police before you committed yourself to writing and gave the information which is contained in your letters?—The only officer I had any direct or indirect communication with was Mr. Nicolson.
14487. Was it before you committed yourself to paper about this interview of Sherritt’s?—I believe I had an interview with him then. I had so many. I could not possibly specify without referring to the letters.
14488. You used to write under an alias?—Half-a-dozen; that was the arrangement with Mr.
Nicolson, and he wrote to me under the alias.
14489. When you got information you generally wrote to Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.
14490. These letters before us will explain everything?—Yes; and as to asking me about certain interviews with Aaron Sherritt, it is impossible for me to fix anything with distinctness.

James Wallace,

14491. I want to know what action you immediately took on obtaining this valuable information?—It was communicated, no doubt, by letter, but I cannot say possibly because there was so much of a similar kind sent. I cannot fix the date; it is a tax on my memory it cannot stand.

14492. From the knowledge you had of Sherritt and your influence over him, you received the information and believed it to be thoroughly reliable?—Yes, but you are narrowing this all down to one day. It would be better to let me start from the beginning. Aaron was a schoolmate of mine, and he passed my place so frequently, and almost every time he called and had a conversation with me.

14493. How many interviews had you either with Captain Standish, Mr. Sadleir, or Mr. Nicolson before you wrote your letter dated 5th January 1879—[handing the letter to the witness].—Is that your handwriting?—Yes.

14494. Is that the first letter you wrote to any one connected with the police about the Kelly gang?—I do not think so; I did not keep a record.

14495. To whom did you write any letter prior to that?—Captain Standish; that I have already referred to.

14496. Did you write any to Mr. Nicolson before that?—I do not think so. I think I had several communications before that; but, inasmuch as I did not keep a record of dates, I cannot be precise without referring to my notes.

14497. Did you, in the first instance, before writing to Captain Standish, have a personal interview with him at Benalla?—Certainly not.

14498. Did you, after writing the first letter to Captain Standish, have a personal interview with him at Benalla?—I did.

14499. Will you tell us the nature of the conversation?—It was a general conversation with regard to the outlaws.

14500. What was your proposal to him?—I cannot recollect what proposals I made.

14501. You must have gone with a definite idea of doing something?—I had some information for him, I believe, with reference to a proposed crossing of the Murray by the outlaws which I thought would be interesting to him, but which he had already obtained from some other sources.

14502. Did you tell Captain Standish that Byrne was a schoolmate of yours?—Most probably did.

14503. Did you tell him of your own friendly terms with the Byrne family?—I cannot say I told him; he might have inferred that.

14504. At that time you were on personal friendship and the best of terms with the Byrne family?—I had been some time away from the particular vicinity of the Byrne family, and Joe Byrne was the only one I had seen at the time.

14505. You had the means then of being on visiting terms with the Byrne family at that time?—Yes, I had.

14506. Is it probable that you did not inform Captain Standish?—It is probable that I did inform him I was on friendly terms with the Byrnes.

14507. Did you tell him what means you had of obtaining information as to the whereabouts of the outlaws at that interview?—Probably I did.

14508. Did Captain Standish make any arrangement with you from that time to supply him with any information you might obtain?—I think not. Another matter at that interview with Captain Standish was with reference to a friend of mine—a pupil of mine at the time—named Slater, whom I recommended him to employ—to put him on the police force—stating I thought he would be able to give help from his knowledge of the country, and being an intimate friend of Byrne’s.

2nd August 1881.

14509. Did you make that one of the conditions for your supplying information?—No; I did not by any means. I did not make any conditions.

14510. After Captain Standish declined to have anything to do with that, how did you have to do with Mr. Nicolson?—He came to me once, one Friday.

14511. Before the 5th January?—Yes, it must have been, because I had had no communication with him.

14512. Had you previously sent to him verbally?—No.

14513. Do you remember what Mr. Nicolson asked you when he called?—Yes; he told me that the country looked to me, as a teacher and as a respectable member of society, that I should render all the assistance I could to suppress murder and robbery, and I understood him to wish me to take service with him; that it could be arranged that I could have leave of absence, but I declined to do so. He then asked me if I would give them any other aid I could by collecting information, and beating up the house in the neighborhood which the outlaws were most likely to frequent, and I agreed to consider his proposal.

14514. After considering, what did you do?—I decided to assist him in the interests of society.

14515. Did you state at that interview with Mr. Nicolson what special means you had of affording him information?—I think so.

The witness withdrew.
Adjourned to to-morrow at half-past Eleven o’clock.

WEDNESDAY, 3rd AUGUST 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. LONGMORE, M.L.A., in the Chair;

G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.,
W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A.,
J. Gibb, Esq., M.L.A.

James Wallace further examined.

Mr. Nicolson stated that he hoped the witness’s evidence would not be published, as he was under obligation to him for secrecy, and the consequences might be serious to the witness.

The Chairman stated that he thought it would be as well for the press not to publish it.

14516. By the Commission.—There is a letter dated 5th January 1879?—That ought to be 1880; and, in speaking of the interview I had with Sherritt, with reference to the stolen saddle, it should have been subsequent to the Jerilderie robbery, towards the beginning of March I should say now; I cannot be precise as to dates.

14517. In that letter I have marked the place off, about receiving the bank note that you cashed—[handing a letter to the witness dated 27/8/79]?—Yes; I remember the circumstances.

14518. There is one party you, have mentioned there; I suppose it was some one who had been employed by Mr. Hare—“Interviewed Mr. Hare’s protégé.” I suppose that was Sherritt?—Yes; I said “Mr. Hare’s protégé” because he showed such an affection for Mr. Hare, and spoke of him in such high terms.

14519. What were the overtures made by you in your first communication to Captain Standish; what was the nature of your offer?—My offer was to offer my assistance to him in the capture of the Mansfield murderers; stating I knew them by sight, and knew Byrne intimately, and knew the country.

Mr. Sadleir.—I understood it in a less definite way, that he meant it that he had a few weeks’ holiday.

The Witness.—Yes; that is true.

Mr. Sadleir.—And he would be glad to put his leisure at the service of Captain Standish.

The Witness.—Yes, just prior to the Christmas holidays, in 1878.

14520. The Commission (to Mr. Sadleir).—In that letter did Mr. Wallace state that he would expect to be compensated in any way?

Mr. Sadleir.—I am pretty sure there was no reference to that.

14521. By the Commission (to the witness).—Was there any correspondence from the time you wrote to Captain Standish, between Captain Standish and yourself, or Mr. Nicolson, before you wrote this letter of the 18th August 1879?—I cannot recollect the date. I had a visit from Captain Standish at my place on one occasion, but I could not exactly give the date.

14522. You can say there was no regular correspondence kept up?—No; there was only one letter to Captain Standish.

14523. Was it dated 18/8/79. Here is one statement:—“I think it more advisable to communicate details to you personally, as there is a screw loose in your department somewhere.” Will you tell the Commission what you meant to infer by that?—I wanted to convey to Mr. Nicolson that the police information got abroad, that the outlaws’ friends and sympathizers were aware of the police movements, and that I was myself in communication with the police, was openly asserted in a public-house at Oxley.

14524. Were you under the impression at the time that the information you supplied to Mr. Nicolson was made use of by some members of the police force not in the interests of the public?—Yes, not in the interests of the public.

14525. Were you aware at the time who the officer of police was who did that?—I could not state precisely, only I knew the information I had supplied was floating about—I know the list of places I gave to Mr. Nicolson of the probable retreats of the outlaws was shown me by Aaron Sherritt afterwards.

14526. But was he not at that time in the confidence of the police as well as yourself?—He was—it was generally understood so.

14527. Then would it not be probable that the information you supplied would be given him to assist him?—Yes; but the form might have been altered so that he could not have detected whence it came.

14528. You say further on—“There is a beautiful game of cross purposes being played on both sides that is worth the trouble of watching, if there were no other motive”—what do you allude to there?—I meant with reference to the game that was played on both sides, the resources they had to deceive each other, both the police and the outlaws. I had in my mind’s eye then the trial of Aaron Sherritt at Beechworth for stealing a horse of Mrs. Byrne’s, which he admitted to me was a “got-up” case on the part of some members of the police on one side, and worked by the outlaws as well on the other.

14529. What reason had you to know that the outlaws were acquainted with all these movements at that time?—From sympathizers—from hints dropped by them.
14530. By whom?—I cannot say.
14531. It is for you to say—we are supposed to be in private now—who were the sympathizers and from whom did they obtain the hints?—From the outlaws.
14532. Give us one?—Aaron Sherritt and Edward Burke.
14533. Aaron Sherritt was in the confidence of the police?—Just so.
14534. Then you could not treat him at that time as a sympathizer?—I did.
14535. Did you know him to be a sympathizer?—I knew him to be a sympathizer, that was my belief, that he was playing double.
14536. Did you communicate that to Mr. Nicolson?—"That he was in communication with the outlaws"?—I did frequently—vivâ voce.
14537. By letter?—I think so, also.
14538. The next paragraph in the letter is—"I think I can persuade some one to return the chronometer to the widow"?—That was Sergeant Kennedy’s watch.
14539. Who is this "some one"?—Aaron Sherritt.
14540. What influence had he with the outlaws?—He had the watch in his possession, according to his statement, and according to other information I got.
14541. Did you ever see it?—No.
14542. What led you to that belief?—His assertions to that effect, and his description of it.
14543. He was a man you would believe when he said that?—Yes.
14544. Why did not you convey to Mr. Nicolson that you believed Aaron Sherritt had the watch?—I did do so.
14545. You say here—"I can persuade some one"—these are riddles?—Those letters were written for Mr. Nicolson, and as long as he understood them, that satisfied me.
14546. Did you tell Mr. Nicolson about this time that Aaron Sherritt had the watch?—I did.
14547. He would understand that?—He did. He would have asked me if he did not understand it. No doubt you will find reference to it in other parts of the correspondence.
14548. Then the only one you had information from was Sherritt?—Oh! no.
14549. Who?—There were many others. Some I would decline to mention under any circumstances.
14550. What were the names?—Edward Burke, of Black Range.
14551. Was he in communication with the outlaws?—He was, according to his own statement.
14552. What is he?—A selector.
14553. Is he still in that district?—He is, I believe. I have not been there for twelve months.
14554. What is the name of any other sympathizer you had an opportunity of seeing?—John Sherritt.
14555. He was in communication with the outlaws?—I believed him to be so.
14556. All through?—Well, yes, all through. At least, according to his statement, he could communicate at any time, perhaps not directly, but indirectly through their relatives; but I do not think that he was willingly a sympathizer. It was more through his friendship for Byrne, not through countenancing crime.
14557. Did you, after the murders of the Wombat, visit Mrs. Byrne’s place?—Yes.
14558. Do you remember the last time you visited the Bynes?—I was not inside; I passed the house very early one morning.
14559. Do you remember the last time you visited there?—Yes, I think so I would not be certain.
14560. When was that?—I could not give the date; you may find it in my letters.
14561. You frequently visited there?—No; I was not on intimate terms.
14562. Never took tea?—No.
14563. Did you ever dine at the place?—No.
14564. Were you on friendly terms outside?—Yes, outside. I had not seen Mrs. Byrne for a long time. I met the other members of the family.
14565. Did you consider you were on terms of confidence with them?—Yes, to a certain extent. Of course, they were guarded in their communications.
14566. Did you ever see either of the outlaws after the time of the Wombat murders?—I met one one evening. I met Byrne one moonlight night on the Oxley road, going in the direction of Sebastopol from Greta. My school was right in a line from the two places, and of course they would follow the track. He was by himself.
14567. Did you have an interview with him?—I had no interview with him. I was in company with others, and of course I did not state it was Byrne—simply said “Good night,” and he passed on. I recognized his form and voice.
14568. Did you inform the police?—I did.
14569. Immediately after?—Not exactly immediately after, but within a few days, I think.
14570. If you were working in the interests of the police, why did not you take immediate steps to inform them about that?—Doubtless because I would think that no good could come from informing them. I had no confidence in the detective in charge at Beechworth. I would think that he might burke that evidence, so to speak, in order to frustrate the capture of the outlaws through any other means than his own.
14571. Would it be to the detective you would give the information?—Certainly not.
Thence it your duty to give the fullest and most expeditious information you could?

Continued,

James Wallace,

30th August 1881.

14572. Then why had you fear in giving the information to the officer of the police you were previously in communication with?—I cannot say, except it was I thought no good would come of it. I was expecting to see the others, and no good would accrue from taking Byrne alone. It would have been the worst thing that could have happened.

14573. How far from the telegraph office were you then?—Sixteen miles.

14574. What office?—Wangaratta.

14575. That was at night?—Yes.

14576. You saw the direction Byrne was riding in?—Yes, to Sebastopol.

14577. And you waited some days?—I cannot say the exact time. I know I mentioned the circumstance to Mr. Nicolson.

14578. Did you see either of the gang any other time except that?—I believe, I am not positive, I met Ned Kelly one morning some time after I had dropped communication with Mr. Nicolson.

14579. That would be the latter end of 1879?—About that time, I think.

14580. Did you see Byrne on any other occasion than the one you have already described?—No.

14581. Do you remember Captain Standish being at your place?—I do, on two different occasions.

14582. Do you remember he was there not long before the bank robbery at Jerilderie?—I do, he was in my house.

14583. Are you sure you did not see Byrne about that time?—I am positive, as far as I can recollect.

14584. Will you swear that Byrne was not in your house that day?—Certainly.

14585. You swear now positively you never saw Byrne but on one occasion?—Yes, positively.

14586. Did you have no direct communication with any of the outlaws?—What do you mean—by letter, or word of mouth?

14587. By letter or word of mouth—was there no confidence between you and the outlaws by which you could have communication?—No direct communication.

14588. Are you prepared to swear positively that after the murders you had no direct communication?—No direct; I had indirect through others.

14589. Is there any one you can think of, except those you have named, that you had communication through?—Yes, I believe there is one.

14590. Who is it?—John Sherritt; I do not recollect any more.

14591. You are quite sure you had no personal conversation with either of the outlaws any time after the day of the murders at the Wombat?—None beyond what I have said about Byrne and Kelly, and I was not certain about Kelly. I met a man with a muffler on the road, and I heard afterwards Kelly had seen me.

14592. You were familiar with him?—Yes.

14593. Could you make a mistake about him?—Oh, certainly.

14594. How far off was he?—About fifty yards.

14595. Do you think you could make a mistake at that distance as to any gentleman in this room?—Yes, if they were in disguises. If I dressed you up in the garb of a woman, I would not know you.

14596. He was not dressed as a woman?—No, a grey coat, and a muffler round his face and nearly round his eyes; very little of his face was visible.

14597. That would attract your attention and cause you to be more observant of who he was?—Yes, I noted him as he passed.

14598. If he was so disguised, did not that attract your attention?—It did. I thought it looked like Kelly, but I could not swear that.

14599. Have you any doubt in your mind but that it was?—My impression that it was he was strengthened afterwards by hearing he had met me on that road.

14600. Did you keep a horse?—Three or four of them.

14601. From whom did you hear that information that Kelly saw you at this time?—From Ned Burke, at Hedi.

14602. How long after your impression of having seen him?—Two or three months after, I dare say.

14603. Did you communicate that to the police?—No, I did not; I did not see the necessity of it.

14604. Although you were fully persuaded he was the man the police were looking for?—No.

14605. Did you feel fully impressed it was the leader of the outlaws?—I felt slightly impressed.

14606. Did you send the police word of that?—I did not.

14607. Even if you had a slight impression, as an officer in the public service and occupying a respectable position as a teacher of young people, did not you conceive it your duty to give the fullest and most expeditious information you could?—Not in that case.

14608. In every case?—I have done so.

14609. About Byrne—you did not communicate intelligence till two or three days after?—Yes. Knowing the place so well, and also the means being used to capture them, I did not judge it necessary at the time to tell that about Kelly.

14610. About the other man you were certain?—I would not swear about that. I thought I recognized his voice and figure, still I would not swear it was he.
14611. You keep a horse?—I do.
14612. And were within sixteen miles of the telegraph?—Yes.
14613. And you did not think it necessary to mount a horse and go and tell about it?—The horse I was riding had just come a long distance. If I had wished to do so I should have had to borrow a horse, and if I had given information it would have been no use.
14614. You did not feel in bodily fear of those men?—No, never.
14615. Then you were in a different position from many of the inhabitants in that respect?—I recognized the possibility of my being shot if I gave information. I would have chances that; but it was not through fear, but just through not seeing the desirability.
14616. Are you quite sure you did not see any of those men on any other occasion?—Quite sure.
14617. Were you aware, from any confidential communications from a number of sympathizers, of the locality where the outlaws were residing?—Yes, several times, and I always communicated that to the police.

14618. At all times, immediately?—I think so, as far as I can recollect.
14619. We have here all the reported appearances of the Kellys—[handing a printed paper to the 3rd witness].—Can you identify your information about Joe Byrne with any of those?—[The witness examined the printed paper].—It was not sent in by letter.
14620. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—Can you help us as to the time about the information about Wallace seeing Joe Byrne?—It was some time, I should say, about the month of October 1879, and I had heard that Mr. Wallace had seen Byrne, or had reason to believe he had seen him; and I asked him if it was the case, and he told me he had not. I asked him first if he had been at his house, and he said not, and he had not seen him, except one night when he was driving; and as he passed during the night by his own house he saw a man pass he believed to be Joe Byrne, and he bade him “Good night.”
14621. Did he mention how long it had occurred?—This was a matter that had occurred some considerable time before.
14622. All this time he had been writing to you and giving you information?—He was writing from time to time.
14623. Can you give an idea how long a time had elapsed between the time and the information?—My impression now is that it was a considerable period, three or four weeks.
14624. Altogether beyond the possibility of its being of any service?—It was of no service then.
14625. By the Commission (to the witness).—You are quite certain you never went to Byrne’s house to take any meals. There is a paragraph here in this letter (27th August 1879)—“I went down to the old people’s next morning (Sunday) and stayed to dinner”—That is Sherritt’s, not Byrne’s.
14626. Then you appear to have relied entirely on Sherritt?—No, not entirely.
14627. Principally?—Yes, principally.
14628. You state—“The old lady was not at all communicative, but appeared nervous and frightened. Had a walk out with Jack for his father’s horse (K. K.’s lost chestnut). He was rather reticent and distrustful at first.” That was John Sherritt. “I asked him how the outlaws were so foolish as to go into the house while the children were there?”—I think that refers to the night after the trial of Aaron Sherritt for the theft of Mrs. Byrne’s horse.
14629. There is another passage with reference to Aaron Sherritt changing a National Bank note. Was it the National Bank stuck up at Euroa or Jerilderie?—It was the National Bank at Jerilderie.
14630. “He said they were ‘square,’ and that he had obtained them in payment of service rendered to the police. I changed one of them for him, and cashed it purposely in Ward’s presence at Wertheim’s, Beechworth. I jocularly drew that gentleman’s attention to it as being a ‘National,’ and asked him what he would give to be told where that came from.” Was that done with the view of putting Mr. Ward on his “mettle” to find out where the note came from?—I think so, and as a sort of collateral evidence that Sherritt had those notes in his possession. No doubt if Ward did his duty he would report that at once to Mr. Nicolson, being the officer in charge, and that would corroborate my statement that I had seen the notes in Aaron Sherritt’s possession.
14631. It was with that view?—Yes.
14632. What was your own impression about that note at the time?—That he had received it from the outlaws. He made no secret of it.
14633. It formed a portion of the notes taken from the Euroa bank?—Yes.
14634. Again, you go on to speak about the watch:—“As to the watch, in the early part of the evening, he, of his own accord, proposed that I should go home with him that night and he would show it to me, to get my opinion as to the feasibility of getting it altered so as to defy identification.” You say you never saw the watch?—Never saw it.
14635. You do not know anything more about it?—Nothing more than that Aaron had it in his possession; and Jack Sherritt also said he had seen it. They both said at different times they wanted to get it altered.
14636. Did Jack say so?—Yes, he did.

James Wallace, 3rd August 1881.

continued,
14637. There was no doubt he had seen it then, and there was an inscription on it?—No doubt whatever.

14638. “He said that there was a dark stain on the case and a sovereign pendent to the chain.” There is a very important clause here:—“He had an interview with Ward after this, and I fancy he was put on his guard by that gentleman.” What is the meaning of that?—That refers to Aaron Sherritt.

14639. What was your meaning?—Aaron Sherritt told me that Ward had told him (I know he told others—several) that I was assisting the police and endeavoring to capture the outlaws, that I was giving them information; and I had an idea that from his character if he knew I was making enquiries about the outlaws he would put them on their guard, so as to prevent them giving me any information.

14640. Did others inform you as well as Aaron Sherritt that Ward had said so?—Yes. I was informed that he had stated so publicly in Gardner’s hotel, at Milawa, on the evening of the ploughing match.

14641. We come to a later letter dated 19th September 1879:—“Since writing the rest I met Doig.” Who was he?—James Doig, a farmer.

14642. “He says that Ward publicly stated that I was a detective in Gardner’s hotel, Milawa, in the presence of Colin Gardner, J.P.; James Kelly, teacher; John Barry, farmer; A. McCormick, farmer and others.” That is what you refer to?—Yes.

14643. Did you consider that Ward was attempting to destroy your usefulness to the police for the purpose?—I did certainly. What other effect could it have?

14644. And you informed Mr. Nicolson that?—I did.

14645. For that purpose!—For that purpose.

14646. In this letter of the 19th September you say:—“Since coming home I have met a large number of people who were at the ploughing match on the 16th. If there had been such a rumor current as you told me of, I would be sure to have heard it by this time. Rumors of that kind soon travel. I do not believe that Ward heard anything of the kind?”—That refers to a conversation I had with Mr. Nicolson. Mr. Nicolson stated that he had heard through Ward that I had gone down on a mission to Melbourne to endeavor to obtain Byrne’s pardon. I think it was some tale of that sort.
to say. The negotiation was carried on through Mr. Nicolson personally.

14662. Then from that we would understand that he and Ward had quarrelled?—Yes.

14663. Did he ever make any statement to you that he would drop you a few hundred notes?—No; he made some offer with regard to money, which I declined; I think it was £50—a loan of some money, that was it. He knew I was in financial difficulties; that was the reason he made the offer, I suppose.

14664. Would you tell the circumstances under which such an offer as that was made?—No, I could not; I have only a hazy recollection of it; he said he had plenty of money, and if I were short he could lend me some.

14665. This is a long letter you wrote about Tom Burke and his application for land?—Yes.

14666. Have you still the same opinion of Tom Burke that you expressed there?—I have still.

14667. And of the other members of the family?—Ned Burke I considered certainly find tendencies in the way of sympathizing, but not the others.

14668. “He wished me to write to Graves, Gausson, and Cooper, Ms.L.A., and to Reid, Wallace, and Wilson, Ms.L.C., and also to draw out a petition to Parliament”—That is perfectly correct.

14669. You mention in this letter, “Barry said that if he was Byrne—I interviewed Jack Barry, of Hedi, last night. Had a conversation in re the outlaws; he was rather more reticent than he usually is, and would let out nothing tangible. I am sure he knows something about them, but I think it is indirectly through Ned Burke. Barry said that if he was Byrne, he would ride into Beechworth and shoot Ward at the first opportunity. I asked him why? What reason had Byrne to dislike Ward more than another? He replied that Ward had seduced Byrne’s sister Kate. I asked him how he (Barry) knew. He said he knew all about it, that the information had come through Byrne himself, and that he got to know it indirectly.” Was there anything of that going about with reference to the police or detectives in the district?—Only that solitary instance which I mention.

14670. And he actually made that statement to you?—Yes.

14671. You appear to have carefully reported to Mr. Nicolson all that you heard about Ward?—Yes.

14672. Was there a special kindly feeling existing between you?—No, I think not.

14673. On the 26th of November 1879 you say, “Rode down through the Woolshed,” past Aaron Sherritt’s house. “Met John Sherritt, junior, and Pat Byrne (Joe’s brother). I had a long and interesting conversation with these worthies, who manifested much pleasure in meeting me. I wondered at the marked change in Jack’s manner towards me, as, on two or three previous occasions, he had carefully avoided me. I soon ascertained the reason. It appears, by their account, that the virtuous detective who is standing the season at Beechworth had stated, a day or two previously, that my name had been added to the black list at the office; that he believed that bloody Wallace was in constant communication with the outlaws.” What do you mean by that about the detective?—That was simply a report of what actually occurred; a conversation between Byrne, Sherritt, and myself that Ward had spread that report in Beechworth, that I was on the black list at the office. That was meant to put Mr. Nicolson on his guard not to let Ward know that he had a bad feeling against me. These things were being frequently told me.

14674. You simply meant by that that you and they were talking about Ward as being a man of very bad character; did you mean by that insinuation that Ward was engaged in immoral practices?—There is no insinuation; there is simply a statement of conversation.

14675. What did you mean by that?—Will you read it?

14676. “The virtuous detective who is standing the season at Beechworth”?—That is exactly what I meant. He had the reputation of acting immorally, putting it in a mild form.

14677. Have you any knowledge within your own experience of his having done so that would justify you in saying that?—No; not directly.

14678. While you were pretending to give information to the police force, you were attempting to damn the character of a public officer without positive proof of facts?—The expressions were strong, I admit.

14679. What justification had you?—The repeated attempts of Ward to report me, and reports of Ward’s immorality.

14680. Was it not your personal animus?—No; I had no animus whatever.

14681. Was there anything to justify you?—I think it was too strong.

14682. Was it untrue?—No; I have still the opinion that he was not a man of moral character.

14683. Was there anything to justify you making such a statement in writing?—Only the current reports.

14684. You were occupying the position of a teacher of the youth of this colony?—Yes.

14685. Without having any proof positive, you did not hesitate to pen a sentence which involved the slander of a man’s character, sufficient, probably, to cause him the loss of his situation in the public service, and without any positive proof?—Without any positive proof any more than current reports.

14686. And yet you thought yourself justified in slandering a man’s character without having any proof?—I did.

14687. Were you not actuated by mere animus and nothing else?—I do not think so.
14688. I think it would be difficult to make us believe so—did you think at that time that Jack Sherritt was a sympathizer with the outlaws?—I did.

14689. Is all the rest of your valuable information supplied to Mr. Nicolson of equal importance to that paragraph in your letter, in your opinion, after due consideration?—Well, I admit that was unjustifiable and wrong.

14690. Do you think that all the rest of all your writing is of equal importance, in the interests of the public, to that statement contained in your letter obtained from Jack Sherritt?—I say the whole of that information was important to the public.

14691. You think the whole of your information was of equal value?—I am not talking about the equality—I say that may have been too strong, but the information I supplied was of use.

14692. Were you aware, at the time you wrote this paragraph against Ward, that Ward knew you were in communication with Mr. Nicolson?—He stated that I was publicly.

14693. Did you know from Mr. Nicolson whether Ward knew?—I did not.

14694. Did you ask Mr. Nicolson?—I reported the circumstance of Ward speaking about me in that way, and asked him to prevent Ward doing so.

14695. Did you ask Mr. Nicolson whether he had informed Ward that you were in correspondence with him?—I cannot recollect that point for certain.

14696. To Mr. Nicolson.—Had you made Ward acquainted with the fact?—No, Detective Ward was not aware of it till the Commission sat, to my knowledge.

14697. To the Witness.—Did Sherritt know you were in correspondence with Mr. Nicolson?—He did not, that I was aware of.

14698. Did you know that Sherritt was engaged in the confidence of the police?—Yes, I believe I did.

14699. You knew all through at this time that you were speaking of Aaron Sherritt?—That he was in communication with the police.

14700. Did you know it officially?—Yes, from Mr. Nicolson.

14701. Were you desirous of placing Aaron Sherritt upon the best possible terms of confidence with the police authorities?—No, rather the reverse, if I understand your question. My impression all through was that Aaron was playing the double game, all through up to the time I left.

14702. It may be the impression that you were playing a double game. We do not want impressions. Were not you actuated with a desire to represent to Mr. Nicolson that Aaron was playing double?—I did so because I honestly thought so.

14703. Will you now speak positively that Aaron ever admitted he had that watch?—I will—he did several times.

14704. Will you, if Jack Sherritt comes in and swears he did not, contradict him on oath?—I will if he says so.

14705. What were you at the time you were the correspondent of the police?—I was following my usual occupation of State school teacher.

14706. What salary had you at that time?—I could not say; about £200 a year.

14707. What are you doing now?—The same.

14708. At what salary?—About the same.

14709. You know what you are getting; what are you getting?—About £15 17s. 6d., including maintenance allowance.

14710. Do you mean to tell me you are still in the service of the State as a school teacher?—Yes.

14711. Were you aware that Sherritt was a paid agent of the police?—From his own statements.

14712. Not from Mr. Nicolson?—I cannot say. I knew that Mr. Nicolson had seen him. I knew that he was frequently in Benalla, but that was all.

14713. You knew he was recognized as a paid agent of the police at this time?—I believed so.

14714. And he was one of the men you swore this morning you relied on for obtaining information?—Yes, one of them.

14715. And you were at the same time endeavoring to damage the man’s character?—For the simple reason that I believed he was playing double. While I could use very often information I obtained from the man, I had no confidence in him.

534

James Wallace,

3rd August 1881.
14720. That would not have interfered with the effectiveness of the service you were going to render?—I think Captain Standish applied to the office; I never did directly.
14721. Were any of the Kelly gang at your school at any time?—Not that I know of.
14722. You were a schoolmate of Joe Byrne?—For years, and playmate.
14723. Did you make any arrangement with Aaron Sherritt for Joe Byrne to betray the other three?—I did, at the request of Captain Standish. I used him as one of the means of communication.
14724. Did you ever have any communication with Joe Byrne on the subject?—Never.
14725. At no time?—At no time.
14726. You only saw him on the road as you speak of?—Only that.
14727. Were you writing a book about this time?—I was doing something in that line, but I abandoned that idea.
14728. What was the nature of the book?—That has nothing to do with the Commission. I decline to say.
14729. Was it any reference to the Kellys?—It was simply a romance based on the country there, and it was in the interests of law and order.
14730. In connection with outrages of a similar character to the Kellys?—The same.
14731. We have it in evidence that you were often at Sherritt’s house?—Yes, I was.
14732. Asking for information, because you were writing a book?—I had to give some reason for wishing to know, and I conveyed that impression. I do not know that I actually told them.
14733. Were those outlaws and their associates the heroes of the tale?—They were not.
14734. You are quite sure of that?—I am sure of that. How could I possibly make them the heroes of a tale? I might make them the villains of a tale.
14735. How far did you get with the book?—Nothing more than notes. I did not stick to that idea long.
14736. You wrote some?—I did nothing of the kind.
14737. You obtained information that would guide you?—It was necessary to make some excuse, apart from the right one, for showing interest in the affair.
14738. Have you destroyed those notes?—Yes. Would you like to read them?
14739. I think I can read you pretty well?—Yes.
14740. Did you write a series of articles in the Wangaratta paper against the police?—No, I cannot say that I did.
14741. There was a series of articles came out in the Wangaratta paper—you were not the author?—I was in the habit of writing for the Wangaratta Despatch. I do not know what articles you refer to.
14742. Were you in the habit of supplying this journal with information bearing on the pursuit of the Kellys and the conduct of the police?—Certainly not. I have written various articles for the paper.
14743. You never wrote on this particular question, the pursuit of the Kellys?—Yes, certainly I have done so. There have been so many articles in the Wangaratta Despatch bearing on the Kellys, I cannot say which you refer to.
14744. How many did you write bearing on this subject?—I remember writing one leading article for them and a series of romance entitled “Christmas in Kelly Land.” That was all I had to do with it.
14745. Those were in no way reflections on the conduct of the police?—I do not think it could be construed in any way into reflections on the police—certainly one article reflected on the backwardness of the rank and file in not carrying the pursuit to a successful termination sooner.
14746. Did you write that article after you had seen Joe Byrne on the road, or before?—I think before.
14747. You carried that out by giving information so long after?—I was not a policeman.
14748. You were in the pay of the police?—I was not; I was only paid expenses.
14749. You received a consideration for your services?—No; I only got my expenses.
14750. Did you render an account of every particular?—No; it was not asked for.
14751. How did you render the account?—I was put to considerable expense travelling about.
14752. Will your books show that?—I have no books.
14753. Could you give us any idea how you incurred this expense?—Horse-flesh and horse-feed.
14754. You had your own horse there?—But still it would require horse-feed, and horse-feed was expensive, and travelling about from one place to another, and meeting sympathizers and drinking with them, would soon melt the money. Of course, you all being teetotallers, cannot see that.
14755. What time were you engaged in those services?—Seven or eight months, or perhaps before.
14756. What time were you engaged in this work?—Evenings and nights, Saturdays and Sundays.
14757. Never during school hours?—No, that would not have done.
14758. How much did you receive altogether?—£80.
14759. Did not you receive nearly £180?—I cannot say.
14760. Would you be surprised if it was £180?—I would, indeed, be surprised if it was over £100.
14761. Your first letter is August 1879, and your last letter is dated in March 1880; it must be a pretty good drinking outlay to spend all this £180. You commenced in August 1879, your first letter to Mr. Nicolson, and your last letter is 18th March 1880; that is about seven months; that is about £20 a month?—I did not receive £100 altogether, I am sure.
14762. Did Mr. Nicolson always express himself satisfied with your efforts?—He did not.
14763. When did he first begin to show dissatisfaction?—I could not tell you exactly.
James Wallace, continued, 3rd August 1881.

14764. I have a letter here before me, January 26th 1880, from you?—It would be about that time.

535

14765. In which evidently, from the tone of it, Mr. Nicolson has been declining to pay the sums you demanded; was that so?—He did not decline, but he said he would have to consult his superiors; he thought I had gone too much expense.

14766. As a matter of fact, did he pay you at that time the amount you asked?—I do not exactly remember.

14767. “The information I referred to I gave you at Benalla on the 12th. My expenses, which I positively understated at £25, you said you were not in a position to pay in full until you had consulted with your chief. You stated that you would write to him on the next day (13th), that you would probably receive his reply by return post, and that you would communicate with me at once. You did not do so. Beyond remitting the £6, you said nothing as to the balance of my expenses, nor do you in the letter I have just received.” That would be the 12th of January that he objected to pay any more apparently?—Yes, about that time.

14768. And you stopped supplying any intelligence from that period?—No, I met him after at Wangaratta, and he paid me the balance; and on another occasion I met him in Benalla.

14769. You say—“As to your hints re my intelligence being ‘manufactured to raise money upon,’ I do not believe that you think so. For this reason, that you know that I do not receive a penny for my information, and therefore have no inducement to stoop to such an infamous imposture.” Did Mr. Nicolson hint to you that he was not satisfied with the way your information was coming?—He did on that occasion. He said it raised unpleasant suspicions when I was so slow in coming down, after returning from the bush after my Christmas holidays.

14770. There is one question I think you ought to answer candidly—have you supplied to the police one particle of information that you think upon mature consideration helped to catch the outlaws?—I think so.

14771. At what date did you supply it after receiving it?—All through.

14772. I have read your correspondence over, and I confess I cannot find any information. I have read until I am weary. It is a perfect deluge of writing, with not a particle of information in it. I may tell you that the members of the Commission are strongly of opinion that the information in no way contributed to the success of the capture, and was from the first unreliable?—(No answer.)

14774. I have the honor to report, for the information of the Assistant Commissioner, James Wallace, schoolmaster, Hurdle Creek, came into Beechworth on Saturday, 23rd instant. He had a horse and buggy with him. He purchased a bag of bread and a case of brandy, half a dozen of pocket-handkerchiefs, one bottle of scent, and a package of arsenical soap. On Saturday the 16th instant I met Mr. Wallace on the Beechworth road, near the Golden Ball. He was going to Beechworth. He said he would see me in Beechworth on that night, but failed to do so. I found on Sunday the 17th he spent a good part of the day at Sherritt’s. On Saturday the 23rd I met him in Beechworth. We went into a public-house, and had several drinks. In course of conversation he asked me if I thought the Kellys were in the country. I said I thought they were. He said, ‘Why do you not catch them?’ In conversation it came down to this—the pardon of one to catch the other three. He said ‘That is worked out; it can’t be done.’ In payment for a round of drinks he pulled out a National Bank note, and passed it to me and remarked, ‘It is a pity you have not got the numbers now,’ and ‘You could do good.’ I replied and said, ‘Not at all, you are a friend of mine, I would take no action.’ He left me and spent money very freely during the night. Tommy slept with him at the Imperial hotel, High street that night. They left at about seven am, for Mrs. Sherritt’s, where he remained until about twelve o’clock noon, when he left for home. Tommy accompanied him as far as the Golden Ball. There is no doubt of him being a warm supporter of the gang. Strict watch will be kept on him in Beechworth when he comes in.—M. E. WARD, Det. 2358. I have been to Sheepstation Creek on yesterday. After coming back, saw Mrs. Sherritt, who is of the opinion that they will shortly give a call at her place. If they do, she will immediately let me know.—M. E. WARD Det. 2358.” Had you any conversation of that sort with Aaron Sherritt?—None whatever. It is a concocted report all through. It is a fact I bought things, though not all the things mentioned there. I got bread.

14774. Is it the fact that you stopped there for the night?—Yes.

14775. Were you in company with Sherritt?—Yes.

James Wallace, 3rd August 1881.

14776. Can you tell us in what respects you say this report is concocted?—In respect to the conversation at least. It is stated Sherritt made this report to Ward. I state that is altogether untrue; I never had any such conversation with him.

14777. Sherritt might make those statements to Ward?—Well, it is untrue that that conversation occurred between Ward and me.

14778. Might not that occur between Sherritt and Ward?—That might occur, because on that evening Sherritt was sent for by Ward. It is a fact that I was with Sherritt there, and I drove home and called at the Sherritt’s.

14779. Had you any conversation with him then?—I did, but not like that.

14780. In what are the circumstances incorrect?—That part which states that I wanted him to do certain things for the outlaws, and that I was a friend of the outlaws, and other things. Of course I had to assume the role of sympathizer, and was advised to do so by Mr. Nicolson, in order to carry it out.

14781. Did you ever say that Byrne was in your place?—I never did.

14782. Was he, as a matter of fact, ever there?—Not since they were outlaws; previously he was.

14783. Can you inform the Commission on or about the date of the last conversation you had with Byrne?—I cannot, it is so very long ago. It was shortly after his release from Beechworth prison, where he had been for some sentence or other.

14784. Do you swear that you never saw Byrne or never spoke to him after the date of the committal of the murders?—Only on that one occasion I have mentioned I never had any conversation with him.

14785. By Mr. Nicolson (to the Commission).—You asked did he ever say to anyone that Byrne had been in his house, and he said no. (To the witness.)—Did you ever say that to the Sherritts?—I may have done. I was instructed by Mr. Nicolson to lead them to believe I was a friend of the outlaws, and in communication with them. I may have made that statement to Sherritt.

14786. By the Commission.—The fact is, you wish us to understand that you, as a schoolmaster occupied in the Government service at this time, were willing to engage in a position of this kind, regardless of truth or anything else, to assist in capturing those men?—To a certain extent truth had to be sacrificed.

14787. It was merely a question of degree then?—Merely a question of degree.

14788. Do you mean to say you were prepared to lie?—I do not.

14789. If you made this statement to Sherritt, would that not be untrue after the statement you have now made?—It would be untrue, but I do not think I would have made that statement. I may have led him to believe it to a certain degree; but I am almost sure I never made that statement.

14790. Did you not make the same statement to Captain Standish?—Not that I remember; no, I am positive I did not. He was not misled by me in any way.

Mr. Nicolson.—When I went to see this witness first in July, he denied that they had ever been at his house.

The Witness.—I deny it still.

14791. By the Commission.—This is a report of Detective Ward’s, a month later, dated September 4th 1879.—[The same was read, as follows]:—“North-Eastern District, Beechworth Police Station, September 4th 1879.—Memo.—Confidential.—I have the honor to report, for the information of the Assistant Commissioner of Police, I have seen Tommy this morning, and he has very little news. He gives his reasons for stopping so long at Wallace’s is to try if Joe would call there, as he was expected but he did not call; but he states that he is certain Wallace knows their whereabouts, and can find them when he likes, but he will not sell Joe Byrne. Wallace and Tommy have made an appointment to go to Chiltern on Friday evening to try to meet a person who knows where Joe can be seen. I asked him if he would have any objection for me to be in Chiltern to see if Wallace would be there. He said, ‘No you can come, and you might then get the gold when we are in the act of selling it.’ Tommy states that the gang told Wallace they would not try the Oxley bank now, as there is too many police there—two troopers every morning when the bank opens; and another drawback, the ground is too soft. They are not going to do anything until the ground gets harder; they are frightened of the black boys. The gang were at Richardson’s shanty, on the Chiltern and Wodonga road, about three weeks ago. Joe Byrne told Wallace that Grace Quinn had Sergeant Kennedy’s watch and chain, as Byrne wanted to get the watch to return it to Mrs. Kennedy. They are very sorry for the shooting of Kennedy. Tommy says by the description of the person who gave him the threatening letter it must be a man named Jack Fox, a particular friend of the Byrnes. He received a sentence of nine months, some six years ago, for stealing a horse from Mr. Kennedy, of the Woolshed. I am not at all satisfied with Tommy’s tale. I am of opinion that he has seen Joe Byrne himself; and most likely he is the identical person who gave the letter to Jack to post, and kept out of the way until yesterday himself. However, he assures me that we will get them, and that before long. I am giving him money to go to Chiltern to keep the appointment with Wallace. If you Would advise, I would like to go and be somewhere concealed, and watch the movements of those two, as, if they are there, there is some move on the board.—M. E. WARD, Det. 2358.”—You have heard that report read?—I say it is totally untrue so far as I am connected with it.

14792. Did you never make any appointment with Sherritt?—Yes, but not of that nature. On one occasion I was out in the Chiltern direction, when my horses got away, and I made an appointment to go out the following Saturday if they did not come home. The rest has all been built up on that. Sherritt was to look for the horses on the Woolshed Ranges, and of course all these circumstances were reported to Mr. Nicolson.

14793. To Detective Ward.—Do you desire to ask any questions of Mr. Wallace?

14794. By Detective Ward.—The only question I would ask, with your kindness, is—have you and I been on friendly terms all this time you were writing?—The reverse, I should say.

14795. Did you always speak and shake hands with me?—We have always done that certainly, but I have been told by every one that you ran me down behind my back, and so on; and said I was in the pay of the police, and a sympathizer at another time.

14796. You referred in your letters a deal as to my immoral habits—can you point out one instance of your own knowledge during the time that you knew me. On your oath, is there a man in the North Eastern District more highly respected amongst the respectable citizens of Oxley and Beechworth than I am?—

537

The Commission.—It is no use asking that question.

14797. By Detective Ward.—Do you know anything personally about it?—I know no one in the North-Eastern District who bore a more unsaviable character for immorality than you yourself.

14798. Can you give any instances?—Tampering with the pupil-teachers—the girls—in the Beechworth State school.

14799. Give the name?—I cannot.

14800. By the Commission.—Was there any stir made about that at the time?—I believe so—only from report and through others. I believe Captain Standish made an inquiry into the matter, and it was hushed up.

14801. Did you hear anything of the result of that enquiry?—I did not.

14802. By Detective Ward.—Any other person?—I have heard you are the father of several illegitimate children.

14803. Will you just give one if you can. To a man like you, with such a knowledge of the world, one is nothing—give half a dozen?—It was currently reported in the North-Eastern District that you were the father of the illegitimate child of Miss Mason of Tarrawinge.

14804. Who told you that; I want an oath on that; what year was it?—I cannot give the year.

14805. Was it seven years or ten years ago?—Within two or three years ago.

14806. Are you aware where I was the last three years?—Knocking about the North-Eastern District.

14807. When did I go there?—I cannot say.

14808. Did Miss Mason tell you?—No, it was currently reported—that was all.

14809. Can you give me the name of someone?—I cannot.

Detective Ward.—I have no more questions. I defy Mr. Wallace or any other person, as far as I am concerned: and another thing I most distinctly say, that I had no knowledge of this man being employed in any way till the Commission sat.

14810. By the Commission (to Detective Ward).—Did you say in the presence of anyone that he was employed?—No, I could not.

14811. By Mr. Wallace (to Detective Ward).—You did not say so in the presence of James Doig and this witness?—No.

14812. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—There is one question I would ask—was it not currently reported that Joe Byrne was the scribe of the gang?—Yes.

14813. When you offered your services, was it one of your designs to volunteer to reduce this collection of writing of Byrne’s into shape for him—was that not the arrangement with myself?—That I should endeavor to get hold of this diary.

14814. And get the confidence of the gang through that?—Yes, that was the point I went into the bush for, to receive this diary, and I missed them some way or other.

14815. By the Commission.—Did you ever get the diary?—No; I left the district, and I would not know whom to apply to. There is one point I should like to mention—I was asked if I received payment from any member of the police but Mr. Nicolson. On one occasion, in visiting Mr. Nicolson, I received a sum of money from Captain Standish. Of course I regard that as coming from Mr. Nicolson, as it was with him I had all the communications; and along with the money I received a message to the telegraph operator, in case I wished to communicate any hour of the night.

14816. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was there any person present in the room?—Captain Standish and yourself; that is all I think.

14817. Do you remember the amount?—£25; and it was Captain Standish fixed that amount himself. I asked for an advance of money for expenses to do certain work, and I required a horse, and that contained sufficient money to procure a horse.

14818. Do you remember the note he gave you to the telegraph office?—Yes.

14819. To convey the information to whom?—To Captain Standish himself. I think it was, if I remember rightly, to the telegraph operator—"Please forward telegram to me at once to Beechworth. Most important. The office at Beechworth is open all night."—F. C. STANDISH, Chief Commissioner of Police."

14820. Was not the description of the late Sergeant Kennedy’s watch publicly known?—I did not know it.

14821. Were you not aware it was known publicly?—No more than speaking to you in conversation about the stains; you remarked you believed it was a presentation to him.

14822. You remember on that concluding correspondence with me. You say you have got the balance of your money—the £19?—Yes.

14823. That concluded the matter?—No, that did not conclude our relations.

14824. As regards money!—No, there were some expenses after, £5 13s. I claimed, and it was decided to let the horse stand for that.

14825. Do you remember meeting me afterwards?—Yes, on the Benalla platform.

14826. Do you remember the 17th April, a Saturday?—I do not remember the date.

14827. When you reached that platform at Benalla, do you remember speaking to anyone besides a few words to myself?—Mr. Graves, I think, was on the platform. I went down in the train with him the greater part of the way to Melbourne to Seymour.

14828. You saw me on that day?—Yes.

14829. And you saw me at Wangaratta as well?—I did. Mr. Nicolson asked for a letter to be read.—[The following letter was read, not signed:—]

Melbourne, April 19, 1880.—J. H. Graves, Esq.—Dear Sir,—In laying before you the following statement relative to the police force and the Kelly gang, I trust you will excuse the liberty I have taken, but I hope to justify my action by the following facts. As you are aware, the outlaws have now been at large over eighteen months, and the question arises in one’s mind—Are they ever to be captured? Well, I will endeavor to the best of my ability to explain; the cause of their being still at large, from the time of the police murders at Mansfield up to the present, has been but a complete failure of the Police Department. I will begin my narrative at the Euroa bank robbery. How the outlaws eluded the police there can only be accounted for in one way, and that was negligence of duty by Mr. Nicolson, who was then in charge of the search party there. There should be an inquiry instituted about this particular case. Why the members of POLICE.

3rd August 1881.

the force were delayed at Euroa for hours after the outlaws were gone is a serious matter, and ought in justice to every member of the force to be cleared up. That a serious blunder was committed there can be no doubt, and it is the only reason the Chief Commissioner had for ordering him to Melbourne on a pretext of having bad eyes. Another case similar happened shortly afterwards at Beechworth, when valuable information reached the constable in charge that the outlaws were in the vicinity. The constables, five or six in number, decided to proceed at once, and when everything was complete and ready to start, an officer dropped in, and ordered them to remain in barracks, and went for orders, which they were obliged to obey. The consequence of this delay was, that when all the usual red tape routine was gone through, they surrounded the hut, in three days after the information reached Beechworth. The Kelly gang had decamped the day previous. There is something very singular in this case. When this particular hut was surrounded there was almost as many officers present as constables. The question arises—Were these constables delayed for the purpose of collecting all the officers in the district to be present at the great charge of Sebastopol, as it is now termed? Had these six constables been allowed to proceed at once with the informer, the Kelly gang would now be a thing of the past, as it has been proved beyond a doubt since that the outlaws were there twenty-four hours after the information reached Beechworth. This is two instances in which if proper and prompt steps had been taken the gallows would have had its victims. Mr. Nicolson has resumed his old position in charge, and what he has done towards capturing the outlaws I am not in a position to say. There has been a secret party of police in charge of Detective Ward at Beechworth for the last four months, watching Mrs. Byrne’s house. This party of police were going to succeed at once. The gang, who were always supposed to be visiting Mrs. Byrne, were to be sold by Aaron Sherritt, who is engaged at a very high salary by the Police Department. And it is well known that Sherritt did assist these outlaws when they first turned out, and will assist them again, and I would not be the least surprised but what he carries all the information about the police movements to the Kellys; yet this is the man that A.C. Police places his confidence in. The party is now withdrawn, on account of the outlaws’ friends knowing what the police were up to. And it seems to me that the party was nothing more nor less than a complete farce, as the Byrne and Sherritt families are great friends, and both know as much as the police about the secret party. In fact Detective Ward has expressed himself on several occasions to some of his friends in Beechworth, previous to the party going out, that he knew there was nothing in it, but he must do something to curry favor with Nicolson. And at the proper time evidence will be brought forward to prove my statement true. At the present time there are men in the district who had been picked out for their smartness and activity, and they are not allowed outside barracks, for fear of them hearing anything about the murderers. There are also stationed in the district six black trackers from Queensland. The Government finds them in good clothing, and also a constable and sub-inspector to look after them. To me it seems monstrous that a sub-inspector is required to look after six black trackers at £50 per month, also horses to sport his figure on. At the lowest estimate, the trackers cost the country about £130 a month without horses, and in their first attempt at tracking two men escaped from Lancefield to Sandhurst on foot. That does not speak much for their abilities as black trackers, and I may state that those members of the force who have had an opportunity of judging of their capabilities are of opinion that they will be the cause of the outlaws escaping on the next attempt at sticking-up a bank, as no one was allowed to go in pursuit of the robbers at Lancefield for fear of obliterating the track. The same thing will occur again. The members of the Victorian police force, who are all desirous of meeting their comrades’ murderers, are to wait behind, these trackers crawling along at the rate of three or four miles an hour after men who are travelling at the rate of fifteen or twenty miles an hour until they are safe in their old haunts again with their plunder; there to remain and laugh at the futile efforts of the police to capture them. Unless some alterations are made very shortly, I am afraid that very little security to life or property we need expect from the police. If the police require strengthening in the North-Eastern District, it is not for the purpose of confining the members from where the crime is committed; and in place of the Kelly gang being allowed to rest and mature their plans for the future, the police should be allowed to exert themselves to their utmost to capture them, and not wait for the Kellys to walk into some police station and give themselves up as prisoners. I will now finish my remarks with a few suggestions, and I beg that you will be good enough to use your influence on behalf of the many who are of the same opinion as myself on this subject, and I trust you will bring under the notice of the Chief Secretary the present helplessness of the police force to capture the Kellys. In my opinion, those men that are hired at a high salary should be dispensed with. If Aaron Sherritt or any of his class ever intended to sell the Kellys, they would have done so long ago for the £8,000, and the department would not be the laughing-stock of the outlaws and their sympathizers. Fancy a man in his proper senses engaging Aaron Sherritt to sell the outlaws. Why he would rather cut his arm off.

14830. Mr. Nicolson.—Do you recognize any portion of that as your own composition?—None whatever.

14831. If anyone stated that they saw the original of that in your handwriting, would that be untrue?—No, because the original of that was in my hand, after it had been sent to Mr. Graves.

14832. Where was that?—Graves was in correspondence with me about something and enclosed that, and asked my opinion about that.

14833. Was that before I saw you that day in the train?—I cannot say; I think it must have been afterwards. The letter was not anonymous; the signature had been evidently cut out in the copy that was sent to me by Mr. Graves, and I think that is the whole of the letter that was sent to me by Mr. Graves asking my opinion about it. I said I thought it had been concocted by someone on the Woolshed.
Sherritt say that Murphy had written some articles that appeared in the Age on the same subject.

14840. When Mr. Graves asked your opinion on that, what answer did you give?—Generally, I think I said there was not much in it; there was some truth, but it was not altogether true. I do not recollect exactly, it is so long ago.

14841. By Mr. Nicolson.—You state on your oath that you did not see that document before it reached Mr. Graves?—I do. I did not see it or any part of it. The first time I saw it was when it was sent to me by Mr. Graves with some correspondence apart altogether from the Kelly affair.

The witness withdrew.

John Sherritt sworn and examined.

14842. By the Commission.—What is your occupation?—Before I was sworn in as a member of the police force I used to take contracts for fencing.

14843. Small contracts in the bush?—Yes.

14844. We have had it given in evidence that you had possession of Sergeant Kennedy’s watch at one time. Do you remember having that watch?—No, I never had it.

14845. Did you know anybody that had it in his possession?—No, I did not.

14846. Have you seen it at any time since the death of Sergeant Kennedy?—No.

14847. Have you told anybody that you had it in your possession?—No, I never told anyone so.

14848. Then you do not know anything at all about the watch, or what sort of watch it was?—No, but I can tell a little about it. I heard a party asking my brother about it, asking my brother if he could get this watch from Mrs. Byrne.

14849. Who was that?—James Wallace, the schoolmaster.

14850. Do you remember in what way he asked?—He said, “If you get that watch, I will give you so much money.” I could not mention now the amount of money, but he said, “I know you will be able to get it from her, because you and Byrne’s sister are on pretty good terms with one another.”

14851. You are still living in the neighbourhood?—Yes. There is a good portion of my evidence I wish you would not have published, because I have got a good lot to say, if I am allowed to.

The Press were requested to withdraw.

14852. With reference to this watch, do you believe that your brother ever had it in his possession?—No, I am sure he never had it.

14853. From what you knew of your brother, do you think he would tell anybody he had the watch?—No, I do not think he would; but I am sure he never had the watch.

14854. If you have anything you wish to say, if you will just commence in your own way, we will not interfere with you?—About the watch first: my brother said he could not get the watch from Mrs. Byrne, and Wallace insisted that he could; and then he wanted to make Aaron believe that he heard Aaron say—in Kelly, the outlaw’s, house—that he heard him telling Kate Kelly (Wallace said he was outside) that he had the watch. I wish to tell you my brother was in the employ of the police at this time.

14855. Did you often speak with Wallace yourself?—Well, I did pretty often; I used to go to school along with Wallace.

14856. How far was his school from the Woolshed Creek where you lived?—About twenty miles, I think.

14857. Were you often in Wallace’s house during t time that the Kellys were outlawed?—I think I was there once or twice; I was there once with cattle I know.

14858. Did you ever hear whether any of the outlaws were in that neighborhood or in his house?—No, I never heard there were any in his house.

14859. Did you know that Wallace was in the confidence of the police?—No, I did not. I was warned of Wallace though.

14860. By whom?—Mr. Nicolson, I think, warned me to be careful of Wallace.

14861. In what respect?—To be very careful of Wallace and what I said with regard to the outlaws. I could not exactly tell you what Mr. Nicolson told me.

14862. Did you at any time tell Wallace anything about Detective Ward?—No, I never told him anything about Ward.

14863. At any time?—No; I knew what kind of a character he was myself, if I never had been warned of him.

14864. What do you mean by that?—I have known him myself to come to our place; and once Aaron was inside; Aaron was lying on the floor, and he went down to Byrne’s and told Mrs. Byrne. He said, “Mrs. Byrne, I see that Sherritt—he is doing nothing; and also,” he said, “Ward was there, and he had tea at Sherritt’s and,” he said, “I believe Jack was working”—that referred to me.

14865. Have you any proof that he said that to Mrs. Byrne?—She told my sister; she could not know it without Wallace telling her. He was there, and stopped there for the night and had tea.

14866. The impression you formed of Wallace was in consequence of statements that he made in reference to yourself and others that you knew to be untrue?—Yes.

14867. Could you mention any of those?—It has not got anything to do with the evidence I am giving now, but his previous character before. We had some dealings in cattle in his paddock, and I never gave him permission to kill any of the cows belonging to me, and he stole one and killed it.

14868. Are you sure of that?—Yes, he acknowledged it himself afterwards. I can bring witnesses to 14869. Did he acknowledge that he himself killed the beast?—Yes.

14870. Did he offer to pay for it?—He let me put the cattle in his paddock, and that I was to give him what I liked when I would take the cattle out. He said he had nothing to eat the grass.

14871. What then?—First he said the cow died, and then he acknowledged to killing her himself. He said, “You need not tell your father anything about it.”

14872. That is a very serious allegation to bring against him?—I would not say it unless I could bring witnesses to prove he said he killed the cow himself.

14873. More than one?—Yes.

14874. Respectable people?—Yes.

14875. That could be relied upon?—Yes.

14876. What did he do with it?—Kept a quarter himself, and sent a quarter to his father-in-law, and some more to his own people.

14877. Divided it amongst his own family?—Yes.

14878. You never gave him permission to take the cattle for the use of the grass?—No, never at all.

14879. Was there anything else?—He used to come to me, and he would try to “pump” me, to see if I was working for the police; and on one occasion I had my own suspicion of him. He said, “Do you see any police about during the last week, Jack?” and I said, “Yes, I have I saw three or four along the Eldorado road.” At the same time I had seen none; but it was not above two hours but Mrs. Byrne heard what I told him. That was how I knew that.

14880. How did you come to know that?—From my sister. I used to have correspondence. My sister used to go there for the police business.

14881. And Mrs. Byrne was able to say what you said to Wallace to your sister?—Yes.

14882. You were on friendly terms with the Byrnes—your sister?—She never used to go there. We would speak when we met; my sister never visited like.

14883. About your late brother Aaron—do you know that he was engaged for a long time by and had the confidence of the police, and supplied them with information?—Yes.

14884. Do you believe he acted honestly by the police in that position?—Yes, I am sure he did.

14885. Do you think, during the time he was giving information to the police, he was not also in correspondence with the outlaws?—No, he was not.

14886. Not by any agents or friends he had?—No. I was in correspondence with the outlaws myself.

14887. Directly with them?—Yes.

14888. Did you meet them at times?—Yes, I did.

14889. Where?—How I used to correspond with them I will tell first.

14890. You remember the murders of the police at the Wombat?—Yes; but at that time I had nothing at all to do with the police.

14891. When did you first, after that, have any interview with any of the outlaws—after the murders at the end of 1878?—I think the first interview I had with Byrne was on the Sandy Creek, at the Killewarra run. I never kept any date.

14892. That was about a twelvemonth afterwards by this printed list. That was the first time you first saw them?—Yes.

14893. Were you then in the confidence of Byrne?—Yes. I was writing letters to him, and he to me. The letters I used to write to him used to go by my sister to Byrne, and one from Patsey Byrne to the outlaws.

14894. How long did you keep that up?—For a great length of time.

14895. For how long before their capture did you break off that means of correspondence?—I did not know it was broken off at all.

14896. By Mr. Nicolson.—You remember the Wangaratta agricultural show in 1879?—Yes.

14897. Do you remember coming to me with Wallace?—Yes; Wallace told me who you were.

14898. That is 12th September 1879. You were engaged then?—Yes.

14899. By the Commission.—Then from that time, right through, you were continuing your correspondence?—Not the last few weeks they committed the murder, but within the last month.

14900. At the time you were corresponding, did you know where they were located?—No.

14901. You had no means of knowing?—No; they never told me.

14902. Had you any personal interview with any after that one at Sandy Creek?—No, I never met them anywhere—they had been at the house—only Byrne.

14903. You saw them at your house?—Yes.

14904. How often did they come?—Well, I could not tell you. On several occasions when I was not there, and on one occasion Byrne came after that. I will tell you about a letter I got. I received several letters before the time I was appointed to meet Byrne at Sandy Creek. I forwarded all those to the police, and this letter was only short written, quick, and this my sister brought me from Mrs. Byrne’s, and I was to see him at Sandy Creek; and I forwarded the letter to Mr. Ward, and he said he forwarded it to Mr. Nicolson, and that Mr. Nicolson instructed him to tell me to keep the appointment; and I got a horse of my own, and went to the place, and the man at whose house they were to meet had left.

14905. You did not meet Byrne?—Not at that time or the day appointed, but on the next morning, coming back, about ten or eleven o’clock, I met him on the road.

14906. What was the nature of your conversation with him?—It was about sticking up the Yackandandah bank and some other bank he mentioned. I forget the name.

14907. Was he wanting you to help him stick up the bank?—Yes; and he said a lot about Mr. Hare and Mr. Nicolson.

14908. Against them?—Yes. He said that. He asked me if I knew Mr. Hare, and I said “No”; and he said, “That is the old buck that caught Power.” I said, “I do not know.” He said he believed be was a smart old “cove”; and he asked me if I knew Mr. Nicolson, and I told him I knew no one; and I was to go to Yackandandah and see how many police were there, and to let him know, was to go to Yackandandah and see how many police were there, and see if I could detect any police in private clothes, and loaf round there and see where the police went in to have tea, and all particulars about their movements.

14909. What did you do with him then—did you arrange to go?—Yes, and bring him the information. He had no horse, but he had a pair of long boots, and his trousers were all over blood. He had long spurs. I asked where his mates were, and he said, “Not very far off.”

14910. He did not tell where they were?—No.

14911. Did he make any arrangement for you to come back?—Yes. I was to meet him at Evans’s Gap a short time afterwards.

14912. Did you carry it out?—Before the day appointed, when I was to see him at Evans’s Gap, he came himself to my mother’s place.

14913. What did he do then?—He came inside, and stopped there for a considerable time, and said they had abandoned the idea of sticking up the Yackandandah bank—that it was not safe; that they intended to stick up the Beechworth bank.

14914. Who came to your mother’s place?—I remember now it was Dan Kelly came first, and I was not in, but I was not far away. I was over in the paddock. He came to see me, and he asked if I was in, and my mother said, “No,” and he looked in the rooms to see if I was inside, and he said he would be back at eight o’clock.

14915. What time was it?—Just about dusk.

14916. What time of year was it?—I cannot say, but I could find that out.

14917. Was it light?—Just between day and dark.

14918. Was it after the sticking up the bank at Jerilderie?—Yes, after that.

14919. And then Joe Byrne came?—No, I went to Beechworth to inform Detective Ward. My sister came over to the paddock, and told me Dan Kelly wanted me to see me. I had a horse in the paddock, and a saddle, and I went through the bush to Beechworth. I saw Ward. I do not know whether I saw him with Mr. Nicolson together in the office, but I gave this information.

14920. What did they do upon that?—Mr. Nicolson looked up at the clock. I think it was about halfpast seven. I went up pretty quick, and Mr. Nicolson wanted me to go back again to make my appearance to Dan Kelly, and I would not go. I was frightened. I had been seen by some of his friends—very likely seeing me talking to some of the police in Beechworth; and, when he insisted on looking through the rooms with my mother for me, I was doubtful of him, and I would not go back. Ward gave me IoS., and said I could make my appearance on the Woolshed, and show I was about, and not in any way in league with the police.

14921. So nothing further came of that?—They did come back, but I was not at home. The whole lot was outside, but they did not come in the same night. I did not know it till a couple of days afterwards, when the police were informed of it.

14922. Do you know what action the police took on getting your information?—There was no action taken on my information at all.

14923. Did they not start in pursuit immediately?—No, no pursuit at all.

14924. What answer did they give?—I did not get any answer at all. I wanted to go back myself. They told me to return. Mr. Nicolson wanted me to, but I was frightened and would not go.

14925. As far as you know, they took no action then in pursuit?—No.

14926. If they had done so, they would have met the Kellys when they came back?—Yes, but the Kellys did not come in. If I was in at eight o’clock, there was to be a light burning, and there was none. That was arranged with my mother.

14927. Did you inform the police that arrangements of that sort had been made?—No, not about the candle, because I did not stop in. He was to get full particulars from my sister. I did not know it at that time.

14928. Did you inform the police that some of the outlaws were to return to your place to ascertain your report about the banks. Did you inform the police that you expected the outlaws to visit the house again?—Yes, I did. I said Dan Kelly had come to see me about six o’clock, and he would be back again about eight. It seems there was no light burning, and the whole lot came back.

14929. Did you state Dan Kelly had been there and would return to the house again at eight o’clock?—Yes.

John Sherritt,
continued,
3rd August 1881.
14930. Was it possible for you to be back by eight o'clock?—Yes, I could have easily.
14931. If you could, it was equally possible for the police to be back by eight o'clock?—Yes. If the police were ready, they could.
14932. There would have been no difficulty in getting the horses and getting back to this spot in a couple of hours?—Yes, they had good horses.
14933. As far as you can judge, is it your opinion, if they had started probably then, they would have succeeded in capturing the outlaws?—Yes, they would, because if the police had gone down I would have gone with them.
14934. You have no doubt, as far as your opinion goes, that if they had started with you they would have got them then?—Yes, as far as my opinion goes, they would.
14935. How far was it from your place to the police quarters?—I do not know—they call it about three miles.
14936. You could ride three miles?—I rode on the police horses once twelve miles in about thirty-three minutes, or less, over rough country.
14937. There was no difficulty for them?—No, I could ride that bit myself in ten minutes.
14938. Did they give you any reason why they did not return with you?—No, they gave no reason.
14939. Simply gave the ten shillings and told you to go away?—Yes.
14940. How long before the capture of the Kellys did this circumstance you have now related take place?—I could not tell you.
14941. Just as near as you can—six or seven months?—About that. I never kept any date of anything. If I had known as much as I do now I would have.
14942. Was it dark before you started to give this information to the police?—Yes, it was dark; it was just between day and dark when he came, and about a quarter of an hour afterwards I got the information myself, and it was not then more than a quarter of an hour till the police got it.
14943. It was not too dark to traverse the road?—No, quite easily; there is a good main road.
14944. What object had Dan Kelly to return at eight o'clock?—To see me.

14945. Because he had not seen you earlier in the day?—Yes. He had not seen me that day at all. Byrne came afterwards, and told me that Dan Kelly's object to see me was that they did not want to stick up the Yackandandah bank—that it was too dangerous. Anyhow, I told them myself it was dangerous. Mr. Nicolson told me to express my timidity about the outlaws, and tell them it was dangerous to stick up the Yackandandah bank.

14946. On this particular day you are now speaking about, as soon as you had ascertained that Dan Kelly had called, you immediately rode into Beechworth, and told that they had been there and were likely to return that night?—Yes.
14947. You did not know it was the whole party at the time?—No, only one of them.
14948. Which officer of police did you see?—Mr. Nicolson.
14949. Anyone else?—Yes, Ward was there too.
14950. Did the outlaws in any way indicate to you that they thought you were working for the police?—No, they never did. If they did, I would have cleared out of the country altogether, because they would have shot me straight away.
14951. Did Mr. Nicolson say he would do anything, or did you offer to take them back?—No, I did not offer, but Mr. Nicolson wanted me to go back myself.
14952. Did Mr. Nicolson know where you were living?—I am sure he was well aware of that.
14953. Did Ward know it?—I should rather think so. He had been at the house.
14954. When did you see any of the gang after that?—Byrne came himself—I do not know how near it was afterwards—came inside and stopped for a considerable time. I was talking to him myself.
14955. What was the nature of the conversation?—About the sticking up the Beechworth bank, and abandoning the idea of sticking up the Yackandandah bank.
14956. Did he let you know where his mates were stopping?—No, he never went to that.
14957. Did he ask you to do anything on that occasion?—Yes, to help them to stick up any bank they would get the chance at.
14958. Did he make any arrangements to make inquiries as to any other bank?—Yes; I forget which bank. I was to ascertain when I met about another bank, but I forget now which bank it was.
14959. Did you go to make enquiries about this bank you now speak about?—They had abandoned any idea of sticking up those two.
14960. The one that you forget the name of—did you take steps to ascertain the position of the bank, and how it was protected?—No. He only spoke about this bank the same day as I met him at Sandy Creek, and I was not to bother any more about it.
14961. You stated that after you had given information to the police that Dan Kelly had been, you had a conversation with Byrne at your place, and he then talked about sticking up some other bank?—The Beechworth bank.

14962. You then say he asked about some other bank you cannot remember—did you take any steps to ascertain whether that bank was protected or not?—No.

14963. You state after the night the Kelly gang were at your place that Byrne saw you at your own place?—Yes, some time after—very shortly.

14964. What was the nature of the conversation between you and Byrne then?—I asked him what did Dan Kelly want. I said I was not in. I cannot remember whether he asked where I was. He said that Dan Kelly wanted to see me for me not to be bothering about going to the Yackandandah bank, and he then talked about sticking up the Beechworth bank.

14965. Did he ask you to assist him in that?—To help him to fight the police; in fact, I said I would join them.

14966. Did you make arrangements to join them?—No, I did not make arrangements to join them to stick up the Beechworth bank, but I told him I would go with them.

14967. Did you make an appointment for you to go out to any particular place?—He was to come to our place when they were going to fight, and he said if Aaron was there he would make us go and fight the — police.

14968. Did he come back?—No, he did not.

14969. Did you see them after that date?—No. I had seen him so many times that I cannot tell in what order they came.

14970. Was that the only time you informed the police they were to be at a certain place—the one you speak of just now?—I informed the police several times; I saw three of the outlaws come from Mrs. Byrne’s, over by the Chinese camp, where I believe they purchased some things. I informed the police the next morning.

14971. Whom did you inform?—Ward, I think.

14972. Do you know whether they took any steps to trace them?—There could have been no steps taken.

14973. Was it not possible for the police to have taken steps to endeavor to follow them without your knowledge?—They could not go without my knowledge. I am not aware of any steps being taken. On another occasion I saw the Chinaman at the Chinese store, E Fang; I as in there one day. I was fetching a lot of bark down to Sebastopol. He can talk very good English; I can understand every word he says. He called Joe Byrne Ah Joe, and my brother was known as Ah Jim; they could not say Aaron. He said, “Last night me see Ah Joe come along with Ah Jim to the store.” He said, “Him welly bad man before he shot policeman; him shoot policeman and kill him Chinaman.” They got a bottle of gin and some tobacco, and something else, and went away. You might think that my brother was with them, but the police knew where he was with them this night; but this man it appeared to me was Ned Kelly who was with them; Joe Byrne was, no doubt, because the Chinamen knew him well, because he used to pelt them and hammer them with stones.

14974. Did you report that?—Yes, I did; I told Mr. Nicolson about it, and he said he would adopt some plan to catch them.

14975. How soon after did you report that?—Immediately afterwards.

14976. On every occasion you came across them and became possessed of information you lost no time in communicating with the police?—I lost no time, and never hid anything from the police.

14977. Did you remain in that district till the capture?—Yes.

14978. And giving the police the same character of information all the time?—Yes.

John Sherritt, 3rd August 1881.
14989. After you had remained in Beechworth for some time, when did you leave—how long after the capture?—I think about a week afterwards.

14990. What reason did you leave Beechworth for?—After my being at Glenrowan, I was seen on that morning going up with the police carrying breech-loaders, and was seen by all the Woolshed people, and I was known at Glenrowan, and I was afraid I would be shot. I would be shot now.—Mrs. Byrne would shoot me herself, she has such a down on me—she placed such confidence in me about those letters.

14991. You thought it unsafe to remain at Beechworth?—Yes.

14992. After you left Beechworth what did you do?—I joined the force here, and I and my brother got so much allowed us each in Melbourne.

14993. Were you sworn in as a constable?—A few weeks after that we were. He gave us a letter down to Mr. Hare at the depot.

14994. How long did you remain a member of the Victorian police?—I think six or seven weeks.

14995. How did you come to leave it?—I do not know “how”—I know I got the sack.

14996. Who dismissed you?—Mr. Nicolson.

14997. Did he assign any reason?—No.

14998. Had you misconducted yourself in any way?—No, not that I aware of. I was long enough there to know the regulations. If a man did anything, he was brought up and it was enquired into, and I was not brought up.

14999. After you were dismissed what have you done?—I have been only home once, I think.

15000. After leaving the Victorian police what did you do?—I went to South Australia, and worked there for a considerable time. I was not very well—I got a fall from a horse—the work went against me. I have been engaged in ploughing and butchering since.

15001. Where?—Up near Gisborne.

15002. Your friends are still living in the North-Eastern District?—Yes.

15003. Would you be under any danger if you were going back there to-day?—I would not go back—I might just as well go and commit suicide myself at once. I am out of work just now.

15004. You have been doing anything you can?—Yes. I have been ploughing and butchering.

15005. Do you think the sympathizers with the Kellys and Byrnes keep up that feeling about the people still?—Yes; Mrs. Byrne would shoot me herself. It is not that. I would not care if a man came straight in front of me and let me see him shoot me, but when at my work out in the bush, they would shoot me quietly, and let no one know anything about it.

15006. The Byrne family?—Yes.

15007. Do you know where your other brother is now?—No.

15008. Was he in the police with you?—Yes, and dismissed at the same time.

15009. Was there any charge against him?—No, I am certain there was not. I heard there was a statement in the press, and in these buildings here, that some one saw in the paper that he was dead.

15010. From what you know of the people in the North-Eastern District, and the steps taken by your brother, is it likely to return to the North-Eastern District?—No, he would not go back.

15011. The same fear and dread would be in his mind as in yours?—Yes. On the night that Aaron was shot they asked if Bill or Jack was inside.

15012. Is there a strong feeling of that sort in the district—are there many that would take part, or is it only the family?—There are a good many sympathizers.

15013. Are they scattered about much through the district?—Yes, they are.

15014. You have no fear of them committing any act except against you, from information?—That is all. Oh, I do not know whom they may shoot, but I would not trust Mrs. Byrne for a moment.

15015. Would you be still anxious to join the Victorian police?—Well, I do not know. If I had an opportunity, I would; but I do not think it would be any use joining the Victorian police. I would if I got the opportunity.

15016. Why would it be no use?—After I got discharged from the police force, I made a declaration to Mr. Graves that I was known by all the detectives, and five or six dogged me about at the Exhibition, and Mr. Graves said, “You had better look out for them.” I told Mr. Graves about it. I was frightened they would get me into trouble, because when Mr. Nicolson discharged me he said, “I would advise you to go out of Melbourne, because if you stay in Melbourne you will be in trouble before three months.”

15017. Did he assign any reason?—No.

15018. Did he say, “You have been doing so-and-so, and you had better go”?—No.
another’s hands.

15024. Were you on bad terms with your brother after he got married?—No, I was not. I will tell you everything I know. We were on bad terms for a few days. It was about his getting married. He said he was going to be married, and I said, “What is the good? you will have to mix up with your wife’s sisters or brothers, and very likely they will be going to the cave and the house, and Byrne’s sister and brothers go to school, and it is hard to say what they will do.”

15025. You thought it a bad time to be getting married?—Yes.

15026. You had no objection to his marrying Miss Barry?—No, not a bit. I was not acquainted with her at all.

15027. You had no objection to her personally?—No.

15028. Is there anything you wish to inform the Commission about, anything you would like to say yourself, any information you have to give, or any complaint to make?—I have got a good deal of complaints to make about information I gave, that it was not acted upon. I will tell you another instance. On one occasion I gave good information about Byrne. I got along with Patsy Byrne this night, and we got drinking together; he was drinking brandy and I was drinking what they call “soft stuff,” so as to watch him. I stopped with him a considerable time, and he went home to his mother’s place, and he came back again, and he told me, “Joe has been home and got some clothes, and cleared out; is not he a — smart fellow?” It was close on morning then, so as soon as I got Patsy Byrne away, I took an axe with me, and gammoned to go to my work. On the way to work I met two of the cave party—Alexander and Armstrong—and I told them about Byrne being home last night, and they seemed like as if they were horror struck at Byrne being home and they watching. It was Alexander senior.

15029. Those men were horror struck at the idea of their not seeing the man when he came there?—Yes.

15030. What happened then?—As soon as I told those two men I went to Beechworth and told Ward.

15031. Where did you see those two men?—I was going to the cave, on the track to the cave, and I met those two men going to the cave; they had been away for water somewhere.

15032. What did Ward do?—I believe he saw my brother about it, and that they informed him it was an impossibility for Byrne to be there and them watching; but it was no impossibility at all. I could go to the house, and five or six men with me, and the men not see me—creeping along the deep rise there was in front of Mrs. Byrne’s house. The men used only to watch the front of the place, but a man could get up without their seeing it.

15033. Could they not see a man walking in at the front door?—No. The men when I was watching were only lying at the back of the place. They never put anybody at the front at all to watch.

15034. There is a space between the garden gate and the house—you could see a man walking distinctly?—Yes.

15035. How could a man get in there without being seen?—I could get in without being seen.

15036. How?—They could come along between the house and the garden fence in the rise that is there. Patsy Byrne did not say he was in the house; he might stop and the things be conveyed to him.

15037. Did you ever learn whether they had any “call” that they understood—any signal that they understood in the house?—I did not know that they had any signals in the house.

15038. What did Ward do when you gave him the information next morning?—I believe he rode out to some of the men, or saw my brother or some of the men, and the men said it was impossible the man could have been there and the police not see him, so I expect that five men’s word to my one was no good. So the next morning I went to the cave. Whatever consultation the men had between themselves, he said to me, “Did you see Byrne last night?” in a kind of sneering way too—as much as to say from what he could understand that I did not get that information at all.

15039. They did not believe he was home?—They did not.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow, at Eleven o’clock.

THURSDAY, 4TH AUGUST 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. LONGMORE, M.L.A., in the Chair;

Thomas Bolam sworn and examined.

15040. By the Commission.—What are you?—Inspector-General and Acting Secretary of the Education Department.

15041. Do you know James Wallace, teacher, who was at Hurdle Creek?—Not personally—officially I know of him.

15042. What was his position as a teacher at the time that the outlaws were out?—He was acting as head teacher in two half-time schools, the one being at Hurdle Creek, and the other at Bobinawarra.

15043. What direction was Bobinawarra from Hurdle Creek?—About due east.
15044. More towards the Woolshed—towards Beechworth?—I am not able to speak very definitely with respect to the geographical positions. I could point it out on the map.—[The witness did so.]
15045. He was promoted after that?—It was not exactly promotion.
15046. What salary was he getting?—The special salary of £3 10s. a week, as the teacher of the two half-time schools.
15047. Did you consider his movement to the other school in the Yea district an advance?—It was an improvement in position, but not very much in regard to salary. The school he is at present in is what is called a full-time school, where the duties are not so easy as in the half-time schools. Although the salary is very little more than the other, the position must be held to be preferable.
15048. When he was at the half-time school had he any perquisites at all?—No, not that I am aware of.
15049. Nothing for results?—The £3 10s. a week included salary and results—it was a special salary.
15050. He would be open to teach special subjects?—In those small schools, special subjects were not dealt with.
15051. That was all he received from your department?—Yes.
15052. From any other department?—He was acting as postmaster, for which he received a small salary—a very small salary.
15053. What does he get now as teacher?—At the time of his appointment to the Yea school the income was £170 a year.
15054. And he is entitled to results?—That includes salary and results, but the income varies from year to year in accordance with the result examination.
15055. Can you tell us what was the cause of his removal?—If I may be allowed to express myself pretty fully—15056. We wish you to do so?—Rumors reached me that he was showing very friendly relations to the outlaws. I also heard that he was a schoolfellow of one of them. I at once examined old reports in the Education Department, and from those learned that he had attended the same school with Joseph Byrne, and that he had been in the same class with him for some considerable time. I saw that he had very great facilities for assisting the outlaws—that his position as teacher of half-time schools enabled him to be constantly moving about, and in that way that he had opportunities of seeing them. I also saw that his position as postmaster gave him very great facilities for rendering them assistance; and taking all this together I called upon Captain Standish, and pointed out to him that I was under the impression that the facilities which Wallace had for assisting the outlaws were so great as to induce him to render them some assistance, and the fact of his being a schoolmate, and evidently an old friend of one of the outlaws, would be likely to lead him to help them if it was in his power; and I learned from Captain Standish in a private conversation —
15057. We wish you to give that?—That he had every reason to believe that my opinion was well founded—that from information he had received there was every reason to believe that Wallace was sympathizing with the outlaws. On learning this from Captain Standish, I reported the matter to my chief, Mr. Ramsay, and suggested that we should at once take steps to remove Wallace from the district. I am expressing myself very freely—may I refer to my conversation with Mr. Ramsay?
15058. I think so, because we have got a good many of those things in evidence already. Can you fix the date of the interview with Captain Standish?—I took no note of the time. It was a very few days before the removal of Wallace, and Wallace was removed a week before the outlaws were captured.
15059. Was it the Education Department that moved in the matter first, or the police?—I know of no steps being taken until I had this interview with Captain Standish, and I called upon him more in a casual way, to inform him what my opinion was, and to ascertain from him whether he considered there was any ground for my forming the opinion. On my pointing out to Mr. Ramsay that I had very strong suspicions that Wallace was in some way or other assisting the outlaws, and that similar suspicions were also held by Captain Standish, Mr. Ramsay wished me to say whether I was not in a position to make a definite charge against Wallace, and have him removed from the service. He said if those suspicions could be proved to be well founded he was not a deserving man to be kept in the service. I pointed out to him that at present I was not in a position to make any charge against Wallace, and the only way in which I saw we could deal with the case was to remove him to a position which was a little more desirable, and get him away from the Kelly country. He had already applied for promotion, and the reports of the inspector on his work for some time previous to this had been favorable. We then, having obtained the requisite authority from Mr. Ramsay, offered Mr Wallace the position of this school at Yea. He demurred at first, and intimated his intention to accept the appointment conditionally on our appointing his brother at Hurdle Creek and Bobinawarrah. That I thought to be very undesirable, and I intimated to Wallace that we could only allow him to accept this position unconditionally, and if he were transferred we should consider his brother’s application for the Hurdle Creek school. On the receipt of this letter or telegram from me, Wallace informed me by telegram that he accepted the position, and I took steps at once to relieve him.
15060. His brother was not appointed?—No.
15061. Did Captain Standish inform you of the relations that existed between the police and Wallace at this time when you conversed with him?—I learned nothing definitely from Captain Standish, but I left him under the impression that the police were very suspicious of Wallace, that Wallace had offered to give information, and the police were distrustful of him.

15062. He did not lead you to understand that he was in reality in the pay of the police at this time?—I cannot say that.

15063. Was the department applied to at any time by Wallace or any of his friends for permission to act as an agent in the search for the Kellys—was the department at any time a party consenting to his acting in that capacity?—We knew nothing at all about it officially.

15064. Until when?—I have heard within the last few months, privately, that Wallace had received money from the Police Department, but that was since that time.

15065. You have not even now had official intimation?—I have had no intimation whatever.

15066. Your reply to that is that you have only heard of it since?—I did not know of it at the time, and what I have heard since has been of such a character that I could not take any official notice of it.

POLICE.

3 z

4th August 1881.

15067. The department did not at any time think it expedient to give instructions to officers in that district to aid the police by any means they could?—We had no applications before us.

15068. I want to know that to show he had no authority from the department?—He had no authority whatever.

15069. Does the Education Department recognize the ability of any officer in its employment to occupy another position under the Government, receiving pay?—We allow our teachers to hold the position of postmaster, but they are not supposed to accept any position that would in any way interfere with their positions as school teachers.

15070. If application had been made to the department, would they have agreed to Wallace’s taking this position of an agent or informer?—We should have demurred certainly, because we should have considered that it would have interfered with his duties.

15071. Had it been made plain to you that this man could have assisted the police without interfering with his school duties, would the department then have sanctioned it?—We should not have interfered with his giving legitimate assistance to the police so long as it did not interfere with his ordinary school duties.

15072. As far as the reports of the inspectors are concerned, was there any falling off in the results of his school during the year 1879?—I cannot say there was any change in the results. I cannot speak without referring to the reports, but the last report submitted on Mr. Wallace’s school at Hurdle Creek was very favorable. The inspector reported to the effect that Wallace appeared to be deserving of promotion, so there was no apparent want of zeal.

15073. Then if during this time he wrote to the police that, through his having been away from his school so much, he would lose at least £10 in results, that would not be true, according to your statement, in those half-time schools. He wrote to the police that, through his having assisted them, he would lose about £10 in results, from the children being backward in their education through his having spent so much time?—It is difficult for me to say what his results might have been.

15074. But in the half-time schools he had no results?—He was paid a special salary, not in accordance with results at all, so any statement to that effect would not be correct, because he was in receipt of a special salary, which was not interfered with by results.

15075. Could you inform us who conveyed the information to you that Wallace was a schoolfellow of Byrne’s that led you to form your suspicions?—I could mention the name, but I think it is undesirable it should be mentioned; I should not like it to appear. It was in the course of private information in the office.

15076. Not through any of the police authorities?—Not through the police at all. I learned it quite casually from a member of Parliament, and then I followed it up.

15077. How long before this interview with Captain Standish did you receive the first intimation of Wallace’s sympathy with the outlaws?—Only a very few days, because I at once set myself to work to look up reports, which I have referred to, and I looked up correspondence which is at present before the Commission, which confirmed me in my suspicions, and when I saw there was some ground for my suspicions, I at once thought it my duty to state to Captain Standish what I knew.

15078. Officially, the department, until the time you speak of, had received no information in writing of the suspicions about Wallace?—We have never received any information; the first was in the Argus report of the evidence given yesterday.

15079. As far as the opinion of the department towards this man was concerned, did they look upon him as a man with a good character?—He had always stood well with us.

15080. A man of good character?—A man of good character, and a zealous teacher.

15081. Here is a letter of his, February 17th 1880—“The school inspector is to examine my pupils on Thursday. It will take all my time to prepare for it. As it is I shall lose from £5 to £10 in results through being so much engrossed in your affairs.” He was nominally working for nothing, for expenses only, but in reality almost every letter he has sent here made a demand for money, and he got about £80 from the police for his services. Do you know anything of his brother’s relations with the outlaws?—I know nothing about the brother. I suppose you mean William Wallace. There are two brothers, one a pupil-teacher in the Eldorado school, and another holding the position of head teacher in the neighborhood. It was for one of those brothers he wished the position at Hurdle Creek to be kept.

15082. He was capable of being placed in that position?—I cannot say he had a claim for so good an income, being a young teacher.

15083. Did it strike you the connection of the post office and the half-time school with his brother might serve almost as well as if he were there himself?—I saw that at once when he applied for the school, the Benalla East school. We were about to establish a school there, and I mention this as the ground of my suspicions. Mr. James Wallace strained every nerve to secure that appointment for himself, but in his correspondence he showed a very great anxiety for us to put his brother into his place at Hurdle Creek. I thought that was unusual, and that there must be some grounds for his showing this great anxiety, and my mind seemed to be satisfied that he was anxious to be in a position like Benalla, where he could get constant information and assist the outlaws still further, and at the same time he was able to communicate with them through Hurdle Creek and Bobinawara schools. His letters applying for the Benalla East school were of such a character as to lead me to be very suspicious that he had some ulterior object in view.

15084. Had you been made acquainted at that time that he was and had been for a long time in communication with Mr. Nicolson, then acting in the North-Eastern District, and supposed to be assisting him in capturing the outlaws, would you not have rather acceded to his request than otherwise—if I was certain he was assisting the police, I should have taken no steps to prevent him, but my private opinion was he was acting in a friendly relation with the outlaws.

15085. You were not made acquainted with the fact that for months previous he had been in constant communication with the officer in charge?—I was not aware of that.

15086. From what has since come under your observation, would you have acceded to his request if you had the same information then that you now have?—If I had I should certainly have taken the steps I did.

15087. You have arrived at the conclusion that Wallace, although ostensibly assisting the police, was not acting fairly by them?—I do not know whether I am justified in saying I have arrived at that conclusion; that is my private impression. I have heard all sorts of rumors, and I am quite satisfied in my own mind that he has been at heart ready at all times to assist the outlaws.

15088. After arriving at that conclusion, do you think he is a desirable man to be retained in the department?—I do not think that it is desirable that we should retain in the service a man who would render assistance to those outlaws, but I feel there is a difficulty in our way in dealing with a case like this without proof.

15089. There is one thing that I would like to ask you about; did you hear of any man being stuck up in the Beechworth district about Christmas 1878?—Yes, I read accounts in the newspapers of the sticking up of the hawkers by the Kelly gang, and I was under the impression, from the accounts which I read (I have not kept them to refer to), that the stranger who was with the outlaws at the time very possibly was Wallace. This, I believe, was during the Christmas holidays, and I thought it was quite possible that Wallace would be with the outlaws at that time; but this is only a supposition of mine.

15090. That is, from the description of the man?—I gathered that from the rumors that were floating about, and the accounts in the various papers.

15091. Did the description of that sticking-up case appear in the papers about the end of 1878 or the beginning of 1879?—I cannot say whether the account appeared after the Beechworth trial of Kelly or at the time of the trial.

15092. Did you hear the names of the pedlers?—I do not recollect them.

15093. How did the impression come to be on your mind that there was a fifth one there?—It was stated in one of the accounts that I saw, that there were five in the gang, and this account was to the effect that the hawkers saw the Kelly party and this other man, who was armed like them. I am giving you only my suspicion.

15094. You say that the impression formed itself on your mind from the description of the person said to be with the gang tallied with that of Wallace—at what time did this impression force itself on your mind?—At the time I read the account in the newspaper.

15095. My object in asking that is, that if you formed that impression a long time prior to the time alluded to, did you take any action then to see if your suspicions had any foundation?—I could not follow that up. It was at the time, as I have already said, a few days or weeks before Wallace was removed from Hurdle Creek that I had my suspicions about it. I saw this account then—whether in an old paper or whether the account was put under my notice, I cannot say.

15096. You do not think you read this account immediately after the occurrence took place?—I do not know when I saw it.

15097. That is important if the impression formed on your mind occurred immediately after the meeting with the bushrangers and this fifth party?—It would not be at that time certainly, because I had no... knowledge of Wallace being a friend of the outlaws.

15098. In all probability your attention to that would not have been called to that till after the action taken in reference to Mr. Wallace?—Yes. It could not have been before that.

15099. Then we understand the thing gradually settled into your mind by a sort of chain of evidence?—First his being a schoolmate, and then the nature of his duties—the facilities he had for rendering assistance, and then the correspondence in reference to the appointment of his brother and his own transfer to Benalla. I took all those together, and they were really the groundwork of the suspicion, and then after that I called upon Captain Standish, and after an interview with him was satisfied that the best course for the department to follow was to remove Wallace from the district.

15100. As a prudential move?—That was it; as I intimated to Mr. Ramsay at the time, if he was guilty of rendering active assistance to the outlaws, the police would be certain to follow it up.

15101. Have you seen the letters that Wallace wrote to Mr. Nicolson?—I have not. I know his writing very well.

15102. Will you look at that letter—one will give you an idea of the style of the whole?—[The witness did so.]—There is no mistaking the handwriting.

The witness withdrew.

John Sherritt further examined.

15103. By the Commission.—You said there were several things you had omitted to mention at the time you had the interview with Joe Byrne at Sandy Creek?—Yes, I have got them put down here, and there may be other things I told Mr. Nicolson.

15104. If you can give dates it will be well?—I never kept any dates. Byrne said that Mr. Hare and search parties very nearly had them once, and that they were—well starved out. He told me he would give me money to pay my expenses to spy for him—that is, go to Yackandandah bank—but that he was short of cash at present, but when he got the bank he would give me a hundred or two. That is all about that. I do not know whether I told you yesterday I did get £2 from Byrne for posting up some caricatures that came to me in a letter. I did not get it from himself; he left it with his brother for me.

15105. What were those caricatures?—There were themselves represented on paper shooting police, and all that sort of thing. Ward could describe it better than I can, for it was handed to him.

15106. What else?—I told the police I had got the money and what for.

15107. Did you put up the caricatures?—No, I did not put them up myself, but the outlaws thought I put them up; in fact, they were sure it was I did it.

Mr Nicolson.—Perhaps he will explain all that.

15108. By the Commission.—How did they come to think you had put them up?—My getting letters before and answering those letters in reply, they placed that much confidence in me.

15109. They thought you had done it?—Yes, and also there was something in the paper about what was done in Beechworth about posting those papers.

15110. Do you know, as a matter of fact, who did put them up?—I do not know; I could not say whether it was Detective Ward or not, but I believe it was. The outlaws requested me to put them up.

15111. How did they come into Ward’s hands?—They came by my sister to me, and then I gave them to Detective Ward.

15112. You handed them yourself to him?—Yes.

548
making changes. I told Mr. Nicolson that the people would not believe that—that if we went back home again they would think we were sent up there to watch the movements of some of the Byrnes or the Kelly sympathizers rather; they would think we were still in the force, and very likely shoot us. He asked me, after I said that, what did I ever do for him or the police, and asked me also what did ever Aaron do for the police; we did nothing that he was aware of. That is all about that. There is another matter. On or about the latter end of May 1880, I think—I will not say it was for certain, but I believe it was—Mr. Nicolson or Ward received information from some person unknown to me that Byrne, the outlaw, was seen some place in the vicinity of Sebastopol. Mr. Nicolson and the black trackers came as far as Everton; Aaron met them there according to appointment. On proceeding to the place where Byrne was seen they came in contact with a man named Batchelor, who lives at Sebastopol, close to Mrs. Byrne’s. This man recognized Aaron as one of the men—I believe he had his face blackened too. He informed Byrne of what he had seen. However, he recognized him as one of the men coming up the Bullock Camp Gully. This was not spoken of till after Aaron was murdered.

15116. What do you want to convey to the Commission by that?—To let you see that Aaron was recognized with the police, and that Mrs. Byrne knew this, and that he was known to be watching Mrs. Byrne’s closely.

15117. Can you say what was done by the trackers?—They proceeded on to the place, but they got to the tracks of someone driving a cow—that is what it wound up with.

15118. What particular object have you now in alluding to this circumstance to show Aaron was recognized. Had it not been known up to that period that he was in the police service?—Yes, but it was not known there were police so close about.

15119. This was not the first time when your brother had been detected as co-operating with the police?—I think not.

15120. Had not Mrs. Byrne prior to this seen your brother in the camp?—Yes, but he used to go about as if the police were not about at all.

15121. To the best of your belief and knowledge, did Mrs. Byrne, on the occasion that has often been alluded to—the camp—really recognize your brother at the cave party?—I never knew of only one cave.

15122. What cave was that?—The last cave party—Mr. Nicolson’s cave party on the top of the hill.

15123. Your brother was engaged with that party?—Yes.

15124. This was near Mrs. Byrne’s residence?—Yes.

15125. Do you know any occasion before in which your brother had been seen in any party?—No. The one I have mentioned is the only one I know of when he was seen—that is, seen with the police; but he was suspected of aiding and abetting the police.

15126. Long before?—Yes.

15127. Did you ever hear that Mrs. Byrne recognized him at the cave party?—No, I never heard of his being recognized.

15128. Did you ever know that Mr. Hare had the party?—Yes; he had the party unknown to me for a long time. I was working near.

15129. By Mr. Nicolson.—Did it ever come to your knowledge that your brother was seen in the cave party by Mrs. Byrne?—No.

15130. Did your brother ever tell you so?—No.

15131. By the Commission.—Is there anything else you want to say?—That is all, I think.

15132. You say that Aaron was seen assisting the police, and that it was known from that time that he was with the police—do you consider that was the cause of his being murdered?—Yes. I knew for a good while before, from the threats that Byrne made to my mother. On one occasion he saw my mother very early, and he told my mother that the first opportunity he got of Aaron he would shoot him.

15133. Was that before this circumstance you have been referring to or after?—I cannot say whether it was before or after.

15134. Just think a minute and see if you can remember?—I would not be sure, but I believe it was after.

15135. How long before Aaron was shot was it he told your mother this?—I believe it was about a month. I would not be sure, but it was not long before he was shot she went into Beechworth and told Mr. Nicolson about it.

15136. You were on the best of terms with your brother with the exception of the short period you alluded to just prior to his marriage?—Yes.

15137. Constantly meeting and having conversations about the police proceedings?—Yes.

15138. Did he, to your knowledge, at any time meet any of the outlaws under any circumstances whatever and have conversation with them when he was employed by the police—did he ever tell you so?—No, I do not recollect him telling me that he had a conversation with Byrne in the house. At one time, some time after, Dan Kelly was there when Byrne came.

15139. Was that when you went across to Beechworth and told Mr. Nicolson and Ward?—No; at the time I now speak of my brother was present.

15140. Was he in the house?—Yes.

John Sherritt, continued.

4th August 1881.
15141. Do you remember his telling you of any conversation that took place on that occasion?—I was listening to it myself.

15142. What occurred when Joe Byrne came, when your brother was in the house and you?—He came to see about the sticking up of the bank. This time he came he had two separate things to tell—one about the Yackandandah bank, that he was not going to attack it; and that he and Ned Kelly had two separate plans to stick up the Beechworth bank.

15143. Did he on this occasion also express a desire to enlist the assistance of your brother as well?—Yes, he did.

15144. Were you both present?—Yes.

15145. And at the same time he made the proposition to you he made that to your brother also?—Yes.

15146. What reply did your brother make?—He said he would. I expect if we said we would not he might perhaps have shot us.

15147. Do you remember whether he addressed any conversation at all to him individually when you were not exactly present?—No; I was present all the time.

15148. Was your brother at this time aware of your going across to give information to the police?—Yes.

15149. Did you give information to the police on this occasion?—No; I know they got the information, but whether it was from my mother, or sister, or Aaron I do not know.

15150. How was it you did not on this occasion start away directly and give information to the police?—We were frightened of being watched by the rest of the gang.

15151. What time was this?—About seven or eight o'clock. It was after dark.

15152. Would there have been greater danger then than on the previous occasion?—On the previous occasion I was not in the house, I was in the paddock a quarter of a mile off, but on this occasion there was danger in leaving the house.

15153. Do you think your brother had, during the time he was in the employment of the police, been in the habit of going to Mrs. Byrne or any of the outlaws’ friends, and apparently pretending to be on friendly terms with them?—I believe he did.

15154. Do you know of any occasion when your brother did visit Mrs. Byrne’s place?—No.

15155. Do you remember any circumstance that he repeated to you as having occurred?—Yes; he used to speak friendly to the young Byrnes.

15156. And visited the house?—I cannot say that. He might come into Beechworth, and might buy them something.

15157. Did he ever go to Mrs. Byrne’s house?—I do not know.

15158. You are not aware whether at any time he made appointments to meet them at any given place?—No. I wish you to understand that Aaron was employed by the police for a good while before I knew anything about it. I was splitting in the bush. I was not living at home.

15159. At this time you knew where he was, and used to meet him on friendly terms?—Yes, always friendly terms, except that one occasion.

15160. You frequently met him?—Yes.

15161. During this time you were ignorant of his connection with the police—that he used to visit those places—you were looked upon as friends of Byrne’s and Kellys’. Did you visit them from time to time, the same as you had always been accustomed to? I might go down there perhaps on Sunday, and perhaps not be there for three or four weeks.

15162. And Aaron would do the same?—Yes.

15163. What was the subject of conversation generally when you visited there—was it referring to the outlaws and how they were getting on?—Yes, she used to talk about the outlaws; say she wished that Joe would give a look round and shoot Mullane and Ward, and several others of the police; and said if they were shot there would be no danger of the outlaws being caught if they visited her place.

15164. Did the outlaws come and visit her place sometimes—did they venture home?—I do not know whether they did at this time.

15165. You never heard of it?—Not at this time. I had nothing to do with the police at this time.

15166. Still you visited Mrs. Byrne’s and entered into conversation in the ordinary way?—Yes.

15167. Have you any idea at this period how those men got supplied with provisions?—I believe that Mrs. Byrne supplied them with provisions part of the time.

15168. Did you see anything at all to indicate that?—Yes, I have several times.

15169. Saw them preparing the food?—Saw Byrne’s family, to my own knowledge; they are small eaters, and I used to see meat there, and plenty of bread, cooked, and everything.

15170. A much larger stock than they would require for themselves?—Yes.

15171. They prepared it?—Yes.

15172. What did they do with it then?—I expect they conveyed it to somewhere.

15173. Do you know how?—I think I do—by Patsy Byrne, and sometimes herself.

15174. Have you any idea of the direction they took to convey those supplies?—I have no idea which direction. There are several they could take, because there are hills all round.

15175. Did you ever hear of the particular spot where they were accustomed to take those supplies for the outlaws to come for them?—I do not think so. On one occasion—the same Saturday about two in the afternoon that Aaron was shot—I saw young Byrne with a parcel of clothes on the range over Mrs. Byrne’s on the right-hand side up the gully, and he just went round the creek, and I did not see him any more. I could see him, but I just caught a glimpse of him to see it was him with the clothes.

---

John Sherritt, junr.
4th August 1881.

15176. You had very little doubt he was taking clothes for the men?—Yes.
15177. Can you remember any other instance where the friends of the outlaws were taking either clothes or food for them. Did you ever meet anyone you suspected of that?—No, I do not think so.
15178. By Mr. Hare.—Did you ever see me before until you came to the depot to join the force?—No.
15179. Never saw me or spoke to me before?—No.
15180. You were asked by the Commission about the cave party and your brother being seen by Mrs. Byrne—were you aware there were any police in the gully at the time?—No, and I was working in the gully at the time.
15181. When did you discover that I had been in the gully?—I do not think till a day or two afterwards—I went away after the men were shifted. I did not know whether you were there or not.
15182. You were then on intimate terms with Mrs. Byrne?—Yes.
15183. Did she tell you she had seen Aaron in my camp?—No, she did not.
15184. Do you think if she had seen him she would have told you?—I am certain she would.
15185. Were you on intimate terms with Aaron?—Yes, I was. I met him one day—he had some tobacco, and I asked him for some, and he gave me some—I believe he was with some of the police, and I did not know he was engaged with the police then.
15186. Were you aware I was in your straw-shed for two days and nights when you were living at home?—No.
15187. Were you told afterwards?—I was told a considerable time afterwards you were there.
15188. What was I there for?—Watching for the Kellys, to see if they would come to our place.
15189. By the Commission.—Do you know the date of that?—I was only told of this afterwards.
15190. By Mr. Hare.—You did not work for me—you were not one of my agents when I came up the second time?—No, I was not.
15191. You wrote a letter to me which was put in evidence here by somebody?—Yes, I did.
15192. You said you had a great plan for catching them?—Yes.
Here is the letter. The question is:

"Was it reported among your comrades that any order for special care had been promulgated among them; was it said among the men that there was to be special caution, or anything?—No, I never heard of it."

"Mr. Nicolson.—May I ask for D 13 to be produced and read?

The Chairman.—It is a letter from John Sherritt to Mr. Inspector Hare, Sheepstation, dated June 20th 1880:—"Dear Sir,—I would very much like to have seen you yesterday, as the outlaw Byrne does be frequently and sleeps in ——'s haystack on Sebastopol. I cannot see how it is that he is not caught before now. His brother Patrick does be out all night and sleeps all day. Mrs. Byrne has their winter flannel and socks all ready to go to them, and she has provisions for six families stored by in her house. Sir, I don't want to dictate to a gentleman of your ability, but the plan I would suggest is this—Patrick Byrne to be watched minutely day and night, as this is a particular time. As long as Aaron has the men down there, they will never do any good, as to my knowledge he lets too many of his mother's children to his house, and his mother-in-law himself will go there night after night, and will stop sometimes until two o'clock in the morning, and this will be the means of discovering the police, as the Barry children and the Byrne children go to the same school, and are on friendly terms. Dear sir, the reason I send you these few lines is this—anything I say up here, they will not listen to it; therefore I would like to explain matters to yourself. I am certain before long they are going to make another raid; I have not heard yet what it is. I am very busy now, but if you don't succeed, sir, I have a grand plan made up that I think will carry through. I remain yours most respectfully, JOHN SHERRITT, junr."
15193. Was that the first communication you ever had with me?—Yes.
15194. By the Commission.—You have been in South Australia?—Yes.
15195. When did you return from there?—I stopped there awhile working, and came back.
15196. How long have you been back?—I was discharged on the 19th October 1880. I was two or three months there, and I have been in Victoria since.
15197. Did you come back to Victoria in consequence of any information that you obtained that the Commission was appointed to enquire into the Kelly outrages?—No; it was too hot in South Australia, and I got a fall from my horse.
15198. Have you been in communication with any of the officers of police since the time you were discharged from the police force?—No.
15199. Have you received letters from any officers of the police since that time?—No.
15200. Have you had any personal interview with any officer you knew in the North-Eastern District before you came here to give evidence?—No.
15201. Have you had any conversation with Ward during the last week?—No.
15202. With Messrs. Nicolson, Sadleir, or Hare?—No, and no other officer at all.
15203. Have you had any conversation with Mr. Hare since you have been in Melbourne this last week?—No.

15204. By Mr. Hare.—Since you left the service, have you directly or indirectly had any communication with me?—No.

15205. You have been to my house?—Yes.

15206. Did you see me?—No.

Mr. Hare.—I refused to see him.

15207. By the Commission.—Have you been to Mr. Hare’s house at any time since you were discharged?—I was a few days after. I did not see Mr. Hare then.

15208. What was your object in going there?—I wanted to explain the way that I was treated. I did not know what to do.

15209. You felt you had been unfairly dealt with?—Yes, that is what it was.

15210. And you wanted to explain it was through no fault of yours you were dismissed?—Yes, that is what I wanted to tell Mr. Hare; but I did not see him.

15211. By Mr. Hare.—You said you had been at Sunbury. Had I anything to do at all with your going to Sunbury?—No, nothing whatever.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next, at Eleven o’clock.

TUESDAY, 9TH AUGUST 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore M.L.A., in the Chair;

G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.; E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.;

Mr. Sadleir.—I wish to refer to page 461 of the evidence—Mr. Chomley’s evidence. “I heard from the Chief Secretary, a long time before, that Mr. Sadleir had written a letter imploring his removal from the district, as he was in danger of his life.” That is a question by one of the Commissioners to Mr. Chomley. I beg to point out that this question was put when myself and the other officers were excluded from the Commission, and this is the first opportunity of learning that such a question was put. I can assure the Commission that there is not the smallest foundation whatever for such a statement.

15212. The Commission (to Mr. Sadleir).—You never did make the application for removal?—I never did, except the one on the 22nd April, which you have before you. I never had any communication, verbal or otherwise, with Mr. Berry or anyone else on the subject. So far from desiring to leave my district, I no sooner heard of another officer being sent up with the means to carry on the work, the want of which means was the only reason for my leaving, than I went to Mr. Berry, in the presence of Mr. Chomley, and said I thought I was the officer best fitted for the work of that district, and I wanted to go back. I can give a copy of everything the last three years. The letter I did write is on page 357, dated 22nd April. The gentleman asking the question, or making the statement, says it was a long time before that he heard from Mr. Berry that I implored to be removed from the district. As I was just stating, I saw Mr. Berry, and asked him to let me return to the district; and his reply was that, as the matter appeared to be critical, and I was likely to be detained before the Commission for some time, he could not do it. I think, with great respect, that I may say I have had more than my share of aspersions of this sort.

15213. What do you object to?—That it contains an aspersion on my character and motives that there is no foundation whatever for.

15214. This seems almost to imply — ?—That I wanted to clear out of the district from fear.

15215. But your letter of the 22nd says something like that?—But this says long before.

15216. Then the time is what you object to?—You see Mr. Chomley says he can find no other letter than that one. Mr. Chomley mentions having handed in that letter, and then this question I object to was asked. I hope, in consideration of my character and length of service, that the Commission will see me put right in this matter.

The Honorable J. H. Graves, M.L.A., sworn and examined.

The Witness.—I first of all hand in the document which is the original letter which I was asked to produce. The letter was a private one, sent to me as the member of the district. There is the original letter. It is as I got it, with the exception of the name, and I will explain why that was removed, but I have no doubt that was a false name. The name of the writer of the letter was a false one, and I gave it at the time I gave this letter to Captain Standish. I wish to be called as a witness in regard to this letter and other correspondence received by me. The name to the letter was M. Connor, and I satisfied myself there was no person of that name. It was written by some one in Melbourne, and my own impression is that it was written either at the instigation of or by some constable, but I do not positively know. The name was M. Connor, and I cut it out in order to ascertain in my district, if possible, who was the writer of the letter. I believed at first that that was... a genuine signature. I told Captain Standish about it at the time.—[Letter referred to inserted above.] I have to mention also that Sherritt came to me and made certain statements, and my sole object in talking with him was to endeavor to bring the matter before the Chief Secretary, and in consequence of statements made by him, I could not act in the matter unless he verified his statements by an affidavit. I did not wish to put this original document before you while I was on the Commission. The second document I hand in is the affidavit made by John Sherritt. That was based on the letter you have in your hand.—[The affidavit was read as follows:—]

"I, John James Sherritt, of the Richmond police barracks, in the colony of Victoria, formerly mounted constable of police, do solemnly and sincerely declare that I am above 21 years of age, and that about 15 months ago I was a selector on Sheepstation Creek, near Beechworth, and occupied 100 acres of land, being also at the time engaged in a contract for fencing for Mr. Crawford, coach proprietor, which I had taken jointly with my brother, amounting to the sum of about £300. During the progress of the contract I received a message from Detective Ward that Mr. Nicolson, superintendent of police, wished to see me; that in consequence of the said message I had an interview with Superintendent Nicolson in the township of Wangaratta, who asked me to undertake police duties to assist in the capture of the Kelly party of outlaws. I said I would consider his proposition. About three weeks after I met him by appointment at Beechworth, when he again asked me to do duty for him. I told him that the party of Kelly outlaws constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house at Sebastopol, and that they might be easily captured. He then engaged me, and I commenced to do duty, with six other police constables, under charge of Constable Alexander. I therefore had to give up my contract with Mr. Crawford, and I continued to do the police duty entrusted to me for over six months; that during this time individual members of the Kelly gang constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house, and that at some time after the robbery of the Jerilderie bank by that party the whole gang cathed at Mrs. Byrne’s house, and I went word to Mr. Nicolson that they were there; thereupon no action was taken by this officer. I then saw him personally on the matter in Beechworth, and asked him why he did not capture them. He replied that he did not attempt it on that occasion, as if they had found it out they would not come back any more. In about fourteen days afterwards I received a letter from Joe Byrne, requesting me to meet him at Sandy Creek, near Wangaratta. This letter I forwarded to Mr. Nicolson, who instructed me to keep the appointment with Byrne. I accordingly did so, and met Joe Byrne, who had a conversation with him. He told me that the Kellys were close at hand, and that they went wherever they liked, as the police were frightened at them. No action was taken on this occasion by Superintendent Nicolson for their capture. I then got thoroughly disgusted with the conduct of the police, and determined to discontinue doing duty for them, and to return to my contract with Mr. Crawford, which I did. Mr. Nicolson again sent for me, and I met him at Allen’s store in Beechworth. He then persuaded me to continue on doing duty for the police, and he gave me £5 in £1 notes, saying that when the Kellys were captured I would get the biggest portion of the reward; that he would never forget my services, and that he would make me a permanent member of the police force. At his urgent request, I then consented to do duty. Subsequently I constantly saw Byrne at his mother’s house, and in the township of Sebastopol, and so informed Detective Ward and Mr. Nicolson. Shortly afterwards I saw Mr. Nicolson again in Beechworth, and told him that Ned Kelly had been at Mrs. Byrne’s house and at my own house, and I told him that my brother William had seen Dan Kelly in the neighborhood. Shortly after this Dan Kelly called at my house and asked to see me. I was not home at the time, but I heard of his calling immediately afterwards, and went in to Beechworth, saw Mr. Nicolson, and told him that Dan Kelly had told my mother that he (Dan Kelly) would come back at eight o’clock that evening. Dan Kelly did come at the hour appointed, and went away again. Mr. Nicolson said that he would not send down any police, but that I had better go down and see what he (Dan Kelly) wanted. I did not do so. There was hardly a week that I did not see Mr. Nicolson and give him particulars of the movements of the Kelly gang, and I believe he could have easily captured all or some of the party almost during the whole time he was up there. Subsequently Mr. Nicolson was withdrawn, and Mr. Hare took his place. I then wrote to Mr. Hare to say that I had constantly given Mr. Nicolson, and occupied 100 acres of land, being also at the time engaged in a contract for fencing for Mr. Crawford, coach proprietor, which I had taken jointly with my brother, amounting to the sum of about £300. During the progress of the contract I received a message from Detective Ward that Mr. Nicolson, superintendent of police, wished to see me; that in consequence of the said message I had an interview with Superintendent Nicolson in the township of Wangaratta, who asked me to undertake police duties to assist in the capture of the Kelly party of outlaws. I said I would consider his proposition. About three weeks after I met him by appointment at Beechworth, when he again asked me to do duty for him. I told him that the party of Kelly outlaws constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house and in the colony of Victoria, this twenty August 1881.

The Honorable Nicolson, and told me that my brother William had seen Dan Kelly in the neighborhood. Shortly after this Dan Kelly called at my house and asked to see me. I was not home at the time, but I heard of his calling immediately afterwards, and went in to Beechworth, saw Mr. Nicolson, and told him that Dan Kelly had told my mother that he (Dan Kelly) would come back at eight o’clock that evening. Dan Kelly did come at the hour appointed, and went away again. Mr. Nicolson said that he would not send down any police, but that I had better go down and see what he (Dan Kelly) wanted. I did not do so. There was hardly a week that I did not see Mr. Nicolson and give him particulars of the movements of the Kelly gang, and I believe he could have easily captured all or some of the party almost during the whole time he was up there. Subsequently Mr. Nicolson was withdrawn, and Mr. Hare took his place. I then wrote to Mr. Hare to say that I had constantly given Mr. the Honorable J. H. Graves, M.L.A. continued. 9th August 1881.

On Tuesday last, the 19th day of October, Mr. Nicolson called himself and brother into the office at the depot, and discharged us on the instant, without any reason, except that the Chief Secretary had ordered him to do so. He said we should make up our minds to clear out of the colony immediately; he would give us a free pass, and a few pounds to carry us along. We then went and saw Mr. Graves, the member for Delatite, and told him the whole circumstances, and begged him to get some consideration of our case from Mr. Berry. He promised to see the Chief Secretary on the subject.

"Next morning Mr. Nicolson telegraphed for us from Melbourne. We went in to see him. He asked us if we had made up our minds to clear out of the colony, and where we were going. I told him that we were waiting for a reply from our parents as to what we had better do. He said, there is no occasion to wait for them; you are old enough to judge for yourselves; and directed us to clear out at once, as we could not stop at the depot, stating that if I remained about Richmond I would get into gaol in three months, and don’t attempt to use any political influence in this matter.

"I and my brother cannot with any safety go home to Beechworth. We have no home and no money, except 11s. 6d. My father and mother have, beside us, eight children to support, and I and my brother have lost our selections, and given up our contract. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of Parliament rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.

"JOHN JAS. SHERRITT.

"Declared at Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, this twenty-second day of October, One thousand eight hundred and eighty, before me—SHERBOURNE SHEPPARD, J.P."
John Sherritt was perfectly unknown to me, but brought letters from constituents of mine in whose respectability I believed, and especially one from Mr. Crawford, a magistrate and a couch proprietor, whom I have known for the last eighteen years. I determined to take action and represent the matter and the position that he was in with regard to the expenditure he had been at to the Chief Secretary, and upon that declaration being received and handed to me, I did wait on Mr. Berry, and he caused, I think, £50 each to be given to the Sherritt brothers. Before I saw Mr. Berry, I had an opportunity of seeing the late Sergeant Porter, and, I think, Sergeant Jarner Beckwith, whom this man told me he was in constant contact with, doing his duty; and also about that time, I do not know at what exact time, I also saw Mr. Hare, and asked him whether the statements made by this man were true relative to his having given complete satisfaction in the depot; and these three people that I have mentioned told me that they had never had a better conducted lad in the depot. Then, having satisfied myself that in all probability the case was meritorious, I represented it to the Chief Secretary, and he gave them £50 each, on the condition that their uniform was handed over to the Government, which was done.

15217. By the Commission.—I suppose you have other matters that have come under your own notice?—Yes; and I now simply give that statement with reference to these documents. I think it right to say that, after that affidavit appeared in the paper at the time, Sherritt wrote me a letter in which he said that that information was correct, but drawing my attention to some slight inaccuracy in one matter in that declaration. I suppose he will tell it to you now. I have his letter here somewhere; but I know it was a matter of not very great importance—something as to date, I think.

Mr. Nicolson.—As Sherritt is to be cross-examined to-day, it would be better that any inaccuracy should be corrected now.

The Witness.—I do not recollect what the inaccuracy was, but if Sherritt corrects it now it will be sufficient.

15218. By the Commission (to Mr. Sherritt).—Do you remember what that inaccuracy was?—No, I do not.

15219. If you look over it you may discover it now—[handed the affidavit to Mr. Sherritt]?—

The Witness.—Whatever it was, it was only one unimportant matter, and I will be able to produce the letter.

Mr. Sherritt.—There was a paragraph in the paper stating I did not collect the police to go to Glenrowan in the morning.

The Witness.—Yes, I think that was it. He said in his declaration he did collect the police that morning.

The witness withdrew.

John Sherritt further examined.

15220. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember your first meeting with me at Wangaratta?—Yes.
15221. Who accompanied you?—Nobody.
15222. Who came with you to me?—Nobody came with me to you.
15223. Do you not remember Wallace, the schoolmaster, and he came with you?—No, I do not; he did not come.
15224. Do you not remember about this time, the month of November 1879, an agreement being made that you could sleep in your garden instead of in your house?—Yes, I do.
15225. What was the object of that?—I was frightened to stop in the house, for fear of the Kellys.
15226. Do you remember the date of the agricultural show at Wangaratta?—I did not keep any dates, but I think it was the latter end of the year 1879.
15227. It was about April in 1879. After that you were in the habit of sleeping in your garden, to prevent being surprised by the outlaws?—I was.
15228. At that interview you had with Joe Byrne he had proposed you should join them as a scout?—Yes.
15229. And, in relating that to me, you objected very strongly to doing so; and one of the arrangements made for your safety to prevent it was to sleep in this garden at night; and you could also come in and give information to the police without being observed—was not that the arrangement?—Yes, that John Sherritt arrangement was made only on one occasion.

15230. The Commission—About what date was that?

Mr. Nicolson.—I cannot give that exactly. It was 6th November 1879 he had an interview with Joe Byrne. When I met him first was the 12th September 1879. That was at the agricultural show, and I believe this was after.

15231. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—Was it after that interview that you had with Joe Byrne that you slept outside?—It was a good while after that. I and my brother had a row about his getting married to this Miss Barry. The police used to sneer at me in the cave, and I was not going to do any more duty for you, and I went to fencing; and Detective Ward sent you to me, and gave me £5, and it was on this occasion
I was to sleep in the garden. I said perhaps the outlaws might carry me off, and I might be shot along with them if they went to the bank.

15232. By the Commission.—How long was Aaron married before the Kellys were caught?—He was only going to get married about this time.

15233. Was the time that Mr. Nicolson made the arrangement for you to sleep in the garden after the time that you rode into Beechworth and informed them that the outlaws had called in the afternoon?—I cannot remember.

15234. Was it before or after you had told Mr. Nicolson you would do no more for the police because they would do nothing with your information?—I think it was after.

15235. By Mr. Nicolson.—What was the object then of your sleeping in the garden?—I was frightened of being carried away by the outlaws.

15236. Do you remember another arrangement that was made by me or by the police as a precaution against such a thing—do you remember your likeness being taken?—Yes.

15237. What was the object?—The object was, if I went with the outlaws, or was carried away with them, I would be recognized among the outlaws.

15238. And those would be distributed about the colony and New South Wales, and you would be recognized?—I do not know whether they were distributed.

15239. The object was that?—Yes.

15240. You were therefore very much afraid the outlaws at that time would come and compel you to join them?—I was frightened they would compel me, because seeing them so often at the time I was frightened they would take me away whether I liked it or not.

15241. By the Commission.—You were pretending at this time to work with the outlaws?—Yes, I was.

15242. By Mr. Nicolson.—You were speaking of something that occurred on the 13th November; did you fix the date?—I do not think I fixed the date.

15243. When you gave the information when Dan Kelly visited your house?—Yes, I recollect that well.

15244. Now, going back to your meeting with Byrne a short time before, did not Byrne make the appointment to meet you at Evans’s Gap?—Yes.

15245. To meet you on Sunday week at Evans’s Gap?—Yes.

15246. Did he meet you at Evans’s Gap?—No.

15247. On another occasion did he not previously make an appointment to meet you at Thomson’s, at Phechelba?—Before the appointment at Evans’s Gap he did.

15248. When you met him at Sandy Creek, was not your proposal to meet him at Thomson’s, at Phechelba?—That was the proposal.

15249. Did you meet him there?—Yes.

15250. At Thomson’s, at Phechelba?—No, not there, but the next day coming back.

15251. Where?—At the Illewarra run. I was to meet him at Thomson’s house, at Sandy Creek, but I did not meet him there, but on the next day, when I did not expect to meet him, I met him on the road.

15252. Did he not on that occasion make an appointment to meet you at Evans’s Gap?—Yes.

15253. Did he meet you there?—No.

15254. He sent you word he would not come?—Yes.

15255. You say when your sister came and gave you this information that Dan Kelly had called at your house?—He said you were not in, that he went round and searched the house?—Yes.

15256. What did you do than?—Went to Beechworth.

15257. What hour was this?—About dusk.

15258. Was it not about four o’clock your sister came to you?—I could not say the hour, it was about dusk. I know it was a little after seven when I came to Beechworth.

15259. Which paddock were you working in?—Crawford’s.

15260. Which one is that—the one about a mile ahead of the gully in which Mrs. Byrne’s house is situated?—No, it is the paddock that runs across in front of our place on the road to Beechworth.

15261. Where your brother had a small hut?—No, it is a paddock right in front of our house.

15262. How far do you say that is from Beechworth?—I suppose the nearest side to Beechworth of this paddock is two miles and a half.

15263. Was it daylight when you reached Beechworth?—No.

15264. Did you not think if the outlaws heard of your going to Beechworth immediately after the visit of one of them to your hut they would be very suspicious of you?—I was very careful when I was going to Beechworth to go through the bush all the way.

15265. Who told you when you went home afterwards that the whole gang had called at your mother’s hut at eight o’clock that evening?—Mrs. Byrne.

15266. When were you told this?—That night I was sent to the Woolshed by Detective Ward, where I got along with Patsy, and I saw Mrs. Byrne the next morning after I gave the information.

15267. Was it Patsy or she that told you?—She herself told me.

15268. Did you tell the police that Dan had called that night again the second time?—I did.

15269. Did you tell them that the whole four had called at eight o’clock that night?—I would not say whether it was I or my brother informed the police, but I know they got the information direct.

POLICE.
15270. The last time you gave your evidence you said you did?—I could not say for certain which of us did, but I know they got the information.

15271. About this declaration of yours. In it you say, “I was not at home at the time, but I heard of his calling immediately afterwards, and went into Beechworth, saw Mr. Nicolson, and told him that Dan Kelly had told my mother that he (Dan Kelly) would come back at eight o’clock that evening. Dan Kelly did come at the hour appointed and went away again”—you only say that Dan Kelly called at your house. You do not say about the four men calling?—I say that they did call. If I did not say it in that declaration, it is a mistake of mine. I was certain that they did come back. It is a mistake of mine the other three not being down.

15272. By the Commission.—You are certain that Dan Kelly called at your house, and Mrs. Byrne told you about the other three calling?—Yes.

15273. By Mr. Nicolson.—If it had been the fact that the whole of the gang had been there, would you not put that in the declaration naturally?—There were plenty more facts I did not put in the declaration.

15274. That was a very important one?—Yes, I am quite positive.

15275. By the Commission.—Are you quite sure he was present on this particular occasion?—Yes, I am quite positive.

15276. Do you remember Byrne saying that night what Dan’s object was in coming?—I do.

15277. What was it?—That he was not going to bother with any banks.

15278. Will you just try and recollect this: Did not Byrne say to you that Dan’s object in calling upon you that night was to tell you not to meet him on the following Sunday, or Sunday week, at Evans’s Gap?—Decidedly that was part of it too; and not to bother to go to Yackandandah bank.

15279. You never mentioned this the other day when you were giving your evidence—that part of the message was not to meet this man at Evans’s Gap?—Yes.

15280. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was the meeting at Evans’s Gap portion of the plan to stick up the Yackandandah bank?—It was to give information as to what I had found out about the bank.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow, at Eleven o’clock.

WEDNESDAY, 10th AUGUST 1881.

Present:

W. Anderson, Esq., M.L.A., G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.,

John Sherritt further examined.

15288. By Mr. Nicolson.—You remember J Byrne calling at your house on November 23rd while you were there at home?—Yes.

15289. It was subsequent to you coming to Beechworth and telling about Dan Kelly?—Yes.

15290. Will you repeat the reason that Byrne gave for Dan’s previous visit?—He said, “Never mind going to Yackandandah bank”—they were not going to stick that up.

15291. Did he say he also brought a message not to bring a message to Evans’s Gap?—Yes. Byrne said that Dan Kelly said that.

15292. For what purpose did you get the ten shillings; did you not get it to go down to Julien’s?—Yes.

15293. That was on the evening of the 13th?—Yes.

15294. Is that near Sebastopol?—Yes.
15295. How far from Mrs. Byrne’s?—About a mile.
15296. What was the object of your going to Julien’s—why were you told to go there?—I think it was to see if I could see Patsy there.
15297. I will remind you—was it not to show yourself at Julien’s, and stop there and make a fuss there, so as to have it talked about, and to account to Dan for your absence the night he came?—Yes, I believe that was it.
15298. When did you tell the police that Ned Kelly and Byrne had called at the Chinaman’s store?—Immediately afterwards.

555

15299. Whom did you tell?—I think I told Ward first; I will not be positive; and then I told you the matter afterwards.

15300. Where?—In Beechworth.
15301. Do you remember the occasion?—No, but I remember telling you, and you cross-questioned me over the matter a great deal—you said, “How did I come there and how did I know that?”
15302. How long after the occurrence with the Chinaman did you tell me?—I think it was the next day.
15303. By the Commission.—The day after you received the information?—Yes.
15304. By Mr. Nicolson.—You told me the next day?—Yes, I think so.
15305. How long after their being there did you hear of it?—They were there, say to-night, and I heard it in the morning.
15306. And you told Ward that day?—Yes, I think so.
15307. Are you sure?—I say I think so.
15308. Are you just as sure you told me the day following?—I will not be sure it was the day following, but it was about that—but I am certain I told you.
15309. By the Commission.—Did you avail yourself of the earliest opportunity to come in and tell him?—Yes.
15310. By Mr. Nicolson.—Did you ever complain to me or anyone that you had given this information about the two men being at the Chinaman’s hut, and it had not been acted upon—did you ever mention to me it had not been acted on?—I do not know that I did.
15311. When you did tell me—say the second day after—did you make any mention of your having told about it and it not having been acted on?—I do not know.
15312. By the Commission.—At the time you informed Mr. Nicolson, did you tell him that you had communicated with Mr. Ward the information that the Chinaman had given you?—Yes, I did. There are so many times that I do not know the date. It is not one time, but dozens of times, but I cannot get at the exact time.
15313. Have you any doubt in your own mind as to the occurrence with the Chinaman?—No, I have none.
15314. There was no other occasion on which you conveyed information from the Chinaman as to the movements of the outlaws to Mr. Nicolson and Ward?—Yes, there were other occasions that Byrne used to come and get tobacco and things.
15315. You are not confusing that with the other?—No.
15316. There was one occasion, on the 13th November, that you said Mr. Nicolson did not act on your information?—Yes.
15317. Was there any other time that you informed Mr. Nicolson of their being anywhere about that he did not act upon your information?—Yes; the four outlaws were in Mrs. Byrne’s. I think I told Ward.
15318. Was it Detective Ward or Mr. Nicolson you told?—Ward.
15319. Was it Detective Ward or Mr. Nicolson that you told those things to generally?—Well, both of them I told generally.
15320. By Mr. Nicolson.—I was up every time at Beechworth—was that about the Chinaman before or after Dan Kelly’s visit to your house?—I cannot get near the period.
15321. Can you say whether it was before or after?—I cannot say.
15322. Do you remember whether it was before or after Byrne’s visit to your house?—Byrne came after Dan to my place, when we were inside.
15323. Was the Chinaman affair before or after that?—I do not know. I dare say I could find out.
15324. By the Commission.—Was there a long time between the two occurrences?—He has called so many times on the Chinaman, I cannot remember.
15325. You understand the two circumstances alluded to?—Yes.
15326. Can you remember, by reflecting a little, as to the probable length of time between the time Byrne called at your place, to tell you they did not stick up the bank, and the time that Dan Kelly and he called at the Chinaman’s store?—I do not know.
15327. Was there six months?—No.
15328. A month?—No, not a month at all. I think about a week, to the best of my belief.
15329. By Mr. Nicolson.—When you saw me on all occasions, did you see any member of the force first at Beechworth?—Not always; sometimes I did.

John Sherritt,

15330. Were you not in the habit of coming in and seeing Ward or Mullane; I was not always there?—I do not think I ever saw Mullane in regard to the Kellys in my life; I saw Ward.

15331. Did you ever see me on any occasion but when you were brought by Ward or I was to meet you by direction of Ward?—Yes, you have come to me.

15332. Did you ever come to me without Ward’s knowing of it?—I do not think so.

15333. Did you ever see me without seeing Ward first?—I think I saw you first when I went to give information about Dan being at our place.

15334. By the Commission.—Did you on more than one occasion see Mr. Nicolson and give him information without Ward being present?—Yes.

15335. Had you seen Ward before on those occasions?—No, I had not seen Ward before on all the occasions.

15336. How often did you see Mr. Nicolson in that way?—Two or three times.

15337. How often was that after you had told Ward?—On several occasions.

15338. Nine or ten times?—More than that.

15339. As a general rule, you saw Ward before you saw Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

15340. You made an arrangement with Mr. Nicolson to give certain information?—Yes.

15341. In the earliest arrangement?—Yes.

15342. You were engaged by Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

15343. Did you receive any order from him that you were to give anything that came to your knowledge— you were to convey it to anyone else in his absence?—Yes, to Ward.

15344. Then if you came in with any information and you met Ward you would give it to Ward?—Yes, immediately.

John Sherritt, continued.

10th Aug. 1881.
you decided to resume?—About two days altogether.

15361. By Mr. Nicolson.—When did you have the first quarrel with your brother Aaron?—I never had a quarrel with him. I will not answer that question. I never had any quarrel with Aaron only once, and I told the Commission about that the other day.

15362. Give some particulars about it?—I do not know any particulars about it, only what I have told the Commission.

15363. Where did the quarrel take place between you and Aaron?—At home.

15364. About what time—how long before Christmas. You remember the cave party was formed at the beginning of December—how long after the cave party was formed?—Some time after that.

15365. By the Commission.—Was Aaron married before Christmas?—No, the day after—Boxing Day.

15366. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was it between the cave party being formed and Christmas that you had the difference with Aaron?—The cave party was established at this time.

15367. And how long before Christmas was it you quarrelled?—

15368. By the Commission.—That is hardly a fair question. You say it was after the cave party was formed?—Yes.

15369. How long was it in your mind after the cave party was formed, can you say,—was it before your brother Aaron was married?—No, it was not.

15370. By Mr. Nicolson.—When you went to Crawford’s, and I sent for you to see me, did you not leave the service of the police there on account of your brother’s quarrel?—No.

15371. Did you not go away to Melbourne against my will and knowledge, and contrary to the remonstrance of the police?—I do not think so.

15372. By the Commission.—Did Mr. Nicolson remonstrate with you about going?—I do not think he did.

15373. Did Ward object to your going to Melbourne to run?—No.

15374. By Mr. Nicolson.—My conversation with you—was it not asking you to return to the work, and make friends with your brother Aaron?—No, there was no quarrel; only just the one occasion on the one day.

15375. By the Commission.—That was shortly after his marriage?—Yes.

15376. How long after, do you think—a month or six weeks?—I expect it would be about that. My duty to Mr. Nicolson was such that I was not bound to be all the time helping his men. I was to knock around, and he did not tell me I was not to go anywhere unaware of him. I was to go about just as usual, pretending I was working for myself, and not for the police.

15377. By Mr. Nicolson.—Were you not working?—Very seldom.

15378. Were you not working with someone bark stripping?—Yes, but very seldom.

15379. By the Commission.—Your engagement with Mr. Nicolson did not prevent your going to Sydney if you thought fit?—No, so long as I gave all the information.

15380. By Mr. Nicolson.—Not quite so far as that. Were you not supposed to be following your ordinary occupation?—Yes.

15381. By the Commission.—Was there an understanding with Mr. Nicolson that the whole of the time you were to be engaged with the police, and not in anything else?—I was to attend to the police as long as I was not detected. I had to do a little work—to make an appearance of work.

15382. Do you remember anything of this letter—[showing the witness an envelope]—addressed to Detective Ward?—I do not know that it is my handwriting.

15383. By the Commission.—Is it your handwriting?—I do not know.

15384. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember giving a letter to Ward, about the beginning of September. I think that was before you ever met me at Wangaratta?—I gave Ward so many letters—about fifty or sixty.

15385. A letter that was given to you by a man of a certain description. There is a memo, here, stating that the letter was handed by you to Detective Ward, having been given to you by a man who asked you to put a stamp on it; do you remember that circumstance?—This handwriting on the envelope is not mine.

15386. By the Commission.—Do you remember giving that letter to Ward?—I do not know whether I posted that or not, but I can tell about the occurrence, and tell you what I told Ward and Mr. Nicolson. I told them I was harrowing up in my father’s paddock, when a man came to me, whom I knew, and told me to post that letter for him and he would pay me for it.

15387. Who was he?—Joe Byrne; and he said he would shoot me if I told who it was. I did not tell Ward who it was, but I told Ward what he wanted me to tell him. I told Ward I did not know the man, and so I told Mr. Nicolson who it was—that it was Byrne.

15388. By Mr. Nicolson.—Well, I did not know you at that time; I never saw you?—I am certain I told you that.

15389. You may have done so after you became acquainted with me. This is dated the 1st September 1879. I think it was the 13th September I first saw you.

15390. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—The question is: was the letter given to Ward on that date.

Mr. Nicolson.—Yes; there is Ward’s report about it. My instructions to Ward were, after its being received by Ward, that it was to be passed through the Beechworth post office and noted in the Ovens and Murray Advertiser that Ward had received a threatening letter from the outlaws.

15391. Did he at any future time tell you?—I found it out. It was not he that told me.

15392. By the Commission (to the witness).—You say you told Mr. Nicolson of this; when did you tell him?—I think he brought this into conversation about this man coming, and I told Mr. Nicolson who it was shortly after it was engaged to work for him.

15393. Would it be a fortnight after you brought this letter to Ward?—It would.

15394. Were you engaged to the police when you got this letter and brought it to them?—No; I do not think so.

15395. Had Ward at this time engaged you in any capacity and paid you for your services?—No; but I used to tell Ward if I thought the bushrangers were about.

15396. You know that envelope?—Yes.

15397. Did you take that to Ward?—No, I believe I posted it myself.

15398. Did you have that in your possession—[handing a letter to the witness, who examined the contents]?—Yes, I had that in my possession.

15399. What did you do with it?—I posted it.

15400. Addressed to whom?—To Ward.

15401. At that time were you engaged by Ward to supply information to the police on the movements of the outlaws; were you receiving money from Ward for that?—Not at that time.

15402. Were you engaged by Mr. Nicolson, or had you seen Mr. Nicolson, previous to posting that letter?—No, I had not.

15403. Did Ward at any time before you were engaged by Mr. Nicolson ask whether you knew anything about the letter?—I told Ward I did not know the man; just what the man told me to tell him.

15404. Did you tell Ward you knew of that letter but did not know who gave it you to post?—Yes.

15405. How long after that was it before you met Mr. Nicolson?—I think about a fortnight or three weeks.

15406. Then, after that, did Mr. Nicolson ask you anything in reference to the letter?—Yes, he was asking me what the man came for; if I knew him.

15407. What did you tell Mr. Nicolson when that subject first cropped up with him?—I told him who it was; I told him it was Joe Byrne who came with the letter.

15408. Then you told him the first time the conversation cropped up with him who it was?—Yes.

15409. You could not have told Mr. Nicolson at the time you delivered it to Ward, because you did not at that time know him?—That is so.

15410. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember your brother Aaron’s hut being robbed of a saddle?—Yes, I do.

15411. When was that?—I do not know the date.

15412. How long after his marriage?—A good while after his marriage.

15413. Do you know who committed the robbery of the things from his house?—No.

15414. There was a lady’s side-saddle that was taken?—I say, gentlemen, Mr. Nicolson must think I am very ignorant and low, if you want to make out that I took the saddle. If I give any evidence I will only be criminating myself.

15415. I do not imply anything?—I will answer any fair questions you put.

15416. By the Commission.—When was this side-saddle lost?—I do not remember the date.

15417. Do you remember the time the side-saddle was stolen?—Yes.

15418. Can you fix anywhere about the date?—(No answer.)

15419. Mr. Nicolson.—Mullane can supply the date. (To the witness.)—Were you ever accused by the police of stealing the saddle?—No.

558

John Sherritt,
continued.
10th Aug. 1881.

15420. Was any information lodged against you for stealing that or any other article?—No, never.

15421. You were not apprehended?—Never in my life.

15422. Was not that stolen to make a charge against Patsy Byrne and the old woman?—I do not think so. I must ask the Commission to allow me to explain all I know about the saddle.

The witness was requested to withdraw.

The Commission deliberated.

John Sherritt was again called in.

15423. By the Commission.—It is understood that there is not to be any further questioning on the subject?—I do not decline to answer any question about the saddle.

The Chairman.—It is not before the Commission.

15424. By Mr. Nicolson.—I have nothing more to ask, excepting when did you go down to Oakleigh?—That was when I came to Melbourne, when I was sent for by the Chief Commissioner of Police, Captain Standish.

15425. You got orders then to go to Oakleigh?—To join the force.
15426. Did you go to Oakleigh immediately after that?—I do not know whether I did immediately after, or whether I stopped at a hotel.
15427. By the Commission.—Were you at the hotel for two or three days?—Yes, I was.
15428. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was that all the time you were at Oakleigh; how many days were you there?—I was there on several occasions.
15429. But when you went there when you came down for the purpose of joining the force, how long did you stop there?—Two or three weeks.
15430. Did you stop at the police station?—No, I stopped at a relative’s place.
15431. May I ask who that was?—Yes, Mrs. Baker.
15432. Who is Mrs. Baker—what is she?—She is a relation of my mother’s.
15433. Is she a selector there or in the township?—I do not know. I never asked her what she is. She lives just out of the township. Her daughters are dressmaking. Her husband is dead, I think.
15434. What constables were at Oakleigh whom you know?—I did not know any constables down there. I saw a man there; I was told his name was Grey. And before I went to Oakleigh I told Captain Standish I was going out there, and he said, “All right, but tell the constable where you are, so that if I send out I may know.”
15435. Was Constable Falkiner there?—No, I did not see him there.
15436. Do you remember the schoolmaster, Wallace?—I do, perfectly well.
15437. Did I not often warn you against him—not to associate with him?—Yes, once you did so.
15438. Did I not caution you strongly against him?—Yes, you did.
15439. Did I not warn you to be careful that he was not pumping you and trying to find out what you were doing?—Not about pumping, but to be careful about him.
15440. Did I not explain to you that he might be trying to find out from you about the outlaws or what you knew about them?—No, you did not tell me that.
15441. Are you sure of that?—Yes, I am quite certain you did not. You only told me to beware and not tell him anything.
15442. Did I tell you to avoid having anything to do with him?—Yes.
15443. This declaration of yours is dated 22nd October. You say in it that you met me, and then about three weeks afterwards you met me by appointment at Beechworth, when I again asked you to do duty for me. “I told him that the party of Kelly outlaws constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house at Sebastopol, and that they might easily be captured. He then engaged me, and I commenced to do duty, with six other police constables, under charge of Constable Alexander.” Are you sure that is correct?—I was to do duty along with Alexander.
15444. Do not you think that was the cave party?—Yes.
15445. That was not formed till 2nd December, and I saw you in September?—Yes.
15446. Again you say—“I therefore had to give up my contract with Mr. Crawford, and I continued to do the police duty entrusted to me for over six months.” Were you not working for Mr. Crawford after I saw you?—Yes, but very little work I ever did after I was engaged for the police.
15447. You did work for Crawford?—Yes.
15448. Did you give up your contract after September?—I did.
15449. Are you sure that from September, when I saw you, that you gave up your contract with Crawford, and that you never worked with him on contract afterwards?—I had two or three contracts.
15450. Did you work with him on contract after September or October 1879?—I do not know whether I did or not.
15451. You say here you gave up your contract?—Will you read what is before and after?
15452. “He then engaged me, and I commenced to do duty, with six other police constables, under charge of Constable Alexander. I therefore had to give up my contract with Mr. Crawford, and I continued to do the police duty entrusted to me for over six months.” Do you mean to say you threw up your contract with Crawford?—Did I work any more on contract with him?
15453. Yes.—No, I did not.
15454. You have been working for him?—Yes.
15455. “During this time individual members of the Kelly gang constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house, and that some time after the robbery of the Jerilderie bank by that party the whole gang came to Mrs. Byrne’s house.” Is that correct?—Yes.
15456. “And I sent word to Mr. Nicolson that they were there”?—Yes.
15457. Are you sure of that?—I am positive sure of it.
15458. Do you know I was not in the district at all the time?—I do not know. I know I told Ward, and I was under the impression he sent word to you.
15459. I will read it again—“During this time individual members of the Kelly gang constantly visited Mrs. Byrne’s house, and that some time after the robbery of the Jerilderie bank by that party the whole gang came to Mrs. Byrne’s house, and I sent word to Mr. Nicolson that they were there; thereupon no action was taken by this officer”—now you say you sent word to Ward?—Yes; and I was under the impression that you got the information. Did I say what date I sent to Ward?
15460. I was not in the North-Eastern District at the time. You say—"In about fourteen days afterwards I received a letter from Joe Byrne requesting me to meet him at Sandy Creek, near Wangaratta. This letter I forwarded to Mr. Nicolson, who instructed me to keep the appointment with Byrne." When you received this letter from Byrne, making the appointment to meet him at Sandy Creek, were you to meet the whole gang or Byrne alone?—Byrne alone—not the gang. What Mr. Nicolson refers to about the outlaws coming and going away again, that may not be put right in that declaration as to the time, because I did tell Mr. Nicolson about that, and I asked him why did not he take action to catch them. He said, "If I miss fire, they will not come back again"; meaning that if the outlaws had gone it would spoil his chance the next time.

15461. As to your discharge from the force, did I ever show you any unkindness before that occurred in my transactions with you?—No, I do not think so.

15462. Had you any ill-feeling to me previous to that?—No, I had not.

15463. Had I shown any ill-feeling to you previous to that?—Yes, you did.

15464. When?—I could tell by the way you talked to me—I could see you seemed to have no faith in me, and I will tell the reason. The reason was that, I could see after that, you were under the impression, when you got my portrait taken, that I could lead all those outlaws to a bank, and first inform you and the bank, and then you would be waiting there with the police and catch them; and I would not do it, I told you, because I would be shot myself; I would not do it.

15465. By the Commission.—Was such a proposition made to you?—Yes; that I and my brother should go and stick up the bank.

15466. Who made it?—Mr. Nicolson.

15467. By Mr. Nicolson.—Did I not make the proposition that you should hide in the garden, that the outlaws should not catch you?—The Chairman.—That is not the point.

15468. By the Commission.—Was it known to Mr. Nicolson that the outlaws asked you to enquire about certain banks?—Yes, it was.

15469. Was it known to him that the outlaws expected you to help them?—Yes.

15470. Did Mr. Nicolson then, upon that knowledge, propose that you should continue that same appearance of helping them, until they would come to the bank, and he would capture them?—Yes, that was it.

15471. That proposal was made to you and your brother, you say?—Yes.

15472. And you and your brother were known to the police to have been asked by the outlaws to come with them for the purpose of giving them information?—Yes, and we got our portraits taken on this.

15473. That you declined because you were afraid of being shot?—Yes, and the outlaws did not know I was frightened of them; but Mr. Nicolson did; I told him so, and he told me to sleep in the garden.

Mr. Nicolson.—I was determined I should not lead the outlaws into any trap that would bring bloodshed upon anyone except the police.

15474. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—You thought it better, for police purposes, for him to continue to deceive the outlaws till you laid your hands on them?—I saw he had not nerve to go, and was not fit to go with them.

15475. By the Commission (to the witness).—Last week you said the first time it was generally known your brother Aaron was assisting the police was at the time he was supposed to have been seen by a man of the name of Batchelor: do you know the circumstances surrounding that. Was your brother engaged by the police to go to that particular spot and receive information about the outlaws?—Yes.

15476. Do you know of your own knowledge whether the police, Ward, Mr. Nicolson, or others, could have gone to the place indicated without the assistance of your brother?—No, they could not.

15477. They did not know the country sufficiently well?—No, and it was necessary to take my brother for that purpose.

15478. You have laid considerable stress on the fact that you, after being engaged by the police, were dismissed, and also made a very strong statement that Mr. Nicolson told you to clear out, or you would get into trouble. Did Mr. Nicolson, or any other officer of police, give you any letter of introduction to any one in this or the neighboring colony?—No, Mr. Nicolson did not give me any letter—he gave my brother William one.

15479. What did he do with that letter?—It was a letter of introduction to the Chief Commissioner of the Queensland Police.

15480. Do you know where he went after leaving here?—He went with this letter of introduction, but it was no good.

15481. Do you know of your own knowledge that he had a letter of recommendation?—I did not see it, it was in an envelope. He obtained it from Mr. Nicolson, it was supposed to be a recommendation, it was a sealed envelope addressed to the Commissioner of Police, Queensland.

15482. Did he give you one?—No.

15483. Did your brother ask for this one?—I think he did.

15484. To Mr. Nicolson.—Have you got a copy of that?—No.
The Chairman.—Well, I think we should telegraph to Queensland for a copy of that letter.

Mr. Nicolson.—It was a private note addressed to the Chief Commissioner of Police and was received by him. I have no copy of it.

15485. By the Commission (to the witness).—Did not the letter refer to you also as well as your brother?—No, I think not. I did not propose to go to Queensland. I said I would stop about Melbourne.

15486. Do the Commission understand that about Christmas 1879—about the time Aaron was married—the outlaws were continually in the neighborhood of Sebastopol?—Yes.

15487. They were seen time after time?—Seen time after time.

The witness withdrew.

The Honorable J. H. Graves, M.L.A., further examined.

15488. The Witness.—I wish to remark first that it was not my intention to appear at all as a witness as being a member of the Commission, and my late brother Commissioners will recognize the fact that I did not express any opinion, and though no longer a member of the Commission, I should not have attended now except as being summoned to present the document already handed in. [Inserted above.] On receipt of that letter I endeavored to get satisfactory information as to the statements made in it, and I did that simply in my representative capacity of member for the district, because at the time many of the statements were unknown to the public. I have been for a considerable time connected with that district. In 1864 I was a magistrate of New South Wales and a station owner on the Murray in New South Wales, adjoining this very district, at the place called Terremia, adjoining a place then called Mulwalla, now called Yarrawonga. It is the junction of the Ovens River with the Murray. At that time that district was in a very great state of excitement in consequence of Morgan being then at large, and the adjoining stations to mine had been all stuck up. I was asked to take the Commission of the Peace for Victoria in 1865, and I accepted it as a territorial magistrate for Victoria, and from that time to the present I have been intimately connected as a magistrate with that district as I am now. My station was on the Murray opposite Peechelba where Morgan was afterwards captured and shot; and this position on the river was the one where the men connected with horse and cattle stealing generally crossed over, near Mulwalla, because it was the only fordable part of the Murray River, and in the summer months they could almost cross that part of the river dry-footed. I remained there for some years, and left about the year 1870 going away for two or three years, and about 1872 I returned and resided at Tatong station, being the manager of that station, comprising the Emu and Springs. The Emu station was the one of those under my charge. The boundary fence of that station adjoined the Kellys’ residence, and therefore I became thoroughly acquainted with the members of their family and the men connected with them by marriage—the Lloyds and others—they all adjoined me. At that time Ned Kelly was in gaol, and I think his uncle, one of the Quins, also about that time.

15489. Convicted for an offence?—I think Quin was in gaol; remember, I am not now professing to be accurate as to dates, but I think it was about 1870, one was in for assaulting a man with a bullock yoke, and I think for striking Constable Hall; at any rate they were weekly at the court at Beechworth, or the court I used to attend at Benalla. There was a brother-in-law of the Kellys also in gaol of the name of Eman Gunn, who lived near the Tatong Station where I resided. At that time Constable Flood was stationed at Greta; Scanlan, the murdered constable, was stationed at Mansfield, and Kennedy was stationed at Doon. By reference to the map you will see that these positions I have indicated nearly control the passes of the Strathbogie Ranges. Constable Flood or Scanlan or Kennedy was almost daily there; certainly a week never passed by that they were not on the station and through the back country, and they had a thorough knowledge of it. The police almost had at that time the whole families of the Lloyds, Kellys, and Quins completely under observation. And without a thorough knowledge of those people and their personal appearance, and a thorough knowledge of the country, I do not care how efficient a constable may be, he is utterly useless in dealing with them. For one thing, the country is so rough, it is impossible for any inexperienced man to find his way about.

15490. Those policemen must have had long knowledge of it?—Yes, they were perfectly accustomed to the country, were thoroughly capable, and had full knowledge of the men. Constable Flood was removed for some reason, I do not exactly know what. It was some complaints that were made; the magistrates of the district appealed to Captain Standish through me, not to remove him, on the grounds that as long as he was there, the Kellys and their companions were under complete control, and that he spared himself neither night nor day to keep them under that supervision. Captain Standish at the same time also was presented with a petition on behalf of the residents of the shire, I think, of Oxley (you can refer to this document, I am speaking now from memory) asking him not to remove Constable Flood. He was removed from that time; he went, I think, from Greta to Oxley.

15491. Pardon me, you said an appeal was made to Captain Standish—did that appeal bear any fruit at all?—No.

15492. Was any reason given for its not bearing fruit?—I saw Captain Standish on behalf of the magistrates of the district, but he removed Constable Flood, and from that time up to the present date, in my humble opinion, the Kellys and their friends and their connections got ahead.

15493. You look upon that as the first cause of disaffection?—Yes, and one circumstance was Ned Kelly being in gaol. It was in consequence of sending men who were inefficient as far as the country was concerned, that the Kellys got ahead—that is my individual opinion. At any time that you went about those places, any of their houses, you always saw strange faces there. If I asked my stockman who knew all these men, who they were, he would say, “He has just got out,” meaning he was a prisoner of the Crown who had met them, and brought up the latest accounts of how their relations were faring in gaol. At that time there was a house in Winton, close to Greta, between Greta and Benalla, which was a place where all these characters assembled. There were then two public-houses in the place. From time to time the members of the Kelly family were taken up for different offences, and sometimes they got off—in fact they carried their audacity to almost an incredible extent. As an instance, I may mention just before I left Benalla, which must have been in the year 1876, that I had two very valuable mares that I had heard for some time would be likely to be stolen, and I determined to remove them. I brought them into Benalla, and on the day they came into Benalla for the purpose of being trucked down here to Melbourne, the Kellys followed them into the town. They were locked up in the stock-yard, and those men remained watching those horses till towards morning. The man I had in charge of them left his own horse, saddle and bridle at the hotel close by. One of the Kellys, I believe Dan Kelly, walked into the stable, and as he could not get the horses he stole the man’s new saddle and rode out of the town with it on his horse. He was after some months arrested by the police—the prosecutor was Mr. Smith, my man who swore to the saddle having been made for him, and that it was stolen out of the stable. It was at the Beechworth court, and I think it was Dan Kelly. I am speaking from memory, but you have the documents referring to the case. He was tried for it in Beechworth, and he got a number of witnesses to prove that he himself had bought the saddle, so that it was almost impossible to convict him. He was discharged. The saddle was made for Smith, and there was no doubt at all about it, I think Kelly produced a receipt for the horse, saddle, and bridle, and they got witnesses to prove that, and they were seen with them by the police on the day of the robbery. I instance that to show the audacity of those men, and, correctly or incorrectly, I attribute their getting ahead and the subsequent results to the impunity with which they committed those offences, and the state of the police not making them amenable to justice; and, that was from the want of knowledge on the part of the police of their persons and of the country. I desire now to pass from that time to the time of the murders. You have the records of them before you I suppose. It has been stated that in my place in the House I expressed an opinion unfavorable to the police. I wish to put myself right with regard to that. There was only one occasion that I recollect speaking of the matter, and it was reported in Hansard on the 25th of November as follows:—“I am in a position to assert, and to prove when the proper time comes, that a large amount of money was spent by the outlaws at Benalla, under the very noses and to the knowledge of the police.” That has been corroborated, and that is the only assertion I made. I was always willing, to the best of my ability, to assist the police authorities. I have got a series of letters here which were sent to me, but I will only refer to two or three, in order to draw attention to one or two salient points. Of course, being member for the district, matters came under my observation which it is requisite now to mention to you. I was personally acquainted with all the constables except Lonigan. There could not be, in my opinion, more efficient or more determined men. Scanlan and Kennedy knew every inch of the country, and I believe Lonigan knew the persons of the outlaws, the men then known to be out. Sergeant Kennedy did not know them personally, but knew all their mates and acquaintances, because they were continually coming to Wild Wright’s, and up the Mansfield country. The first document that I wish to hand in is the first message transmitted to me after I heard the account of the murders of the constables, a telegraph message, 31st October 1878, from Mansfield, signed by the President of the Shire of Mansfield. You will notice that the murders took place on the 26th, I think, and this telegram is sent to me on the 31st:—“I have just returned from the scene” (that is where the men were murdered). “On my way home met police in pursuit, all of whom are badly armed. Three rifles among twenty-three men. Revolvers are useless in the ranges, and terrible scenes will be enacted unless a strongly armed force is sent at once. Civilians have done all yet and we must be supported by armed police. Do bring it before the House publicly, for no notice is taken of private representations. (Signed) JAMES TOMKINS, President of the Shire of Mansfield.” Up to that time the residents had done all they could to ascertain the full particulars of the murders, and bring the perpetrators to justice. That telegram, I think, indicates, as far as the Delatite residents are concerned, that they had done all they could, and there must have been neglect on some official’s part in handling his men. The complaint of residents is that after the murders the police were not sent quickly to the scene to follow the murderers—that time was lost. I now pass to the Euroa bank robbery. On the morning after the Euroa bank robbery I was in Mansfield, and it was known about breakfast time that the bank had been robbed the previous day. I will ask you to fix the dates; I think it was on the 10th December 1878. I was at breakfast at the hotel about eight or nine o’clock, getting ready to come down to Melbourne by the coach, and the bank was robbed on the previous day. In the hotel where I was staying there was a large body of police stopping I think. Their horses were in the yard—I will not be certain as to that, but I saw the horses, and there was a large body of constables about the hotel, I think boarding at the hotel. The officer in charge, Mr. Pewtress, came over to me, knowing I was going by the coach, and told me about the bank robbery at Euroa, and asked me if I thought it would not be better to postpone my journey, because I should pass quite close to the place through the mountain road to the Strathbogie Ranges. He then told me that the bank had been to the Benalla police. I heard the station-master tell the engineer to stop the train, and as soon as it stopped, I alighted and told the robbers that they were captured.

In my presence, the robbers were taken to the police station at Benalla, where they were searched and found in possession of a large amount of money, which they had obtained by robbing the bank at Euroa. The robbers were then sent to Melbourne, where they were charged with the crime of robbery, and are now awaiting trial.

Mr. Nicolson, who was present at the scene of the crime, gave me the following account of what took place:

Extract from Mr. Nicolson's testimony:

On the night of the robbery, I was at the hotel at Benalla, and I received a telegram stating that the bank at Euroa had been robed. I immediately went to the police station, where I found the constable James, who had received the same information. We then went to the hotel, where we found the landlord, Mr. Anderson, who told us that he had received a similar message.

It was then proposed to send a body of police to Euroa to arrest the robbers. Inspector Pewtress telegraphed down for permission to do so, and he received an affirmative reply.

After the robbers had been arrested, I was present when they were taken to the police station at Benalla, where they were searched and found in possession of a large amount of money. They were then sent to Melbourne, where they are now awaiting trial.

Mr. Nicolson continued:

Extract from Mr. Nicolson's testimony:

I wish now to make a full statement of the events which occurred on the night of the robbery at Euroa.

was a schoolmaster at Euroa, and of course it would not be pleasant for him. He is a man of undoubted character, and the statements made might subject him to some inconvenience. With regard to the letter produced yesterday on the application of Mr. Nicolson—[inserted above]—at the time I got that letter I took it up to the district, and I did not bring the matter therein stated before Parliament for a similar reason—that the publicity of those matters might retard the police and inconvenience them; but I made enquiry as to the allegations made therein, and I was quite satisfied, from information I received, that the greater number of the statements were accurate. However, after ascertaining that they were accurate, to the best of my belief, I handed the letter to Captain Standish, and said I would prefer not making it public, as I was requested, in Parliament, and as I was quite sure, having received that information, he would endeavor to remedy any defects there were, and make the outlaws amenable to law. I forgot to mention, upon receipt of that telegram I spoke of, about the men in Mansfield not having arms, I went to Captain Standish, at the Melbourne Club, and told him of the telegram—showed it to him—and I remonstrated with him for not having sent police immediately in the search party, and expressed to him that there would have been, in my humble judgment, no difficulty in the way of having a large body of police much earlier on the scene of the murders, instead of entrusting the search to private individuals, and that an armed party of desperadoes in the mountains could have shot off any number of civilians if they chose.

15496. Is that letter, produced yesterday, the letter you forwarded to Wallace the schoolmaster?—Yes, but I am not sure that I forwarded it to Wallace.

15497. Wallace swears you did?—I would not swear I did not, but I know he saw it, because I asked him about several particulars in it, as I did in several other instances. For instance, I asked him about the paragraph, “At the present time there are men in the district who have been picked out for their smartness and activity, and they are not allowed outside barracks for fear of their hearing anything about the murders.” That kind of paragraph I made enquiry about, as to its accuracy, and I found out that there were two men who had not been out of the barracks. I see here a note I wrote on the letter, in pencil, at the time that Constable Phillips was one of those.

15498. The impression conveyed to my mind is, that the letter was sent to him by you for the purpose of ascertaining from him if he knew anything as to the author of that letter?—I would not say it was posted to him, I was up in the district, but that is true undoubtedly that he saw it, for I showed this letter to half-a-dozen people for the purpose of ascertaining whether they believed that the statements therein were true.

15499. Had you any idea at the time you either handed that letter to him or sent it to him that he knew anything as to who inspired it?—I knew that very likely he might, because Wallace knew more about the Kellys than anyone else. My impression was that he could have told me who wrote it.

15500. Are you still under that impression?—I think it was written by a constable of police.

15501. Are you still under the impression that Wallace knew something about the letter prior to his receiving it?—No, I am satisfied in my own mind he did not. He might know many of the facts in it, but my own impression is, from my conversation with him, that he did not know of some of the contents of that letter.

15502. Before Wallace received that letter from you—how long before that had you seen Wallace himself?—That is “19th April 1880.” I think I must have seen him a month before this letter was written.

15503. And at no date between the month before that letter was written?—At this distance of time I could not tell. Wallace was the schoolmaster near Oxley, and I was constantly going by the train to Wangaratta, and I do not think I ever went there without seeing Wallace.

15504. You may have seen him a few days perhaps before you received the letter?—I might; but I do not think I did. I was constantly in the habit of seeing him, and I knew he was a schoolfellow of Byrne.

15505. That is dated the 19th, and I think he swears he had an interview with you on the 17th?—I would not be sure he had not, but I have no recollection of it. I have not read his evidence, and have no idea what he said. I would not even say I spoke to him about this matter before then—I might have.

15506. I think he said he travelled in the train with you on the 17th, or saw you on the station?—My impression was from the first, about this year 1880, that Wallace knew more about them than anyone else in my district, but I have no actual grounds for that except my own supposition. My own belief was that the principal time that the Kellys were out (this is a matter of mere belief) they kept in the immediate neighborhood between Greta and Moyhu. Either at Glenmore Station, or on the Hedley Station, there were always strange horses whenever I went up, or marks of strange horses in paddocks, and my impression is they were in the district the whole time. That was also confirmed by a statement made by Ned Kelly, when he said, “he could have got me” any time he wanted, showing he knew when I was going backwards The and forwards in that district. My own feeling was that, on very many occasions, the Kellys, individually or part of them, could have been made amenable to justice; and I thought it was a mistake on the part of the officers attempting to capture them as a body and not taking them individually, because I believe in all history of bands of bushrangers and this kind of thing they have been generally broken up into parts, and it is more effective to catch them when you can, even individually.

15507. May I point out to you that you have just made a statement, that, in my opinion, ought to be borne out by more than statement; can you give data, showing when any one member of the gang could have been taken by the police at any time?—I am giving my evidence as to why I came to certain conclusions, and I make no statement of which I do not give you the opportunity to judge of its correctness by referring to the papers. I ask you to look at the telegrams about the Euroa bank robbery, and I now give you an opportunity of ascertaining the correctness of my knowledge by documents I will hand in to you. In any case where I give my evidence as hearsay, I would be glad to be asked the reasons.

15508. Here is the telegram you refer to, 11th December?—I have asserted that if energetic steps had been taken on the day after the bank robbery at Mansfield, and as advised by James, who is one of the best men in the police force, it would have been impossible for the Kellys to have escaped back to their haunts. Now that is the telegram he sent, and I want the reply to him which prevented him taking the steps he proposed. (The telegram, dated 11th December 1878, was read as follows:) “I do not see how the trackers can reach Superintendent Nicolson at or near Euroa till late to-night. If he awaits them, then much valuable time is lost, if he does not wait the chances are the trackers and men with them never come up with him. I think the gang likely to make for Strathbogie Ranges and vid Double Creeks to old haunts. My party with trackers should go on to table land at back of Dry Creek and Doon, at once, and endeavour to intercept Kelly or cut his tracks and run them. By dividing my party and leaving it without trackers ’tis rendered of little use any way. FRANK JAMES, Senior-Constable, 2339. (Time lodged, 10.15. Time received, 10.27.)” There should be a telegram from Benalla to Mansfield, in reply to James’ telegram. I saw the telegram in Mansfield, stating that the bank was robbed. I never believed the men would go to the Murray, but that they would get back to Strathbogie Ranges, so Senior-Constable James telegraphs to ask permission to go his own way, where he believed they were going, and I think a telegram was sent, directing him to go in the opposite way, otherwise he would have gone that way. There must be a telegram early in the morning, instructing him to go the other road.

15509. Here is another telegram:—“To Mr. Pewtress, Mansfield.—Yes, portion of James’ party to remain at Mansfield and portion to go to Broken River; those for latter place to take up the duties of James’ party, by which, on enquiry from him, will be explained to them.—S. MAUD, for Superintendent. (Received at 11, sent at 11.8)”—That is exactly the opposite direction to which he proposed. I think that is the telegram. At all events, that would exactly adopt the opposite course to what had been suggested. My first allegation is about the police at Mansfield, and you have got the evidence to see whether the police were sent up in time. My second is, that I did not consider the search made sufficient; and my third allegation is, that, in my judgment, the attempt to make the party altogether amenable to justice, instead of individually catching them, was wrong. I think you will find that the police waited till eleven o’clock that day, and then took the opposite course to what James and Pewtress said was desirable.

15510. Do you consider that telegram the reply?—It must be, because it was exactly the opposite course to what Constable James advised.

15511. Here is another telegram, dated 11th December 1878:—“Re Sr.-Const. James’ telegram.—He must carry out instructions given, as they are those of the inspecting superintendent; and as he is now away, I cannot say what his arrangements are. The Mansfield and Broken River police should co-operate in watching the Mansfield road, to intercept offenders should they attempt a crossing from the Strathbogie ranges.—S. MAUD, for Supt. (Received 12.5, sent 12.10 p.m.)”—I see that is the one and must be taken with the other.

15512. What we get from you generally is this: that this is one instance in which, had the recommendation of Constable James, of Mansfield, been complied with, the probability is that the outlaws would have been intercepted after the Euroa Bank robbery, before they arrived at their haunts in the ranges?—Yes.

15513. He was the responsible officer in charge of the district?—Yes.

15514. And they were prevented from taking these measures, because of information from head quarters?—Yes, and they did exactly the reverse. I am asked by the Commission why I formed the opinion that if the police had endeavored to catch them singly that they might have brought them to justice earlier. This letter I now produce was sent to me by a dismissed constable named Meehan, who was in the district all the time. As to his character I know nothing. I have merely heard him in courts where I have been adjudicating. He called and said he could give valuable information. The address is torn off, but that is of no importance. The letter is as follows:—“Sir,—I, having changed my address as above, take this opportunity of informing you I will reside there, pending enquiry. On passing through Euroa I met Constable McGuirk, and in the course of a conversation, re reward, enquiry, etc., he adverted to the fact of having given information to Mr. Nicolson of having found the tracks of two of the outlaws—McGuirk having been sent specially to watch for those tracks—Mr. Nicolson thanked the constable for his efficiency and the promptitude with which he acted. McGuirk then suggested that the trackers be immediately put on, and follow up the tracks, as the ground was soft. Mr. Nicolson then said it would not do to catch only two; he wanted the four, and sent the constable back again to watch. McGuirk said that made him indifferent. I respectfully make the above facts known, as he is most anxious to be heard, and thinking it may be material. McGuirk knows nothing of this, telling him I took no interest in the matter.—I have the honor to be, Sr., your most obt. servant, THOS. MEEHAN.” I do not know McGuirk. That is the evidence that I go on, and a lot of evidence of that kind. That is why I have formed that opinion. I will give another instance where I think that want of—well may I use the word—luck, or want of care was shown. It was well known in Melbourne, and I heard it, that the Kelly family were down for the purpose of buying supplies of ammunition, and food, and clothing, as the case may be. That was known in Melbourne, and the police knew it. I think there was not due care exercised to prevent that ammunition going back to the district. Again, passing up the street here in Melbourne one day, I met a magistrate (this is exactly my difficulty—
I do not want to give the names, but in reference to the matter you will see

The Honorable
J. H. Graves,
M.L.A.
continued,
10th Aug. 1881.

15514A. “April 6th. Reported by Mr. Graves, M.L.A., that Ned Kelly was seen near Melbourne”—Now, on that date, I met a magistrate from my district, and in conversation relative to the Kellys, as every one was talking of them at the time, he said that it was well known they were in the district, in fact they travelled about, and he said further, “You will be surprised to hear that, within the last two hours, I met Ned Kelly in Melbourne.” I said, “Nonsense.”

15515. Was he a person you could rely upon?—Most thoroughly; but of course a man may be mistaken. I said, “Surely it can be no such thing; he could not be in town.” And he said, “I am quite sure I met him. He had on a short jumper, and his pockets seemed full of apples or something, and the moment he recognized me he jumped into a cab, and there was no policeman near.” He showed me the place where he saw him, and I said, “Can you be mistaken?” And he said he knew Kelly since he was a boy, and was not likely to mistake him, and that anyone who saw Ned Kelly once could not mistake him; that you could tell him because he shrugged his shoulders like his two uncles. That magistrate can be called. I have no objection to give his name to the Commission. And this magistrate in Strathbogie informed me that the Kellys were in the habit of staying at a certain hut there, and that he had sent the police notice that they were likely to be there on a certain date, and that he had no reason to doubt the accuracy of his information, and that the police were not sent. I am telling you who I got the information from, to show why I form certain conclusions; and this magistrate also can be summoned.

15516. Will you give the names to the secretary?—Yes, I will be happy to do so. I had a letter, early in the enquiry, saying that Constable Dixon could give very material evidence in the case. I do not know who he is, or whether you have had him before you.

15517. Did you have any conversation with him?—No. Here is a letter from a man named Henry Perkins. The police will know how far this man gave them information or not. “Wombat, Mansfield, May 2nd, 1881. To J. H. Graves, Esq., M.P. Sir—I hope you have not forgotten to call on me in the Police Enquiry, please inform me if it is coming to Mansfield, and when. In consequence of my arrest as a Kelly sympathizer I have lost three situations. My family are still debarred from selecting.” One of the complaints in the district is that the police have given the names of people who are not entitled to select, and although a great number of those were cases of men well known to be connections and friends and sympathizers of the Kellys, still the indiscriminate way in which that power was used by the police has alienated a great number of people from the police.

15518. Do you know anything of this Perkins?—No, he was one of the sympathizers arrested.

15519. Have you had any conversation with him?—Yes. He is a selector, but the Government have deferred his application. He was one of those who were arrested. He is a man who, in my opinion, must have known the Kellys’ position at the time of the murders, because he resides at the Wombat.

15520. Do you think he was aware of the whole proceedings connected with the murders of the constables at Mansfield prior to the actual commission of the deed, that is, the intention to murder?—I would not like to say that of any man.

15521. Have you ever heard any information that would lead you to suppose that he was in possession of information of their intended movements?—You are asking me now to swear as to matter of belief. The general impression is that he was the man who gave information to the police where the Kellys were, and afterwards told the Kellys the police were coming after them. That is the general impression. That somebody told the police where the Kellys were is certain, and that somebody told the Kellys the police were after them.

15522. Did you ever know whether Sergeant Kennedy knew where the Kellys were?—That would be hearsay evidence.

15523. I will put it in a different way—Did you ever hear it said that these men, Kennedy and Scanlan, had information as to where the Kellys were?—They must have. They would not have gone to that place without some pretty well grounded information.

15524. Did you ever hear any comments upon the fact of two of the policemen being left behind while the other two went away?—Now you are asking again a matter of opinion.

15525. I am not asking for your opinion, I ask whether you heard rumours that those two men must have had information as to where the Kellys were?—I think they must have got instructions from somebody about the locality. The Kellys were digging there, but the police did not know exactly the position the hut was in, and the country was new to those men, except Scanlan and I think they would keep as close as they could to the part where the diggings were; and from my knowledge of Kennedy and Scanlan, I think they did not know exactly the place where the hut was, and that they left the other two men in camp while they went to reconnoitre and find the exact place and then surprise them. If the Commission visited that place they would get the information much better than I can give it.

15526. It is asserted, I do not know with what authority, that this was a part of the pre-concerted plan to lead them into a trap, in connection with the information which had previously been given to the police, and from which information they arrived at this spot, and also the two separated from the others?—I am sure that is not correct. I am sure when they got there they camped at the most likely place for a camp, and they did not know where the hut was, and Kennedy and Scanlan went to find it.

15527. I understand you that the police received information which led to the formation of this party and proceeded to the spot where they first camped?—Yes.

15528. And which was subsequently left by two of the party?—Yes.

15529. My question is, do you think the object of the information given first was with a view of leading them to this position there, and the fact of the two leaving was part of a pre-concerted plan to bring those police into a position that they might be betrayed?—I do not think so. My impression is this: that soon after the attempted shooting of Fitzpatrick occurred, the Kellys took the same horses that they had used that morning and a pack horse, and went up towards the very place where the murders were committed, having previously been there with other people who were evading justice, and therefore knowing perfectly well where to go. I think that this hiding-place was known to prisoners in jail. The police will know how they got the information, but I will read you an extract from a letter which induced me to come to that conclusion. This is written from the Penal Establishment to myself. “On the 19th October, 1878,” (this is before the murders), “during my transit from Beechworth, I informed Constable Reilly, of Benalla, of the whereabouts of the Kellys, which up to that time they (the police) appeared to be perfectly ignorant of, and only one week after was enacted the Wombat tragedy. Again in 1879, about July, I was visited by Sergeant Leahy, of the Richmond Police Station, for information about the Kellys and their friends in Benalla, Major Plains, Broken Creek, and Lake Rowan, which he took down in writing. I understood from him that the information was required for the Benalla Police. I also forwarded a statement through the Superintendent to Captain Standish, giving additional information, but did not put my name to it.” I came to the conclusion that the whereabouts of the Kellys was known to prisoners in Pentridge prior to the Wombat murders, and that the police by that means or some others gained a knowledge of where they were. They must have known where the Kellys were, but they were uncertain of the exact position, and the party went out for the purpose of searching that country. I think they arrived at the Stringy Bark Creek, and it being very rough country, they intended to camp there while Scanlan and Kennedy went to look for the hut. That would be the hour when constables would be most likely to find a place like that, because as the men came off from mining, and would be likely to light a fire, and the constables would be able to see the smoke. My correspondent on the 19th declares he told the police where the Kellys were. It has been stated, I think, that knowing there was a reward for Ned Kelly, that the chances are that Sergeant Kennedy and Scanlan went off together for the purpose of capturing them by themselves and getting that reward. I think that is extremely unlikely. I think it was simply by that they did not know where the hut was.

15530. Did you ever have conversation with this man Perkins?—Every one of the constables knew all about him.

15531. What was the nature of the conversation you had with this man Perkins—did he in conversation talk of the circumstances which led up to the formation of this party and the subsequent action taken?—Quite the reverse. Whenever I saw Perkins, he said he never set eyes upon them in his life—which I knew to be a lie.

15532. Are you aware whether Perkins was intimately acquainted with Sergeant Kennedy?—Yes, he must have seen him, because Kennedy was removed after the appointment of another constable. Perkins was continually in Mansfield, and must have seen him every day. Besides Kennedy had been in the district for years.

15533. You are not aware whether there was any confidential communication between the two?—No, the private telegrams in the possession of the police would tell who gave the information about the Kellys.

15534. As a matter of fact, in your opinion, do you think the information which this man gave was the first that caused the formation of the party?—I cannot say that, I am only arguing from my knowledge of the country. I do not think men could have been digging there for so many months, living, and either buying meat, or killing some one else’s meat, without Perkins knowing they were there.

15535. You know they got gold there?—There is an old diggings there, and as a matter of fact, they must have bought provisions there, and I believe the gold was sold in Mansfield, and I believe that the people knew they were there. They might not have known exactly whether it was the Kellys, but they knew people evading the law were there; and if you go to the place you will see marks on the trees showing that for months and months those men must have been practising shooting with bullets, and you will see the remains of slaughtered cattle there, and these things could not occur without people knowing.

15536. Perkins is available to be called?—Yes, he could speak for himself—he is there still. I have a series of other letters, but I do not think they are of any great consequence; I think I have substantiated my reasons for coming to the conclusions I did in many matters.

15537. By Mr. Nicolson.—In that original letter you have handed in, about which you refer to Wallace the schoolmaster, you say that Constable Mullane’s name is mentioned?—No. I did not say that, I said that as soon as I got this letter, the statements made therein being so extraordinary, before I would communicate with Captain Standish, or bring the matter before Parliament, I went to my district for the purpose of ascertaining the facts. One was in page 3, it says, “At the proper time evidence will be brought forward to prove my statement true. At the present time there are men in the district who have been picked out for their smartness and activity, and they are not allowed outside barracks for fear of them hearing anything about the ‘murderers.’” After I got that letter I made enquiry as to whether that was the fact or not, as to the men being shut up in the barracks, and I wrote in pencil in the margin of the letter what I did not notice till just now, that I found that Phillips had been shut up in the barracks, and not employed. What I personally spoke to Wallace about was about Ward’s general conduct, and also about the probability of Aaron Sherritt being true or false. I think that is all I spoke to him about.

15538. Did Wallace write his replies to you?—I do not think so—he might have got this letter and written a reply—if he did, I have no recollection of it. I heard somebody say he did, but I have no recollection of it. I would not say he did not, because I cannot recollect at this time, if I sent that letter by post, but I know that I saw him about that time.

15539. Do you remember when you handed Captain Standish that letter on that occasion or subsequent, whether he asked you if you had seen Wallace, and you replied that you had not seen him for several months?—I do not recollect Captain Standish mentioning Wallace’s name at all on that occasion. He might have done so.

15540. Here is Captain Standish’s letter dated May 5th, 1880, “I saw Mr. Graves this morning. You are quite wrong in your surmises about the anonymous letter which I forwarded to you, as Mr. Graves assures me that Wallace had nothing to do with the writing of it, and that he (Mr. Graves) has neither seen nor held communication of any kind with Wallace for many months?”—That would simply be untrue, for I had seen him.

15541. “He did not however inform me who was the writer of the letter. I sent down some documents to meet you at the 2.55 train yesterday, but as you did not start by that train Mr. Moors had the letter posted to you”?—Can I see the copy of Captain Standish’s letter. [same was handed to the witness.] I gave the letter to Captain Standish and he ordered it to be copied in the office “Strictly confidential.” The letter of which this is a copy was handed to me yesterday by Mr. Graves. It was signed by the name of O’Connor or Connor, but Mr. Graves told me he was positive it was written at the dictation of another man who resides at or near Violet Town, and whose handwriting he recognized.” (That was incorrect—

I thought it was, but I was wrong.) “In the address of the envelope,” I still think it was in the hand: writing of the man at Violet Town—the address, not the document itself—“Mr. Graves, however, declined to give up his name.” I have no recollection of saying to Captain Standish that I had not seen or heard of Wallace, because it would have been perfectly untrue. My belief is I sent to see him on another matter about that time.

15542. You spoke several times about the Strathbogie Ranges?—Yes.

15543. What grounds had you for saying the outlaws were ever there except supposition and rumour?—I do not believe that the outlaws made use of the Strathbogie Ranges. I never said any such thing. I think the outlaws did not remain in the Strathbogie Ranges. I think they remained in the immediate neighborhood of Glenmore, Moyhu and Greta, nearly the whole time they were out, and that they got their supplies from the Bright road, and from Chinamen and the people there up towards Mount Typo at the back of Glenmore. They did not use the Strathbogie Ranges at all except passing through them, but I think they were in the habit of visiting their aunt and grandmother in the Stratlibogie Ranges. The Strathbogie Ranges are places where they could not remain concealed, and there are splitters there, and there is not back country where they could escape to—they would want a place where they could get back.

15544. Have you any knowledge of how the Kelly gang approached Euroa, or where they left it to?—I have an idea.

15545. Have you any information?—Yes, I think they came from Mr. Begg’s station, having been there the day before, and Byrne was in the town of Euroa for two days before the bank robbery with Gould, the hawker, and I think the rest were camped by Begg’s station, and that the police were aware they were there. I think the police are in full possession of the fact that the Kellys were in the neighborhood of Euroa two days before, and that Byrne was in the town. I know that one gentleman in the town, at the taking of the outlaws at Glenrowan, recognized Byrne as having been to his hotel two days before the robbery of the bank—that was Mr. De Boos. This is matter of opinion for which you have asked me.

15546. You said you asked Wallace about the statements in that letter?—Yes.

15547. Because you knew he knew so much about the Kellys?—I believed he knew thoroughly about them.

15548. Those were statements about the police—how could you expect him to give information about the police?—I said I asked different parties in my district as to parts of it that they would be likely to know about. I recollect speaking to Wallace, and the only thing I recollect speaking to him about was if Detective Ward was a capable man, and was it likely that Sherritt was selling the police. That was principally what I knew he would know, from being a schoolfellow of Byrne’s and knowing his private character.

15549. By Mr. Sadleir.—I took charge of this North-Eastern district—the Kelly country—in July 1878?—Yes. When I first went to the district there was no officer stationed at Benalla; the officers in charge of the district were Messrs. Barclay and Reid.

15550. Then I had nothing to do with the removal of Constable Flood?—No, the person responsible for that is Captain Standish himself.

15551. I am in no way responsible?—No, nor were you in charge of the district until after you took it—about the time of the murders.

15552. That was long after the Fitzpatrick affair?—Yes, long after. I think you must have only taken charge of what is now called the Kelly country a very short time prior to the murders. The gentleman in charge of this, and responsible, was Captain Standish allowing the men to be changed, and that was done under the direction of Messrs. Brook Smith, Barclay, and Reid.

15553. I was responsible for the selection of the four men who went out?—Yes.

15554. Could I have selected better men?—No. I should say that Kennedy and Lonigan and the others knew the country well, whereas the Wangaratta party, under Sergeant Steele, that went up the Fifteen-mile Creek, would have been utterly useless about Mansfield. The great secret of making men amenable to justice is having policemen that know the country, otherwise they are perfectly useless. For a series of years from Power’s time they had a regular well-beaten track from Mansfield to cross, which was only used by themselves. A week hardly elapsed that I did not find in my paddocks either one of my horses ridden, or one of theirs left there and one of mine taken. They bad always relays of horses at those back country places, as you are not allowed to impound horses if they belong to neighbors, and there they would remain till they would come for them. They were always on the beaten track backwards and forwards to Mansfield.

15555. By the Commission.—Do you think that there would be much information of value got by the Commission visiting Mansfield?—Well there are people there who are no sympathizers with the Kellys, but still who are reluctant to let their names be made public. There was one very remarkable fact showing how they can give evidence if they choose. After the murders of the police, the whole circumstances, and the details relating to Kennedy appeared in an up-country journal, supplied to the present private information not by the police, and the man who gave that can give information still. I refer to the newspaper published by Mr. Hall, a member of this commission.

Mr. Hall.—The party I got that information from was altogether separate from the police, and I was bound at that time to secrecy; never to divulge the names.

15556. By the Commission to the Witness.—Evidently Perkins is not afraid; in his letter he says he is ready to attend?—If the Commission could go there, they could see the hut and the traces I have mentioned, showing that the Kellys must have been there a considerable time before the murders. I think it was a very serious error not following them down after the murders.

15557. Do you think for the purposes of this enquiry it will be necessary to go to Mansfield?—I am positive if you go there you will get most material evidence as to how those men were supported, but I cannot say whether they will give you the information; they can give you astonishing information if they think fit. I would like, before going, to express the opinion than the plan now adopted of patrols, and making the men individually acquainted with the district is one of the wisest that the Commission could have sanctioned, because I do not care how plucky or efficient the men are, unless they know the district they are utterly useless. Within the last three or four months the police up there have become acquainted with the localities, and if any offence is committed they can go to likely points and find out the offenders’ whereabouts which they did not know before till the progress report of the Commission was given effect to.

15558. You have had a very large amount of information connected with the Kelly business all through, and are thoroughly seised of the question that has been remitted to this Commission, and I wish to ask you—do you think it is necessary for us to visit the scene of the murders at Mansfield before sending in a progress report dealing with the three officers of police who have been for some time relieved from duty in order to be before the Commission. I do not refer to our general report?—I would not like to say that those officers were responsible in regard to what happened at Mansfield. I do not think Messrs. Nicolson, Hare, and Sadleir were accountable for that, because the offence was not committed in their district. Mr. Sadleir was not in charge of any portion of the district where those men were. I think it was not till about the time that Kennedy went out that Mr. Sadleir took charge.

15559. As far as you know, Mr. Nicolson also was not at all responsible as to that?—Yes, I think, under the regulations, that Mr. Nicolson was responsible to a certain amount. I think that one of the charges is that the men were inefficiently armed, and I think your enquiry will show that was so, and the duties of the Inspecting Superintendent (Mr. Nicolson’s office) are very clearly laid down. This, how ever, is only matter of opinion.

15560. So you think that, incidentally, Mr. Nicolson may have been responsible?—I do not think he was responsible for the men remaining at large, but the Inspecting Superintendent’s duties seem to me to be the most important of all. I think the district got disorganized under the charge of Messrs. Barkly, Reed, and Brook Smith, and, when Mr. Sadleir took it, it was in a very disorganized state. I think that Mr. Nicolson, as Inspecting Superintendent, is responsible, to a great extent, for that occurring in any district; but the Commission can judge of that.

15561. As to Mr. Hare, how far is his responsibility affected in the matter—I am confining the question solely to those men being at large prior to the murders at the Wombat?—I think the officer in charge of Wangaratta was responsible. It cannot possibly affect Mr. Hare, because he went afterwards, virtually to supersede Mr. Sadleir, and could not, therefore, be responsible. It could not directly relate to Mr. Nicolson; if he was not allowed to have the proper number of men there, the number being reduced, he cannot be held responsible, and Captain Standish must be. But if it was done with his knowledge and sanction, that is another matter. As to Mr. Sadleir, the only thing he could be held accountable for would be if he had the knowledge that those men, charged with attempting to shoot, were within his Mansfield district at the Wombat prior to the murders. They must have been in his district, with warrants out against them, from the time of the attempt to shoot Fitzpatrick till the murders in October; and Mansfield was part of Mr. Sadleir’s district, and was amalgamated with Benalla about October. I do not think you would get any information in Mansfield that would either free those gentlemen from blame or attach blame to them—you might; I cannot say. I am sworn, and am endeavoring to tell the truth honestly, and I do not think you would get much evidence there. I think Inspector Pewtress was in charge of the district then. I think it was a grievous mistake that police were not at once sent in sufficient numbers after the murders, because immediate pursuit is the main point in dealing with criminals.

The Honorable J. H. Graves, M.L.A.

15562. By Mr. Sadleir.—You said I was superseded by Mr. Nicolson—how do you mean that?—Perhaps that was an unguarded opinion, but I hold that an officer is, according to the regulations, fit to take charge or he is not. If he is, he should not be called upon to divide his responsibility with any other individual.

15563. Did I not still retain charge of the ordinary duty of the district after those officers were sent?—I could not say you did.

15564. Do not you remember that Captain Standish, in his evidence, explained that those other officers had charge of the Kelly operations and I had still charge of the district?—Yes.

15565. Is that your meaning as to superseding?—I think if theKellys were at large in your district—.

15566. Will you please plainly answer the question?—I think you were virtually superseded at Benalla by Mr. Nicolson, contrary to the interests of the public.

15567. Would it surprise you to learn that it was with my full consent and desire that other officers should be sent to meet the special occasion of the Kelly outbreak, knowing that it was quite impossible for any one officer to attend to that in addition to the ordinary business—is that new to you?—It would be quite new to me and unlikely, and I would be greatly surprised at it.

15568. Do you think any one officer (you knowing the extent of the district) could undertake the two duties?—I do, because you had two subordinates—Inspector Smith at Wangaratta and Inspector Pewtress at Mansfield—and if they were not fit for the duty they should not have been there.

15569. Do you know that Inspector Pewtress had not been in the bush before?—Yes, but he was virtually superseded by Inspector Twoey—he was under you.

15570. Who was responsible for the position of officers there?—I suppose Captain Standish. I hold the opinion that, according to the regulations, that there is no warrant for any officer being virtually superseded.

15571. But no one officer could undertake both the duties?—What were your duties?

15572. Looking after the ordinary requirements of the police, and the officers senior to me were sent to take charge of theKelly business solely?—My impression is that the act of sending Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare relieved you from the responsible position you held by the regulations; and from the facts, I know you did not confine your operations to controlling the police in the district, because you took part in the Kelly business and were one of the principal persons in the Sebastopol business. I know you were informed by Quinn that the Kellys were at Lloyd’s house, and you took a party there. I do not think it is possible that the duties of a superintendent could be divided in that way.

The witness withdrew.

Michael Edward Ward further examined.

15573. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—Have you any questions you desire to ask?—Yes.

15574. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—Just relate to the Commission what you remember of that occurrence when Sherritt came into Beechworth?—
15583. What did Sherritt say to you and Mr. Nicolson together?—The same thing again.

15584. What time was it when Mr. Nicolson came and Sherritt repeated that conversation?—I would not be certain as to the time; from the best of my belief, I think between seven and eight o’clock.

15585. What did the police do?—I left all to Mr. Nicolson then. As soon as I brought him there we consulted, and from the arrangement Mr. Nicolson had previously made on a previous meeting—

15586. Let us deal with this first. What was done between you and Sherritt and Mr. Nicolson?—Nothing was done then.

15587. Did the police go to watch Sherritt’s place?—I do not think they did. I did not go.

15588. Do you know what became of Sherritt that night?—I do. Sherritt was instructed on that night to go to Julian’s, a shanty-keeper on the Woolshed, and to be able to prove, if he should see any of the gang, that he did not come in to see us; the same as he would prove an alibi. I gave him ten shillings to go there.

15589. Did the police take any action, as far as you are aware of, to watch Sherritt’s place to see whether Dan or any other portion of the gang returned?—I do not remember that they did.

15590. Did they?—I could not say.

15591. If they took any action would you be acquainted with it?—I think so.

15592. Can you swear whether they did or not?—I do not think any action was taken that night. I went myself the following morning.

15593. Did Jack Sherritt usually inform you when he saw any of the outlaws?—Jack Sherritt gave very little information to me at any time. Aaron Sherritt was principally my confidential man, and one of the daughters and the mother.

15594. How often did Jack Sherritt tell you he had seen any of the outlaws?—I think about twice is all I can remember, and the third time was he told me that Patsey told him that Joe slept at home last night, and I made enquiries on that occasion. The cave party was out and the men watching, and I made enquiries of Aaron Sherritt. The men at the cave said they did not believe it. They said it was impossible for Joe to come home and they not see it.

15595. How long is it that you know Jack Sherritt?—Shortly after the Kelly business.

15596. Did you keep a diary?—No.

15597. Do you remember the circumstance about Jack making the appointment about Sandy Creek?—Yes.

15598. And before did Jack Sherritt inform you that he had an appointment to meet Joe Byrne at Sandy Creek?—Yes, I knew that.

15599. Did you take any action to allow Sherritt to keep his appointment?—I reported the matter to Mr. Nicolson, and as soon as I did I left all in the hands of the officer in charge.

15600. What did you really do?—I reported the matter to Mr. Nicolson.

15601. By what means did you receive the communication from Jack Sherritt that he had an appointment with Joe Byrne?—I could not tell the date.

15602. How many days before the appointment to meet Joe Byrne?—I do not know. My reports will show.

15603. A sufficient number of days to take action if you thought fit?—The moment I received information I communicated with Mr. Nicolson immediately.

15604. When did you communicate with Mr. Nicolson that Jack Sherritt told you that?—It will be in my correspondence, November 7th, 1879, about eight. I either wrote, or ran to the telegraph office and telegraphed if there was not time to write.

15605. That telegram would be in existence?—Yes, or the report.

15606. Sherritt has sworn that he told you (and he did not know Mr. Nicolson at that time) that he had an appointment to meet Joe Byrne at Sandy Creek; now when did he so inform you?—I cannot tell the date, but I know that immediately anything occurred I made Mr. Nicolson aware of it at once.

15607. Then you knew some time prior to the appointment, and communicated to your superior officer that the appointment was to take place at a certain time?—Yes.

15608. Were any arrangements made by the police to intercept the outlaw on the occasion of that appointment?—No.

15609. Could you give a reason for not doing so?—No, I can give no reason, because I had not power to. I had not sufficient knowledge myself as an individual, as I would not dare to dictate to an officer of standing like Mr. Nicolson.

15610. You said, in your evidence before, you were in a position at any time to act on your own responsibility on any information that came to you. Were you not in that instance?—No, I was not. I could not have done so.

15611. Then which are we to believe—the statement you made when you said you could take any action you thought necessary, or the statement now that you had to obtain authority from your superior officer before you acted?—At what time do you refer to?

15612. I refer to your first evidence, in which you stated that you could at all times act upon information that was given to you without waiting for instructions?—Yes, if I could do it; but how could knowledge, but from time to time he received instructions from Mr. Nicolson what to also tell you an appointment was made that, after Sherritt had made the enquiry, he did me he met Joe Byrne, and, as he has described, that when he went to the briefly explained his visit to Joe Byrne to meet him at Sandy Creek, and long after he visited you, supply you with all the information he obtained in relation to the Yackandandah and Beechworth banks, and the different means about getting there to the banks, and that Ned and himself could not agree. They would want a couple of men there with them, and several things like that; that their horses were bad, and that Joe’s grey mare was the best of the lot.

Shortly the substance of the statement was that Byrne asked him to assist them in sticking up the Yackandandah bank; is that so?—No, to give information as to the advisability or otherwise. Did he also tell you an appointment was made that, after Sherritt had made the enquiry, he was to meet him at a certain place to report?—Yes, at Evans’s Gap. Did Sherritt after that see you and when?—I could not say when. My reports will all speak for themselves on that subject.

When Sherritt next met you did he tell you the result of this meeting with Joe Byrne as to the advisability of sticking up the banks?—He sent a letter in accordance with instructions. He did not see them after that with my knowledge, but from time to time he received instructions from Mr. Nicolson what to do—to tell them they would not get £20 in the Eldorado bank, and as to the Beechworth bank that was too large, and as to the Wangaratta banks that one of them might be got at—all to that effect.

In point of fact that Sherritt did, from the very first time he told you he had an appointment with Joe Byrne to meet him at Sandy Creek, and long after he visited you, supply you with all the information he obtained in relation to the outlaws?—Yes, I believe he did. We have had this evidence about Sherritt’s telling you that Dan Kelly had called at his mother’s place—do you remember when you saw Sherritt next after that?—No.

Did you see him the next day?—No.

The day after?—I think not.

Did you ever hear afterwards that Dan Kelly had appeared at his mother’s place at eight o’clock?—Never, till here the other day.

Did you never hear that he had reported to you and Mr. Nicolson that the whole of the gang were outside that place?—No.

Did he tell you that Joe Byrne had called at his mother’s place when Aaron and himself were present?—Yes, 27th November. I think it was four days after the occurrence that he told me.

How do you arrive at that conclusion?—Because he mentioned the day they were there.

What grounds have you to swear that it was after?—Nothing but what he told me.

How can you fix the time at four days?—My reports will show it all. Here is a note of the reports, in this printed paper.

What date was it that Byrne was at Sherritt’s place?—I do not know.

How do you know it was four days afterwards?—Because they told me so.

Does your report say so?—I expect it does.

You say here on the 23rd that Byrne visited Sherritt’s hut?—I had not the information. It was my business to receive these reports and send them away as soon as possible.

This is a portion of your report?—That is abridged from my report. If it had been on the next morning I would have reported it at once. I would not have kept it three days and not act on it. Where is your report, that on the 23rd Jack was at Sherritt’s place, and you only received the information on the 27th?—If Mr. Nicolson was in Beechworth I would not have to report.

Then the probabilities are you had the information before, and you did not report on it till you met Mr. Nicolson?—Not at all.

Well, have you the data to show that you received that matter of the 23rd on the 27th—how do you know that?—I gave it to Mr. Nicolson if he was in Beechworth, if he was away I telegraphed to him.

Is it at all possible that you had that information on the 24th?—No.

Have you any diary?—No, only from time to time when I travelled. The Sherritt family always explained to me they did not give the information before, because they were frightened.

To Mr. Sherritt. Was it four days before you gave that information?—I do not think it was four days, but it was old information I know.

Were they both together when you gave the information?—No, I do not think they were both together.

Did you give it to Detective Ward before you saw Mr. Nicolson?—Yes, I believe I did.

Did you give the information to Detective Ward first, before seeing Mr. Nicolson?—I have seen them so often together, and I kept no notes.

If you spoke to Detective Ward, and Mr. Nicolson was not on Beechworth, did you as a rule together to Mr. Nicolson afterwards?—I might have walked to where Mr. Nicolson was with Detective Ward, but what I had to say to Mr. Nicolson, Detective Ward did not hear.
15643. Then in this case you suppose you gave the information the same day to Mr. Nicolson as to Detective Ward?—I think Detective Ward makes a mistake that he had information four or five days old, and I think he and Mullane and four mounted men came down—I forget what was the exact information.

15644. As to this point—can you remember how many days after Byrne being at your mother's place did you give information to Detective Ward?—It was not four days.

15645. Was it two days?—To the best of my recollection I believe it was two days.

16646. It may have been four?—Yes.

POLICE. 4 C

570

M. E. Ward. 10th Aug. 1881.

15647. To the Witness.—Did you at any time know of this information as to which Sherritt complains of bad treatment—that Byrne had visited his mother's without being seen by the cave party?—I heard about that.

15648. He said that he was subject to certain insults because he told the police that Joe Byrne had paid a visit to his mother's and they had failed to discover it. Have you reason to believe his statement was correct?—I made enquiries.

15649. At the time referred to by Jack Sherritt, when the cave party said it was impossible for Joe Byrne to have come home, Aaron Sherritt said it was Denny Byrne coming to deceive Jack Sherritt. From the time you first knew' Jack Sherritt, up to the time of the Gleurowan capture, had you any reason to believe he was dealing anything but honestly with you?—As far as I was concerned, Jack and I were not so friendly.

15650. I am not speaking about "friendly"; I want to know whether you, as an officer of police, thought he was conveying all the information he possibly could to enable you to capture the outlaws?—Well, I could not say he was conveying all he knew, but he did convey information that was correct.

15651. Have you any reason to believe he was acting in any other way than fairly to the police, according to the information he obtained?—No.

15652. You have no reason to doubt that he was doing all that lay in his power to assist the police to capture the outlaws?—I believe that.

15653. Did you at any time suspect him of being guilty of any crime at that time?—It was reported to me that he was guilty of a crime.

15654. What particular crime?—Taking a saddle from his brother.

15655. What date?—I cannot tell the date.

15656. When were you first informed he was suspected of having stolen the saddle?—On the day after it was stolen.

15657. On what day was it stolen?—I cannot tell either month or day.

15658. What year?—It would be during the time the cave party were out.

15659. You were informed he was suspected of stealing a saddle?—Yes.

15660. Did you take any steps to ascertain whether it was correct?—I went to Benalla, and had a consultation with the officers about it.

15661. Would Aaron's marriage be before this?—Yes.

15662. What time was the cave party broken up?—I think it would be in January or February 1880 I was informed about his being suspected of that.

15663. What steps did you take to ascertain whether it was correct?—No steps, except to report the matter to the officers, Messrs. Nicolson and Sadleir.

15664. Verbally or by writing?—Verbally.

15665. What did you tell them. That Aaron Sherritt told me that his saddle was stolen on a certain date—that himself and wife were at a merry-go-round, that they remained there for some time, and locked the door going out. On their return they found the place had been broken into, that the saddle and a gold watch were taken. I asked them did they suspect anybody, and he said, "I suspect Jack," I said, "Why would Jack do that?" And he said, "On account of my getting married to Miss Barry," I said, "I do not think Jack would do anything of the sort." He said, "There was a collar and tie of his found in the house."

15666. What did you do?—Nothing more.

15667. What was the impression conveyed to your mind by the statement of Sherritt?—I thought it was the jealousy between the two brothers.

15668. Did you think that Jack had really stolen it?—No, I did not think so at that time.

15669. Do you think he did since?—The saddle has been found since.

15670. Do you believe, from any information you have obtained since, that Jack stole the saddle?—No, I do not.

15671. Do you remember receiving this letter—[handing one to the witness]?—Yes.

15672. Do you identify the envelope?—Yes.

15673. Was that letter in the envelope?—Yes.

15674. From whom did you receive that?—From Johnny Sherritt I think.

15675. Not through the post?—No; I posted it myself after.

15676. What was your object?—Instructions from Mr. Nicolson, to show that it came through the post.
15677. For what purpose?—Arrangements he had made with Sherritt, to show that Sherritt was faithful to the gang.

15678. Can you account for the stamp on the envelope in that position—[handing the same to the witness]?—I could not tell the stamp. I put a stamp on it.

15679. Do you think that is the same stamp?—I could not tell that.

15680. Will you look at that stamp, and see whether there has not been a post-office date stamp under it?—I cannot account for that at all.

15681. Is the envelope in about the same condition as when you got it first?—No, the stamp was not obliterated at the time I put the stamp on it and put it into the post.

15682. How can you account for this stamp covering the post-office stamp?—I cannot account for it any way.

15683. When Sherritt handed you that letter what did he tell you?—I do not remember that.

15684. You do not remember the conversation that took place?—No.

15685. Do you think it is possible you received that through the post, and afterwards had an interview with Sherritt in relation to this letter?—No.

Mr. Sherritt.—I think I made a mistake; I think I did give that letter to Ward to post.

15686. By the Commission (to the witness).—Did Sherritt say whom he got it from?—Yes, he said a man came into the paddock and gave him the letter, and he did not know the man. He gave a description of the man. I described the man and sent the letter to Mr. Nicolson.

15687. Was that before or after Mr. Nicolson was acquainted with Sherritt?—I think after. Mr. Nicolson will be able to tell; I cannot give the date.

15688. I may tell you that the time that Sherritt handed you that letter was previous to Mr. Nicolson knowing Sherritt at all?—There should be a report attached to that letter—[The same was handed to the witness].—Since writing, the attached has been handed to me by Jack Sherritt. A man came to him in his father’s paddock and asked him to put a stamp on the letter and post it for him, and when the contents of it be published in the papers he said we will pay you well. Description of man:—About 30 years of age, 5 feet 7 high; wore moustache only; grey tweed suit. Jack never seen him before; he was on foot. Aaron has not come back yet.”

15689. That was really before Mr. Nicolson saw Sherritt?—I sent it to whatever officer was in charge.

15690. Did you hear the first time that Sherritt got to know Mr. Nicolson?—September, at the Agricultural Show.

15691. Would there be anything inconsistent in Sherritt’s swearing that when he saw Mr. Nicolson he knew it was Byrne?—He might have told him that, but I did not hear him tell it.

15692. He may have withheld it from you?—No doubt he did.

15693. You have been about the North-Eastern district a very long time?—I have.

15694. Except the suspicion that arose from the statement made by Aaron Sherritt, do you know of any other case against Jack Sherritt of a criminal nature?—No.

15695. Connected with this saddle, was not there a suspicion cast upon one of the young Byrnes of having stolen it?—Well, I never heard that there was.

15696. Was not the saddle found in Mrs. Byrne’s house?—Yes, there was a search warrant for some jewellery there.

15697. They found the side-saddle Sherritt was accused of having stolen?—Yes.

15698. Was not young Byrne suspected of having taken it there?—I did not trouble my head about the saddle at the time. I had too much to attend to at the time.

15699. You did not hear it said that Jack Sherritt was altogether away at the time the saddle was missed?—He was not, because I remember Mrs. Sherritt said that Jack was seen at the Hurdy Gurdy, on the Woolshed, that night.

15700. And Byrne was with him—did you hear that Byrne was missed from him?—I do not think it was Byrne; I heard of Burke.

15701. Did you hear that Byrne was missing from this Hurdy Gurdy on the night this saddle was stolen?—I might have heard this afterwards but not at the time.

15702. If you had heard it, it would have taken away your suspicion of Jack Sherritt?—But at the time I would not have taken any steps under any consideration.

15703. You said about a collar and tie found there—did you hear afterwards that Mrs. Sherritt admitted that this collar and tie were similar to what her husband wore?—No, but I know that both Jack and Aaron wore a lot of my clothes; in fact, they used to wear a lot of the same clothes.

15704. Your collar and tie might have been found there?—Yes, they might.

15705. Because of that, you would not like any one to believe you took the saddle?—No, I would not.

15706. You knew Jack Sherritt more or less from the time that he gave information to the police, and till after the capture at Glenrowan?—I did.

M. E. Ward, continued, 10th Aug. 1881.
15707. Did you know him at any time make any statement to you which afterwards proved to be untrue?—No, none that proved untrue.

15708. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was it dark when Sherritt came in to Beechworth that time?—Yes.

15709. The sun sets on the 13th November at 6.46 p.m.—[looking at the almanac]—Yes.

15710. If the sun sets at 6.46 p.m., what time would it be dark in that month?—After the sun is down, it would be nearly half-an-hour before it would be very dark.

15711. You say he came in after dark?—I am certain he did.

15712. What time did he arrive—can you fix the time?—No.

15713. How many miles had he to come?—About five miles.

15714. Are you sure about his having stated that Kelly was to be back—that he had been told that Kelly was to be back at eight o’clock?—I would not be positive, but I think so. I think he was not into our place till after eight, after the time appointed.

15715. Why do you think so—you did not say so when you were examined first?—I think it was after eleven o’clock when I gave him the money to go down.

15716. How long had he been in the office?—He might have been an hour in the office, not longer.

15717. Do you say I did not see him till nine?—I do not think you did, because I know it was eleven o’clock when I gave him the half-sovereign.

15718. Do you remember that Jack was very fearful at the time of being brought away by the outlaws to act as their scout?—I do, perfectly well.

15719. Do you recollect on that interview that night his speaking of having hidden himself after his sister gave this information?—Yes, he said he concealed himself until the night came on.

15720. By the Commission.—Are you quite sure of that?—I am; he said he would not start till after night.

15721. By Mr. Nicolson.—What is your impression of the period that elapsed from the time his sister gave the information till he started to Beechworth?—I could not say.

15722. Did he say he came at once or remained some time?—I cannot say.

15723. By Mr. Hare.—How was it when I came up to Beechworth, on the 2nd June, that you did not tell me that there was good information that Jack had told you—that you did not mention his name to me?—You had all the papers and everything in your possession.

15724. I had not read the papers when I saw you?—We had only a hurried meeting—I just spoke to you.

15725. Why did not you suggest that I should see Jack Sherritt, whose name you never mentioned to me, and I never heard till this enquiry, that he had given all this information?—You had all my reports and minutes before you.

15726. I could not look over all those and be able to give an opinion on him. You thought him so reliable?—We have nothing to contradict that; he had not been doing anything for me for some time prior to your coming there.

15727. At what time was he discharged?—He was not discharged, because he never got regular pay, and got very little altogether.

15728. How did you pay him?—Five shillings now, and 10s. at another time.

15729. And £5 at another?—He never got £5 from me.

15730. How long previous to my coming up there had he given you any information?—Not for months, I suppose. My sole agents were the other members of the family.

15731. Was it not your duty to have told me all this when I came up?—I thought you were in full possession of everything; he had not been working for me for months before. It was hard work to get any money for Aaron even. Mr. Nicolson told me once to discharge him; he said he could not get money.

15732. Why did you not tell me that Jack Sherritt had given such reliable information?—I suppose I never thought of it—you had all the papers.

15733. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was it not a fact that Jack had discontinued for a considerable time giving any information?—Yes; he was working at his business—a contract with Crawford.

15734. To Mr. Sherritt.—You said you gave information to Ward when you did not to Mr. Nicolson?—Yes, but Ward always received information from Mr. Nicolson how I was to act.

15735. By Mr. Sherritt (to Detective Ward).—Did I ever refuse to take any money for information?—Yes; you used to say, “Ward, you cannot afford it; I do not want money.” I must certainly say that the Sherritt family were the easiest people I ever met about money.

Mr. Nicolson.—I can say the same.

Mr. Hare.—I can say the same of Aaron.

15736. By Mr. Sherritt (to Detective Ward).—Did you ever give me or Aaron a collar and tie of yours?—I gave several ties and about a dozen collars.

15737. To both?—To both. Aaron I gave the ties to. I gave you clothes; I gave you coats.

15738. Did you ever give me a collar and tie?—I saw you wearing the ties that I gave Aaron.

15739. Did you ever give me ties?—Yes.
Patrick Mullane further examined.

15744. By the Commission.—Were you present at the time Jack Sherritt came in to tell Mr. Nicolson that Dan Kelly was down at his mother’s house?—I was not, or, if I was, I have no recollection whatever of it. I do not think I knew it for about a week afterwards, when Mr. Nicolson himself told me. I may say I never knew of Jack Sherritt bringing information, and I never saw him bring information in, except once, when I was with Aaron Sherritt.

15745. Then, in reality, you barely knew Jack Sherritt?—I knew him well, but not as an informant.

15746. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you recollect any conversation about it—you say I told you?—Yes.

15747. By the Commission.—Have you any idea of the conversation held at the time?—I remember the conversation between Mr. Nicolson and myself. He told me Jack Sherritt gave him certain information, and that he (Sherritt) was frightened the outlaws were going to take him away, and he said he thought he had given me this information, but I told him he had not.

15748. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember if anything was said about the hour at which those outlaws visited the house?—I do not.

15749. Have you your occurrence-book here?—Yes——[the same was produced].

15750. Will you turn up the 13th November 1879?—Yes.

15751. Will you read the occurrence entry of that day?—[The witness did so.].—There is no entry about this matter of Sherritt. Mr. Nicolson arrived on this day, but the entry of his arrival was neglected to be entered, because I have an entry of his departure next day.

Mr. Nicolson.—My memorandum is this:—“Thursday, 13 November ’79.—Office with Mr. Sadleir until 11 a.m., arranging various matters. To Beechworth; saw Sergt. Steele at Wangaratta. Beechworth. Inspector Smith and Detective Ward. Communication to Chiltern local land board to refuse Baumgarten’s applications for more land. Met Judge Skinner. Saw Sr.-Const. Flood. [Then comes my conversation with him.] Police at Yackandandah have Colt’s revolvers; ammunition scarce. Jack S—t arrived from Sebastopol, stating, while he was at his work in Crawford’s paddock, when his sister came to say that Dan Kelly called at Mrs. Sherritt’s; asked for Jack; when told he was out, he searched the rooms for him, carrying a revolver in his hand. Jack got his horse, and after dark rode from his work to Beechworth, much frightened; thinks they have come to carry him off with them. His sister Mary Jane was sent for by Mrs. Byrne on Tuesday, 11th, but did not go; said as excuse ‘she was sick.’ No doubt an interview wanted by outlaws with Jack, probably to anticipate his going to Evans’s Gap on Sunday week, 23 Nov. Jack’s return, 11 p.m., to Sebastopol, to visit Julian’s and pass the night there as if drunk, create a row and have it talked about, so as to account to outlaws for his absence.” I was afraid at that time, from the fear that this man showed of coming in contact with any of them, that he would betray himself. I can fill up that with my own statement if you wish it. That is the exact memorandum written by me at the time. I was not sent for to see him till about nine o’clock at night, and he left the office at eleven.

15752. By the Commission (to Mr. Sherritt).—Do you still adhere to your statement that you were in at seven o’clock?—Yes, I do; I am certain of that.

15753. How do you account for remaining—what were you doing till eleven o’clock?—I did not stop till that time.

15754. By Mr. Nicolson (to Mr. Sherritt).—You left the office at eleven?—No, I did not; I got into Beechworth between six and seven o’clock.

15755. It would not be dark then?—Yes, it would.

15756. Was it quite dark when you got in?—It was about dusk.

15757. By the Commission (to Mr. Sherritt).—Did you see Mr. Nicolson immediately you went in?—Yes, I did. It could not have been any more than that time, because when he looked at the clock in the room, he called to Detective Ward and said there was half-an-hour or three-quarters to go down there, and if Mr. Ward can refresh his memory a bit, he can think of the same words.

Mr. Nicolson.—He said he hid himself until dark.

15758. By the Commission (to Detective Ward).—Have you any recollection of Mr. Nicolson, referring to the clock?—No.

15759. Were you in when Sherritt met Mr. Nicolson?—Yes; there are two rooms, and I was in and out.
15760. He must have referred to the clock without your knowledge?—Yes, he might, but there is no clock in the room.
15761. To the witness.—Where is the clock?—In the verandah outside. It is not visible in the room;
the clock is outside the house.
15762. To Mr. Sherritt.—Had you any other means of ascertaining the time but by this clock?—Yes, the town clock—the Beechworth clock.
15763. You could see that when you came in?—Yes.
15764. Immediately after you heard that Kelly had been to your house, did you start for home then?—Yes.
15765. How long would it take you to come?—A quarter of an hour at the very outside.
15766. Through the bush?—Yes.
15767. How many miles is it?—About three miles the way I went; I did not go along the road.
15768. Is it not a very rough country?—Yes.
15769. To the witness.—Could you ride that in a quarter of an hour?—No, except I killed my horse.
15770. In half-an-hour?—In three-quarters of an hour with good riding. I rode it the other day fast in three-quarters of an hour.
15771. How many miles do you think it is?—Between four and five.
Mr. Sherritt.—I was in the paddock nearest Beechworth.
15772. By the Commission (to the witness). How far is that?—About four miles.
15773. To Mr. Sherritt.—Where was the horse?—In Crawford’s paddock.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday, the 23rd inst., at Eleven o’clock.

TUESDAY, 30TH AUGUST 1881.

Present:

The Honorable F. LONGMORE, M.L.A, in the Chair; E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P., G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A., G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.

F. C. Standish further examined.

15774. By the Commission.—You have read the evidence, I suppose?—I have.
15775. The Commission now wish you to say anything you desire to say with reference to it?—I have very little to add to the statements which I made on the occasion when I was examined here. It might take me nearly a month to comment on the gross mis-statements which have been made on me by Mr.
Nicolson and Mr. O’Connor, but I will just give you only three or four instances of the inaccuracies they have been guilty of in their evidence. In part of Mr. Nicolson’s evidence be alludes to the fact that our official relations had been strained for about three years. In reply to that I may state that, up to the time of his removal by order of the Ministry of the day, I always entertained the most friendly feelings towards him, and our official relations were always carrie on in a very pleasant way.

As for private relations, he is a man

I hardly ever saw except on duty, during the many years I have been in the police with him. He also states in his evidence that he is aware that it was owing to my representations that the Government decided to remove him from Benalla and to send Mr. Hare in his place. To that I give a most positive denial. As I stated in my evidence before, Mr. Ramsay sent for me one day to his office, and told me the Cabinet had discussed the question of Mr. Nicolson’s fitness for the duty he had been engaged on for nearly twelve months, and they had unanimously resolved to remove Mr. Nicolson and send Mr. Hare in his place. Now, I had no more to do with that than any gentleman present in this room; and, as I stated before, when he came down to see me he behaved in a most rude and impertinent manner, and whenever he met me in the street he cut me dead. I have not the slightest ill-feeling towards him or personal feeling towards him, but I feel it my feeling towards him or personal feeling towards him, but I feel it my hour?

Yes.

Could you ride that in a quarter of an hour?

No, except I killed my horse.

In half-an-hour?

Yes, he might, but there is no time, and then— I cannot state positively whether it was Mr. Nicolson or Mr. Sadleir that came up to me—at all events, I went and talked to Mr. Nicolson; and he told me he had been talking to Aaron Sherritt, and had every hope that Aaron Sherritt would assist us; and that very likely, if I held out to him the inducement that he would receive a considerable portion of the reward, he would work loyally for us, and that I had better see him myself, that could give him a personal guarantee, being the head of the department. I went up with Mr. Nicolson and had a talk with Aaron Sherritt, and told him if he put us in the way of catching the outlaws shortly, I would guarantee that he would receive a substantial portion of the Government reward.

15776. — This was at Beechworth!—It was after we left Beechworth—near Beechworth and Sebastopol, close to Mrs. Byrne’s house. After this conversation we decided to return home, and I see that in the face of this Mr. Nicolson has stated in his evidence that he reproved me for going to talk to Aaron Sherritt.

15778. By Mr. Nicolson.—Not “reproved”?—Well remonstrated then; and previous to that I knew nothing of Aaron Sherritt, and it was entirely at Mr. Nicolson’s request I went to talk to him.

15779. By the Commission.—As a matter of fact, did you, in the presence of some of the police, make overtures to Sherritt?—We were standing about 100 yards off, and Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson had been speaking to him before I did, and I saw them talking to him.

15780. The statement was that you endeavored to negotiate with Sherritt in the presence of some others?—That is utterly untrue. I beg to state that personally I have no ill feeling against Mr. Nicolson, and it is probable that the loss of memory, which certainly is very palpable in him, may have induced him to make those statements, believing them to be true. I may add that I have read through the whole of Mr. O’Connor’s evidence, and really it is so beneath contempt that I shall not offer any comments on it. The statements he makes about me are utterly false. Amongst other things he stated that when he consented to take the black trackers up in pursuit of the murderers of Aaron Sherritt, he asked me to order a special carriage for the convenience of his wife and sister-in-law. Not only is that untrue, but if he had asked me I would have declined, because I do not think men being despatched on important duty should be allowed to be accompanied by their wives and families.

15781. Have you anything further to add?—I may also state that I read Mr. Winch’s evidence, given lately, and I see amongst other things he states that it was a well-known fact that for some years I was entirely under the control of Mr. Hare, or words to that effect; and I think if you ask Mr. Hare he will convince you of the utter falsity of that statement. Mr. Winch moreover states that shortly after I left the police I had made an apology to him for my coolness and my manner to him for the last few months, or words to that effect. Whereas the true facts of the case are that, immediately after I left the police, I met Mr. Winch in the Club, and he followed me up to my bedroom, and began crying and saying how deeply he regretted that any ill feeling had existed between us, and he hoped that unpleasant feeling would come to an end. As I am not at all a vindictive man I shook hands with him, and said, “Let bygones be bygones”; but still I am well aware that when I was up in Benalla he circulated some very unpleasant and untrue statements about me.

15782. Is there anything further?—I have nothing further to add. Of course I have confined myself to a few of the mis-statements that have been made about me.

The Chairman.—Do you wish to put any questions, Mr. Nicolson?

15783. By Mr Nicolson (to the witness).—Do you recollect my inspecting the North-Eastern district in 1877?—You were inspecting superintendent, and used to inspect all the districts then.

15784. I inspected the district in 1877. Have you, since you gave your evidence, seen my reports about Greta and other places in that district with reference to the Kelly gang and the outrages, the horse stealing and cattle stealing, and my suggestions?—That was a good many years ago. I have not had access to any official communications for nearly a year now.

15785. Do you not recollect my report, for instance, of Greta being under-manned, and my suggesting the removal of Constable Thom?—I have no positive recollection of that. Of course you have access to all the papers, and have been living on them for some months, but I cannot charge my memory with them.

15786. Do you recollect, after my return to Melbourne, that it was the custom that I had an interview with you in your private room, about the districts I had just inspected and reported on?—I remember I used to receive your reports and forward them to the officer in charge of the district.

15787. In addition to that, do you remember private interviews?—Yes, and you were always singularly reticent about the business.

15788. Do you recollect my saying to you once about the district, that I thought you should send me back again?—No, I have no recollection of that.

15789. I pointed out to you the tone of the people, speaking about the cases of horse stealing, that they were utterly beyond the constable, being carried on by the Greta people—horses carried into New South Wales, which they could not make anything of; and that I should be sent back to see how the arrangement made with Mr. Singleton in New South Wales was acting?—I have no recollection of that.

15790. After seeing the evidence about the Seymour bank, do you still persist in stating that I sent no information that that attack was premeditated on the banks, in the North-Eastern district?—Yes, I stated that in my evidence.

15791. Having seen the correspondence and letters from Williamson, in Pentridge, to you, and what was sent up to me about the bank in Seymour, do you still persist in that statement; because your memory may have failed you in that?—My memory is better than yours, at all events. I may point out that events that happened four years ago, and I having had no access to official documents since then, cannot have made the impression on my mind that they have on yours.

15792 You made these statements against me at the beginning of this enquiry?—I stated you had... information that the banks were to be stuck up.

15793. In the North-Eastern district?—Yes.

15794. Now the correspondence has been unearthed, showing that it was only the Seymour bank, and I ask you if you still say the same thing in the face of the correspondence?—You informed that one of the banks in the North-Eastern district was to be stuck up. I took all the necessary precautions about Seymour.

15795. That is not the question. I admit that; but do you still persist in saying that I sent you information about the banks in the North-Eastern district?—Yes.

15796. I am not imputing anything, but are not you confounding the one bank with all the banks in the district?—I adhere to my former statement.

15797. When you spoke, in the last instance, about the original cases and the difficulty in the North-Eastern district, you said it was the lawlessness of the district?—There is no doubt it has been a most lawless district for years.

15798. What was that caused by?—By the class of people who inhabited that district.

15799. Was not there the means of preventing that—was not the cause the want of police?—I think not.

15800. That is not the original cause, and if there was a mode of dealing with that, you think not?—I think not.

15801. You say in your evidence, with reference to the party at Sebastopol, that we were a day or two late after the fair; so, after consulting with Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson, we decided it was no use carrying on further, and returned to Beechworth?—Yes.

15802. What did you mean—it was no use carrying matters further?—The information we procured there showed we had been misinformed about the outlaws, and what was reported to us had happened two or three days before.

15803. What about further search in that country?—It would have been simply madness. Of course when a large body of police moved, even at an early portion of the day, the news would spread all over the district.

15804. Then you agree that the use of police in that manner, on that occasion and former ones, was unnecessary?—We thought we had a chance against the outlaws, and that was why we proceeded there; but from subsequent information received I had not the slightest doubt we were grossly misled by the man who furnished the information.

Mr. Nicolson.—I do not dispute that in the least.

15805. By the Commission.—I would like you to just glance over that correspondence—[handing papers to the witness, who read the same]?—I remember this correspondence well; I have looked over it.

15806. Do you still adhere to that statement—that the information came from Mr. Nicolson?—Yes, I do.

15807. After reading the document?—Yes.

15808. Will you look at the date of that document from Williamson?—It reached me about the 30th November 1878.

15809. No. I think you will see the date at the head of Williamson’s document?—[The witness examined it]—The 15th November 1878.

15810. What is the date upon which you returned that document to Mr. Nicolson, you will see it on the back I think?—The 28th November 1878.

15811. Then you had that information from the 15th to the 28th in your possession according to that?—But it passed through several hands before it came through mine. I cannot tell the date it reached me.

15812. You sent it on the 28th November?—Yes, to Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson.

15813. What is the date of Mr. Nicolson’s telegram in reply?—The 29th.

15814. And the desire he expressed in that telegram?—That one or two men should be sent.

15815. That is that information was given in reference to the Seymour bank, and one or two men should be sent?—Yes, which was done.

15816. Then the question is—do you still adhere to your statement that you heard from Mr. Nicolson that the Kellys were going to rob the bank?—Yes, I do, certainly.

15817. In the face of those documents?—In the face of those documents—yes.

15818. In what way did Mr. Nicolson give you the information?—I cannot remember, positively, whether it was by private letter or by telegram. Of course you must see that a man who has been out of the department for nearly a year, and has not had access to one single document, must be completely at a disadvantage as compared with a man who has been poring over every document he can lay his hand on.

15819. I agree with that—but you still adhere to your statement?—Yes.

15820. Those documents would be still in existence?—They might, or not.

15821. How could they be destroyed—they would be official?—Private and confidential notes I used not to file; I kept them in my own possession.

15822. Would anything be private and confidential from the officer next in rank to yourself as to the movements of the outlaw gang?—Certainly; most of those were marked “Private and confidential.”
15823. Still they would be documents belonging to Government?—Those special documents relating to the Kelly business I used to keep in my own cupboard.

15824. By Mr. Nicolson.—You say you believe the information that Mr. Sadleir had upon which we were out that time was correct, but we were a day or two after the fair, and it was no use carrying matters further—did you come to the conclusion then that such open search parties were no use?—I thought, unless we had very good grounds to go on, sending search parties without any definite ground to go on was a mistake.

15825. In question No. 39 you say, “The morning Mr. Nicolson reached Euroa, on the morning of Tuesday; and after some hours’ delay, he started off with a party of police, and returned the next day without any result.” What grounds have you for saying I started after some delay?—I was informed so by the police.

15826. What reasons had you—can you name them?—I know perfectly well there was that delay, and it was told me by several members of the police force—that there was unnecessary delay.

15827. You speak in question No. 47 about the “great disadvantage under which we labored, viz., that the moves of the police in Benalla, Wangaratta, Mansfield, and Beechworth were closely watched by the numerous friends and sympathizers of the outlaws—at Benalla especially; and I may state that if I had determined, without consulting anybody, in the middle of any night to come down to the barracks by myself and to start a party of police, which I could have done in half an hour, I firmly believe that before the men had left the barracks some of those spies would have been galloping off to the outlaws.” Do you consider that, in the face of all that knowledge, that it was good generalship on your part to start parties of police at Benalla for upwards of seven months?—I do not know what you are alluding to.

15828. In the face of this question No. 47, do you think it was good generalship continually to start parties of police for upwards of seven months?—I left off the practice of sending out the search parties after I had been there some time and found they were no use.

F. C. Standish, continued.
30th Aug. 1881.

15829. There were search parties sent up till May?—We only started them when we thought there was some chance of getting them, but not merely on vague information or on the hope of catching them.

15830. What definite information did you ever get on any occasion?—When I got information I kept it to myself, and acted upon it.

15831. I am asking the question—what definite information did you ever get on which you started search parties?—When you were in charge you were always galloping about over the country without any object.

15832. I am not talking about that; what definite information did you get?—I received information which I thought reliable, and I acted on it.

15833. You say in question No. 54—”Was that Mr. Ramsay?”—No, Mr. Berry was Chief Secretary at the time; and Mr. Nicolson being next in seniority, I had to send him up, though I confess I had but little faith in his energy.”—Well, you did very little all the time you were there. You hardly did anything all the time. You displayed what is called masterly inactivity.

15834. Did I show “masterly inactivity” during the time I was previously there?—At the time you were galloping about apparently for no object?

15835. When did I show the “masterly inactivity”—after June 1879?—Yes.

15836. But here you say in June 1879, “I had to send him up, though I confess I had but little faith in his energy.” You spoke of my want of energy previous to that?—Not previous to that. Before I went up there, you were galloping about the country the whole time.

15837. You spoke of a want of energy previous to my going up the second time. I had been only there once before—where was my want of energy?—You doing nothing all the time you were there the second time.

15838. That is a period afterwards—I require an answer?—Well, there is no doubt that the bad health you suffered from impaired your energy—you were in very bad health when you left Euroa.

15839. But the point is that you speak of your having had little faith in my energy when I went up in June, the second time?—Well, I had not much faith in it.

15840. You say I was galloping about uselessly the first time?—Yes.

15841. Then when did I have the opportunity to show want of energy before the second time?—That refers to the second period.

15842. You spoke, in question 57, about my “absurd reticence”?—I could never get anything out of you.

15843. Were you not in the habit of showing my letters, marked “confidential,” to other persons?—I was not.

15844.5. Did you not do so?—I have no recollection of doing so.

15846. Did you not show them to Mr. Hare?—I might have shown him one.

15847. Do you not recollect my speaking about it at Benalla, and you said you would show them to any one you liked?—I was at liberty to do so.

15848. I am not speaking of that. I ask, did you not show to persons my letters marked “confidential”?—I may have shown one or two to Mr. Hare. I am not certain that I did that. I never showed them to any one else that I remember. I never showed those letters to anyone but Mr. Hare, who had been with me in the Benalla district for six months. We used to talk over the matter.

15849. In question 71 it says, “You gave evidence of what occurred on the 25th and 26th of March, before the outlaws were captured, and you see Mr. Nicolson was in charge on the 25th of May, but Mr. Hare succeeded him early in June, therefore it is most important that you should fix the dates, because you see Mr.
Hare succeeded him a couple of days after?”—About a week before Mr. Nicolson was removed from Benalla,
Mrs. got up early to look for cows, and when passing an unoccupied house, about six or seven miles from Beechworth, she saw Joe Byrne getting on his horse. She said, “What are you doing here, Joe?” and his reply was, “Looking for Aaron, to shoot him.” She had some further conversation with him and he rode away, and Mrs. made her way into Beechworth and informed Detective Ward, who telegraphed the fact to Benalla. The result was that that night Mr. Nicolson, Mr. Sadleir, and Mr. O’Connor went to Beechworth without the trackers, saw Mrs., who stated what she had seen, and decided it was no use going after him, and they returned to Benalla next day.”—You recollect the telegram from Benalla, which you brought down to the railway station, Spencer street, to me?—Yes.

15850. That was on the 26th of May. Are you not aware that was on the Saturday following, two or days after that, I saw this Mrs. alluded to, that it was immediately after my leaving the district. Mr. Hare superseded me the following Saturday?—Yes, that telegram I handed to you at time railway station was nearly a month before you left Benalla.

15851. No, it was just immediately before?—No, I beg your pardon, it was when you came down to remonstrate. The telegram I alluded to is the one that came before you at the detective office, and it was brought up to me.

15852. That was just a few days prior to Mr. Hare superseding me?—He did not supersede you for nearly a month after the Chief Secretary decided it. When you were in Mr. Ramsay’s presence with me, you asked to be allowed to remain there another month, and he acceded to your request.

15853. Did you state to Mr. Hare, about the year 1863, that, in all probability, if you left the force, he would succeed you?—Not in 1863, I think; it must be long after that.

15854. Did you make that statement at any time about ten years back?—Mr. Hare was offered a superintendship in New South Wales, by Mr. Fosbery, and he consulted me, and I said I thought he had better stay here; that he might some day be Chief Commissioner of Police.

15855. Do you recollect on your return from New Zealand some years ago that I spoke to you of time prospect I had of entering the constabulary there, and you made some complimentary remark that you would object to my doing so?—I do not recollect.

15856. Do you recollect stating to me that some time I might probably succeed you, if you left?—I never made any such statement.

15857. When you were in charge of the district with Mr. Hare, did you complain that you were short of men or found you were short of men that time?—No.

15858. You had a large reinforcement, I mean after I left?—Most of the men were sent whilst you were there.

15859. There was a reinforcement of about thirty or forty men and military?—The military were sent, but that was in opposition to my wishes; the Government decided to do it.

15860. Did you keep a sentry in front of your office, at the Benalla barracks?—No.

15861. Not for any time?—No.

15862. Are you quite sure of that?—Quite.

15863. Was there any sentry?—There were men in barracks all round.

15864. Was there not a man told specially off for your office?—No.

15865. With reference to that appearance of Aaron Sherritt at Sebastopol, whom did you say you saw with this man?—You were talking to him the first time I saw him.

15866. Are you sure of that?—Quite sure of that. I asked some of the men, “Who is that man that Mr. Nicolson is talking to?” and they did not know.

15867. Are you sure it was not Mr. Sadleir that brought him to you?—No; you took me to him.

15868. You remember the cottage?—Yes, perfectly well. Supposing our men were just here, you were out about there—[indicating the position]—in the bush, talking to Aaron Sherritt when I first saw you.
I could see you talking to him from where I was standing.

15869. I was standing near you?—You took me to him.

15870. Are you sure that Mr. Sadleir did not bring him up to you?—No, I think Mr. Sadleir came and told me that you wanted to speak to me, and then you took me up to Sherritt, who was close by. You first spoke about the chances of his putting away the outlaws for a consideration; and you said if I gave him a personal assurance that he would get a considerable portion of the reward, you had little doubt he would help us.

15871. You are sure that was not one of the members of the police force?—No; it was Aaron Sherritt and yourself.

15872. Who was it spoke to him about the proposal as to the betrayal of the outlaws in your presence; you did not address this man?—That subject was never brought up on that occasion about one being pardoned; it was subsequently—many months afterwards—but not by Aaron Sherritt.

15873. What promise was given to Sherritt?—That he would get a substantial portion of the reward if he put away the outlaws.

15874. Was there any allusion to pardon?—No.

15875. Do you recollect when you first came to town, the first time after you relieved me, my speaking to you about Aaron Sherritt in your room—in the adjoining room?—Yes.

15876. Mentioning to you that that was a sort of man that would be useful to us in capturing those outlaws?—Yes, I remember that.

15877. Do you recollect on that occasion my talking to you about the mistake made in talking (meaning the impropriety) of talking to that man on that occasion at Sebastopol?—Certainly not, because it was you that took me up to him.

15878. Are you sure he was not taken up to you?—He was not; you took me up to him. I had not the slightest idea who he was till you told me.

15879. You do not recollect on that occasion my pointing out the impropriety of one of the officers or members of the police speaking of a promise of pardon to some one in your presence, without authority from you?—There was no allusion made to the pardon when I was talking to Sherritt in your presence.

15880. About Mr. O’Connor’s evidence being untrue, about his asking for a carriage for his wife and sister?—There is not a word of truth in it.

15881. Why then was the carriage sent up?—The first-class carriage was sent up for the officers.

15882. At whose request?—I had an order which I procured from the Chief Secretary and the Minister of Railways, Mr. Gillies, and I took the order to the railway station, and had the train sent out to pick up Mr. O’Connor and the black trackers at Essendon.

15883. Was it usual, on trips for such duty, to put a first-class carriage on for the officers?—I never ordered one.

15884. You have seen special trains at different times?—Considering an officer was in charge it was only fair he should have one.

15885. Do you remember going to Sebastopol with me—was there a carriage on or only a van?—No, only a van.

15886. Was that not the usual practice?—What has that to do with it? Mr. O’Connor’s statement is a deliberate untruth. Not only he never asked me for a special carriage, but if he had asked me I would have said I could not accede to it.

15887. And yet a first-class carriage was supplied, which was quite unusual?—That had nothing to do with me.

16888. My want of energy you spoke of and my inefficiency—will you tell, before the whole Commission, of any occasion on which I showed any inefficiency previous to this Kelly business?—No; I alluded to the last twelve months you were there. You apparently did nothing and threw away many chances.

15889. Will you tell me one instance where I ever failed in my duty—mention one?—The evidence that I have read, taken before the Commission, shows you threw away numbers of chances during the twelve months.

15890. Tell the Commission one instance, where I was employed in the police force, in which I failed. It is a disagreeable thing for me to ask any question of the kind about myself, but, when I have such charges against me, it is unavoidable?—When I used the words “want of energy” I did not mean it to apply to the time you were there by yourself. No doubt you were then very active galloping about the country great deal of unnecessary riding about.

15891. By the Commission.—I might state that we have a report of yours here about the sticking-up of the Euroa bank, dated Benalla, 15th December 1878, in which you say at the beginning, “I have the honor to report that I proceeded from Melbourne to Euroa, on the morning of the 12th instant. I there met Mr. Nicolson, and at once saw that he was utterly prostrated by bodily fatigue and mental anxiety, and that he was entirely unfitted for the duties he was engaged in, and at once telegraphed to Superintendent Hare, directing him to proceed at once to meet me at Euroa. He arrived in the course of the evening.” Then at the end you say what appears to be important, taken in connection with the questions that have been asked.—“With reference to the remarks I have made which may be prejudicial to Mr. Nicolson’s judgments, I may here report that there is not a more zealous, intelligent, and efficient officer in the force, nor one in whom I have more thorough confidence”—I always had that opinion, but there is no doubt he was very jaded and poorly, and his eyes were bad.

15892. That is he was injured by hard work, going through the country?—Yes.

15893. The time you spoke of his want of energy is June 1879?—Yes.

15894. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you remember that letter signed “Connor” being shown to you by Mr. Graves—[inserted above]?—Yes, I recollect his handing it to me.
15895. Do you recollect my stating I believed it was written by Wallace?—I remember your saying so.
15896. Do you recollect mentioning that to Mr. Graves, and Mr. Graves stating he had not seen Wallace for several months?—No. He told me it was not Wallace.
15897. Did Mr. Graves say he had not seen Wallace for several months?—I believe he did. I will not be quite certain.
15898. It is in your letter written at the time—do you recollect Mr. Graves denying that he had seen Wallace?—I think he told me he had not seen him for some time.
15899. By Mr. Hare.—May I ask you to read at question 1600—will you read that telegram from Mr. Fosbery to me?—[The witness did so.]
15900. You remember that telegram?—I do.
15901. Will you read the next paragraph?—[The witness did so, as follows:—] “I was then holding the rank of an inspector of police in Melbourne, and I consulted with Captain Standish, and told him that I felt inclined to accept the appointment, as it was better than the one I held. He said to me, “I do not want to stand in your way, but I think you are foolish to leave this colony after the services you have rendered. The Government have a good opinion of you, and I feel sure that if anything happens to me you will get my appointment.”
15902. Is that correct?—It is correct.
15903. You remember that?—I do, perfectly.
15904. There is no promise of the appointment there to me?—No. How could I promise the appointment?
15905. I want to ask if you recollect my being sent up—selected to go after Power?—Yes.
15906. Will you state to the Commission the circumstances under which you ordered me up there?—Mr. Hare was superintendent of police at the depot, and certain negotiations were carried on between myself and gentlemen in the North-Eastern district, which resulted in a certain person, who is now no more, promising to put away Power. For that purpose I selected Mr. Hare and Mr. Nicolson to accompany him, and Mr. Montfort, who was then sergeant of police at Wangaratta, and they started under the guidance of the informant, who led them to the place where Power was supposed to be camped out; but he was afraid of the consequences, and he left, and the search party had to forage about near Quin’s house. They were in a swamp the greater part of the night.
15907. I want to know who was in charge of that party?—Well, Mr. Nicolson was the senior.
15908. Who had the organization of that party?—You had.
15909. Did I ask you to allow me to take Mr. Nicolson with me?—I think so—yes.
15910. Do you remember saying that Sir James McCulloch had directed you to send me up there?—Yes, he did. I had a long talk with him.
15911. Do you remember saying, “I leave you to make your own arrangements, and take with you whoever you please”?—Yes.
15912. Whom did I select?—Mr. Nicolson.
15913. Do you remember my coming to you and telling you that Mr. Nicolson wished to go with me, and asked if you had any objection to his going?—I remember that perfectly.
15914. Do you remember my taking some men from my own district, and sending them up there?—I am not positive on that point.
15915. By Mr. Nicolson.—Before this party went up, did I not volunteer to go?—I think you wrote to me from Kyneton, where you were stationed at the time, offering to go.
15916. Did you accept my offer?—Ultimately I did.
15917. Did Mr. Hare and I go up there once or twice?—I think only the once, as far as I remember.
15918. Do you not recollect our going up in the first instance to see the man, to have an interview with the man, and our returning, and then going up within a week or a month?—I do not remember that. I thought you only went up once, but I am not positive.
15919. Do you not recollect our going up once, and then I returning again to my district at Kyneton to wait until the news should come?—Well, it is so many years ago I cannot be sure.
15920. Do you not recollect writing to me when we came down. I told you it was all arranged, or Mr. Hare told you that the matter was all right, and about a week or so afterwards you wrote to me to Kyneton, saying you were sorry you could not accept my services in consequence of Dr. Ford’s statement about my health?—Yes, I recollect that.
15921. Does not that bring to your recollection that we went up twice?—You may, but I do not recollect.
15922. Do you recollect my coming down and seeing you the following morning after you wrote that letter?—You may have done so.
15923. And telling you that Doctor Ford said I could go if I felt strong enough, and stating that I was quite fit to go?—No, I do not.
15924. I did go?—Yes.
15925. Did you not tell me when I volunteered to go, that you were very glad, and you would send Mr. Hare up to drive me, to save the jolting in the coach, and perhaps Mr. Hare would be of some use to me?—No; Mr. Hare was the man I selected for the duty.
15926. Do you recollect about the driving up in the buggy and the jolting in the coach?—No.
15927. Do you recollect speaking to me a month or two before Sir George Bowen left this colony, to the effect that he had remarked what a fine young man Mr. Hare was; that he had captured Power, and you replied that there was not much in that, as Mr. Nicolson had captured Power?—That is not the case; I ever said such a thing.

579

15928. And that Sir George Bowen would not listen to you, saying Mr. Hare had told him he had captured the man, and you were mistaken?—I never said such a thing to you.

15929. Will you kindly look at that letter?—This is the letter alluded to in Mr. Graves’s evidence
(my own letter, dated May 5th 1880). [The witness read the same.]

15930. Mr. Graves states in that that Wallace had nothing to do with the writing of the letter, and that he (Mr. Graves) “had neither seen nor held communication with him for many months.” Do you recollect
Mr. Graves stating that to you?—I do perfectly.

15931. Is that statement of yours correct?—Quite correct.

Mr. Nicolson.—Well, I do not wish to pay you a compliment, but I believe your evidence to be correct in preference to believing Mr. Graves’s contradiction.

15933. By Mr Sadleir.—In sending Mr. Nicolson up to Benalla, on hearing of the murders, was it the intention to supersede me in any way?—No; but for an arduous duty of that kind it was necessary to send somebody up, because you would not have had time to look after your office affairs.

15934. You did not look upon it as superseding me?—Not in the least.

15935. Nor when you went up there with Mr. Hare, was there no superseding me in the intent?—Not in the least.

15936. You think the duties of the district were quite enough to occupy my time?—Yes; an enormous district like that would take up all your time.

15937. But I was bound to give all the assistance I could in such a case?—So you always did.

15938. Would you put me down as the responsible officer in the Kelly business at any time?—
During the whole time I was there, Mr. Hare and you and I used to discuss matters together, and have a kind of council.

15939. To be absolutely responsible for business of that sort, you must have the power to follow your own judgment?—Yes.

15940. Was my position there that of the responsible officer in the Kelly business?—No; because you must see yourself that it was necessary to have somebody to conduct the ordinary affairs, because in the charge of an enormous district like yours, if you had been in charge of the Kelly pursuit also, you would have had to neglect the supervision of your district.

15941. By the Commission.—How far would that authority rest with Mr. Sadleir, because we have it in evidence that when Mr. Nicolson was in the district it was the duty of Mr. Sadleir to act in the absence of Mr. Nicolson on any information he received. When that happened would it be necessary for him to communicate with Mr. Nicolson?—If Mr. Nicolson was at Benalla, of course it would be, but if he was away, some way off, and he could not, communicate with him by telegram, it was Mr. Sadleir’s duty to act upon any valuable information he might have received.

15942. By Mr. Sadleir.—I accept that position. Will you state (you have known me since you joined the service in 1858) what is my character as an officer, publicly and privately?—Privately you and I have always been on the best of terms, and publicly I have always found you a very active and efficient officer, and have never had any fault to find with you.

15943. You say an efficient officer?—A very efficient officer.

15944. What is the practice of the police service as regards records in the constables’ sheets in the country: is it to make them known to constables or not?—No; they are not communicated to the constables, except when a man has done a very gallant or heroic deed. He is then informed that an entry has been made, but that is only if the man has really distinguished himself, and I think that is only right.

15945. The rule of the service not to make known an ordinary matter that may be ente

15952. By the Commission.—At question 8314 there is another portion of the evidence, a report of Senior-Constable Kelly. I think before you answer that question you ought to be seized of the whole circumstances of the case. Do you think it would have been prudent for Kelly to take charge of the Greta station after the very active part he had taken in prosecuting the outlaws and sympathizers?—I will give my candid opinion. In the case of a man who has done such very active duty, and been so important an agent instrumental in the destruction of the Kelly gang, and who is, moreover, a married man, I really cannot see any impropriety in his applying for transfer.

15953. Do you know the entry that Mr. Sadleir made on Kelly's sheet?—I have read it here. I do not see, after being two years there, and working very hard the whole time, any harm in Kelly’s applying for transfer to another district.

15954. To Mr. Sadleir.—Was Kelly made aware of that record on his sheet?—No, I was not at liberty to make him aware of it; but when he gave his answer in his evidence, at questions 8593 and 8600, he had seen it, "Did you distinctly understand, from what Mr. Sadleir told you, that it was to be only a temporary remove to Greta?—Yes, temporary. "You knew that?—Yes. "Have you any idea of the meaning of "temporary"?—I expected four or five months." And there were also promises of promotion held out to him as far as I had power.

15955. By Mr. Sadleir (to the witness).—Was it an extravagant thing for me to expect Kelly to go and do his duty even in the face of danger—looking at it from my point of view, I having to manage the district, was it unreasonable that I should put a man like Kelly for a short time in a dangerous position, he being the only efficient man I had?—I do not see why you should not have directed him to go there.

15956. Then it all amounts to this, that, in your opinion, I may have been harsh; but may I not have been justified in making the entry?—The officer in charge has to exercise his power on his own judgment.

15957. Is it a mark of tyrannical or harsh dealing?—I never knew you to be harsh with anybody under you.

By the Commission.—Here is Kelly’s own evidence—[reading question 8333 above]. That is the officer's report, and now we will read Kelly’s report, when asked to remain at Greta—[reading questions 8314 et seq. above]. On that comes the memorandum that Mr. Sadleir put on the papers.

Mr. Sadleir.—But you must take that in connection with question 8590.

15958. The Chairman.—The question is, whether that was a fair report to make on the sheets, after the services the man had performed. (To the witness)—Have you any opinion to offer?—

Mr. Sadleir.—I beg your pardon, will you read question 8590 in addition to what you have read? [Questions 8590 to 8598 were read to the witness.]

15959. By Mr. Sadleir (to the witness).—Was it an unreasonable thing to ask Kelly to take charge of the Greta station, as a temporary arrangement, under those circumstances?—Well, I think it was reasonable on your part to order him there; but still I do not quite concur in the unfavorable entry in his record sheet.

Mr. Sadleir.—I wish to state that later circumstances have come to my knowledge showing that Senior-Constable Kelly—like myself, Sergeant Whelan, and other men, who were very anxious, and took a prominent part in the Kelly captures—was thoroughly exhausted after the business was over; and I think, if he had been as fresh as he was in the earlier stage of the proceedings, he would not have dreaded taking charge of Greta or any other station; and, in so far as my overlooking the trial and exhaustion he had undergone is concerned, I now admit that I possibly did do him an injustice. I have no hesitation in saying he is a first-class man, and one whom I would like to have serving with me anywhere.
The witness withdrew.

F. C. Standish further examined.

15960. By the Commission.—There is a very important matter before the Commission at present—the disagreements that took place between the officers—that has come out most prominently. I think in your own evidence it was very prominent. Can you tell the Commission what led to those disagreements originally?—With the exception of Mr. O'Conner, I had no disagreement with any officer in the police force until I had a disagreement with Mr. Nicolson owing to his having been ordered by the Government to leave Benalla and Mr. Hare to take his place. I never had an angry word with Mr. Nicolson in my life, and had almost a friendly feeling; but owing to what occurred afterwards, which I have spoken of, there were no longer terms of friendship.

15961. Do we understand that the officers were agreed in their different duties upon everything before that time?—It is possible that some officers who were not selected for duty which they thought they were fitted for may have been aggrieved, but those reports never reached my ears.

15962. That is an extraordinary statement after the evidence you gave?—The only evidence bearing on that point is the feud that ensued between Mr. Nicolson and myself, and also the disagreement between myself and Mr. O'Conner; but that was not an official, but entirely a private matter.

15963. The first we find of it in your evidence is in question 15, where you intimate you had confidence at one time in him, but you had not afterwards?—Certainly, I stick to that most firmly.

15964. Now, if you look at question 57, “Mr. Berry instructed me to do all I could to reduce the expenditure,” and so on?—That was after he returned from the embassy.

15965. At the bottom of the page—question 57—I see, “It is not a chase of months or weeks, but of days and hours.” That was his favorite utterance to me on every possible occasion; and, from information which I have received from time to time, I believe there is no doubt whatever that nearly the whole time Mr. Nicolson was in charge the outlaws were hanging about Greta and Glenrowan.” Did you know anything at all of the outlaws being there during the time Mr. Nicolson was in the district?—Most of this information reached me from certain private sources; but, subsequent to the destruction of the gang at Glenrowan, I had information, from time to time, that led me to believe that they were about Greta, and all the information I got I always conveyed to Mr. Nicolson.

15966. I put these questions because in your evidence you spoke so strongly against Mr. Nicolson with reference to this that I thought there must be something more than the passing view of it?—No; I tell you fairly that I was very dissatisfied at the long time during which nothing was done in that district, and I spoke to Mr. Nicolson about it, and wrote to him about it.

15967. In question 71 I see, “Towards the end of April 1880 I had some conversation with the then Chief Secretary, Mr. Ramsay, on the Kelly business. He asked me my opinion how things were going on, and I said I thought that nothing was being done now, and that beyond employing reliable spies I did not see what good Mr. Nicolson would ever effect.” Also, in question 76, you make a very strong reference to him again?—Yes, and every word of that is true.

15968. If you look again at question 96, you will see quite a different aspect put on it. “Do you believe ‘that the police officers have shown a want of generalship,’ all or any; and, if so, particularise the ones; if you do say they showed a want of generalship, do you believe they did or not?”—None of those who were actively engaged in the pursuit of the Kellys did.” That seems contradictory after the statements you made with reference to Mr. Nicolson. You come on then to question 100, almost immediately after, “Do you think Mr. Nicolson showed want of generalship?—I do.” In what way do you think so?—As I have stated already, he seemed to do nothing, and did not seem to act on information he received. He seemed to do nothing the whole of the later period he was there.

15969. In your evidence yesterday you condemned him very severely for galloping about the first time without any object in view apparently?—He was very active and energetic, but he was always riding about with a lot of men when he was first up there, until the time of the Euroa bank robbery.

15970. Of course he left almost immediately after that?—The day after he came in; and he was evidently worried and jaded, and his eyesight bad; he was quite knocked up, and it was on that account I sent him down.

15971. Was there any result at all from that galloping about?—It seems not.

15972. You mean he never seemed to find out anything of the Kellys. Did you alter that system when you went up?—I did. After conferring with Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir, we came to the conclusion that sending parties galloping about the country who were known to everybody was a mistake, and, unless we had real information, that it would be foolish to send parties galloping about the country—that it had no object.

15973. Did you consider that Mr. Hare had reliable information the first time he was up, when he sent parties out?—Yes. Mr. Hare came the day after me.

15974. Did you always go upon reliable information then?—Well, I cannot positively say all the information we received was reliable.

15975. As far as you believed?—Yes.

15976. During the seven mouths you were there, did you ever come, as far as you understand, anywhere near the Kellys?—Well, I was never near the Kellys.

15977. Did the parties ever come near—had you any information that they did?—Well, we had information, but it generally turned out to be useless, and there is no doubt that the enormous number of sympathizers and friends they had in the district kept them informed of all the movements of the police.

15978. I want this point cleared up—because you condemn Mr. Nicolson unsparingly—were not both you and Mr. Hare there seven months?—Yes.

15979. Did you ever come within sight of the Kellys?—No.

15980. Nor did any party?—No.

15981. Had you not nearly double the number of constables and troopers up there the time you were there that Mr. Nicolson had?—The parties were not reduced for some time after Mr. Nicolson went there, and it was done by special direction of the Chief Secretary, Mr. Berry.

15982. Had you not sixty or seventy extra men in that district during the time you were there?—Yes.

The newspapers said 300.

15983. And you and Mr. Hare were there for seven months?—A little more than six months.

15984. And you scoured the country the whole time with parties?—At first we did; then we found out the utter uselessness of doing so.

15985. And you never came near the Kellys, so far as you know?—So far as we knew, no. I have no doubt we were very near them at times.

15986. How do you condemn Mr. Nicolson for using that means, when you followed it exactly yourself?—I always immediately sent out when I had information.

15987. Do you say Mr. Nicolson had no information?—From the evidence taken before you, gentlemen, it appears that he had no end of information, which, if he had acted on, he would no doubt have caught the Kellys.

15988. That is not the point. You have condemned him for scouring the country uselessly?—That is not when he was there before me. I did not condemn him at the time; but after Christmas, when I was up there, I found it was perfectly useless to send parties out.

15989. At the time you were there, you and Mr. Hare had some seventy men?—Sixty or seventy men, besides the ordinary strength of the district.

15990. With those extra men you followed the same course, and you were not successful?—I was not successful.

15991. Do you consider now, in the light of later events, that you are justified in making this sweeping charge against Mr. Nicolson, when you could not do any better yourself with double the means?—I was always actively engaged.

F. C. Standish,
continued.
31st Aug. 1881.

15992. I want a distinct answer. You had double the means at your disposal, double the expenditure at your command. You had Mr. Hare to send at any time, and you had Mr. Sadleir to send at any time. Are you justified now in condemning Mr. Nicolson for not doing, with half the number of men, what you did not do with double?—There were some reductions made; but the way the expenditure was decreased was by transferring men who had been only temporarily relieved.

15993. That is no answer to my question; I want “Yes” or “No.” Do you think you are justified in specially condemning Mr. Nicolson, when you failed also, with double the means?—I did all I could. I have said what I thought and believe, and I adhere to it.

15994. Do you consider you are justified or not?—I do.

15995. That is a distinct answer. Now in what way will you consider your own want of success with double the means, having condemned Mr. Nicolson?—I merely say we were not successful, but did our best.

15996. Was not your conduct subject to double condemnation?—I cannot see it.

15997. How do you condemn Mr. Nicolson then?—I see by the evidence that he threw many chances away.

15998. Did you ever know where the Kellys were when you were in the district?—We had information from time to time; but they kept moving about very much.
15999. I want to bring you back to the point. What is the Commission to think of your conduct with search parties in the North-Eastern district, when you condemn Mr. Nicolson?—Condemn him for what?
16000. For riding about and not catching the Kellys?—I said he was very energetic in doing that.
16001. You condemn him for that?—No; I said, after experience there, I found it was utterly useless to send those parties galloping about.
16002. You followed the same course?—From time to time, but always acting on information.
16003. Then it comes back to the old question—did you do anything more in the North-Eastern district than Mr. Nicolson did?—He was so excessively mysterious about his doings.
16004. That is not the point. Did you do anything more than Mr. Nicolson did in the district?—All I can say is, we neither caught them. I did my best. I was there seven months, and during that time I only came to Melbourne three times, for a few hours.
16005. He was there from the 27th November 1878 up till the 13th December 1878. Now look at question No. 100—"Do you think Mr. Nicolson showed want of generalship?—I do." You have there condemned Mr. Nicolson in the most unsparing terms for not doing things you could not yourself accomplish with double the means at your disposal?—I think you make a mistake about my having had double the means. The reductions were made by permanent transfer of a great many of the men who had been only temporarily transferred, and that made a great reduction in the expenditure.
16006. That was merely in the travelling expenses?—Yes.
16007. We were not speaking about the money power you had, but the man power. You had sixty or seventy men more than Mr. Nicolson had?—Yes.
16008. Mr. Nicolson went there for six weeks, and you say that he appeared to be galloping round the country without any object in view; now you are there with seventy more men for six months—did you accomplish anything?—I did not, and, what is more, I was not at all sanguine about success; and I remember telling Mr. Berry, shortly after the constables were murdered, that I thought if we caught them within twelve months it would be a most fortunate thing for the department. You are probably well aware that, with friends and sympathizers in every part of the country, the police are very heavily handicapped when they have not only to work against the outlaws but the numerous sympathizers.
16009. That is right, and you have to give some reasonable allowance for the man who goes first into a district. I think you proved by experience yourself that they were not so easily caught?—Certainly.
16010. Did it suggest itself to you that when Mr. Hare returned broken down, I think very energetically mysterious about his doings.
16011. I think, in your evidence yesterday, you said that he afterwards kept up a "masterly inactivity."—I think that was your expression?
16012. Did you mean to say by that that he should have dashed about the country as usual?—No, I think that would have been a most unwise thing to do.
16013. You know these things leave a curious impression on people's minds?—I only say what I think freely and openly.
16014. But when you tried the system for eight months, you yourself being there over six, with nearly a double force in the district, did you not think it was right in another officer going up to try some other system?—What system do you mean?
16015. He tried the secret agency system?—Yes, and he employed some agents who were in communication with the Kellys.
16016. Was that system in force all through of employing agents?—When we were there we had men in our employ to whom we made small payments from time to time; but I was very cautious, knowing so many there were sympathizers, in that district, with the Kellys; I only trusted them as far as I thought there was a chance of success.
16017. Had you anything at all to do with Wallace the schoolteacher?—Yes.
16018. During the whole time you were there you had no definite information as to where the Kellys were?—No certain reliable information.
16019. You have no doubt they were resident in the same neighborhood where they were said to be in Mr. Nicolson's time?—There was no doubt they were all about; I had reliable information on that.
16020. Events have transpired since to show they resided in the same district where they were first when Mr. Nicolson was there?—Yes.
16021. Therefore, the chances you had were equally great to those that Mr. Nicolson had during the period he was in charge?—Yes.
16022. Therefore if his condemnation was deserved, yours would equally be?—That is in your hands to say. I did my best all the time I was there.
16023. Would not that be a proper inference, the circumstances being the same in each case—would not the condemnation equally apply to each?—That is a matter for your consideration. I know I worked hard, and did my duty, and never anticipated success.

16024. Then it would be only fair to admit that the condemnation was not so really deserved as you at first imagined?—I know he threw chances away that I never had.

16025. Do you think he had better chances than you had?—I think he had. If you read the evidence you will see that.

16026. In what way had he?—He had information on one occasion from John Sherritt that the outlaws would be at his house at eight o’clock that evening.

16027. Did you always consider John Sherritt a reliable agent?—Yes, I did. There was nothing against him at any time.

16028. On what ground did you consider any other agent unreliable?—I never put implicit confidence in any man.

16029. No, but you have stated that he had agents who were telling the Kellys everything that occurred?—Yes, no doubt.

16030. Did it not occur to you that it was possible John Sherritt would tell the Kellys?—He was never in my employ.

16031. Then you had in reality, so far as we know, no grounds beyond mere opinion for saying his agents were unreliable?—I was told by private sources—the names I am not at liberty to disclose.

16032. Did you ever speak with Aaron Sherritt?—Yes.

16033. Did you ever speak with Wallace?—Yes. I may tell you, that shortly after I went up there, Wallace was schoolmaster at Bobinawarrah, and he came in to see me shortly after I arrived at Benalla, and he told me he could get leave during the Christmas holidays, and would go out shooting in the ranges, and point out where the outlaws were, and give me information. Well, of course, if you employ a man on duty of this kind, it is necessary to make enquiries. If you place yourself in the hands of men you do not know, it would be unsafe. I found out shortly after that there were reasons why I should not employ him.

16034. What did you find out with reference to him?—I will tell you. I started with a horse and a man we had employed acting as constable for Wangaratta, at night. I slept at Wangaratta, started at dawn of day with this constable, and I rode to Bobinawarrah. I had seen Wallace twice before—one, the first occasion mentioned, and the second time he came into Benalla again—and I left the constable and my horse about a quarter of a mile from the school, and went to the school, and Wallace was outside. That was about a quarter past eight in the morning, and he said, “Oh, Captain Standish, what are you doing here?” I said, “It is rather a perilous job—I came here to meet a man who gave me information.” Of course this was not true. It was said on purpose to mislead him. He asked me to breakfast, and I stayed there two hours, and conversed with him during the time, and he told me Joe Byrne was in the habit of coming to see him, but had not been there for six weeks or two months. Then, after that, we went on talking about the outlaws, and he said, “You are doing rather a risky thing coming here”; and I said, “I have got my revolver here, and a constable with me.” Then I said to him, “By-the-bye, have you seen Aaron Sherritt lately? I know he is the man who is in the habit of going to your house often”; and he said, “No, he has not been here for six weeks.” The conversation ended, and I went back to Wangaratta, and thence to Benalla; and when I got there I found Aaron Sherritt had arrived, and wanted to see me. I went out in the bush to meet him, and said, “Well, Aaron, where did you come from?” and then he said, “I have just spent two days at Wallace’s, and I came away yesterday morning early.” This showed me the reliability of Mr. Wallace. After that he communicated with me, saying he had seen Byrne, and that he had a long talk with him, and Byrne said he was not disinclined to throw his mates overboard, provided that it was guaranteed he was not taken up by the police and the sum of £100 or £200 to get out of the country. I went up to Benalla very shortly afterwards, and Wallace came in to meet me, and we had a long talk, and he said that evidently Byrne had declined—would not throw up his mates—thought it would not do.

16035. I have a letter here from Mr. Wallace dated August 29th 1881, in which he gives his version of the interview, and refers to other matters.—[The letter was read to the witness].—Is that a correct statement?—Yes. I think I have made a mistake. I think that the communication that Byrne would not consent was made in writing, but I am not quite certain.

16036. As to the other statements in that letter, so far as you are concerned, are they true?—They are almost true. There are some few things that are not exactly correct. On the whole they are true.

16037. Now you say you paid some small sums?—Yes, not to any large amount.

16038. You were there up till when?—The end of June; but my disbursements for secret-service money were very small.

16039. There is an account here mentioned for 156 days. That would be the whole time you were there. The precise amount is £473 19s. 3d.?—Yes.

16040. In your evidence (question No. 43) I find something on which I think the Commission will certainly require some information. I find that you are just as lavish in your praise of Mr. Hare as you were in blame of Mr. Nicolson: “I need not say I was most ably seconded by Mr. Hare, who not only never spared himself in any kind of way, but was most indefatigable in the pursuit of the outlaws. Not only was he most active and energetic, but he was so popular with the men under him that they would have done anything in the world for him. In fact, he treated the men under him like friends, not like dogs.” The Commission will require an explanation of that?—An explanation of what?

16041. As to one man “treating them like men” and another “like dogs.” You held a very responsible position, and a statement like that ought not to go to the public without full justification?—I do not want to say anything against Mr. Nicolson, but if you insist upon my speaking I must do so. Shortly after Mr. Nicolson took charge, on the occasion of my first visit to Benalla, I went to the office the following morning and had a long talk with him, and then we went to the stables, where all the horses were in rather a rough state, and I said, “I want to see this horse out,” and said to a constable “Lead him out,” and it seemed that Mr. Nicolson had given orders that everybody taking a horse out of the stable was to stand in front of him and hold him with both hands. The language that Mr. Nicolson used to that man for not doing that was really positively disgraceful.

16042. What were the words?—I cannot remember the words, but it was most violent language.

16043. We have many statements about Mr. Nicolson in this evidence that are very vague, but they convey a very bad impression. We want to get evidence. I need not tell you that the impression left on my mind is that those statements were intended to leave a bad impression?—I assure you that I have uttered nothing but what I meant, and what I stick to and adhere to, and what I believe to be true.

F. C. Standish, continued.
31st Aug. 1881.

16044. What did Mr. Nicolson say to that man?—I cannot remember the words, but it was the most violent language I ever heard.

16045. Is that the only instance?—There are many instances I could quote, but of things that occurred not in my presence.

16046. Do you remember who the constable was?—No, I forget that. It was one of the mounted constables on duty.

16047. It is very unsatisfactory to put a charge like that on the book?—I shall be glad for that to be erased if you wish.

16048. Was it his general demeanour?—I was very little with him, but I have heard so many things about him in that way that I know they are true.

16049. Where did you hear them?—From members of the force.

16050. Can you name anyone that can give evidence of that?—I should not like to name any man, because it might compromise his position.

16051. We have had evidence from plenty of members of the force, and no man’s position would be compromised by giving the name?—I would rather not say anything about the constable. It might possibly do him harm.

16052. Did you not consider, when you made that statement, the injury that it would possibly do Mr. Nicolson?—A man very often says a thing on the spur of the moment.

16053. This was not said on the spur of the moment?—Where a man has to make a lengthened statement before a Commission and has not had time to prepare.

16054. There is a clear plan running through your evidence, and that plan is to elevate Mr. Hare and depress Mr. Nicolson, I ask any man to read that, and if he does not rise up from the reading of it with that impression I do not understand his mental power?—With all due deference, I stick to what I said. I have no occasion to change my opinion.

16055. But then you damage Mr. Nicolson, and will not give him the slightest opportunity of protecting his character?—I merely tell you I gave my evidence straightforwardly and truthfully, and I adhere to all I said, and I have no occasion to change a word of what I said.

That does not make the attack less gross upon Mr. Nicolson.

The room was cleared.

The public were re-admitted.

16056. We were speaking about the language of Mr. Nicolson to the constable—would there be any difficulty in finding out who that man was?—I could not tell you, I have not the slightest idea.

16057. How many men were usually in charge of the stables there?—There was only one man there when I went in with Mr. Nicolson.

16058. Was any other officer besides yourself and Mr. Nicolson present at the time?—No, only Mr. Nicolson and myself.

16059. What had Mr. Hare done at this time (question No. 43) different from what Mr. Nicolson had done that you praise him so much?—I think he is the best officer in the police force out and out, without any exception.

16060. In what respect does the contrast come between the two officers, because the difference in speaking of them is very marked?—That one is a most popular man in the police force and the other is about the most unpopular man in the force.

16061. Is that the only cause of your speaking with reference to him?—He is popular because he is kind, genial, and active, and never worries the men under him, and the men who have been serving under him would do anything for him.

16062. Do the police perform their duties more efficiently under Mr. Hare than under Mr. Nicolson?—I should think they would.

16063. You ought to know the fact whether there is a marked difference or not?—Of course you all know that a police officer who is an active man, and who has pleasant manners and is kind and genial to all the men, they would do anything in the world for him, and I am quite certain there is not a more popular man in the police service than Mr. Hare.

16064. It is not a question of what you heard or said, but do they act more efficiently under Mr. Hare than under Mr. Nicolson?—I am certain they would.

16065. I ask do they act more efficiently?—They do.

16066. Has Mr. Hare shown any superior knowledge of office work over Mr. Nicolson?—No. Mr. Hare has the office work as superintendent, and that is not very voluminous. It is in work he can get through it in about half an hour in the day.

16067. I think you mentioned that you came down to town and found the office in a muddle under Mr. Nicolson—do you adhere to that?—I go by what I heard from the clerks in my office.

16068. Mr. Moors has been before the Commission, and said there was nothing of the sort?—Well, I should be very sorry to give him the lie. Of course he is a most honorable man. I have a great esteem and regard for him; but there is not the slightest doubt that evidence came from the clerks in my office. That I adhere to most firmly.

16069. Mr. Moors in his evidence explained that by saying that Mr. Nicolson was not so perfect in office work as you were, and did not perhaps deal so rapidly with papers—delayed them a little longer in the office; would that be a reply to that statement?—Well, I suppose it is a quasi explanation.

16070. But then Mr. Moors said that all the papers that could be were cleared up every night, so that the office was never in any muddle whatever—would that be a correct statement that only a few papers were left for you officially to deal with?—All I know is from hearsay.

16071. You would know if they came under your own notice?—He was performing my duties in the office for about six months, but there were no arrears of any importance left when I arrived there. There were some few papers that had been dealt with.

16072. Do you adhere to your statement that the office was in a muddle?—I am going from what I heard from the clerks in my office.

16073. Is there any clerk in the office that would be able to give the information?—I would rather not give the names of anybody, it might do them harm.

16074. Did you approve of the work done by Mr. Nicolson during that time, or find fault with it?—I am not saying I found fault with anything particular; I am only saying what I heard from the clerks.

16075. They said they were kept longer hours?—Yes, sometimes till half-past eleven.

16076. Are there any clerks that are likely to be able to give evidence on that besides Mr. Moors?—I cannot state the names of anybody.

16077. Would any of the clerks be able?—That I cannot say.

16078. Did you ever complain to Mr Nicolson that he kept in a muddle, and kept the clerks back?—No, I do not think I did. It would have done no good.

16079. If any real cause of complaint had come before you, would it have been your duty to put a memorandum on the papers indicating your sense of the conduct of Mr. Nicolson?—There was no formal complaint ever made to me—no official complaint.

16080. Did you, as a matter of fact, see cause of complaint when you came down?—As I said, there were a very few arrears; and as I was only down for a few hours three times during the time of my banishment at Benalla, I could see nothing personally myself of the working of the office.

16081. You gave evidence here that the office was in such a state that you had to leave Benalla and come down?—There were complaints about the correspondence in various districts.

16082. How did you discover those complaints?—Well, I heard of them by private letters generally. I was urged to come down and take charge of the office.

16083. By whom?—Well, as I tell you, I do not like to give names here.

16084. But somebody must have done it. The Commission are, at all events, bound to the plain statement, when you have made this statement about things being muddled in the office?—That is what I learned when I came down and what I heard before.

16085. Who was the party that reported that to you—was it Mr. Moors?—I think it would be unfair to give up the names of anybody, because it would do them harm.

16086. I respectfully submit to you how unfair it is to make a charge to the detriment of Mr. Nicolson and not give the authority for making the charge?—Generally, it was the opinion of most of the clerks in the office.

16087. If it is not desirable to, give the names of witnesses, it is not desirable to make a charge. You ought to have the proof against a man?—Well, I would sooner withdraw that part of my evidence than give the names.

16088. It cannot be done. A charge is made, and the proof must be given of the correctness or otherwise of it. I think when a charge of that character is made against an officer, the proof must be given. If you have not proof yourself; the evidence on which you acted must be given, and the authority you have for making the charge must be produced for the benefit of the Commission. Surely there would be more than one officer in the department who would know about this. Can you not indicate any other clerk in the office?—You are at liberty to call all the clerks, or any witnesses you choose.

16089. You received information from the office that you thought of sufficient importance to bring you to town?—Yes.
16090. That being so, you arrived at the office, and satisfied yourself there was just cause for bringing you down?—Yes.
16091. That being so, the Commission require the evidence on which you acted, in corroboration of the charge now made against an officer of the force. I think it must be done?—Pretty well all the clerks told me that owing to Mr. Nicolson coming late, and not staying very long, they were kept very late.
16092. Whom did you receive those statements from?—Those were verbal.
16093. But you received a written communication that led you to come down—whom did you receive that from?—I shall not say.
16094. I think you must say. I think you are bound to reply to that question?—Well really, I do not want to say anything to contradict Mr. Moor’s evidence, or to impugn his veracity. He is one of the straightest men I ever met.
16095. You see the strange position in which Mr. Nicolson is placed. A charge is made to his detriment, and we want to see justice done to all parties, and, when you have made the charge, you must abide by the circumstances and produce the evidence?—I have not the letter.
16096. Then you should say the name?—I cannot say positively the name.
16097. Can you say, on your oath, you cannot say from what officer you received the letter making the charge?—I could not positively say.
16098. How many officers are there you could receive it from in the office—what gentlemen in the office would presume to write to the Chief Commissioner?—I am not certain whether it was in writing or verbally.
16099. You said you got a letter?—I got a letter in which there was an expression of regret that I was not in the office, because I got through the work much more rapidly than Mr. Nicolson.
16100. The charge must have been in writing if it induced you to come down?—It was no charge, and I am not certain whom it came from; but it complained they were kept so long, owing to Mr. Nicolson coming late to the office.
16101. You said in consequence of the office getting into a perfect muddle you had to leave Benalla and come down—you still adhere to that?—Yes, I do.
16102. You just now expressed your readiness to withdraw that statement altogether?—How?
16103. That the office was in a muddle?—Well, “muddle” is perhaps not the word. I mean that the business was not got through at all quick.
16104. That is another matter altogether. That was not the impression that was conveyed by your evidence quite. I imagined, not that the clerks were kept late, but that the office business was badly done, or not done at all. If you wish to modify your statement, so as to say the work was not done so well as in your time—?—That is what I meant—that the work was not got through so promptly.
16105. Was the work of the office in arrear at the time?—There were several things standing over.
16106. You got this letter from someone in the office. Is there any other gentleman in the office occupying a position of sufficient importance beside Mr. Moors who would write to you officially on the subject?—I got no communication officially on the subject; I got a private letter.

F.C. Standish,
31st Aug. 1881.
16118. Was not he a reliable officer?—I know nothing against him.

16119. That is not an answer to the question. Was not he a reliable officer while he was engaged with you twenty years?—I had no reason to doubt his reliability, but he was so excessively reticent and mysterious at all times, particularly at the time of the Kelly business.

16120. Did he do his duty?—He was very slow in many things he did.

16121. This led you to push to the front a younger officer in the service?—It was from purely conscientious motives.

16122. Why did you pass over all the others who were entitled by priority to the position besides Mr. Nicolson?—Because I thought, and think still, and everybody will admit it, that Mr. Hare is the most suitable officer for that kind of work. I mean for the work in the Benalla district.

16123. Was Mr. Chomley not considered suitable for the work?—I do not know how he conducts the business of the office. I know nothing about that. He is an excellent officer.

16124. And there was Mr. Winch, who was senior—would not he have been adapted for the position?—In selecting an officer I selected the one I thought by far the most suitable.

16125. Was it in consequence of your not thinking the others adapted for the position?—It was my duty to select the fittest man for the work, and I did it.

16126. You thought Mr. Hare the best man?—Certainly.

16127. Was that the sole reason that actuated you in the appointment?—The sole reason.

16128. In making that selection, would you suppose that the senior officers would naturally have cause of jealousy?—I do not see it. It is my duty, in the position I occupied, to select the man I thought the fittest, and I did it. Mr. Hare, in addition to that, was a capital horseman, a good shot and bushman.

16129. As a question of precedence amongst the officers, would they be justified in feeling jealousy in consequence of your preferment of Mr. Hare?—They may have, but they had no right to.

16130. Did ever Mr. Nicolson go to inspect Mr. Hare’s district?—Yes, once, I believe.

16131. Did Mr. Hare at any time object to his inspecting the district?—I have no recollection of any objection of that kind being made.

16132. Did he ever make any request that Mr. Nicolson should be brought away from his district?—I have no recollection of it, and I do not think it was ever done.

16133. There is one thing I wish to ask with reference to the Kelly outbreak—the black trackers were brought here contrary to your wishes?—Yes, they were.

16134. I think, in answer to Mr. O’Connor, when he was asking you why you did not inform him or order him and his “boys” to pick up the tracks, you said, “Because if we had you and your numerous baggage, horses, and trackers, we should have been known some hours before we got there.” Was that when you went to Sebastopol?—They were not here then. It was four months after that that they arrived.

16135. Would it not have been advisable on the occasion of going to Cleary’s hut, where you expected to find the outlaws, to have the trackers?—I think Mr. Hare had a black tracker with him. It was information that the outlaws were to be in the place that night, but it turned out to be unreliable.

16136. Suppose you had found the outlaws had just left the place, would it have been advisable to have the black trackers the next morning to go in pursuit?—No doubt the trackers are of use to track in an almost uninhabited place like Queensland, but I am perfectly certain, if they had been put on the tracks of the Kellys, for instance, after sticking up the bank, they would not have been of use. The outlaws travelled eight or ten miles in the hour, and the trackers have to look on every side, and the outlaws all took different routes, and had their friends with them to confuse the tracks, and I am certain the trackers would not have been of use.

16137. We have evidence that they can go forty miles a day?—On clear country, but not in that country up there, and where the outlaws all separate and ride different routes.

16138. Do you consider that Mr. O’Connor, from the fact of his bringing trackers from Queensland, had a right to complain of your not giving him the chance of following?—We never had a chance. The only time we had a chance the trackers were away—when Mr. Hare went to the Warby Ranges.

16139. There was a time that Mr. O’Connor said he had had a chance on the information you received?—The trackers were away on that occasion; but whenever I heard any information likely to lead to good results, it was necessary for me to be as cautious as possible. If you went jabbering about things to Mr. O’Connor and others, it would at once get spread all about.

16140. Could you not rely on the police?—Most of them.

16141. What was the good of Mr. O’Connor being there with his trackers then?—The trackers were not there at the time.

16142. What was the use of Mr. O’Connor in the country?—As I told you before, I entertained that opinion before and afterwards, and entertain it still, that in the event of their having to follow the outlaws after any outrage, they would have been of no use.

16143. Why not prove that to the public by giving them an opportunity?—They went out tracking several times when they first came, but we had no opportunity of putting them on after that.

16144. We have had evidence that they were put on in several places, and proved very successful in that district—that they succeeded in capturing people guilty of offences since then?—That is very different, following a criminal making his way out of the colony, and following four outlaws galloping about. I quite agree that black trackers may be utilized for certain purposes, but for going out after the outlaws they were not the slightest use. Those men you speak of are special trackers we have got from Queensland.

16145. You have no knowledge that Mr. O’Connor’s trackers were different?—No doubt they could track well enough.

16146. They were experienced trackers that Mr. O’Connor brought?—Yes; but those you allude to are those I got from Queensland myself.

16147. Have you any proof that they are better trackers than the others?—I have no connection with the department now, and cannot give you any information about that.

16148. Mr. O’Connor was not assigned a definite rank in the police; he seems to have been sworn in as a constable?—No, he was sworn in as a sub-inspector.

16149. Was he gazetted to any position in the police force?—He was sworn in.

16150. As a constable?—No, I think as an officer. At any rate he came and occupied the rank of sub-inspector.

16151. Was that assigned to him by the Gazette, by regular and proper appointment?—I fancy it was in the Gazette, but I cannot remember.

16152. It appeared that nobody knew whether to follow his orders or not?—He was merely in charge of the black trackers in search parties, under the officer in charge.

16153. Had he any authority over white constables?—No, none whatever. He was only temporarily appointed as a sub-inspector of police in charge of the trackers.

16154. No authority over any sergeant?—None over any white policeman or officer whatever.

16155. Mr. O’Connor stated that while you were at Benalla you were very unwilling to enter upon the subject of the pursuit of the Kellys with any of the officers in conversation. In questions 1091 and 1092 he says:—“How long was this after you received information about the horse?—A considerable time—months. Captain Standish, I may say, did not believe anything. When we gave information about it, he laughed at it, and took no more trouble about it. Up to about this time, and a little later, Captain Standish was upon the most intimate terms with me (in my statement in my report of 7th September, it ought to be fourteen months he treated me most discourteously, instead of sixteen), and often expressed a wish that I would join the Victorian force after the Kellys were taken. Captain Standish showed a great want of interest in any work in the Kelly pursuit. This was not only observed by myself, but by both Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare.” “Was that verbally or how?—Repeatedly, day after day. Mr. Sadleir will be ready to prove it, and I suppose Mr. Hare will repeat what he has often said to me. In fact, Mr. Sadleir often observed to me that he could never get two minutes’ conversation with Captain Standish upon Kelly business; that the moment he began to talk upon the subject Captain Standish would take up a novel and commence to read. Mr. Hare also frequently remarked the indifference of the Chief Commissioner to his work.” And so on. Are those statements true?—They are a tissue of lies from beginning to end.

16156. Here is Mr. Sadleir’s evidence at page 424 of the printed evidence. Mr. O’Connor here asks Mr. Sadleir:—“Is my statement in questions Nos. 1091 and 1092 correct:—“Captain Standish showed a great want of interest in any work in the Kelly pursuit. This was not only observed by myself, but by both Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare.”” “Was that verbally, or how?—Repeatedly, day after day. Mr. Sadleir will be ready to prove it, and I suppose Mr. Hare will repeat what he has often said to me. In fact, Mr. Sadleir often observed to me that he could never get two minutes’ conversation with Captain Standish upon Kelly business; that the moment he began to talk upon the subject Captain Standish would take up a novel and commence to read?”—Well, Captain Standish is not here, and not in the service.” “No matter I make this statement, and it is to corroborate or otherwise my statement?—What is the question then?” “Nos. 1091 and 1092. If the Chairman thinks I ought not to put it I will withdraw it.” “The Chairman.—I think it may be put, under the circumstances.” “By Mr. O’Connor.—Will you answer that?—It is quite true that Captain Standish showed want of interest in the work; we all remarked it—every officer there.’ Is that true?—It is not true. I assure you that never at any period of my life had I as much anxiety as in the six months at Benalla.

16157. “By the Commission.—You have made a very peculiar statement, that is that you begged of him to allow you to speak to him calmly, to sit down and not feel irritated; was there any necessity for anything of that sort?—He had grown very irritable of late. Of course I should be sorry to say anything hurtful to a man’s feelings, and make him appear irritable; but he was so constitutionally. His temper had become infirm—no doubt about it.” What do you say to that statement of Mr. Sadleir’s?—I do not think I was of an irritable temperament.

16158. And they could not get you to speak on the Kelly business at all?—I used to go to the office every day, and speak with Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare, and never kept anything worth knowing from Mr. Sadleir.

16160. And they are not true in fact?—I say certainly not. Of course you can understand that if I had got a piece of secret and important information, which it would not do to let fly about until I had considered how it should be acted upon, I would keep that strictly to myself. If a man, directly he hears of anything, spreads it about, it will be known all over the town in ten minutes.
16161. It seems passing strange that they should bo so unanimous. Mr. Hare states "Mr. O’Connor never, when we were on terms of friendship, said, ‘If Captain Standish had done so and so we would have got the Kellys.’ He used to remark to me the indifferent manner in which Captain Standish behaved from time to time when the subject of the Kellys was mentioned.” “What do you mean by indifferent—apathetic?” Yes, apathetic. He would change the subject to something else; and Mr. Sadleir has remarked the same.” Every officer under your command?—I positively deny I was ever apathetic, and I do not know when I was so worried mentally as while I was at Benalla; and as to saying I neglected the Kelly business, that is a wilful falsehood.

16162. One says you threw yourself on the sofa, one says you took a novel, and another says you would not give two minutes to speak?—You are aware that I used to go to the office and stay the greater part of the morning, and after that time I had nothing to do, and used to go back to the hotel. I deny that I ever neglected my duty. I do not suppose there is anybody who had so much mental strain and anxiety and worry upon him as I had at that time.

Of course Mr. Hare qualifies it in the next two sentences. He says that he thinks you were not so, but his statement in that sentence is very definite.

Mr. Hare.—May I be allowed to read questions 1327 and 1328:—” What do you mean by indifferent—apathetic?—Yes, apathetic. He would change the subject to something else; and Mr. Sadleir has remarked the same.” “Mr. O’Connor said you had several times remarked to him that Captain Standish was indifferent?—I do not deny Mr. O’Connor’s statement. I dare say I may have said, ‘He does not take a great interest when you speak to him’; but when I have spoken to him he has always shown the utmost interest in the whole affair.” I wish to call attention to the whole of it.

16163. By the Commission (to the witness).—Can you explain in any way how it was you were altogether indifferent, and treated the subject of the Kellys with indifference when either Mr. Sadleir or Mr. O’Connor spoke to you?—There was a complimentary telegram sent to me from Lord Normanby, praising the officers and men, and I had a similar communication from Lord Augustus Loftus.

16164. That is no answer to the question. Those men charge you with directly pursuing a policy of non-interference, and would not speak to them on the subject except under great pressure: that they could not keep your attention up to it for two minutes together?—That is decidedly untrue. I tell you I was never so worried in my life as I was at Benalla with the mental anxiety I had there, I lost upwards of a stone weight.

16165. Mr. Nicolson also in his evidence says at question 597, “You did not carry on a correspondence with him while you were in Melbourne doing duty, telling him verbally or by official communication that you considered the system of riding after the Kellys would be inoperative?”—You had better ask him, but I have no recollection of it. When I came down to town—when I was in town in charge of the department, on every occasion that Captain Standish was called down to town by the Government, and it was very often he would be in my office, and he was most remarkably reticent, and never would give me the slightest information—I would not ask him. At the same time I always asked him, ‘Do you wish me to go up, I am ready to go at any time?” That was all that passed between us, and he would shake his head and say nothing, and I knew nothing from that time of what was going on in the country.” That is strange conduct towards every officer under you?—If I had nothing to tell him, how could I tell him anything?

16166. One would hardly think you would be without anything to speak of about the Kelly business at that time?—I had nothing to tell him when I came down, and if I had had any important information, I should have kept it strictly to myself.

16167. Why did not you keep it from Mr. Hare?—Mr. Hare was virtually in charge of the working part of the Kelly pursuit.

16168. No, it is upon both occasions he could get no information from you when in the office—you would not impart any to him?—What could be my object in doing so?

16169. When you were in the office together?—If I had nothing to tell him, how could I? 16170. Then in reality you consider that according to your evidence that you had a right to keep all the information to yourself and not let your officers know anything?—I had a perfect right.

16171. And you considered that the best way to manage the affair?—If you talked about everything, it would be a great error.

16172. Did you ever find Mr. Nicolson untrue to you when you spoke about anything?—Not to my knowledge.

16173. Why did you not give him some little confidence, to know what was going on?—If there was nothing going on, what could I tell him?

16174. Do you mean to say there was at any time, during the Kelly outbreak, nothing going on in reference to it—that there was not sufficient to talk about so as to consult?—We were sometimes weeks and weeks without hearing of them.

16175. You tell us you always consulted with Mr. Hare?—When he was up there with me, and very often with Mr. Sadleir. We generally used to talk the matter over.

16176. Mr. Sadleir has sworn he could not get you to speak for two minutes at a time? Mr. Sadleir.—That was only on occasions. Captain Standish often consulted with me.
16177. By the Commission (to the witness).—Then the fact remains that you were six months in the district and it ended without any result?—Certainly.
16178. And ended with all your officers complaining that you would not give them any of your confidence?—I had perfect confidence in Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir. Why I should go and tell other people anything seems to be rather curious.
16179. They have all complained?—Who do you mean by “all”?
16180. Mr. Sadleir, Mr. Nicolson, and Mr. O’Connor?—Mr. O’Connor was merely subordinate, in charge of the black trackers—why should I tell him everything I heard?
16181. Was he not recognized as a branch of the service, and it was advisable for him to know what was going on?—I am afraid it would have got about.
16182. Did Mr. O’Connor, to your knowledge, tell anything of importance that should have been kept secret with reference to the Kellys while you were with him?—I do not know what you are alluding to.

589

16183. You see how unsatisfactory the evidence is—it is no reply to the charges of this officer that you say it might have got about. They have simply made a charge, and there is no reply other than that it is not true?—I do not know what the charge is you particularly allude to.
16184. They have made charges that it was difficult to get you to speak to them about the Kellys and outrages?—I certainly did not deem it part of my duty when I heard anything to go and blab it about to everybody.
16185. They all complain you did not give them confidence, and when I asked whether you had ever found them breaking confidence with you by telling what you told them you say no?—Not to my knowledge.
16186. Quite so?—But with reference to that I may tell you, as a matter of policy—a matter of duty—that when a man hears an important piece of information, which may possibly result satisfactorily, to go and tell everybody, that I think the man would be a fool.
16187. Do you consider the three officers co-operating with you “everybody”?—I had perfect confidence in Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir.
16188. What shook your confidence in Mr. Nicolson—was it telling what you had told him about the Kellys?—I had a most friendly feeling towards Mr. Nicolson.
16189. You have left him out several times in that clear way, to mark that you had no confidence in him, I presume—did he ever betray your confidence by telling your secrets with reference to the Kellys?—
Not to my knowledge.
16190. About the information that might lead to a satisfactory result not being divulged—how could satisfactory results he obtained from information of that kind, if the information was not divulged to your responsible officers?—If action had to be taken on it, it would be divulged.
16191. What satisfactory action could be taken if not from instructions about the information?— If I had received information that was necessary to act upon at once, I would have instructed the officers at once, and told them all the information.
16192. You say that by divulging information which you may have received to your officers it might prevent leading up to satisfactory results—how could that be, when those results could not be obtained without informing your officers who would require to carry out the work?—Of course, the two officers serving with me at Benalla, Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare, I had perfect confidence in, and I would never withhold anything from them.
16193. That implies that a certain officer you had, occupying a responsible position, you had not confidence in. Now will you say what officer you had not confidence in, and what was the cause?—I had perfect confidence in Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare.
16194. Whom, occupying the same position, did you not have confidence in, and would not entrust with that information?—Those are the only two officers that served with me at Benalla.
16195. What officer would not be worthy—you have spoken of those you would trust?—The only two that served with me there were Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Hare.
16196. Mr. Nicolson was for a long time at that work?—Not with me.
16197. No, but that would equally apply to information you might receive in town. Supposing you occupied your position as Chief Commissioner in town, you might receive information—would it not be your duty to convey it, not only to the officer in the district, but equally to officers in other districts?—It depends on the class of information. I would convey it, if necessary, to Mr. Nicolson direct, and to Mr. Sadleir, in the absence of Mr. Nicolson.
16198. What is the ordinary custom of the Chief Commissioner, who may be the recipient of valuable information with regard to any outrage, what course he should take to bring the parties charged with any offence against the law to justice?—In any ordinary district I would communicate to the officer in charge of the district by telegram; and, if an urgent matter, to the policeman at the nearest station.
16199. Would your communication stop there; would that be the extent of the information?—It depends entirely upon the nature of the offence.
16200. I think if you are anxious to capture any person guilty of a breach of the law, the information that would be necessary to convey to any officer it would be necessary also to convey to the officers in charge

F. C. Standish,
continued,
31st Aug. 1881.
of every district?—Exactly; but that depends upon the nature of the offence.

16201. Should it not be the practice at all times for the Chief Commissioner of Police to cause the necessary information to be given to every branch of the service, all over the colony, as well as to officers in the other colonies?—Certainly, in case of crimes of great magnitude, but not petty offences.

16202. These are not petty offences we are talking of; and I would like to have your answer, as the result of your long experience, as to your practice in that case. If you received the information, did you then take immediate steps to convey that information to every officer in charge of every district in the colony?—In crimes of great magnitude I might, but that is generally done by the officer in charge of the district. The officer in charge of the district does what is necessary.

16203. You seem to evade the question?—I do not. I say if a crime of great magnitude is committed, and there is a trace of the person absconding, it is the duty of the officer of the district, to communicate with nearly all the stations in the colony.

16204. Then it would be your duty as Chief Commissioner to give the necessary instructions to your subordinate so as to convey it by telegram to every station in the colony?—It is very expensive to send to every district in the colony; it would cost £100 to send it to all the districts. The district there is so enormously large.

16205. You say you had to keep the information entirely to yourself—it would have been dangerous to have communicated to your officers even the plan of operations you had mentally decided to carry out. Is it not, as a matter of fact, the practice of the police force in every case when a crime is committed to let the chief officer of every district in the colony know the nature of the offence and the character of the offender, in order that the regular course may be taken for the capture?—No, it is not the custom; it is the custom that if a criminal is wanted in a certain district to telegraph to all the adjoining stations, but if a crime is committed in the North-Eastern district it would be folly and waste of money to telegraph to Portland.

16206. With regard to your position whilst you were in charge of the district there, did you ever make a practice of consulting at given periods with the officers under your charge as to the efficacy of carrying out the plan of operations you had then determined on or as to altering them?—We used to talk the matter over almost every morning in the office, Mr. Sadleir, Mr. Hare, and I.

16207. I presume you worked on a decided plan of operations in carrying out the search; there was some recognized plan?—I cannot say there was some recognized plan, because the information was so very slender and so very infrequent; but I very soon found out that the plan of having large search parties all over the district was waste of time and money.

16208. Did you on any occasion specially intimate to the officers the advisability of meeting at a given period to take into consideration the best mode, with a view of capturing those men?—No, never.

16209. Do you think now, in the ordinary way, the efficiency of the force would not be improved by such a system being recognized?—What system?

16210. The system of confidence with the officers. Instead of a gentleman occupying the responsible position of Chief Commissioner of Police undertaking solely the responsibility of the plan of operations, which might or might not be successful, would it not add to the probable efficacy if he consulted with other officers under his charge?—I used always to consult with officers I had confidence in; but there are lots of men in the police force whose opinion I would not be inclined to take, not that I want to say anything against them.

16211. There is something implied in that—that there were some officers who were not deserving of confidence?—I mean whose opinion I would not value.

16212. May I ask what are their names?—I do not think that is fair.

16213. Was it any officer in charge of that district?—No.

16214. Then it does not apply?—No. I had perfect confidence in Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir.

16215. Do you remember upon whose recommendation the force was weakened in the North-Eastern district before the Kellys broke out. There were several stations closed—Glenmore and Hedi—and several had one or two constables taken away from them. How did that come about?—It is such a long time ago, and having no official documents to look back to, I can hardly be expected to give an off-hand answer to that.

16216. Do you remember any reports coming in against the closing of those stations?—I believe, from Mr. Nicolson’s evidence, he states that he reported against Glenmore being broken up; but this was many years ago, and I have no distinct recollection of what occurred at the time.

16217. Did Mr. Nicolson report more that once against it?—I cannot tell you.

16218. Were you aware that it was a district notorious for cattle-stealing and horse-stealing?—Had been for years.

16219. Do you think if those stations had been kept at their usual strength that there would have been so much likelihood of the outbreak?—I do not think that question would have affected the outbreak. There was no doubt the outbreak was not premeditated; but at the time of the outrage on Fitzpatrick the men took to the bush, and then the shindy began. That station at Glenmore was at a very out-of-the-way place, and there was only one constable there.

16220. Was not it on the track of the mountains?—It was close to a station that belonged to the Quin...

16221. Was the lawless character of the North-Eastern district fully reported to you before those stations were abolished?—It was generally known to be a cattle-stealing district for many years.

16222. The Hedi district was opened about that time, and I see in this report of Mr. Nicolson’s upon the district, of 2nd August 1877, he says:—“Crime report book.—About six cases to date in 1877, mostly horse-steeling, which horses were ultimately recovered, impounded in New South Wales. This is a form of crime which is said to be common here, when the Murray River is low. The animals are said to be impounded with the view of buying them out cheap. They are frequently recovered, but the offenders, said to be New South Wales men, are never convicted. I can see no difficulty in bringing the offenders to justice, if the Ovens district police make systematic arrangements, with the co-operation of the well-known Mr. Singleton, who is in command of the New South Wales police, Albury district.” Was there any action taken on that to increase the security of property in the district?—The police force was not increased there.

16223. Mr. Montfort, when under examination on this question, was asked:—“Is it your opinion that, if the police stations which were dispensed with had been kept up and the same watchfulness observed, that the Kelly difficulties which afterwards occurred would have been prevented?” He replied—“It would certainly have had that effect no doubt—the same stations, and proper men in charge. I have heard that the man placed in charge of Glenmore station was utterly unfit. I did not think of that just now, when you were asking about the abolition of the station. There was a constable named McHerney; this I heard afterwards—yes. Was that the man dismissed?—He died in the Lunatic Asylum I think, or got killed—I am not certain.”

16224. Did it ever come under your notice that efficient bushmen were taken away from that district and men who could hardly sit upon a horse were sent up to occupy their positions?—We admit no men into the mounted police force unless they can ride well. Of course some young men, who have been young experienced bush-riders, are better riders than others; but every man has to pass as a rider, and if he shows he is a bad rider he is not taken on.

16225. Do you remember how long it is since Mr. Brooke Smith took charge of that district?—It was a sub-district then. He was never in charge of a district—he was under Mr. Sadleir.

16226. Did it ever come under your notice whether he was a man who could be relied upon or not?—I do not think he was a man with very much head, not much mental capacity. I would rather this should not be published.

16227. We have plenty in the evidence already about him, that he was a man without courage at all at the time of the attempt to catch the Kellys?—I have seen that in the evidence.

16228. You were not aware whether he was a man of courage or not?—No, it was never brought under my notice one way or the other.

16229. Were you ever made aware whether he was given to intemperate habits?—I did not know that; I never saw him the least under the influence of liquor.

16230. Did you see the evidence given here, that the police were unable to use arms—have you any explanation to give to the Commission why?—As you are aware, the only weapon that the mounted police had was the revolver, and a great many of them have had no practice with guns or rifles. If, as I understand, after this part of your labors is concluded, you proceed to enquire into the future organization of the police force, I shall on that occasion be most happy to give any information you wish; and I think I have some suggestions which, if you examine me, you will think it advisable to adopt. I remember, several years ago, insisting upon having all the men drilled here once a month, and firing and using their arms. There was a great outcry against it. The Chief Secretary of the day said this military organization was very bad and it did not interfere with the discipline of the force, but with its action as a semi-military body.

16232. We will not pursue that subject further at present. We simply have it in evidence that the men were not armed, and that when they were armed a great many did not know how to use them?—The weapons were breech-loading double-barrelled guns.

16233. That they were not expert in the use of them at all. Here is the report with reference to Mr. Brooke Smith.—“Benalla, 10th November 1879. My dear Captain Standish,—I went up to Beechworth on Tuesday last, the 4th instant, and returned the following day. I am sorry to have to write you on such a painful subject in connection with my visit. I saw poor Brooke Smith for a short time on each of those days, and he was a wreck both in body and in mind. There was no odour of liquor about him, but his appearance was wretched, and his memory apparently much gone. He seems to go about muttering and mumbling incoherently about the Kellys, &c. He evidently has broken down in mind just now, and his presence as chief officer at Beechworth at the present time is simply a reproach to the department, and I assure you I cannot correspond with him on any matter of the slightest importance. But I have to write to Ward. It appears to me that the Kelly business has preyed upon Brooke’s mind, and that he requires a change and medical attention and relief from duty for some time. I was quite shocked at the change I observed in him last week, and I fear the consequences if he is not removed; even suicide was suggested to me by more than one person at Beechworth. But I do not think Brookes has the courage for that remedy.” That is written by Mr. Nicolson. “I was also told that his private circumstances were bad just now, and that was also preying upon his mind. I would suggest that he be ordered promptly to Melbourne, and after a fortnight’s leave of absence there, and quiet living among his private friends, you may then be able to decide what to do with him. At present he is not only useless in Beechworth but an object of reproach to the whole service.” Did you do anything upon that information?—If I remember right, I gave him leave, and he came down and stayed with Judge Hackett and his wife. I know he came down here for the benefit of his health and stayed with them.

16234. Is he in charge of the district now?—No; he is in the Wimmera district now, under Superintendent Nicholas, stationed at Horsham. He is in charge at Horsham, and has to assist Mr. Nicholas in the supervision of the district.

16235. You complained of Mr. Nicolson not giving you information?—I certainly did.

16236. Did you, as a matter of fact, show his private letters to Mr. Hare? I may have shown him one, but I am not quite positive, and I am not in the habit of showing those letters to anybody.

16237. Mr. Nicolson complained that his advice was neglected. If you look at question No. 619 you will see he says—"Any advice I offered on the strength of my experience was pooh-poohed previous to that and on that occasion.” That was with reference to the advice given by Mr. Nicolson. “On this occasion you left no record, neither did you verbally express to the gentlemen with whom you were associated as officers the importance of following out any course you thought best adapted for the object you had in view, neither in writing nor verbally?”—No. The day I left was upon that occasion, the 12th. I was, as I tell you, when I came in from that party, completely prostrated; in fact when I was going about the street I had to be led about, and take the arm of someone.—Your answer is that you were too incapacitated at that time to advise?—Yes.—And Captain Standish did not ask you?—No.—Subsequently you say you performed all the functions pertaining to the Chief Commissionership of the colony?—Yes.—You were in constant communication with the Government on matters official?—Yes.—After you had time to recover your health, did you not think it of sufficient importance then, from the position you had occupied and the important position you then occupied, to consult with the Government, and to advise as to the best course?—I did not. Captain Standish at the time was in direct communication with the Government himself, and I was not. I did not know what course he was pursuing at all, and he never invited me to give any opinion. I gave an opinion once or twice, a suggestion, but on all those occasions he treated me with coldness and repelled me”?—That is utterly untrue.

16238. Did you intend at any time during the time Sir George Bowen was here to station Mr. Hare out in a country district?—No. Mr. Hare was in charge of the depot all the time Sir George was here.

16239. Did you intend to remove him to any country station?—No, not the least intention.

16240. There was no intention at any time to give him charge of any other district?—No.

16241. How long has Mr. Hare remained in charge of the depot?—About ten or twelve years I think.

16242. Do you remember going up to Glenrowan after the burning of the hotel?—Yes.

16243. Were the police all paraded there before you then?—No, the next morning, at Benalla.

16244. Were the black trackers there?—They were in the barracks, but whether on parade I cannot tell.

16245. You do not remember whether they were there or not?—I do not think they were, but it is possible they were.

16246. Do you remember their being paraded before you along with the police there?—I am not positive, they may have been.

16247. Do you remember ordering them off the parade?—I saw that stated in the evidence, but I do not remember it, and I do not believe they were ever on parade. They may have been on the barracks. I saw that stated by some one, but it is not true.

16248. What position did you consider that the black trackers and Mr. O’Connor occupied at that time at Glenrowan—was it the position of volunteers?—No; they were temporarily attached to the police force as trackers.

16249. How could that be when they had their instructions to go home?—Then they consented to return.

16250. Was it as black trackers, or did Mr. O’Connor return as an officer in the Victorian police, or as a volunteer?—I will explain in a few words. I got the startling information of the massacre of Aaron Sherritt, and Mr. Hare, telegraphed at once to ask me to try and secure the services of Mr. O’Connor and the black trackers, and if possible to send them back that night by special train. I at once sent out Mr. O’Connor, and saw Mr. Ramsay and Mr. Gillies, and got an order for the special train, and came back to the club, and found him arrived just as I arrived, and he consented, after a good deal of “humming” and “hawing;” and he said the black trackers were at Mr. Smith’s house at Essendon, and the special train was to be sent there, which was done.

16251. Had you a long conversation with him?—No. He “hummed” and “hawed” and “pooh-poohed” a good deal, but the conversation did not last long. He was under orders to return to Queensland.
16252. Was not he, to all intents and purposes, disconnected with the police force of Victoria before he returned to that charge?—I suppose as long as he remained in Victoria he was reckoned in his previous capacity.

16253. Then why ask him as a favor to go up?—Because Mr. Hare sent word for him, and I submitted the matter to Mr. Ramsay, the Chief Secretary.

16254. Could you not have ordered him?—I fancy not.

16255. Would you have consulted them then as volunteers tracking for Aaron Sherritt’s murderers, as members of the police force of Victoria?—I think, after obtaining the Chief Secretary’s consent, I would have, and if they consented to continue their services—they were not members of the police force, they were attached to the police force.

16256. Suppose when Mr. O’Connor and his black trackers were at Beechworth, or Benalla, prior to his leaving, would he have been compelled to go out, if you had instructed him to do so?—If he had not been ordered home by the authorities at Queensland?

16257. No; I mean if he had remained there, stationed as he was, would he have been compelled to go out if you had ordered him?—Certainly.

16258. Could you have ordered him out when he was here?—No, I could not.

16259. What was the difference?—He was under orders to return home.

16260. He was an officer of the Queensland Government at the time?—Yes.

16261. And only that?—Yes.

16262. Consequently he and his men were only volunteers at Glenrowan?—Yes.

16263. You do not acknowledge he had any command at Glenrowan, or any right to undertake the command of the police there?—No.

16264. You remembering my referring you to the black trackers being ordered off parade. I have got the question here:—“By Mr. O’Connor. — There is still another conversation I must ask you to state, that is perhaps very objectionable to you, that is in reference to the general parade that was ordered after Glenrowan of all the men that were at Benalla who had been in the fight; will you give the Commission the facts in reference to that?” Mr. Sadleir replies:—“I will take the Commission’s word for going on. The police, I think at my suggestion, were put on parade, the whole of the men in barracks. I asked Captain Standish to say a kind word to them after all their work was over, and he consented at once. Then we came out into the yard, and he objected to including some four or five of the trackers that were there on the parade.” Does that recall it to your memory?—No, I do not believe that is true.

16265. You think it is not true?—I think it is not true.

16266. You would not swear it is not?—I am quite certain I would not have given orders to that effect.

16267. “By the Commission.—Mr. O’Connor’s Queensland men?—Yes. I know there were four or five, and he refused to say anything as long as they were in the ranks, so I fell them back out of the ranks. It was done publicly before the whole parade. I do not think his voice was heard. I do not think he spoke so as to be heard.—But everybody saw them retire?—Yes. You heard his voice?—Yes; he used some strong words, and I had to go and order the men back. The trackers did not understand it, and possibly the white police did not know.” If that were so, would it correspond with your general dealings with the black trackers?—Certainly not. They were all very decent fellows—the black trackers. I always had a kind word for them.

16268. You might have had a reason, considering they did not belong to the police force?—I will not say positively, but I do not think it did.

16269. You cannot charge your memory with it?—I cannot. I think it is very unlikely I would have ordered them off parade, and I am almost certain I did not do so.

16270. What position was Mr. Hare in after the capture of Power—was he promoted?—No; he was promised promotion, and never got the slightest advantage; but the other two got promotion Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Montfort—and nothing was done for Mr. Hare.

16271. How do you account for that?—It was not my fault.

16272. You recommended him for promotion?—Certainly.

16273. And it was never acted upon?—Never.

16274. What promotion did Mr. Nicolson get?—He was made Inspecting Superintendent.

16275. By Mr. Nicolson.—Was I promoted to that office by seniority?—I fancy it was so.

16276. Then I do not understand your saying I was promoted for the capture of Power?—Both you and Mr. Montfort got the promotion shortly after.

16277. Was I promoted to the rank of Superintending Officer for that or through being senior officer?—I believe you were senior officer.

16278. By the Commission.—Which was it; was it in consequence of the capture of Power, or because he was entitled to it by seniority?—I fancy it was on account of his seniority; Montfort was promoted also immediately in consequence of the assistance he rendered in the capture.

16279. I asked you whether it was natural for the other officers in the department to feel jealous at their being overlooked when Mr. Hare was being, as they considered, pushed forward before him, you considering, as you say, that he was the best man for it. I have got a question that was put by Mr. O’Connor to Mr. Sadleir on page 426—[reading the questions, 11963—11969].—Then he goes on to say that no doubt Captain Standish’s temper was infirm at times. Was it upon your recommendation that Mr. Hare alone was to be commended?—No, I got a telegram from the Governor after I returned to Benalla.
16280. Did you inform him of all the circumstances of the case?—I had not time. I came up in the morning by special train, and, unfortunately, after reaching Benalla, I was detained there about three hours, and when I got to Glenrowan the whole thing was over.

16281. When were you appointed Chief Commissioner of Police?—In September 1858.
16282. Were Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare then officers in the police force?—Mr. Hare was the junior officer at Maryborough and Mr. Nicolson was the superintendent of the detective force.
16283. That was your first official acquaintance with them?—Yes.
16284. When were you first brought into official contact personally with Mr. Nicolson?—Shortly after I joined the force.
16285. When first with Mr. Hare—I mean when you made his acquaintance?—I made his acquaintance when I visited the district four or five months after I joined, when he was stationed near Maryborough, a new goldfield named Talbot.
16286. For a long time you had confidence in Mr. Nicolson?—I had, but not latterly.
16287. When did your feelings towards Mr. Nicolson commence to change?—I always entertained the most kindly feelings, though I only met him on duty.
16288. I did not mean that about kindly feelings, but you considered some officers more efficient than others; when did you first lose your confidence in Mr. Nicolson’s efficiency?—After he had been a few months at Benalla after the Kelly gang.
16289. Up to that time you had thorough confidence in him, and after that you ceased to have the same confidence in him—is that so?—Yes.
16290. You were first brought into official communication with Mr. Hare shortly after you joined?—Yes.
16291. What opinion did you form of Mr. Hare?—I have always entertained a very high opinion of Mr. Hare ever since I have known him.
16292. As to his efficiency as an officer, not as a private man?—Yes.
16293. It was in consequence of this very high opinion of Mr. Hare that you gave him opportunities of distinguishing himself?—Well, the only two occasions in which he went on special duty were the capture of Power and the Kelly business.
16294. You selected him for that because he was the fittest man?—The fittest and best man for the work.
16295. Then, in any opportunities which Mr. Hare had over other officers, you thought you were consulting not the interests of Mr. Hare but of the force?—The interests of the public service.
16296. In selecting Mr. Hare to form a party for the capture of Power, and in sending him up to Benalla, you merely had the interest of the public service at heart and no other object?—Yes.
16297. You mentioned to-day that you had a conversation with Mr. Berry, then Chief Secretary, at just prior to your going to Benalla, and you then said you did not suppose the Kellys would be got very soon?—Yes.
16298. Might I ask what grounds you had for coming to that conclusion?—Knowing the state of the district—knowing they had heaps and heaps of confederates and allies—I merely told Mr. Berry, “I deem it my duty to point out to you I do not think we shall get them for many months.”
16299. During the last twenty years you have taken a very lively interest in what has taken place in regard to bushranging in the other colonies. Can you give the time the bushrangers of the other colonies eluded the police?—Sometimes two or three years.
16300. When did the number of stations in the North-Eastern district commence to be reduced?—Not very long after Mr. Nicolson returned there.
16301. I am not speaking of the Kelly outrages, but as to the number of stations being reduced before that—when did that take place?—Some four or five years ago.
16302. Can you give the Commission the reason why those reductions were made?—The persons in charge of the district thought some of the stations unnecessary.
16303. You say that was done on the advice of the officer in charge of the district?—Yes.
16304. That was not your suggestion?—No.
16305. Then the reduction in the number of stations in the district was done at the suggestion of the officers in charge of the district?—Yes, on their opinion.
16306. It was objected to by Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.
16307. Then, when the reduction in the North-Eastern district was made, it was done on the advice of the officer in charge, but against the advice of Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.
16308. You have read the evidence of the Honorable Robert Ramsay before the Police Reward Board?—No, I did not. [the same was handed to the witness.]
16309. Will you kindly read that?—[The witness did so.]
16310. Mr. Ramsay says that it was he who insisted on Mr. Hare going up to the North-Eastern district on the second occasion during the Service Ministry, a month or two before the capture of the outlaws, and that Mr. Hare was not at all anxious to go?—It is perfectly correct. I have stated that before.
16311. That fairly represents the state of affairs?—Yes.

The witness withdrew.

Frederick A. Winch further examined.

16312. By the Commission.—There is a portion of your evidence that you desired should be strictly private. Do you still desire it to be kept from the public?—I do not think it is desirable that the opinion given by one officer in respect to another should be made generally public, but I have no objection what ever for Mr. Sadleir to hear what I did say. It is a very trifling matter in itself. There is one thing, as I am here, I should like to state, and that is with respect to what Captain Standish said yesterday about my following him up stairs, and crying in his room. It is simply untrue, I say. I give it the most unqualified contradiction. As I said before, he asked me to go to his room, and said, as I have already said, let bygones be bygones, and so on.

16313. You want it to appear in the evidence that you contradict that distinctly?—Yes, I do; for we had not been on speaking terms for some time, and it was not likely I would go to his room. He invited me to go, and I thought it was a fine, manly thing of him to do.

16314. You say distinctly he invited you to go?—Yes.

The witness withdrew.

THURSDAY, 1ST SEPTEMBER 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. LONGMORE, M.L.A., in the chair;
G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.
G. W. Hall, Esq., M.L.A.,
G. C. Levey, Esq., C.M.G.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.

The Chairman.—John Sherritt met me at the door, and handed me this letter. [The same was read, and is as follows:]—“Paddington Hotel, August 31st, 1881. To the Honorable Francis Longmore and the Members of the Police Royal Commission. Honorable Gentlemen,—I see in the report of the evidence to-day before you that some person gave it as his opinion that the letter signed ‘M. Connor’ was concocted by me and others. I am ready to give evidence on oath that this is altogether false. I heard nothing of what is stated in that letter except about the ‘Sebastopol charge,’ and that I did not hear of until a week after it occurred, and I can prove on oath that all this is correct. I wish to inform you that I have been told by my mother and others, and do believe, that during the time I was giving evidence before you that Mrs. Nicolson, the wife of Mr. Superintendent Nicolson, was up in Beechworth, and asked magistrates and others to sign paper and to give evidence unfavorable to my character. I appeal to you, gentlemen, to protect me, as all this is done to blast my character unfairly. I have told the truth, and done nothing wrong or discreditable. I would pray of you to have me reinstated in the police force, and so enable me to clear my character and earn my livelihood, as was promised to me. Your most obedient servant, JOHN SHERRITT.”

Mr. Nicolson.—Might I take this opportunity of giving a complete denial to that part of his statement about Mrs. Nicolson.

16315. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—You deny the statement altogether?—Yes. Mrs. Nicolson was up at Beechworth, but not doing anything of that sort.

16316. Nothing of that kind was done?—No, not with reference to getting up a petition of any kind against this man. If desirable, Mrs. Nicolson will attend and give this information herself.

Francis Augustus Hare further examined.

16317. By the Commission.—The Commission is now ready to hear anything you have to say in reply?—I wish to commence my statement with drawing the attention of the Commission to the report that I sent in on the 2nd July 1880 to Captain Standish. In that I have made two statements which I wish to comment upon, and wish to draw the attention of the Commission to. Upon my report, Mr. Nicolson urges in his report of the 24th July that a Board should be appointed in consequence of “the recent publication of a report from Superintendent Hare, dated the 2nd instant, containing serious charges against me, compels me to bring the said application again under notice.” Now, in his evidence that he gave before the Commission here, he made no mention of those charges; and when asked by the Commission whether he had any explanation to make, his reply was, “I would rather wait until Mr. Hare gives his evidence. That is at questions 995—6. The statement in my report, that he gave me no verbal information, I still contend is correct, when I took charge from him on the 2nd of June. My evidence on page 79, with the entry that I made on that day, bears me out in this. Also Mr. Sadleir’s evidence (question 2526), where he says a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes was devoted by Mr. Nicolson to giving me information. I must leave it for the Commission to say whether I could take over the accounts of several agents, and receive information, and all that has been said here in a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes. Regarding what took place during the eleven months I was absent from the district, he most distinctly said nothing to me about the armour, and Mr. Sadleir told you in his evidence that he was the only one that believed that armour was made; nor yet about the mould-boards being stolen of which the armour was made; nor yet about Jack Sherritt giving the important information that has been discussed here; and many other things that have been stated to the Commission, which I need not enumerate. He said nothing to me about taking Aaron Sherritt from Everton to lead the way to Sebastopol, and that he had been seen by Chandler, who is a great sympathiser of the Kellys and the chief agent of Joe Byrne, nor did he say to me that the Kellys were completely under his control, as he states in his evidence. Mr. Nicolson in his evidence (question 767) says he used to meet his agents and enter information in his note book. How was I or Mr. Sadleir to know that information, and the contents of that book? I merely had all the papers which have been laid before the Commission to wade through, and hundreds of telegrams, besides information I never heard of until I came before this Commission. With regard to the second paragraph in my report, in reference to Mr. Nicolson banding over charge to me—[reading the same, printed above]—I wish to say that had I not sent for Ward the next morning, the Sherritt family would have been discharged, because they were all in our pay—that is to say, with the exception of Jack—the old people and Aaron Sherritt were. The strength of the Beechworth district was still further reduced by Armstrong being sent away, and the cave party was to be withdrawn with the men who were in Aaron Sherritt’s hut. Senior-Constable Mullan in his evidence (page 495) says he was ordered “To withdraw the watch party that was in the house. I may state that the watch party had been withdrawn from the house the morning, or the morning before, I got this telegram. It was withdrawn by order, I was informed, of Mr. Nicolson; that he told Sherritt to go back to the hut and tell the men to come back.” Now, I would point out to the Commission that in the case of the commander of an army being relieved by another officer, if he, after having handed over everything to his successor, was to give orders six hours afterwards to remove some of the outposts, and make several important changes, what would be said of him? I put myself in that position. There is another thing I wish to draw the attention of the Commission to. It is that it has been all along said here that I was only at Glenrowan five, ten, or twenty minutes on the morning of the 28th June. But the facts are these:—That I left Benalla at two o’clock on the morning of the 28th, and I returned within five minutes of five o’clock—I will say ten minutes. I allow thirty minutes for going to Glenrowan and ten for returning—I must have been two hours at Glenrowan. There can be no gain saying that fact. My telegram to Captain Standish is dated ten minutes past five. I walked straight to the Telegraph office, and that could not have taken more than fifteen minutes going there. Where could I have been the rest of the time unless at Glenrowan? The witnesses all give different versions of the affair. Some go as far as to say I was only five minutes on the ground, and you must remember I had no opportunity of cross-examining the majority of the witnesses that gave evidence on that subject before the Commission. My report that I have referred to of the 2nd July, on the capture of the Kellys, was dictated by myself, without the slightest assistance of any one, and was entirely from my recollection of the affair. I was very ill at the time it was written, and it was only four days after I was shot. Mr. O’Connor implied that some one assisted me in it, and no doubt he meant Captain Standish; and I state most positively that Captain Standish never saw it or had anything to do with it till I sent it to him officially. My reason for sending that so soon was because I saw no end of false reports daily appearing in the papers from different persons, and I was anxious that the Government should be furnished with the official report. I must leave the Commission to say whether my report was not a fair and faithful account of what took place on that morning. I do not think there is a line in that that has not been corroborated by those men who went with me. Some went further than I did, in stating the orders I gave them on that morning. There is one fact I wish to impress strongly on the Commission: that after I was shot I did not move one foot from the position I had taken up, but kept firing as fast as I could in the direction of those firing at me, and until I saw the outlaws retreat into the hotel. Then I called upon my men to disperse. I remember distinctly standing in front of the hotel by myself, and then returning to the station to try and stop the bleeding. When my hand was tied up I hastened back to my men, notwithstanding that I was pressed by those on the platform not to return, as I felt my place was with my men. I accordingly left; and after remaining behind the tree which I have described to the Commission, I was compelled to leave the field or bleed to death. Had I been able to return from Benalla after my wound was dressed I should have done so, but the Commission heard the state I was in then. I would point out that Ned Kelly was seriously wounded in the first engagement by a bullet in the foot and through the upper arm and lower arm—and with 95lbs. weight of iron, it was impossible for him to escape, besides being shot in the thumb. I put in now a declaration made by the attendant of Ned Kelly in the Melbourne gaol. I have not seen this man, but it was sent the day before yesterday by the Government medical officer at my request:—“I, Henry George Weston, of Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, now a confinee in Her Majesty’s Gaol, Melbourne, do solemnly and sincerely declare that Edward Kelly was received into the gaol hospital on the afternoon of the 2 June 1880. I was present when he was admitted, and attended on him subsequently, acting under instructions of Dr. Shields, the medical officer of the gaol, until his (Kelly’s) removal to Beechworth on the 31st July 1880. I had several conversations with Kelly during this period, while dressing his wounds and attending on him as aforesaid, in the course of some of which he told me (inter alia) that he was one of the first wounded in the continuing,
1st Sept. 1881.

Francis A. Hare,

the question of the capture of the Kellys came up in the Cabinet, and formed the subject of several discussions. At that time there was evidently a very strong feeling in the public mind that the police were to blame in connection with the proceedings for the capture of these men. Articles appeared daily in the public press, in various portions of the colony, calling attention to the delay that had taken place and the want of organization in connection with the pursuit of these criminals. I had several interviews with the Chief Commissioner of Police on the subject, and communicated the result of those interviews to the Cabinet. At last the matter was put into my hands to deal with on my own responsibility, and, as the result of that, and of enquiries I made, I told Captain Standish that in my opinion Mr. Hare was the officer in the police who was most likely to effect a capture. I had instituted independent enquiries, and gathered information from various sources. I requested the Commissioner to send for Mr. Hare, and I saw him at the Chief Secretary’s office either at the end of April or the beginning of May, and I told him that the matter had been discussed by the Cabinet, and the conclusion arrived at was that he was to proceed to Benalla and take the entire control of the pursuit of those men. I told him that in doing so he was to feel himself entirely unrestrained by any regulation of any kind—in fact, he was to assume the entire responsibility, and in whatever steps he took for that purpose he would have the entire support of the Government. In regard to money, he was to feel that he was unfettered, that the utmost confidence was placed in his judgment that his proceedings would not involve unnecessary expenditure, but that if money could be profitably employed in the capture of these men he was to feel himself entirely unrestrained. He told me, in reply, that there were men in the force who were his seniors, and he felt himself in a position of difficulty on that account. He then referred to his health, and I told him that it was of the utmost importance in fight with the police at Glenrowan, while he was on the verandah of the hotel. That, as soon as he heard the train stop, he knew there had been foul play, meaning (as he explained) that the police had received information that the gang were at Glenrowan, and he and his mates then prepared for resistance. He distinctly told me that he recognized Superintendent Hare, and took deliberate aim at him, and when Kelly was told that Superintendent Hare was severely wounded in the wrist he seemed much pleased, and described to me the position the Superintendent was in (according to Kelly’s idea) when he received his wound, viz., a ‘firing’ position, and made use of words similar to the following:—’The ——meant to have shot me or my mates; I wish the bullet had struck him two inches lower.’ On my asking him why he deserted his mates, he replied (in words similar to the following):—’I had plenty of mates in the neighborhood ready to join us, but I couldn’t mount my horse, the flap of my armour broke, and my arm was useless.’ The wound in his arm, he said, was received in the first volley of the police while he was on the verandah at Jones’s hotel, and the wound in the thumb, received early in the fight, prevented him from using his gun, as he could not ‘cock’ it. In reply to a question as to why Byrne and his other mates did not come out of the hotel and join him, he said (in words similar to the following):—’Ah, if they could have, there would have been a different tale to tell,’ meaning that Byrne and the others, or one, or some of them, were wounded. Kelly told me when he returned to the hotel and signalled to his mates, by rapping on his armour, that Byrne crawled on his hands and knees as far as the kitchen at the back of the hotel, with the object of joining him, but that he (Byrne) must have fainted from loss of blood or the weight of his armour. When I told Kelly that his mates had died a horrible death by burning, he replied (in words similar to the following):—’No fear; if they were alive I am sure they ‘finished’ one another when they found the gam connection with the matter that he should take the responsibility. I then had an interview with Captain Standish, in which I briefly related these matters to him. I afterwards saw Superintendent Nicolson, and he asked that he might be allowed a still further time in order to pursue his own line of action with reference to the capture of the Kellys, and I allowed him a month further, and Mr. Hare’s proceeding to Benalla was delayed for that time. At the expiry of the month Superintendent Hare proceeded to Benalla and took entire charge, with my full concurrence, and that of the Government.

1. I say responsibility to no one but the Government?—It is responsible to no one but the Government. There is another matter that perhaps I should mention. Mr. Hare mentioned, in connection with his state of health, that he felt he was taking a great responsibility in going, that he was going at the risk of his life, and that his determination was not to come down until the men were captured. He spoke of having been engaged in the capture of Power, and of the promise that had been made by the Chief Secretary of promotion in the event of that capture, which promise remained unfulfilled up to that time; and he showed me a letter, signed by Mr. Moore, who was then Under Secretary—Sir James McCulloch being the Chief Secretary—bearing on the subject, and he said he hoped that if his life was sacrificed this matter should be considered. I assured him that, in the event of the Government remaining in office, that should certainly be done, and in the event of any changes taking place I would leave a minute with my successors, whoever they might be. This is the minute that I left—“Having with some difficulty induced Mr. Hare to take charge of the entire arrangements for the capture of the Kelly gang on the distinct promise from me that, as he did so at the imminent risk of his life, he should be substantially rewarded if successful. I feel it only due to him to place on record that, had the Ministry remained in office, Mr. Hare would have been promoted to the first vacancy in the force and a substantial sum would have been placed on the Estimates as some acknowledgment for his most valuable services. The great energy he displayed, the risk he ran, and the serious and unfortunately permanent injury he has sustained, all render this duty so incumbent on those who follow, that I feel assured my successor will have no hesitation in adopting the same course.”—9th July 1880.”

3. The promise you made as Chief Secretary, on behalf of the Government, was with reference to promotion—giving Mr. Hare a reward for his services if he succeeded?—Distinctly so—promotion and a substantial recognition. It was fully my intention to have promoted him if any vacancy had occurred, because it was a matter in which the whole public of the colony was concerned.

4. And if his health was injured, you would give a substantial recognition?—Certainly. With regard to the Kelly gang, it was a matter affecting the whole of Australia; it was the common talk whenever two people met.

5. Would it be a fair question to ask what sum you contemplated putting on the Estimates?—I have not the slightest doubt that if £5,000 had been proposed at the time, there would not have been a dissentient voice. I feel it would be a very small recognition; in fact the proceedings of those men were a heavy incubus on the entire colony, rendering life and property unsafe.

6. From your experience as a public man, you are still of opinion the State should recognize Mr. Hare’s services?—I am.

7. What change was made in the mode of proceeding after Mr. Hare went up?—It seemed to me that Mr. Hare was a man who had a wonderful faculty of infusing his own spirit into his men—that instead of being trammelled by regulation, he selected the men in whom he had confidence, and he allowed them a considerable latitude. In the next place, he was thoroughly acquainted with the country—he had the means of getting information that no one else had at the time. In fact, if I were to go into some matters within my own knowledge, I could satisfy the Board on the point but of course a great deal of the information was confidential, involving a great many people in the district. There was such a reign of terror that those who were resident in the district were afraid of giving the slightest clue to the police, for fear their lives might be sacrificed. All these matters were gone into between Mr. Hare and myself; in fact, from the time Mr. Hare was appointed, there was a spirit of energy displayed in the pursuit of those men that was altogether unknown up to that period.

8. Did the Chief Commissioner of Police coincide in your judgment?—He did.

9. How long was Mr. Hare up there before those men were taken?—He was up on the 2nd of June, and they were taken on the 28th of June. In relation to that, that is one of the matters to which Mr. Hare referred, he told me that those men were in fear of the black trackers, that so long as they remained there they were not likely to break cover, but immediately the trackers were removed they would be at once heard of, and his plan of operations was such that their capture was certain immediately they made their appearance.

10. Was the reward spoken of to Mr. Hare as an inducement?—I do not know anything about that.

11. “I received a communication from you that Mr. O’Connor and his black trackers were to be sent back to Queensland”—was that Mr. Hare’s idea or the Government?—We had sent up to Queensland for black trackers; Mr. Chomley had gone up to Queensland to obtain them—in fact, they were on their way down at the time.

12. Why were they sending away Mr. O’Connor’s men?—were they of no use?—It was thought that others could be got down equally efficient—in fact, the Queensland Government were anxious to get those trackers back.

16318. Referring to your own report of the 2nd July, will you look at paragraph 3:—“I accordingly, on the 2nd June, went up there. I arrived at Benalla about 11 o’clock that day. I saw Messrs. Nicolson, Sadleir, and O’Connor in the office. After some conversation on general subjects, Mr. Nicolson produced a letter he had received from you, directing him to give me all the information he had obtained concerning the Kelly gang during his stay at Benalla. He showed me the state of his financial account with one of his agents, and said there was rioting owing to any of the others. He opened a drawer and showed me a number of papers and the correspondence which had taken place during his stay at Benalla, and said, ‘You can get all the information from these papers.’ He gave me no verbal information what ever, but said. ‘Mr. Sadleir can tell you all I know concerning the movements of the outlaws.’ He left the office, and I never spoke to him again, and he went to Melbourne by the evening train. The principal agent employed by Mr. Nicolson I had appointed to meet me that evening. He was one who was considered the best man they had. After talking with him a few minutes, he positively refused to work for me or have anything to do with me, although he had accompanied the police from Beechworth the previous day for the purpose of having an interview with me. That evening I telegraphed to Detective Ward to come down to Benalla the next morning by train. He did so, and, after some Conversation, he informed me that on the previous evening the senior constable in charge of Beechworth had received a telegram from Mr. Nicolson to pay off all the agents he had employed. I at once endeavored to... obtain a copy of this telegram in the office, but there was no record kept of it, nor did the clerks know anything about it, so I presume it must have been sent from the railway telegraph office, as Mr. Sadleir knew nothing whatever about it.” The effect of all that is to make a very grave charge against Mr. Nicolson—that he not only gave you no assistance whatever in the way of giving you any information in his possession, but that he prevented you from getting that information from others, and that he both actively and passively prevented you from getting information that was in his hands. After hearing Mr. Nicolson’s evidence and others, do you wish to withdraw that?—No, not in the slightest.

16319. Then, in fact, you charge Mr. Nicolson with not giving you all the information in his possession when you took charge at Benalla?—I charge him with not carrying out Captain Standish’s instructions, and not giving me all the information in his possession at the time.

16320. Do you feel at liberty to say who that principal agent is?—“Rennick.” You see in my statement I merely gave the fact about him that he came down from Beechworth for the purpose of giving information, that night I met him, and that he got into the train and went away.

16321. Then if Mr. Nicolson states that he gave all the information in his power, he is not stating the facts?—Exactly. I have stated fully in regard to that already. Before I go into the fact of my being sent up by Mr. Ramsay, I wish to explain to the Commission, and I hope it may get the same publicity as the statement made by Captain Standish yesterday with reference to my being favored with regard to the police force. I just take that one case of Power’s solely. Mr. Nicolson and myself were directed to go after Power, and we took Mr. Montfort with us. Power was captured, and the Government thanked us in Parliament and wrote us complimentary letters, and said that we should be promoted. Mr. Montfort was promoted at once from a sergeant to a sub-inspector, and now is placed in charge of the North-Eastern district in the same position as a Superintendent of Police. Mr. Nicolson was at that time, as he has told you, in charge at Kyneton. He was receiving a salary of £375 a year; he was moved to Melbourne immediately after the Power business, and he was placed, as well as being in charge of the city, in charge of the detectives, for which he received £100 a year. His predecessor did not receive that sum, and his successor did not receive that amount. Mr. Nicolson subsequently was promoted to Inspecting-Superintendent. At the time that he obtained the appointment his predecessor was receiving £425 a year; he (Mr. Nicolson) received an increase of £75 a year, and has received £500 a year since. Subsequently he was made the Assistant-Commissioner of Police. Now I take my position. I was the officer in charge of the depot at the time of the Power capture. I was receiving £350 a year as superintendent of the depot. About three or four years after the Power capture the two classes of superintendents were amalgamated, and I received an extra £25, which brought my salary—mine and that of three or four superintendents—to £375. I am receiving that salary at the present day. It has been said that I was promoted over the heads of others; where is the promotion? The two officers with me both received promotion, and I am in the same position of superintendent as I was then. Now, with regard to the Kelly business, where also I was supposed to be put over the heads of other officers and promoted. Sergeant Kennedy was shot on a certain date; immediately the news came to Melbourne Captain Standish sent Mr. Nicolson up to the district, being the inspecting-superintendent, whose place it was to be there. He remained there till the Euroa Bank robbery. Captain Standish then went up himself. I was in his office at twelve o’clock. I received a telegram after he left that I was to report myself that evening at Euroa. I immediately got my horses and things ready, and started off at once. I stayed up there acting under Captain Standish for seven months. I did, as you have been told over and over again, the hard work of searching throughout the whole time I was up there, camping out in the mountains all the time. I stayed there till I was so completely knocked up that I had to be carried on a trap to the nearest station to where I was. I asked Captain Standish to let me come to town; he acceded to my request. I came down and went to work again in my own district, after having gone through hardships which nobody here, and very few people in the country could realize what I went through—however that is past. I came down to town and Mr. Nicolson was sent up he was up there for eleven months. I was sent for then by Mr. Ramsay, not Captain Standish, and ordered, against my wish, to go and take charge of this business. I protested against doing so, and I go up there; the matter is brought to a termination, and at the end of that time I am wounded and injured for life; I suffer a considerable amount of pain and agony. Directly I am well enough I go back to my duty, and the Commission is appointed. I never asked for the Commission. I never say a word about anything, and perform my duty until this Commission is appointed. I am brought here and suspended from my duty for five months, and I am now in the same position as I was before Power’s case. Where is the promotion—where is the favoritism? I think on the contrary. I was looking over a file of papers in my office this morning. In the year 1871 a vacancy occurred amongst the first-class superintendents (which was the paltry sum of £25 a year). I wrote and asked Captain Standish to give me that vacancy. He declined—he said, “No; why should you be put over the heads of all the other officers senior to you? You must wait your turn to be promoted.” I have the file here. He writes there and says he will not promote me, and recommends the Government not to do it. I wrote a second time, and asked when the vacancy occurred. In the first instance I was referred to Sir James McCulloch, and he agreed with Captain Standish. The second time a vacancy occurred I applied again to Captain Standish, and he referred it to Mr. Berry, and it was again refused; and then I am told here that Captain Standish has favored me. He has made me do all the hard work; he has sent me, not only in these cases, but in many other cases, to do work I ought not to have been called upon to do. I was sent up to the Murray on duty there, though there was a superintendent in the district, and it was a very responsible post there. After it is all over everybody is very wise, and say it was a simple thing to do. It was not Captain Standish sent me there, it was Colonel Mair. I got the thanks of Sir James McCulloch and the Commissioner of Customs then, but that is all. There was another case in 1855; the Governor recommended me for my services and said I would be promoted. Here is a letter I will put in evidence which shows you I got the promotion, and it is mentioned at the same time that there is no pay attached to it. The letter has been given in evidence here (vide question 1601 above). Again, on the 14th of August there is this letter (also at question 1601). There is also a letter the Governor wrote to me at the same time—[reading the same]. I will now go back again to the declaration by Mr. Ramsay. I may state to the Commission that one reason I did not at once accept the position offered to me, to take charge of the Kelly business, when spoken to by Captain Standish and Mr. Ramsay, on my being sent for in June 1880, was because my health had suffered to such an extent the previous seven months in the North-Eastern district that I thought it was unfair to myself

598 to have to undertake the same exposure again, which appeared to me as certain death. However, when Mr. Ramsay put the matter in the way he did, I had no alternative but to accept the position, and do what I could to bring the matter to a termination. Another thing was, I knew I would bring down the displeasure of the senior officers on me, which I have done, and the Commission have seen the animus shown towards me during this enquiry. I never had a quarrel with any officer in the force, and have always been on good terms with them all. I have been ready and anxious to do my duty to the best of my ability, and I will continue to do so as long as I am in the force. I wish to draw your attention to the fact that I have received a very severe wound in the execution of my duty, from which I shall suffer pain for the rest of my life. It is surely very unfair that I should receive nothing but promises, and then be told I had been promoted under different rules. If the rule is carried out in lower grades I do not see why it should not be in the upper grades. I always complained to Captain Standish that he should select a senior officer to do the work, and told him that whilst I had been camping in the mountains 16322. Your first complaint is that Mr. Nicolson did not give you any information?—Yes.

16323. Now Mr. Nicolson, in question 900, replies:—"I spent over an hour in the presence of Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O'Conor, and I gave him during that time all the information I could think of; and turned from time to time to Mr. Sadleir, and asked him, "Is there anything else, Mr. Sadleir, you can suggest?"—and Mr. Sadleir from time to time would tell me if he had thought so, and remind me; but I presume it would be better to defer that till Mr. Hare has been examined." Was Mr. Sadleir present when Mr. Nicolson was giving you the information?—He was.

16324. I see Mr. Sadleir estimates the time at about fifteen or twenty minutes?—Yes.

16325. Did Mr. Nicolson give you that information so far as he relates?—No, not beyond what I have said—giving me the accounts of the different agents, their aliases, and how they were to be written to. I do not remember one circumstance he told me about the Kellys.

16326. Did he appeal to Mr. Sadleir?—Yes.

16327. If there was anything else?—Yes, he did.

16328. Would it be your impression from his manner that he had exhausted his information?—He never commenced any.

16329. But he states he did?—I say he did not give me any information.

16330. Then did he turn round and appeal to Mr. Sadleir to know if there was anything that he ought to inform you of?—Yes, he did. I took that to be with reference to the accounts alone.

16331. Did Mr. Sadleir suggest anything else that he might tell you?—I do not recollect that he did. I think not.

16332. Was Mr. Sadleir acquainted with nearly everything that was going on in the North-Eastern district?—I should fancy he was.

16333. Was he, so far as you know, equally well informed as Mr. Nicolson?—He was, to a certain extent; but Mr. Nicolson, as I have said in my evidence, was in the habit of taking notes in his books on meeting his agents—these notes were taken with him to Melbourne.

16334. Except those private notes of his own, would Mr. Sadleir be equally well informed?—I do not know. I fancy Mr. Sadleir knew a great deal, but Mr. Nicolson must have known a lot more.

16335. Did Mr. Sadleir give you any information when you were up there that Mr. Nicolson omitted?—Yes, every bit of it. Mr. Sadleir gave me all the information that I could have possibly expected from him.
16336. Did Mr. Nicolson draw your attention to the files of papers as they were docketed and put up, and say that all the information was there?—He did.

16337. And you had Mr. Sadleir’s assistance—loyal assistance—in giving all information?—Yes, certainly.

16338. Did you have any intercourse with the agent signing himself “Diseased Stock”?—I had; I wrote to him immediately Mr. Nicolson went away—under an alias.

16339. Did Mr. Nicolson introduce you to him?—No, but I introduced him to Mr. Nicolson—not man to man, but told Mr. Nicolson, when he relieved me on the first occasion about him. I had seen him three or four times or more myself. He came to see me at Benalla, and I had been to his selection to see him after that.

16340. You knew him before Mr. Nicolson knew him?—Yes.

16341. If there is a letter of Mr. Nicolson’s about the “diseased stock” agent, giving you all the information he could, would that bear out your idea with reference to Mr. Nicolson not giving you any information and trying to prevent you getting it?—Certainly. I say he gave me no verbal information. I put the word “verbal” information.

16342. In your report you say, “The senior-constable in charge of Beechworth had received a telegram from Mr. Nicolson to pay off all the agents he had employed”? That is a subsequent thing, not referring to this.

16343. Would you think that such a very serious charge against Mr. Nicolson, when he left a gentleman almost his own equal (Mr. Sadleir) in full possession of all the facts to give to you?—I stated it I found it. I have made no reflections.

16344. Well, it is a very serious charge?—Well, I stated facts.

16345. Was it in any way interfering with your usefulness?—The telegram to Mullane was, most certainly. And I think also that Mr. Nicolson might have given me a lot of information and his ideas of the matter that Mr. Sadleir might have differed with him in, and which he did not give me. As far as the armour was concerned, Mr. Sadleir said he did not believe in it. He said Mr. Nicolson was the only one that did believe in it.

16346. Then, the information Mr. Nicolson had about the armour was doubted by the man next to him?—Yes.

16347. It was simply a report that one believed in and the other did not?—Yes; but one had facts, and the other had not. Mr. Nicolson had the facts as to the mould-boards being stolen. He knew—I heard afterwards—that some iron was first beaten up and tried. The “diseased stock” man said that, and upon that they tried the mould-boards. Mr. Nicolson knew about that, and I knew nothing about that till I saw this “diseased stock” agent.

16348. Do you remember seeing that in the papers. Was that before or after you saw the “stock” man?—I fancy it was in the papers before that the mould-boards had been stolen.

16349. Was not that information in the possession of Mr. Sadleir as well as Mr. Nicolson?—I suppose it was, but I never heard it till I saw the “diseased stock” man.

16350. Do you remember, on reflection, that the matter was ever discussed between you and Mr. Sadleir before you saw him?—No. I cannot remember, but I know it was discussed in the presence of Mr. Sadleir, and the “diseased stock” man was present.

16351. You do not remember hearing Mr. Sadleir express his dissatisfaction at Mr. Nicolson keeping back information from him?—No, quite the reverse. He said at first Mr. Nicolson did, but then he (Mr. Sadleir) put up his back, and then Mr. Nicolson told everything.

16352. You never found Mr. Sadleir keep back anything?—No; he always consulted in the most friendly manner, and co-operated entirely.

16353. Did he not do that with Mr. Nicolson?—He told me, when Mr. Nicolson first came back, he found that he was withholding information from him; but he came to a stand with him, and from that time he gave all the information in his power.

16354. The inference you draw from that is that there was a temporary estrangement between the two?—Not estrangement. Mr. Nicolson is a very secret man. We have all very different temperaments. I am just the reverse.

16355. With the exception of this short interval for explanation between Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadleir, there was no misunderstanding between them?—I do not think so at all.

16356. Did that, in your estimation, amount to a misunderstanding?—No.

16357. Then the chances are that Mr. Sadleir, who was colleague of Mr. Nicolson at that time, was working in perfect co-operation with him as his superior officer?—I fancy so.

16358. Then the chances are he would be in possession of the most important particulars of any evidence that was of value to the police force as well as Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

16359. Then, in that case, the time that Mr. Nicolson had it in his discretion to communicate those matters of information to you, of course his opinion might have been that Mr. Sadleir, being in possession of them, they would be available to you equally as well as if he had divulged them?—No doubt it was, but Mr.
Francis A. Hare,

1st Sept. 1881.

Nicolson opened a letter from Captain Standish, by which he was directed to give me all the information in his power.

16360. Is it your opinion that Mr. Nicolson wilfully withheld from your information matters which were within his knowledge, which would act detrimentally to your carrying out your duties there?—I say he did withhold them—whether he did it wilfully I cannot say—because he gave me no information.

16361. Was the impression you formed then, that Mr. Nicolson, from bad temper or any other cause, did wilfully withhold information?—I did think that at the time.

16362. Do you think, from what has transpired since, that that was what actuated him?—Yes, I undoubtedly do.

16363. Might it not have been disappointment?—It might have been; he was annoyed equally with myself.

16364. Where is the difference in the two positions. If Mr. Nicolson was guilty of any act which would interfere with the service, it was very serious; and even if merely from temper and disappointment he did not communicate as he might, the evil would have been just as great?—That is for you to decide. I have merely stated the facts.

16365. Was Mr. Nicolson guilty of what would certainly amount to a great evil on his part if he withheld any information from you?—I say he withheld all information, and I complain of that, together with the fact of his sending that telegram after seeing me.

16366. As a matter of fact, do you consider the successful carrying out of your duties was interfered with in the slightest degree by any information that was withheld?—I think Mr. Nicolson could have given a great number of important facts about agents, principally about that man Jack Sherritt. I think it was his duty to have told me that man was in communication with him, but I never heard it till he gave his evidence before this Board.

16367. Was not that within the knowledge of Mr. Sadleir?—I do not know. I suppose it was, but I never knew it.

16368. It may not have occurred to him at the time?—No.

16369. The question is: within your knowledge, did any circumstance transpire which led you to form the conclusion that, had Mr. Nicolson given you the information he possessed, you would have more successfully carried on matters?—Yes; the circumstances of Jack Sherritt. I am told by him that he was in constant communication with the outlaws. Up to the time he wrote that letter to me I did not know anything about him, or that he had been employed. Had I known that I would have gone straight to him.

16370. Did not the documents disclose it?—I never saw it. As I say, I never heard it till it came out before the Commission.

16371. Did you discover soon that Mr. Nicolson had not given you information?—No. I did not discover soon. The first thing I discovered was about that telegram; that was the first thing that led me to believe I would have to work very hard in reading over papers.

16372. Did you discuss the matter with Mr. Sadleir then?—No, I did not; I never mentioned it to him, because I knew that Mr. Sadleir was very great friends with Mr. Nicolson. He was very adverse to my coming up there, and I wanted to keep on as good terms as possible with Mr. Sadleir, and not raise any points of discussion with him.

16373. Did Mr. Sadleir exhibit any coolness to you then?—No, not at all. I know he did not approve of it, by his own letters to me. He begged and implored of me not to come up; said I was a great fool, and it was a great mistake my ever coming up.

16374. Did he assign any reason?—For the good of the service solely. He said it was a wrong move for the Government or Captain Standish to make.

16375. You having accepted the position?—I was ordered to go. I did not accept it; I was compelled to go.

16376. You obeyed the order to go?—Yes.

16377. Did you observe any coolness in Mr. Sadleir’s demeanour towards you?—No.

16378. Any disinclination to the proper discharge of duty?—I did not; and on one occasion I said, “Sadleir, I cannot help thanking you for the kindness you have shown throughout this matter, in giving all the information you can. I did not expect it from the way you wrote about my coming here.”

16379. It did not interfere with your work?—No.

16380. You worked very harmoniously?—Yes.

16381. There is nothing that has transpired since that leads you to consider that Mr. Nicolson possessed information that Mr. Sadleir did not?—No; except his private entries in his private books.

16382. When you discovered this wrong towards you by Mr. Nicolson, did you report it?—I did not at the time, because I did not want to raise ill blood between myself and anybody connected with Mr. Nicolson.

16383. Would not you consider that would raise ill blood at a later period?—I did not care then; it was all over. I had but one object in view.

16384. Will you read that rule 44, in the Police Manual?—[The witness did so as follows:——] “Any member of the force feeling himself injured or aggrieved must bring the circumstances of the case under the notice of his superior officer at once; for if he broods over his grievances, real or imaginary, and delays making his statement, his motives will be judged of by such delay, and his statement questioned in proportion to it.

16385. Do you not think it would have been better, in the interests of the force, to have reported at once?—No, quite the reverse; I thought it would raise more enemies round me.

16386. To your superior officer, Captain Standish?—I did write to him privately but not officially, because there would have been an enquiry about it. I said Mr. Nicolson had left me without giving information.

16387. Did that impression suddenly occur to your mind, that Mr. Nicolson was withholding information?—No. I merely said it was his duty to have given all the information instead of referring to Mr. Sadleir, and I made a minute that night, which I can produce.

16388. It strikes me that, if at the time you were struck with the impression that Mr. Nicolson (who was relinquishing charge) withheld information, you would naturally have remonstrated with him?—No; he was my superior officer. I said nothing to him, and stood passively by, receiving what I could get.

16389. You made no complaint to him?—No.

16390. Did not Captain Standish upon several occasions indicate to Mr. Nicolson that he had no confidence in the secret spy system?—I do not remember; I was not with him on any occasion when he was with Mr. Nicolson.

16391. Did he tell you at any time that he had told Mr. Nicolson that his secret spy system was no good?—I do not remember his doing that. He did at a private conversation—not officially.

16392. Have you become aware from the evidence that he ridicules the spy system?—Yes.

16393. Had you any conversation with him before you went up, when he slighted that spy system?—No. I do not remember his giving any advice then. He inspected the depot twice a week; at ten o’clock in the morning, he told me that I was to go to Benalla to take charge of the Kelly business. Then, in the afternoon, I saw Mr. Ramsay, and then a month elapsed before I was sent up.

16394. You did not hear him make any remarks about the inadequacy of the spy system?—He gave me no information, and no advice. Mr. Ramsay said I was to go, and do what I liked. Captain Standish did not advise anything about the spies.

16395. You mention a telegram to Mullane. The telegram is, “Send Constable Armstrong back to his station.” This was from the Benalla railway station, 6 p.m. You remember his explanation of that, that he remembered that had been spoken of, but that he only remembered it just at the instant he went to the station?—Yes, I heard that.

16396. “Send Constable Armstrong back to his station. Withdraw watch party, and send them to duty.” What watch party was that?—In Aaron Sherritt’s house.

16397. “Any further orders from Superintendents Hare or Sadleir? Detective Ward already instructed that no further authority for money or supplies to Tommy or his friends.” Was that not simply a notification that those men were to come to you for instructions?—No, certainly not. The other agents did not come to me for instructions.

16398. Could you not have known from Superintendent Sadleir all about this man?—He did not tell Mr. Sadleir about it, or give him a copy of the telegram.

16399. Do you mean to charge Mr. Nicolson with having done this covertly for a purpose?—That is for you to decide. I merely give you the facts.

16400. He does not stop Tommy or his friends by this telegram from co-operating with you?—No. But you must remember I never saw that telegram till I saw it before the Commission. I was going upon the words Detective Ward used to me on the morning he came down from Benalla the day after I arrived there. He said, “Mr. Nicolson has instructed that Tommy and all the people are to be discharged.”

16401. Mr. Nicolson did not give that instruction apparently—“Detective Ward already instructed that no further authority for money or supplies to Tommy or his friends”?—Yes; that was not the statement that Detective Ward gave me, but still I contend that should not have been sent without a copy being sent to me at the office, or Mr. Sadleir informed.

16402. There is one question I would like to ask you with reference to Mr. Nicolson’s leaving Benalla—do you know whether he had any special instructions to leave Benalla soon after you took charge?—I do not think so. A letter of Captain Standish’s, which has been put in, shows that Mr. Nicolson was directed to hand over and give me all the information, and then leave, and he left at night. I thought he would have stayed with me for two or three days.

16403. Then you did not at the time think of that as a matter to charge Mr. Nicolson with having done any wrong towards you when he left—so soon after he left?—No, I do not; but I told Captain Standish that, and as I told you before, I did not wish to make any enemies. I went up as a kind of enemy of my brother officers, and I did not wish to say anything about it then.

16404. Were you aware at that time whether there was a feeling amongst the officers that Captain Standish was unduly favoring you?—Yes, I was; but I always pointed out to them that I did not see where the favoring came in, that I had to do the work, and I got no reward.

16405. Did you ever make representations to Captain Standish yourself, when you were asked to go upon any of those duties, that there were superior officers who had claims?—On every occasion I did. When I met him at Euroa, the first time I went up, I said—"Standish, it is too bad your ordering me up here and making me go through the business of undertaking this work," for I knew if the Kellys had been caught whilst he was up there, that he, being in charge, would get the credit, and that I should have done the work.

16406. You mentioned in your statement that you have never got any promotion, or that your promotion has come very slowly?—I got none but my ordinary promotion from that time. I may tell you that I was once put over the head of Mr. Nicholas, the superintendent in charge at Stawell, now in the Wimmera district. I was put over him and made a superintendent before him. It was years before the Kelly business—\

16407. Was it any better position for you to be in the Depot than to be out in a country district?—No, not at all. I liked it better; at least it was the head-quarters of Captain Standish, and he visited the place twice a week, but I got no extra pay for it. I did for a year get £100 a year, but my successor also got it. When I went home Mr. Ramsay gave it to me, and Mr. Winch retains it to the present day, as we were supposed to have the greatest number of men and the greatest responsibility.

16408. Are there not quarters and attendance in that to make up something?—Nothing. The officers in charge—Mr. Sadleir, Mr. Nicolson, and Mr. Winch—received the £100 a year extra beyond their pay, and I had Government quarters, and got nothing out of it.

16409. Do you remember when you came back from Europe; it was in 1878?—Yes.

16410. I see there was an order made that you should take charge of the Ovens district?—Yes.

16411. Mr. Berry put a memo. on, "Superintendent Harre to go to the Beechworth district"?—Yes.

16412. Did you go to the Beechworth district?—I did not. May I state the whole circumstances of the case. I applied for twelve months' leave of absence, for the purpose of going to Europe, to the Chief Secretary of the day, Mr. Macpherson. Previous to doing so I asked Captain Standish if he would recommend it. He said, "Yes, I will the leave of absence, but you must make your own arrangements about returning to the Depot." I said, "Very well." I went up to Sandhurst, and I saw Mr. Chomley, and I said, "I have got an opportunity of going to Europe, on twelve months' leave; will you take my place at the Depot whilst I am away and give it back on my return, because, unless I can get it back, I do not think I will go." He said he would, and took charge of the Depot. On my return Mr. Chomley was fully prepared to give up charge, and carry out my agreement, but Mr. Berry ordered me up to Beechworth. I asked Captain Standish to point out to Mr. Berry the agreement that been made between Mr. Chomley and myself. He said he had done so. I said, "Will you ask Mr. Berry if he will allow an interview with him," and he said, the next day, "Mr. Berry did not want to see you; you must go to the Ovens," and he said he could not assist me in the matter. "Then," I said, "I will ask some private friends to interest themselves." Subsequently, I got a letter from Mr. Chomley, offering to carry out the agreement between us, and I sent it to Mr. Berry; and Mr. Chomley offered to go to Beechworth himself, and I go to the Depot, and upon that Mr. Berry agreed to that.

16413. Do you remember why Mr. Chomley objected to go to Beechworth at first, and afterwards agreed to go?—No; he did not want to go to Beechworth; neither did I; but he wanted to carry out his contract with me, and he gave me this in writing.

16414. I see that it is between the 8th and 19th February 1878 that Mr. Berry made the altered order himself. What was the nature of the pressure brought to bear on him?—I spoke to two or three friends, and spoke to Sir George Bowen on two or three occasions, and in course of conversation told him I was going to Beechworth, and if he could do anything I would consider it a great favour.

16415. What is the nature of your objection to going to a distant district, instead of remaining in town?—Because I have been accustomed to the district and know it. I have it in very good order, the men know me, and I would have to begin afresh if I went up to Beechworth. It takes three or four years to get accustomed to the men.

16416. When you were allowed to remain in town, and Mr. Chomley sent to Beechworth, I see that he was a first-class superintendent at that time, and you were a second-class?—Yes, he had been at Sandhurst for very many years. He did not wish to remove from there, because I remember suggesting once that he should apply for a certain district, and he did not wish to leave Sandhurst.

16417. This was a matter of arrangement between you and Mr. Chomley?—Entirely a private arrangement, sanctioned by the head of the department. I think that now these things are being looked up against me, and a number of officers giving evidence against me, in that case you should call for papers about other officers being removed, and everything else.

16418. Do you think, from your knowledge of what occurred in the North-Eastern district, that your bringing your own men from the Bourke district to that district had any effect in causing jealousy throughout the force?—No; there were men from every district in the colony brought there; and I, knowing my own men, preferred my own men when I went up there naturally.

16419. You in your evidence said a constable, sixty miles away, had informed you about Mr. Nicolson’s cave party; could you give the name of that constable?—As I said before, I can give it.

16420. I think you ought to give it. I may say there is an extraordinary delicacy shown about men by the officers, but the officers cast every possible imputation at one another. Witnesses are asked who told them what they mention, and they shield themselves by saying they do not want to tell. I think you ought to say who did it?—I told you before if the Commission ordered me to do it I would. It is Senior Constable Johnson.
May I tell you the circumstances? I was in the Depôt, and doing my usual duty, and I saw Johnson cross the yard, and I said, “Hallo! Johnson, are you here?”

16421. Was he one of your men?—He had served under me at the barracks. He was not a man in my district. He had been out in the party. I said to him, “What is going on?” and, after some conversation, he said, “I do not know that very much is going on; but,” he said, “there is a cave party up at Beechworth, and has been there for some time.” “What are they doing?” I said. He said, “They are watching Byrne’s house.” And nothing more transpired. The next morning, I think—the morning Captain Standish came to the Depôt—we were talking about the Kelly business, and I casually said to him, “If Mr. Nicolson thinks that cave party is not known, it is talked about in the Depôt.” That is all I knew or did about it, and it was my duty to tell Captain Standish.

16422. Johnson did not communicate it in any spirit of dislike to Mr. Nicolson?—Not the slightest.

Nor did he give it officially. Nor did he reflect on it in any way—merely said it.

16423. He might have the best intention in suggesting to you that the cave party was known?—He did not even tell me that. He merely said that Mr. Nicolson had the cave party.

16424. He did not imply he was finding fault?—Not in the smallest degree.

16425. Is it the duty of the inspector of police to visit the district at any given time?—No.

16426. Or when he is sent by the superintendent?—Which?

16427. The superintending inspector. Does he visit by himself, or is he sent out?—He gets direction from Captain Standish to visit a certain district.

16428. Are there appointed periods for inspection?—No, at irregular periods.

16429. When was your district—the Bourke district—last inspected?—By Mr. Nicolson some years ago. I have no doubt you have got the date there; I cannot tell.

16430. When was your district inspected last?—I do not remember.

16431. Did you ever have any objection to Mr. Nicolson inspecting your district?—No, not that I remember—not the slightest.

16432. You never expressed any?—No; it is some years ago. I have no recollection whatever of expressing a wish that he should not visit it.

16433. When you went up to Glenrowan, upon information, at the time that Aaron Sherritt was shot, and were made aware that the Kellys were in the immediate neighborhood of Glenrowan?—I was not made aware of that. When I got out of the train I saw the engine ahead of me, and I walked towards the train. I met the guard and then the engine-driver. They told me that a man, who said he was a schoolmaster—they did not know his name—had said that the line had been pulled up, and the Kellys were going to catch the inspector and the black trackers; and I had my doubts whether it was not a trap, and on the train I said to the man, “Do you know whether the rails are pulled up this side or the other side?” and he said he could not tell. Upon that we kept our eye upon the line as we went up to the station.

16434. When you made the attack on Mrs. Jones’s house, after Constable Bracken came out, and you were made aware of their being there, was it your idea of the proper military method to go upon to say, “For God’s sake follow me; let us rush at them.” You did not organize your force?—I thought I did. You must remember that circumstances alter cases. Here is a man who tells me, “For God’s sake go quickly, otherwise the Kellys will escape.” I waited till my men surrounded me, and then I went away with them. It has been asked me, “What did you intend to do?” The only answer I can give is this—to find out whether the Kellys were in Jones’s or not. Having found that out, I would have surrounded the house and not let a soul escape, but in making that discovery I got shot. The men attacked us, not we them. As to military tactics, I know nothing about that. We were told to go and catch the Kellys; there is no such nonsense as military tactics in it.

16435. If you were rushing at the house, expecting the men to be present, you would have seen you had not sufficient men with you?—I had plenty of men, I think, four or five being close to me.

16436. What was your idea on that morning when you left, with reference to Mr. O’Connor’s position?—I differ entirely with Captain Standish’s evidence on that. I fancied that in case of my being injured or killed Mr. O’Connor would have taken command, and I have no doubt there was not a man on the ground in my party who would have disobeyed an order from Mr. O’Connor, had he given it. I know nothing at all about the volunteer idea; there was no such thing; the only volunteer there was Rawlings.

16437. You recognized Mr. O’Connor as an officer of the force?—Beyond a doubt I did; and I think he was recognized all the time he was in the district as such, although he never interfered with the men.

16438. Then you consider he was left in command when you left?—I do, decidedly. I called upon him, I called upon Kelly, my next in command, and to both of them, and impressed on them not to let the Kellys escape, when I left on the first occasion.

16439. I see by your report that you said you would not accept any of the reward?—Yes, I did.

16440. Did you apply to be allowed to participate in it?—I did. In sending in my report I said I would not accept of any; and subsequently, at the suggestion of Mr. Ramsay, who wrote to me and advised me to withdraw that portion of my report, I did so. He told me (I have got his letter, if you wish to see it) to withdraw that portion of the application, as he had intended to put a sum on the Estimates for me; and, as I was not likely to get it, he advised me to go in for the reward.

16441. Are you aware whether the other superintendents engaged in that have applied also?—I believe they have, every one of them; Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O'Connor, the only two officers engaged in it, both applied for it.

16442. You heard Captain Standish’s evidence yesterday?—I did.

16443. Did you also know of the circumstance that he alluded to, of the arrangement made between himself and Wallace the schoolmaster to have an interview?—I think I did. I think he told me everything. I remember I advised him strongly not to do it.

16444. Did he make you aware that the interview took place?—That was after I left the district that meeting took place, and he told me he had been up to Benalla—a suggestion had been made by Wallace.

16445. You were not informed what took place at the interview?—Nothing more than I have said, that he was asked to make an appointment to meet Joe Byrne in the bush.

16446. By Mr. Nicolson. With reference to your allusions to Power’s case, you spoke of Mr. Monford being promoted?—Yes.

16447. And you also say I was promoted at the time to Melbourne?—Yes, you were brought down to Melbourne.

16448. Do you mean to say I was brought down as a promotion?—Yes, you got extra pay; not in

603

16449. Are you not aware that Inspector Ryall, my predecessor in the detectives, received extra, and I merely got that?—Yes.

16450. That £100 a year was attached to the office?—Yes, the officer in charge of the detectives. You got an increase of £100 a year I say.

16451. £100 a year was attached to the office?—I say you received £100 a year when you came down to Melbourne after the Power capture.

16452. Do you say you were the leader of the Power party?—I say I was the organizer.

16453. Can you make a distinction between that and leader?—I should. I say I organized the party, and I took you up instead of you taking me; and I took my clerk Montfort, and my four constables, and drove you up in my own buggy to Benalla, and I was communicated with about the matter before you were, and I had carte blanche to make whatever arrangements I chose.

16454. It has been said there was only one trip to Benalla?—There were two trips.

16455. You and I then went up together?—Yes.

16456. And made the arrangements?—No, I do not think we made any arrangements.

16457. Did you not see the person who was to lead us?—I am not certain of that. I do not think we saw the person at all. As far as I can recollect, we did not on the first occasion. We went up there about Ned Kelly being arrested by Mr. Nicholas and his party, and we had some communication with him; and Mr. Nicholas told us that he knew of some person that could give information about Power, and we asked him and pressed him to give us that information, and Mr. Nicholas did not do so. And then we returned to town with Ned Kelly, who was brought down to the Depôt. Ned Kelly and Power were together.

16458. When I came up to Benalla in July 1879 to relieve you, were you not on leave of absence at that time?—I think I had just come, about four days before, from a search party.

16459. Were you not on leave of absence?—No, I was sick.

16460. Was there a coursing meeting going on at that time?—Yes, just after you came up there was one going on in Benalla.

16461. Did you attend that?—I did.

16462. Was not the weather very wet? Was it not raining every day?—I do not recollect. It may have been.

16463. And yet you say you came into Benalla, in order to come down to Melbourne, knocked up?—I did, from my position where I lay dying, as the men thought, and I got to Violet Town, and sent for Dr. Nicolson.

16464. You asked for promotion over a certain superintendent?—I did, in 1871, and it was refused me by Captain Standish himself.

16465. If you were the principal in Power’s case, why were you not promoted?—That is what I want to know; I have often asked that question myself. I would like you to tell me.

16466. Will you point out one step of promotion I received except by seniority?—I say in the matter of pay.

16467. You have led the Commission to think I was promoted in that matter?—Yes; I said you got the money.

16468. Was I not the next on the list for promotion?—Yes; but I say your pay has been increased several times; mine has never been but once.

16469. Were you not a second-class superintendent in 1870, at the time of the Power business?—Yes.

16470. Was I not well up in the first-class superintendents—[handing a paper to the witness]?—I see here by this return that Mr. Winch is above Mr. Nicolson, and the next year he is below.
16471. That has nothing to do with this business?—It has.
16472. If Captain Standish considered you were deserving of so much credit that he actually placed you over me as you assert?—I do not think he placed you over me, or me over you. I think in the drawing up of the report we both signed it, and that is a most unusual thing. If you went out to capture the Kellys, and you had a junior officer with you, both would not sign.
16473. Supposing we both went out to capture any one, do you think I would write a despatch and sign it myself?—I do.
16474. Two officers and their men being out together, do you think we would not sign it together?—I do not think so.
16475. I gave that as my reason for it, that I would have given Montfort permission to sign it if he had not been only a sergeant?—Such a thing as that is not usual in the service.
16476. With reference to your salary, since you say in 1854 you received £300 per annum, and now £376; have not changes in the rates of pay been common since then in the civil service, and with officers generally?—Yes.
16477. And that has affected both your salary and mine?—Yes.
16478. You stated I received £500 a year and house allowance when I was in charge of the detective force?—I do not think so, but I suppose you did.
16479. No, I did not. If you remember the Estimates, I received £500 a year then in lieu of all allowances?—This was the year before the Power business that you were in charge of the detectives. I never referred to you on that occasion, because I did not know anything about you.
16480. You said a little ago that Mr. O’Connor assumed that Captain Standish helped you to compose that report of the 2nd July?—Yes.
16481. What grounds have you for that?—I ask the Commission if he did not leave that impression on their minds, when I read the evidence, that it implied that, and I explained it to the Commission afterwards.
16482. The Chairman.—I think he implied that some one had assisted you to write it.
16483. By Mr. Nicolson.—You stated that Mr. O’Connor assumed that Captain Standish helped you in that way?—Because he assumed that Captain Standish and I were united in such bonds that I could not do anything without him.
16484. Since the capture of Power you received an addition to your salary for a year or two of £100 per annum?—I received an addition from Mr. Ramsay when he came into office, I think for a year, and I think after that for a year and a half; and whilst I was away Mr. Chomley received the same pay while he was in charge of the Depôt.
there?—I suppose so. I only gave information to the Commission as to how the parties worked.

16500. By the Commission.—Did you reflect on other officers when you said that you did these things?—No, I did not.

16501. By Mr. Nicolson.—I wished to remove the impression on that occasion that other officers did not take the same trouble and care?—I did not reflect on the others.

16502. Did you not exhaust the mode of capture which you adopted up to the time you left?—I do not think it.

16503. By the Commission.—The question on that is, had you at any time a reasonable prospect of catching the Kellys that you were aware of it?—Yes.

16504. What was the prospect?—That on the Warby Ranges; and on the second occasion Mr. Sadleir said he had received information that I was very close on them.

16505. Were you aware at any time that you were close on them?—I believed I was at that time in the Warby Ranges.

16506. By Mr. Nicolson.—Can you give the Commission one instance where the information on which you went out proved to be correct—one solitary instance?—No, I cannot; I never caught the Kellys.

16507. You remember about the tent in the Warby Ranges?—Yes.

16508. Belonging to the outlaws?—No; the tent shown to the men on the spring.

16509. Did not you mean to infer that that was a tent belonging to the outlaws?—The squatter thought it was, and took me up to it.

16510. Are you satisfied it was not?—No; because I knew those bee men used to supply horse feed and provisions to those men. There was horse-feed in the tent, and I believe the outlaws could have got it.

16511. Those people believed that tent belonged to the outlaws—why not you cause it to be watched?—I did; I watched it myself. I went away, and came at daybreak in the morning on two different mornings.

16512. As to the constables you took to Woorooly races, do you think that those men, taken in disguise, were able to throw dust in the eyes of sharp men like the splitters in that district?—I do, most decidedly; the way they came, the way they kept out of the crowd. I am as confident as I am sitting here they were not known to the public. The policemen on duty did not know it.

16513. Was not one of the men employed on that duty under the influence of liquor on his return to Wangaratta?—I do not think so. He did not return to Wangaratta.

16514. Did you not speak to him about it—Senior-constable Johnson?—No.

16515. Did you not hear of it?—I will swear I did not.

16516. Did you not caution him about it?—I remember some man made a complaint that Ward and two others, the following day returning from the races, had met someone that they had overhauled, and the man made a complaint about it. I spoke to Ward about it, and he satisfied me there was no cause for complaint at all. That was the following day.

16517. Will you state to the Commission what you have done to warrant the immense confidence that you say Captain Standish placed in you?—I did not say so. I cannot tell the Commission. How is it possible for me to say why Captain Standish placed confidence in me. He came to me from time to time, and consulted me, and I gave my opinion to the best of my ability.

16518. Was it not a fact that he placed great confidence in other officers?—Yes.

16519. Was it not a characteristic of him that there were always one or two officers that he made favorites of—made his intimate companions?—I was never so.

16520. Is it not a well-known characteristic in the force that Captain Standish had always one or two officers that were most intimate acquaintances?—Yes, I think so. I think his most intimate acquaintances were Mr. Winch and Mr. Littleton. I am not a member of the Club, and I only met him on duty, and we were always excellent friends.

16521. By the Commission.—Was it a habit of Captain Standish’s to go with one officer or two for a time?—I think he used to stick to the same officers, Mr. Littleton and Mr. Winch.

16522. He did not make confidents of others at the time and then give them up?—I could not say so—from the time I came into the city he always seemed to place confidence in me.

16523. By Mr. Nicolson.—I am not alluding to you but to the well-known characteristic of Captain Standish in the force?—Both of those officers were intimate acquaintances, and, as members of the Club, they were in the habit of meeting him. Before my illness I do not think Captain Standish had been in my house more than twenty times.

16524. When I relieved you in July 1879, what information did you give me as to the movements of the Kellys?—Every bit of work we had done.

16525. What were the points?—You put them down into your note-book—you were writing down with me, and you were time after time with me. We were sitting in the hotel for hours of a night, and every circumstance I had had to do with during the time I was there I gave you; there was the cave party; all about Mrs. Byrne and Aaron Sherritt—what trust I could put in him, and so on; the “Diseased Stock” man; about the tent in the mountains; about Faulkner being taken for one of the outlaws, and everything that was in my mind. For hours we sat after dinner for one or two nights, and I assisted you in every way I could possibly do.

16526. What you allude to was similar to your evidence, the story of your adventures?—Yes.

16527. What information was there in that?—I told you the “Diseased Stock” man was the most reliable man I had, and was looked upon as such by Whelan and Mr. Sadleir and myself. I thought if he could do it safely, he would give you all the assistance in his power.

16528. Had you any agents in your pay at that time?—I had men I was paying money to from time to time.

16529. Did you tell me of any other agent besides Aaron Sherritt?—Yes, the “Diseased Stock” man.

16530. What about him?—What I have already mentioned.

16531. When did you see or hear of that man, just previously to July?—I called at his house. Another bit of information was, that the Kellys, in my opinion, were camped at Wilson’s paddock, in the Wangaratta sub-district.

16532. By the Commission.—What was the size of that paddock?—About 600 or 700 acres, and this is the paddock I am told they lived in during the greater part of the time Mr. Nicolson was there. They had the Greta Swamp on the one side, the Warby Ranges on the other, and one of the sympathisers, McAuliffe, hired the paddock, and I told Mr. Nicolson all about that. I directed Sergeant Steele to make inquiries about this paddock, and he said he had done so, and could get no information.

16533. By Mr. Nicolson.—I am not insinuating that you did not give full information, but I ask as to its value?—I have given you that.

16534. Do you still persist that you told me that “Diseased Stock” was an agent?—Beyond a doubt.

16535. When we were going up the hill to Power’s hut, did I ask you to lead the way?—No, previously you told me you intended leading the way.

16536. Have you stated to any one outside that that was the case?—No.

16537. You stated that the reason you had for writing to me was, because you had been told that I had used the expression, on being informed by Captain Standish that I was to return, that I had said to him, “What! he relieved by that underling”?—Yes; Captain Standish told me that.

16538. Did you ever hear me use that expression?—No.

16539. With reference to that telegram about which Ward brought you, that erroneous account about the agents—you were three weeks up after that?—Yes.

16540. You were in Beechworth after that?—Yes.

16541. You say you did not report that to Captain Standish?—Not officially. I wrote to him privately, and told him I had received no information from you, and I gave the Commission this morning my reason.

16542. Am I not your superior officer in rank?—Yes.

16543. Do you consider you were justified in making such a report about that telegram about your superior officer on such a serious thing as that without first seeing the telegram?—I have made my statement on that. I still stick to it.

16544. You are aware that Mullane has proved the sending of that telegram was needless, that the action had already been taken?—Only on one point, that the men were to be removed from the hut.

16545. Do you not recollect, when I was handing over charge, Aaron Sherritt’s name being mentioned between us?—I do not think so. It may have been on my asking about him, but you could not have given it in the ten minutes or twenty minutes.

16546. Do you not recollect my mentioning Aaron Sherritt at all?—I do not.

16547. Do you recollect my mentioning the Chief Commissioner’s name once?—No; in what way?

16548. I had determined not to allude to the Chief Commissioner in this interview, as I was on bad terms with him, but I made this exception, by handing over the account about Aaron Sherritt, telling the position he was in, and made use of the expression, “But the Chief Commissioner thinks fit—thinks he is a better judge of who is fit to be employed than I am”?—You may have done so.

16549. Was I not explaining about Aaron Sherritt?—What necessity was there then to telegraph six hours after to discharge the agents.

16550. We subsequently walked to the hotel together?—Yes, but we did not mention the subject of the Kellys.

16551. Had you not an opportunity of asking me anything?—I had; but you had received your orders, and I had received mine.

16552. In your report relating to the trackers, did you not detain them as long as you could till orders to send them to Melbourne were received?—I carried out my orders directly I received them, when directed that Mr. O’Connor was to go to Melbourne, I said I could go at once.

16553. In your last paragraph, you said you thought it advisable to send the trackers away as a ruse?—Yes.

Francis A. Hare, 1st Sept. 1881.

16554. Did you send them away?—No; I had no power to do so.

16555. In one paragraph of your report, you say, when you took charge of your district, in 1880, no more was known of the outlaws or their movements than when you left Benalla twelve months before?—I remember saying that to Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor, “What more is known of the Kellys now than when I left twelve months ago?” and I got no answer.

16556. When you relieved me in June 1880, did you not learn all the information about “Diseased Stock”?—I did by letter.

16557. Did you not learn of that; was not that something more?—Nothing towards their capture. It was old and stale that they were to appear in armour.

16558. Did “Diseased Stock” come in and give you warning that they had gone out?—No; that there was likely to be an outbreak, and Mr. Sadleir said the man had said that, over and over again, for months.

16559. Did he not say he had learned in the beginning of the week that they were to go out within a week?—No; to break out shortly.

16560. Did you not say to Mr. Sadleir that it is very hard they should break out just now Yes. I said, “It is a very black look-out for me that this should take place directly I relieve Nicolson,” and he said, “Oh! but that fellow has been giving the same information for months past.”

16561. Did you not also, in that correspondence with Ward, get some information about the breaking out?—Only that they were going to do something that would astonish the world, but they were always going to do that.

16562. Did not “Diseased Stock” warn you on the Thursday that they were to break out?—No, I do not think it.

16563. Did you send the warning round on that occasion to be on the alert?—No, the men were all on the alert. Directly Aaron Sherritt was shot I said, “Look out, something is going to happen.”

16564. I asked why you took no notice under those circumstances if he told you the very day before Aaron was shot?—I say he did not tell me the day before he was shot. I do not think I saw that man a week before Aaron Sherritt was shot. I have only the recollection of seeing him once. I may have seen him twice— that once was about a week after Mr. Nicolson was relieved.

16565. Mr. Sadleir.—I think there was another interview on the Thursday?—I think I have stated all about that in my evidence.

16566. By Mr. Nicolson to Mr. Sadleir.—It is your impression that it was on the last Thursday before the murder?—That is my impression—surely there was an interview within a week previous to the murders.

16567. Mr. Hare.—I got no information from that man that would cause me to circulate to the out-stations to be on the alert, because our men were always being told that, and I would not do that unless I got some positive information.

16568. By Mr. Nicolson.—You say in the last paragraph of your report:—“I said also it was a general belief that the outlaws were afraid to show out because of the trackers, and in my opinion, if such was the case, the sooner Mr. O’Connor and men were removed the better, because, should the gang make a raid, there would be a probability of capturing them, but as long as they remained in the mountains we had little chance of finding them. Mr. Ramsay agreed with me in this opinion. I frequently expressed the same opinion to you in the last few months. The trackers were removed on the 25th June; the outlaws believing they had left for Queensland, showed out on the 26th”?—Yes, what about it?

16569. You say in your evidence that the trackers were frequently out?—No, I do not.

16570. You said you were told by Bracken that the outlaws, when they had the prisoners in, were speaking of “having the Inspector,” and did not know why there was such a down on you for the trackers, and they also spoke of destroying Mr. O’Connor and the trackers?—Yes.

16571. How do you account for the contradiction?—I merely stated facts, that I had brought a certain matter under the notice of the Chief Secretary, and those things turned out as I expected, that the outlaws did show directly the blacks were away from Benalla.

16572. Was it because the blacks had gone away?—No, I will not say that—there was only the coincidence.

16573. Are you not aware that the trap laid at Glenrowan for the police was laid also for the destruction of the black-trackers?—So it was said—I said that in my evidence.

16574. This was written on the 2nd July?—Yes, and every word of it is true.

16575. In the face of having received all this information so recently from “Diseased Stock” you allowed the trackers to leave the North-Eastern district?—Yes, undoubtedly. I had two others there. I had Moses and Spider at Benalla in place of the five that were there before.

16576. When you met Aaron Sherritt after you left, and told him you were sorry that he had not lately given satisfaction, whom did you allude to?—To you; that he had not given satisfaction to you.

16577. Did Ward tell you that he had not worked satisfactorily with me?—Yes, over and over again; and I said to Aaron that I was sorry to hear it. Ward told me so, and he admitted it.

16578. Was not the impression made on your mind, at the interview I had in handing over the district, that Aaron was still one of my best agents?—Yes, I had no doubt of it; and that is what made me so surprised to hear that you had withdrawn his pay from him.

16579. In placing the party of four men in Sherritt’s hut, so near the road, did you not think they would run a great risk?—I thought they would run a great risk of being discovered, but I was going to leave them till they were discovered.

16580. If they had an encounter with the outlaw, they would have to fight hand to hand?—Undoubtedly they would.

16581. Ought there not to have been a watch?—How could you have a watch on the main road, and with houses round? You have seen the place—what would have been the result an hour afterwards? They would have been discovered immediately after.

16582. Another place might have been chosen?—I selected that place because they were there before, and you did too.

16583. That was only temporarily?—I was going to leave them there till they were discovered, and I do not believe they were discovered up to the time Aaron was shot.

16584. You say a telegraph message was sent out of the gaol at Beechworth?—Yes; that was when I was up there.

16585. Did you make no arrangement with the gaol authorities to keep you posted about messages from those people?—No.

16586. In your evidence you are always speaking about people saying this and that, and “they” say so-and-so?—I said this morning that one of the articles in the press, and the public had often said to me that I had been favored by Captain Standish. Not you; you never said so.

16587. You said you felt a great delicacy in taking command over your senior officer. If you were so delicate in that, how was it you were not when you organized the party that captured Power?—I did; I took you with me.

16588. Do you pretend that you did not know that the outlaws had no difficulty about ammunition?—I do not pretend anything.

16589. Are you not aware that the outlaws had no difficulty in obtaining ammunition?—I do not think they had much difficulty in obtaining ammunition. Where was the difficulty?

16590. You have been comparing small things with great, talking about generalship and so on in police matters;—do you think it was good generalship being discovered by Mrs. Skillian night after night?—I did not say I was a general. I said I was nothing to do with the military at all.

16591. Do you think it was good to have had men discovered watching Mrs. Byrne’s, many and many a night?—Captain Standish arranged to send them there, and they did their utmost, and those men used to be found out at night by Kate Kelly or Mrs. Skillian.

16592. Do you think it was a good plan to catch the Kelly’s?—Yes, I do, to watch the house.

16593. Where the police were observed?—No; when they were observed they went away.

16594. They came back?—They came back two months afterwards.

16595. You stated that you cut off the places from which the Kellys received their food and so on, after I left?—I tried to.

16596. You spoke of Hart’s and Mrs. Byrne’s and Mrs. Skillian’s?—Yes.

16596a. Now when you came up that time did you not find a party watching Hart’s house, near Wangaratta, before you arrived?—I do not think it. Sergeant Steele told me that the men had been watching previously, but there was no watch on either of those places when I went up.

16597. Are you sure of that?—I am confident of it.

16598. Was there not a watch party set by me at Skillian’s?—Not that I am aware of.

16599. Why did you order the men to fire low at Glenrowan?—I did not. It was an order after I left.

16600. Was Sergeant Steele aware of the armour?—Yes; he was the only man who knew about the armour.

16601. Did Sergeant Whelan know?—I heard him state he did, and he says I had a conversation with him about it.

16602. You stated that Steele was the only constable that received such information?—So I believe. Ward told me he did not know.

16603. With reference to that conversation that you had with Phillips at the Depot, when he stated to the you that he had not been out—that the Kellys had not come into the barracks to surrender themselves yet?—Yes.

16604. Did you continue the conversation with him after that?—I do not remember. I remember those words.

16605. Do you consider, as officer of the Depot, the nursery of the Force, that that was proper on your part to allow a man to speak in a manner reflecting on his senior officer?—I do not see how he was reflecting. I put the question to him, “How is it you have not caught the Kellys?” and he said what I have told you. I spoke to every constable that has been under me.

16606. I am speaking of what occurred at the Depot, the nursery of the Force, where men are taught discipline?—It is a fine nursery now!

16607. Do you think that a man who had never fired a gun in his life was a man likely to be sent out after the Kellys?—I do not know that Phillips never had, and I was informed afterwards that he was one of the best shots, and Whelan said in his evidence that he did not say he had never fired a shot.

16608. Do you not think that before you took Sherritt into the force you ought to have been very clear as to whom that sheep belonged that he was seen skinning by the constable?—No, I do not think so. My reasons are for acting as I did that through some means or other these men were thrown on the Government. I do not know how, but when I returned to duty I found they were there, and the best means of disposing of them, and I made the suggestion, and Captain Standish said “Find out everything you can.” I did, and reported to Captain Standish, that is all I had to do in the matter.

16609. Did you not recommend their being taken into the Force?—Yes, certainly, in the first instance; and when I made inquiries I could find nothing tangible against them, and two clergymen and other inhabitants of the district with Mr. Zineke, a member of Parliament, all gave those men an exemplary character.

16610. That is since I spoke of it, and since you recommended them to be taken—was it not your duty to make enquiries about this matter of sheep stealing?—All the enquiry was made that could be. Barry saw Sherritt skinning a sheep as he passed, and that was all. What further enquiry could be made.

16611. To whom did the sheep belong?—How could I specify to whom it belonged, when it had been skinned and eaten—whom could I have got information from?

16612. Could you not have used the police to ascertain for you who had lambs running about in that quarter?—Certainly; that would be a gross injustice to imply that a man stole a sheep. There was no proof of it; because a squatter ran sheep on the run this man lives on, and because this man is seen skinning a sheep, it is to be implied that he stole it.

16613. I did not say implied; I say enquiry?—Sufficient to prevent him getting into the force.

16614. No, but to make enquiries?—I did make enquiries.

16615. Did you make enquiries whether the Sherritts had sheep of their own?—No; they might have bought it.

16616. Would not the possession of this sheep be prima facie evidence of his stealing it?—No, 16635. Why was Falconer recommended by you, lauded by you, to the neglect of Canny, who was his guide?—Because Canny was in the capture. It was not for promotion; it was for a portion of the reward. I never did recommend him for promotion, and never would at present.

16636. Do you say the Sherritt family were about seven or eight?—Yes, I think so; perhaps five or six.

16637. You reduce it now to five or six; you said seven or eight?—Yes; I say they must have known it.

16638. But I am speaking of seven or eight?—Five or six I think was what I said.

16639. Did not Mr. Sadleir request you to send warning to the police at Sherritt’s hut, on the receipt of John Sherritt’s letter?—No; I do not remember anything of the kind.

16640. By the Commission. —About the agents—I would like to ask if Mr. Nicolson told you before he went away that he had agents?—Yes; he showed me their accounts.

16641. You know how many he had?—Yes.

16642. Did you know their addresses?—Yes.

16643. You knew how to communicate with them?—Yes; he told me all about the accounts of those agents, who consisted of Stevens at Glenrowan and Aaron Sherritt at Beechworth, and no one else was receiving pay.

16644. There were only two?—Only two receiving pay from the Government.

16645. Only two that were furnishing information?—Yes; that is all I know of, and the “Diseased Stock” agent. He used to get payment from me when he came in and gave information.

16646. You were complaining that Mr. Nicolson did not give you the names of the agents he employed, and afterwards you said he paid them all off, so that you could not get them?—Will you read what part you refer to?

16647. You spoke of one man,—“The principal agent employed by Mr. Nicolson I had appointed to meet me that morning. He was one who was considered the best man they had. After talking with him a few minutes, he positively refused to work for me, or have anything to do with me, although he had accompanied the police from Beechworth the previous day, for the purpose of having an interview with me”?—Mr. Nicolson said nothing about that agent to me.

16648. This man must have told you, because you said he was the principal agent?—I heard it from Mr. Sadleir and Senior-constable Kelly, and I heard that Mr. Nicolson made more of him than any other. His name was “Renwick.”

16649. You do not consider he is one of the number that was left when Mr. Nicolson said to Mr. Sadleir, “Is there anything else”?—In all probability he spoke about “Renwick.”

16650. Can you state why this man refused to work for you?—I think I have stated in my evidence all about that.

609

16651. You do not impute anything to Mr. Nicolson about that agent?—No.

16652. You say, after that, that Nicolson had paid off all the agents he had employed—did you imply he had dismissed them all?—That refers to the telegram that he sent up to say no more payments for Tommy and his family.

16653. How many agents had you employed while you were up there after Mr. Nicolson left on the second occasion?—I had this man—“Diseased Stock”—who brought me information; I had Aaron Sherrit, and one Stevens, and a man I sent out to Glenrowan two or three days before the Kellys were captured.

16654. Were those all the agents that you had who had been formerly employed by Mr. Nicolson?—All, with one exception, but he had written up to say, “No more payments for Tommy,” consequently I had to take them on.

16655. How many did Mr. Nicolson discharge?—I do not know how many were in his payment up at Beechworth, but I told them to carry on. I think the whole of the Sherritt family and the old woman was paid for keeping up the thing. I took them all on, all that he had got rid of.

16656. You do not know how many Mr. Nicolson had?—No, I heard Mr. Sadleir say there were certain agents that they did not feel it was right to give over to me until they had consulted them, and Mr. of Sadleir said lie referred to the “Diseased Stock” man, and I never was made aware of that till I heard it here at the Commission.

16657. Was Wallace one of your agents?—No.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next, at Eleven o’clock.
The witness.—I have made some notes of the evidence of my own connection with the Kelly business especially, and with the North Eastern district, and I will read from this, as I think it will be the most expeditious mode of getting through the business. I have made an index of the various points that I may have to refer to, and the Commission can say whether they wish the points referred to or not. The first business I have to deal with is the condition of the district as regards crime previous to the police murders, and previous to my going there. I took charge of the district in July 1878. The witnesses who testify to the evil condition of the district for years before I had anything to do with it are Captain Standish, myself, Detective Ward, and in fact every person who was questioned on the subject. I have shown by my own evidence, and other witnesses show the same, that even under the best circumstances the district is so extensive as to be quite beyond control. On my taking charge I pointed out this to Captain Standish, and his answer was that he quite agreed with me, but the Government insisted on the new arrangements being carried out.

16658. That was putting two districts into one?—Two and a half districts; nearly three.

16659. Too much for the supervision of any one man?—Yes. The Commission have before them all the correspondence relating to the preliminary search for the Kellys, the gang being formed of the two Kellys only, and not of four men, as Captain Standish has stated in error. I visited Greta police station for the first time on July 30th, 1878. Besides Senior-Constable Strahan, who was then in charge, I met a gentleman residing on the King River, and his servant, whose names I can give, who informed me in a somewhat mysterious way that the Kellys were in the neighborhood of Corunolly’s, or towards the Wombat or Holland Creek. I gave this gentleman a seat in my buggy to Benalla, and promised to drive him on to Mansfield next day, as I hoped to get his assistance and that of his servant, who could, I believe, have given useful information. This gentleman was the worse of liquor when I met him next, and I had to travel alone. At this same visit to Greta Senior-Constable Strahan told me that he and Constable Ryan lately saw two horsemen standing on a point of the Bald hill, whom they suspected to be the Kellys; that they rode up as quietly as they could to try and capture them, but when the police reached the spot the supposed Kellys had disappeared. It was on the information of these several persons that I gave my first written instructions to Sergeant Kennedy, dated August 10th, 1878. Subsequently, in consequence of further correspondence with Captain Standish, Detective Ward was sent up, and I had no other information of any description of the Kellys’ whereabouts, further than is shown in Mr. Secretan’s letters given in my evidence. While the preliminary inquiries were going on I saw Sergeant Kennedy several times, and no doubt I made him acquainted with my own views on the subject. I had, before this, gone myself with him through the country, where the murders took place. This was in search of the Kellys for shooting Constable Fitzpatrick, and with the view of getting the man (Perkins) is the man I refer to), to assist the police. This man was from home, his wife told us, making inquiry about the Kelly’s in Sergeant Kennedy’s interest, as he had previously promised, and that he would see the sergeant as soon as he returned. Soon after this I saw Sergeant Kennedy who informed me that this man (Perkins) had not kept his promise; that he had been once or twice in Mansfield, and had kept out of his way. I did not wish to interfere myself further, for I knew I could trust entirely on Sergeant Kennedy’s discretion, and he in fact knew the man’s character much better than I did. I do not think Sergeant Kennedy had one word of information beyond what I told him, and I am quite satisfied the insinuation that he left with Constable Scanlan, so as to have an advantage over Constables Lonigan and McIntyre is groundless. I think his conduct in allowing McIntyre to go out shooting is proof enough that he had no notion that the Kellys were near. I received information of the police murders at Dookie on morning of 29th October. When I got to Benalla I found

POLICE. 4 H

Mr. Nicolson busy despatching parties of police in various directions. I left that business altogether in his and rode on to Mansfield, forty miles further, that evening. The bodies of Lonigan and Scanlan had been brought in, and I arranged, with Mr. Pewtress’ assistance, for, a search party on the following morning to find the body of Sergeant Kennedy. His body was found on the following day (31st). The Mansfield people, in the first scare, thought that the Kellys would be still in the neighborhood, but I urged them on that they were sure to clear out across the Murray, as actually proved to be the case. The next item in the index I have made is Mr. Nicolson’s position and my own in the district at this time. As regards Mr. Nicolson’s position and my own in the district, this is clearly defined in the evidence of Captain Standish, Mr. Nicolson, myself and Mr. Hare, and the same evidence explains my position. The witnesses all show Mr. Nicolson to be in charge of the Kelly operations, Mr. Sadleir in charge of the district, and the definition has been accepted right through by the Commission until Mr. Graves and Mr. Winch gave their views. It is a perfectly well understood thing in the service that Mr. Nicolson as Inspecting Superintendent had the ‘entire’ of every district whenever he chose or was desired by the Chief Commissioner to go there. Captain Standish, with Mr. Hare, took exactly the same position in December 1878, when Mr. Nicolson left, and the latter again resumed his old position in July 1879. My original duties were never taken out of my hands, and I was never, in any sense superseded. Captain Standish, in his evidence, has made this plain, and shows he knew it to be impossible that one and the same person could take charge of the double work. The same remarks apply to the question of responsibility in the Kelly business. My own certain conviction is that I have properly no responsibility in any transaction, even where I acted as a free agent at the time, so long as my action was afterwards approved by my superior officer. But I am not going to shield myself behind any mere technicality of this sort. As far as being equally responsible, or responsible in the same sense as my seniors, that is quite out of the question. An officer can only be responsible where he has the power of carrying out his own opinions, which I had not. As a junior officer I had to follow the opinions of others.

16660. You had not responsibility with reference to the Kellys, but with reference to the general business you had?—Yes. Of course in the ordinary business I had to have respect to arrangements made by the other officers; that is, I could not take away men from bank townships, my own men, without their consent.

16661. Supposing any information you became suddenly possessed of was of sufficient importance, would not you have been justified in assuming the responsibility of taking what steps you thought best?—Yes. Of course I am speaking of general responsibility. I am speaking of the abstract rule of every disciplined service. That is, in general matters a junior officer cannot be responsible except in matters where he has been allowed to carry out his own opinions, and even then he is not responsible if his actions afterwards, or his opinions, have been approved by his superior officer. The latter then becomes responsible but I am not shielding myself behind that. I will accept responsibility to this extent: whenever I acted alone, or even offered advice that was acted on by my senior officers, I will take the consequences. Apart from the question of responsibility, I think the evidence leaves it perfectly clear that I gave all the assistance in my power. I think I may say, that it is the value and extent of that assistance that has caused some persons to consider me as having taken a separate and independent responsibility in this matter. The next question I come to is the search at Sebastopol, on November 7th, 1878. This is a case in which I took a personal responsibility. It was I who collected the police from Taylor’s Gap, expecting six only, but thirteen turned up. I brought two from Smith in that?

16662. It is better to give your version of that affair?—Then I will give my account of it. This is another case in which I acted to some extent on my own responsibility. The first intimation I had of this appears to have been from Sergeant Steele on the Railway station at Benalla and then only in the shape of a rumour. My instructions to him (Steele) were to halt at Wangaratta, make enquiries there, and if report reliable to inform Mr. Brooke-Smith, who was supposed to have a strong party there. Mr. Brooke-Smith reported to me on the subject to the effect that the rumour was not confirmed. The Commission will remember the original informant, Mrs. Delaney, coming before them at Wangaratta and stating that she could not say the persons seen were the Kellys, nor could she see any arms with them.

The Chairman.—There was nothing taken down. She came informally and said she simply knew that four men had passed and she did not know who they were. The Commission did not think it worth while to take that down, and she said she had no other information to give after.

The witness.—I do not think Mr. Lang was justified in putting the evidence on this subject in so strong a light.

16664. By the Commission.—How long after this information was given to Mr. Brooke-Smith was action taken; what action did he take at once?—I have looked carefully through the papers and cannot find that.

16665. He concluded the rumour was not confirmed and did not take action at that time?—Yes. The instructions under which I acted in sending Sergeant Steele to Beechworth and Rats’ Castle were received from Mr. Nicolson, who was then on the only certain clue of the Kellys. In fact it was absolutely certain that they had been at Margery’s, and it was so important that police should be placed so as to intercept their probable route from Margery’s back to their old haunts, that unless the information at Wangaratta were of a much more positive character, I should not have felt justified in stopping Sergeant Steele’s party. Sergeant Steele, who had the same information about Mr. Nicolson’s movements, would have been still less justified.

16666. What do you say about Mr. Brooke-Smith’s action in the matter?—I do not know what action he took. I was never aware of what it was except by hearsay. I am inclined to think he had not an effective party at Wangaratta. I am only speaking from memory.

16667. We saw the books showing that he had six men?—Well, I have only a cloudy recollection of it, and I had nothing to do with the matter afterwards. The next point is the second search in the Warby Ranges, on November 12th, 1878. This matter has been connected with the previous one, but my impression is that the two things had very little relation to each other. On the evening of the 11th November I received a message from Mr. Nicolson, who was then at Wangaratta, that he intended next morning to search the Warby Ranges, on some recent information. Mr. Nicolson did not think much of this information, but connected it. I suppose, with the previous searches there. I went to Glenrowan on the morning of the 12th November, and found Senior-Constable Johnston waiting for me. This would be about half-past five o’clock in the morning.

16668. We understand this is the second search?—Yes.

16669. Then you have nothing whatever to say with reference to the first search made by Mr. Brooke-Smith?—I never had any knowledge of it, except from hearsay,—no knowledge personally.

16670. How long was Sergeant Steele coming back from Rat’s Castle?—He returned on the 7th November.

16671. Whom would Mr. Brooke-Smith report to what action he had taken with reference to that?—After the fifth he would report probably to Mr. Nicolson who I believe was in Wangaratta that day.

16672. Did Mr. Brooke-Smith, at the time you met Mr. Nicolson at Wangaratta, then report to you what he had done in the search—to both of you?—That is what I say. I think Mr. Brooke-Smith had sent a telegram to me at Benalla that the information was not confirmed, and I cannot go beyond that, as I cannot trace anything in the documents. I do not remember his speaking to me on the spot.

16673. Would it be his duty to send in a written report, and to whom?—It would, to Benalla, and I was the officer who would have got that.

16674. You never received any?—I cannot trace it.

16675. Do you know whether Mr. Brooke-Smith reported to Mr. Nicolson every night when he came in,—have you any knowledge of that?—If he found Mr. Nicolson at Wangaratta I have no doubt he would report.

16676. But we have the proof here that Mr. Nicolson was not at Wangaratta; he came to Wangaratta on the 5th?—Yes.

Mr. Nicolson.—I came from Wodonga, the banks of the Murray.

16677. Would those reports be in existence?—Yes.

The witness.—I have a distinct recollection of seeing reports from Mr. Brooke-Smith, at Benalla, on the subject, in that interval between the 3rd and the 6th.

16678. Do you remember the exact date on which Sergeant Steele went to Rat’s Castle?—Yes; the 3rd November.

16679. Then, on the 3rd November, in the evening, Mr. Brooke-Smith would receive the information of the supposed appearance of the Kellys?—Yes, late at night, ten or eleven, I think.

16680. Then, on the 5th, Mr. Nicolson returned from Wodonga to Wangaratta?—Yes.

16681. And the question we want to know is what was Brooke-Smith doing upon those two days—the 4th and the 5th?—I can only speak from recollection, but I think he made those inquiries, first reporting that the matter was not confirmed, and I think he made a further report.

16682. We have it from Senior-constable Johnston that Mr. Brooke-Smith left Wangaratta on the 6th November 1878 with a search party?—He should have, in that case, reported to Mr. Nicolson, and received instructions from him.

16683. You cannot connect anything to show that Mr. Brooke-Smith went out before the 6th?—No, but if you like I will go over the papers with the Secretary and hunt the matter up. I am merely guessing now.

16684. Were you at Wangaratta?—I got up late on the 5th, after Mr. Nicolson arrived. He arrived about four, and I did not arrive till half-past nine.

16685. Then there were three days lost before a start was made?—Certainly there were three days lost, but whether anybody was to blame I cannot say. Those reports and telegrams ought certainly to be found to put that matter right.
16686. Do you know whether Mr. Brooke-Smith went out on the 6th?—No, I left Wangaratta that morning before he started.

16687. Were they preparing to go out?—I think it was understood they were, but that is only a matter of faint recollection.

16688. You did not consider that information worth anything yourself?—At Wangaratta?

16689. Yes?—I did not know that.

16690. What was the date of your attack upon the hut at Sebastopol, where you expected the Kellys?—On the morning of the 7th. It is a matter I cannot explain to this day why we should have remained in ignorance about all this matter—about the One-mile bridge; I was going on about the second search in Warby Ranges. I understood, when I arrived at Glenrowan (but I may be mistaken after so long a time), that a railway laborer named McEvoy had seen one or more horsemen galloping across the line close to Glenrowan. Senator-Constable Johnson says in his evidence that the tracks were three days old, and that the information amounted only to this, that some person saw three horsemen standing on the road whom no one identified. If I had known this I could easily have foretold that the trip would be a failure. I have already told, and Sergeant Steele and others have given similar evidence, how these Corranderk trackers failed as they did on every occasion, and how Sergeant Steele, by an accident separated from the rest of the party, taking with him Constable Dixon, the only man that could take us through the country we wanted to go to. Before Sergeant Steele left us the tracks we started on had been completely given up, and I am certain that Senator-constable Johnson, in giving his evidence of this affair, has been mixing up matters that were quite separate. The next note in my index is, “Food supposed to be prepared for outlaws by sisters, and step taken by police in the early part of 1878.” I have been unable to find anything in the papers or in my own notes to throw any more light on this subject. The only persons that would probably be able to give the Commission information would be Senior-Constable Strahan or perhaps Constables Mullane or Flood. Then I come to another point that I think has been absolutely cleared up—that is the hollow log referred to in prisoner William’s information, and steps taken. The search for and discovery of this hog have been fully explained by Senior-Constables Mullane and Flood in their evidence. The log was found. The cobwebs and dust across the opening were the best possible proof that it was not used by the Kelly friends. Senior-Constable Mullane shows that the search was made within a day or two after the 30th October, and certainly within a week. Probably the reason that my memory was at fault (and I stated all through that I was speaking from memory only) was that this information was handed to these constables in Melbourne by Captain Standish himself. My statement that the log was, I thought, not found is explained by this. The search for this log was subsequently renewed, and it was stated it could not then be found, that it was burned by a bush fire. This is only from hearsay, for I can find no reference to it in the records.

16691. Were there search parties in that particular locality at the time?—Yes and we had some men at Greta. The next subject I have to deal with is the information that induced Mr. Nicolson and myself to go to Albury, taken in connection with Mr. Wyatt’s report of the telegraph wires being cut on 10th December 1878—the day of the Euroa Bank robbery. This is a matter in which I acted to some extent on my own authority. The fact is that before Mr. Nicolson returned from Fern Hills, where he was when I received the information about the probable crossing of the Kellys near Howlong, I had made up my mind to go to the spot with Sergeant Harkin in daylight and place him there with a party of police. I had arranged all the necessary preliminaries when Mr. Nicolson returned from Fern Hills on the 9th December. He approved of them and said he would go up too to Albury. Arrangements were made with Mr. Medley, the New South Wales police officer at Albury, to meet us on the arrival of the train. This information, though at the time I expressed myself (as will be seen in the correspondence) as not having full confidence in it, seemed very plausible the more one considered it. It was addressed by a member of the criminal class, a needy man, to Jack Quin, an uncle of the Kellys, and the man of all others in the district at whose door most of the crime there was laid. I believe what made me suspicious of the information was the precision with which the localities and some other particulars were given, but then, on the other hand, if the police had omitted to use the information, and that it afterwards turned out to be genuine, a very serious responsibility would have been incurred. It appeared so easy to arrange a plan to intercept the Kellys crossing at this place, the prospect appeared too good to lose, and at the time I speak of the matter was becoming urgent. Mr. Nicolson in his evidence shows that Foote, who was a most intimate friend of the Kellys, and promised to help the police (and had done so in the case of Power), informed him that the Kellys were then at the head of the Wonangatta, one of their known haunts, over eighty miles from Benalla. Besides this, Mr. Nicolson (as he states in his evidence) returned from his last trip fully convinced that the Kellys were nowhere in the neighborhood.

16692. In what neighborhood?—The neighborhood of Benalla. The statement I refer to in Mr. Nicolson’s evidence is in Question No. 462. I will go on. Mr. Nicolson says, “It was his intention to return from Albury by first train next morning,” and this is no doubt correct as far as he is concerned, for the fact of his appointing to meet Mr. Medley at twelve o’clock at night showed this. My own plans were different. I had to inspect the Wodonga station, which I had not visited for nearly two months, and probably also to go to the intended crossing-place. It will be borne in mind that the telegraph wires were cut at about two o’clock p.m. on this day, that Mr. Nicolson despatched a telegram to Captain Standish at 5.45 p.m. and though we were on Glenrowan in the train, I saw the publican McDonald (who lives opposite to where Jones’s house stood, and was always suspected by us) looking out from a deep shadow, in a most curious suspicions manner.

16694. Where was he?—In a recess on the station, and as soon as he found his nose in the light he would pull back like this—[showing his meaning]—and I should have spoken to Mr. Nicolson, but he was lying fast asleep. He was very tired with his long journey, as I have said, but we were in the train and could not get back.

16695. Your impression after that, and the information that Mr. Wyatt had given you, made you feel uneasy; that this man might have been after something?—I thought he was looking for news, and I watched the guard of the Post Office in the van to see if this man would ask him questions, and if he had I should have jumped out and asked what they were talking about. I now refer to Captain Standish’s report that the police at Benalla had information that a bank in the district was to be stuck up by the Kellys. I have stated, in answer No. 2023, that this part of his evidence was given in error, and I referred to a conversation I had with him immediately after these events. When Captain Standish was writing his report, read before the Commission a few days ago, he stated to me one reason why Mr. Nicolson was to blame was that he knew a bank was likely to be robbed by the Kellys in the district. I replied that this was a mistake, there was no such information. He said, yes there was; he had seen it himself in the newspaper, the Age, I think. I said, “We dont get the Age here.” He said, “Then you ought to have seen it,” and he seemed still under the impression that Mr. Nicolson did know this particular bank was in danger. To my mind that explains what Captain Standish said the other day, that he still believed that there was information that the bank was to be stuck up.

16696. But he expressed that belief in the face of the strongest evidence to the contrary, and stuck to it?—Well I think that explains his misconception on that.

16697. What number of men had you going to the Murray on that occasion?—There were only ourselves; we had no men. We were going to confer with the New South Wales officers and our own sergeant on the border. The whole of the circumstances are given very fully in the evidence by Mr. Wyatt and myself. I cannot throw any fresh light beyond what has already been given. I returned from Wodonga with Mr. Nicolson on the morning of the 11th December. We started before daylight; I suppose about 2 a.m., as soon as the enginedriver could get up steam. By arrangement with Mr. Nicolson, I took the Wangaratta police to Lake Rowan, viâ Glenrowan, keeping south along the foot of the Warby Ranges. Before leaving Wangaratta messages were sent to Senior-Constable Strahan and party, at Greta, to keep watch and make search in the ranges near the Kellys’ and Lloyds’, and this party were at this work, I believe, for several days. In going to Lake Rowan with the party I took from Wangaratta, a sharp look out was kept for tracks, and some fresh tracks were found crossing a brush fence immediately under the range, and the tracker was put on these tracks. He followed them only for a very few yards. Close in front of the tracks there was a cross brush fence and some wattle scrub, affording any amount of shelter for an ambush; and I saw it was not fair to ask the tracker to go in first. I dismounted, and, with one or two constables, went into the scrub, and then the tracker came in, but no further trace could be found.

16698. What date is that?—That is the day after the Euroa bank robbery. We searched Kellys’ uncle’s place at Lake Rowan, but without result, and on the 12th I returned to Benalla for further intelligence. The only other search parties I went out with were to Euroa and Muddy Creek, on some information by a water-police constable, which turned out to be mistaken; two trips with Mr. O’Connor and his trackers and some police, altogether lasting about three weeks, and one night watching at the Ovens crossing with Mr. Hare. I took some other trips, lasting only a day, to examine likely crossing-places on the railway line and elsewhere. Besides these trips, I made it my business in all my journeys in connection with my own ordinary duties to collect information wherever I went from the police and others. The duty of seeing that the bank guards were vigilant fell chiefly on me. Every officer who had charge of the Kelly operations has spoken of the assistance rendered by me. The next question is the information given by Foote, of having seen the Kellys on the previous evening, the 28th September 1879. Mr. Nicolson’s evidence differs from mine about this matter in some important respects. He says that the informant was on his way to Benalla when I met him. My telegram to Mr. Nicolson written at the time shows that this was not so. I will ask the Commission to refer to that telegram, dated 29th September, and there is a sketch attached to the correspondence. I say there that he was on his way to inform Sergeant Steele at Wangaratta, where I met him.

16699. Was that the time the horses were returned to the stables?—Yes. That telegram is printed in the evidence already. It is true that Mr. Nicolson telegraphed back to bring the informant, but I could not get to speak with him again, and I could not tell whether he was or was not willing to come. Another point is, I did not profess to be able myself to lead the police to the locality I had never been in that particular neighborhood. I trusted to some of the police at Benalla who knew the place well to be able to find the spot from the sketch taken from the informant’s statement. There is another reason given by Mr. Nicolson and Mr. O’Connor for not going without the informant, namely, that the trackers could not distinguish between the tracks of the outlaws and those of the friends who were standing with them. If the informant himself was to point out the spot, he could not throw any light on the matter, for the men were all standing near together, both outlaws and friends, when the informant saw them. I do not say that this was a certain chance thrown away, nor do I say that Mr. Nicolson showed a mistaken judgment in the matter, I only wish to point out that the part I took in the affair did not in any way prevent success.

16700. You have previously given in evidence about your being ready to start?—That is all in evidence. I next come to the events of the 28th June 1880, the day on which the Kellys were captured. Having been called out of my sleep, as stated in my evidence, I got out of bed instantly, hurried on my clothes, and in less than ten minutes was on my horse, and rode straight to the Benalla post office, where I found Mr. Hare. This would be between half-past four a.m. and five o’clock. The only information I had from Mr. Hare was that the Kellys were shut up at Mrs. Jones’s hotel. Mr. Hare was growing faint from loss of blood, for his arm was not dressed, and I left without speaking further with him. When I left Mr. Hare I was aware of this fact only, that the Kellys were shut up at Mrs. Jones’s. I had heard nothing whatever about Constable Bracken escaping, nor of the escape of the other prisoners, so that I had no opportunity of learning from any of them the real state of things inside of Jones’s hotel. I met Dr. Nicholson at or near the Benalla railway station, and gave him my horse to take him to the post office to dress Mr. Hare’s wound and to hasten back to come on with my party to Glenrowan, as it was reported there were others also wounded. While waiting for Dr. Nicholson at the railway station I procured a rope from the station master with the view of pulling down the chimneys of the hotel, but when we got to Glenrowan the shooting by the outlaws was too frequent and appeared too accurate to allow me to risk the lives of the police in this way. The hour of our starting from Benalla was about ten minutes after five o’clock. This is given in error by the printer of my report of 2nd July as the time of our arrival at Glenrowan. It was probably half-past five or twenty minutes to six when we got to Glenrowan. It was dark still when we arrived there. Senior-Constable Kelly came to me soon after. I asked him where the guards around the building were weakest, and I then sent Sergeant Whelan, who was the senior sergeant on the ground, to guard that side of the building. He had twelve constables with him for this work. I then asked for Mr. O’Connor, and on Sergeant Kelly leading me to where he was, I called, as that witness states, to Mr. O’Connor to come to me where I was standing in the open ground. Immediately before this time my party were being fired on by the outlaws. I did not observe it until my attention was called to it, and then, instead of taking cover myself, I told the Benalla police to do so and to disperse to their posts under Sergeant Whelan. Mr. O’Connor, when I called to him, asked me to come to him, and as my only object was to find out the position of affairs from him, it did not matter to me where I spoke to him. I remained with Mr. O’Connor for about fifteen or twenty minutes. His information to me was that the hotel was barricaded with furniture and bags of chaff and corn. We debated the question of forcing an entrance, and considered there was no way of doing it. Perhaps this will be the fittest place for me to explain why I sought my information from Mr. O’Connor instead of the senior member of the Victorian force. I think Captain Standish, Mr. Hare, Mr. Nicolson, and Mr. O’Connor himself all show that his position was recognized as that of an officer of police, just as one of ourselves, and this was what I thought of him too, and it was therefore my duty to see him as the responsible officer up to that time. I did not wait to consider whether he were strictly speaking a Victorian or Queensland officer. After talking with Mr. O’Connor for fifteen or perhaps twenty minutes, I went to the south side of Jones’s hotel, and came to Constable Gascoigne’s post. I spoke for some time with this constable, as shown in the evidence. He told me he had to leave his first position, as the post at which he stood did not afford him sufficient cover. We talked of several matters, and he pointed out the direction of the other police near him. He told me also that he thought the outlaws were in armour, and that the horses were shot some time before. It must have been some time after six a.m. when I left him and returned to Mr. O’Connor. I remained there only a few minutes, when I started to go round by Gascoigne’s post again; but I saw that there was no cover on that side near enough to the building, so I returned, and went along the railway line towards the station—[explaining the position on the map]. The Commission will see that this was quite open ground, about eighty yards from the front windows of the hotel. I could not find my way over the open drains. It was too dark to attempt to jump across them; and it was there Constable Dwyer saw me, and my impression always has been that it was here he asked me to let him take my messages round. His words were, “Mr. Sadleir, do not you be running round; let me carry your messages.” In my evidence I spoke of the difficulty of going round, owing to the outlaws’ fire and the cross-fire from the police. Some of the police stood as far away from the hotel as 100 yards or more. In fact, there was no seeing exactly where they were, except by an occasional flash, and to keep outside this circle would leave me just as ignorant as I was before of the real state of matters. I was desirous, too, of leisure to consider how to do the work that was before us. The only messages I have any recollection of giving Constable Dwyer were to see that the police were posted all around the building and to give the order to fire high. Nearly every witness has sworn to hearing this order; at any rate, after Dwyer left me, I came again to where Mr. O’Connor was. Up to this time, with occasional intervals, there were frequent shots by the outlaws, and by the police too. I had fired a few shots myself at one of the outlaws, who appeared at the front, but finding that my bullets struck the fence, I fired no more shots from that position. When I heard the noise of the firing at Ned Kelly, as it turned out to be, and the calls of the police, I remember looking towards the building, thinking there was something up there, but, could see nothing. The black boys were also looking out; and if the movements of the police were not observed by them, it is no wonder that I did not observe them. Constable Gascoigne, who was standing on the high ground, saw the police moving about, but did not know what was going on. Constable Canny, who was still nearer, did not recognize it either; and Constable Dwyer, who actually ran among the police who were closing in on Ned Kelly, did not take any notice of the affair until his attention was called to it by the reporters. The witnesses—Mr. Carrington, Dowsett, and some others—describe a fog or mist lying close to the ground, which will account for this and, besides, there was some low scrub between my position and where the capture actually took place. Whether the sun had risen or not—and I am quite satisfied it had not—the actual spot where the struggle took place would appear in deep shadow to any person looking from the opposite direction. Ned Kelly had scarcely reached the station when Constable Dwyer informed me of the capture, and I instantly went to see the prisoner, and finding the outlaws were firing at the van where we had him at first, I removed him to the station. After going to the station to see Ned Kelly, I never again returned to Mr. O’Connor’s position. It is important, I think, that I should trace more particularly the order and times of my movements from my arrival to the time of Kelly’s capture. Say I arrived at Glenrowan at 5.30, or perhaps ten minutes later, that is allowing twenty-five minutes to travel the fifteen miles from Benalla. Then say twenty minutes spent speaking with Senior-Constable Kelly and Mr. O’Connor, would bring the time up to six o’clock. Then say twenty minutes’ delay in going to Constable Gascoigne’s position, speaking with him, and returning, would make the time twenty minutes past six. Say ten minutes then again with Mr. O’Connor, and perhaps ten minutes or more in the open ground when Constable Dwyer addressed me, would bring the time close up to seven a.m., or a very few minutes before the hour of the capture of Ned Kelly as fixed by most of the witnesses. Now I will endeavor to bring before the Commission the difficulties of the business that the police had in hand, and that, excepting perhaps Mr. O’Connor, there was not a single person present who ever before had any experience of an affair of this character. I am not ashamed at all to acknowledge that the more I considered matters the more perplexing they appeared. I arrived at this determination almost immediately—that nothing could be done till daylight, except to keep the house guarded. Then the discovery of Kelly’s armour on his arrest, which was about daylight, made matters much more difficult, and we were beside running very short of ammunition. It was then, in conversation with Dr. Nicholson (not the reporters, as I thought at first) and some others on the ground, that the sending for the gun was first mentioned. I would mention here that I saw Dr. Nicholson in town about six weeks ago, and, asking him about the business, he repeated the statement which I sent in the other day to verify my affidavit. I will see afterwards that an affidavit is handed in from him. It is very easy for people, wise after the affair, to laugh at this as an extravagant notion, but it appeared to be nothing of the sort then. The crowning difficulty of all was the presence of a large number of persons—whether innocent or not we could not tell—shut up in the house with the outlaws. That all reasonable precaution was taken for their safety even before I came on the ground is abundantly proved. But there can be no better proof of it than this—that not one person was hurt, after the very first volleys, by the police, except young Riordan, and he was deliberately shot in the belief that he was an outlaw. The police gave the prisoners plenty of opportunities of coming out up to ten o’clock in the day. The outlaws themselves were frequently called on to surrender, and there is abundant evidence that there was no want of humanity shown by the police as a body. There was no doubt some unnecessary, and perhaps some reckless firing, but, under such extraordinary circumstances, no officer could check this completely. Every constable was expected to shoot at the outlaws when a chance offered, unless they surrendered; and no one person could say whether a shot fired at any time before the prisoners came out, and especially during the darkness, was or was not at an outlaw. My express instructions, as stated by Senior-Constable Mullane and Constable Armstrong, who belonged to the same party as Duross and Dowling, were:—“There are a number of innocent people in the house. If you fire at all, fire breast high. Firing is not really necessary at present, except the outlaws come to the doors or windows, and then the men can fire at them.” These instructions were given to these two constables, Duross and Dowling, and, if they mistook the plain language of their orders, or—which I believe to be the case—mixed up different occurrences in their evidence before the Commission, it is not my fault. Constable Gascoigne and Mr. Rawlins state that a flag of truce held out by the innocent persons was fired at. They say there was one shot by one of the trackers. This may have been so, but my own impression is altogether different. I was standing at the Wangaratta end of the hotel when word was given by the police in front that the prisoners were surrendering. Every person there, like myself, expected that the whole body, outlaws and all, were coming out, and I have a very distinct recollection that when the word was given there was complete silence for a considerable time. In fact, this occurred only a few minutes before I gave the final call that brought the innocent persons out. I know that some of the trackers were too forward during the day, and I had to check them myself. I shall not attempt to deal particularly with the contradictory evidence about my generalship that day. Mr. Carrington is the only witness who attempts anything like a distinct condemnation, and, if the Commission will scrutinize his evidence, page 362, they will see that it is wholly unreliable. I will ask the Commission to consider this particularly: I had no opportunity of cross-examining Mr. Carrington, although, at an early stage of the proceedings, a promise was made to me of doing so. Mr. Carrington is known to have expressed himself adversely to me. The reason for not relying on his evidence there is his positive assertion, made within a few days of the occurrence, that Mrs. O’Connor and her sister went away in the train with Mr. Hare, although the fact was they remained at the station in the carriage for nearly five hours afterwards. It is something very remarkable that Mr. Carrington should not have seen those two ladies with whom he had travelled from Melbourne, and yet he observed all I had been doing, and was an absolute stranger to me. And to show, further, that this gentleman was laboring under some confusion of mind, or perhaps taken up with his own duties, he says he never saw Mr. O’Connor—in questions 10060 to 10065—from the time Mr. Hare left Glenrowan until the day he saw him before the Commission here. It could not be from not knowing Mr. O’Connor, for he had travelled with him all the way from Melbourne. Again, he says he heard of Joe Byrne’s death, as I understand his evidence, three hours before any other person did. You will find that in his evidence too. Again, in question No. 10094, he says he never saw me in the field; and again, in questions No. 10152 and 10153 he says he heard at Benalla—what no one else heard—that the railway line was torn up, and logs placed across it. He says this came from fifty different persons, and not one of them can be found. Now, in alluding to Mr. Carrington’s evidence, I wish to correct one statement of mine, that I had heard that Mr. O’Connor had absented himself from the field. I believe the information of which I speak was exaggerated, and I should like to withdraw that remark as regards him. And I would also say, as regards another remark of mine—my complaint about his letter being put in evidence—Mr. Hare has come forward privately, and expressed his regret that that letter was put in through his not observing that it reflected on the character of anyone else.

Mr. Hare—I asked for it to be withdrawn, but it had been published. Had I noticed that it reflected on Mr. Sadleir I would not have put it in.

The witness.—Up to the firing of the house I think there is nothing in my conduct requiring explanation. During the interval from Ned Kelly’s capture I was continually in the field, excepting when I required to come to the railway station to receive or send a telegram and to see how Ned Kelly was getting on. The Commission is aware that the station is within a little more than 120 yards from where the outlaws were shut in, so that even there I could have directed matters in the field; but my interest lay altogether in the field, watching for any opportunity against the outlaws that would offer. The public have always considered—if they really did consider the matter at all—the public have always looked at it as strange that four outlaws at first, and then three, and subsequently two only, should keep over forty police at bay during the whole day. The fact is it was I who held back the police, in spite of their own eagerness to rush in and the urging by some foolish people in the crowd. There were some 400 or 500 private persons looking on, and we were under the fire of their criticism. There is nothing in my conduct that day gives me greater satisfaction than that, in spite of their importunity, I would not allow a single policeman to risk his life unnecessarily. I spoke to my friends on the ground. I said it was a very tame business, and I said the same in my report to the Government. We had the Kellys under our hands, and it would be my fault if any constable were disabled without sufficient reason. I had arranged a rush to take place before the day closed, and should the fire fail, and myself would have been the first man to enter the house. As regards the burning of the house, there is no question, I think, of the propriety of that if you are to be guided by the evidence. I need say no more about that. The giving up the charred remains, too, is a matter of opinion, on which very little depends either way. I think my evidence and my report of 2nd July show that I did not act contrary to instructions. If you will compare my evidence on page 153 with my report, you will see the two are consistent. At this point I will correct two errors in that report in regard to this:—“It was known at this time that Martin Cherry was lying wounded in a detached building, shot by Ned Kelly early in the day—as it has since been ascertained—because he would not hold aside one of the window-blinds; and arrangements were made to rescue him before the flames could approach him.” Now the assertion I want to correct is this—that Cherry was shot by Ned Kelly. That was my impression at the time
I wrote the report, and there are people yet who say so—a gentleman named to me at Benalla on our last visit that there are three persons that still stick to that; but I will take the police reports as conclusive on the matter that Cherry was not shot by Ned Kelly—that he was one of those wounded in the first volleys by the police. This matter was discovered when I was absent on a few days' leave at Geelong, and I was not aware of it until later. There is another statement upon the next page:—"A man named George Metcalfe has also been forwarded by your instructions to Melbourne, for treatment to an injury received in the eye while the firing was going on." That was the man's own statement to Captain Standish, and myself, but, on further enquiries, I found that the injury was caused by Ned Kelly on the Sunday before the capture, the gun having accidentally gone off in his hands, and shot this man in the eye. The next thing I come to is the entries in Senior-Constable Kelly's record-sheet. The senior-constable himself, says that, considering all the circumstances, the entries, taking good and bad, were reasonable and fair, and I think so too. Still, looking back on the amount of work Senior-Constable Kelly had done in the Kelly business, and the ordeal he had gone through at Glenrowan, I think I should have taken more into account the physical exhaustion and the reaction that followed such a long-continued strain. The Commission have proof that the practice of the department is not to inform members of the force of entries of this sort in their record-sheets, whether good or bad. I venture to think the practice is a sound one, and I am certain I have never had abuses. The opposite practice prevailed in the Irish constabulary, and was altered at the request of the police themselves. Mr. Winch says his practice is different. The Commission can easily test this statement; but I think I can say, from my certain knowledge, that Mr. Winch's is not a correct statement. I think Mr. Winch is mistaken in what I meant. I do not mean to say he has wilfully told an untruth, but I think his statement does not represent it fairly to the Commission.

16701. He was very definite in his statement—that, when a record was put on the sheet of any constable, it was read out to the constables together next morning?—so far as it goes, is quite correct—that is, if the constable is fined or punished in any way, the record is entered against him; he cannot be fined without it; but in all my experience in the city I have no recollection of seeing those ordinary entries that took place in accordance with the regulations, when a man is leaving his district. This entry would not have been made if he had not been leaving the district; it was my duty then to make it.

16702. At that time you were called upon to give them a character either for good or bad, when they were leaving the district?—I was.

16703. Do you think that, as a matter of justice and practice, it would be good that the record in every case of that sort should be made known to the man?—I think it would lead to no end of inconvenience and unpleasantness. I refer here to similar records being made public to the men in the Irish constabulary, where the men felt it such a grievance to have their character and faux pas made known to their comrades that they requested the Royal Commission to alter the plan to the plan adopted in this country.

16704. You think that it would interfere detrimentally to the service?—I think making it public in the way Mr. Winch does—16705. That is not the point. Would it be fair to the constable if he was personally made acquainted by the officer making a report unfavorable to him that he had done so, so that he might have an opportunity of appealing to his superiors?—I do not see why he should not be made aware of it under those circumstances. I think every constable and every member of the force ought, if he liked to ask for it, to be allowed to see what is said about him.

16706. Would it not be better to make it the invariable rule in every case where a disparaging record is made about a constable that he should receive a written statement of the nature of that record?—I do not like to put my opinion against the practice of the service.

16707. I am merely alluding in general terms to equity?—It seems, no doubt, a man's right, as I have urged here before the Commission in reference to myself, that I should know all against me; but I do not want to give an opinion as to the practice of the department, for the opinion of the head officer of the department is that if the present practice is departed from there will be no end of trouble.

16708. But without making the record public to any other person but the person interested, would it not be desirable that any constable having a record—either being unusually brave or praised for any conduct whatever—should receive information in writing, or, if there was anything to complain of in his conduct, he should be informed?—Well, I would not make objection to that.

16709. Do you think it would have a good or bad effect?—If I were in his position, I should like very much to see it.

16710. Is it not a proof of the desirability of that being adopted—the conclusions you have arrive4 at?—Perhaps it is. I only want to avoid giving an opinion as to the action deliberately adopted by the head of this and several other departments.

16711. It will be the duty of this Commission to make certain recommendations, so your opinion will be somewhat valuable on the point?—Well, upon my word, I think it might be tried.

16712. With advantage?—Yes, if it were communicated to the man himself (not without his request), and that his comrades on the station should not be made aware of it.

16713. In that case, would not every constable who had a bad record made appeal to his superior officers?—Then the question arises, has he not the right of appeal.

16714. You think that is the best way to settle it?—I am very dubious about it. I am reluctant to give an opinion about that—it would be an experiment any way. The present practice I believe in, and I have said to men, "If you have any desire to see your record-sheet, I will see it is shown to you. I will get the authority of the Chief Commissioner," and the men have said, "No, thank you, sir. I do not want to see and I have never been asked for it by any man; and the men who suffer most, the ill-conducted ones, are the ones who, as a rule, know all that is in their sheets, because when they are brought up for punishment it is all read out to them—the entries of the various officers are read out to the man, so, in that case he would know his sheet from beginning to end.

16715. According to your own confession, a record was made by yourself on one constable’s sheet I that you now see cause to remove?—Yes.

16716. And, therefore, though some little inconvenience might be experienced, it is better than for one individual to suffer?—

There is no doubt a great deal to be said on both sides. I would ask the Commission to remember that it was my duty to make the record on this particular occasion, because Senior-Constable Kelly was leaving the district, so that you may understand that it was not to fix a stigma on him then, but it was apropos of his leaving the district, and for no other reason. I will come now to another matter, chiefly personal to myself, and that is the circumstances under which I applied to be removed from the North-Eastern district. Immediately after the Glenrowan business, I set about arranging for the prevention in the future of any further outbreak. At Captain Standish’s request, I conferred with Mr. Hare. The result was that stations were to be formed at Wombat, Fern Hills, Greta, or Fifteen-mile Creek, Black Range, and Glenmore. I took a great deal of trouble in making provision for quarters and so on, and when the question was submitted again, the Government would not allow the expense. I almost foresaw this, and turned my attention to utilising the agents formerly employed by Mr. Nicolson. In a short time I felt satisfied that, with their help, I need not put the Government to the expense of more than one or two new stations in the Kelly country, and all that was really necessary beside was to keep the banks for a time safe from attack, and to have the nucleus of a party at Benalla ready to turn out in case of outbreak. The Government would not allow the trifling expense of paying an agent for his work and information, nor would they allow the guards necessary to keep the banks even moderately secure. I still tried to work, through relying on the agents; and I arranged with the Stock Protection Societies, and with private persons, to guarantee rewards up to the first sitting of the Commission. I was receiving such help from these agents that before three months I should, I believe, have put the district out of all danger; and in a year or two I expected to see every dangerous man cleared out of the district or in Pentridge. I am not intending any slight on this Commission; but it was inevitable that the agents should take fright at the disclosures by some of the witnesses. At the last there were two agents left. One of these came to me, rushing away from his farm. He had not a penny of money. There was £20 due to him for a reward, and the money was actually coming by post for him, yet he would not wait for it. The other came to me the following night in very much the same state. Further, the Government, or the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police—I do not know who was responsible—had actually ordered the camping out equipments, pack-saddles, tents, compasses, &c., to be collected, with the view of being sent to the depot. I did then what I think every officer of independent mind should do in the same position—that is, when I was denied the means of carrying on the work, with safety to the public and credit to myself, I threw on the head of the department the responsibility of carrying it on with insufficient means. What was the immediate result? The officer who took my place was given a dozen additional constables, and Mr. O’Connor was appointed also to the district, and to take the management of the black trackers. Now I know it has been asserted out of doors, and in this room, that it was through personal fear I left the district. The statement is absolutely untrue. May I recall your particular attention to page 356 of the evidence. You see there the first letter is from myself, in which I wish to have a change of district, and that is dated the 22nd April 1881. If you look at the letters further down the page, you will see that the danger came to a crisis after I sent in my application for removal. First there is Constable Graham, who reports on the 26th of April—four days after my application was written; for the first time he reports:—“I beg to report, for the information of the Superintendent, that a number of them were here yesterday drinking”—he gives the names of several, and says:—“From their manner, I am led to believe that another outbreak among them is imminent.” That could not have influenced my application—that is dated four days afterwards. Then again from Mr. Baber; on the 27th April, he writes:—“Matters are looking serious, and the police are certainly unprepared for another outbreak. It is out of the question to know where to turn for private information.” That is his endorsement, I think, of Constable Graham’s report, and that is five days after my application. He certainly consulted me about it, and had my opinion about it, as he says this on the 26th April. Senior-Constable Elliott, from another station, writes:—“And I have also very little doubt but that the saws were stolen for the purpose mentioned in Sergeant Steel’s telegram of yesterday.” This is after I wrote my application for the change. Sergeant Steele’s report is given immediately after:—“Stolen, last night, from Acock’s, Seven-mile Creek, two large pit saws, supposed taken to construct armour out of.” That was two days after—the saws were actually stolen two days after my application went in. Then in the article from the Benalla Standard, that is dated the 26th April, it is stated:—“There is not the slightest doubt but what the formation of another gang of bushrangers is being meditated in the Greta district, and so on. You see that is four days also after my application. Then Mr. Chomley (question 9873) quotes the conversation he had with Sergeant Whelan; you asked him the question—“Generally was he under the fear of outbreak?” and he says—“I do not think he was under fear of outbreak. Sergeant Whelan stated (I took notes at the time) he had heard it was intended to take the life of Skillian or Williamson, he did not exactly know which.” If that is not an outbreak, what is an outbreak—to commit a murder on a man who had been giving my desire for the change, and I must say it was the last thing that decided me, that in spite of the full knowledge of the district, the very equipments for camping out were ordered into the depôt. I am aware (I believe Mr. Chomley told me) that he did not intend that by the order, but the order reads to me that we were to collect all those equipments and send a catalogue, with a view to their being sent to the depôt.

16717. About what time would it take to get them up again, in case anything did occur?—The shortest time it could take would be four or five hours.

16718. A day or two?—Yes; but they are things that ought to be on the ground, that the men on the ground should be occasionally exercised in the use of them, such as pitching a tent.

16719. They could have been kept as safely there as in the depôt?—Certainly. When I found the Government ready to allow sufficient means to carry on the work, I was most anxious to return to the district, and told Mr. Berry so in the presence of Mr. Chomley. If the officers who preceded me in that district had acted in the same resolute and independent manner, and forced the head of the department to face the difficulty of the situation, there would have been no Kelly outbreak. I think the Commission will support me in that, if there was proper provision insisted on by the officers in charge there would have been no outlawry, and no murder of the police, and no Glenrowan to follow. I hope, after so many years of service, without a single slur being cast on my character, public or private, I can afford to feel, unconcerned about the statements made by Mr. Winch. The Chairman tore up his evidence, after kindly allowing me to read it, but as it has been read by the Commission, I will say this only on the subject: If Mr. Winch can find one respectable person in or out of the police force to corroborate his statements, I am ready to resign my position forthwith. That is all I wish to say, except to answer any questions the Commission may wish to put to me.

16720. By Mr. Nicolson.—In your main examination you disputed my being ignorant of what we were going to do when we came to Sherritt’s hut in the Sebastopol matter. You alluded to your telegram to me as being sufficient to show that. Do you withdraw that now?—I do not exactly remember what I did say, so I had better look at that.

16721. “Very positive information that Kellys are concealed in range near here. My informant is not quite sober, and has been talking rather openly, but I am convinced his information is genuine; but it may be too late a day or two. I have but two constables here, and the hiding place is most difficult to approach. I have endeavored to communicate with Steele’s party of thirteen men, six of which I can be sure of coming, but I think you should send all you can by special to reach here before day; mounted, and of course armed, and bring tracker. Reply.” I think you stated in your answer, “Is it a fact that Mr. Nicolson had received no information from you who, he says, was in charge of that particular party, until you arrived in sight of the first hut?—Well, in the first place, Mr Nicolson had received a telegram. That is the foundation, and when explaining matters more fully on their arrival at the platform, I thought Mr. Nicolson was standing by—my impression was that he was standing by, and naturally would catch up what was said, and I took it for granted that he heard, as well as Captain Standish, what I said, which was simply an enlargement of the telegram I sent”:—The facts remain the same as they did then. I only say it was my impression when Captain Standish and I were speaking.

16722. Is there anything in that telegram to show me anything about the Sherritts?—Certainly you could not learn from this telegram, without something further, what was going to be done, and I thought you had that explanation which it appears you had not.

16723. Were you at the interview with Captain Standish—you and Detective Ward—on which occasion he asked you about the fitness of Jack Sherritt for the police force?—Yes.
16724. Will you relate to the Commission what took place on that occasion, and what testimony was given by Captain Standish on that subject? —

The Commission.—What time was this?

Mr. Nicolson.—Mr. Sadleir will give the date.

The witness.—I think the correspondence on that subject ought all to be collected. I think there are letters from me.

16725. By the Commission.—That was after the Glenrowan affair altogether? —Yes. Mr. Nicolson asked me latterly if I ever wrote to Captain Standish on the subject, and I said I thought not. Since I find by reference to old letters that there was some communication between me and Captain Standish on the subject.

If the Commission has not the letter it must be a private letter, and I do not think I can remember what it was about, and I would not be prepared to answer the question without looking over some files.

16726. Will you tell the Commission what occurred at the interview I have mentioned? —I was with Captain Standish one day in my own office. Detective Ward was called in, and he was asked his opinion about the fitness of one or both of the Sherritts (Jack Sherritt was one certainly) for the police force. Detective Ward, after some little hesitation at first, said that he did not think they should be taken on in the police force.

He mentioned some matters, which were in my recollection not long ago but I cannot call them to mind at this moment. Ward did mention about some sheep-killing business which has been mentioned before the Commission. I thought he said it was Constables Falkiner and Canny that saw Sherritt skinning the sheep, and he also mentioned about a saddle-cloth being traceable in some way to his possession.

16727. That was Aaron Sherritt? —No, Jack Sherritt.

16728. With reference to the sheep? —That was in reference to Jack Sherritt, but Ward’s principal objection was, on account of their criminal relations and connections, that they were not fit for the police force. I think that is a very serious objection to a man entering the police force.

16729. As an old officer of police, what is your own opinion of the suitability of the two Sherritts for the police force? —One I had never seen, but I should have nothing to do with men connected with the criminal class.

16730. You have seen Jack Sherritt? —Yes; there is nothing physically objectionable in Jack.

16731. I am asking about his suitability for the police force. What is your opinion, as a superintendent of police, of the suitability of a man of Jack Sherritt’s bearing and character for the police force? —I do not think he is at all suitable. Any man with criminal connections or under any doubt about character I think ought not to be in the force.

16732. Did you recommend him? —No. I said to Captain Standish if he was taken on I hoped he would not be sent to my district.

16733. Having been taken on, do you think it was right to dismiss him? —I think I would have asked the sanction of the Government, but I would not have been content with a man like him in the police force; and I am sure that respectable members of the police force would not have liked it if he had been taken on.

16734. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you think it right to have sent him away after if they were innocent? —Yes; I think it was a dishonor to the force to have a man of that type in the force at all, however innocent he may be.

16735. By the Commission.—Have not members of the police been guilty of objectionable acts, though not of so serious a matter as robbery? —You would have to mention the offence.

16736. Do you think that frequenters of brothels, members of the force, are desirable men who ought to be retained? —I think it is a very disgraceful thing frequenting brothels.

16737. Are they desirable men to be retained in the police force? —I think they would do better to marry respectable wives, and live chastely.

16738. Would you recommend their continuance in the force? —I have known something of that sort—a case of a man living in concubinage. It was put to the constable in that case either to marry the girl or leave the service. That was a case in point. Of course I think it is very disgraceful conduct on the part of a constable or officer frequenting brothels.

16739. And those are acts they are responsible for? —Yes.

16740. More so than Sherritt would be for the conduct of his father, or mother, or relations? —Yes.

16741. By Mr. Nicolson.—Will you look at this paragraph in Mr. Hare’s report of 2nd July 1880, re the Kelly gang: —“I received orders from you at the end of May that I was to proceed at once to Benalla to relieve Mr. Nicolson. I accordingly, on the 2nd June, went up there. I arrived at Benalla at about 11 o’clock that day. I saw Messrs. Nicolson, Sadleir, and O’Connor in the office. After some conversation on general subjects, Mr. Nicolson produced a letter he had received from you, directing him to give me all the information he had obtained concerning the Kelly gang during his stay at Benalla. He showed me the state of his financial account with one of his agents, and said there was nothing owing to any of the others. He opened a drawer and showed me a number of papers and the correspondence which had taken place during his stay at Benalla, and said, ‘You can get all the information from these papers.’ He gave me no verbal information whatever, but said, ‘Mr. Sadleir can tell you all I know concerning the movements of the outlaws.’ He left the office, and I never spoke to him again, and he went to Melbourne by the evening train.
The principal agent employed by Mr. Nicolson I had appointed to meet me that evening. He was one who was considered the best man they had. After talking with him a few minutes, he positively refused to work for me or have anything to do with me, although he had accompanied the police from Beechworth the previous day for the purpose of having an interview with me.” Is that statement he gave no verbal information whatever true and correct?—No, I do not consider that correct. I have already been examined very fully on that subject.

16742. This statement, “He left the office, and I never spoke to him again, and he went to Melbourne by the evening train.” Is it implied by that that I left the office leaving him behind; that I went to Melbourne without any further communication?—If that is implied, it is wrong. Mr. Hare left the office before you did. 16743. Whom did Mr. Hare leave behind in the office?—He left you and me. 16744. Did I see Mr. Hare again in the course of that day?—Yes; I think it was brought to my mind that you came to the door to ask him to come to dinner, but that was all that passed. 16745. By the Commission.—What was Mr. Hare’s reply?—That he would go; but that was in the afternoon, and nothing to do with the period when they were explaining matters.

16746. By Mr. Nicolson.—I wish you to go over the question of time occupied by myself and Mr. Hare in the office?—I must only judge by comparing other times. I do not know that I looked at the clock when Mr. Hare came. I take it he arrived by the train at a quarter past eleven. I am judging that he would take fifteen minutes coming up from the railway station to my office, where the interview took place. That would bring the time up to half-past eleven. There were a few minutes taken up in preliminary conversation, about things indifferent, and then the business of the interview was commenced, I think by Mr. Hare stating what we all knew he came for. I have, under pressure, fixed what I think the minimum time taken in explaining matters, and I would rather trust to my evidence on circumstantial matters then, because I have read and spoken so much about it since, and my recollection then was better than my recollection now—that is as regards time: but to go on with the events of that interview, the subject of the Kelly business was spoken of by you both. I think what Mr. Hare alludes to is the statement of the claims of the different agents, that was all ready on paper.

16747. Was much time taken about that?—No, I do not think so; just a little time to look it over. You then, both of you, addressed yourselves to the Kelly business. I think I have stated in my evidence before, that, after some explanation had been begun by you, it was interjected, I think by Mr. Hare, that you should come to the latest event. I think I have stated before, that was all ready on paper. The principal agent was ready on paper.

16748. How do you say it was, you think, suggested by Mr. Hare—was there any other person present?—I am satisfied it was by Mr. Hare, and I presume you did so—I know you did—and the conversation until the party broke up continued on those subjects alone.

16749. By the Commission.—Did Mr. Hare seem satisfied with the explanation?—Yes, he seemed perfectly satisfied, and Mr. Nicolson appealed to me (I was partly occupied at a side seat), asking me if in what he was stating he was omitting anything, and on that appeal I replied—“No, I can see nothing that you are omitting.”

16750. Were you possessed of all the information Mr. Nicolson had?—Yes. He began by being diffuse, by enlarging on the business of the past and his experience, and he was brought to this point by Mr. Hare’s interjection—“Give me the latest dates.”

16751. By Mr. Nicolson.—“What was the last you heard?”—Yes, that was it, and the last we heard of them was news perhaps of only a week or ten days before.

16752. What news was that—do you remember anything about the appearance at Chiltern, at Byron’s?—Yes, I remember you mentioning it as Lord Byron’s.—[The evidence at Questions 2614-5 was read to the witness.] that I can call to mind.

16761. By the Commission.—Did he not complain about those agents being discharged?—If you can call it a complaint—he asked an explanation of the telegram sent by Mr. Nicolson to Mullane on the evening he left; he asked me about that the next day, and I could tell him nothing about it.

16762. Were you astonished when you found that Mr. Nicolson had done that?—I did not know the import or meaning of it at all, therefore I did not feel astonished. I was simply asked if I knew anything about a telegram of that sort that was sent to Beechworth.

16763. If you or Mr. Hare had wanted to see that telegram, would you have had any difficulty to obtain it?—No; there were means to get it at Beechworth.

16764. You have seen the telegram since?—Yes.

16765. Does the telegram convey any orders about paying off agents?—I think I explained that it was misunderstood by Mr. Hare, in my opinion.

16766. By the Commission.—The question really is: what did Mr. Hare say to you after he received information from Detective Ward?—That was the only part of Mr. Nicolson’s conduct that Mr. Hare called in question.

16767. Can you remember what Mr. Hare said?—He told me to the effect that he heard about the telegram, and asked if I could tell him anything about it.

16768. Did he express his surprise that Mr. Nicolson took such a course?—I do not remember; probably he would.

16769. Was not Mr. Hare considerably annoyed at the telegram being sent, then being under the impression that it was to discharge all the agents?—I could hardly tell you. No doubt Mr. Hare felt that there was something there that required explanation.

16770. Did he ever refer to it again after that night?—I could not possibly say; my answer would probably have prevented him, seeing I knew nothing at all about it.

16771. By Mr. Nicolson.—Will you look at that telegram?—[The witness did so.] (Question 1465.)

16772. Is that an order for the discharge of paid agents?—I can only say what I said before, that it withdrew your responsibility for any further payment to Tommy or his friends, and that if those were to be continued he must look to whoever succeeded you.

16773. Do you know what the watch party was sent for?—I did not then. I know now it was a watch party put in that part of the country where you were making that last search on Renwick’s information.

16774. By the Commission.—Which watch party was it?

Mr. Nicolson.—I had put a watch party for four days in the hut of Aaron Sherritt. That was a temporary watch party, on account of the appearance of the outlaws the previous week, and I took up a party of police with me from Benalla to scour the country, placing a watch party there.

16775. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—You remember the day the Queensland trackers were sent away, on the Tuesday, from Benalla?—I remember their going.

16776. Were they sent away by Mr. Hare as part of a ruse, or did they go away by orders?—They went away by orders.

16777. Is this correct (Mr. Hare’s report):—“The trackers were removed on the 25th June; the outlaws, believing they had left for Queensland, showed out on the 26th. On the 28th the gang was destroyed, and its leader captured”?—I could not tell what the outlaws believed I do not know who could.

16778. Are you aware that the outlaws had laid that trap for the trackers as well as for the police?—
So they said; but you cannot believe a word they said. I believe they did say so to Bracken, that they meant to have the trackers and Mr. Hare and Mr. O’Connor.

16779. By the Commission.—Then that statement of theirs would contradict Mr. Hare’s statement?—
I think it was a hasty assumption of Mr. Hare’s.

16780. Did you not form the impression that the outlaws were afraid of the trackers during the time they were there?—There is no question about that.

16781. Then that bears out what Mr. Hare said?—They left on the 24th, and they could not get to Queensland on the 26th. It is only guess-work.

Mr. Hare asked permission to read the whole of the paragraph in his report, and did so. (Inserted above.)

16782. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—That account you spoke of about all the agents—was not that shelved in anticipation of Mr. Hare taking charge?—Yes.

16783. Were you and I not at least an hour in the office before Mr. Hare came, preparing for him?—
Yes, all the morning.

16784. Did I show any disposition in the least about that time, and previous to that time, to do anything in the way of keeping back information?—No, I am quite certain you did not.

16785. If you felt surprised about that telegram, would you not have sent to Beechworth for a copy of it if you thought it of importance?—I suppose so.

16786. By the Commission.—What steps did Mr. Hare take immediately about that?—I do not know;
he asked me about it.
16787. Did Mr. Hare go to Beechworth at all?—He was there afterwards.

Mr. Nicolson.—Mr. Hare stated in explanation that he was up in Beechworth, and did not ask about that, or make any attempt to see it.

Mr. Hare.—A week after I was in Beechworth.

16788. By Mr. Hare (to the witness).—What were you preparing all the morning before I arrived?—

Mr. Nicolson was.

16789. What was it?—I think he was preparing and putting the business together.

16790. What was it—the statement of the accounts?—Really I could not tell you the particulars.

16791. By the Commission.—Was Mr. Nicolson in the office preparing for Mr. Hare?—Yes, I think he was preparing—he was busy that morning in the office.

16792. Did he tell you it was with the view of having things ready for Mr. Hare?—I think that was distinctly understood.

16793. By Mr. Hare.—Those were principally the accounts?—I could not tell.

16794. What else could he be preparing?—I could not tell you.

16795. In your evidence in chief, you said that it was from fifteen to twenty minutes that Mr. Nicolson was talking to me?—I meant by that that he was talking business, giving you the information about the Kelly business in those fifteen or twenty minutes, and that is the very least I could swear to; it was possibly very much more.

16796. Look at that entry I made on that day—[showing a diary he kept]—“I left Melbourne by the early train; found Nicolson, Sadleir, and O’Connor in the office. Nicolson gave me the names of special men engaged by him, letters from them, and said Sadleir would tell me everything. He told me all in ten minutes.” You see the date of that?—I see it is the 2nd June 1880.

16797. Would that not be probably more correct than any opinion given from recollection six months after?—Every statement here, except the time, is unquestionable. That he told you all in ten minutes I do not think can be correct. I am sure the time you were conferring and discoursing together about the Kelly business must have been longer than that.

16798. You said fifteen or twenty minutes?—I was under great pressure at the time, and speaking so long after I can only stick to my evidence in chief.

16799. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—Do you assert that it did not take more than ten minutes?—I do assert it positively.

16800. What means have you of testing that; did you look at your watch?—No, from the time I was engaged at it, and I wrote that at the time, never thinking of anything turning on it afterwards, or that I should be called upon to give evidence about it. I wrote it just the same as other portions of my diary.

16801. It might be fifteen minutes?—Yes, but I have entered it here as ten minutes.

16802. By Mr. Hare (to the witness).—Will you refer to Mr. Nicolson’s evidence at question 890—"You wish us to understand in your opinion you had the Kellys almost completely under your control at the time you were withdrawn?—I do; and I say it not only on behalf of myself but on behalf of my assistants and agents.” Were you aware of that when I relieved Mr. Nicolson, that he had the Kellys under his control?—No, I do not think such an expression as that was used.

16803. Whether it was used or not, do you think it was the case?—I think it is an assumption.

16804. Were you of the same opinion?—I was under the impression that we were getting very near the Kellys, no doubt of it; and, I think, I wrote to you to say so.

16805. Do you remember me having a conversation with you on that very subject, and saying, “Now, Sadleir, what nearer are you in catching the Kellys now to what we were eleven months previously”?—No, I do not remember that.

16806. Do you know anything that pointed, say a week after Mr. Nicolson left, to the fact that we were about to catch the Kellys?—I would sooner speak of what is before.

16807. Whilst you were giving me all the information, do you remember giving any information that would lead me to believe that you thought that you had surrounded the Kellys by agents?—No, I do not think so, not in that sense. If I did speak in that strain, I must have told you we were nearer to the Kellys, and knew more of their movements than we ever did before.

16808. Do you remember telling me that?—No; but if we had turned on that, it would have been the way I would have expressed myself.

16809. Do you think that Mr. Nicolson could have given me all the information that was necessary for one officer relieving another in twenty minutes, with what he had done during the time he had been there?—Well, as you had brought him down to this narrow point that he was to speak of only the latest information then, I think he could.

16810. If I said, “Tell me the last time you saw them,” was that telling him I did not wish any other information?—I should have dropped all introductory matter and have come to that.

16811. Do you mean to say that you could have given me, in twenty minutes, all the information as to what had occurred that I would require on taking charge of a business of that kind?—You must remember that also, while we were talking, there appeared to me that there was nothing I could suggest.

16812. That was with regard to the agents?—No, it was not; it was with regard to all the Kelly information, because as regards the agents I could not tell anything.

16813. Do you remember him saying anything about the watch party in Aaron Sherritt’s house?—No, I do not think it was mentioned.

16814. Did you know it yourself?—No.
16815. You had never been to the ground?—No. I knew nothing at all about it.

16816. “Send Constable Armstrong back to his station.” Did you know the Beechworth station was to be reduced?—No, I was not aware he was to be sent away.

16817. Was anything said to me about that by Mr. Nicolson?—No.

John Sadleir, continued.
6th Sept. 1881.

16818. You did not know about that?—No.
16819. Mr. Nicolson said in his evidence, “I used to meet the agent known as ‘Diseased stock,’ and I would take down the information he gave me in my pocket-book.” Had you access to his pocket book?—Whenever I required information from it.
16820. But none of that information was left for me?—No, he took his pocket-book.
16821. Do you remember anything being said about the armour on that day that Mr. Nicolson handed over to me. You said that Mr. Nicolson was the only one that really believed in the armour?—I think that must have been talked of. It was in the paper he handed to you—the three “diseased stock” papers.
16822. Did he say anything about the papers?—I do not see how it could escape mention, but I could not be positive about it. Of course you know you and I talked of it afterwards.
16823. I know that. You know that some two or three days before Mr. O’Connor left with his blacks, was it not notified in the papers that he was going?—The papers took notice of it.
16824. And did they not write a leading article on the subject?—I could not say; I knew they noticed the departure.
16825. It was the Tuesday before they left?—Yes.
16826. And was it not stated in the papers that others were coming from Queensland?—I could not tell you that. I know that Mr. O’Connor’s blacks were spoken of as going. You can find the papers.
16827. You say you do not think this young Sherritt suitable for the force?—I do not think any persons connected with criminals fit.
16828. Supposing you had been in the position that Mr. Nicolson was, would you have discharged him from the force?—I would have been very uncomfortable about men like that in the force.
16829. Would you have discharged them?—I think so.
16830. Would you have recommended them to Mr. Fosberry, to take them on in the New South Wales police, having discharged them here?—Not without telling all the circumstances.
16831. Would you recommend him to take them on?—I do not think I should.
16832. Or would you have given a recommendation to the Queensland force?—Not to the police force; not without explaining all the circumstances.
16833. By the Commission.—As a matter of fact, according to your statement, you had a very large district to attend to, and you were called upon at times to assist with information that came to your knowledge, so that you would not be in a position to give all the information which Mr. Nicolson would have been able to give to Mr. Hare?—I think there was nothing important that I would not know.
16834. This question of the armour—you are not clear whether it was or was not spoken of?—I did not see how it could have been avoided.
16835. Did it take Mr. Nicolson as long to make the statement as it does now?—Mr. Nicolson was not interrupted. He went straight on to the end, until Mr. Hare spoke. Mr. Nicolson is not a rapid speaker.
16836. They could not say a great deal in twenty minutes?—I cannot get away from the fact that when we were all present, Mr. Nicolson appealed to me, more than once, as to whether it was possible to give further information, and I could suggest nothing further. I know I was aware of everything that was going on.
16837. The question is simply this: that Mr. Hare has complained that Mr. Nicolson did not give him all the information that he ought to have done at the time?—He complained that he gave him none.
16838. When Mr. Nicolson relieved Mr. Hare before (in July 1880), were you present?—No.
16839. Have you any idea whether there was any jealousy between the superior officers of police?—That is a very general question.
16840. I mean between any of the superintendents in the police force?—Between the superintendents, I know of no ill-feeling, no unworthy feeling of any sort or description, as between superintendents and other officers.
16841. Did it not come before you at any time, such a feeling?—No, certainly not. We choose, as we do outside, our particular friends. Some in the service I may be more friendly with than others, but we are so scattered that we hardly know each other. I know of no ill-feeling between officers in the service, until between Captain Standish and Mr. Nicolson this business began.
16842. There has been a statement made here by Mr. Winch, that Mr. Hare was unfairly favored by Captain Standish—that was the general feeling among the officers of the police?—No, it never was a, feeling of mine.
16843. Did you hear of it?—I think I heard of it, more latterly than before.
16844. I mean before this inquiry, was it current conversation among the men and officers?—No, I hardly think it—perhaps it used to be said that Mr. Hare had a comfortable district, but that did not amount to jealousy. I was conscious of no feeling to hinder the execution of the officers’ duty in any way.
16845. During the time that Mr. Hare was with you in the North-Eastern district, did he conduct himself in any other way than an ordinary officer who had not been specially favored?—He was not in the least overbearing, and if he had favors from Captain Standish he never showed it in that way—he never exercised any improper authority over me, or attempted to. I never saw any assumption of any authority on his part.

16846. Apparently if he had been favored by his superior officer he never displayed it in the conduct of his business as police officer?—No, I cannot say he did. I was going to explain the difficulty I felt in giving my evidence about this interview between Messrs. Hare and Nicolson. I have been asked in the first place as to detailed matters and papers to give minutes and duration of time for the interview. Those are things that are non-essential, but I wish to put myself perfectly clear before the Commission, I do not care who is right or wrong—the impression I went away with from that interview was that Mr. Hare had all the information he desired, and if there was anything hidden from him it was entirely without the intention of Mr. Nicolson, and if there was anything hidden it escaped my notice. It was a short interview, shortened by Mr. Hare’s interjection, as I have stated.

16847. According to your own statement before, there was a very strong feeling in the mind of Mr. Nicolson about his removal at that time?—Yes, he was very indignant about it.

16848. To such an extent that you wrote a private letter to Mr. Hare on the subject?—That had nothing to do with it at all.

16849. Did you write a letter to Mr. Hare in consequence of a conversation between you and Mr. Nicolson, or from your own feeling in the matter?—I wrote it believing when I wrote it that Mr. Hare was pushing himself into this business, and as a friend I saw it was one in which there was no honor to be gained—it was too difficult, too hazardous and mysterious a work, not like one that a man could do satisfactorily to himself, because in it he could not know what would happen. Mr. Hare wrote to say he was not pushing himself forward—he could not help himself. That is the whole history of the business. I did not let Mr. Nicolson know that I wrote that letter for some time afterwards—he had nothing to do with it in any way whatever—I saw there was a breach likely to follow, I felt there was mischief impending, and I wished to prevent it.

16850. You wished to guard Mr. Hare against it?—I wished to prevent him from doing what I, as a friend, thought was a mistake.

16851. Then your anticipations, to some extent, have been fulfilled?—Yes. I have always sought for peace between officers. You must remember that men in earnest about their work are really the most apt to feel touchy—they feel more strongly than anybody else.

16852. By Mr. Nicolson.—Do you not recollect my receiving a letter from Mr. Hare, in which he repudiated having forced himself in any way on this business?—Yes.

16853. Do you recollect my writing back to him?—Yes, you did.

16854. Was my letter friendly or unfriendly?—I take it that it was a friendly one.

16855. By the Commission.—You were in charge of the district, in full charge of the North-Eastern District, when Constable Fitzpatrick was shot?—No, he was shot in April 1878, and I did not take charge till some time in July.

16856. Can you give the Commission any reason why the Kellys were at large from April to October of that year?—Of course I can only speak of my own period, and my efforts to trace them will be the best explanation, and you have all that in what I said to-day as to after I met that gentleman and his servant at Greta. The servant is a peculiar old bushman, with connections among the criminals. The gentleman, I think, was getting a little tipsy at the time, though I did not notice it, and told me he knew all about the Kellys, in a mysterious way, and this man said, “Yes, they are in hiding from me.” Parliament was beginning to move in the matter, and I was getting uneasy lest I should be asked why I did not make search for them, and I actually began the search before I had finished the business of the district, and we searched fairly and honestly, and to the best of our ability, and could get no information. They are a very mysterious race of criminals, and can hide in a manner we do not at all understand. The same question might apply as to why they were at large till June 1880, with thousands of pounds and hundreds of police after them. It is a mystery to me always, and one I cannot explain.

16857. Are you of opinion that political influence has a prejudicial effect on the discipline of the force in any way?—Nothing can be worse, if it is exercised.

16858. Do you believe in the past it has worked that way?—There are some men who are reputed to exercise political influence—more amongst the constables and sergeants. I have never had occasion to do it myself, and I never would do it, I think.

16859. Have you ever seen much of it in the records of the department?—No, I have not. My own district was particularly free from it, and I think that was because the men were contented with the administration.

16860. Would it be better that the police force should be altogether independent of political influence, even to the Ministerial head of the department?—No, I do not think so; we all need looking after. If the men feel that their superiors are treating them fairly, they are not concerned about political influence.

The witness withdrew.

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A.

Charles Hope Nicolson further examined.

16861. By the Commission.—We are ready to hear anything you wish to say now?—I anticipated at the commencement of this enquiry that a series of charges, both direct and implied, would be brought against me. The result has proved my expectations to be correct. I desire to review some of the evidence which has been tendered, and in so doing will deal with matters demanding attention in their proper sequence, taking first Mr. Hare’s report, dated 2nd July 1880. I have only brought in names of officers where absolutely necessary to refute the charges brought against me. I will begin with the first statement to which I take exception. Mr. Hare has stated that he was directed to organize the whole pursuit of the bushranger Power. This assertion I never heard of, nor can I learn that other officers of police did, until it was made in that report, 2nd July 1880. Mr. Hare’s duty as officer in charge of depôt was to forward men and material to whatever district authority was issued to him to supply. But that is not an organization. In April I was down from Kyneton on sick leave, and heard of a reported appearance of Power, near Lauriston. I immediately gave up my leave and went back to my district, about 28th April, and in company with Inspector Disney I was in search of Power, with the assistance and co-operation of inhabitants of the district, particularly from Trentham, for over a week. We ascertained that Power had passed through the north part of the district. He returned by McIvor to his old hands (North-Eastern District). If Mr. Hare, then a junior superintendent, had been directed to organize the whole pursuit, what steps did he take upon that occasion? I volunteered to Captain Standish to go up in pursuit of him. He accepted my offer most gladly, and upon this, or perhaps a subsequent occasion, he said, “Nicolson, as you are not strong yet, I will send Hare to drive you up instead of allowing you to travel by coach, and he, perhaps, may be of use to you.” I most readily agreed. We drove up together, and upon arriving we met the gentleman who had given information of Power’s appearance, as obtained from an informer. While talking to this gentleman Mr. Hare went on to speak to this informer, who was then in sight. He returned, saying, “The man knows nothing; why, he is a Pentridge man,” and more to that effect. I will hand in this affidavit from the gentleman referred to, the president of the shire there, on the subject. [The same was handed in, and is as follows:—] “I, Robert McBean, of Benalla, in the colony of Victoria, auctioneer, and president of the shire of Benalla make oath and say:—1. That, in or about the month of April 1870, I sent Captain Standish information that I knew of a man who would be likely to give valuable assistance to the police sent in pursuit of the celebrated bushranger Power. 2. That Messrs. Nicolson and Hare came up to my station to meet the informer, who arrived about dusk in the evening; and I went forward to meet him. Mr. Hare accompanied me, Mr. Nicolson remaining behind. I introduced Mr. Hare to the informer, and they entered into conversation; and I retired, and rejoined Mr. Nicolson. In about ten minutes Mr. Hare returned to us, and said he did not think the informer would do, as he was an old Pentridge man, and that he refused to give any information, and in any case could not be trusted. I was very much disgusted, and said to Mr. Hare, ‘If that be the case, what risk do I run now, having trusted and arranged with this man to take the reward.’ 3. Mr. Nicolson then went forward and spoke to the informer, Mr. Hare and I remaining out of hearing. After about ten or fifteen minutes Mr. Nicolson returned to Mr. Hare and myself; and informed us that it was all right, and that the informer would let me know within a month, when he ascertained exactly where Power was concealed; and I promised to send to Captain Standish when I received the information. 4. I had several consultations with the informer, and ultimately sent word to Captain Standish that the informer would be able to point out the exact hiding place of Power. 5. That soon afterwards Messrs. Nicolson and Hare arrived at my station, where they met the informer, and started on their memorable pursuit, which ended in the capture of Power. 6. That during both the interviews I had with Messrs. Nicolson and Hare, I understood that Mr. Nicolson was in command of the party, nothing transpired, to my knowledge, which could convey any other impression.—ROBT. McBEAN, Sworn at Benalla, in the colony of Victoria, this fifth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me— F. McDONNELL, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the colony of Victoria for taking affidavits.” To avoid making our business known we returned to Melbourne, I resuming my duty at Kyneton. About a fortnight afterwards I received letters from Captain Standish and Mr. Hare. The former said:—“My dear Nicolson,—I cannot think of allowing you to go back to this duty in your present delicate state of health; Dr. Ford says it would be injurious to you;” or words to that effect. Mr. Hare wrote:—“My dear fellow, I am so sorry to be off without... you,” &c. I was taken back about those letters, and at once went to Melbourne by that evening’s train, and saw Dr. Ford, who said it would do me no harm, rather good, if I felt equal to the fatigue. (I may here state that I had had an attack of fever for three weeks in the end of February.) I then insisted upon going, and went up, Mr. Hare driving me as before, met the informer, and after three or four days reached the hiding place which he indicated. Certainly on this occasion I said to Mr. Hare, “Remember I am in command of this party.” I did so because of the attempt to prevent me going up on this second occasion after I had arranged all matters on my first visit. When smoke was pointed out to me, at a time and in a manner already made known, I ran up, leading the way, and signing to Messrs. Hare and Montfort to go to the back of the gunyah to prevent the man escaping. I ran in at the entrance, saw Power lying there, threw myself on him, seizing both of his wrists and rendering him powerless to escape. Mr. Hare and Mr. Montfort then came upon the scene and pulled Power out by his legs, as described in the Argus of 9th June 1870. I did not take the credit of arresting this man myself at all. I say that I did not make any invidious distinctions, and I did not go into these details in my report to the Chief Commissioner. We were all equally running danger, and I thought it mean to make any invidious distinction, and allowed Mr. Hare to sign the report, and I would have allowed Mr. Montfort to sign it, had he been an officer. We returned to town, Mr. Hare the invalid this time, and I stronger than ever.

The Chief Secretary promised promotion. I have never attached or claimed credit for the capture of Power, as Mr. Winch has stated. We obtained certain information, and, in acting upon it, overcoming some difficulty and hardship, merely did our duty. Probably there was as much credit due to yourself, Mr. Chairman. Personally, I am as tired of this Power affair as every one else must be; but, as so much has been made out of this, I must now show who really captured him. I must particularly call your attention to the fact that Captain Standish and Mr. Hare have, in their statements, mentioned this last pursuit of Power, but they both omitted to refer to the previous visit, which gives point to the whole story, viz., that Captain Standish endeavored to keep me out of it after I had previously arranged the whole matter. I may state that I would not have had such suspicious as to Captain Standish’s motives in this matter, but for his attempt to place Mr. Winch over me in the list of officers in 1870. That is the meaning of Mr. Winch being over my name in 1870 that has been spoken of. Upon my writing to him on the subject he replied that there was no record of my ever having been a superintendent, and it was only after sending him my appointment, and after some delay, that the matter was rectified. This shows that, even ten years ago, Captain Standish endeavored to promote some one over me. Mr. Hare has said that I and Mr. Montfort received promotion. Certainly Mr. Montfort did, as he tells you, by a “fluke.” He has turned out a valuable officer; but it was unfair to all the sergeants and men in the North-Eastern District that, after their two years’ hard work, Mr. Hare’s clerk should have been sent up, to reap the benefit which ought to have been theirs. The ostensible reason for sending him was that he knew the district; but, although that knowledge was useful to us, it was unnecessary, as we had a guide who led us almost to the spot. Chances of this kind should not be given at the expense of the local police, if any of them were deservedly efficient. It is appearances of favoritism like the above which cause dissatisfaction and disorganization among members of the force. Again, if Mr. Hare had been directed to organize the Power pursuit over the heads of at least eleven senior officers, would there not be some record in the department of so important an event, and would not protests have been made by the senior officers, as was done by one of the juniors, viz., Mr. Nicolas? Of course Mr. Hare had much to do with the men, being Depôt Officer, and therefore had to select and despatch the men, as in the Kelly business, and as many of the men selected were his own Bourke district men, it created considerable jealousy amongst the local police. As to the promotion which Mr. Hare says I have received since Power’s capture, I may state that I was removed from Kyneton because the police in Melbourne were thought to be in a state of considerable disorganization, and there had been difficulty in filling the post of Chief of Detectives on my giving it up and going to Kyneton. Captain Standish desired me to again undertake the duties of that position, together with those of the city. I did so, doing thereby the duties of the two offices, either of which is enough work for any man, for an extra £100 per annum, thereby saving the country at least £200 per annum. I was then actuated, as I have been since, not by any feeling for myself, but from a desire to promote the good of the force. My predecessors in the city had never been in charge of detectives, while I had been for thirteen years, and that was the reason I was specially asked to undertake that arduous duty again. I became Inspecting Superintendent simply because that post came to me by right of seniority, and on taking it I undertook duties which had previously been performed by two officers, viz., Messrs. Lyttleton and Bookey, thus again saving something to the Government. I may here state that Captain Standish endeavored to induce me to remain in the city and allow Mr. Hare to be Inspecting Superintendent, pointing out that I would lose the extra £100 per annum and only gain £50 per annum by promotion. He so impressed me that I consulted an old and intimate friend, whose advice was “to remember that Johnny should always keep marching on.” In a short time after I heard that Mr. Winch and Mr. Hare had applied for an extra £100 per annum each. I then pointed out to Captain Standish that if they received this increase, one would get £25 more than I did and the other exactly what I received, besides allowances for horse, groom, &c., which I did not have. I therefore applied for an extra £100 per annum, and received £75 extra, making my salary £500 per annum. My title of Inspecting Superintendent was altered to that of Assistant Commissioner simply to compel Captain Standish to recognize my true position, which he had not done. It must not be forgotten that Mr. Hare, a junior officer, had for fourteen years been Superintendent of the Depôt, the prize post, and next in importance to that of City Officer, and which had been previously filled by military men, with one exception. Even Captain Standish has acknowledged to the Commission that I obtained my present position by seniority only, and therefore Mr. Hare’s assertions to the contrary fall to the ground. If Mr. Hare had claims to promotion, why did Captain Standish refuse to promote him? Manifestly because he dare not do so. Was Mr. Hare a man who would stand any refusal, if promotion was his right and he could prove it? The next incident to which I will refer is the interview between Mr. Hare and myself, on the 2nd June 1880, when I handed over charge of the pursuit to him. Mr. Hare, I am sorry to say, has grossly misrepresented what occurred at that interview; and I will now detail my recollection of the facts of it, as they occurred. I had previously received notice that Mr. Hare would relieve me on the 2nd June; and as I had prepared a statement showing the financial accounts of the agents employed by me in the pursuit of the Kellys, that account gave the names of all my agents, and that they had been paid to date. I arrived at the office at an early hour that morning. Mr. Hare arrived at the office about half-past eleven, where Mr. Sadleir, Mr. O’Connor, and myself were waiting for him. The loose papers, such as telegrams, and so on, which I had myself read all over, were placed in heaps on the left. A few important papers I had filed, and put up, and docketed, and put in a drawer. There were only three or four packets of them. As the Commission is aware, I had previously written Mr. Hare in a kindly spirit on the subject of his taking charge of the pursuit. I have asked for that letter to be shown to the Commission, but Mr. Hare does not seem inclined to do so. We all met cordially. I got up and shook hands cordially. Mr. Sadleir was behind the door, and then he shook hands with Mr. Sadleir, and then with Mr. O’Connor. The room is a very small one, not much larger than this table. We had a little conversation before proceeding to business. A considerable time before twelve o’clock, Mr. Hare and I sat down to our desk, like this, Mr. Sadleir and Mr. O’Connor remaining in the room. [The witness explained the positions of the various persons in the room.] We sat down to business at once, and never moved from our seats until we left that room; there was no going out and in. After we had been sitting together for about twenty minutes to half an hour, Mr. O’Connor went out, being tired of the long story which he had heard so often before, and smoked outside the door, and Mr. Hare and I continued intently on our work till it was finished. I showed him the account I have mentioned. I also told him of Renwick, that I had brought Renwick down myself, the previous night, from the neighborhood of Sheep Station Creek, Crawford’s Paddock, and that Renwick was to meet him in the evening. I told him also of “Diseased Stock,” handing him the papers, and, I believe, three letters—those were all I had. Mr. Hare, in his examination, spoke about six—there were only three, and they were in a foolscap envelope, with the envelopes pinned to each letter. I also told him of those men, and mentioned, no doubt, the particulars about the armour, and about its being bullet-proof.

16862. You cannot swear that you did so?—After the contradiction and doubt I would not like to swear to it, but I have no doubt about it in my own mind. I also told him of the other agents, and what had been done by me in the pursuit, up to date, and particularly described to him the position Aaron Sherritt was in. I will mention the circumstance that brought the thing most clearly to my mind. Before Mr. Hare came up, I determined not to introduce Captain Standish’s name in our interview, lest I should say something in the presence of junior officers that would be unbecoming. I made that resolution to myself, and the only time I broke it was in speaking about Aaron Sherritt, and explaining about his position. I said, “Captain Standish has laid down the idea that he (in Melbourne) knows better than I whom to employ in this part of the world, and has forbidden me to employ Sherritt, and I have consequently been obliged to continue him on my own responsibility and at my own cost”; and I told Mr. Hare that, when I went away, he would have to make the necessary arrangements; and afterwards I remember being annoyed that I had mentioned Captain Standish’s name, because I had resolved not to mention it. I was also going on at the same time to tell him what I had prepared in my own mind before he came about the matter, and I told him if he wished to continue to employ Aaron Sherritt, he would have to do so at his own cost and take his chance of being repaid by the department. Then he got up on the side of the table, I think, and said, in reply to this about Sherritt, interrupting me in an impatient manner, “Yes, yes, yes; when did you last hear of them” (meaning the outlaws), almost implying that he did not care what they were. I did not care what they were doing. I did not care what one says on the subject, we were sitting down before twelve o’clock at this interview, and we never rose till one; and instead of my going out of the office, Mr. Hare left deliberately and walked coolly out of the office himself, and joined Mr. O’Connor outside the door, and there they were talking together, and I knew what they were talking about. I remained a minute or two, and I turned to Mr. Sadleir and said to him, “Is there anything at all that I have overlooked?” He replied, patting me on the shoulder, “No, old fellow, you have not omitted anything.”

I then went out and joined Mr. Hare and Mr. O’Connor (they were talking about a dog they had there), and we all then walked down to the hotel (which is under half-a mile from the office) to lunch. We found we were at least ten minutes late for lunch which was set every day punctually at one o’clock, and the bell rings and is heard all over the town; therefore, my interview with Mr. Hare could not have been over before one o’clock, and must have lasted at least an hour. I again saw Mr. Hare in the afternoon and invited him to dine with me that evening, and he accepted my invitation; but finding that it would suit me better to go to Melbourne that night than next day, I wrote an apology to Mr. Hare and went down by the evening train. I would now remind the Commission, that I am upon my oath, and being so, that I solemnly declare the foregoing account of the interview to be correct in every particular, and I absolutely deny the assertion of Mr. Hare (which he has written in his report of the 2nd July 1880 and subsequently reiterated in his evidence before you), that I gave him no verbal information whatever, and that the interview only lasted ten minutes. I will ask the Commission to say whether Mr. Hare would be likely to allow me to go away without asking for information, if I did not volunteer it. Mr. Hare’s next charge is that the principal agent employed “by me, and who was considered the best man I had,” came from Beechworth to see him, and then refused to work for him, implying that I influenced the man against working for Mr. Hare. I brought that man from near Beechworth to see Mr. Hare, and, in Mr. O’Connor’s presence, persuaded him to work for him, stating that he would “find Mr. Hare an exceedingly nice man to work with.” The man’s reasons for refusing were no doubt these, viz., that the Police Department, during Captain Standish’s term in Benalla, owed him over £20 which they refused to pay. Upon my first seeing this informant, he also refused to work for me unless this sum was paid; and it was only after several interviews I induced him, on the second day, to do so.

16863. Was that Renwick?—Yes, Renwick, and yet Mr. Hare has implied in his letter that it was I who prevented this man from speaking to him. I now wish to hand in an affidavit from this man. [The same was read, and is as follows:—“I, Lawrence Kirwan, of Carboar, near Oxley, farmer, make oath and say:—I. That in April 1879 I was employed by Mr. Hare as a scout and guide to assist the police in the pursuit of the Kellys, at the rate of one pound per day. 2. That I acted as scout or guide for different parties of police for thirteen days, and received in payment therefor the sum of thirteen pounds. 3. That I was then instructed by Mr. Sadleir to go out and seek information of the gang, and acting on those instructions I went from Benalla round Mount Emu and Dondongdale River, where I met Mr. Furnell and party; thence back to Carboar, and then up the Mitta River to Beechworth, where I met Detective Ward, who approved of what I was doing. I went next to the Little River, and then on to the Upper Murray by way of Cotton-tree Hill, but found no traces, and returned to Benalla and reported where I had been, and that I had found no traces of the gang. 4. That when I sent in a claim for payment for the time I was out seeking information, Mr. Sadleir declined to pay me, as he said he did not know I was out; and I was left by this decision without a shilling, and had to borrow ten shillings to take me home. 5. In September or October 1879 I got a written message from Mr. Assistant Commissioner Nicolson to meet him at Wangaratta. I went in on a Monday to Wangaratta and saw Mr. Nicolson, who asked me to go out and seek traces of the gang. I refused to go on the ground that I had a claim against Mr. Hare and Mr. Sadleir for services which they declined to recognise. Mr. Nicolson pressed me to go out, but I several times refused to go. I explained to Mr. Nicolson my claim, and he said he would do his best to get the amount for me. Mr. Nicolson said he had heard of the disputed claim at Benalla, and that he knew he would be handicapped over it. I understood that Mr. Nicolson meant that this disputed claim would prevent my working for him. I afterwards saw Mr. Nicolson; three days after I agreed to go out under him. I went out alone on the following day. I was out four days on the King River. I went out with specific instructions to see if there were camps or traces of camps in certain localities on the river. I found no traces. I found an old saddle which afterwards proved to be one of the saddles belonging to the police murdered on the Wombat. There were floods in the King River which interfered with the search I was directed to make. I returned to Wangaratta and saw Mr. Nicolson and reported to him. 6. That I remained in Mr. Nicolson’s service until the first day of June 1880. That I was paid for all the time I was working for him; I was paid all the time I was out, whether I got information or not. I never had any dispute with Mr. Nicolson. I was paid by Mr. Nicolson the sum of twenty-six pounds fifteen shillings. When not employed by Mr. Nicolson I was idle, so that I received only twenty

7. That when Mr. Nicolson was leaving the district I saw him near Beechworth; he told me he was about to leave and paid me three pounds which was due to me. He told me that Mr. Hare was coming to take charge and that he (Mr. Nicolson) would like me to go on working for him. I told Mr. Nicolson I did not think I would, and added that if he was going to leave I would knock off working. Mr. Nicolson said he had heard of the disputed claim at Benalla, and that he knew he would be handicapped over it. He said, ‘I want you to knock off working for me the same as you have been doing for Mr. Nicolson, as you know the locality and the whole affair.’ I said I wanted my disputed claim paid before I will go any more work. He said, ‘I can’t help that; it has nothing to do with me.’ I said ‘I have asked Mr. Sadleir and he gives me the same reply, and if that was the way of it I was quite full of it, and that I would work no more I went. home by train. 12. That I met Detective Ward afterwards, and he told me that when Mr. Hare complained to him of my refusal to work that he (Ward) said I had a disputed claim with the department for work performed, and that Mr. Hare had said in reply, ‘If Kirwan had told me that I would have made it all right.’ 13. That from the information I was supplying and from the movements of the gang and police I am sure that Mr. Nicolson and his party must have encountered the gang within a few days of the time Mr. Nicolson was removed; an encounter could not have been postponed for ten days, and might have occurred in four or five.—Lawrence Kirwan. Sworn at Wangaratta, in the colony of Victoria, this fifth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me, Fred. J. M. Marsden, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria for taking affidavits.” As to the telegram dated the 2nd day of June 1880, which I sent to Senior-Constable Mullane, and to which so much importance has been attached, my explanation is very simple. I will first read the telegram itself, and then the evidence given by Senior-Constable Mullane with respect to it to this Commission at Beechworth, on the 20th day of July 1881. The telegram is as follows:—“Send Constable Armstrong back to his station, withdraw the watch party, send them back to duty. No more money for ‘Tommy’ and his friends.” [The witness then read Senior-Constable Mullane’s evidence from question No. 13677 to question No. 13694.] It will be seen that the telegram is only a repetition of the orders I sent Mullane by Aaron Sherritt on the day before, and which I delivered personally to Ward on the 28th or 29th day of May previously. On perusal of the telegram it will be seen that it contains no word about discharge, and was sent merely as an excess of caution to see that the necessary orders which I had previously given some days before, were carried out. I must repeat that, before this, on the Monday night previous to Mr. Hare arriving, I sent in Ward to withdraw that search party. That search party had only been placed there, while I brought the trackers up to Beechworth, simply to watch Mrs. Byrne’s, to ascertain if the report of the outlaw Byrne and the dog having been seen behind a rock near Mrs. Byrne’s house was true or not; and then when this duty was performed the necessity for those men being there ceased, and I sent word to them to withdraw.

16864. Then did you withdraw those men before you received notice that Mr. Hare was coming to supersede you?—I had received notice before of that—a month before.

16865. Those men were only placed there while you were scouring that part of the district?—Yes; this was on Monday I sent word—they had only been sent there the Saturday before.

16866. If you had remained in that position in charge of the district, would you have continued those men there?—No, I would never have thought of it. I am very glad you asked the question. I merely sent them temporarily.

16867. Then the notice was not in any way in consequence of the altered state of things—Mr. Hare taking command?—Not at all. I would select the old cave for the police. It was only just in the extremity, I was compelled to send the men there; there were reasons at that time which I need not mention for not using that place permanently. I heard that it had been used for a day or two by my cave party before they were withdrawn; and I heard it for the first time from Constable Barry, and I was very much annoyed to hear they had gone there instead of remaining in the cave till they were withdrawn from it. I had also bade Ward and Mullane good-bye, and told them I was leaving the district, and Mr. Hare was coming up, and I had explained to Ward the position. I told him that I had been keeping “Tommy” on. He was not aware of it at first; he was not aware of any correspondence between the Chief Commissioner and myself; I was keeping him on at my own expense and on my own authority, but he would have to get the authority of my successor to pay him; and therefore that telegram was a simple repetition of the orders I had previously given. It was in my anxiety in rushing away from the place I repeated the orders. As I have already stated, I explained the position of those people to Mr. Hare. Jack Sherritt was not receiving pay at this time, and I may allude to a remark of Mr. Hare’s as to why he was not informed about Jack Sherritt being at that place permanently. I heard it for the first time from Constable Barry, and I was very much annoyed to hear they had gone there instead of remaining in the cave till they were withdrawn from it. I had also bade Ward and Mullane good-bye, and told them I was leaving the district, and Mr. Hare was coming up, and I had explained to Ward the position. I told him that I had been keeping “Tommy” on. He was not aware of it at first; he was not aware of any correspondence between the Chief Commissioner and myself; I was keeping him on at my own expense and on my own authority, but he would have to get the authority of my successor to pay him; and therefore that telegram was a simple repetition of the orders I had previously given. It was in my anxiety in rushing away from the place I repeated the orders. As I have already stated, I explained the position of those people to Mr. Hare. Jack Sherritt was not receiving pay at this time, and I may allude to a remark of Mr. Hare’s as to why he was not informed about Jack Sherritt being so good a man. The reason was simply that he was not in my employment at that time. I did not see him, and had very little to do with him afterwards.

16868. Had he been previously in your employment?—Yes.

16869. When had you dispensed with him?—I could not exactly say. I left word at the Detective Office for Ward to look up the vouchers and ascertain the time.

16870. Can you tell how long?—I have a recollection of having little or nothing to do with him after the new year.

16871. Would the list of appearances be any guide?—Yes, they would—[looking at the printed list]—but I would rather wait for the return I have asked for before answering that question. Mr. Hare never complained to Mr. Sadleir or Mr. O’Connor on any of the above subjects. If any of these charges could have been proved, there is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Hare would have reported at once with regard to them. Mr. Hare has since stated that to report the foregoing charges would have raised ill-blood, and have increased his difficulties in catching the Kellys. How should that be, seeing that I had left the district? What ill-feeling would it cause? If he feared this ill-will, was it not at least his duty to report the charges, with perhaps a request that they should be kept from my knowledge until the capture of the outlaws? When it is considered that Mr. Hare went up to Benalla with a distinct promise of promotion—

16872. Is that really the case, that he undertook this command with the distinct promise of promotion?—I refer to Mr. Ramsay’s evidence before the Board. Such being the case, is it not absurd to think that he would not have at once reported, and so placed on record serious charges of this nature. Mr. Hare on going up made his own terms. He went up with every advantage, untramelled by any restrictions in any way, while in my case I was sent up under very different circumstances. Captain Standish has given it in evidence that he had no confidence in me; yet, in the face of that, he sends me up to find the extra men withdrawn, and the supply of money for secret agents reduced. I had no carte blanche given me.

16873. Had you to give notice of everything you intended to do?—I would not say that.
16874. I can scarcely understand that. Were you not free, from the position you held, to undertake any course of procedure you thought proper which was calculated to effect the capture of those men, without reference to your superior officer?—Certainly I was.
16875. Do not you see the contradiction which is manifest in such a statement as that being made, when you say you were sent without carte blanche?—Nothing very radical could be done without consulting.

C. H. Nicolson, continued.
7th Sept. 1881.

16876. It strikes me there is a charge there you cannot sustain, as you were at liberty to use any means you liked?—There was no such expression used to me that I had to act on carte blanche. Any expenses I incurred, I did so on my own authority, and recovered them afterwards.
16877. You say you had the force reduced, and the money for agents reduced?—Yes.
16878. And that you engaged the agents on your own responsibility?—Yes.
16879. And paid them out of your own pocket till you could recover the money from the Government?—Yes.
16880. The point is this if an officer was sent up there, who, in the discharge of his duties, was subject to a restraining influence as to money or men, then I think you would be perfectly correct in making that statement; but it appears you were manifestly free in regard to both to attain the end in view; if so, your statement is not borne out, and it is important that in that you should be very particular?—At one period, for instance, there was a sum mentioned—that the expenses were to be limited to £40 a month. That was the amount; but supposing any voucher was sent in within that, it might be disallowed; it never happened.
16881. Were you in the position that it could happen?—Yes.
16882. It is no use complaining of a thing that could happen?—There was the case of Sherritt.
16883. Had you written instructions to the effect that you were not to exceed £40?—I think they were verbal, but I am sure I had the instructions.
16884. When you did exceed the amount you had to do it altogether on your own responsibility?—Yes.
16885. Was that state of things in existence before you went there the second time?—No, not at all. When Mr. Hare and Captain Standish were there, Captain Standish, as head of the department, always had what he and Mr. Hare thought proper; and I understand the expenditure was very lavish. In the latter portion of Mr. Hare’s letter he refers to the black trackers, and expresses his opinion that they should be removed. The fact is, when he went up, other trackers had been sent for, and there was no wish on Mr. Hare’s part to lose Mr. O’Connor’s men until the others arrived. It has, moreover, been proved that, so far from the outlaws believing that the trackers had left the district, as asserted by Mr. Hare, it was the presence of these men that prevented outrages, and it was to destroy them, particularly, that the rails were torn up.
16886. You ought to have some proof of that?—There is Mr. Hare’s own evidence, in which he states he was told by Bracken and others that the outlaws, when in Mrs. Jones’ house, were saying they were to get that Inspector O’Connor and the black trackers; and I believe Bracken proved that; but I understand that he, having been transferred afterwards to Mr. Hare’s district, would have been produced here to have given evidence on the subject. The letter of Mr. Hare containing these damnatory charges against me was sent to the Chief Commissioner, and without any explanation being asked of me in the usual way (it is always usual to refer such a letter as that to any one), and was sent on to the Chief Secretary, and published in every paper in Victoria, and the charges have been hanging over my head ever since. Mr. Graves’ accusations that I was the cause of the Kelly outbreak, &c., sinks into mere insignificance compared with the above charges. There is no newspaper in the colony that has not been ringing with disapproval of my conduct as reported by Mr. Hare in his letter of July 2nd, 1880, although I was never allowed an opportunity of explanation.
16887. You say you were never allowed an opportunity of explaining the charges?—Yes.
16888. You would see the daily journals in which those appeared?—Yes.
16889. Did you ever make complaint then to the head of your department?—I at once wrote to him asking him to repeat my request to the Honorable the Chief Secretary for a board on account of these charges. It is not only my position as an officer of police that has been assailed, but my character as a man of honor. If it is possible that, for mere petty spite, I tampered with agents and withheld information that might not only have been Mr. Hare’s destruction, but that of Mr. Sadleir, my brother-in-law Mr. O’Connor, and every policeman in the district, I am unfit for the service and even worse than the Kellys. The non-success and other accusations are as nothing to the above base charges which have rested upon me now more than a year. I can appeal to my brother officers, and to all whom I have been in contact with for nearly thirty years, as to whether I am capable of such conduct—dare Mr. Hare do the same? I think he would get a very different reply, thought he is said to be such a popular man, and I so very unpopular. On my second stay at Benalla, I, unlike Mr. Hare during his stay with Capt. Standish, had the whole responsibility of the work; and upon returning from any expedition was unable to take necessary recreation as other officers did, in coursing, &c. I was obliged to be in the office, going through everything that had been done in my absence. When we camped out at night we had to lie on the ground with oilskins around us. Upon my going back the second time, however, I had a comfortable hammock, made after the pattern of one Mr. Hare had in use part of the time of these great hardships he mentions. The last eleven months of my stay in Benalla was, as I wrote to a friend, simply a “hell,” which I could not have endured but for a strong sense of duty, and confident hopes of ultimate success. I had to keep so quiet and appear as if so little was doing that I imagined that every person in the place was supposing we were doing nothing, and I was amazed, after my recall, at the kind spirit shown by all the people I had come in contact with in the North-Eastern District, and this satisfaction they expressed at my conduct there, and my management of the police there. I do not deny that Mr. Hare suffered greatly, as did Mr. Sadleir, every officer and constable connected with the affair, it having aged them all considerably. I now come to the charge with regard to the Euroa robbery. Captain Standish has stated that I received information that a bank in the North-Eastern District was to be stuck up. This is not the case, and there are no grounds for the assertion excepting the information of prisoner Williamson, dated 15th November 1878, about a likelihood of Seymour bank being attacked. I would like to refer to the papers, because I think the Commission will see that no action was taken upon that information (which was sent direct to Captain Standish by Mr. Winch, and not forwarded to me for some time) until after I telegraphed from Benalla to increase the strength at Seymour. If those telegrams are looked at, the dates will show there was a considerable delay.

16890: Williamson’s report is dated the 15th; you received it on the 28th. It was posted to you that day, and you telegraphed a reply on the 29th?—Yes, that I what I mean; it was not sent to me till the 28th. It was this information, no doubt, that confused Captain Standish, and led to making the charge against me. Mr. Hare states that Captain Standish told him that I had received information as to an intended sticking up, and that Seymour bank was specially mentioned. This coupling of the two things gives color to my explanation of Captain Standish’s mistake. I considered, if I thought it connected with the Kellys at all, Mr. Wyatt’s news of the cutting of the telegraph wires, as a ruse to draw us off more important information that we had received, and only a blind to take us off the scene of action.

16891. This paper of the 26th of November shows that information was in Mr. Hare’s possession, and he had acted upon it on the 26th?—That information was sent to Mr. Hare at the depot before it was sent to me. I have now no doubt that it would have been wiser for one of us—either Mr. Sadleir or myself—to have remained at Benalla, although the men at Euroa could do nothing until daylight.

16892. What do you mean by saying, just previous to that, that you looked upon the cutting of the wires as a ruse?—That it was done by some of the sympathizers, with the view of distracting attention. After that was done in the dark, no pursuit could be instituted until daylight next morning. It has been stated that I ordered the men at Euroa to do nothing until my arrival there. I am not aware that there is any truth in that charge. It has also been affirmed that I allowed the men to go to sleep after only a few hours’ work. The fact is, most of these men had only just come in from an expedition, and were worn out with fatigue. We were following the track, and thought it would lead to the fastness where they were concealed, and it led us back to this very spot, the old hut near where they committed the murders. The weather was excessively hot, the work was hopeless, the ground was so excessively dry. That was the year when there was a great drought and a great deal of rust through excessive heat in that country. This was the height of summer, and we were quite unable to make any headway at all. We simply, without the assistance of good trackers, could not do anything, and the same would occur again to-morrow under similar circumstances, unless we had skilled Queensland trackers, not such men as we had, or else that the police had exact information where to go to. I received the information that the Euroa bank had been robbed on the 10th December 1878, as already stated. I left Benalla for Albury in company with Mr. Sadleir. When we arrived at Albury we received notice by telegram of the robbery of the Euroa bank, and immediately returned by express train from Wodonga. I was delayed a short time at Wangaratta, as I had to go to the hospital to try and get a black tracker there; but he was too ill to be of service, and I left him at the hospital. On arrival at Benalla I had to go on foot to the police station, a distance of about a mile, to see Sergeant Whelan who was in charge, and the clerk, Constable Maude. The only telegram I believe I sent on that occasion from Benalla to Mansfield was for two trackers to be sent by the Broken River, and Benalla to Euroa, to watch on that road.

16893. Did you sign any telegram?—I do not think I did, except the first one which I have no hesitation in admitting is mine.

16894. The first was before you went out?—The first I sent before I went. [A number of telegrams referring to the matter in question were read over by the Commission, and a plan was exhibited and explained, to show the successive steps taken.] Further telegraphic correspondence between those places was conducted, I believe, after I left by the clerk, Senior-Constable Maude, and Sub Inspector Pewtress. The senior-constable in my absence acted to the best of his ability, and I attach no blame to him at all, and I assume the responsibility of what he did. I do not see anything to blame in him in the least; but what I wish to point out to the Commission is this, that the officer in charge at Mansfield, when ascertaining that I had gone by those telegrams, and that the clerk only was repeating my original instructions, should have acted on his own better and later information, there being no instructions from me to the contrary. I do not by this statement mean to throw any reflection whatever upon Sub-Inspector Pewtress; but it was an instance of mismanagement to station members of the force who had spent the best parts of their lives in Melbourne, in outlying bush stations, without due consideration for their suitability. As the Commission is aware, Mr. Pewtress was sent to Mansfield a short time previously upon well-earned promotion, after a service of 20 years’ foot duty in Melbourne. Now there had been instead of Mr. Pewtress an experienced old officer or sub-officer of mounted police, and he found I had gone by the telegrams, and that he was merely corresponding with a boy, he would have known what to have done, and, instead of making a grievance of it, he would, if he thought it necessary, put his best foot forward, and have acted on any better information or better judgment if he thought fit. I believed that the gang neither came from nor returned to the Strathbogie Ranges, and such belief has since turned out to be correct; two of them were back in the neighborhood of Greta before morning of the 11th, and I have heard, on good authority, that the other two were within a few miles of Yarrawonga, in Devereux’s paddock, on the night of the 11th. I also have learned that the police pursuit of them without skilled trackers was vain. We had one tracker who was notorious for his uselessness—a man who had been dismissed by Senior-Constable James, he was perfectly useless; that was the only man available for me that morning. On my return to that district, in June 1879, I did not discourage the popular fiction that the Strathbogie Ranges were favorite haunts of the outlaws, as I desired to draw public attention from their real haunts, and also to flatter the gang that the police were as ignorant as the public. It was the policy of Mr. Sadleir and myself to keep up this idea of the Strathbogie Ranges, so as to draw them away, but we knew perfectly well they could not make that their haunt—it is not country fit for it. They never came out of Strathbogie to attack Faithfull’s Creek, nor did they return there, but they skirted them in each case. The gang got away from Faithfull’s station about 8.30 p.m. on the night of the 10th, and the police could not track them until daylight next morning. I was on the ground about eight o’clock next morning. There was no time lost, especially as before I arrived the police had endeavored to follow the tracks of the outlaws but without success, as, owing to the extreme dryness of the ground, tracking was an impossibility except to such skilled trackers as the Queensland blacks, who were then not in the colony. Before I arrived at Euroa I had sent from Wangaratta a party of police, under either Sergeant Steele or Senior-Constable Strachan, to intercept the outlaws in the Greta country. I had also sent Mr. Sadleir with a party from Wangaratta towards Lake Rowan and the adjoining country. Mr. Sadleir, as the Commission is aware, has stated, what I believe to be the fact, that he got on to the tracks of two of the outlaws, but, owing to the incapacity of the trackers he, also had with him, he lost the tracks and had to give up the pursuit. As to the charge made that I neglected the information given by Jack Sherritt, on the 13th day of November 1879, I will inform the Commission of the facts as they occurred. About nine o’clock in the evening I was informed that Jack Sherritt was in the office, and wished to see me—I can not tell who came for me, whether it was Ward or Mullane, or who it was; but I remember finding myself in the office, and Jack Sherritt sitting on a small safe in the room. I went at once, and Jack told me that forbidden it. I therefore think that the Commission will have little difficulty in coming to the conclusion that Jack Sherritt’s declaration and evidence are concocted to injure me, in revenge for my having recommended his discharge from the police force.

16895. Is it possible that Sherritt could have been confusing the two occurrences of the 13th November and the 23rd, as noted on the printed list of appearances?—From the copy I gave you from my memorandum-book we believed at the time that that other visit was to tell Sherritt not to meet Joe Byrne, as appointed, at Evans’s Gap. It had nothing to do with the banks. By the printed paper you will see that, on the 27th, Joe Byrne himself visits the Sherritts’ hut, and tells them that, and tells Sherritt not to meet him, and explains the cause of Dan Kelly’s previous visit on the 13th. He said that he sent Dan for that purpose—to tell him not to meet them at Evans’s Gap. I saw that Jack Sherritt was very timid, and that it would not do for him to come in contact with those men. He was utterly wanting in sufficient nerve for that. He was very much afraid of their coming and carrying him off as a scout, and I always took every care of the people I employed, so I arranged, for his protection against that, that he should sleep in their garden. As I have already stated, he said in his evidence the outrages proposed to attack Beechworth, and that I prevented that. Some of my instructions here to him explain the meaning of that. They wanted Jack to join them; but it was quite out of the question to think of Jack pretending to agree to join them in such an exploit. I therefore told him to convey through his agent, Patsy Byrne, or himself, that he was afraid to attack Beechworth. I particularly enjoined him to say it was not for fear of the police, but just to express a general fear that it was too big a place to go into. From the information that I got through this man I ascertained the designs of the outrages upon many other places, and I was able to take various precautions against them. I had no idea of encouraging them to attack a bank. I knew their intention was to go into the bank, and enter the manager’s room, and cover him with a pistol, even if he was a married man with his family, and to shoot him if he would not give up the keys; and if he had one key, and the accountant or clerk living in another house had another, two of them were to remain with him, and the other two to go to where this accountant or clerk lived, and shoot him if he did not give up the key. They were not to stick at bloodshed in the least; and then they were to come and rob the bank, and carry off the spoil. That was the agreement. They were all most bloodthirsty characters. I had no objection to their taking Aaron on a ride into New South Wales, I arranging that he would send back a telegram, stating where he was going to, but I never encouraged them to attack a bank. I knew what the circumstances would be—that there would be bloodshed; and I knew it was quite contrary to our principles, and to law, and would lay an officer who agreed to such a proposal open to a charge of wilful murder.

16896. What was the object of your getting Sherritt’s portrait taken?—Jnst to satisfy his mind. I could hardly convey to you what a coward this Sherritt is. He was in such a state of trepidation that lest he should be carried off we got the portraits taken, and told him if they ever got him and he was missed we would circulate those pictures round the country, telling the police about him, and warning them not to injure him; it was just to satisfy him. While on this subject, I may as well here state my reasons for refusing to have this man in the force. While Captain Standish was in Beechworth, at Kelly’s trial, the two Sherritts were brought to the office to be sworn in. This was the first I had heard of their even trying to get into the force. I refused to have them sworn, and sent them back to the depot. I wrote a memo. to Captain Standish on the subject, and he then told me he would think over the matter. I heard nothing more from him, and soon afterwards learned the men were constables, notwithstanding my protest and that of Detective Ward. I may mention that you have the file of papers before you, in which you will find the reasons I gave at the time for acting as I did. On the 9th of August 1880, I say, “As I have declined to sign or to pass on this file, I beg to make the following explanation with reference to the attached memo. of the Chief Commissioner of Police, Z.1269, 4.8.80, attached. The Chief Commissioner is well aware that I have had peculiar opportunities of learning the character of the Sherritt family for ten months preceding the beginning of June last, and I have the strongest doubts of the suitability for the police force of the two sons referred to. The elder, John, was suspected of thwarting, if not betraying to the friends of the outrages, the efforts of his since murdered brother Aaron to aid the police. I am not aware of any claim the Sherritt family can have upon the Government for the loss of their son Aaron, because long previous to his death he had left his father’s house, taken to himself a wife with whom he lived apart from his parents, and was earning his own living, and I fail to see that the admission of these two young men into the police force will settle any difficulty in a claim which apparently also is groundless. I again take this opportunity of remonstrating with the Chief Commissioner against ignoring me, and especially the knowledge I possess in the matters concerning the Kelly gang, and the claims now being made upon the Government in connection therewith.”

When this file was sought for to hand to the Commission, this document could not be found, and it turned up amongst Captain Standish’s private papers; it had been suppressed, if I may use such an expression. I did not interfere with these men as long as Captain Standish was connected with the service, but directly after he left I made my recommendation to the Chief Secretary. On the 4th October 1880, I said, “With reference to the attached file, I beg to refer to the document Z.1269, Chief Commissioner of Police, 4 August 1880, addressed to the Honorable the Chief Secretary, and requesting his sanction to appointing two brothers named Sherritt to the police force. The document referred has the required authority endorsed upon it. The two brothers were admitted to the police force accordingly, and are now at the depot, Richmond. Previous to that last step, the matter came accidentally under my notice, and I wrote warning the Chief Commissioner against such a course, as I knew the Sherritts’ character and their unfitness for admission to a police force. I also beg to refer to Detective Ward’s attached report, in which he guardedly states that they are hardly persons he could recommend for the police. The Superintendent of the North-Eastern district has also informed me that he also objected to their admission. With reference to the character of those two young men, I am not aware that they have ever been convicted of felony, but they are notorious as the associates of criminals, particularly of the late outlaw Byrne and the Kelly sympathizers. In fact, that was the reason they were useful to the police as spies. In fairness I must make a distinction between the younger brother, William, and the elder, John. The latter is the most objectionable man. If they are sent to any part of the colony where they are known, their fellow constables would not rely upon them. The public might even resist their authority, and magistrates could not rely upon their testimony. I beg to recommend that they be discharged and furnished with a small sum of money, sufficient to transport them to some distant place, as suggested by the detective.” Upon that the Chief Secretary approved of that course, and they were discharged. I knew that Sherritt was not honest, that he had stolen a saddle from his sister-in-law, and, as I have since learned, planted it in Byrne’s farm; and young Byrne and his mother were arrested for the theft, and in my interviews with him it was apparent that he was quite unsuitable. Is this the kind of man to whom to entrust the protection of life and property, and whose word might any day take one’s life away? As to his younger brother, I certainly know nothing tangible against him, except that he comes of the same family, and I considered neither of them fit for the service. On my becoming Acting Chief Commissioner of Police, I represented this to the Chief Secretary, and I should do precisely the same again. In a force in which men have so much power as in ours, particular care should be exercised as to the character of men taken on. If, as Sherritt and Captain Standish wish to represent that, I was afraid of the former, I would surely have placated him, whereas now I have made him and all his family my enemies for life. Mr. Hare has since stated that two constables saw the Sherritts killing a sheep, and that he made no enquiry as to whose it was. As to his discharge, Mr. Hare should have communicated it to him. Was I to retain him until his criminal instincts were proved. I may add to what I have said that I remonstrated also verbally with Captain Standish. I said to him—“You can see now I am telling you this sincerely, that I can have no motive whatever in it; on the contrary, I am turning these men against me. There will be an enquiry into this Kelly business, and these men, whom I have always treated kindly, and who have had a good feeling towards me, will turn round on me. I am making enemies to myself for the sake of the service.” Captain Standish seemed rather moved at the time, but I never heard anything more after that. I was never unfeeling or hard, or anything but kind to those men, and I did all I could to render their removal from the force as gentle as possible. It was a matter of the utmost pain and regret to me that I had to perform this duty. As to writing to Mr. Fosbery, I had known him for many years, and he was in Melbourne at the time, and when in my office I told him the story of those men. One of them had just left the room when Mr. Fosbery came in, and I asked him if he could find them employment in New South Wales, and he said no, that the objection was just as strong there as here. As to Mr. Seymour (the Chief Commissioner of Police of Queensland), I wrote to him and explained the whole matter only about the younger Sherritt, to whom I gave a letter of introduction to Mr. Seymour. He replied to this that he could not, under the circumstances, employ him. The charge made against me by Senior-Constable Johnston (questions 9608 et seq.) took me completely by surprise. As the Commission is aware, I left Wodonga from the Murray Flats on Tuesday the 5th of November 1878, and stopped at Wangaratta that night, and met Messrs. Sadleir and Smith there. Next morning, early, I proceeded to Oxley, and returned to Benalla via Wangaratta, and at midnight proceeded to Beechworth, in company with Captain Standish, to go to Sebastopol. On the 7th I was engaged at Sebastopol from daylight in the morning, and returned to Benalla that night. On the 8th I was detained at Benalla by correspondence. On the 9th I went to Wangaratta, and during the evening I heard from a most reliable source that the outlaws had abandoned the police horses on their way back from the Murray. The same evening I heard that the police had recovered one of the horses (B 87). I sent orders to keep the recovery of the horse quiet. Instead of that, I was very much annoyed at a later hour in the evening to see a party of police with a led horse come down the main street with much noise. On examining the horse I could see he had been abandoned for several days, perhaps a week. Next morning I went to Foote’s, on special duty, with Sergeant Steele and Senior-Constable Strachan, and did not return until 12 p.m. On the 11th I was engaged corresponding and considering reports of returned search parties, and as I then could plainly see that the men whose word might any day take one’s life away? As to his discharge, Mr. Hare should have communicated it to him. Was I to retain him until his criminal instincts were proved. I may add to what I have said that I remonstrated also verbally with Captain Standish. Instead of that, I was very much annoyed at a later hour in the evening to see a party of police with a led horse come down the main street with much noise. On examining the horse I could see he had been abandoned for several days, perhaps a week. Next morning I went to Foote’s, on special duty, with Sergeant Steele and Senior-Constable Strachan, and did not return until 12 p.m. On the 11th I was engaged corresponding and considering reports of returned search parties, and as I then could plainly see that the men who had been out with Mr. Smith were very much dissatisfied, and that he was quite unfit for that work, as he had abandoned the pursuit while on what he believed to be a genuine track. 16897. What do you mean by that he was unfit?—I had heard that he had kept the men waiting that morning, and on that very morning I was up myself, and had to go and rouse him up out of bed, and I found the men waiting for him.

16898. Have you never had official complaints made of this man?—No, Mr. Smith was one of those men whom one often meets with—at one time, natty in his person and temperate in his habits, and one of the last men one would suspect that way, but in later life becoming careless in his habits. It was a thing...
I would never have suspected at that time. I then determined to let the men go out the following day with trackers and every advantage, and see what they could do themselves. The reason I did so was I expected we would have found the horses or got some new traces, but my impression was that the outlaws were 100 miles away at the time, and my great object was to soothe the men, and clear up what they were engaged on. I telegraphed to Mr. Sadleir to meet me at Glenrowan early the following morning. On the 12th, I took Mr. Smith, Sergeant Steele and his party, and Senior-Constable Johnston and his party, and two black trackers. We picked up Mr. Sadleir at Glenrowan, and went to work, leaving the matter in the hands of Johnston and his party. The track was made out, and followed for some distance until it led us to a dry swamp with low tussocks of grass and a few swamp trees with clear stems for 5 feet of their height. There was no scrub or other cover whatever. And it is perfectly untrue, as asserted by Johnston, that there was scrub in front of us. The trackers (one was a man called Doctor—a very good man—and the other Jimmy—who was a perfectly useless man—I had had at Benalla) could make nothing further of the tracks as they were very old. Up to this time I had made no move, and had given no orders whatsoever, as I wished to see what Johnston and his party could do, and did not interfere until he gave up the job. When they could do nothing further, I turned back along with them. Sergeant Steele suggested that the only thing which remained to be done was for him to take his party, as he knew the country well, and scour the Warby Ranges to the end, including HELL’s Hole and other localities mentioned by Johnston in his evidence. I assented, and intended to go with Steele, but he did not understand my intention, and got his men together and went without me. We camped by a spring, and had some lunch which we had brought out, and waited for Steele and his party, but finding that they did not arrive for some time we returned to Wangaratta without them. Next morning, I ordered Mr. Smith to return to Beechworth, and not to interfere with the Kelly business again while I was in charge of the district. And as Johnston and his party were not required at Wangaratta, I sent them down to Benalla. There is an affidavit I wish to put in now:—”In the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria.—I, William Keigwin Nicolas, Superintendent of Police in the colony of Victoria, make oath and say, referring to the attached correspondence marked A and B, re pursuit of Power the bushranger, I beg to state that I saw Mr. Nicolson, then superintendent of police, also Superintendent Hare, at my quarters on their arrival at Benalla. I was not asked by them to render any assistance in the arrest of the above-named offender. In a conversation with Superintendent Hare (in the absence of Mr. Nicolson), he informed me ‘that he had been sent by the Chief Commissioner, in consequence of the bad state of health of Superintendent Nicolson.’ I felt very much hurt after having recently arrested Edward Kelly, then Power’s mate, at not being included by the Chief Commissioner in the party of officers sent specially to the Benalla district to arrest Power. I considered selecting Superintendent Hare, who is my junior in the police force, although senior on the list of officers, most unfair to me as an officer in the Victorian police force.—W. KEIGWIN NICOLAS. Sworn before me at Stawell, in the colony of Victoria, this fifth day of September A.D. 1881—S. Tournay, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria for taking affidavits.” I have served with distinction in every branch of the force, and I will now proceed to show that I was not only competent to cope with the pursuit of the Kellys, but that from the very beginning, and even before the outbreak, I took (whenever I was allowed) the proper steps to break up the gang, and after the outrages to capture the outlaws. Some time after I was appointed Inspecting Superintendent, I inspected the North-Eastern district, and reported that the police protection was insufficient and inefficient. You are already aware from the evidence I have given of the arrangements which were made at my instigation to break up the gang of cattle and horse stealers, which resulted in the arrest and conviction of the Baumgarten gang, to whom the Kellys had brought the stolen horses. I requested Captain Standish to allow me to return to the district, as I was by no means satisfied with the state of affairs, but he pooh-poohed the idea. This I did not mention before. On my return to Melbourne, after finishing my reports, I went into the Chief Commissioner’s room to confer with him as to the state of the district I had just visited. I repeated a good deal of what I had seen, and told him I was by no means satisfied with it—that the tone that the men in the lower part of the district had spoken to me about horses being stolen, and the offenders escaping detection, was rather jarring to me and very alarming.

16900. They spoke, you mean, lightly about it?—Yes. I am not reflecting on the men, but it seemed to be the custom there.

16901. Of the residents there?—Yes, and that it would be as well for me to be sent up again. Captain Standish did not send me back; he took no notice and made no remarks on the subject. You are also aware that I organized and formed the Glenmore station (I went up and selected the spot myself), which, if it had been kept up, would have checked if not prevented the Kelly outbreak. After the murder of Sergeant Kennedy and his party I was sent up to take charge of the pursuit of the Kellys, and I organized and sent out search parties to scour the country. In justice to Captain Standish, I must say that what I did then was done entirely on my own responsibility, as he gave me full charge of the pursuit and told me he would hold me accountable. At the time of the Euroa robbery I had worked so hard, being in want of leaders—in fact, there was hardly a man there that could take us through the country, so that I had myself to go out and take a very active part in riding about with the men and camping out with them, instead of remaining at the principal points to wait for information and act upon it. Of course I had Mr. Sadleir at head-quarters, he not being able to go out through being a convalescent at that time. I had been exposed so much during the previous six weeks that I became quite worn out with fatigue, and my eyes became so bad that I could hardly see, indeed for a time I was perfectly blind in one eye. When I came to town I went straight to Dr. Gillbee, my medical man, and he took me at once over to consult Dr. Gray, who after that attended me. I paid my own medical expenses. In fact, I was so eager in the matter that I never thought of sending my bill to the Government. The or nothing of him during the day, and it was only in the evening after dinner that I could get any conversation with him. I then found he had no news of the Kellys to give me beyond accounts of various search parties, they having gone out on slight or no information, which were in all cases fruitless. I found Mr. Hare had no information to give me, and I came to the conclusion that he did not then know if the outlaws were in Victoria or not, as Mr. Sadleir can tell you. Finding that the system of galloping after the outlaws was thoroughly exhausted, had entirely failed, and that the police were daily falling in public estimation, and were becoming disheartened, as the whole colony were sneering at their efforts, and that they were unable to obtain information themselves, I determined to endeavor to regain the confidence of the inhabitants, and to employ secret agents to get information upon which the police could act. The people were afraid to trust the police with information lest it should be acted on in such a way that the outlaws could discover from whom it came, which is a common thing in police experience. My first efforts were directed to find if the outlaws were in the colony at all, and then to find their haunts and associates. The force of police at my disposal was greatly reduced and the artillery corps removed entirely, so that I determined not to remove the police until I had definite information, so as to make the most of the men I had and lull the gang into a false sense of security. The printed list of appearances shows how I gradually got to know of the movements of the gang, also the difficulties I had to surmount (owing to the extreme suspicion, bush knowledge, and wariness of these men) to bring about an encounter with the police; and I saw I had a task before me which would probably take as much time as had already been spent in the pursuit of the gang. I enjoined the police to avoid any appearance of Kelly hunting, to go about their ordinary police duties—serving summonses, warrants, &c.—but I kept my subordinate officers well posted in all information which was requisite for them to know. I sent out picked men as watch parties where it could be done without the knowledge of the gang. By this system I got the gang so terrified that they did not know what I was doing or how much I knew, that they dare not break out, and were reduced to the greatest straits, so much so that latterly they were obliged to go and rob workmen’s tents on the roads and in the bush for the necessities of life; and I was convinced, from the frequent and reliable information I was obtaining towards the end, that I would have the opportunity to encounter the gang within a few days at the longest. Very much against my inclination, and when I was certain that success was within my grasp, I was relieved by Mr. Hare on the 2nd June 1880. 1st. As to the relations which had existed between Captain Standish and myself for some time, I say that those relations were the effect of his jealousy of everything I did. The Commission had an opportunity of seeing the malice which Captain Standish bore me when he was examined; but I say, without fear of contradiction, that on no occasion did I allow my private feelings in this matter to interfere with my duty as an officer of police, and that I served Captain Standish as loyally as if he and I had never had a difference of opinion. In 1863 Captain Standish told Mr. Hare not to leave the colony, as if anything happened he should have his place. This no doubt, was the motive of his conduct, not only to me but to almost every other inspecting superintendent before me. 2nd. Captain Standish was on bad terms with the first inspecting superintendent in the force, Mr. Peter Henry Smith; and Mr. Littleton, independent of other reasons for leaving the force, had a most violent quarrel with Captain Standish before he left. It is true that when I succeeded Captain Standish and Mr. Hare in the North-Eastern district I had to feign a want of energy, as part of my system was to lull the gang into the belief that nothing was being done or known about the gang; but my evidence shows that even at that time I was almost continually on the move, but that I had to spend a good deal of my time in Benalla, as it was there the information used to be brought to me. The men felt the inaction of this period I have no doubt, as they had just been returned to ordinary duty from search parties in the bush, well equipped and provided, and having generally a very good time of it, in addition to free rations and extra pay. Theirs was a life of enjoyment while they were on the search part and, of course, under the system that I considered necessary for the service of time country they would feel the difference, living in the barracks on ordinary pay. I think that, from the account of my career in the force which I have been obliged to give to-day, that want of energy is not a trait in my character, although my detractors have thought fit to try and turn the caution and discretion I endeavoured to use into a charge of inertness. As to the charge that my management was expensive, the return I have handed in, which is printed on page 31 of the evidence, shows the expenditure incurred by Captain Standish and Mr. Hare, as well as when I had charge, and as the figures speak for themselves, I will not trouble the Commission on that head further. It was apparent to me that the duty would probably occupy some time, which was another motive I had for reducing expenses. I got them as low as could be. My reason being not only general economy, but also that I knew that the case was one that would require considerable time to conclude.
There are some incidents which have been referred to in the course of this enquiry which I think it my duty to explain. Unfortunately Mr. Hare and I have been, as it were, pitted against each other in this Kelly business, and a certain amount of bitterness has been caused thereby. Whether we are to blame for this or not remains with the Commission to say; but in my own defence I would point out that owing, no doubt, to some extent to Mr. Hare’s plausible manner and glib tongue, he succeeded in ingratiating himself so thoroughly with Captain Standish, and through Captain Standish with Mr. Ramsay, that he was afforded means of taking the Kellys which I never had. What use he made of those opportunities the Commission is aware of. He tells you himself, when he was sent up to relieve me in June 1880, Mr. Ramsay gave him carte blanche to do as he pleased, while it will be remembered that when I took charge, in July 1879, large bodies of police and the whole of the artillery force was withdrawn from the district, and I was stinted in funds and hampered with orders from head-quarters in Melbourne, all of which caused me vexation and hindered my operations. Now I ask the Commission what Mr. Hare has done to deserve special advantages over other police officers. If it is admitted that it was necessary to allow him more men and more money to give him a chance of taking the Kellys, I am content. But when he (with the assistance of Captain Standish) spent eight months in pursuit of the Kellys with the largest body of police that ever was in the districts and with the artillery force at his command to watch the townships, so that he had the full benefit of the services of all his police, and when he spent more money per month than was spent in the pursuit at any other time; and with all these advantages, when I relieved him, in July 1879, he did not know if the Kellys were in Victoria. I do not see what he has done to justify Mr. Ramsay in saying that the Government of that day had unbounded confidence in him, and that if he would take charge he should have carte blanche. In addition to this, I would point out some admissions made by him as to his career in the police force and the conduct of his pursuit of the Kellys. Although by no means inclined to hide his light under a bushel, the only memorable incidents in his career (putting aside his share in the capture of Power) to POLICE 4 L.

which he can point with pride are the arrest of a burglar who was armed and the intention to throw a man into the Murray who never turned up to be thrown in. Are either of these circumstances such as should inspire “unbounded confidence”? Under these circumstances, is it not to be wondered at that, having been “in” the capture of Power, Mr. Hare should claim all the credit of that capture? I would also point out to the Commission that Mr. Hare sometimes allows his tongue to run away with him, and attempts to garnish his career by loose statements and indiscreet admissions. As an instance of what I allude to, I would point out to the Commission the statement made by Mr. Hare that when he relieved me in June 1880, no more was known of the Kellys or their movements than was known when I relieved him in July 1879. After the patient hearing which the Commission has given to the evidence, such a statement as this requires no further comment from me. One of my agents came in and told him that the outlaws had gone out, and blood was to be shed. No notice was taken of it, and no warning was sent out, so that the table might be turned on the outlaws; and yet he says we knew nothing more about them when we left than ten months previous. Again, Mr. Hare in his report plainly suggests that the removal of the black trackers was a ruse to get the outlaws to break cover, and that it had the desired effect. But when cross-examined on this point he is obliged to admit that the removal of the trackers was no ruse, and that the taking of Ned Kelly and the destruction of the gang was mainly due to accident. Mr. Hare told you that as a peace officer he thought he was justified in inducing the gang to make a raid on a bank, and perhaps commit murder, in order that he might obtain information of their whereabouts. Is this one of the reasons for the unbounded confidence which was placed in him? I have made no attack upon Mr. Hare, but simply refuted his accusations against me. In his last statement he claims having done all the hard work, and got nothing for it. This is absurd, as he has been enjoying the best position in the force for the last fourteen years. As to the hard work, compare it with that of any other officer of the force. The dépôt had always been held by a military man, one specially qualified to take charge of the nursery of the force. 16902. What are the advantages of the dépôt?—There are not many now. 16903. What were they?—The dépôt was a very nice establishment, free house, and gas, and wood and water, and everything that was wanted. There were men stationed there, and horses and stabling, and a pair of blood horses for the officer to drive about the country with, and the services of a man. I do not say Mr. Hare used the men, but they could always be used by the officer in charge. It was the resort of the Chief Commissioner, who was always in communication with him, which, if he was a plausible man, gave him an opportunity of gaining favor; and he had the advantage also of living at the capital. Officers up country live as other people do up the country; but they have to travel through dreary rides year after year, in all sorts of weather—a very different life, indeed. There is not an officer who would not give up £100 a year of his pay to take charge of the dépôt; it was a relic of the old escort system before the railways were opened, and is not necessary now; and was kept up as a place of amusement for the head of the department, and the officers with him. I refrained from any quarrel with Captain Standish, and it may appear as pusillanimity my putting up with so much; but when I was up I always showed the officers and men an example of respect to the head of the department. When I was superseded—when Captain Standish complained of my conduct afterwards, and I considered things were going to wreck; but I was relieved from responsibility, and the case was different. In my interview with Mr. Ramsay, when he happened to be in Benalla in April 1880, returning from the unveiling of the police monument at Mansfield, in company with Captain Standish, Mr. Graves, and other gentlemen, he expressed the greatest pleasure and confidence when I told him how things were going on. That was upon the 22nd April 1880. Upon the 26th April, I received Mr. Graves’s document from the Chief Commissioner, an anonymous letter, and it was on the 3rd May I was sent for to town by Captain Standish. I had no conversation with him about a man named Foote, and he made the announcement that I was to be superseded; and I had an interview with Mr. Ramsay on account of that. Captain Standish denies that he had anything to do with my removal, but when I had that conversation with Mr. Ramsay he joined in the conversation, saying, “But you are always saying you are going to arrest them,” as if he had been the instigator of my removal, and I am of opinion yet that Mr. Ramsay was grossly misled in the matter by the head of my department. Captain Standish had shown himself incapable of devising any scheme whereby he or Superintendent Hare could catch the outlaws. He was incapable of explaining the prospects of their arrest, and he grossly misled Mr. Ramsay even in my presence before I was relieved; and Mr. Ramsay has been misled since, as see his evidence before the Police Reward Board, question No. 7 especially, which is nearly altogether the reverse of the fact. From such a person as Captain Standish has shown himself to be, could you expect a proper and fair action in such a case? In reference to Gascoigne’s evidence, I would have been glad to have sent parties of four men had they been properly trained and knew the country, but they had not those essentials. Nearly all the local men had been deficient in proper knowledge of the bush, and the reinforcements, though generally consisting of picked men, were more deficient in knowledge of the country. All that takes time to acquire, and I doubt, if an outbreak occurred now, if the police are yet sufficiently prepared to cope properly with them. As to the secret service, how was Power arrested after being out two years, and costing the country £30,000, but by informers; and most of the notorious criminals have been arrested in this way. I must object to the way Mr. Graves endeavored to get evidence against this system. (See Gascoigne’s evidence.) I did not inform Mr. Hare about J. Sherritt, because I had ceased to employ him for some time before the 2nd June, and his brother Aaron was continually cautioning us about him. I maintain that my removal from the North-Eastern District after eleven months’ intense anxiety, when matters were drawing to a close, was simply a second attempt (which unfortunately succeeded) at endeavoring to deprive me of the credit of the work. Why did I wish to remain, excepting to bring things to a creditable close? Was I not asking what might have been, in case of failure, my loss of office and ruin, and, even in case of success, my death? And I now assert that, had I remained in Benalla, the Kellys would have been taken without loss of life. It has been given in Mr. Hare’s evidence that D. T. came in on Thursday night before the murder, and said the outlaws “were going to do something at once.” No action was taken on this important information, although Mr. Hare has stated he had the utmost confidence in this man. I considered then, and still do, that my removal then was a great shame, not to use a stronger expression. I think I need not take more time in explaining what my system was with reference to those men. I was hearing of them very frequently. When Mr. Hare left I had just heard of them the week before, which was never done when I was up there previously; and when I was superseded I had heard of them three or four days before, authentic witnesses; and I was informed of their places where they had resorted to in the past, and where they had lived but recently. And the last information I had got from one of the agents was about their having been in a paddock for a certain time, and having abandoned it through accident. But this person, a mild, sensible, steady looking person, assured me that he was certain he would bring me to the gully where they were sleeping. I am certain—from what he told me, and my own experience—that we would have caught those men without any blood being shed, and there would have been no such shame as happened to the police force throughout this matter, and the murder of Sherritt. As to the secret system, there was no secret system versus the police—the police were simply unable to obtain certain information. In the case of Power that took place. Evidence was given by one mounted constable and another constable (Gascoigne) that the best system, he thought, would have been sending out parties of four men through the country; but he added, further down in his evidence, if they had been experienced men, and had a knowledge of the country. I would have been very glad to have adopted that, but the men in the district were all local men, and their knowledge of the country was too limited, and that of the other men, though the picked men of the colony, was more limited still. 16904. They had no knowledge at all of it?—No. The men there now I hope will become sufficiently efficient for the work, but it will take a considerable time to do it. If they were called on at the present moment, I doubt whether they would be efficient enough to accomplish the work without the assistance of the inhabitants. The fact is, in two words, unless the police have the confidence of the inhabitants of any district or any township, they will never become efficient, and the police lost the confidence of the people, good, bad, and indifferent, and until they regain it in that district (and that can only be by efficiency and good conduct), they will not be fully effective. Mr. Hare used the word “thwarted”—that I had accused him of doing so. I did not use that word. I said he was put up in opposition to me. Take the correspondence about Constable Redding; part of that report did not strike the Commission. I stated in that report that this man required more supervision than was given by merely visiting him. On three different occasions there was a lapse. One time he was only visited once in the year, and yet my report pointing that out met with indifference at the hands of the Chief Commissioner. On another occasion I visited the dépôt, and made a report which is here. I will read the part I am alluding to.—[From Report Book, 8th May 1876].—"14. At evening stables I observed several of the men at work wearing their uniform caps, some with chin-strap down, their pants and napoleon boots. 15. A man cannot groom his horse, clean his kit and arms in such a dress. It is too tight for such work; his breeches are apt to get too much soiled with dandruff to be fit for next day’s parade, and his expensive boots get stained and rotted with the stable manure, &c. 16. I submit that the men should be taught to do the above, or any other work of the kind, in ‘fatigue dress,’ not necessarily a uniform dress, but in any loose clothes they may possess. 17. I would permit any mounted man on arriving at his barracks, at the depôt, or elsewhere (after removing the bridle and securing his horse in the stall with the head stall), to go immediately to his quarters, throw off his uniform, and return in fatigue dress to his horse; then, a trooper might be seen extending himself properly while grooming his horse, and no constraint in his motions through fear of soiling his clothes. 18. Two of the men stated in my presence that they required a clean pair of pants nearly every day. One of them had five pairs of pants; the other had four pairs. 19. The recruits cannot be too clean on parade, or at any other time in uniform. But to make them wear uniform at stables, morning or evening, is not calculated to teach them the above habit.” I must tell you I have been through all the curriculum of the mounted police duty and the foot too, and I have learned stable duty from the very first, and I am familiar with it all, and therefore I was amazed to see this state of things in the nursery of the force. I reported it, you see, in this letter. I called two of those recruits up, and those men generally have to get their uniform on credit, and they are in debt for it several months after they join the force. I asked those men how many pair of pants they had. One man said “Four, if not five,” and the other said “Four.” I do not know how much they cost—perhaps about 50s. a pair—but they said they could not do with less, having to clean the stables and appear clean, and the same with their uniforms. I called the sergeant in charge, the Mounted Drill Instructor, and asked what was the meaning of this, and he told me, “Well, those were the orders;” and I asked him if he had ever seen men at stables in any cavalry regiment in the British army compelled to appear in uniform, and he said, “No, certainly not.” He had also been in the Irish Constabulary, and he replied, as to that, “Certainly not, but those were his orders.” I made this report to the Chief Commissioner, and not the slightest notice was taken of it. When I was appointed Acting Commissioner, a year ago, I at once issued an order that the men should be allowed to attend at stables in any clothes they chose, and put a stop to that altogether. That will show how my reports were treated sometimes.

16905. Was the special advantage to be gained to the men the only consideration, not putting them to the necessity of getting so many suits?—Yes, and a man could not clean a horse in such a dress, and his dress would get so filthy and shabby that he would not be smart in his appearance.

16906. What about the costliness to the men themselves?—That was excessive.

16907. Was one of the strong objections?—Yes, and the unsuitableness altogether. A stable with mounted men, is expected to be kept the picture of cleanliness, and this was kept in the most slovenly manner, and it was teaching the young men who were going out into the country very bad habits. This is a declaration on the subject:—“I, John Fegan, of the Police Depôt, St. Kilda road, sergeant and instructor of mounted police, make oath and say:—In the year One thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, I was sergeant and mounted drill instructor in the Police Depôt at Richmond. Mr. Assistant Commissioner Nicolson (who was then inspecting superintendent) made an inspection of the depôt in or about April, One thousand eight hundred and seventy-six. In going through the stables, Mr. Nicolson drew my attention to the men doing stable duty (cleaning horses, &c.) in uniform, and asked me for an explanation. I said I could not explain the origin of it, but it was according to order. Mr. Nicolson asked me if I had seen the men in any cavalry regiment I had been in, or any other mounted service I was acquainted with, attend stables in uniform. I replied no. Mr. Nicolson then called two troopers and enquired about their uniforms. I do not remember exactly what passed between them, but I believe it was to the effect that troopers could not do with less than three or four pair of pants each under the then arrangements. I know, of my own knowledge at that time, that it was necessary for a recruit on joining to have three pair of pants, and, as he could have no old uniform, to use his military boots (which cost three pounds a pair) in stables. No alteration was made with respect to this matter until November, One thousand eight hundred and eighty, when the Acting Chief Commissioner ordered that the men should be permitted to attend stables for the future in fatigue dress, which means any half-worn plain clothes they may have. I have served in Her Majesty’s Life Guards and in the Irish Constabulary, where I had an opportunity of seeing the manner in which stable duty is performed by cavalry men in Her Majesty’s service in England and Ireland, and it is invariably the custom there for the men, when engaged in cleaning their horses or stables, to dress in fatigue dress. That, in my opinion, the men do their work better, with more ease, and with less expense to themselves under the present arrangements, than they did when obliged to do it in uniform, and are able to appear cleaner when on parade.—JOHN FEGAN. Sworn at Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, this fifth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one before me—Frank Madden, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria for taking affidavits.” There was an allusion made by Mr. Hare about his sending men, when he came out, watching so many houses of the sympathizers, that it compelled the outlaws to break out, and amongst others he stated that the Harts’ house, near Wangaratta, was one. Here is an affidavit on that subject:—“Wangaratta, 6th September 1881. I, Arthur Loftus Maule Steele, of Wangaratta, sergeant of police, make oath and say:—Ist. That during the month of May 1880, I received instructions from Charles Hope Nicolson, Esq., Assistant Commissioner of Police, to place a party of police at Three-mile Creek, to watch the residence of Richard Hart, senior. 2nd. That, in accordance with such instructions, I placed a party of police at the Three-mile Creek, and had the house occupied by Richard Hart, senior, watched. 3rd. At the time Superintendent Hare took charge of the pursuit of the Kelly gang, during the month of June 1880, Hart’s house was being watched by a party of police from Wangaratta between the hours of 9 p.m. and 4 a.m. every night. 4th. When Superintendent Hare came to Wangaratta, a few days before the capture of the gang, and during the month of June 1880, he asked me what duty my party was doing in connection with the pursuit of the Kellys, and I informed him that we were watching Hart’s and Byrne’s alternately. 5th. He said I had better continue this duty, as he considered it was the best we could be employed at. 6th. In accordance with such instructions, I placed a party of police at Three-mile Creek, to watch the residence of Richard Hart, senior. 2nd. That, in accordance with such instructions, I placed a party of police at the Three-mile Creek, and had the house occupied by Richard Hart, senior, watched. 3rd. At the time Superintendent Hare took charge of the pursuit of the Kelly gang, during the month of June 1880, Hart’s house was being watched by a party of police from Wangaratta between the hours of 9 p.m. and 4 a.m. every night. 4th. When Superintendent Hare came to Wangaratta, a few days before the capture of the gang, and during the month of June 1880, he asked me what duty my party was doing in connection with the pursuit of the Kellys, and I informed him that we were watching Hart’s and Byrne’s alternately. 5th. He said I had better continue this duty, as he considered it was the best we could be employed at. —A. L. M. STEELE. Sworn at Wangaratta, in the colony of Victoria, this 6th day of September A.D. 1881, before me—Fred. J. M. Marsden, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria for taking affidavits.” Up to the time I left the place was watched. Captain Standish, being asked about the cause of the outbreak, has alluded to the manner in which that district had been officered for a number of years back. You can see that officers were not more than six years in the district, and some not more than six months; and that I give as one great reason of the outbreak, want of knowledge of the district owing to the frequent removals. This return will, I think, show that—[Handing in a return, which is as follows:—]

| Sub-Instructor A. B. Smith.    | ... — 1861 | February 1863 | At Wangaratta. |
List of Officers in the North-Eastern District from 1854.

Ovens District.

Senior-Inspector R. O’H. Burke was in charge of district in July 1854, and Inspector Joseph Mason was in charge (apparently temporarily) in July 1856, as Senior-Inspector R. O’H. Burke in charge again in January 1857; Superintendent P. Le P. Bokey in charge in January 1859; Vice Burke; Superintendent F. A. Winch took charge November 1861, vice Bokey, and there were two junior officers then, Sub-Inspector Kossack, in charge of Ovens escort, and Sub-Inspector J. W. Orridge, at Chiltern; Sub-Inspector A. B. Smith replaced Orridge, at Chiltern, in February 1863, and Inspector Dillon Purcell replaced Smith in March 1864; Sub-Inspector Dobson took charge of Ovens escort in November 1864, and left in November 1865. Superintendent T. E. Langley took charge of Ovens district in June 1866, vice Winch. Sub-Inspector Downing going as his junior officer at Beechworth in April 1867, both were dismissed in 1868, Inspector Kabat taking temporary charge of district in August 1868 till January 1869, Sub-Inspector Dobson replacing him. Superintendent B. T. Wilson took charge of the district in April 1869, Inspector Disney going up as junior officer in September 1869, from Benalla district; Inspector Smith replaced Sub-Inspector Dobson in July 1870, Inspector Disney also leaving the district. Superintendent H. R. Barclay took charge from B. T. Wilson, on his retirement at end of 1870; Inspector Smith leaving in June 1874, Superintendent from the Upper Goulburn district, taking his place; Inspector Smith returned in August 1875, replacing Reid, who retired. Inspector Smith had charge of the district from Superintendent Barclay’s leaving in February 1876 till February 1878, when Superintendent Chomley took charge; Sub-Inspector Baber, on his promotion, in July 1877, was junior officer at Beechworth, till February 1878. Superintendent Chomley left in June 1878, when Superintendent Sadleir took charge of the North-Eastern District, of which the Ovens District is part, the junior officers being Inspector A. B. Smith, at Beechworth, and Sub-Inspector Pewtress, who arrived in September 1878 at Mansfield. Inspector Smith left in February 1880, and Sub-Inspector Baber went to Benalla in July 1880.

Benalla District.

The Benalla District was formed by the subdivision of the Ovens District in July 1858, when Superintendent Cobham took charge of the district. Inspector Smith being junior officer at Wangaratta in July 1861. Inspector Chomley went as junior officer in September 1862, he taking temporary charge of district in Cobham’s absence, and leaving at the end of 1862. Inspector Smith went to the Ovens District in February 1863, returned February 1864, going to Wood’s Point, and left again September 1866. Superintendent R. McCulloch took charge from Superintendent Cobham in March 1866; and Superintendent W. K. Nicolas took charge of Ovens escort in November 1864, and left in November 1865. Superintendent T. E. Langley took charge of Ovens district in June 1866, vice Winch. Sub-Inspector Downing going as his junior officer at Beechworth in April 1867, both were dismissed in 1868, Inspector Kabat taking temporary charge of district in August 1868 till January 1869, Sub-Inspector Dobson replacing him. Superintendent B. T. Wilson took charge of the district in April 1869, Inspector Disney going up as junior officer in September 1869, from Benalla district; Inspector Smith replaced Sub-Inspector Dobson in July 1870, Inspector Disney also leaving the district. Superintendent H. R. Barclay took charge from B. T. Wilson, on his retirement at end of 1870; Inspector Smith leaving in June 1874, Superintendent from the Upper Goulburn district, taking his place; Inspector Smith returned in August 1875, replacing Reid, who retired. Inspector Smith had charge of the district from Superintendent Barclay’s leaving in February 1876 till February 1878, when Superintendent Chomley took charge; Sub-Inspector Baber, on his promotion, in July 1877, was junior officer at Beechworth, till February 1878. Superintendent Chomley left in June 1878, when Superintendent Sadleir took charge of the North-Eastern District, of which the Ovens District is part, the junior officers being Inspector A. B. Smith, at Beechworth, and Sub-Inspector Pewtress, who arrived in September 1878 at Mansfield. Inspector Smith left in February 1880, and Sub-Inspector Baber went to Benalla in July 1880.

Upper Goulburn District.

The Upper Goulburn District was a subdivision of the Benalla District, made in July 1867, when Sub-Inspector Culkin took charge of the district, Superintendent Furnell taking over charge from him in April 1868, Mr. Culkin going to Wood’s Point in the district. Superintendent Nicolas took charge of the district from Superintendent Furnell, on the abolition of the Benalla District, at the beginning of 1871. Superintendent Reid replaced Mr. Nicolas in June 1871 and left in May 1874, on reappointment, going to the Ovens District, Inspector Culkin being left in charge of the district. Inspector Culkin left the district August 1875. Superintendent Sadleir took charge of the district in January 1875, and when this district was included with the Ovens District in one called the North-Eastern District, he took charge of that district.

I have another affidavit from Mr. O'Connor, as follows:—"I, Stanhope O'Connor, of Flemington, in the colony of Victoria, woolbroker, &c., make oath and say: 1. That I was during the years One thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine and One thousand eight hundred and eighty in charge of the black trackers sent from Queensland to assist in the pursuit of the Kellys. 2. That on the second day of June, One thousand eight hundred and eighty, I was present at the interview between Mr. Hare and Mr. Nicolson held at Mr. Sadleir's office, Benalla, when Mr. Hare relieved Mr. Nicolson; Mr. Sadleir was also present. Mr. Hare arrived at about half-past eleven o'clock, and, after some general conversation occupying only a few minutes, Mr. Nicolson said, 'Now, Hare, we will proceed to business.' They both sat down, and Mr. Nicolson proceeded to give Mr. Hare an account of the documents he held relating to the pursuit, and to describe minutely the movements of the police for almost a month previously. Mr. Hare interrupted him, and said, 'I don't want to know anything about that. When was the last information of their (meaning the Kellys) being seen?' Mr. Nicolson then told him exactly the latest information he had, and also gave him full particulars at length, and referred to Mr. Sadleir as to whether he (Mr. Nicolson) had forgotten anything. Mr. Hare appeared satisfied. 3. I left the office at about ten minutes to one, and stood outside the door; in about five or six minutes, Mr. Hare came out, and stood with me, talking on general subjects. He asked me if the lunch at the hotel was at the old time, one o'clock. I replied that it was, and, pulling out my watch, I said, 'Hang it, Nicolson is late again, it is five minutes past one.' Just then Mr. Nicolson came out and joined us, and we proceeded to the hotel, talking to each other on general topics, and went to lunch. 4. In the afternoon, Mr. Nicolson asked my wife and myself to dine with him and meet Mr. Hare, as he said Mr. Hare and I were going to work together, and he thought we ought to be on the best terms. 5. Mr. Hare never mentioned to me from the time he relieved Mr. Nicolson to the time I left Benalla that he had received scanty information from Mr. Nicolson, or that Mr. Nicolson had appeared reticent, and seemed to me to have been quite satisfied with the information he had received.—STANHOPE O'CONNOR. Sworn at Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, this seventh day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me—John Madden, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court for taking affidavits."

There is another affidavit I wish to put in, which is as follows:—"I, Edward Gorman, of Geelong, fruiterer, make oath and say: In or about the end of the year One thousand eight hundred and seventy-five I was a sergeant in the Victorian police force, and was stationed at Ballarat. I was transferred to Ararat. I did no duty there, as my eyes failed, and I had to go into the hospital at Richmond depot. While in the hospital I wrote an application to the Chief Commissioner requesting that I might not be sent to any station where horses were kept, as I knew nothing about horses or the system of keeping forage accounts, and stating that I was quite willing to go to any station where there were only foot police. No notice was taken of my application, and I was sent to Stawell, the head-quarters station of the Wimmera district. I remained there five months, and, finding that I was not equal to keeping the accounts and writing that was necessary, I applied to be transferred, and was transferred to Russell street, in this city. I was then sent to Geelong, where I remained until I resigned from the force in November last. All these changes were a source of considerable expense and loss to me.—EDWARD GORMAN. Sworn at Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, this sixth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me—Frank Madden, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the colony of Victoria for taking affidavits." The object of my bringing this in is this. I knew this man Gorman when he first joined the force in 1856, and I knew him then as a very fine, smart, active constable. I lost sight of him for a great many years. I met him one day in Collins street, and he told me that he was about to be sent to Ararat or Stawell. I forget which, but both very important districts, with a large establishment of mounted men, and he thought it would be his ruin, as he had only been accustomed to foot duty and foot men, and could not manage horses. I went to the Chief Commissioner, and spoke to him about the matter. I found Mr. Hare in his office, and I said, "I see that Sergeant Gorman is about to be sent, he tells me, up-country to Ararat or Stawell. From my own knowledge—I am not speaking on behalf of this man—but, from my own knowledge of him, he is quite unfit to be sent up there to any of those places; he has not got the education and experience sufficient for the duty, and I would strongly suggest that you send him to some other more suitable station, but not send him there." The Chief Commissioner decided he would send him there—I have nothing to say against that—but, in the course of my speaking, Mr. Hare joined in and opposed me; and Captain Standish also got red in the face, and treated me as if I was interfering with him. My tone was simply a business like tone, and I was simply doing my duty; and it looked as if he was showing Mr. Hare how he could snub the Inspecting Superintendent, as much as to say he would show how he would make me mind my own business, and I left the room, determined I would never speak about such a thing again, and that was the indifference I complained of having received from the Chief Commissioner, and, to a certain extent, from Mr. Hare too. It was merely for the public interest I spoke. Gorman was sent and had to be returned to Melbourne, but not after considerable expense to himself and the Government had been incurred.

16908. By Mr. Hare.—You asked me in my cross-examination whether I kept a sentry upon Aaron Sherritt’s hut?—Yes, I believe I did.

16909. Was a sentry kept over your cave party?—I gave orders to that effect.

16910. Was a sentry kept?—I believe so.

16911. How long was the cave party there?—From the 2nd of December until the beginning of April.

16912. About five months?—Yes.

16913. Did you, during the time that you had your cave party there, ever visit them?—No, I allowed no one to visit it, and I did not visit it myself for fear of exposure of any kind.

16914. Could not you have gone of a dark night to visit it?—Yes, I might have done so.

16915. You did not do so?—In the dark I would have found them away from the place.

16916. In the dusk of the evening you would not have found them away?—I might not.

16917. Had you ever visited that spot where you kept your cave party for five months until you went with Mr. Graves and Mr. Anderson—had you ever seen it before that day?—No, I had been there, but had not seen it—not exactly to the cave until that day. I knew the station from my being in the locality and from the description of the place. I had been all about those ranges.

16918. How often were you round them?—Two or three times.

16919. You went at the time of the Sebastopol charge?—And other times too.

16920. Have you ever been since?—Yes.

16921. Have you ever been to old Sherritt’s house except that once?—No, I have not been to old Sherritt’s house.

16922. Whose house did you visit when you were out in those ranges? I did not visit any house. I used to keep my arrival at Beechworth and my departure unknown to anybody if possible.

16923. When did you go to those ranges?—With Mullane and Ward.

16924. How often—when was it?—It was previous to the cave party.

16925. You heard Mullane in his evidence say (question 13547) “I did not know of it,” in answer to the question whether there was a sentry kept?—Yes. I take it that he did not remember it, but I know perfectly that orders were given that a sentry was to be kept.

16926. You do not know whether it was or not?—I was led to understand it was.

16927. Mullane was present during the time you issued your instructions to the men?—Yes.

16928. For two hours you were in the office?—Yes.

16929. Mullane was present during the time you issued your instructions to the men?—Yes. He says he did not hear it, and I am not surprised.

16930. You do not know whether a sentry was kept during that time?—I asked Ward several times about that, whether they did so, and was informed they did.

16931. Ward was your medium through all this?—No.

16932. Through whom you sent the messages?—Ward, and Mullane, and I were in the habit of seeing the men when they came into Beechworth, and speaking about what was going on.

16933. You did not think it necessary to go personally to see what they were doing at the cave?—No; I thought it very unwise to do so.

16934. Do you remember moving a man named Canny from the cave to Wangaratta during the existence of the cave party?—No.

16935. Do you not remember an enquiry being held because it was supposed he had divulged about the cave party?—I think that was one of the things circulated at that time, perhaps for the purpose of mischief.

16936. He was removed to Wangaratta?—I think not.

16937. Not during the existence of the cave party?—I do not know of it. It may have been so, but I do not recollect it.

16938. Do you think I was perfectly right in telling Captain Standish that I had heard of the existence of your cave party when it came to my knowledge?—I do, most certainly.

16939. You do not blame me for that?—No.

16940. You do not call that any interference on my part?—Not the mere telling Captain Standish what you had heard.

16941. You thought you had complained of that through all the proceedings?—I complain of the fact that, at the depot under your command, you yourself were in the habit of “pumping” men, and talking to men, trying to draw secrets out of the men connected with the business they were engaged on in other districts, about which you had nothing to do at the depot, and in so doing were showing them a bad example.

16942. You say here (question 845), “What was known?”—About this secret cave party. I replied, “remonstrating against doing so, and assuring him of the perfect safety of the arrangement, and that it was a perfect secret up there. I also added that I was very sorry that the depot was such a place which received information of that kind so rapidly in such a manner where such matters were concerned, the secret move ments of the police”—Yes.

16943. You do complain that I told Captain Standish?—No, I do not complain of your telling Captain Standish, but of the depot being the place where the system practised with the men was a system of demoralization, where men coming down from a district like the North-Eastern district, from specially private duty, should he pumped by the officers about it.

16944. Was the fact of this man telling me “pumping”?—I do not know.

16945. You said in your evidence that you did everything in your power to prevent expense in the district on the second occasion of going up?—Yes.

16946. You said in your evidence in chief, on page 31, that you effected a saving; you found police horses in the stable turned into the paddocks. Have you found out now that you made a mistake in giving that statement?—I turned all the horses out of the stable into the paddocks, with the exception of a few working horses left; such as Bell, the mounted man’s horse, who served the summonses, and, perhaps, Mr. Sadler’s horse, sometimes there was a horse for myself.

16947. Was not that done two months before you came up there?—I am not aware of it. When I came up the second time the stable was full of horses.

16948. Are you sure of that?—That is my distinct impression.

16949. Do you not remember the little paddock in the township where the horses ran by day, and were fed at night with hay?—That might have been; there were no doubt horses in the paddock. I do say most undoubtedly that I wish to correct that; that in my evidence in the first instance as to the economies I effected about the stabling, I rather exaggerated that to a certain extent.

16950. With respect to the horses?—Yes.

16951. And that the men were riding private horses?—That is what I exaggerated in.

16952. You made a mistake that they were riding private horses?—There were private horses. I remember distinctly the correspondence about it, and the hiring of buggies.

16953. You say you made a mistake about that, the second occasion, about private horses being ridden by constables then?—I cannot remember it.

16954. There was a great decrease in the expenditure, and all the men had their travelling allowance knocked off?—Not for some time after.

16955. How long after Captain Standish writes did the men knock off the travelling allowance?—The date can be got.

16956. Was it two months after?—I should think about that. I have always stated that was done by Captain Standish I do not take credit for it. I say he did that about the travelling allowances.

16957. What travelling allowance did the men get a day?—I cannot tell you.

16958. Five shillings a day?—Yes, I said that Captain Standish effected that economy.

16959. Did that affect your own travelling allowance?—No, it did not.

16960. How much did you get a day?—My travelling allowance, the first time, was 15s. a day.

16961. What was it on the second occasion?—After I was made Assistant Commissioner, the only difference made when I got that appointment was that I was entitled to £1 a day travelling expenses.

16962. You got the £1 a day for the eleven months you were up there?—Yes.

16963. What was your salary then?—£500 a year.

16964. And you received £100 a year house allowance, and £365 a year for travelling allowance?—Yes.

16965. And the men’s allowance was knocked off entirely?—Yes.

16966. Did Mr. O’Connor get his travelling allowance?—He got what was arranged between Captain Standish and the Government of Queensland. I do not know what he got.

16967. Do you not know he got 12s. a day besides his pay?—I know nothing about what he got.

16968. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—Did you get travelling expenses in the same way?—I got 12s. a day, according to my position. The arrangement about Mr. O’Connor was a mystery, and is so still, to me. I know that when Mr. O’Connor heard that Captain Standish was urging his removal on account of economy, he stated he had never been consulted on the subject, and he would have been glad in order to remain to enter into any change as regards economy—that he never made the demand himself.

16969. By Mr. Hare (to the witness).—This man “Renwick” put in an application before the Reward Board which you sent to me to report on as Acting Commissioner?—Yes. They all passed through my hands.

16970. He says in his application—“On the 17th May 1880, I was out looking for the Kelly gang, at Lake Rowan, when I saw Ned Kelly and Joe Byrne riding from Ryan’s paddock.” Did he ever report that to you?—Yes.

16971. Have you got that amongst the reported appearances?—It was after the destruction of the gang at Glenrowan he told me that.

16972. And this was a man you employed and paid so much money to?—That is merely his opinion. He said, like many other people, “Well, I am sure that one day I saw those two men at such and such a place.”

16973. And he tells you, after the destruction of the gang, that he had seen them?—That he believes the men whom he saw on that date were the gang.
He did not tell you that at the time?—No.
This man was in your employment?—Yes.
And you had great confidence in him?—Yes.
He had received great sums of money from the Government?—He had not.
Mr. Sadleir says so here, in his report—"The following statements by this claimant are, I think incorrect, viz.:—The finding of a police saddle in paddock near the King River, and seeing Ned Kelly and Joe Byrne near Lake Rowan on 19th May 1880. At any rate, I have no recollection of the claimant reporting any such circumstance, neither has Sergeant Whelan, who would most likely have also been informed. In other respects, this man’s services were somewhat of the same nature as those of—— (Claim No. 33). He was exposed to great personal risk and hardship, but I believe he received a considerable amount of money from this department in return. There is no question that, up to Mr. Hare’s arrival here, in June 1880, his information was often of much value in showing that the outlaws were near. The claimant is the agent alluded to by Mr. Hare as refusing to work for him"?—That is a mere assumption of Mr. Sadleir’s. Mr. Sadleir does not say it positively. Mr. Sadleir was under that impression.
You said he knew as much as you about what was going on in the district?—I never said that.
You left him to tell me the rest of the information after you left the office?—The man made out that he had not received more than a pound a week during the time. He was only paid when he did anything.
There was a claim of £20 that this man made while Captain Standish and myself were in the district?—Yes.
For expenses incurred at that time?—Yes.
It was opposed by Captain Standish, was it not?—Yes.
At the express desire of Mr. Sadleir, or advice of Mr. Sadleir?—I am not aware of that.
You know it was refused by him. Did you make a subsequent application to Captain Standish, when you were up there, to pay this money to “Renwick”?—I have no recollection of it; possibly I did. I satisfied myself the man’s claim was a good one.
But you were not up there?—But I made enquiries from all concerned—a systematic enquiry.
By what means was it paid?—You had better enquire at the Treasury.
Did you certify to it?—No doubt of that. The whole circumstances of the case were laid before the Government. Mr. Sadleir, Sergeant Steele, Detective Ward, and all who had seen this man in his travels at different angles of the country—all corroborated his statement, and satisfied the Government that the claim was genuine.
This man “Renwick” is the man that gave the information about having seen Joe Byrne and his dog behind a stone?—Yes, it was.
Upon his information you brought up a large party of police on the Sunday?—Yes; I did not say a large party.
Fourteen or fifteen, with blackfellows?—Five or six blackfellows, and the rest white men.
Where did you meet this man when you came up with your party?—At Everton.
Was his face blackened?—No; no such absurdity.
Who did you take with you that time, Aaron Sherritt?—Yes.
Why did you take Sherritt on that occasion?—To help to scour the country.
What time did you leave Everton?—As soon as we reached it—the first train in the morning.
That is about eleven o’clock?—The early morning train. We left Benalla at five o’clock. We had a special train. We left soon after sunrise.
And you left with a party of police with Sherritt, leaving Everton, to go to Sebastopol?—Yes.
Why would not Ward or Mullane have done to show you across the country, who were quite as well acquainted with it as Sherritt?—I considered that Sherritt was very much better.
Did you not see the danger of exposing the man with all those police through that country?—I took every precaution.
But he was seen, you know?—I do not know anything of the kind.
Do you not know when one of the black trackers saw ——, Joe Byrne’s friend, and took deliberate aim at him?—I did not see him. I heard of it.
And he had an opportunity of seeing Aaron Sherritt with you?—That is another assumption. Sherritt was a long way in front, in a gully.
You met two or three people on the road?—Never saw a soul.
Mr. O’Connor said so. Previous to coming to Byrne’s house there was a lad on a black horse, and Aaron Sherritt was quite aware of the man at Byrne’s house having seen the blacks?—I never heard of it. Here is “Renwick’s” application for the reward—[handing in a paper].
By the Commission.—Was it necessary to take Aaron?—Yes.
Why?—Because there were places of concealment in that rocky country that Aaron knew of.
Did you expose any other private agent in broad daylight the same as Aaron was that day?—Yes, this man “Renwick.” He was with the party that day.
"By Mr. Hare. —He was not known in the district?—Not so much as Aaron; but he was known very well in the district. Aaron was up on the hill when we arrived at this railway station, at Everton, contrary to my instructions. I whispered to that man “Renwick” to go and tell the man (he did not know who it was) to go away, and watch where he could meet us, and he went away. We got our horses out, and went to the bush, and Aaron then joined a portion of us, and he was the guide through the thickest part of the country, so as not to be seen, and we were not seen by a soul from the time we started till we got to Crawford’s paddock.

17010. By the Commission.—How did Aaron get to Everton station?—By appointment; but he ought not to have shown himself there.

17011. He was there to help to search the country?—Yes; but he did not go to the particular spot; the man “Renwick” took us to that.

17012. By Mr. Hare.—Sherritt went through the country?—Yes.

17013. With a party of police?—No; he led them principally, and went through the bush in front. We were desirous of going through the bush so as not to touch a habitation of any kind.

17014. Do you say you never met a person on the way between Everton and Mrs. Byrne’s?—Not till Crawford’s paddock.

17015. Whom did you meet then?—Aaron kept away round the corner, and the police rode on to Crawford’s paddock, to the man who had charge of it.

17016. Will you listen to this—“Renwick’s” application for portion of the reward:—“I joined the party. We then started for Sebastopol. Aaron Sherritt also joined us, and I suggested to Superintendent Nicolson that Aaron Sherritt had better guide the party to Crawford’s paddock, and he knew the bush better than I did. We then went to Crawford’s paddock, and from there to where I saw the man behind the rocks, but we did not get any trace of the outlaws. I am of opinion that the outlaws thought that Aaron Sherritt was the cause of this party going after them to Sebastopol, and they afterwards went to his hut and shot him, which was finally the cause of the outlaws being exterminated”?—I cannot help “Renwick” giving that opinion. I do not care whether he forms an opinion.

17017. Would not anybody else form the opinion that this man seen with a body of police, accompanying them through this bush, would be the means of the outlaws shooting him, and he was shot within a little time of that?—It was about a month after. Aaron was quite willing to come; and on any occasion, when he made the slightest objection, it was always considered. It was quite of his own accord.

17018. What did you join as?—Cadet.

17019. At what rate of pay?—I think 8s. a day.

17020. What was your rank when Power was arrested in 1870?—I was senior superintendent.

17021. At what salary?—£375, and house allowances.

17022. Mr. Winch was above you on the list?—Accidentally he was. Only on the list.

17023. By the Commission.—Was he, as a matter of fact, your senior or not?—No, there is a file of correspondence between myself and Captain Standish on the point. I found that Mr. Winch was placed on the list wrongly, and it was corrected by Captain Standish.

17024. By Mr. Hare.—You were removed from Kyneton to Melbourne?—I was.

17025. What rate of salary did you get the first year you were in Melbourne?—£375, and £100 a year from the Detective Department, and quarters and wood and water.

17026. What did your predecessor get in charge of the city?—He would receive £375.

17027. And what did your successor, Mr. Winch, get?—£375.

17028. At all events you got £100 a year more than any other officer in charge of the Melbourne district?—No, I got the £100 a year for charge of the detectives—for my experience of fourteen years before. I took charge of the detective force, for which I had a special qualification.

17029. You had charge of the city of Melbourne, Collingwood, and Richmond?—All on this side of the Yarra.

17030. Irrespective of Brunswick, that now belongs to Mr. Winch?—Yes.

17031. You had no stations on the other side of the Yarra?—No.

17032. I had all this side?—Those were given to you.

17033. Then you were promoted to the rank of inspecting superintendent?—Yes.

17034. At what salary?—My pay was £425.

17035. That was what your predecessor got, Mr. Bookey?—I believe he did.

17036. Shortly after that you got an increase of your salary, did you not, of £75 a year?—Yes. That was on account of some particular representation. It was on the occasion of your having received another hundred a year, you and Mr. Winch.

17037. And you retained that up to the present?—I did.

17038. When were you made Assistant Commissioner?—On the 1st of October 1880.

17039. Was that through an application of yours?—No.

17040. Was it an application of Captain Standish’s?—I do not think so.

17041. How was it done?—Perhaps I am leading the Commission to think I had it done, but it was really done without my knowledge in the first instance.

17042. By whom?—I know perfectly well.

17043. Tell the Commission how?—I have no objection, if the Commission wish it.

17044. By the Commission.—It is just as well?—My father-in-law, the late Hon. John Thomas Smith, had received some applications from Mr. Hare and Mr. Winch to help them in getting this £100 a year each; so it was remarked by some of his family that he was always ready to help other people, but he
C. H. Nicolson, continued.
7th Sept. 1881.

17053. You know what my salary was when I joined the force—£300 a year?—Yes.
17054. That was in 1854, and you know what I am getting now—£375, first-class superintendent?—Yes, and in the depot you are getting £375, and house and gas.
17055. And so did you?—No, I paid for my gas.
17056. And you got the allowances?—Yes, £2 a year, I think. I just cost the Government about nearly half what you do.
17057. You get £100 a year for house rent?—Yes.
17058. What do you get for fuel, light, and water?—I do not get £20 a year for that.
17059. Then I commenced in 1854 with £300 a year, and after 28 years’ service I get £375, without the allowances I then had. You see I cannot have been much of a favorite officer, under these circumstances, as far as promotion is concerned—can I?—You have received your promotion. You were seventh on the list of second-class superintendents when Power was taken. You have been promoted over the heads of others.
17060. That was only in one case—over Nicolas; with that exception, have I?—You have tried very hard to get promotion over others.
17061. You asked me what information I gave you when you relieved me?—Yes.
17062. Did I not tell you that positively I had information that just a week or fortnight before I left, those outlaws were camping in Wilson’s paddock?—No; I have no recollection of your saying anything of the kind.
17063. Surely you remember that date?—Cannot you mention any one who was present?
17064. There was no one present but ourselves?—I can only say I had never heard, to my knowledge, of Wilson’s paddock, until I heard of it some months after, in the course of conversation, I think through Mr. Sadleir.
17065. Did not I tell you about the “diseased stock” man?—No, I will explain. You know his real name?
17066. Yes?—When I was up there before I heard of this man by his real name, as a person who could if he wanted give very good information; but as a man who could not be approached, who would not allow any of the police to speak to him on the subject. When I came up and relieved Mr. Hare, I believe there was some conversation and his real name mentioned in passing, and there was no information obtained from him; but, as to Mr. Hare introducing him to me, or telling me about his usefulness, that is absurd. I was introduced to him first by Sergeant Whelan through Mr. Sadleir, months after I arrived in the district.
17067. Do you not remember me telling you the circumstances that made me discover his relationship with one of the sympathizers—I know all about his connections. I heard of that in the first visit up there. I have no doubt of it at all.
17068. Do you remember, when you were Acting Chief Commissioner, my coming to you and telling you I wanted to take Jack Sherritt to my district?—I remember your coming. I think I was out. 17069. And that I had a very strict sub-officer I wanted to put him under?—Yes, I think that was it.
17070. You then told me you were going to dismiss them?—Yes; to get his discharge.
17071. You heard Mr. Sadleir say that he asked Captain Standish not to send him to him, that he did not want a man of that sort?—Yes.
17072. And I offered to relieve you and take the man into my own district?—I do not remember the two things being connected in that way.
17073. Will you tell me why you recommended this man to Mr. Fosbery, having got rid of him out of your own force?—Mr. Fosbery was in my own office that very forenoon, and came in just as they were going out, and I told the whole story about him and asked him for his opinion, if he thought I had acted right in the matter, and I said I was very sorry for them under the circumstances, and I really was. I thought it was a very cruel and painful ordeal they had gone through, and asked if he would take them, and if in some distant part of his country he could employ them, particularly the younger. He just laughed and said he could not do anything of the kind.

17074. You got rid of them out of your force and you asked the Chief Commissioner of New South Wales to take them into his?—Yes; but he knew all about them.

17075. You subsequently gave an introduction to Sherritt to Queensland?—Yes, I asked if they could take him into their force.

17076. Having got rid of him from our force?—I told him all the circumstances, and Mr. Seymour replied to me fully, saying that under the circumstances he could not do it.

17077. With reference to the telegram you sent when you went away to town that night, did you on that day at all tell me that you had stopped supplies to the Sherritts?—Yes, I explained to you this much, I told you that the Chief Commissioner in Melbourne had decided that he knew better whom to employ, and whom not to employ, as scouts in this district than I did, and that he had sent orders against the employment of Aaron Sherritt, and that notwithstanding I had kept Aaron on at my own cost—was paying him at my own cost—and that now you were relieving me you would have to see to it.

17078. Did you tell me you had written to or directed Ward or Mullane to stop supplies?—I did not, because I did not write till after.

17079. Then all supplies were stopped without my knowing anything about that?—There were no supplies.

17080. Did you not stop supplies for all the agents?—You are exaggerating the thing. The payment only consisted of Aaron Sherritt’s payment; the rest of the family, as I understood, received a little tea and sugar.

17081. All that was stopped?—Yes.

17082. Did you tell me that when you left?—I do not believe I did say anything about tea and sugar.

17083. What was the urgency of sending a telegram that night when you got on to the station?—I was a little nervous when I was going away, and I thought I had forgotten about those men in that hut, and I rushed to the telegraph table and telegraphed.

17084. Then you had the men in that hut?—No, I had ordered the men away before that, but I had forgotten the fact.

17085. Did you tell me when you left you had ordered them away?—No, the necessity for their being there had ceased. I, who placed them there, thought so.

17086. Did you know they were in the hut?—I had sent word the day before about them, but I forgot it at that moment, and therefore I made sure by telegraphing.

17087. Why did not you send a copy to me?—I never thought of it, and as I say I never thought of the thing at all till the train was just starting.

17088. Had you ever been down there to Sherritt’s hut before the morning you went there with the Commission?—I had seen the hut in the distance.

17089. Had you ever been there?—I had never been to the hut.

17090. Had you been down the road past Sherritt’s hut?—I had, and in sight of Mrs. Byrne’s.

17091. When?—On one occasion when I was up at Beechworth.

17092. The Sebastopol charge occasion?—No, one other occasion.

17093. Then these three men were in the hut and you knew nothing at all about it?—Not at the time I was there.

17094. But those four men when I came up there were removed out of Aaron Sherritt’s hut?—They ought to have been according to the orders.

17095. You say you were on the eve of capturing the Kellys when I relieved you?—Yes; not the slightest doubt.

17096. Were you ever before as near capturing the Kellys?—No.

17097. Do you remember the telegram Ward read here that the important time appeared to be near at hand, when you wrote to Ward to be cautious, that the important time appeared to be at hand in December 1879?—Yes.

17098. You thought the important moment then was near at hand?—I was very sanguine then, is when we first began establishing the cave party.

17099. In August 1879 Mr. O’Connor writes to his Commissioner, “We expect to hear any moment about the outlaws”—had you surrounded them then?—I never said I “surrounded”; that was a fiction of yours saying so. I never said I surrounded. I never said I had drawn a cordon round them.

17100. Can you remember how many agents you gave me over that day?—I mentioned about four or five.
17101. Stevens was one?—Yes.
17102. “Diseased stock” was two?—Yes.
17103. Who else?—“Renwick,” and there was Aaron Sherritt.
17104. You had discharged him?—I did not consider him discharged. It was merely the change that you would be responsible. I had never more than three or four agents at a time. I dropped them when I had done with them.
17105. Did you tell me when you relieved me?—Those were the men, and that the matter was going well at the time.
17106. Did you tell me when you relieved me that you had the outlaws very near you—that you could lay your hands upon them?—I did not use that expression.
17107. Did you give me to understand that you were nearly catching them, or that you knew exactly their movements, and everything concerning them?—I told you of hearing of them the previous week.
17108. That would not bring them nearer?—Would it not?
17109. You have heard that Jack Sherritt said, in November, they were within two miles of you?—I was hearing of them frequently then, but that was a different kind of tale altogether at that time.
17110. When you went up on the first and second occasion, had you not power to expend any money you chose upon agents?—No, I had not.
17111. Had you to apply to town before you employed an agent?—No.
17112. You employed any agent you thought fit?—I employed any agents I thought fit.
17113. You said in your evidence to-day that I had advantages that other officers had not—will you explain to the Commission what those advantages were at the depot?—There is every advantage, it is a pleasant life, one of the most pleasant of lives. I do not know any position more enjoyable than in charge of the depot and the county of Bourke district.
17114. What advantages pecuniary or otherwise?—There were a great many advantages, such as go to make life more enjoyable. I do not suppose it was a place to make a fortune in.
17115. By the Commission.—It is a position that would be sought for by the officers?—Most certainly. It is the position next to the city officer; in fact there are many officers who would take it in preference to that.
17116. By Mr. Hare.—Had I not charge of the Kyneton district included in mine?—No doubt you had too large a district, but I believe you got stations added to your district in order to increase its importance, and to the detriment of the service, because you could not go to them all.
17117. By the Commission.—Was it at Mr. Hare’s instigation that those stations were added?—I know he was often very glad to take stations from others, without a murmur. Sandhurst, for instance. In fact, he was ready to take any station.
17118. By Mr. Hare.—Was not the Kyneton district broken up and put into the Bourke district?—A portion of it.
17119. Was not Kilmore added also?—Yes.
17120. Was not my district enlarged at the time that Mr. Sadleir complained of his being enlarged?—Yes.
17121. Had I anything to do with the enlargement of my district?—I think you had. I think you wanted to make yours the largest in the colony, so as to make it appear you had more duty and your position more important than any other officer’s. That is my candid opinion, as you have asked me.
17122. Was not all the south of the Yarra taken from me and given to Mr. Winch?—Yes; I think so.
17123. You think I did all that for my own advantage, although increasing my travelling every month?—No; I say you could not do it; but you took a number of stations on you that you could not properly supervise.

C. H. Nicolson, continued. 7th Sept. 1881.

17124. Did Mr. Sadleir take those on him?—No; I do not say so.
17125. Did I?—Yes, I think you did; there were several stations that you could have declined.
17126. How could I, after Captain Standish told me to take them?—By mentioning it to Captain Standish and remonstrating.
17127. What station do you allude to?—Not any in particular. There were several in the Sandhurst district.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o’clock.

THURSDAY, 8TH SEPTEMBER 1881.

Present:

The Hon. F. Longmore, M.L.A., in the Chair;
The witness.—Before resuming cross-examination, may I be allowed to read a short record of my services, as was done in the case of others?

17128. By the Commission.—Is it in addition to what has been put in already. What is that—[referring to a paper]?—A list of my services and promotions.

17129. That information is already before us?—Then I will read only one part of it:—“After the Ballarat riots, the Government, considering it advisable to replace the officials there by strangers for the police force, the late Arthur Kirke was selected as inspector in charge of that district, and I as sub-inspector. Great disorder then prevailed at Ballarat, the criminal and convict classes having been drawn there in great numbers. The Chief Commissioner of Police, Captain MacMahon, replaced, as quickly as possible, the most of the foot police there with a superior class of men, principally from the Irish Constabulary, and in a short time the police gained the confidence of the public at Ballarat by earnest and energetic efforts to protect life and property and to suppress crime.” This is a letter addressed to me by Mr. Kirke—[reading the same]:—“Ballarat, 9th June 1855. Sir,—As I am about to leave Ballarat to take charge of the police district of Castlemaine, I have much pleasure in acknowledging the valuable assistance I have received from you in the discharge of the police duties whilst I have been in charge of this district. Qualified as I consider you to be for the position which you occupy, I cannot speak too highly of the zeal and vigilance which you have always devoted to the performance of your duties, nor can I overlook your successful capture of the bushranger at Bullarook and the numerous other instances of your having brought to justice criminals charged with offences of the most serious nature. In this I trust you will still continue to be successful, and that eventually you may gain those honors to which you will be so deservedly entitled by such a course. I again thank you for your assistance, and beg to assure you that I shall always be happy to hear of your welfare, and, so far as I am able, to promote it. I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant, ARTHUR KIRKE, Inspector of Police.

To Charles H. Nicolson, Esq., Sub-inspector of Police, Ballarat.” There is an instance of the duty we had to perform that which I wish to relate. An order came up from the Government to carry out that obnoxious law, the license law, which still existed, and which we had to put in force. Mr. Templeton, who was then a Commissioner of the Goldfields, was selected to perform the disagreeable duty there, and you may know how they were carried out in other districts, and with what result; but in Ballarat Mr. Templeton was chosen as warden, and I was chosen as police officer. I selected fifteen or twenty men, and the men were paraded without arms—I think, without even batons. I dressed myself, avoiding any appearance of fighting, putting on clean gloves, and carrying a light switch. When we came to the Red Hills, where the diggers were in thousands, we turned in amongst them, and sat down in their midst. They were expecting a number of men with bayonets fixed. They came around us, and Mr. Templeton and myself sat down with the men crowding round us, and Mr. Templeton addressed them in a few words, saying we had this duty to carry out, and there was no intention to annoy or oppress them in any way; if any man had not his license, he knew what the law was—it must be obeyed. He expressed himself so appropriately that they all agreed with him, though many, perhaps, had come to kick up a row. The police were then told to go about the duty. They found several men without licenses. Mr. Templeton or I told them merely to take one constable, go up with those men, and tell them to get their friends to bail them out. They went up, and their friends bailed them out, and there was no inconvenience. They were back at their work in a few minutes, and this process was carried on till we had 30 or 40 prisoners; and next day they were before the court in the usual way, and went through all the forms of the law, and the law was carried out; and that was the last collecting of license fees at Ballarat.

17130. At that time, is it not a fact that the officer in charge of the Ballarat district was requested, by the Government, to adopt milder means than before?—Probably he was; but I know it was a matter of anxiety at the time as to what should be done. There is one remark more I have to make—that is, with reference to my duties. A remark made by Mr. Graves, as to the duties of the Inspecting Superintendent, that I was responsible for the arming of men. I draw attention to the 38th clause in the Police Regulations, which says—“When inspecting a district or station, it will be more particularly his duty to see that the officers and men are properly dressed, and that their general appearance and demeanor are such as they should be, that their arms are kept in good and serviceable order, and that the men are supplied with a suitable supply of ammunition.” That is what I always did. It would be inferred, from what Mr. Graves said, that I had to do with the supply of arms to the men. I had nothing to do with that whatever. I have merely to see what they have.

17131. If they were insufficiently supplied, or inefficiently armed, was it not within your power to report?—Certainly.

17132. And to recommend a fresh supply?—I did so. I had a revolver the men were carrying when I went there first reported as inefficient—old Colt’s revolvers converted into breech-loaders; and on that report they were changed to Webley revolvers.

17133. They were well enough armed up to the time of the Kelly outbreak for all ordinary purposes?—Yes.

17134. After the capture of Power, did it never strike you as being necessary to supply men with arms which should be more effective in range and so on, for the capture of that sort of offender, than those that had been in use up to that time?—No, I do not think so. Power was only one man at that time, and there was no occasion, in my opinion, to fear any one else or any outbreak in the district. It was only necessary to keep the police up to the mark and improve them.

17135. But now, after the experience you have had in this last unfortunate affair, do you not think it would be a very necessary procedure on the part of the Government to recommend that arms fit for that service should be supplied, and the police exercised in the use of them?—Certainly I do; and I always considered for many years that the mounted men were not sufficiently exercised in the use of their arms, and when I visited stations I used to order their practising and getting a supply of ammunition for the purpose.

17136. Up to the time of the Kelly business you did not think they should have been supplied with rifles?—Yes, but I think now all mounted and foot men should be trained to the use of the rifle, although it may not be necessary to arm the foot men with the rifle; but there should be a sufficient number of arms available for any service they may be required when sent into the country on a sudden emergency. In every barracks there should be one or two rifles, and, if the country could afford it, I would give every man a rifle.

17137. And you think a periodical opportunity should be given for every member of the force to become established in the use of them?—Yes. If he is taught properly at the beginning he will not forget it, and a little practice will keep him right.

17138. Can you give any further information as to how this jealousy arose between the officers?—I am not aware of any jealousy amongst the officers. Do you mean the department generally?

17139. As between yourself and Mr. Hare and Captain Standish, for instance?—I consider that for some years back Captain Standish has shown a disposition to keep me down, and to raise two of the senior officers up to the same level with me as much as possible in official matters.

17140. Can you give any particular instance?—I have handed in an affidavit, given by Gorman, as to Captain Standish's treatment of my reports. For instance, I mentioned one in Mr. Hare's district. It was that constable I spoke of in the early part of the enquiry. This was a man who had served under me in the Kyneton district, and I had several times found him careless, though a clever and good constable. I would find him in bed as late as eight o'clock. On visiting my rounds I found him in Mr. Hare's district, and I had reason to report unfavorably about the police and the station. Mr. Hare made use of a remark, amongst other things, to the effect—What grounds had I for making such a report about the man? questioning me on that point, which I thought was wrong on the part of the Chief Commissioner to let pass without letting me know. It was my duty to call attention to such a thing, and that station I observed and reported that it had been visited on one occasion, only once, for nearly a whole year, and I considered that, under those circumstances, Mr. Hare's remark was uncalled for, and that the Chief Commissioner should have told him so. If I had mentioned any other officer almost, very serious notice would have been taken of it by the Chief Commissioner.

17141. Then you complain that the same notice was not taken in Mr. Hare's case that there would have been in other cases?—Yes.

17142. Have you any reason to believe that the service has suffered in any way by partiality to Mr. Hare?—It could not but suffer. It was degrading me to a certain extent in the eyes of the force.

17143. Did your appointment as Inspecting-Superintendent affect your relations with Captain Standish or Mr. Hare?—Captain Standish advised me not to accept it, pointing out I would lose pecuniarily by it; but I told him I did not care for that—my only object was that I did not want the officers to be placed over my head, and I should not object if Mr. Hare could accept the appointment without being placed over my head.

17144. Did Captain Standish desire to give that position to Mr. Hare; did he say so?—He spoke to me about the state the city district was in, that it was all in order, and it seemed to agree with me and suit me very well, and that I would be away from my family for so many months in the year with the other position, that I would not like it so well. Besides it would be a pecuniary loss to me.

17145. That instance you spoke of was the instance of Constable Redding?—Yes.

17146. Did Mr. Hare interfere with you in any other cases in the same way in the district?—There was something about my visiting the district that occurred at the dépôt.

17147. What was it?—I did remember the circumstance myself, but I have been reminded of it, and I would rather not speak of it. It was about the indignation Mr. Hare showed at my visiting the dépôt particularly. Captain Standish told me when he instructed me to visit the County Bourke district that I need not visit the stud at Dandenong, and that was quite enough for me, as I understood that Captain Standish and Mr. Hare looked after the stud. I visited the men and stations, and Richmond dépôt. When I came in I sent in my report about the dépôt, and Captain Standish found fault with me for visiting the dépôt. I could not understand it, and he said he told me not to visit the dépôt. I said he told me not to visit the stud dépôt, and those remarks were not made till I sent in that report, a portion of which I sent in yesterday. Captain Standish is a man, I may tell you, of no military instincts, although he is styled "Captain." He has no idea of the management of stables and mounted men, or barracks, or anything of the kind—not to my knowledge. I never saw a symptom of it; and my report was contrary to the system carried on in the stables and so on, and he was very much annoyed. There was an instance of it in saying I used bad language to a man when the man was bringing his horse to the stable. The fact was simply this: Captain Standish went into the stables, and there were two or three men present, and he called to a very awkward man (since discharged the service) to bring a horse out of the stable. This man was bringing the horse out in a careless slovenly manner, hauling the brute about, and consequently I spoke to him. I had taught him and the others how to do it, and I told him to bring his horse out properly. The way is when the horse’s bridle is on to take the end of the bridle like this, and run your hand up under his throat and lead him gently out; and if the door is narrow, all mounted men turn facing the horse like that, holding with both hands—[illustrating by gesture]. If you like, I can produce the Instruction-book. Not one of those men knew that, and that is what I did before Captain Standish. I did not lose my temper or use any strong language to the men, and there were members of the force present then that saw it.

17148. Do you know who the man was that was ordered?—I think it was Meahan, since discharged, and I think Senior-Constable Irving was present. As to using bad language, I am not in the habit of doing so. I never did such a thing. I may have called him stupid.

17149. When you found fault with this Constable Redding, he being in Mr. Hare’s district, was he not justified in asking why you found fault with him if he believed in the man?—I gave my reason in my report.

17150. That is a matter that would occur under any management, such small things as that—that was not a matter of jealousy?—No. I merely mean to say that what was stated there was not received properly by the Chief Commissioner, and Mr. Hare made remarks on the matter which Captain Standish should not have permitted; it was my duty to point out everything I saw.

17151. This is with reference to the fault found in the bookkeeping with reference to the receipt—"With reference to the receipt for prisoner Murdoch, the W. house book at Hotham will show the prisoner was lodged there. I consider that in a place like Donnybrook, where the C. P. Sessions only visits twice a month, and the clerk requests that the proceeds of distress warrants may be paid over to the plaintiffs, there is no objection to the constable doing so, providing he holds a receipt from the person to whom he paid the money, which was done in these cases. I am not aware how Mr. Nicolson became aware that Constable Redding is wanting in discretion and requires looking after. He has been a long time under me, and I have not discovered it; on the contrary, I have found him a most zealous man, and most anxious to do his work, and a man in whom I can place the greatest reliance.—FRANCIS HARE, Superintendent. 3/5/76." That is what you object to?—Well, see what I stated in that report.

17153. What do you complain of in that—that Captain Standish supported Mr. Hare in that?—Mr. Hare remarks that he does not know what knowledge I have of this man. It was not Mr. Hare’s duty to know what knowledge I had, or to put such a question, and I make the reply that it might have intimidated the Inspecting Superintendent from noting matters considered necessary.

17154. Was the matter about this man—is it an irregularity in practice, as far as the force was concerned?—All through the force, and whenever I met with such an irregularity I always corrected it. It was for the safety of the force generally that we came to the conclusion that men in executing warrants, receiving a warrant from the constable, should return the money to the bench.

17155. This is your minute on it in 1876—"In my endeavors to introduce a uniformity of system and practice, so far as circumstances will permit, among the police throughout the colony, in matters of the kind within referred to, the only opposition I am aware of having met has been in the Bourke district.” That is May 1876?—Yes. I found the same thing in a station not very far away—at Sunbury, Constable Walters. I pointed out the same thing there.

17156. It is recognized as an official irregularity?—Yes.

17157. And your duty as Inspecting Superintendent was to report any irregularity?—Yes.

17158. If you conceived it to come within that class?—Yes.

17159. And you reported it?—Yes.

17160. In doing that, had you any desire to reflect injuriously on the men or on Mr. Hare?—Not the slightest. In all my reports my study was to give a photographic picture of every station I visited, without reference to individuals at all.

17161. Had you personally any antipathy or dislike to this man?—No, not at all. I knew him well before. I knew he was a very smart man in the Ballarat district. I found him when I went to Kyneton the same man, except that he had fallen off a good deal in Kyneton. He required looking after. He was a first-rate man if looked after, and was a man who would go to the dogs if not looked after.

17162. The object of official inspection is that any irregularity of any kind shall be reported—there is no option?—There is no option whatever. I do not think that was received in a proper spirit.

17163. That is the whole charge?—Yes.

17164. Was it the duty of Mr. Hare, as officer in charge of the district at that time, to have reported the act of this man that you officially complained of?—Mr. Hare had a perfect right or any other officer to meet any objection that I made as inspector.

17165. That is not the point. My question is—was it right or proper for either the constable to carry out this course, or subsequently for the officer to allow this course, which was in violation of the recognized practice of the force—that is the charge you imply. If it was wrong of a man to carry out this proceeding of which you specially complained, was it equally wrong on the part of the officer in charge to permit it?—Yes, but the officer might have a different opinion, and, if he had, he had a perfect right to express it; but what I object to is the manner in which he gave his opinion about it, because the matter was a matter of practice throughout the force, and he was the only one different. I think there was a disposition to overlook things in the district.

17166. It was your duty, as inspecting officer, to report on them?—Yes.

17167. Any violation of the recognized practice, an officer under you would be equally responsible for as the man himself who had committed it?—Yes.

17168. If he had officially passed it over?—Yes.

17169. I want to know if there were special circumstances on that occasion that rendered it necessary for Mr. Hare to permit this violation of that duty?

Mr. Hare.—Yes.

The witness.—I do not think so.

The Chairman.—Yes, but Mr. Nicolson knew the constable required particular supervision, and one morning soon after the constable was found dead on the road with his neck broken, after having been drinking at several places the night previous.

17170. By the Commission (to the witness).—When you were inspecting, you felt it necessary to send in a report of any particular constable, would that report necessarily or in the ordinary course be forwarded to the superintendent of the district under whom that constable was placed?—Yes, after being sent to the Chief Commissioner—always.

17171. Then, if that was sent to any superintendent in any particular district that you inspected, the superintendent in charge of the men would be at liberty to express his opinion?—Most decidedly, to the Chief Commissioner.

17172. Then has Mr. Hare done otherwise in this case than what was usual in other cases?—Yes.

17173. Have you received reports from the superintendents, when you have made reports reflecting on a sub-officer, disagreeing with you?—Explanations.

17174. What is the exception you took in this particular instance?—This practice that I found fault with was an irregularity, contrary to the practice of the service. The man, I also stated, was a man that required supervision, which he was not getting; and in Mr. Hare’s reply, he says—"I am not aware how Mr. Nicolson became aware that Constable Redding was wanting in discretion and required looking after."

17175. The charge you made against the officer was that he did not keep his accounts in the way he ought to have done?—Yes.

17176. Will you read Mr. Hare’s minute—why he did it?—"With reference to the receipt from prisoner Murdoch, the W. House book at Hotham will show the prisoner was lodged there. I consider that, in a place like Donnybrook, where the C. P. Sessions only visits twice a month, and the clerk requests that the proceeds of distress warrants may be paid over to the plaintiffs, there is no objection to the constable doing so, providing he holds a receipt from the person to whom he paid the money, which was done in these cases."

17177. Up to that point was there anything in that report that you as an inspector could object to?—Not if it were absolutely necessary. To all rules there are exceptions, and when it is necessary of course I would never think of it.

17178. Would you consider, if it ended there, that that explanation would be satisfactory?—If the Chief Commissioner did not object, I would think nothing more of it; but this says “I am not aware how Mr. Nicolson became aware that Constable Redding is wanting in discretion and requires looking after.” That is what I object to, considering the nature of my report. Then Mr. Hare goes on—"He has been a long time under me, and I have not discovered it; on the contrary, I have found him a most zealous man and most anxious to do his work, and a man in whom I can place the greatest reliance.” I object to his saying that, because I am not bound to make my source of information known to anyone, and I never received a question of that sort, nor is it the habit of superintendents to make any question as to the source of information of the inspecting superintendent.

17179. The words you object to are where he says “I am not aware”—Not only that, but other comments I make with regard to this man.

17180. Mr. Hare says there he is not aware how you became possessed of the information?—Yes.

17181. Is not that a matter of opinion about the efficiency of this man, as between you, as inspector, and the superintendent, who had a personal knowledge of him for many years?—No, I had a personal knowledge also.

17182. You had only seen him there for a short time, and he had been under Mr. Hare for some time?—For a short time too.

17183. You were only there for a few hours?—Yes, but I knew the man before. I was acquainted with this man; but whether I was or not, I, being the inspecting officer of the force for many years, no officer in the service, without reference to me, would make such a remark as that, in that tone, in reference to any superior officer inspecting the district, making little of what I had written in that way.

17184. Was the inference from that remark that malice was implied?—Yes, an opposition to me which I felt in other quarters.

17185. By Mr. Hare.—Do you not think I would be neglecting my duty if I had not given my opinion to Captain Standish of a man that I had for some years?—I think it was quite right to do so.

17186. And that I said I did not know how you became aware of it?—It was not necessary for you to say so.

17187. And that he had been under me for some years and I had not discovered it—here was a man I thought an excellent one reported against by you, and I merely reported to Captain Standish?—As far as I can conceive, you had a notion that I knew nothing about the man, and represented me to that effect, and you showed such a spirit to your superior officer.

17188. I just gave my opinion of the man?—I did not object to that.

17189. Surely in the case of men serving under an officer, if the officer does not give his opinion when they are found fault with, to whom are they to look for support?—That is a plausible way of putting it.

17190. Here I have 150 men under me; a man is reported against, and the Chief Commissioner calls for my report, and I give my opinion of the man; was I wrong in that?—No, I do not say so. You were wrong in commenting on me.

17191. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—Had you a better opportunity of knowing him than Mr. Nicolson?—Most undoubtedly. Have I not the correspondence daily and weekly of this man, and the record of the duty he performed every day? I must have known whether the man was a good man or bad man.

17192. To Mr. Nicolson.—You asked Mr. Hare a question when he was under cross-examination—the Commission want to know what you meant by it. He returned from the North-Eastern district invalided, as I understand?—Yes.

17193. You asked him was he at a hunt the next day?—I did.

17194. Were you aware whether that was the case?—Yes, there was a coursing meeting going on for four days, or for several days, and during that time the weather was exceedingly bad, pouring with rain, and Mr. Hare was at the coursing meeting. That was the reason I say I did not wish to speak about anything of the kind, but I had no opportunity at that time of seeing Mr. Hare except in the evening.

17195. Was it customary with Mr. Hare to attend coursing meetings?—Up in the North-Eastern district?

C. H. Nicolson, continued.
8th Sept. 1881.

17196. At other times?—At other times. It was, very frequently.

17197. Where was that?—At Benalla, close to the township.

17198. As a matter of fact, did he keep greyhounds?—I believe he did. I do not reflect upon him for that. I might have kept them myself. I am very fond of sport and shooting, but I have never found leisure in the colony to do so. I do not think an officer of police has the time to do so, more particularly a superintendent of police. I do not know any superintendent of police about the country who has leisure for indulging in that pleasure. They have not the leisure for it.

17199. When you relieved Mr. Hare, did he show every disposition to give you every assistance?—Yes.

17200. There was no jealousy displayed till the second withdrawal—it did not show itself till then?—No; as you see from that. I have had my opinion of Mr. Hare, and so they all had.

17201. But you assisted one another?—Certainly. Up to the very last I assisted him, and when I met him I always met him courteously; but I was not intimate with Mr. Hare, and have not been for years. I was very often in the habit of meeting him. I avoided his society a good deal, I must admit that.

17202. Were you in the habit of visiting Mr. Hare’s district to report, up to the time of the Kelly capture?—I have not visited there since the period of the Redding matter. That is a matter I merely happened to come upon accidentally.

17203. Did you complain, when you went up a second time to the north-east, that you had not sufficient men in the district?—I did, in this way: Soon after I went up, the Chief Commissioner followed me up—the first visit he made to that district; when I went up he came up with a proposal to reduce the district still further, and I had a consultation with Mr. Sadleir on the subject, and we formed a resolution that we would not submit to it.

17204. But you were aware he was acting under instructions from the Government to reduce the expense?—Yes, as much as he possibly could; and, after enquiring into the matter, and seeing what we could do about concessions, and what reductions we could make, and, acting under the system I had decided upon, I resolved that I would rather withdraw from the district—that I would decline to reduce the force; but I think we did spare him one or two foot constables.

17205. And what you did complain of was that the seventy artillerymen were taken away and about twenty constables;—Yes; I do not complain about the twenty constables, because they were gone before I went there. I expect that is one of the necessities of the case; but subsequently to that he wanted to take more away, and we had the consultation I have spoken of, and I remember Captain Standish replying sharply.
17206. I see by this paper that in December 1878 they had 107 mounted troopers in that district and 74 foot constables?—Yes.

17207. That is 181 altogether?—Yes.

17208. In July your highest was, mounted constables 78, and foot constables 51; but they were higher in July when you took charge. They were then 76 mounted constables and 54 foot constables?—Yes.

17209. That is 130 as against 181?—Yes.

17210. Besides the loss of the artillery?—Yes I believe there were about 50 or 70 artillery, not 30 as stated.

17211. That was 120 taken away, and you had 130 left?—That was all.

17212. They added half the number again while Captain Standish and Mr. Hare were there?—Yes. I may say also that, with reference to the men, that even with a hundred men there are always a few men off duty through sickness. At one time we were short of six or eight, and these men left the district, and were replaced by cripples. They sent me up one man with an unset leg, a cripple for life, and two men dying from consumption, and one did die there.

17213. Sent for that special duty?—Yes.

17214. Who had the selection of those men?—They were sent up from the Richmond depot under Mr. Hare. I do not know what explanation Mr. Hare makes about the matter—perhaps he can explain—but that is the fact that on that day I left there were about six men short, on the sick list.

17215. Who was responsible for the expenditure in the district during the time the search was going on?—I consider the officer in charge was.

17216. It appears that this Kelly business cost the country something like £50,000?—I have not seen that.

17217. There is only £1,226 secret-service money, and I should like to have the particulars of that?—I would draw your attention to the return in the evidence furnished by the Accountant of the Police Department. I think a reduction was made in every outlay during the time I was there.

17218. You heard a good deal of the evidence given here about Detective Ward; do you still hold the same opinion of his efficiency in the force?—There are some things I cannot understand in the evidence with reference to Detective Ward. They have taken me considerably by surprise.

17219. What case do you specially allude to?—There was a circumstance that occurred the other day. For instance, that very matter about that telegram given in evidence yesterday, the telegram I was charged with despatching to Beechworth when I was relieving Mr. Hare. I cannot understand Detective Ward conveying the impression that the men when paid off. That telegram was addressed by me to Senior-Constable Mullane. Mullane was in charge of the police there, not Ward. Ward has expressed himself several times as wondering why that telegram was not addressed to him instead of Senior-Constable Mullane, and he did not take the trouble, he says, to see it—he did not see the telegram himself. I do not know why not, and it seemed to me he made a little mischief—that he was a little annoyed about this telegram when he came down, that it was not addressed to him on account of his having to do with the cave party. When I telegraphed to Mullane about the men in the hut, he was the proper one, and I thought Ward was actuated by a little momentary jealousy.

17220. Is there any other circumstance that you allude to as to Detective Ward?—I am not satisfied with his evidence about the hut.

17221. In what respect?—I cannot understand the evidence given about the contradiction between him and the constables, as to his having told them to state what was untrue to Mr. Hare.

17222. What was your object in relieving the men from your hut?—I put the men there only on the Saturday previous until I could bring up the black trackers and a few mounted men to act upon the information that Mrs. Sherritt had given me the day before, she having seen Byrne, and I ordered Mullane to station the men there in the meantime. I came back on the Monday morning, and searched along the side of the hill, and we found out that it was Joe Byrne’s young brother and a cow. I sent word to send the men back by Aaron Sherritt.

17223. Did you give Mr. Hare this information?—No; I did not see him until the following Tuesday.

17224. There is that portion of the constable’s evidence about the cave party; there is the evidence of several constables that those reports were written at the dictation of Detective Ward in that matter; do you remember the instructions you gave?—My instructions are in writing, and were simple. I saw them amongst the papers some time ago in writing—[examining some papers]. Any verbal instructions I gave to him were simply this, that I would desire a report. This is my letter, dated 31st March 1880:—"The special watch party which have been doing duty in the neighborhood of Beechworth for some months past will be carefully and secretly withdrawn, leaving no traces behind them, if possible, and will be disposed of as follow for the present:—Mounted-Constable Alexander, 1649 (sr.), will do duty in Beechworth. 2. Mounted-Constables Barry, Hagger, Faulkner, and Guide Canny will be forwarded to Benalla singly, their arms accompanying one of them as luggage; Mounted-Constable Dixon to Wangaratta; Foot-Constable Armstrong to Wahgunyah. 3. I will be glad to have reports from Detective Ward and Senior-Constable Mullane as to the spirit or disposition displayed by the above-named constables in the performance of the important duty referred to.—C. H. NICOLSON, A.C.P.” “Since writing the within, intelligence has been received of Mounted-Constable Blade’s accident. Constable Barry, within-mentioned, will proceed to Myrtleford for the present, but if he prefers Benalla, I will soon be prepared to transfer him here. The secrecy about the duty at Sebastopol will still be preserved, especially as it may have to be renewed again.—C. H. NICOLSON, A.C.P., 31/3/80. To Senior-Constable Mullane, in charge, Beechworth.”

17225. Did Ward lead you to believe, up to the time of your withdrawing that party, that it was a profound secret to anyone?—Yes.

17226. You remember the evidence of Falkiner and Barry, who swear they sent in a report in the first instance to Detective Ward, stating that they believed their presence was known long before?—Yes, I remember that.

17227. Do you remember that they brought evidence to prove that they had sent in that report that Detective Ward instructed them to send to you?—Yes.

17228. Were they asked to report about the secrecy of the party?—No.

17229. Would it be right or wrong for a man in the position of Detective Ward, after receiving that report from those constables, to order them to take them back?—It depends. A non-commissioned officer has very often to return reports if they are not to the point; the men are sometimes obtuse, and do not understand what he wants; in that case he has to do so.

17230. He did not ask for a report about the secrecy of the cave at all?—Yes.

17231. Do you think he was justified in sending that report back about the secrecy of the cave business at all?—I do not know that. I think that he was wrong in what he did, but he should have sent forward the reports to give me some intimation.

17232. There was no justification for his returning them without your knowledge?—No.

17233. If he, after receiving those reports and sending them back for amendment, sent the amended reports to you, in which it was carefully excluded that it was known in the cave, and if he reported after that that it was not known in the cave, what do you say to such conduct?—Decidedly, if any man stated falsely he would be to blame. My impression still about the constables is that they were mistaken.

17234. That they gave it as an opinion?—Yes.

17235. You have read Detective Ward’s report of the 3rd April—[inserted above]?—Yes.

17236. And he had their reports in his hands on the 2nd April, stating that they believed it was well known they were in the cave; what do you think of that?—I think he was very wrong in not sending me those reports. He might have sent me the amended reports too. I dare say he had a good deal of trouble up there with the men latterly, having been so long up there; and perhaps they were a little fanciful, and imagined that the place was known when they were mistaken. For instance, they stated they had seen girls there with the men latterly, having been so long up there; and perhaps they were a little fanciful, and imagined that the place was known when they were mistaken. For instance, they stated they had seen girls going from the Sherritt’s house to Byrne’s. Now, the fact is, the people were sent by my knowledge, and therefore Detective Ward believed the men were wrong.

17237. But here is the point. Here is Mullane’s memorandum—“I have called on Constable Falkiner for a report whether it has come to his knowledge that the outlaws’ friends are aware of this party of police camped in the Strathbogie ranges.” On the 2nd April Constable Falkiner says, “I respectfully report, for the information of the Assistant Commissioner of Police, that it would be impossible to say that this secret duty has been carried out unknown to the outlaws’ friends, as persons who are well aware of this party of police camped in the bush are continually visiting Mrs. Byrne’s place, and sleeping there; and, from what has come under my notice, this duty must be well known to the outlaws’ friends”—Those were the Sherritts, and they were sent there by Detective Ward.

17238. You thought it wise to express your opinion on some of the evidence given by Detective Ward, and you are now asked on this particular matter—do you think it was right of Detective Ward to suppress that first report from Constable Falkiner, and not make you aware of it?—No. I think it would have been very much better for him to have done so, and it was necessary for myself to know anything of the kind.

17239. As a matter of fact was it not previous to that that you had received information from Captain Standish that the presence of the cave party was known at the depot?—No, that was at the withdrawal of the cave party. I heard from Captain Standish within a week after the cave party was established.

17240. Then was it right on Detective Ward’s part, on the 2nd of April, to withhold from you the report of the constable who believed their presence was known?—I say it was wrong.

17241. Was not it misleading to you in the impression you had then formed?—It was. But then, in justice to Detective Ward, I feel bound to say that he may have considered that those men were mistaken under the circumstances.

17242. As a matter of fact, did Detective Ward ever acquaint you of those constables ever having sent in those first reports?—No, never; I was taken by surprise when the reports came in.

POLICE.
report?—No, none.
17244. Then Detective Ward was guilty of an absolute violation of duty in preventing those reports being forwarded?—He was; but it is very frequently the case, in the city and elsewhere, that if a constable is ordered to make a report, and he misunderstands and writes what is not wanted, the officer gives it him back and lets him make another, and does not make the first known; but, of course, that is not with the view of suppressing anything.
17245. On Detective Ward’s general character one witness spoke—did you have any complaints made to you as to any misconduct on his part in that way?—No, I think not. I think that was Wallace’s attack on Detective Ward, and I know he was always speaking against Detective Ward. I knew what kind of man Wallace was. I can read all those men, and I knew what he meant by his attacks on Detective Ward.
17246. As far as you know, there was no justification for it?—No. Detective Ward was a most hard-working sober steady man, and he was a most valuable man in this way, that he could find any person I wanted in that part of the country of whatever description. He would bring him on the very shortest notice.
17247. You remember the statement made by John Sherritt, that Mrs. Nicolson had gone up to Beechworth with a view of injuring his character; and you interjected that Mrs. Nicolson had been in Beechworth, but not for that purpose, and that it was not true?—Yes.
17248. Since then we have received these letters from John Sherritt, senior:—“September 3rd 1881; Sheep Station Creek. Mr. Longmore, Chairman and gentleman of the Royal Commission of the Police Enquiry Board. Sir,—After reading, in one of the Melbourne papers, Mr. Nicolson’s statement that it was not true that his wife (Mrs. Nicolson) came to Beechworth to blast my son, John Sherritt’s character. When my son was before the Commission, giving evidence, I went to Beechworth to get a few gentlemen to sign a petition in favor of my son, which I forwarded to Melbourne. On the day that I went to Beechworth there was an election of shire councillors. Some of the gentlemen that I wanted to see were at the elections. The first gentleman that I went to was a J.P. I asked him to sign for my son John, He replied by saying, ‘Why, I am just after refusing to sign a paper for Mrs. Nicolson; I told her that I had nothing to say against any of the Sherritt family, and I won’t interfere on either side.’ He told me this in confidence. I promised not to mention his name; at the same time, if Mr. Nicolson insists in the lie, I shall tell the gentleman’s name, he told me that he and her son came up from Melbourne to him, and he would have nothing to do in the matter. On the same day I went to Mr. Dodd, of Beechworth, another J.P. He brought me into his office, and told me that there was a man came to him and wanted him to sign that my son was a rogue; he said he would not sign. I asked Mr. Dodd the person’s name; he did not tell me. He said he lived outside of Beechworth. I believe if the gentlemen of the Commission took the trouble to write to Mr. Dodd, I think that he would tell them his name, as I think, to the best of my belief he was acting for Mr. Nicolson. —John Sherritt, senr. I solemnly swear, before any magistrate or J.P., that the contents of this is true.—John Sherritt, senr. In my presence John Sherritt has sworn to the truth of the statements made in this document, that the above is his signature.—Henry T. Fox, J.P. Beechworth, Sept. 23rd 1881.”—There is also the following letter from John Sherritt, junior:—“Melbourne, Sep. 6th 1881. To the Honorable Francis Longmore, M.P., Chairman Police Royal Commission. Honorable sir,—I see in the paper at your last sittings that Mr. Nicolson denied that his wife had anything to do with regard to my character in Beechworth. I am prepared to bring evidence forward that she did her best to damage my character. I was told in Melbourne, by one of the gentlemen that she went to to enquire what kind of a character I was. He says he told her that he knew nothing against me and also that he would have nothing to do on either side. His name is Mr. Crawford, J.P. Your most obedient servant, John Sherritt.”—Do you still adhere to that statement?—Yes, decidedly. Mrs. Nicolson, after that statement of Sherritt’s, insisted upon going up to a lady friend of hers up there, the wife of the person named in that letter, to see if there was any truth in it—if there were any grounds for such a thing; and she stayed there until she returned the following day; and her enquiry was on that point, to ascertain if Sherritt’s statement, about my not taking action on his giving information, and any other information, was true.
17249. What could Mrs. Crawford tell on that subject?—She did not expect her to tell anything about that, but others could. Mrs. Nicolson is not far off, and can come in and explain the whole without reserve.
17250. That is the declaration from old Sherritt?—I do not care for twenty declarations from him. There is no truth in the statement about the petition.
17251. Do you know the Mr. Dodd, J.P., mentioned here?—No, not personally.
The Chairman stated that the Commission would require a declaration from Mrs. Nicolson and from the gentleman mentioned in the Sherritt’s letters.
17252. By Mr. Hare (to Mr. Nicolson).—My going out coursing was referred to. Was I not on leave for three or four days?—Yes.
17253. I was on leave at the time?—Yes.
17254. And I had been up there seven months doing work, and was entitled to leave?—Yes.
17255. Do you think there was any harm my going to the coursing meeting?—No.
17256. Was there any regulation in the force about keeping dogs?—I am not aware if there was, but I thought it was high time there was. I know a constable in your district, stationed in Melbourne, was secretary to a coursing club.
17257. Not when he was under me?—You yourself related it to me.
17258. He was not under me. But do you think there is any harm in a constable or an officer keeping a dog any more than keeping a cat?—No.
17259. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—There have been enquiries about the police force several times, and the great charges brought against them were that they were cock-fighters and rat-pitters and all such like, and that the force was demoralized through the superintendents being engaged in those pursuits?—
But there is nothing to show I had been. Surely attending a coursing meeting and keeping a hound does not make me a courser.

17260. By Mr. Hare (to Mr. Nicolson).—You have referred to a report on the inspection of my district, and you complained about the tone in which I replied to it?—Yes.

17261. You inspected Mr. Winch’s district in July 1876, did you not?—I inspected his district about that time, no doubt.

17262. Is that your report upon Mr. Winch’s district—[handing a paper to the witness]?—[Examining the same]—Yes, that is my report.

17263. It has been forwarded to Captain Standish, and you see it is referred to Mr. Winch?—Yes.

17264. Can you see any remarks of Mr. Winch’s; has he taken the slightest notice of your report there, or made any expression whatever upon a single remark you have made upon his district?—No, there is none here.

17265. To the Commission.—Mr. Winch told me Mr. Nicolson’s report was such infernal bosh that Captain Standish told him there was no necessity to report upon it.

17266. To the witness.—Do you see any remark upon that file there that shows Mr. Winch took the slightest notice of your report?—I do not see any.

17267. Here is some correspondence attached to it?—I never saw this before.

17268. Will you read that?—My report is dated 22nd July 1876.

17269. Read that telegram?—“Sept. 2, 1881—Mr. Nicolson inspected Melbourne district in 1876. Have you any papers; if not, please give reference to their return here. This is urgent.”

17270. The papers were forwarded on that, and Mr. Chomley says, “The files referred to were referred to Mr.
Winch for report. May I ask why he did not report on them; and will he be so good as to say if there are in his office any other such files that should be returned to this office.” To that Mr. Winch replies: (3.9.81.) “I was directed verbally by the late Chief Commissioner (Capt. Standish) not to report upon the files referred to. He said he did not think it necessary. I then put the papers into my office press, and thought nothing about them since. I should certainly have returned them to the Chief Commissioner’s office. I do not think there are any other such files in my office. I will have a search, and if there are will return them.” Perhaps Captain Standish can explain.

17271. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—Mr. Nicolson cannot say anything about that?—I am only pointing out to you that there is no notice taken of his report, whatever, in that case.

17272. By Mr. Nicolson.—There are various ways of dealing with the reports. (To Mr. Hare)—What does that prove?—That Mr. Winch took not the slightest notice of your report. In my case, I answered it, and made use of an expression that has been called by you a point of insubordination.

17273. By the Commission (to Mr. Hare).—This shows simply that Captain Standish told him not to report?—Mr. Winch was told to report, and he takes no notice of it.

17274. On this being referred to, after the lapse of a considerable time, Mr. Winch, in writing, states that he was instructed verbally by the Chief Commissioner not to do it. That is a most extraordinary proceeding, certainly, when he had instructions in writing to report, that he should permit a verbal instruction to override the other?—Well, there it is, that is the evidence of his neglect. I mention that to show that I am not singular. But yo when he had instructions in writing to report, that he should permit a verbal instruction to override the other?
was instructed verbally by the Chief Commissioner not to do it. That is a most ext 17275. By the Commission.—What position do you hold in the police force?—I am a first-class inspector, stationed now at Horsham as the sub-officer of the Wimmera district.

17276. Where were you stationed during the Kelly pursuit?—In half-a-dozen places.

17277. Were you stationed at Wangaratta at the time of the outbreak?—No; I was not in charge of a district at all.

17278. What were you doing in October 1878?—I was occupying the same position in that North Eastern district that I do now in the Horsham district; that is, inspecting officer.

17279. How long had you been stationed in the North-Eastern district before that?—On and off for about the last twenty-four years.

17280. Have you read Senior-Constable Johnson’s evidence?—I have.

17281. If you have a reply to make as to the statements concerning yourself you had better do so now in your own way?—The reflections appear to amount to this, as far as I can judge—that I was not there immediately when I was required; that is what they state. Now I had been so much worked for several days before that that I was simply overdone.

C. H. Nicolson, ed. 8th Sept. 1881.

17283. Exhausted from fatigue?—I was utterly fatigued; I had crossed the Buffalo twice in high flood, and I cannot swim, and I had to go across on a horse with a sergeant and six men. On a certain date (I cannot state exactly when, because I did not keep any books at all at the time—I thought it was too dangerous), I was directed by the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Nicolson, to proceed to Yarrawonga, and from thence to proceed to make further enquiries; in fact it was what was called a search party, only we were not prepared with things to assist us in the way of food; we had nothing of that sort, we had to stay where we could get it, hotels or anywhere else. I went there with a party in which Senior Constable Johnson was next to me; he was a senior constable then. I put him in charge of the party, and from there on the following day I went to Lake Rowan. There I met the party that Mr. Nicolson had despatched, under charge of first-class Detective Kennedy, now sub-inspector at Ballarat. After speaking with him I directed that he should take one side of the Glenrowan ranges and I should take the other.

On taking the left-hand side of the Glenrowan ranges the men acting under me—that was Johnson’s party—came across the tracks of four horses.

17284. What date was that?—I cannot give the exact dates. We went on then towards the direction, apparently making for Wangaratta. We lost the tracks a little, and I went into Wangaratta to inform the acting officers there.

17285. How far were you from Wangaratta at that time?—Six or seven miles. I saw Mr. Nicolson on that evening, and he directed that a party should go out the following day. The party did go out without myself, and I believe found a horse, one of the horses stolen from the police in the Mansfield district. I have not got the dates with me, but I believe it was on the following day that I again joined the party. I was shown by Constable Johnson a certain place on the top of the Glenrowan ranges, near where they had discovered the horse. I went on with the party to a station called Taminick, Newcomen’s. The tracks were traced within about a mile, or perhaps less than about a mile of that place, and then they turned to the left, and ceased four tracks, and got into two. I then, on the following morning, with the party, went to Glenrowan, and endeavored to follow up those tracks. That was the most likely way of getting hold of the persons who were being followed. I am not sure who they were. I cannot tell that. We did no know who they were.

17286. Had you reason to doubt that they were the outlaws?—I am perfectly certain they were, but I did not know it; I could not swear it; and then, after following the tracks to the neighbourhood of Glenrowan (we had got hold of them again a bit through some black trackers), I went back to Wangaratta and reported what had been done to Mr. Nicolson. Mr. Nicolson was very anxious I should go out again almost immediately, but I was very tired, and he was good enough to wait on me himself, and we started a morning or two after. I have not got the dates.

17287. Who?—Mr. Nicolson, Superintendent Sadleir, and one or two men whose names I do not remember—about nineteen of us in the party altogether, as far as I recollect. We went back to this spot with the black trackers.

17288. Then that would be about the third day?—The fourth day—that was in the hands of Mr Nicolson; I had no command then, my command ceased.

17289. Senior Constable Johnson was examined here, and he said he was one of your party?—That was one party.

17290. One that he was with from Wangaratta to Yarrawonga, on the 6th November 1878?—I will admit the date; I do not remember dates.

17291. And he says, “We heard nothing till the morning of the 8th.” When did you get notice that the supposed band of outlaws had passed under the bridge: how long before that?—There was a constable named Walsh—I have heard it stated by Steele that he had sent a message to me, but what I recollect of this is that Constable Patrick Walsh came to me, and informed me that they had been heard crossing the bridge—for four persons on horseback; he did not say who they were.

17292. How long was that before you went out?—The same morning, I think; but I did not put any trust in the matter at all.

17293. Did you go out the same day?—Oh, no; there were no police at Wangaratta at that time. There was one, I think, that was all.

17294. How long did you hear of the supposed outlaws before you went out?—Only a very short time.

17295. How long?—I cannot tell exactly, it is two years and a half ago.

17296. Was it more than a day?—No.

17297. Do you remember Sergeant Steele being in Wangaratta, on his way to Rats’ Castle?—Steele was in charge at Wangaratta at this time.

17298. Do you remember his being in Wangaratta under orders to go to Rats’ Castle with a number of men?—I never heard of it.

17299. Did you receive information from Steele of the appearance of four men?—I have no recollection of that.

17300. Before you went with Johnson had you information that a party had crossed under the bridge, supposed to be the outlaws?—No.

17301. You have accepted the 6th as the date. Had you any information from any source that a number of men, supposed to be the outlaws, had passed under the railway bridge prior to that morning?—The only person I ever received a information about it from was Constable Walsh, and he said he believed they had gone across; and from enquiries I made I did not believe they had.

17302. If Steele says he sent you information on the 3rd or 4th November that a party of men supposed to be the outlaws had passed under the bridge, would his statement be correct or otherwise?—How could he send me information?

17303. If he states so, would it be correct or otherwise?—All I can say is that this is the first time I ever heard of it, except when I saw it in print. I was not in charge of Wangaratta at that time.

17304. Was Steele in Wangaratta that day?—I cannot tell.

17305. How long were you in Wangaratta before you went out on that search party?—I think would be three or four days.

17306. Did Steele give you any information upon the supposed appearance of the outlaws near Wangaratta on the 3rd or 4th November?—I have not the slightest recollection of it. I never received any communication of the sort from him, either written or verbal.

17307. Do you think the statement is correct?—I do not think so. I have no reason to think it is. I especially wish to mention about Constable Patrick Walsh, to give him the credit for what he did. He came to my rooms and told me what he had heard. He came and said that he had learned from an old woman, living near the bridge that four mounted men had crossed, and he thought it was the outlaws; and when I sent him back I said, “Go and find out who it is and what it is,” and they could not tell which way they went over the bridge.

17308. Did you go afterwards to see this old woman?—No, indeed I did not; I should want something more than that to go.

17309. This is a telegram from you, on the 4th November 1878, to Superintendent Sadleir, from Wangaratta, “I can neither verify nor controvert Delany’s statement (that is the old woman) after further enquiry. They are respectable people, easily frightened. Have ascertained from a friend, who crossed Mulwalla punt yesterday to Yarrawonga, that four New South Wales constables are actively patrolling banks of Murray, near punt; also, that although crossings might be made higher up by fishermen’s boats, lagoons and creeks on other side so bad, no escape could be made that way, so that Warby ranges could be the only resort for hiding, perhaps on to Ryan’s at Lake Rowan,” [The Witness—It has come true.] “No horses reported missing. Constables Hayes and Twomey on Thom’s horse are awaiting duty with me when ordered; but such party is too small, and is not well armed, the sight off only Spencer rifle. Constables Davison and Healy misconducted themselves so much on my search party I would never take either again, as it would be risking other men’s lives. Send rifles and ammunition, if you can spare such. Weather increasingly worse. Floods rising.” That is the 4th, at 5:40 p.m.?—I have not got a copy of the telegram, and have not seen it since it was sent.

17310. Then at 10:50 p.m. the same day, “A youth, Delany, states his mother called him up at 4 a.m. yesterday morning to see if his horse was being taken away. He looked out and saw four mounted men with hobbles, one saddler driving several horses at a rapid pace through One-mile Creek, towards Pechelba road. No description can be given; may have gone to Warby ranges”?

17311. Did you receive information from Steele of the appearance of four men?—I have no recollection of that.

17312. Johnson says a party was sent out after the supposed outlaws, in charge of Mr. Brooke Smith:—“Do you remember the time when it was supposed the Kellys had passed Wangaratta, and a party was sent out after them in charge of Mr. Brooke Smith?—I do.” Where did Walsh come from to give you that information?—He walked across from the police station to where I slept.

17313. Did he tell you who gave him the information?—Yes; he said a person living near the bridge.

17314. What was the name of that person?—That I could not tell—I do not know. When I sent back to enquire as to who the person was, the reply was that they could not tell whether they crossed this way or that way, and when I made an examination about those four mounted men passing this hut (I cannot remember the name of the person, but I could point out the very spot) they could not tell how or who it was, and the outlaws were all known to the persons living in that very house.

17315. Suppose they passed during the night?—During the morning was what was said.
17316. During daylight?—I went down and looked at the place, and they never passed there at all.
17317. Were there no marks visible?—Not the slightest sign.
17318. Did you search for them?—I did. I went to the spot—it was almost swimmable.
17319. Was the ledge under the bridge they were supposed to have gone across under water?—It was swimmable.
17320. That is the river under the bridge?—There was no river—it was a creek; there was not a mark of any kind.
17321. Could a party cross that without having to swim? We have it in evidence that there was a ledge on one side, known apparently to a few, which, by careful walking, they could get along without swimming—do you know anything of that?—I must say I do not know that—it is the first time I ever heard of it.

17322. I may inform you that in the matter—hunting for such desperate characters as those outlaws—there are charges of great remissness laid against you by Senior-Constable Johnson and Sergeant Steele; did Walsh give the information from Steele?—I do not know that. The only thing I remember was Walsh came to me on this particular occasion, and that was the only occasion I received any information, and at that time there was one single constable on the station.

17323. Did a constable named Twooney give you any information?—I have not the least recollection of it; he might bring it to my recollection. I do not think it. That is all I can say.
17324. At question No. 12404 Johnson says, “We found the pack-horse B87”?—Yes. Was it Kennedy’s pack-horse?—It was. Was he the one with the white legs?—No. What did you do with the horse?—Left him there until it was dark and took him down. My intention was to put him in the paddock, and leave him there until I sent one of the men in for provisions to Wangaratta, so if we went further on we could remain at night. To keep on the tracks?—Yes, at the foot of the range, to pick up the tracks immediately the next morning. Did you do that?—No, we met Mr. Brooke Smith. It was just getting dusk. Was this the first time you saw him after seven o’clock, when he ordered you to take the men?—Yes. What did he do?—He rode up and gave the order—’Halt; form up. Any applications or complaint?’ Did you form up in line?—Yes. Were there any?—I said there were none that I was aware of. I said we had got one of the horses that were taken from the police. He said, ‘Who found it?’ I said, ‘The party was all together when we got the horse in the ranges.’ He said, ‘Right; proceed to Wangaratta.’” 17325. And you went to Wangaratta that night?—That afternoon. There was nothing of that kind about drawing up in line, or about applications or complaints; that only relates to stations and not to active service; that is never done; that is a mistake, a mis-recollection.

17326. He says, “We had the trackers then; we got the trackers the previous day. Is that all Mr. Nicolson said?—He had some conversation with Mr. Smith. Did you hear it?—Some of it. I heard Mr. Smith say to him, ‘If we get on to the outlaws what are we to do?’ He said, ‘My men will shoot them.’ Mr. Nicolson told him to obey the orders he had given him to proceed the first thing in the morning and follow the tracks on.”—He did. I was not aware of it; I heard afterwards he did.
17327. Then he says, “We did not leave Wangaratta till after nine. What was the reason of the delay?”—Waiting for Mr. Brooke Smith. Where was he?—He was in bed. Do you mean to say he would not get up?—I called him at four. Did you call him again?—I called him about six. Did you call him again?—No. Was he ill?—I am not aware of it. Was he fit for duty?—I do not know. What do you think?—It is hard to form an opinion. He was in bed. Did he get up at nine?—I saw him about half-past eight.” Is that so, that the party were detained so long, although they were on the tracks, before they could get out from Wangaratta that morning?—I do not think that Johnson’s recollection is very good, but I must give him the greatest credit from the time he followed those tracks after he struck them; he and a young man named Dixon, who I joined on to the party—those two ran those tracks splendidly; no black trackers could beat it. They ran them right away close on to the Orangery there and round the ranges, until they lost them in a large sheep-fold and could not trace them again, and even the following day they picked them up. I cannot speak about the date, the books are not here.

17328. “How far did you get on the tracks that night beyond where you had been on them the night before?”—On the Taminick station—about 15 or 20 miles.” Before we go any further, we want to know if you can remember what was the cause of your delay in Wangaratta till nine o’clock?—Simply being utterly tired and wet—wet through that day that I came back (if you refer to that telegram). I had been wet through for nearly forty-eight hours before I wrote that. I came in and I had to start off that very Yarrawonga journey you are speaking of.

17329. But this was written on the 4th?—On the 4th I started to Yarrawonga. It must have been before I got dry I started.

17330. It cannot be so according to Mr. Nicolson’s statement?—I have not seen that.

17331. And Johnson says you started on the 6th?—That is another one altogether—a different trip altogether—that is after I came back from Yarrawonga, after I had come through Lake Rowan; after I had despatched Kennedy from Lake Rowan I came back, and then I had to go out again. I left my station, Beechworth, on the last day of October, and got a party together without permission (Mr. Nicolson had not then arrived), and I started up to Merriang, and then from there went across the Black Hill, and from there came down to Yarrawonga. It cannot be as you state.

17332. You remember the constable telling you that this woman had made a statement to him about the people upon the bridge?—Yes.

17333. You sent a telegram on the 4th to Mr. Sadleir stating you could verify that information?—That is another matter altogether.

17334. It is the same woman’s name, Delaney; was not that the name of the woman living at the bridge?—No, another party altogether.

17335. The constable did come to you?—I admit Walsh came to me.

17336. Did Twomey come to you?—I do not remember that. He might be able to bring it to my mind.

17337. What were you doing on the day before. You went out with Johnson on the 6th?—Staying at home.

17338. But the day before that. You must have been there on the 4th?—The books will tell. I cannot tell. We had no police there, I believe.

17339. There is a long telegram from you on the 4th, so you must have been in Wangaratta on the 4th?—I would like to see the question as to how this arose.

17340. I want to know what you were doing all those days. You were so hard pushed before the 6th—reading the telegram again?—That is very straightforward.

17341. The point is where you were the day before?—I cannot remember that. I know I had not a party on that occasion.

17342. If it was proved that you were in Wangaratta on the 3rd, and not out on a search party, would that show that your memory is defective?—My memory is not defective. The occurrence book would show. I do not think my memory is defective. The object of the occurrence book is to prevent persons being defective, and if you send for that book you will find whether I was there or not.

17343. You had this evidence sent to you?—Yes.

17344. You have had time to digest it, and all the incidents referred to in it you could have compared with the occurrence book?—No, I would not dare to send for the occurrence book. It would take you to send for that.

17345. Where is it?—Up in Wangaratta.

17346. The book would be available?—Yes, but I do not think there is anything the matter. I tell you exactly what I know, and that is very little, and I do not believe I was there three days or two days before.

17347. You said you were so much knocked up in consequence of great fatigue; now the gravamen of the charge is that on the 6th you went out with a search party with Johnson, and you came on tracks, and at the very moment, in the opinion of those who looked at the tracks, instead of going out, you returned to Wangaratta; and the party were ready the next morning, and you delayed them till very late?—And Johnson recovered the horse.

17348. We want you to answer those charges. Did you, as the officer in charge of that party, show negligence in not availing yourself of the information you had on that occasion. You have had the evidence before you, and you came prepared to answer the charge?—I deny the matter altogether—I deny the greater portion.

17349. Do you deny that you ordered the party to be ready at four o’clock in the morning after you returned?—I cannot tell you what occurred at that time. All I can say is this, that, as a matter of fact, I put persons on those tracks, and they went and followed them.

17350. We know that, but the charge is this: that you were in charge of this party, and they discovered the tracks—?—I was not in charge of that party.

17351. Who was in charge of Johnson’s party?—There was no special officer appointed to any party whatever. You appear to know more than I do. There were two parties had charge of that party besides myself. There were Kennedy and Johnson, and I got instructions to divide them, and I did so.

17352. When you started from Wangaratta who was the senior officer in that party?—I was, by instructions.

17353. Were not Johnson and Dixon amenable to your instructions?—As long as Johnson and Dixon and those other persons remained they were under my instructions.

17354. You were the senior officer in charge of the party leaving Wangaratta on the 6th—is that so or not?—I cannot tell you for a certainty.
17355. Who was senior to you in that party at Wangaratta?—Mr. Nicolson.
17356. He was not there. You went out on the 6th with a number of men—who was the senior officer?—I do not understand your question.
17357. Now say there were ten or fourteen men went out on the 6th?—Twenty-two.
17358. Out of that number who was the senior officer?—I was the man who left the station.
17359. If any of those men had disobeyed any instructions you gave, would you have considered it in contravention of the rules of the police service. If you had told Johnson to do something, and he said he would not, would it have been a disobedience on the part of a subordinate to a superior?—Yes.
17360. Can you account for the delay in returning to Wangaratta next morning when you instructed Johnson to have his men ready at four o’clock in the morning?—I do not remember it.
17361. Do you deny it?—I will not deny anything at all that I cannot remember till I get the books.
17362. When you returned from the journey were you ordered back to Beechworth by Mr. Nicolson?—I heard that statement. The orders I got were from Mr. Sadleir to go back and prosecute three cases at Beechworth, and I went back and prosecuted. Unfortunately for me, any evidence I want to bring forward has departed. Mr. Hunt, of the Argus, came out that time with me, and he has gone away.
17363. Did you keep a note-book?—No, I objected. I said to Mr. Nicolson I wished he would not do it, because I said the outlaws might get hold of it.
17364. Were the particulars of that search party published in the Argus at the time?—Really I do not remember. I knew Mr. Hunt was with me all the time. I have no object in recollecting anything of that kind.
17365. If you get the occurrence book you will have no difficulty in being able to account for your proceedings?—I cannot say for a positive fact—I am on oath—that it is in there; it should be there.
17366. If it is not there it is a neglect of duty?—Yes, and not on my part either.
17367. Mr. Hare.—The entries referred to will be found on the sheets which are periodically sent to the office.—[The same were sent for and handed to the witness.]
17368. By the Commission (to the witness).—You have seen the sheets; now can you say how many days you were in Wangaratta?—Two days and a half, the week ending 9th November 1878.
17369. By the sheet where were you on the 1st?—I see it is marked here that I was at Wangaratta on the 1st and 2nd.
17370. Look at that sheet; where were you on the 3rd November?—The 3rd is Sunday. I was at home.
17371. The 4th?—Wangaratta on the 4th and 5th, and left Wangaratta on the 6th at mid-day.
17372. Can you remember where you were on the 28th and 29th of October?—Travelling between Merriang, across the Buffalo, over Black Hill, and down through the King River. I cannot swear to this statement, as I kept no record of them except what I just remember.
17373. Do you remember when you first heard of the police murders at the Wombat?—A man named Senior-Constable James brought a telegram down to my rooms that I lived in, in Beechworth, and gave the particulars of them—that I can recollect distinctly.
17374. As the murders took place on the 26th October, and you were at that place on the 28th and 29th, and you were in Wangaratta from the 1st to the 6th, you could not have been prior to the 6th on any search party in the direction of Yarrawonga. Is it possible for you to have been there between those dates?—Certainly. I was continually on search parties.
17375. How could you be on a search party when you were every day in Wangaratta?—All that I can say is that I went down to Wangaratta then, and I gathered a party then and there and started. I think I telegraphed to Mr. Sadleir from the Merriang, across Black Hill, to Beechworth, and from there across the Black Hill. When I got to Merriang I received a communication from Mr. Nicolson, saying he was in charge of the district.
17376. Was it possible for you to have been with any search party beyond what you have described on the 28th and 29th, between that time and the 6th?—Yes, certainly.
17377. Where?—On the road to Yarrawonga, I believe.
17378. Did you go to Yarrawonga before the 6th of November?—I cannot say that.
17379. Was it possible for you to have gone before the 6th when you were every day in Wangaratta according to the record sheets?—I did not see that in the record sheets at all.
17380. You admitted you were there on the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th, and left on the 6th?—I do not think so; they speak for themselves.
17381. That is what the sheets show. You have seen them, and admitted that on certain days you must have been in Wangaratta—now was it not on or after the 6th that you went with the search party to Yarrawonga?—As far as I recollect it was not, it was earlier. As soon as ever I returned from Oxley, wet through, I was going to my room, and I stopped in my room, but I was sent for, and was sent to Yarrawonga.
17382. The evidence of Johnson is that on the 6th November you started in charge of a party from Wangaratta to go to Yarrawonga stated also that the reason you did not resume duty earlier in the morning after you returned to Wangaratta was in consequence of the very severe fatigue you had suffered for a few days prior?—Yes.
17383. Was it possible you were suffering from severe fatigue when you had been in Wangaratta five days and a half doing ordinary duty?—I was not.
17384. You have admitted it?—I do not admit anything. The documents are there. You must remember all this time there was a superior officer over me.
17385. That is not the point. You excuse yourself in consequence of severe fatigue?—I do not think I have to excuse myself in the least degree.

17386. You said the reason you did not start with your party at four o'clock in the morning was in consequence of your being knocked up because you had undergone severe fatigue just before?—That is quite true.

17387. Then I ask whether that is likely, seeing you were in Wangaratta for five days and a half before you started with Johnson?—It was not five days and a half before.

17388. How many days were you?—Two days and a half.

17389. Look at the record sheets?—I cannot help that. I did not sign it. I simply tell you a positive fact—that my evidence is as straightforward as it possibly can be.

17390. You said the sheets would show. Are you prepared to say you were not there those days?—I am not prepared to say that, and I do not think it is a fair question to ask me.

17391. Not after seeing the record sheets?—No.

17392. We want you to give the reason how this fatigue was a justifiable excuse. Have you any reason to doubt the correctness of the records that have been produced?—I have not seen them before. I think it is improbable that there would be anything incorrect.

17393. Might they not be taken as infallible evidence?—I believe they are perfectly true.

17394. You said if you had the record sheet that you could tell exactly where you were on certain days?—I believe it would.

17395. Now the record sheets point to the fact that you were five days in Wangaratta before the 6th?—Yes.

17396. That being so, do we understand that those record sheets are true?—I have no reason to doubt them, but I am perfectly certain I was not five days in Wangaratta.

17397. In the record it says your horse was kept in the stable on those five days. Do you say you will be bound by the occurrence book kept at Wangaratta?—I have not the least objection to do that.

17398. Do you believe these are correct copies of the book kept at Wangaratta?—I do, indeed, believe it. I cannot conceive it possible that the men could make a mistake.

17399. You will accept them then?—I cannot say that. I will find out where I was on those days.

17400. How can you find out?—Only by endeavoring to recollect. I think I could almost draw out the whole. It will be well for you to look over this statement of Johnson’s, and be well prepared with replies tomorrow morning. We will postpone your examination till eleven o’clock to-morrow morning.

The witness withdrew.

Michael Twomey sworn and examined.

17401. By the Commission.—What are you?—Constable.

17402. Do you remember Sergeant Steele passing through Wangaratta in the beginning of September 1878?—Yes, on the night of the 3rd November 1878.

17403. Did he make any statement to you with reference to the Kellys?—On the arrival of the special train at Wangaratta I called Sergeant Steele out of the van, where he was in company with other mounted men. I told him I had reliable information that the Kelly gang had passed—that is, four young men riding four horses, two pack-horses in front with two heavy packs on each horse, and four others running bare-back in front of them; but the informant could not state whether the four horses running in front belonged to the party, as there had been horses running on the common there.

17404. You informed him about that?—Yes, I gave the information as I received it.

17405. What did he do on that?—He referred me to Inspector Smith, who was in charge at Wangaratta, and Sergeant Steele said he was instructed to proceed to Beechworth.

17406. Did you inform Mr. Smith on that occasion?—Yes. And previous to that I went into the van, seeing Constable James and about fourteen constables in the van at the time, and I informed James and the party of men before I went to Mr. Brooke Smith, after telling Sergeant Steele on the platform when he was inclined to take no steps, thinking they would take some steps.

17407. What time was that?—About a quarter past twelve on the morning of the 4th November 1878, a little after midnight—no, a quarter to one.

17408. What time did you inform Mr. Brooke Smith?—About two o’clock on the morning of the 4th.

17409. Where did you inform him?—He was in bed.

17410. Did he seem fully to realize the information you gave him?—He instructed me to go and get Constable Hayes, who was at the police-station, to go in company with me and see the party who actually saw those men and horses pass the morning previous—that was Mrs. Delaney and her sons.

17411. Upon that you went?—Yes.

17412. What time did you return?—About a quarter to six in the morning.

17413. Did you see him after you returned?—Yes.

17414. At what time?—About a quarter to six. I went to him directly after I returned.

17415. What information did you give him then?—Mrs. Delaney was rather reticent in giving information. I had been stationed there previously, and could rely upon what she said; so I told her I would never divulge her name. She then stated that about four o’clock yesterday morning—that is on the 3rd, Sunday—she heard horses galloping and chains rattling, coming towards the house. She said, “We had horses running on the flat, and we thought some one wanted to ‘plant’ them. I got up to the window to see who they were, and saw four young men riding four horses, two horses with two packs on each horse in front, and four other horses.” I think she said “running in front of them bare-back,” and could not say whether they belonged to them or not. The horses seemed exhausted, and the men were forcing the horses from the township before daylight as well as they could, but they did not seem to get away very well from the town.

Michael Twomey, 8th Sept. 1881.

17416. When you reported this to Mr. Brooke Smith, what did he do after that?—I also stated that I traced the horses down the creek where she stated before I returned.

17417. Which way were the horses going?—In the direction of the Warby Ranges. They came underneath the One-mile railway bridge. The creek was bank high. They broke the bank the other side getting over going towards Yarrawonga, at the back of the Wangaratta Hospital. The son also stated he heard them pass over the wooden bridge, which was the shortest way to the Warby Ranges. He stopped outside the house, and he heard the horses galloping over this bridge.

17418. When you came back with all this information to Mr. Inspector Smith, what did he do next?—He said something about sending a telegram about half-past eight, about the office being open then.

17419. What men were there in Wangaratta at that time?—Three foot men, and three mounted men, besides Mr. Smith.

17420. Did anything occur with reference to that on the 4th?—Constable Walsh, who was the senior constable on the station, told me and Constable Hayes to go down there after breakfast, about half-past nine, and to see if we could ascertain any more. We went down, and learned and told him there was nothing more reliable than that they passed there; that they believed that no other persons would have passed there and evade the railway crossing who cared for their lives, for the railway crossing was quite convenient.

17421. They could have crossed the railway at some other point without running the risk of going through the creek?—Yes, there was the railway crossing.

17422. That confirmed in your mind that those were some persons endeavoring to evade the public eye?—Yes.

17423. Were you aware whether any of the Kelly gang knew of that crossing—the difficulty of getting along it?—I did not know at the time that Steve Hart was a member of the gang. If I had, I would have known he was a resident of the place, and would have known on that account.

17424. When you returned did you hear of anything further having taken place?—I made enquiries of a woman on the way to this bridge, and she told me she heard the dogs bark about half-past two in the morning; and I could see I was only making things worse by making any further enquiries, and as I could do nothing alone, I returned back, and stated there was nothing more connected, but that they had passed there.

17425. What did Mr. Brooke Smith do then?—Informed Walsh the second time. He was senior to me.

17426. What did he say?—I cannot say whether he went to Mr. Smith or not.

17427. What did Walsh say?—I cannot say what he said at the time.

17428. Did he agree with you it was likely to be the outlaws?—I could not say at what time.

17429. Were you in Wangaratta on the 5th?—I was.

17430. Was there any talk about the pursuit on the 5th?—There were no steps taken on the 5th.

17431. When were the first steps taken?—The party left about 12.30 p.m. on the 6th, under the command of Inspector Smith, about mid-day.

17432. In what direction?—In the direction of Peechelba, towards the Warby Ranges. The party was divided into two when we went there. I was one of the party.

17433. Which way did you go?—Detective Kennedy was appointed in charge of one half of the party, and I went with him, to Lake Rowan; and the other party went to Yarrawonga.

17434. You were with the party that got the tracks to follow them up?—No.

17435. Do you remember the names of the party that went to Yarrawonga?—Senior-Constable Johnson was one, and the other Dixon.

17436. And Mr. Brooke Smith took charge of that?—Yes.

17437. Who was the senior officer in charge at Wangaratta on the 4th?—Inspector Smith.

17438. Any constable would have to take orders from him during the time of his presence in Wangaratta?—Yes.

17439. Come back to the message you brought from Senior-Constable Steele—did he express a strong opinion that that was the outlaws?—To the best of my belief he did. I would not swear it.

17440. Senior-Constable Steele did not go to the spot?—No, he did not leave the train.

17441. After you had seen the tracks, was it your impression those were the outlaws?—It was.

17442. Did you express your surprise at no action being taken in pursuing them?—I did.
17443. To whom?—To my comrades on the station. In fact, I was disgusted after my night’s work. I was wet to the skin, and no steps taken after that.

17444. What was Mr. Smith’s reply on your return?—He spoke something about the telegraph office at half-past eight to send a message.

17445. He did not then indicate any action to be taken beyond that?—No.

17446. Can you tell us of your own memory where Mr. Smith was on the 3rd?—He came into Wangaratta on the 1st November 1878.

17447. Was he there on the 2nd and 3rd, and until the 6th?—Yes, he was. On his arrival at Wangaratta, I informed him that there was information that the gang were on the Wodonga flats, so he asked me to go to the railway station to get a truck ready to convey the horses by the next train the nearest way to the flats. We boxed the horses and went by the next train as far as Chiltern. There was a telegram there awaiting him—and it instructed Mr. Smith and his men to remain at Wangaratta, and that Sergeant Harkin and Constable Twomey were to proceed to the Wodonga flats and to assist Kennedy and his party there.

17448. You are quite certain on that point, that between the 1st and the 6th of the month the Inspector was in Wangaratta, and did not leave it on any special duty?—No; he did not go outside the precincts of the town except to Chiltern. He went on the 1st, and returned then after two hours and a half.

17449. With that exception, was he away from Wangaratta from the 1st to the 6th?—No.

17450. We have it in Sergeant Steele’s evidence (question No. 8863)—‘I sent up word by a constable to tell him that it was undoubtedly the outlaws, that Steve Hart had piloted them over the bridge; and I added, “Start at four in the morning, and you are bound to catch them on the Warby Ranges’”—did Steele send that message?—No; I think it would be a very strange thing for him to say such a thing. If he thought they were the gang, why did not he follow them?

17451. What did he say when you said they were the gang?—He referred me to Mr. Brooke Smith.

17452. Did he say anything about Steve Hart?—I do not remember his saying a word about those parties.

17453. By the Commission (to Mr. Brooke Smith).—Do you desire to put any questions to the witness?—No, I believe he is a perfectly straightforward man, and knows what he did.

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to to-morrow at Eleven o’clock.

FRIDAY, 9TH SEPTEMBER 1881.

Present:

G. R. Fincham, Esq., M.L.A., in the Chair;
J. Gibb, Esq., M.L.A.,
E. J. Dixon, Esq., J.P.

Brooke Smith further examined.

The witness.—I am suffering so severely from inflamed eyes that I can positively hardly see; and wish to ask for an adjournment of my examination. I will get a certificate from Dr. Bowen to-day. Since I came to Melbourne, the suffering has greatly increased.

The Chairman mentioned that Mr. Smith had had long notice of the intention of the Commission to examine him.

17454. By the Commission—And to-day was fixed specially, in order to have the opportunity of taking your evidence and then considering the mass of evidence which has been given up to the present time. Therefore, you will see, it is extremely inconvenient?—I am very sorry for that; but I am in actual pain, and can produce a certificate to show I am not fit to give evidence.

17455. The adjournment yesterday was to give you an opportunity of clearing up the points referred to yesterday.

The witness.—Then I will withdraw my application, in deference to the wish of the Commission. Will you allow me to look at that return, quoted from yesterday, of the 9th November—Wangaratta.—[same was handed to the witness.]—I am not able to controvert that return.

17456. By the Commission.—You accept that return as true?—Yes, I do.

17457. Then the statement you made last night—that the reason the party did not start in pursuit of the Keilys before the middle of the day was in consequence of your exhaustion and fatigue, caused by forty-eight hours’ work—must have been a statement that was untrue?—No; I do not say that at all. The exact date of this occurrence was on the 27th, when I got the news; and I went down to Wangaratta, as I mentioned.

17458. Do you adhere to the statement you made, last night, to the Commission—that the reason you did not start at an earlier hour was in consequence of your inability through the exhaustion of forty-eight hours’?—That is my recollection. I can say no more than that.

17459. Now you say you accept those sheets as the correct report of the occupation of those days?—
For the simple reason that I know the persons who signed them; and, I presume, they must be straightforward. Part of this one is written by Mullane. How he got writing Wangaratta sheets from Beechworth I cannot make out.

17460. Do you take exception to the return?—No. My evidence to the Commission is as far as my recollection goes.

17461. As a matter of fact those records prove that you were in Wangaratta four or five consecutive days, and had not been subject to any special fatigue, and apparently there was no excuse for not starting at the earliest moment!—I believe the exact time I lost was one whole day.

17462. How can you reconcile that with the statement that those records are true—which prove you were there for the five days?—I have not the book, and I know I went up once as far as Chiltern.

17463. That is admitted, that on the first of those days you went as far as Chiltern and back?—Yes, I was ordered back.

17464. Irrespective of that there are four other days that you can give no account of how they were occupied?—I confess I do not remember.

17465. Then the only inference the Commission can derive is that you, from circumstances best known to yourself, neglected to proceed with that despatch which you as an officer should have displayed?—I am under a very unfortunate position with regard to one thing—the time I said I was so knocked up. The gentleman I consulted was Di. Hutton, and he is in England now. His instructions to me were to lie down and keep still. Those were his very instructions.

17466. You made the statement yesterday that you yourself went down to the bridge, and that you could not discover any traces of the tracks?—I went down to both bridges and could not see any sign of the tracks, and I did not believe they went under there.

17467. I will just read you a little bit of Sergeant Steele’s evidence—“Mr. Sadleir told me that Mr. Brooke Smith was at Wangaratta with a party of men, and that if there was anything in it I could send word to him and then go on. I arrived at Wangaratta at one a.m. In the morning I saw Constable Twomey; he met me at the railway platform at Wangaratta. I asked him if this rumour was true that I heard about the men passing through. He said that they had seen the tracks; he had just been down at the back of the hospital to the One-mile bridge, and there were the tracks of the horses right enough there, and that the boy saw the men driving pack-horses at four o’clock in the morning—just at grey in the morning.” You see that Sergeant Steele here gives the impression to the Commission that you had a conversation with him on this particular subject, and your information was that you had been down and seen the tracks?—That must have been subsequent to anything at the time, but I do not remember what occurred to me in the middle of the night. If Twomey came to me then I can only say I do not remember it. I see here Mr. Nicolson authorizes me on 9th November by instructions to proceed—17468. In question No. 8863—“Had there not been a party of police at Wangaratta I would have taken the responsibility on myself, but Mr. Smith was there with a large party of men at the time, and I sent up word by a constable to tell him that it was undoubtedly the outlaws, that Steve hart had piloted them over the bridge, and I added, ‘Start at four in the morning and you are bound to catch them on the Warby Ranges’” All I can say is I never heard a word of it, and those are things a man could not forget, he would be too anxious.

17469. Do you positively assert now that you have no recollection of having yourself gone down to the bridge and seen no traces of those men?—I am perfectly certain that there were no traces of any kind or sort, and I went to both bridges, and I think the person I took with me is still alive and up there.

17470. You were here when Constable Twomey gave his evidence last night?—Yes.

17471. You stated at the conclusion of his evidence that he was a man thoroughly reliable and whose word might be believed?—That is true.

17472. His statement was most emphatic on that particular that he himself went down, discovered the traces there, reported the matter to you, and that 210 action was taken. How can you reconcile that statement with the one just made?—I do not know whether he knows that action was taken or not. At the time I was informed of this affair by, I think, Constable Walsh, I had no party.

17473. Those sheets show otherwise?—I was not in command of that party; the party was taken away from me.

17474. The sheets show those men were at Wangaratta?—But I had no control; I could not take parties out like that.

17475. Why?—Because Mr. Nicolson was in charge.

17476. Did not your superior officer expect you, being the officer there, to pursue the gang in such a case?—I say most distinctly I know I would not take a party out without leave.

17477. Even though you knew the desperadoes had just passed there?—I cannot help that, I could not do it, I would if I was in my own district.

17478. Do you remember Constable Twomey’s statement about the tracks?—I cannot, but I did not see the tracks when I went there.
17479. Under whose instructions did you go in the search party on the 6th?—Mr. Nicolson's.
17480. By verbal instructions?—Yes, this is the first written order I received dated the 9th.
17481. By whose instructions did you start on the 6th?—To Yarrawonga, by Mr. Nicolson's.
17482. By written instructions?—Verbal instructions.
17483. Then the statements made by Constable Twomey and by Sergeant Steele that those tracks were seen by several persons you do not believe—are we to understand that?—The person may be a very much superior tracker to myself. I was travelling along with Senior-Constable Johnson and Dixon, and they saw tracks that I could not see at all, I could see no marks whatever.
17484. Did you see Mrs. Delaney yourself?—No.
17485. Did you see the boy?—I did not.
17486. Did you treat the information so coolly as not yourself to make enquiry of the persons who had given it?—I did not believe it, I cannot say any more than that. It might have been an error and it might not, but I do not believe it now.
17487. You have read the evidence of Sergeant Steele on this matter?—No, I have not, I have only seen Senior-Constable Johnson's.
17488. Sergeant Steele makes a statement to this effect, that on his way to Rat's Castle Twomey saw him at the station, told him that four men had crossed under the bridge some short time before, and that he told Twomey to inform Mr. Brooke Smith and for him to take action. Do you think that Sergeant Steele's instructions were so imperative but that he ought to have taken action in the matter rather than leave it to you, who had three foot police and three mounted men?—Certainly. If he was aware of it he ought to have gone himself.
17489. He was in a better position to follow those men than you were?—Unquestionably he was.
17490. Although Walsh informed you of this statement made by the woman and her son that the men had crossed under the bridge. Were you aware that Twomey was strongly impressed that they were the outlaws?—I was not; I did not know about Delaney and son. I was told by Walsh about a person living in a brick house by the bridge.
17491. Did you at any time send for Twomey, who had received the information, to obtain his impression on the matter?—I might have done so. I cannot remember it.
17492. At any rate you treated the information as being unreliable?—I did.
17493. And you took no action?—Only to see if I could see the tracks.
17494. How long have you been in the service?—Since the 5th November 1852.
17495. As what did you join?—As cadet.
17496. At what salary?—I think 10s. a day.
17497. What are you receiving now?—I receive inspector's salary, £300, less £10, knocked off for guarantee.
17498. Do you receive anything else?—Quarters and groom allowance.
17499. What does that amount to?—£70 for quarters, and £40 for groom allowance.
17500. Are you married?—No, a single man.
17501. With the £10 knocked off, it makes your salary now £400 a year?—Yes.
17502. What age are you?—Forty-nine next April. I joined when I was a little over seventeen. I was appointed by Mr. Latrobe under Mr. Sturt.
17503. What retiring allowance would you be able to demand of the State?—I will be entitled to a pension in six years.
17504. And then how much would you be entitled to?—I must tell you I left the department in 1857 after an accident I had and came back in 1858—was re-appointed after eighteen months out. I am not certain, but I believe my allowance would date from the time I was re-appointed. I am not sure.
17505. Had your service been continuous, and you had now arrived at the age of fifty-five, what amount would be the retiring allowance?—About £200.
17506. Is there any special provision made for an officer when called upon to retire before that age in consequence of ill-health?—There is a gratuity, not a pension.
17507. A lump sum?—Yes, a very small sum—a month for every year's service. I might remind you that it was proposed that fifty years should be the retiring time, but it is not so, and I have done thirty years' service now.
17508. You have been suffering for some time?—I have a broken collar bone now.
17509. If you were compelled now from this incapacity to retire from the service, would the gratuity enable you to spend your days with ease and comfort?—I cannot say that; I have means of my own, but they have only recently come. If the Government could see its way to give me a pension, I would very willingly accept it.
17510. Will you state frankly—you say if the Government were to do that: would you be kind enough to tell us, as you have not arrived at the age you are entitled to a pension, what amount you should receive if you went now?—I would leave that to an actuary, and take it according to age.
Brooke Smith.

continued.

9th Sept. 1881.

17511. I refer to a gratuity?—I think it is nearly £600.

17512. In lieu of that what amount would be satisfactory to you?—I would take £180 a year, what I began with.

17513. Taking everything into consideration, and seeing you cannot claim a pension for six years if £100 was offered you would you not accept it?—I would rather have £150.

17514. You said just now you did not apply to the Delaneys yourself with regard to the information?—I do not remember the name of Delaney at all in the matter. I will tell the whole thing if you like.

17515. Here is an official document of yours, in which you say, "A youth (Delaney) states his mother called him up at 4 a.m. yesterday morning to see if his horse was being taken away. He looked out and saw four mounted men, with hobbles on saddles, driving several horses at a rapid pace through One-mile Creek towards Peechelba road; no description can be given; may have gone to Warby Ranges.—4th November 1878"?—I now remember. The reason why I did not put any faith in that boy’s statement was that, if anybody knew those four outlaws well, he did, and he could not tell me who they were.

17516. I understood you to say just now you did not consult with him?—I did not consult Mrs. Delaney, but I had a conversation with the lad, and Twomey, and Walsh; in fact I sent Walsh down to make a special enquiry as to who they were. I asked of the lad who they were—if he knew them, and he said he did not know them; and I happened to know he knew all the outlaws well.

17517. You inferred from that they could not be the outlaws?—I did. In fact I did not believe four men crossed there at all.

17518. If they did, why should they cross under there?—I did not see why they should have gone through the town at all; they could have gone to another bridge without being seen at all, and in fact they could have gone under that other bridge.

17519. You did not leave in consequence of not having received instructions?—Yes, I had no party.

17520. You admit there were three mounted men there?—Not under me—they were not mine.

17521. Would those men have been justified in acting without instructions from you?—If they had seen the persons of that description they would have been perfectly justified to have gone on at once.

17522. If your superior officer were not there, and you had information which led you to suppose that they were the outlaws or men bearing their description, do you mean the Commission to understand that you would not have been justified in going in pursuit without orders from your superior?—I certainly would not have left the station without that.

17523. Both Sergeant Steele and Constable Johnson, in speaking of the tracks, observed that the ground was so very soft that it was not easy for the marks to be obliterated. Is it not strange that all those men concur in their testimony as to the condition of the ground, and you yet could not discover the marks?—I never knew that Constable Johnson or Sergeant Steele were down there examining the tracks.

17524. It is proved that the tracks were seen days after—the hoofs of horses?—I did not see it. The tracks spread nearly the width of this room on that occasion—from Lake Rowan to the Warby Ranges. I thought there were five horses, shortly before the Mansfield murders, when I was in charge of the Beechworth district. The tracks subsequently joined together. I came down to Wangaratta, and took out this party. The reason why I stated to you I would not take a party out without leave was simply that Mr. Nicolson arrived in the district. And here is a letter that will show what I mean, but I do not know whether it should be read.

17525. You had better read it?—"30th October 1878, Myrtleford. My dear Brooke Smith,—I arrived at Wangaratta yesterday evening, and was surprised to find you gone. I followed you here to learn your object and plans, because I have been placed in charge of this case, and have been made responsible for all steps taken and result. I must return to Wangaratta and to Benalla, if possible, to-night. I cannot ascertain your object and plans, excepting that I find your men are not supplied with hobbles, billy cans, &c., which show that you do not anticipate camping out. Take care of your men, don’t expose them without all due precaution. I am sorry you have not more rifles. If ill-prepared for a mountain scouring expedition, rather return soon quietly than proceed beyond reach of supplies, and re-organize again when your party may have something tangible to work upon, which I humbly trust to be able to obtain for them. I intended you, when I was prepared, to despatch a party to scour between the North-Eastern road and the Murray River. Three parties besides yours are now out under my knowledge. Communicate with me by telegraph at every opportunity. Don’t waste your strength fruitlessly until you get further orders. Ever yours, C. H. NICOLSON. Benalla my head-quarters. When you return to Wangaratta don’t dismiss men to their stations without consulting me. C. H. N."

17526. Is there anything in that document to prevent your starting on information such as that which has been given?—I think so.

17527. Which part of the letter?—Particularly the last part. I could not take a party out under those instructions.

17528. Does not he say there that he hopes that you may have something tangible on which you may work?—Yes.

17529. Do you think the information we have referred to to-day was not a sufficiently tangible thing to start on?—I told you before that I did not believe the information.

17530. Was it in consequence of the written instructions that you received from Mr. Nicolson that you have now referred to, or your unbelief in the information supplied to you, that you did not proceed on tracks lead in that direction. He may then go quietly to Greta to feed horses, &c., first sending here to me for further orders.—C. H. NICOLSON Inspctg. Supt. Look out by the way for the Government horses.—C. H. N.”

17535. Do you wish to make any other statement at all?—No. I could speak of the earlier search for the Kellys before they shot Fitzpatrick. I have all the papers here, but the enquiry is not turning on that point.

17536. After you finally returned with the search party with Johnson and others, where were you stationed after that?—I went back to Beechworth.

17537. Can you remember the date you left Wangaratta for Beechworth, about?—I should think it must be about the 12th November.

17538. Under whose instructions did you return to Beechworth?—Superintendent Sadleir’s.

17539. Had you a written letter?—No, Mr. Sadleir’s verbal instruction to go up and prosecute. I had lived in Beechworth till I left it on the 22nd of February 1880.

17540. What was your position in Beechworth when you resumed duty there?—Inspector of the district, not the officer in charge, but travelling inspector—the same as I am now.

17541. And then you were removed to Horsham?—Yes.

17542. And what are you there?—The inspector of the district.

17543. What sized district have you to inspect now?—I commence at a place called Murtoa. One journey alone is 70 miles, and another—Donald—is 100 miles, beyond Gnill; and I go right away to Bordertown. My head-quarters are at Horsham.

17544. How frequently do you visit your outlying districts?—A little while ago I used to do it monthly, but it was considered too short; and some places I go to once in two months, and two places once in three months, and other places once a month.

17545. Do you enter in a book your departure and arrival and duty?—Yes, and that is supplied to Mr. Nicholas at Stawell.

17546. A copy of that is kept in the department?—Yes.

17547. That is to say, taking January—say on the 5th January you leave Horsham, and it takes you how long after you have inspected before you return?—About ten days.

17548. What do you do then?—I write my reports from the stations I visit generally, and, if not, when I return.

17549. Then the only thing that will be in existence afterwards will be the report?—Yes, and my entry in the occurrence-book of the station.

17550. Suppose it takes you ten days for the first visit, how long do you remain in Horsham before you visit again?—that depends. There may be some crime break out, and I have to go and enquire into that.

17551. How long would you ordinarily remain in Horsham?—I would start again the following month.

17552. What duties would you be performing between the time of your return and starting again?—“General supervision” is what the regulations tell us on the station in which we reside, and in the town you have to wear your uniform and go about amongst the people and gain as much information as you can, without annoying people.

17553. How many visits would you have to take in the twelve months?—I have nine stations, and I visit six of them every month, and two of them every two months, and one every three months—Donald, which is going to be taken away.

17554. The Horsham district is looked upon as a quiet settled district?—It is very quiet, very little crime.

17555. Not a district like the North-Eastern?—Nothing like that. The North-Eastern is the hardest district I was ever in. Horsham is one of the quietest in the colony.
17556. Can you account for the fact of its being so quiet—is it in consequence of the vigilance of the officers?—There is a very good body of police there, but I think there is no criminality amongst the population. The criminality in the North-Eastern district has been notorious the last thirty years while I have been in the department.

17557. You were a member of the Victorian Police Force before Mr. Nicolson?—I joined on the 5th November 1872, and he in December.

17558. You are senior to Mr. Nicolson?—Yes.

17559. Can you account for the fact that you are only inspector and Mr. Nicolson in a much higher grade?—I do not grudge it to him at all, I think he deserves it. I can tell you something. I have been appointed acting superintendent four times over, and never got the district afterwards. Captain Standish appointed me.

17560. Mr. Nicolson is very much above you in position in the force, and you joined before him. How can you account for that sort of thing?—Mr. Nicolson accepted a position which I was not suited for, which brought him very much to the fore—officer in charge of detectives. I was in that force a short time, and it did not suit me, and it was there he gained his advantage, and I am very glad to think he did do so. Mr. Hare is much junior to me as far as service goes.

17561. Do you remember starting out on the 6th?—Yes.

17562. Did you receive any positive instructions then from Mr. Nicolson as to the course you were to take?—Yes.

17563. What were those instructions?—As far as I remember, there was a party of about twenty-two, and we were to go to Pechelba, thirty-two miles from Wangaratta, and we were to divide there into two parties, and I was to go back and meet the other party at Lake Rowan, and I did so.

17564. Did he instruct you to return to Wangaratta?—I do not remember that. We had no food.

17565. Did he instruct you to remain at the place where the tracks were?—I got within six miles of Wangaratta, and I came in to get food and to report.

17566. In question No. 412, Mr. Nicolson says, “The next thing that occurred was about the 12th of November. I had come down from Beechworth to Wangaratta, and a messenger came in at night to tell me that a party of police under Sub-Inspector Brook Smith had traced the outlaws from Lake Rowan and Ryan’s from along the Wallaby ranges, and had tracked them with blackfellows, and had recovered one of the police horses, which had been taken from the murdered police by the outlaws. I sent back word to them (they were undecided whether to come into Wangaratta or to remain where they were) to remain where they were, and by all means to keep the fact of their finding the horse secret. An hour or two afterwards I heard a party of horsemen riding into Wangaratta in the dark, about eight o’clock in the evening, and leading a horse.” Having had your memory refreshed, do you remember receiving positive instructions from Mr. Nicolson to remain at this point?—I do not.

17567. Do you remember returning to Wangaratta?—I do.

17568. Were you ordered to Beechworth immediately after this?—I think I was. The following day, or the day after, I was.

17569. Do you know what the reason was?—No; nothing was ever said to me. I was always on good terms with all the officers up there.

17570. Are you sure your removal was not an expression of dissatisfaction on the part of your superior officer, in taking the course you did in disobeying his orders?—He never informed me I disobeyed his orders.

17571. Did any constables object to return to Wangaratta when you gave the orders?—No. If I remember right, I was asked to go into Wangaratta by Constable Johnson.

17572. Did the men, knowing the instructions you had received from Mr. Nicolson, to remain at this position, manifest or express dissatisfaction at their return?—Not at their return. Some of them expressed some dissatisfaction at something on the 9th. I had occasion to remain behind a little while; and I could not find the party that had gone up the ranges; and, to let them know my whereabouts, I fired a shot, and they got very excited. The firing a shot was what led to the murders at the Wombat, and, no doubt, they were a little alarmed.

17573. But Johnson led the Commission to believe that he strongly objected to your returning to Wangaratta on the night of the 8th?—He never said anything to me about it. He is a very excitable man, though a very good man.

17574. He obeyed your orders on that occasion, to return; and he said that he regretted he had obeyed the orders, he was so impressed they were then on the tracks of the outlaws, and, had they been in the charge of an officer who would have pursued them, they must have come up to them in a very short time. That is the impression from his evidence?—I can only say this—that I came into Wangaratta with the desire of meeting Mr. Nicolson and telling him the position we were in, as I considered that another party should have gone in a different direction to meet us.

17575. Mr. Nicolson says (question No. 419), “What was the nature of the dissatisfaction?—The men were dissatisfied that they had not stayed there all night, and followed up those traces in the morning; they were very sanguine about the gang. They had found what appeared to be a ramrod made from the branch of a tree, and whittled; they picked this up—a very good substitute for a ramrod; they had very great confidence that they could follow it up and find something.” Do you remember that circumstance?—I do not. I remember finding some hobbles and a bit of stick; but I cannot say it was a ramrod.

17576. Do you not remember the men remonstrating against going back?—No, I do not. They did object when I stopped, on the morning of the 9th, at a certain place called the Orangery. I do not want to mention names.

17577. Was the reason you stopped of any importance?—That was the only time the men made remonstrance to me. I stopped behind with one constable, and, in following them up, I was conversing with Brien, to get some information; and I did not see the tracks. And I told the constable to fire a shot: and they, all of a sudden, got nervous and frightened; and I told them how the thing happened, and they seemed perfectly satisfied.

17578. Was this a matter of importance at the time?—I was just going up with Johnson to be shown by the man a supposed place where they had been hiding. He was going to show me that. I thought it so significant, the place being so close to Brien’s, that I stayed to have a conversation with Brien; and he told me the outlaws used to come to his house and get tea and orano 17579. How recently had they been there?—He did not tell me. I could not get that out of him. He was too experienced a man of that kind.

17580. Then what was the importance of the information?—Learning they had been down there. That was something to me I presume; either they had been in the habit of frequenting that place—

17581. Did you know before that he was a sympathizer of the Kellys?—I suspected him; I knew he was a friend of the Kellys.

17582. That information did not lead up to anything?—No; I think it did afterwards. I think a party of police went and stayed there some days.

17583. Was the remonstrance to you then that you delayed to stay with Brien?—No, about the shot. They thought we might have been so near the outlaws that that very thing might have brought them upon us. The delay was not more than fifteen minutes. The only other time they remonstrated with me was between Yarrawonga and Lake Rowan. I received certain information at Yarrawonga which caused me to travel very slow indeed to wait to meet the party under Kennedy, and the men thought I rode too slowly. Generally speaking, I do travel my horses very slowly.

17584. Your object was to gain time?—My object was simply to meet Kennedy as he came across the ranges from Peechelba to Lake Rowan.

17585. To strengthen the party in case you came on the Kellys?—No; I think there was the least chance of that. The Murray was in a flood at the time, and that is what prevented them getting across.

17586. Had you any men fit to cope with the Kelly gang if you met them. What force would you have considered sufficient to go out with to attack the Kellys?—Not less than five.

17587. How many men had you?—In my first party six, and in my second nine and myself.

17588. Is there any other statement you wish to make?—No. I have no further statement to make.

17589. By the Chairman (to Constable Twomey).—Do you wish to ask Inspector Smith any questions?—No.

17590. Do any of the officers present wish to ask any questions?—[ the officers said “No.”]

The witness withdrew.

Adjourned to Tuesday next at Two o’clock.
Nicolson or myself. I have the honor to be, gentlemen, yours very truly—(signed)—L. NICOLSON. To the Chairman of the Royal Commission on Police."

The Chairman also read the following affidavit from Mr. Dodd, J.P.:—"I, Matthew Dodd, of Beechworth, in the colony of Victoria, tanner and currier, do solemnly and sincerely declare that, referring to extract from John Sherritt’s letter, dated 3rd September 1881, John Sherritt called on me on the day mentioned and asked me to sign a petition in favor of his son. I told him that I heard there was a counter petition being got up against his son, and I stated I would not sign either. I may also state that no person called on me to sign the other. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of the Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury—(signed)—MATTHEW DODD. Declared at Beechworth, in the colony of Victoria, this fourteenth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me—(signed)—George Gammon, J.P."

The Chairman also read the following affidavit from the elder Sherritt:—"I, John Sherritt, farmer, of Sheep Station Creek, Beechworth, in the colony of Victoria, do solemnly and sincerely declare that, on Thursday the 11th day of August 1881, I called on Mr. Matthew Dodd, J.P., and requested him to sign a character in favor of my son. He told me that he had been asked by a man to sign a counter petition. In answer to questions from me, he said the man that asked him lived outside the town, and that he was not a Government servant. I also asked H. A. Crawford to sign a character for my son, and he told me that he did not like to interfere in it. During the day I saw him again, and he drew my attention to Mr. Nicolson’s son, who was then passing, and said him and his mother had come up from Melbourne, and Mrs. Nicolson asked me to sign a paper against your son He said he found no fault with the Sherritt family, and he would not sign for her. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of the Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury —JOHN SHERRITT Declared at Beechworth, in the colony of Victoria, this fourteenth day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me—Jno. Turner, J.P."

Thomas Curnow sworn and examined.

17591. By the Commission.—What are you?—State school teacher.
17592. Where?—Ballarat.
17593. Were you stationed at Glenrowan, as teacher, in 1880?—I was.
17594. You remember the circumstance of the Kellys shutting up the prisoners in Mrs. Jones’s hotel?—I do.
17595. You were one of them?—I was.
17596. If you have any statement to make with reference to that we will be glad to hear it?—Several months ago I wrote a narrative of the part I took in the Glenrowan tragedy, as closely as I could then recollect it, and I would desire now to read that to the Commission.
17597. Will you do so?—[The witness read the same, as follows:—]—"On Sunday morning, 27th June 1880, I determined to take my wife, sister, and child out for a drive along the road from Glenrowan to Greta. We left the school in a buggy at about eleven o’clock in the morning, accompanied by David Mortimer, my brother-in-law, who rode on horseback. When we got in sight of Mrs. Jones’s hotel, and opposite the railway crossing, through which we intended to pass, we noticed a number of people about Jones’s hotel, and at the crossing. I said, ‘Mrs. Jones must be dead; she has been very ill.’ As we got near the hotel, a man ran out of it towards Mrs. Jones’s stable, distant about twenty yards from the hotel, I drove past the hotel to the crossing, and, seeing Mr. Stanistreet, asked him, ‘What’s the matter?’ He replied, ‘The Kellys are here; you can’t go through.’ I thought he was joking, and made a motion to drive through the gates, when a man on horseback, who blocked up the crossing and was talking to a young man whom I knew to be named Delaney, wheeled round his horse and said to me, ‘Who are you?’ I saw then that he had revolvers in his belt, and was convinced of the truth of Mr. Stanistreet’s statement that the Kellys were there. I replied that I was the teacher at Glenrowan. He said, ‘Oh! you are the schoolmaster here, are you, and who are those?’ pointing to my wife, sister, and brother-in-law. I told him. He then said, ‘Where are you going?’ I answered, ‘Out for a drive.’ He then said, ‘I am sorry, but I must detain you,’ and directed us to get out of the buggy, which we did. He then turned again to Delaney and resumed his conversation with him. I afterwards found that the man who had addressed me was Ned Kelly, the outlaw. I noticed another armed man near Ned Kelly, and I afterwards found that he was Byrne. When we got out of the buggy I led the horse off from the crossing and tied him to the railway fence alongside, directing Mrs. and Miss Curnow to go into Mr. Stanistreet’s house, which they did. As soon as I had fastened the horse, I joined Mr. and Mrs. Stanistreet and others, who I was told had been taken prisoners by the gang, and was informed by them that Glenrowan had been stuck up since three o’clock that morning, and that the gang had forced Reardon and others to tear up part of the railway line beyond the station, with the purpose of wrecking a special train of police and black trackers, which the outlaws said would pass through Glenrowan. Some person then—I believe it was one of the boys who had been bailed up by the gang—told me that the Kellys had been at Beechworth during the previous night, and had shot several police. After some further conversation, we all listened to what Ned Kelly was saying to Delaney. The outlaw was accusing Delaney of having some short time previous ridden a horse from near Greta into Wangaratta to oblige a policeman, and of having sought admission into the police force. He threatened to shoot Delaney for this, and pointed a revolver at him several times. Ned Kelly declared to all of us who were listening to him that he would have the life of any one who aided the police in any way, or who even showed a friendly feeling for them, and declared that he could and would find them out. He said that a law was made rendering it a crime for any one to help them (the outlaws), and that he would make it a crime against the Kelly gang for any one to aid the police. The women, who were listening to what Kelly was saying, asked him to let Delaney off. After keeping Delaney in a state of extreme terror for about half an hour the outlaw made him promise never again to seek admission into the police force, and finally said, 'I forgive you this time; but mind you be careful for the future.' Byrne then produced a bottle of brandy, and offered some in a tumbler to all adults there. Some accepted it. Byrne drank some himself, and gave Delaney two-thirds of a tumbler, which he drank. Ned Kelly refused to take any, and directed some of his boy prisoners to take my horse and buggy into Mrs. Jones's yard, which they did. Ned Kelly and Byrne then went from the railway crossing to Mrs. Jones's hotel, preceded by the majority of their male prisoners, and I was with them. When we reached Mrs. Jones's there were, including those who had just been taken over, about fifty persons in and about the hotel, all of whom appeared to be prisoners of the gang. We were allowed to go about in the hotel, excepting one room, which the outlaws used, and of which they kept the key, and we were allowed outside, but were forbidden to leave the premises. Dan Kelly, a short time after I entered the hotel, asked me to have a drink, and I drank with him at the bar. I said to him that I had been told that they had been at Beechworth during the previous night, and had shot several police. I asked him whether it was true. He replied that they had been near Beechworth last night, and had done 'some shooting,' and that they had burned the 'b——s out,' alluding to police. Byrne came in the bar, and, looking at Dan Kelly's glass, said, 'Be careful, old man.' Dan Kelly replied, 'All right,' and poured water into his brandy. While talking with Byrne and Dan Kelly, I expressed surprise at Glenrowan being stuck up by them, and they said that they had come to Glenrowan in order to wreck a special train of inspectors, police, and black trackers, which would pass through Glenrowan for Beechworth, to take up their trail from there. They said that they had ridden hard across country, often being up to the saddle-girths in water, to get to Glenrowan, and that they had had the line torn up at a dangerous part, and were going to send the train and its occupants to h——l. About one o'clock I was standing in the yard of Jones' hotel, thinking of the intentions of the gang, and I keenly felt that it was my duty to do anything that I could to prevent the outrage which the outlaws had planned from being accomplished, and I determined that I would try to do so. While standing in the yard Dan Kelly came out of the hotel and asked me to go inside and have a dance. I said that I could not dance in the boots which I had on. Ned Kelly then came out of the hotel, and hearing me object to dance because of my boots, said, 'Come on; never mind your boots.' I said to him that it was awkward to me to dance in those boots, as I was lame, but that I would dance with pleasure if he would go to the school with me to get a pair of dancing boots. It flashed across my mind that, in passing the Glenrowan police barracks to reach my house, Bracken, the trooper stationed there, might see us and would be able to give an alarm. I knew that Bracken had been stationed at Greta, and felt sure that he would recognize Ned Kelly. He (Ned Kelly) said he would go, and we were getting ready, when Dan Kelly interfered, and said that Ned had better stay behind, and let him or Byrne go with me. Some one else also urged Ned Kelly not to go away, and said that my house was near the police barracks. Ned Kelly turned to me, and asked if it was. I said, 'Yes; we shall have to pass the barracks. I had forgotten that.' He then said that we would not go, and I went into the hotel, and danced with Dan Kelly. After we had finished dancing, Ned Kelly said that he would go down to the police barracks and bring Bracken and Reynolds, the postmaster, up to Jones's. I laughed and said to him that I would rather than a hundred pounds that he would, and asked to be allowed to accompany him when he went, and to take home my wife, sister, and child. He gave me no reply. The intention to do something to baffle the murderous designs of the gang grew on me, and I resolved to do my utmost to gain the confidence of the outlaws, and to make them believe me to be a sympathizer with them. I saw clearly that unless I succeeded in doing this I should not be able to get their permission to go home with my wife, child, and sister, and consequently should not be able to do anything to prevent the destruction of the special train and its occupants by giving information to the police in Benalla, which I purposed doing if I could induce the outlaws to allow me and mine to go home. The outlaws kept a very sharp watch on their prisoners without seeming to do so. About three o'clock in the afternoon Ned and Dan Kelly caused several of their prisoners to engage in jumping, and in the hop, step, and jump. Ned Kelly joined with them, and used a revolver in each hand as weights. After the jumping was concluded, I left Jones's and went to Mr. Stanistreet's house to see my wife and sister. They came out to meet me, and noticing the red lama scarf wrapped round my sister caused me to think, 'What a splendid danger signal that would make.' The idea of stopping the train by means of it then entered my mind, and made me still more anxious for liberty. I went with my wife and sister into Mr. Stanistreet's house, and saw Hart lying down on a sofa. He had three loaded guns by his side. He complained to me of having swollen and painful feet, caused, he said, by not having had his boots off for several days and nights. I advised him to bathe them in hot water, and requested it for him. It was brought, and he did so. Shortly after Mr. Stanistreet and I were walking about at the back of his house, and Mr. Stanistreet expressed a wish that an alarm could be given. Mrs. Stanistreet came out to us, and I asked them if they thought it would be wrong to break a promise given to the outlaws. They said that it would not. I then asked Mr. Stanistreet had the outlaws taken his revolver from him. He said they had not. I saw what use this fact could, be made of by me in my efforts to gain the confidence of the outlaws, and to make them believe that they could safely allow me to go home. I said to Mr. and Mrs. Stanistreet that we had better go inside, for I... was afraid of being suspected by the gang if they saw us in private conversation, and we did so. I do not know whether Mr. or Mrs. Stanistreet suspected the use I intended making of my liberty if I got it; but afterwards I heard Mrs. Stanistreet saying to Ned Kelly that he ought to allow me to take my sister, who was in delicate health, home. I was sitting in Mr. Stanistreet’s when Dan Kelly came in enquiring for a parcel in a small bag which he had lost. He seemed very anxious about it, and examined the house throughout in search of it. He could not find it, and went to McDonald’s hotel to see if it was there. He came back unsuccessful, and I went to Jones’s with him, and he searched there, but failed to find it. When he gave up searching for it, I requested him to tell Ned that I wanted to speak to him. I was near the door of Jones’s kitchen then. He went into the hotel and brought Ned Kelly out, and I told him that Mr. Stanistreet possessed a loaded revolver from the Railway department and advised them for their safety to obtain it, as some one might get it and do them an injury. They thanked me, and I perceived that I had in a great measure obtained their confidence by telling them this. About dusk I heard Ned Kelly saying to Mrs. Jones (they were standing between the hotel and the kitchen, which was a detached building) that he was going down soon to the police barracks to capture Bracken, and that he was going to take her daughter down to call Bracken out. Mrs. Jones asked him not to take her. Ned Kelly said that he did not intend to shoot Bracken, and that her daughter must go. I advanced to them, and said to Ned Kelly that I thought it would be better for him to take Dave Mortimer, my brother-in-law, to call Bracken out, because Bracken knew his voice well, and by hearing it would suspect nothing. Ned Kelly, after a pause, said that he would do so. He then went to Mrs. Jones’s stable, and I followed him, and asked would he allow me to take my party home when he went down for Bracken; and I assured him that he had no cause for fearing me, as I was with him heart and soul. He replied, ‘I know that, and can see it,’ and he acceded to my request. I went over to Mrs. Stanistreet’s and brought my wife and sister to Mrs. Jones’s, and took them into the kitchen. Ned Kelly said that we must wait till he was ready to go. I found, on going back to Jones’s, that a log fire had been made on the Wangaratta side of the hotel yard, and that many of the prisoners of the gang were standing around it. It was then dark. Other prisoners were in the hotel, and the outlaws encouraged them to amuse themselves by playing cards. I waited with my wife and sister in Jones’s kitchen for, I believe, two or three hours before Ned Kelly directed me to put my horse into the buggy. He and Byrne then went into the room which they had reserved for their own use. I drove to the front of Jones’s hotel, and put my wife and sister and Alec Reynolds, who was about seven years of age, the son of the postmaster at Glenrowan, into the buggy. Ned Kelly directed me to take the little boy with us. We were kept waiting in front of the hotel about an hour. Ned Kelly then came to us on horseback, and told me to drive on. It was then, I believe, about ten o’clock. As we got into the road, I found that we were accompanied by Ned Kelly, Byrne, and my brother-in-law, each on horseback, and by a Mr. E. Reynolds and R. Gibbins on foot, both of whom resided with Mr. Reynolds, the Glenrowan postmaster. On the road down, Ned Kelly said that he was going to fill the ruts around with the fat carcases of the police. The outlaws each had a light-colored overcoat on, and I was amazed at the bulky appearance which they presented. I had then no knowledge that the outlaws possessed iron armour. Each one carried a bundle in front of him, and in one hand a gun or a rifle. We reached the barracks, and were directed by Ned Kelly to halt about twenty yards distant from the front door of the barracks. Ned Kelly got off his horse and fastened him to a fence near, ordering my brother-in-law to do the same, and he did so. Kelly then ordered him to advance to the barracks door and knock, which he did. Ned Kelly got behind an angle of the walls, and levelled his rifle either at Dave Mortimer or at the door. No reply came to the knocking or calling, though they were often and loudly repeated at Ned Kelly’s whispered command. When I saw Kelly level his rifle, I told my party to get out of the buggy, which they did, and I advanced to my horse’s head, for I thought Kelly might fire. I was then about seven or eight yards from Kelly. No result being produced by either knocking or calling, Ned Kelly left his position and advanced to Byrne, directing me, in an undertone, to call Mortimer away, which I did, and he came by me, who had remained near us, and Ned Kelly then spoke to one another, and Kelly took Alec Reynolds, the postmaster’s son, and Mr. E. Reynolds, and passed with them into Reynolds’s yard. We neither saw nor heard anything for, I think, more than an hour, when Ned Kelly appeared, having Bracken, E. Reynolds, and Bracken’s horse with him. Kelly stopped when he reached us, and ordered Bracken to mount the horse brought round, and Bracken did so. Ned Kelly put a halter on the horse, which he kept hold of, saying—‘I can’t trust you with the bridle, Bracken.’ Bracken said to Ned Kelly that he had not been ill in bed all day he (Kelly) would not have taken him easily, and that if the horse he was on was what it used to be it would take more than Ned Kelly to keep him a prisoner. Ned Kelly and Byrne mounted their horses, and I and my party got into the buggy. It was then, I believe, between eleven and twelve o’clock. Ned Kelly then said that I could go home and take my party with me. He directed us to ‘go quietly to bed, and not to dream too loud,’ and intimated that if I acted otherwise we would get shot, as one of them would be down to our place during the night to see that we were all right. I then left them and drove home, distant from the barracks one or two hundred yards, leaving the outlaws and their captives ready to start back to the railway station. As soon as we were out of hearing of the outlaws, I announced to my wife and sister my intention to go to Benalla and give information as to the intentions and whereabouts of the outlaws. They both anxiously and earnestly opposed my purpose, saying that it was not at all likely that we should be allowed to come home unless some of the agents of the gang were watching; that I should not be able to reach Benalla, as I should be shot on the road by spies, and that, even if I succeeded, we should be hunted out and shot. While the discussion was going on, and supper was being got ready, I quietly prepared everything, including the red lama scarf, candle, and matches, to go to Benalla, intending to keep as close to the railway line as I could, in case of the special coming before I could reach there. I declared to my wife that I did not intend to go by the road—that I meant to keep as close to the line as possible in order to be safer. At last, my sister gave way, but my wife worked herself into such an excited and hysterical state that she declared that she would not leave the house—that if I would go she would stay there, and she, baby, and my sister would be murdered. I wanted to take them to my mother-in-law’s farm, about one-third of a mile from our place, for safety while I was away. At length, Mrs. Curnow consented to go to her mother’s to obtain advice, and, as we were momentarily expecting the promised visit from one of the gang, I left the doors unlocked, and wrote a note, leaving it on the table, stating that we were gone to Mrs. Mortimer’s to obtain medicine, as Miss Curnow was taken ill. My sister wore her red lama scarf, at my request. When we got there Mrs. Curnow was exceedingly anxious to get home again and would not stay there, and we went back. I succeeded in persuading Mrs. Curnow to go to bed; and my sister and I told her I had given up my project. My sister engaged my wife’s attention while I went out to harness my horse to go, for I could not rest, and felt that I must perform what was clearly my duty. I heard the train coming in the distance as I was harnessing the horse, and I immediately caught up the candle, scarf, and matches, and ran down the line to meet the train. I ran on until I got to where I could see straight before me along the line, and where those in the train would be able to see the danger signal for some distance. I then lit the candle.

and held it behind the red scarf. As the guard’s van got opposite me I caught sight of the guard, who shouted ‘What’s the matter?’ I yelled ‘The Kellys,’ and the pilot engine then stopped a little past me, and the guard jumped down. I told the guard of the line being torn up just beyond the station, and of the Kelly gang lying in wait at the station for the special train of police. He said a special train was behind him, and he would go on to the station and then pull up. I cried, ‘No, no! don’t you do that, or you will get shot.’ He then said that he would go back and stop the special which was coming on. He asked me who I was, and I told him I was the school teacher there, and requested him not to divulge who it was that stopped and warned him, as I was doing it at the risk of my life. He promised to keep my name secret. He asked me to jump in the van, but I declined, as my wife and sister were without protection. The pilot engine whistled several times while I was talking with the guard. The pilot went back, and I hastened home and found Mrs. Curnow had been almost insane while I was stopping the train, and had been made worse by the whistling of the pilot engine. She would not leave the house after I had stopped the train, and we blew out the lights to seem to be in bed. My sister hid the red scarf and my wet clothes, and we were going to deny that it was I who had stopped the train, if one of the outlaws came down to us. After the first volleys had been fired, I, with an old man who lived opposite me, went up to Jones’s to ascertain who were victorious; but we were ordered back by the police, and we returned home. While I was away my sister and wife had a terrible fright through Mr. Rawlins, who had accompanied the police, coming down to the school. They thought that he was Ned Kelly when he asked for the door to be opened. When I reached home I found Mr. Rawlins there. He asked me to draw a plan of Mrs. Jones’s house, which I partly did; but, on hearing the train returning from Benalla, he hurried out, and stopping it, he got into it. During the Sunday afternoon I heard Mr. Stanistreet ask Ned Kelly to allow the rails torn up to be replaced, and he pointed out to Ned Kelly the sacrifice of innocent lives which would ensue if the Monday morning’s passenger train were wrecked. The outlaw refused to allow it to be done. In speaking of and to one another the outlaws had assumed names. In the Argus report, May 16th, of James Byrne, it is stated that James Reardon said he told me that ‘the line was broken,’ and that he told me ‘how the train could be stopped.’ Mr. Reardon is laboring under a wrong impression. I am positive that he did not tell me how the train could be stopped. Stopping the train, nor how to stop it, was not mentioned to me by any one. Of this I am absolutely certain.

17598. Did you notice whether the outlaws were perfectly sober?—They were. One of them, I think Byrne, lay down on the bed about twelve o’clock in the day, and had a sleep, but the others were quite sober.

17599. Was Byrne drunk then?—I think he was under the influence of liquor. I thought so. After sleeping he was quite straight again.

17600. Of course you did not see much of what was done at Mrs. Jones’s afterwards?—No, after we left I saw nothing.
17601. What was the name of the guard that you first spoke to?—I have ascertained since that his name was McPhee.

17602. Did you know anything about Reardon before?—I had known him through living there, about four years.

17603. Did you know anything of whether he sympathized with the Kellys or not?—No. Well, every one in Glenrowan was extremely guarded except to their own immediate friends in speaking on the subject. I never spoke candidly to any one, except my own relations and immediate friends, about Kelly matters. I never spoke out my mind on the subject, and others acted in the same manner.

17604. Was it Reardon that told you the line was taken up?—I cannot say that Reardon did not, for everybody spoke of it, and it was a fact known to all. It was known to several I know, and it was the topic of conversation that the line was torn up, and they were going to wreck the train.

17605. How far from Glenrowan station did you place the signal?—From my place I think I ran about 200 or 300 yards down the line from the school.

17606. Did you run into the cutting?—No. I stopped I think about halfway between the school house and the cutting.

17607. Where you put the signal?—Yes.

17608. You knew the Kellys were close behind at the time?—Every second I stood there I expected a bullet.

17609. You were almost within sight?—It was spies I dreaded, and the probability of one of them coming down. They said one of them would come down. I dreaded he would come while I was stopping it or that spies were about.

17610. Did you get to know any of their sympathizers?—Well, many of the people were suspected round there, but to know for certain I never did, and we simply judged from the papers.

17611. What was your idea of Mrs. Jones’s conduct towards the outlaws at the time?—Well, I thought Mrs. Jones and her daughter were acting foolishly, but did not think their actions were the result of criminal sympathy with the outlaws.

17612. That was not your impression?—No. I thought they were acting under the influence of fear, keeping their real sentiments concealed, as the outlaws were masters, and everybody would please them if they could. My impression regarding Mrs. Jones is that she was in favor of the police.

17613. Did you labor under the impression at any time that there were any other people there sympathizing with them?—The one that we thought to be a sympathizer was McDonnell, on the other side of the line, that was the impression of the people round.

17614. Do you know if they were seen at that place at any time—any of the outlaws?—No.

17615. Were they very observant during the whole period of confinement of the actions of all the men?—They were. There was always one on the watch, and no person could even go to the stable or privy without being seen by one of the outlaws; you could not go anywhere. There was always one of them outside.

17616. There was no desire manifested to get away by those imprisoned?—No; I think they all regarded it as useless making any attempt to get away.

17617. Did Ned Kelly or any of the gang state what their intentions were after they would have wrecked the train?—Well, I conceived it from the conversation of the outlaws that they were going to Benalla to rob the banks. That was my impression during the day, and it was received not direct, but from innuendo in speaking one to another. I remember hearing one of the outlaws express regret to another that there were no banks in Glenrowan, and saying that they would make up for it after they finished the train.

17618. Was it your impression, from conversation that took place, that the plan they had arranged was, first of all, to wreck the train, and then proceed immediately to Benalla, to rob the banks?—That was my impression.

17619. Did you hear of any ammunition being planted at McDonnell’s for the purpose?—No. There was a parcel Dan Kelly was searching for very anxiously; that was the only thing.

17620. Did you know this Delaney you spoke of?—Not intimately, but through seeing him at the post-office and going round different places.

17621. Did you gather anything from him as to whether there were any other makers of the armour?—I had no idea about the armour. My wife told me, after I had stopped the train, they had armour.

17622. I suppose the real fact was you did not know, when you were cooped up in the public-house, who were sympathizers or not?—I did not.

17623. And were afraid to speak to anybody?—Yes, I was afraid to speak even to my wife about anything I was going to do, fearing to be noticed.

17624. You could not tell that anyone you spoke to might not be an agent of the gang?—No, I could not. I was not afraid to speak to Mr. Stanistreet or Mrs. Stanistreet, but I was afraid to speak about my intention to get away and give an alarm, for fear of being observed and suspected.

17625. You did not feel certain of anybody?—No, I would not really trust anyone but Mr. and Mrs. Stanistreet and my wife, sister, and brother-in-law.

17626. By Mr. Sadleir.—Were there any other armed men about besides the Kellys?—I heard from my brother-in-law that Tom Cameron had told him that during the early morning there was constant galloping between the station and the ranges on the right hand side; that is towards Kelly’s residence.

17627. Towards Greta?—Yes, as we were on the road up, I heard a horse walking on the other side of the line, on the right hand side going to Wangaratta, and we stopped and listened, and then we heard it start into a trot, then a canter, and then a gallop. That was when I was going up to see who was victorious after the first volleys were fired.

17628. Were you on the platform later in the day?—I was there about three o’clock.

17629. Did you see Wild Wright then?—No.

17630. Do you know Tom Lloyd?—Yes.

17631. Did you see him earlier in that day?—No, and I do not know whether I saw him at all.

17632. That young Delaney has been convicted of some offences; did he appear to be a sympathizer?—He was as white as a sheet. He was really frightened; he could not make himself so white and trembling as he was.

17633. He has been sentenced for some offence?—Yes.

17634. Is that the boy you referred to as applying for admission to the police?—Yes, that is what Ned Kelly said.

17635. You do not think it a ruse of Ned Kelly’s?—I did afterwards. I did not at the time, but after I did think it was a ruse on Ned Kelly’s part, though not on Delaney’s. Delaney, I think, really thought Ned Kelly in earnest.

17636. Did you see any loiterers outside the crowd any time during the day?—Yes, while the firing was going on.

17637. There is a mystery about certain alleged armed men standing about?—I heard that from some of the onlookers that men had been down in that gully—not police—watching.

17638. By Mr. Hare.—Did anyone call at your house that morning after the special train passed?—Mr. Rawlins.

17639. And mentioned my name?—Not whilst I was at home.

17640. Did your wife tell you that anyone called while you were away giving that signal, and mentioned my name?—No; when I came down from the station I called at a house to tell the people the outlaws were surrounded, and that it was all right.

17641. This was before the special came up, whilst you were away with the flag; had anybody been there during your absence?—No.

17642. Is there anything else you desire to tell the Commission?—Just now I do not think of anything.

The witness withdrew.

Thomas Meehan sworn and examined.

17643. By the Commission.—What are you?—I am breaking in horses now.

17644. What were you formerly?—Formerly in the Victorian police force.

17645. You have written to the Commission asking to be called?—Yes.

17646. Have you any statement you would like to make now?—I have.

17647. You can do so?—I was in charge of the Mansfield station when Sergeant Kennedy went out to arrest Ned Kelly. I must, as a preliminary to that, State that I joined the police force in July, 1873. I was left in charge at Mansfield, and Kennedy, Scanlan, Lonegan, and McIntyre went out. On the Sunday afternoon, about four o’clock (they were shot on the Saturday previous), McIntyre came into Mansfield. He said to me, “This is hell.” I said, “What is up, McIntyre?” He said, “Poor Scanlan is shot, Lonegan is shot, and I believe Sergeant Kennedy is shot.” Then I went to look for Sub Inspector Pewtress to tell him about the occurrence. I had an interview with him, and said, “I know all about it, sir. The best thing I can do is to start for Benalla directly.” He was excited at the time.

Sent me up with my horse from the police station to get horses from the paddock to make up a search party to go out to look for the constables that were shot. I must say McIntyre, when he came in, took my revolver from me. There were no firearms in the police station at all. He took it, he said, because Dan Kelly swore at the Wombat that he would come in and roast him in Mansfield. He was as white as a sheet. He was really frightened; he could not make himself so white and trembling as he was.

17648. Had you not each a revolver?—I had none, I gave mine to McIntyre. He said, “What is up, McIntyre?” He said, “Poor Scanlan is shot, Lonegan is shot, and I believe Sergeant Kennedy is shot.” Then I went to look for Sub Inspector Pewtress to tell him about the occurrence. I had an interview with him, and said, “I know all about it, sir. The best thing I can do is to start for Benalla directly.” He was excited at the time.
been despatched on this message.” Then I returned back to Joe Allen’s (a farmer that lives about a mile back from Barjarg), going back towards Mansfield again. I went back with the object of getting firearms. Allen was not at home. Then I asked Mrs. Allen how far was it back to Hickson’s. I went to Hickson’s. He was out, and there was nobody there at all. I must explain that Hickson’s place is about a hundred yards off the road, and when I was coming out on to the road again two horsemen were on the road, and I said to myself, “I must do something. I must use my head as I have no firearms,” and I took the mare I was riding back and took the bridle off her, and took the boots off that pinched me. I took them off in the excitement of the moment, and made the best of my way to Broken River, my station. I travelled all night and got there the next day. I did not know the country at the time—I was a stranger.

17650. Did you let the horse go?—I let the horse go.

17651. Were they the same two men you saw before?—That I could not say, because it was dark. Then I came into Benalla, gave information to Mr. Sadleir after that. Mr. Nicolson was in Benalla at the time, and there were five of us despatched to catch the Kellys. Senior-Constable James, O’Connor, Bray, who is dead now, and Senior-Constable Kelly. We had one rifle and four revolvers. We went up towards the King River, and we kept the main road all the time—never went into the bush at all, and on the Friday following we started for Bungamara, on the King. I came in to Mansfield. Then we had a consultation to know what was to be done. Sergeant Steele was there. We had no firearms at all, and we dare not make a move. Telegraphed to Benalla, then all were to go to Benalla, and Sub-Inspector Pewtress interviewed me, and said, “Meehan, I will never forget you as long as you are in my district for making such a fool of yourself as you did that night when you went out.”

17652. That is in leaving your horse behind?—Yes.

17653. Did you get the horse again?—The next morning Mr. Hickson came out and saw the horse in the paddock, and took it back to Mansfield, and the report was that I was shot, and there was a search party went out after me, and I was in Benalla at the time.

17654. Did they take any arms?—I could not say, but I heard afterwards there were about ten of them came out of Mansfield to search for me. When I came into Benalla and reported the affair to Mr. Sadleir, he was away somewhere inspecting the stations. And there was the great Sebastopol raid. He chose to interview me about this night, and said to me, “Meehan, would not it be better for you then, that you were shot, than to be out all night in the bush?” Of course I differed with him in that. Then he asked me, why did not I challenge those two men, and I told him I had nothing to challenge them with. It is ridiculous now, but my word, at the time it was serious.

17655. Did either of those men, in either case, attempt to interfere with you to cause you to have such a desperate fright?—No, but they had dogged me—they had come back to Joe Allen’s and then back to Hickson’s.

17656. You stated that you could not tell whether they were the same two men?—I could not say.

17657. Then bow did they “dog you”?—I could see the two horsemen were at Hickson’s when I came out.

17658. The first men you saw were by the side of the road, not on horseback?—They had their horses with them; that I can swear.

17659. Were they saddled and ready for mounting?—That I could not say.

17660. Did you not take a fright at something imaginary?—No.

17661. What was there desperate in their appearance?—When McIntyre said Ned Kelly would come into Mansfield and roast him after taking his revolver.

17662. It was the image of something that frightened you?—It may be an image, but it was something more substantial than an image. I can assure you of that.

17663. You were under the impression that those men were a portion of the gang?—I had reasons to doubt about it, but still I had my ideas, and I believe they were correct. I would not say positively.

17664. What did you do all night with yourself; did you get as far away as you could from them?—I took it very quietly, I can assure you, under the circumstances; so much so, that when I came in I told Mr. Sadleir about it. Then the Sebastopol affair was after that. Then things went on swimmingly.

17665. How far was it from where you left the horse that night to where you reached in the morning?—It would be about three miles.

17666. What were you doing all the night?—I have stated before I did not know the country; I went at the back of the ranges. They were different to what I thought they were. When I got into the bush it seemed different to me altogether.

17667. Do you mean to imply that you got “bushed”?—I did.

17668. In what way?—I was a stranger in that part of the country.

17669. Were you walking all the time?—I was walking till I got tired to get to the Broken River, that was my station.

17670. Did you not find any house when you were out that night?—No, there are no houses there.

17671. You know when you are dealing with a case of life and death—shooting three or four constables—it is hardly the thing to say you spent the whole night in going three miles. However, you got to the station in the morning?—I did.

17672. What further happened when you were sent out with the search party?—What I have stated about Mr. Sadleir. Then after that, I was sent to the Wombat, to Monk’s place; I was there for some time. Then I was ordered back to my station again, at the Broken River. Then search parties were the order of the day at the time; they went out fourteen or fifteen at a time—things that I knew was a farce. I came into Benalla one time, there was a telegram sent up to Mansfield for the black tracker Spider and Constable Allwood to proceed to Benalla, take up Constable Meehan, at the Broken River. I went down with them to Benalla. There was no purpose for that, as far as I was cognizant. The next day we were ordered back to our stations. Captain Standish was in the yard at the time, and Mr. Nicolson was in the yard. Mr. Nicolson came over to me at the stable and read me a very wholesome lecture about how I could take a horse out of the stable. I did not do it according to his ideas, and I led the horse out of the stable, and it did not please Mr. Nicolson. This was the time when there was supposed to be no discipline at all. I must have me back into the stable again to take the bridle off the mare, and to lead her out according to his ideas. I had, of course, to submit. Then we went back to our stations. On another occasion, Constable Allwood and the black tracker again—Spider and myself came to Benalla. This was for the agricultural show. I got information in Benalla from Tom Reading, an ex-sergeant of police, and I believed him, about the Kellys being out on the Puzzle Range. He told me what to do, and how he got the information. I came into the office; Mr. Sadleir and Mr. Nicolson were in the office at the time. Mr. Sadleir never spoke to me on that occasion. I saluted Mr. Nicolson; it was not according to his ideas. Then he stood up from the table, and told me how I should salute him. I told him I was in the depot in 1873, and that I was in the ranges all the time since, and I saluted him to the best of my ability. Mind you, this was when I brought information. After he thought he had instructed me, he said, “Now, what do you want?” I told him I wanted nothing. He said, “How much drink had you this morning?” I told him I had two brandies. He said, “Was the man drunk that gave you the intelligence, Meehan?” I said, “No, sir, he was not.” He said, “I shall make enquiries.”

17673. You have asked to be examined by the Commission?—Excuse me, there is something more I have got to say to the Commission.

17674. Did Mr. Nicolson, or any other officer tell you that discipline was relaxed at the time you brought out the horse out of the stable?—In the correspondence book it is there.

17675. What do you mean by that—what is in the book?—Particular orders that emanated from head quarters, and copied at all the stations.

17676. What was the nature of the entry?—That uniform was dispensed with.

17677. That is not that discipline was dispensed with?—Uniform being dispensed with, discipline was dispensed with.

17678. That was not the instruction?—Where could I take my instruction from?

17679. Did you imagine that uniform was the foundation of all discipline?—Not necessarily.

17680. You said you had something of importance you wanted to tell the Commission?—Yes; I should wish the Commission should give me an impartial hearing.

17681. We only want anything of importance. I may as well tell you at once that the record we have shows that you were discharged from the police for drunkenness?—I will come to that.

17682. There are some entries on your sheet by a gentleman not here at all that you were intermate. Come to that at once, or anything of importance?—We shall come to that directly. On another occasion I came into Benalla about Jim Quin, who told me about the Kellys. He said, “Your guns cannot hurt.” To put it in plain phraseology, he said, “You——, you cannot hurt.”

17683. Was he drinking at that time?—He was, and I was too. Jim Quin said, “The lads (meaning the outlaws) will drink out of one of those bottles,” the one we were drinking out of.

17684. What object had you in writing to the Commission so frequently to call you?—About the Kellys being at Mother Farrell’s place; and when I gave that information to Mr. Nicolson, and he would not act upon it, when I had to salute him and everything.

17685. Were you sober at the time?—Yes.

17686. Was that the time you had been drinking with Jim Quin?—Yes. I could always drink. This was a man that could get information about the Kellys for the police; a man with polished boots in the township could not.

17687. There was no action taken on your information then?—I do not know whether there was or not.

The witness withdrew.

Patrick Quin sworn and examined.

17688. By the Commission.—What is your occupation?—Farmer.

17689. Where do you live?—South Hanson, seven miles beyond Greta.

17690. Have you expressed a desire several times to give evidence before the Commission?—Yes.

17691. If there is anything you desire to tell, just do so in your own way?—This affair of the Kellys commenced out of horse stealing first. I am the first man that gave the information about those horses. I met a man who is now in Wangaratta named Cook, alias Lowry, and he thought to screen himself from me on the road and pulled a comforter on him so I did not know him, and I found out on the same evening who he was. A young fellow, Mark Whitty, had missed a horse a day or two after, and was looking for this horse when he met me, and asked me if I had seen anything of a bay cob of his; and I said I had seen it at the bottom of Fitzsimmons and Hughes’s paddock. He said he could not find him; so I said, “If you do not get him in a day or two, let me know.” So his father was talking to me some time after, and told me his son could not find the horse, and I said, “There is a fellow called Billy Cook, who goes by the name of Lowry, about here, and I have heard he has taken it, and he is up about the Murray somewhere about Howlong.” I was in Wangaratta after that, talking to Inspector Brooke Smith, and told him there was a cove hanging about there, and that I heard he was going to take some horses, and had already taken one, and the sooner he was caught the better. After this, there were some horses belonging to James Whitty, Robert Jeffery, and John Farrell taken, and this man Jeffery came to me, and asked me to find out where the mare was taken he had lost. During the time this other horse was taken I saw those horses of Jeffery’s and James Whitty’s passing up to the waterhole with some horses of my own, so I made enquiries and found out that those horses were taken up to the Murray and that this man Cook was connected in the taking of them. Robert Jeffery met me in Greta, and he told me that he saw my horse in the Street. Well, I went in to tell Constable Thom. I saw him after a few days, and asked Thom if he had got those horses, and he said

“No,” and I said, “It is strange that this man can be about and take people’s horses—that such work could not be carried on;” and he said, “I ain’t my own boss, I cannot do as I like.” A second mob of horses was taken after this. There was a man called Isaiah Wright. I met him at a ploughing match at Greta, and he asked to buy two colts from me, and I brought them up the same night, and some other horses were taken away. I heard in two days after that Wright had taken the horses, and that Pat Quin had known something about it. It appears there was a man in Smith’s yard said that if Wright had taken the horses, and Pat Quin knew about it, he (Quin) would not allow it. And he said he did not believe Wright had anything to do with taking the horses.

17692. What does this lead up to?—It leads up to this that there are people who have mentioned my name that I had been connected with those fellows, but I had not been in any way. I did my best to stop this.

17693. Then you gave information to enable those people to get their horses again?—Yes; those men came to me themselves personally.

17694. Is there anything further in connection with the outbreak?—Then this affair of Fitzpatrick occurred, and I met Kelly on or about the road. I could not be positive whether it was a few days before or after; and I asked him if he had anything to do with the stolen horses, and he denied it; and I said I believed he had. He said, “No.” And I said the best thing he could do was to give himself up to the police, and he said, “No; if any man interferes with me I will shoot him.” I advised him to give himself up, and said, “If any one is advising you otherwise, it is for your bad and not for your good.”

17695. Were those horses recovered?—Whitty’s and Jeffery’s mare, and the second or third lot that was taken, I believe their throats were cut, and they were pitched into waterholes.

17696. You have no proof of that?—No, only my own belief.

17697. Is there anything further you want to say?—This Fitzpatrick affair. I believe myself, Fitzpatrick, from what I have heard and can make out, was shot by Ned Kelly. I met Ned Kelly after some time, in company with another man. There were three of them together—Ned, and Dan, and another. I did not know either Hart or Byrne. This was after the Fitzpatrick affair, before the murders.

17698. What were they doing then?—Crossing the road in front of me.

17699. Was it about that time you told them they ought to deliver themselves up?—No; that was after that.

17700. Did you know anything of their movements at the time the police were out after them, after they shot the constables?—I knew they were in the bush, and it would be a hard job to get them out.

17701. Did they appear any time where the people knew they were?—Unless they passed now and again. Oh, yes, I had seen them after.

17702. You saw them after the murders?—Yes.

17703. I suppose they passed to and fro very often?—Yes.

17704. You did not feel disposed to give any information to the police?—I did.

17705. Did they act upon it?—I gave information to Mr. Sadleir. But one thing I want to mention before that. About a week before the Euroa bank robbery, there was a woman came to my place who wanted to find out from my wife if she could get some rations for the Kellys. My wife told me on Sunday. This woman came back on Monday, and I came on the following day to Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadleir, in Benalla, and I told them what I had seen. I had seen a man too at the same time meeting this woman at the corner of the lane, as she was leaving my place, and he had a pack on his horse.

17706. Did you know the woman?—Yes, it was Mrs. Skillian, sister of Ned Kelly.

17707. What happened when you told Mr. Sadleir that?—I told him and Mr. Nicolson I should like he should come, or some of his men come, and I would go with them up the King.

17708. Did they take any notice of that?—Yes. Mr. Sadleir asked me to stop and to see Mr. Nicolson, and I did so. Mr. Nicolson made an excuse. He said, “This woman might be only leading you astray.” “Well,” I said, “it might be possible, but I do not think it, because I saw the man with her after she left my place starting away, and I ask you to come now, and if not to telegraph to Mansfield or Wangaratta, and I will lead the men any way you think best.”

17709. Was there any action taken upon that at all?—Mr. Nicolson said he was after coming in from a long ride and the horses were tired, and made an excuse, and asked me if Thursday would do.

17710. What did you say?—I said, “If those men are short of rations they will not stop there. They are not going to wait on your pleasure or anybody else’s, and I would like you to come at the present time.”

17711. He did not come at that time?:—No; he said he would come on Thursday.

17712. He did not telegraph to any men for you to meet them?:—No.

17713. Was there any other occasion?:—On Thursday Constable Strahan came to me and, said that Mr. Nicolson could not come. On the same day I went out for a load of rails, and a man called Tom Roach came to me at the dray, and said he was out all night; that he had pitched a billy of water on his fire that night because Kelly had come to his camp and four more. He said he left part of his things after him. So I said I supposed he had no supper or breakfast, and he said, “No,” and I invited him to come along with me and have some. So he got on the dray, and I told him, “My wife is sister to Ned’s mother, and you will not let her know anything,” and he jumped off the dray and said he would not go in, and I said he need not be frightened, I would not say anything about it, and he came in and had some breakfast. He asked me after if there was a police camp at Greta, and I said there were police there; and he said “I will not go there, for I was talking with Ned, and he said if I gave information to the police he would shoot me.” Then the man said he was going away to New South Wales.

17714. Did you give this information to Strahan when he came?:—Well, no, I did not, because he told me at the time that he had seen police upon the King, and he believed they were after them.

17715. You did not give any information at that time to the police?:—No, I could not.

17716. Did you at any time after do so, or did you know of any of the movements of the gang?:—After the police being shot, Detective Ward and Constable Strahan came to me, and they asked me to go down to see Mr. Nicolson, and I did so; and he asked me if I would assist him in getting the gang, and I said those men would keep out of my road—they had already done so, especially after their shooting the police. So Mr. Nicolson said he would pay me, and I said I would take no payment, and advised him to be very cautious whom he did pay. I said, “If you do not mind, those men will have a long reign, because they are good bushmen and good horsemen, and they do not care about grog, and it will be very hard to entrap them into any place.”

17717. Did they come to your place at any time after that?:—I believe there was one of them at my place after that.

17718. You did not see him yourself?:—I did not, but a little boy of mine told me there was one talking to a girl at my place. I saw the five men at my place once together—Ned Kelly and Dan and three other men—I suppose Byrne and Hart, but the other I was not certain of.

17719. Did you know it was Byrne and Hart?:—Well, only just from seeing them with the Kellys.

17720. Where did you see them?:—On the Gap over Greta.

17721. Do you remember anything about the fight?:—No, but I told Mr. Sadleir on the next day.

17722. What did he say to you?:—He said he would go and see Mr. Nicolson, and tell him of it, and would go and have a try. At the time I saw them there were two young fellows coming along the road about that spot—at the place—and they spoke to me. They asked me if I had a match on me, and I was pulling out the matches, when I thought if I lit those matches they would see who I was. It was just after dark, and I did not give them the matches. So I got off my horse, and there was a bough standing on the road; I broke that, and turned on the road, and we talked a bit; and after that I saw two of them running back from the road in the same direction they were coming from; so I got on horse and came away.

17723. Did you give that information?:—I went in the next day to Wangaratta, and met Mr. Sadleir, and told him.

17724. What did he do then?:—He said he would go and tell Mr. Nicolson, and that they would go.

17725. Did you see them upon any other occasion after that?:—Yes, I saw them sometime after. There were only three of them together. I did not give any information then, because, after what Mr. Sadleir said, that they had the saddles on the horses, and Mr. Nicolson would not go the other time, I said to myself; “There is no good; if I see them a hundred times, I will never say anything more about them—I will mind myself.”

17726. You made up your mind not to give any further information?:—Yes.

17727. What occasion was that you refer to about Mr. Sadleir saying that—can you fix the date?:—No, I cannot; I think Mr. Sadleir can.

Mr. Sadleir.—He refers to the 28th of September.
Patrick Quinn, 20th Sept. 1881.

The Witness.—I was going to Benalla the same night, only there was a man on horseback came after me, and I made to go into Benalla, and this man got beside me and pulled up and stood up under a bush. So I thought it was someone watching me and following me, so I went home, and this man kept in sight of me all the way home. After I got in I let the horse go and went into the house, and this man came into the slip-panel to see whether I let my horse go, and then went out. The next morning I tracked his horse along the same road going back to where he was when I first saw him.

17728. Have you anything more particular to say?—No, I think not.
17729. By Mr. Nicolson.—You remember, you say, my coming over the first time I saw you, with Detective Ward and Senior-Constable Strahan, one Sunday evening?—Yes.
17730. Do you remember it was a Sunday evening?—Yes.
17731. Sergeant Steele also?—Yes.
17732. Do you remember afterwards telling me of the appearance of one of the outlaws, or a young man on the cross-road on the ranges?—Yes; I was carting rails.
17733. Do you know who that man was—was it Byrne?—No, I think it was Hart.
17734. You made a promise that you would come and go out with us?—Yes.
17735. I do not know what prevented you, but I sent Senior-Constable Strahan to see why you did not come. You were engaged harvesting—that was the message that came back. Do you remember sending a message back by Strahan?—That was a message you got a long time after, because I heard that I was blamed for putting those men away, and if I did not mind myself I would get shot, and I think I said to you after, that unless I went with you altogether and cleared out of there, that those fellows had their liberty and would shoot me.
17736. Do you remember my seeing you after the return from Melbourne, on Wednesday, towards the end of November 1878, just before the Euroa Bank robbery?—No, it was either Monday or Tuesday I went in to Benalla, and I saw you before the Euroa Bank robbery.
17737. Then this thing occurred you spoke of—you saw Mr. Sadleir and myself?—Yes, and I asked to see you, and I saw you that evening.
17738. What did you propose to me?—I asked for you to send someone or come with me up the King, about twenty-five miles above Glenmore Station, and you said that you were after coming in from a long ride and the horses were tired.
17739. Did you see men and horses about the yard at the time. Do you remember my pointing them out at the time?—No.
17740. Were you not in the yard?—Not with you. It was late in the evening when you were talking to me. I had waited till you came.
17741. Were the horses and men pointed out to you. Did you see them that afternoon?—I do not think it. I remember your making a remark to me about the horses. I do not recollect your showing them to me—still you might have done so. I remember your saying after, you would send to Sergeant Steele, at Wangaratta, and someone else, that they would meet me.
17742. What statement did you make to me—You mentioned about the woman?—Yes.
17743. Did you tell us about Mrs. Skillian?—Yes, certainly.
17744. Where did you say those men were?—Up the King.
17745. Did you describe the sort of place?—Yes, the place where Jim Quin had been at the time he was away from the police. I described it as a basin.
17746. The Euroa Bank robbery occurred on the 10th, what day of the week did you say this was you saw me?—It was either Monday or Tuesday, eight or nine days before.
17747. Was it Sunday or Monday?—It was either Monday or Tuesday. It was not Sunday, I know.
17748. Do you not remember any appointment you had with us, just immediately before that?—No. You said before I left you on that day, you promised to come on Thursday, and I said it would be too late.

Strahan came to me on the Thursday and said you could not come. I said I thought it was too late then. This was the time that this man Roach came to me after I was loading the rails, and he was very excited.

17749. Do you deny that I saw you in Benalla on Wednesday the 27th of November?—It was not on Wednesday; it was either Monday or Tuesday.
17750. Do you say that on that occasion I did not make an appointment with you for a party to go out with you on Friday the 29th?—It was not on Wednesday you saw me. You said you would not come, but would get a party to meet me at the King station; and Constable Strachan came to me on Thursday, and said you could not come and could not send the men.
17751. Do you not remember receiving a message from me, more than once, complaining at your not coming?—No, I never did. I was ready with my horse.
17752. Do you remember seeing me at Fitzsymons’s, the man who had the store at the corner of the barracks, opposite the hotel?—I never recollect meeting you there. I recollect meeting you on the footpath near, but I do not remember your speaking to me there.
17753. And it was in the evening, you say, you had this interview?—Yes.
I will show what occurred on that Monday and Tuesday referred to—[reading from his diary]. On Monday the 2nd, a week previous to the Euroa Bank robbery, I left Benalla for Wangaratta. On the Tuesday I went to Hedi and beyond, to Upper King, and took a party of men I did not return to Wangaratta until the 4th. I came in from Fern Hill, and Benalla, and German’s Creek, where the Kellys used to live, on Monday the 9th, that is the week following, the day before the Euroa robbery, and on Tuesday the 10th I was in Benalla all day, and then went up to Albury. On those days there were men and horses really fatigued, having returned from this journey I spoke of. There was nothing of the kind on the previous week. On Wednesday the 27th I returned to Benalla; saw P. Quin, Thursday, 28th. On Friday, 29th, party was in readiness waiting for Patrick Quin, who did not come. On Saturday, 30th, I went to Wangaratta; and on Sunday, December 1st, was there.

17755. By the Commission (to Mr. Nicolson).—Then your statement is that Quin did not keep the appointment he made?—He did not keep the appointment made a week before, but he came in on the following week—the day of the bank robbery. On Monday the 9th he came in. On that occasion there was nothing about Mrs. Skillian ever mentioned. He was mysterious, and told us he could take us away up to this basin. I saw the man was deceiving me, and one of the common sense reasons before him for not going at that moment was that the horses and men were fatigued and unfit for such a journey, having just come in; he could see them in the yard, and he never mentioned to me anything about Mrs. Skillian.

17756. By the Witness (to Mr. Nicolson).—Did you not ask me, when I mentioned about Mrs. Skillian, if she was not in the habit of coming to my place, and I told you she was not?—On every occasion I saw you I asked you about the Kellys.

17757. On this particular time?—No.

17758. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—You have stated that you also met Mr. Sadleir and gave him some information about having seen someone in the bush?—I saw them the night before.

17759. You saw whom?—Ned Kelly and his brother, and three other people I believed was Byrne and Hart, and the third I could not tell who it was.

17760. You have been down in Melbourne several times?—Once or twice lately.

17761. At whose instance are you down here now?—I came down of myself. I asked to come down, and paid my own expenses, and came just in the matter of fair play and justice.

The Chairman.—The witness has written several times to ask to be examined.

17762. By Mr. Nicolson (to the witness).—What was your object particularly in being examined—at whose instigation?—My own.

17763. Why?—Because I think there has been blundering about this affair from the first commencement, and I think, after you came up to the district, you commenced blundering too. In the first place, when you said that you would pay me, I said I would take no money—I would be at liberty to speak over this affair. I told you I would keep a horse in the paddock, and I said, “You can rely upon me that I will neither give them rations from my place or anyone connected with me.” I said they intended to rob banks, and this is what they had taken the bush for. I told you that in the lane at the time, and you asked me what bank, and I said there was a bank at Bright and there is a bank at Avenel and Euroa. I had heard those banks talked of before the men were shot. I mentioned that to you when I saw you.

17764. I should have been much obliged to you if you had. I do not remember it. Did I offer you money?—No; you said you would pay me, and you asked me if I could write, and I said, “Before I write a letter to you, and you get it, where are those men—they are a hundred miles away.”

17765. Is this correct; did I send to you, on more than one occasion, a message according to agreement, and you declined to come?—No; I always had a horse there.

17766. Did you ever make an appointment with me to turn up a certain day and you did not do so?—Never.

17767. You induced me to keep a party of men, as mentioned in the evidence, for more than a week in Benalla?—No. I asked you to come—to proceed, and you made excuses; and you ought to be able to find out by this time whether I had anything to do with the Kellys or with the money from the banks. I thought you would use better judgment than to send men to my place on that Sunday, when my wife was sick, and a lot of people there, for it to get about that I was working with you, and I be likely to be shot.

Mr. Nicolson.—I never heard of all this before.

17768. By Mr. Hare (to the witness).—Did you ever see me at Benalla?—Yes.

17769. Do you remember coming to Benalla one day and giving me the same information as you say you gave to Mr. Nicolson about the men being up at the head of the King?—Yes.

17770. What was done on that occasion?—I said to you about the men being in there at the time. I told Mr. Nicolson, and you asked me if I would show you this place. I said I would, and you asked me, I think, which was Bright or Mansfield the nearest to the King. I said I thought Mansfield, and you said, “Then I will telegraph and send a party of men to meet you.”

17771. Did I do so?—Yes.

17772. Did you meet them?—Yes.

17773. Did you go and show them the place?—Yes, and there was a fire there, and we could not pass because of the fire; the trees were falling.
17774. Do you remember the Commission sitting at Benalla?—Yes.
17775. Do you remember seeing me that day?—Yes.
17776. Do you remember a conversation you had with me that day?—Yes; that Mr. Nicolson was the cause of those men having so long a run.
17777. I do not refer to that. With regard to the information that you gave him concerning the bank—do you remember saying, "I see by Mr. Nicolson’s evidence that a bank was going to be stuck up"?—Yes.
17778. What did you say to that?—I said I told him myself the banks were going to be stuck up.
17779. When?—The first time I was talking to him—on the Sunday evening. I mentioned four banks Seymour, Avenel, and Euroa.

17780. Have I had any conversation with you since that day?—No.
17781. Have I in any way, or anybody from me, communicated with you?—No.
17782. By Mr. Sadleir.—The night you saw those five men on the hill-top you said you intended going to Benalla, only that man following you prevented?—Yes.
17783. When you met me you were going to see Sergeant Steele?—Yes, I met him in the street just before you; I was just going around to see him.
17784. You were not then on your way to Benalla?—I was going to go to Benalla, only I thought from the place I met you in front of the hotel?—Yes.
17785. You know the place I met you in front of the hotel?—Yes.
17786. You were not on your way to Benalla then?—No I was in Wangaratta, and was going to go to Benalla the previous night, but I thought those men might follow me.

The witness withdrew.

Mr. Sadleir.—I have the amended affidavit of Dr. Nicholson, and I now hand it in to be placed in the evidence—[handing the same, which is as follows]:—"I, John Nicholson, doctor of medicine and a legally qualified medical practitioner in Victoria, make oath and say:—I arrived at Glenrowan before day light on the morning of the twenty-eighth day of June 1880, in company with Superintendent Sadleir and a party of police from Benalla. Three shots were fired from Mrs. Jones’s hotel in one volley on Mr. Sadleir’s party, and immediately afterwards a volley of four. After Ned Kelly was arrested, Mr. Sadleir asked him if he could get the other outlaws to give in, but he (Kelly) said it was no use trying, as they were now quite desperate. After dressing Kelly’s wounds, Mr. Sadleir asked me whether I thought he was justified in making a rush upon the house; I said that to do so against men in armour, such as we saw, was certain to result in several men being severely, if not mortally wounded; and, as the day was young, it would be best to wait some time before attempting anything, as there was no possibility of their escape. I then said it is a pity we have not got a small gun with us, as their armour would be no protection to them, and the chimney would be knocked about their ears. Mr. Sadleir said that Captain Standish was starting from Melbourne, and would be up a little after mid-day, and he would immediately telegraph to him and mention the matter, but as no time could be lost, he would send a telegram at once. The telegram was sent about five minutes after the gun was first mentioned; possibly, if there was time for mature deliberation, it would not have been sent at all. Mr. Sadleir was particularly cool and collected all the time I saw him, but events were not under his control; the crowd which had collected made anything like order utterly impracticable—the position was one of great difficulty—and I do not think that any one would have managed much better. The place might have been rushed, but to unnecessarily risk men’s lives would have been foolhardy, however brilliant it would have looked. I have known Mr. Sadleir for several years as a painstaking, trustworthy, and capable officer. I may add that a great deal of my knowledge of his character has been obtained in my capacity of justice of the peace. And I make this declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.—JN0. NICHOLSON. Declared before me at Benalla, on the 16th day of September, One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one—Robt. McBean, J.P."

There are three things indicated in that:—First, that three, if not four of the outlaws were in full vigor at the time my party arrived. Second, that there were only a few minutes left for reflection when the gun was first spoken of up to the time the message was sent, and, though I was incorrect in my supposition that the reporters suggested it, it appears it was Mr. Nicholson, and one of the reporters, Mr. Melvin, has said I spoke to him about it shortly after. Third, you will see by my expression to Mr. Nicholson that I did have a rush in view, when the time arrived, from the earliest part of that day. There is a second affidavit from Edwin Rodda, clergyman, in which he says:—"I, Edward Rodda, clergyman, of Benalla, in the colony of Victoria, make oath and say as follows:—That I was a spectator of what transpired at Glenrowan, at the capture of the Kelly gang, from about twelve o’clock till half-past four p.m. Knowing Superintendent Sadleir well by sight, I made enquiries where he was, and he was pointed out to me standing with Mr. O’Connor about one hundred yards on the north-east side of Jones’s hotel. I saw Dean Gibney get out of the train, and in about twenty minutes he was alone with Ned Kelly. About one o’clock, I met him at McDonald’s hotel where he was taking some refreshment. ’Then he, I, and Dr. Henry, and another walked up the line to see the place where the rails were torn up. We stayed there some minutes and returned. It would be about two o’clock when we got back. Observing Mrs. Skillian coming, I suggested to Father Gibney that the police might allow her to go to the house. He spoke to her, and they moved away to the south end of the platform. I did not hear the priest enquire for the officer in charge. Had he done so there would be no difficulty in finding him. I heard no orders to fire into the building; but observed the police to fire when they thought they saw a form at the window. I saw the house fired and the woman ordered back. The priest alone went through the house, and came out proclaiming all dead. Then the place was rushed. I was with the priest about one hour and a half, and was under the impression that he knew Mr. Sadleir was at his post, as any one else could see. And I make this declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.—EDWIN RODDA. Declared before me at Benalla, on the 29th day of August, One thousand eight hundred and eighty—Geo. Sharpe, J.P.” I had that document for some time by me and did not think it necessary to trouble the Commission with it; but in reading Dean Gibney’s evidence, he is very emphatic about the bad generalship, and I wish that to be compared with Mr. Rodda’s statement.

Mr. Hare.—On the subject of the Glenrowan business, I have a declaration to hand in from Constable Phillips, which is as follows:—“Police Station, Goornong, 16th September 1881. I, William Phillips, constable, of Goornong, in the colony of Victoria, do solemnly and sincerely declare that I heard the following conversation pass between Ned Kelly and Joe Byrne, at the rear of Mrs. Jones’s hotel, Glenrowan, about (10) ten minutes after the first encounter at 3 a.m. First, my attention was drawn to a voice asking, ‘Is that you, Joe?’ ‘Yes. Is that you, Ned?’ Come here.’ ‘Come here be d—d. What are you doing there; come with me and load my rifle. I am cooked.’ ‘So am I. I think my leg is broke.’ ‘Leg be d—d; you got the use of your arms. Come on; load for me. I’ll pink the buggars.’ ‘Don’t be so excited; the boys will hear us, and it will dishearten them. I am afraid it’s a case with us this time.’ ‘Well, it’s your fault; I always said this bloody armour would bring us to grief.’ ‘Don’t you believe it; old Hare is cooked, and we will soon finish the rest.’ They went then towards the Wangaratta end. Secondly, that I informed Senior-Constable Kelly about an hour afterwards that two of the outlaws were cooked. Thirdly, that to satisfy myself that it was them I heard talking, I examined Joe Byrnes body at the watchhouse, Benalla, on the 29th June 1881, in the presence of Constable Falkiner and Dr. Nicholson, of Benalla, and found a bullet hole clean through the sinews of the calf of the right leg, and his boot when I pulled it off, was full of blood. And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing that same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.—WM. PHILLIPS. Signed and declared before me this 16th day of September 1881, at Campaspe—Thos. Robertson, J.P. The Honorable Francis Longmore, Chairman of the Police Commission.” Wallace spoke as to who he believed was the writer of the anonymous letter, in which are stated certain things about Mr. Nicolson, and that they wanted to get rid of Mr. Nicolson from the district. Upon that I hand in now two declarations, one from Mr. Webster, and one from a constable there:—“I, James Daniel Webster, of Yea, in the colony of Victoria, grazier, do solemnly and sincerely declare that previous to Superintendent Hare giving evidence before the Police Commission, as follows, viz:—‘That a schoolmaster in the North-Eastern district had been acting as an agent for the police, and identifying him as a school-fellow of Joe Byrne,’ I had several conversations with ‘Wallace’ at Yea (where he is now stationed) on the subject of the Kelly business, and he frequently stated that the outlaw’s were much harassed by the tactics adopted by Mr. Hare, and were afraid of him, as he constantly kept them on the move. He further stated that they (the outlaws) had great contempt for Mr. Nicolson for the mode he used for capturing them. He (Wallace) not only made this statement to me, but also declared that he had a schoolmaster in the North-Eastern district who was an agent for the police, and identifying him as a school-fellow of Joe Byrne.” Wallace also stated that the hired agents worked better and were more faithful to Mr. Hare than any other of the police officers, and that was an additional reason the outlaws had of fearing Mr. Hare.—J. D. WEBSTER, Declared before me, at Melbourne, in the colony aforesaid, this 18th day of September, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.—J. B. Motherwell, J.P.” The other is from Constable Fitzgerald:—“Yea, 19th September 1881.—I, James Fitzgerald, of Yea, make affidavit that soon after the destruction of the Kelly gang of bushrangers at Glenrowan, James Wallace, State school teacher, stated to me that the gang were in terror of the means of pursuit adopted by Mr. Hare—that he always kept them moving about, whereas under Mr. Nicolson’s mode of pursuit they felt content and safer. Wallace also stated that the hired agents worked better and were more faithful to Mr. Hare than any other of the police officers, and that was an additional reason the outlaws had of fearing Mr. Hare.—J. FITZGERALD. Signed and swore before me at Yea this 19th September 1881—J. D. Webster, a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of Victoria for taking affidavits.” I wish also to make an affidavit myself on a letter that was laid before the Commission:—“I, Francis Augustus Hare, of East Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, superintendent of police, do solemnly and sincerely declare that the statement made by the person known as the diseased stock agent, in his letter to the chairman of this Commission, and particularly referred to by Mr. Nicolson in his evidence, to the effect that he (the diseased stock agent) gave Mr. Sadleir and myself reliable information, a few days before Aaron Sherritt was shot, that the outlaws were out and intended making a raid, is untrue. I most positively declare such statement is false; the only information furnished to me was simply that the outlaws would soon make a raid on some bank, as they were short of money. Mr. Sadleir at the time stated to me, in the presence of the informant, that he (the agent) had constantly been giving similar information for many months past, and I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of the Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.—FRANCIS HARE. Declared before me, at Melbourne, in the colony aforesaid, this 16th day of September, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one—Charles B. Payne, J.P.”

Charles Hope Nicolson further examined.

The Witness.—May I make a few remarks with reference to the evidence of Quinn?

17787. By the Commission.—I think you have mentioned all about Quinn in your evidence?—It is only about things he has uttered here that I never heard before. His statement as to telling me about the banks is an absurdity. He never mentioned such a thing as that. He promised to come out with the police and “ride the outlaws down.” That was his expression, and he was a very capable man to do it, but he never kept one of those promises; and he had plenty of police that he could have obtained, but he never did. I sent more than once to him asking why he did not. On one occasion I was out on Monday, the 25th November, with some constables—[looking at his diary]. That was the last search party just before the outbreak at Euroa, except the party the day before the outbreak. Two days after this party came in that I was out with, I saw Quinn; met him on the Wednesday. I believe it was about Fitzsymons’s store; and I spoke to him about his not keeping his promises and humbugging us; and we had come to the conclusion—not only the officers, but the few men who knew him, Senior-Constable Strachan and Sergeant Steele, and others—that there was no reliance to be placed in him. He promised then and there to start with us, to meet us, that he would run them down any time, and he would come on Friday, the 29th November, and the entry in my diary at the time shows that I had a party in readiness, waiting for him, and that he never came. On Saturday, 30th November, I was at Wangaratta, and had given it up; but still I left the party in reserve in the barracks, with Mr. Sadleir, for this work, in case Quinn should still come. And I went to Wangaratta and other places, and on 1st December I had got back to Wangaratta; was there all day—that was on the Sunday—and I have shown already by my diary where I was on the other days. On the Thursday I was at Hedi and the Upper King, where I saw the elder Jack Quinn.

17788. Brother of this man?—No, brother-in-law, and I got back to Wangaratta on Wednesday the 4th. I despatched Constable Flood with a party to Greta. They did not get back till Thursday the 5th to Benalla, and then started off to German Creek, getting back on Monday the 9th.

17789. That was the day before the Euroa bank robbery?—Yes. Then it was on this day that this man came in, and it was in the afternoon, as he says, and the place we were standing in was screened from the road behind the watchhouse, out of sight. The men were bringing out their horses and washing them at the water trough, and then he made this monstrous proposition that I should start up there at once, though, from his knowledge of horses, he could see it was impossible. I pointed at once to the horses. They were there before him, and I said, “How can you expect those horses to accomplish this journey?” From that and other things, I saw the man was humbugging me. There is only one thing more. He spoke of having given other information. The only other was this young man on the road, where he was conveying provisions to the outlaws on the Black Range, and the other was when he met Mr. Sadleir and gave information. On no other occasion did he give information, and on all occasions he avoided me. He would go out of his way to avoid speaking to me when he met me at Benalla.

The witness withdrew.

APPENDIX 1.
EVIDENCE TAKEN WITH CLOSED DOORS.

William B. Montfort further examined.

1. By the Commission.—Do you consider that there should be a foot constable stationed at Oxley Bridge?—I do, for the present.

2. What is your reason for that?—Because the premises of the Bank of Victoria there, unprotected, is a source of weakness, and liable to induce an outrage, which would lead to more serious results; and, in addition to that, that the bridge could be watched by the police, as being the most important crossing on the King River, and a good site for the mounted police to perform their proper duties.

3. Do you propose a station at any place?—Yes, temporarily. I have made arrangements. I believe that a station should be placed at a point about ten miles above Greta station, at Mason's, on the Fifteen-mile Creek. My reason for that suggestion is that the police at that station would command the country between the Fifteen-mile Creek and Benalla, a line running north and south from Greta to Mansfield, along which travelling stock pass; also, I am informed, stolen cattle to the Murray, and vice versa.

4. And that track also commands all the back country where the murders of the police took place?—Yes. I have been speaking to an intimate friend of mine, a squatter born and reared there, and when I told him confidentially of my intention to make this suggestion, he highly approved of it, and said that it commanded the whole of that country there.

5. Would you also recommend that additional telegraph offices be opened at various points, so that they may be made available?—I think it would be an unnecessary expense just at present. If I have four men there who know the country well, with the four men at Greta, and four at Glenrowan, I think it will be perfectly satisfactory.

6. Are the means of communication rapid enough without that?—Yes, I think so, for all practical purposes.

7. Do you propose to re-establish the station at Hedi?—No, certainly not. That is quite close to the Burke Range.

8. About the Fifteen-mile station: are you going to have any patrol between that and Kilfera and Tatong?—It completes the chain of patrols that I propose establishing.

9. Do you propose to make the mounted constables patrol regularly?—I have issued a district order to that effect.

10. In order that they may know all the people in that district?—I instruct them in that order to visit the residences and converse with the inhabitants, friends and foes alike, so that, should they get information, their foes might not know where they got it.

11. Do you propose that with a view of making them personally acquainted with the people?—With the view of keeping them constantly en rapport with the people.

12. We have had it in evidence that Mr. Hare's system of patrol with large parties was utterly useless, and that Mr. Nicolson's method broke down in consequence of the dishonesty of the agents or spies. Do you think it is a better way for the police to be thoroughly acquainted with the people of the country than to use either spies or large bodies to patrol?—Undoubtedly it is.

13. Do you think the police themselves will be able to get all the information that, we understand, ever was collected by those other means?—It is a difficult matter to answer that question. I believe we can get all information about such a matter as, say, this projected outbreak, as regards their movements—at least as to what is likely to take place now. But it is a different thing if there are four men out in the bush, for then it is necessary often to have a detective paid for the purpose of watching the movements of certain persons. For instance: in the detection of cattle stealing I am going to recommend, before very long that in a certain place a paid agent is to go to work there, otherwise we could not get at this person who is killing cattle. But under any circumstances I do not believe in paying agents merely to go about broadcast to report what they like.

14. Do you consider your paid agent an officer of the police?—The officer of police must, of course, himself have an agent. People will not allow him to see them, or get into their secrets.

15. That agent, in your view, ought to be a man in whom the officers have undoubted confidence?—Undoubtedly.

16. That is, not to employ the friends?—No. Then the system degenerates into a system of espionage, which means that the agent is paid for the information he has to give; and if he has none to give, he will manufacture some.

17. He should be a paid private detective?—He is paid in proportion to the amount of information he gives; and I think that is a mistake, because the probable result would be that he would invent tales.

18. And it has been done over and over again in that district?—That I cannot say. At any rate the system has that tendency. There is a down right premium given to lying.

19. Are the police stationed at Greta now quartered at the hotel?—Yes.

20. Do you consider it advisable that the police should be stationed there?—There is no other place for them to live, and I do not think they could be more harmlessly situated as regards the hotel, for it is a place where hardly any one goes to.

21. Do you advise that that system of quartering them at the Greta hotel should still obtain?—When you say system, I do not believe in it as a system; but as to stationing the police, or handling the police at the Greta hotel, that is an absolute necessity, for there is no other place to go to.

22. Would you recommend that a building should be provided at Greta for the police?—Not at present; because when a better state of things exists, which I hope for before long, I think it may be found necessary to reduce the number of stations. We may then perhaps have one that will command the whole of the Fifteen-mile Creek, and build a permanent station at a point near what is called the Heifer Station, about three miles lower down than Mason’s. It is a place where the three roads meet—Greta, Benalla, and the one up the creek, and there is a crossing place there, going towards the Murray. We have land there reserved, ten acres on the creek, and then the road, and then beyond that again twenty-seven acres. That I recommended a few years ago; and I was on it a few days ago with Mounted-constable Graham from Greta, and was able to command his knowledge and experience. He is an exceedingly intelligent man, on whose judgement I can put great reliance, and he quite agreed with me in all those proposals.

23. That commands the King and Murray rivers?—Yes; it is a most central position. But at present we can get quarters at Mason’s for £52 a year.

24. At young Robert Mason’s?—Yes. Then again another advantage is that we have the benefit of his knowledge of the country. He was born there.

25. Have all those alterations you have spoken of been carried out?—No. Mr. Chomley, the Acting Chief Commissioner, has the recommendations in his office.

26. Are there any other recommendations you could make beyond those?—Well, none that I have been able to mature properly, so as to be certain about them.

27. In consequence of the statements that have been made by some persons, you think that all the recommendations you have made, and others you may make as your judgement matures, should be carried out as speedily as possible?—Undoubtedly.

28. How was it that, on the prosecution of McGly and Quin there, they were not made amenable to some sort of justice to keep them quiet?—The case against McIlroy was not proved. The charge was that he had snapped a loaded gun at Quin, with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, and that was not proved to the satisfaction of the justices. It was sworn to right enough by Quin, but the justices did not believe him.
There was subsequently a cross-summons taken out by McIlroy against Quin for some alleged insulting language made use of by him at Mrs. Dobson’s Public-house. It is usual in the bush to have cross-charges made. I suggested to the bench that they should postpone the hearing of the case against Quin for a week, but they decided that they would jeer it to-morrow, the 10th. I did that because I considered that Quin was taken by surprise; that he, in ignorance, trusted to me to defend him, when I had no status in the Court to do anything of the kind, and I considered that it would be treating him with injustice not to let him have the option and opportunity of employing a solicitor.

29. You were prosecuting McIlroy?—Yes. I might say, in connection with this, that a great deal of the difficulty with these men would be got over if they felt they were treated with equal justice—that there was no “down” upon them. They are much more tractable if they feel that they are treated with equal justice.
As to the refusal of land to suspected persons, I have sent a report to the Commissioner, in which I asked him to take measures so that the Crown Lands Department should act in concert with the police—to place me in the position that I can use the provisions of the Land Act as a lever to influence the applicants for land in the North-Eastern district, more especially for a radius of fifty miles all round, taking Benalla as the centre. I find, from conversation with some of those men, that if they recognized me—that is the head of the police force there—as the arbiter of their destinies, to a certain extent, with regard to the taking and selling of Crown lands—in other words, that it would depend on their good behaviour—by that a lever would be put in our hands which would have more potency than an army of police. The result, I think, would be that it would prevent them from harboring criminals, and would give them a direct incentive to place themselves on good terms with the police, and avoid doing anything that would alienate them from the police, whereas, at the present time, they have no such feeling. Their whole object it to obtain land, and if their individual interests depended upon their good behaviour among the population where they are, it would be half the battle towards making good citizens of them.

30. In addition to your report, have you, since you have been stationed in charge of the North-Eastern district at Benalla, made any recommendations to him as to the probability of another outbreak?—I do not remember exactly having done so. There was nothing to have led me to do so. I might have expressed an opinion as I have to-day.

31. Do we understand now that, with the precautions you have already taken, and if your recommendations are acted up, there is no cause to fear another outbreak similar to the late one?—Yes; and, from information I have received, I do not think there is any cause to fear a similar outbreak except under certain circumstances. I have received private information that there are perhaps half-a-dozen young men who are closely connected with the late gang who would with great satisfaction rally round any men who, by the commission of any crime, might bolt from justice, and whom they considered competent to lead them.
That, I believe, is quite on the cards at present.

32. Do you know those young men?—The police know them very well, those that are suspected.
We cannot of course tell their intentions.

33. The police know them so that if an outbreak should occur hereafter, and an Act were passed the same as the last Habeas Corpus Act, you could seize those men readily?—Yes.

34. I suppose you will see that all the police in your district make themselves acquainted with those men who may join another gang?—They know them well.

35. And there would be no difficulty in their being known by the police?—I do not think there is the slightest difficulty. I think we are quite prepared for them.

36. Has any one told you since you have been at Benalla that the police are not likely to obtain the same facilities for getting information as was done during the Kelly outrage in consequence of statements made to this Commission and published?—Yes.

37. Do you think that information was really worth much that was received by the police from the agents?—I did not know the extent of the information received. I know Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadleir received a great deal that I knew nothing about.

38. We have it in evidence that that information was generally received a week or a fortnight after the events?—Yes.

39. Do you think you could get information?—I think I could get information that they could not, because people would tell me things they would not tell them.

40. Do you think your position is prejudiced in getting information by anything that has occurred before this Commission?—I cannot say that of my own knowledge, except what I have been told by reliable persons. I believe it might have an influence if another outbreak did take place, because the feeling is very widespread in that part of the world that if they did give information to the police their names might be mentioned to a Commission. One man in particular, known as the “diseased stock” agent, is, I know, in fear and terror at the present moment.

41. Is he still up there?—He is.

42. Is he suspected or known?—He is not suspected, that I am aware, at present.

43. I have not the slightest idea what the man’s name is?—It is not supposed you do.

44. Then, if not known to the members of the Commission, it is not likely it is known to the people. We have specially requested the superintendents of police and others giving evidence to suppress names, and we have had the greatest difficulty, time after time, in preventing those names going out. Where they have been given by the members of the force themselves, we have warned them not to give them. That is a list of the agents supplied to the Commission, with the assumed names—[handing a paper to the witness]. Will you say if any of those individuals have spoken to you and said they would not assist the police?—I believe there is one man there who would tell me anything.

45. The question is this: is there any one on that list who has spoken to you and told you that, in the event of their being required, they would not assist the police in future?—That man “Denny” (alias) told Sergeant Whelan that he certainly would not mention a single thing again—that he might speak to Whelan himself, but he certainly would not open his lips to any one else. I told Whelan I did not want the man to speak to me. I said, “Any information you may get I will never ask you the name of your informant; I simply want you to give the information to me.” This man “Foot” I would not trust three yards; he is one of the biggest ruffians in the colony. However, none of those men have spoken to me about not assisting the police in future.

46. In point of fact, as to the conversation you have had with the people of the district, it is only a matter of suspicion in their own minds that those agents would not give information if they were required?—I believe they were told by agents.

47. Is it generally known in the district who those agents were?—Oh, no.

48. That is the difficulty that meets us in trying to understand this matter?—Sergeant Whelan told me that the agents who spoke to him said they would not give him information again through fear of their names being mentioned.

49. If your system be adopted as to stationing the police and so on, there would not be the same necessity to seek for private information as hitherto?—I believe there would be no necessity to have recourse to anything of the sort, because the result of the system, if carried out, would be that no outbreak would occur; and, therefore, no agents would be needed. If there should be an outbreak, I cannot tell now what would be required.

50. But if there were, with the police stationed in that way they would be acquainted with the people?—Yes; and I am in hope we would require no agents at all.

51. Constable Gascoigne, in his evidence, said that what he thought was wanted in the district was young, active men, well mounted, to keep patrolling; and he said they would get a personal knowledge of the criminal class, would mix with them, and be in a position to give more correct and reliable information themselves than could be got from any of those agents?—That is exactly what I have done in the general order
I have issued.

52. Do you consider that is really the best plan for keeping the district in order?—Yes. It was the plan we had when I was stationed up there before. The men were all en rapport with the public. They would remain there as an army of occupation.

53. Do you consider that it would be a wise expenditure to mount those men well?—Certainly; it is indispensable that they should be well mounted.

54. And indispensable that there should be a system of visitation of different districts almost daily—that the men should be kept riding about to show themselves everywhere?—Undoubtedly.

55. That has been provided for—and by doing that they will become acquainted with every movement of men of such a class as the Kellys, and would be able to nip them in the bud?—Undoubtedly. That is precisely the step we have taken. We know where they are now; we know where they go to—Lake Rowan, Greta, Mason’s, Moyhu, and so on—we know where they are very well.

56. And you know all their haunts?—Yes.

57. Do you consider, from your knowledge of the country, that had that system been properly in operation when the Kelly outbreak did take place, the outlaws would have been caught sooner?—I do not believe, if it had been in operation, that the outbreak would have taken place at all.

58. If it had?—That I cannot say.

59. Would the chances be greater for catching them?—Undoubtedly; because the police would have the confidence of the people, who would not be afraid to give them information.

60. Would not the outlaws be in constant dread when they found one or two men galloping through the country in every possible direction and comparing notes?—Undoubtedly. It would, in my position, have rendered their position untenable.

61. By this system of patrols the police would be kept moving backwards and forwards as if on a chess-board, meeting each other half-way, and comparing notes about criminal matters—going half-way to one station one day; and half-way to another the next—have you that system in full operation?—Not yet; because I have been only about four weeks there; but the order is issued, and it will be put into operation as quickly as possible.

62. And the intention is to make it complete?—It will certainly be made complete if I am allowed my way in the matter; but I would ask you to insist that the men get first-class horses, and that they be armed with the Martini-Henry carbine—every man in the North-Eastern district.

63. You approve of having arms of the same character for the whole force?—Certainly.

64. So that one class of ammunition will suit for any one?—Yes.

65. And a thorough system of drill and the men to be exercised in the use of arms?—Decidedly.

66. Because, according to the evidence, that has not been so up to the present time?—No; they are armed like a Turkish brigade, with all kinds of weapons.

67. Ned Kelly, in explaining the easiness with which he evaded the police, told Gascoigne, previous to his execution, that as long as strange police were going amongst them they could laugh at them. He said, “If you want to keep the districts quiet you will have men employed who know the place and people”?—Precisely—that is the axiom.

68. That is what he said the night before he was executed?—Every man would—any child in the place will tell you the same.

69. Have you the best men there?—We have very good men there, but of course there may be some not so good—I have been only at very few stations.

70. You have not been to Mansfield?—That is under Sergeant Pewtress. He has a first-class man there.

71. Is he one of the best men in the force—named James?—Yes, and he could not be better placed than he is at present.

72. Are you not in charge of that district?—No, certainly not.

73. Are you not altogether doing Mr. Sadleir’s duty?—Certainly. You asked me had I been to Mansfield, and I meant to say I had not, because Sergeant Pewtress was there, and there was no necessity for my going.

74. But you are responsible for it—it is within your district?—Yes, certainly. He is sub-inspector placed there under me.

75. You control that district?—Yes, certainly—I misunderstood the drift of the question.

76. Would you provide every constable with a revolver?—A Webley revolver and a Martini-Henry carbine.

77. Both mounted and foot?—Well, I do not say any thing about the foot.

78. That is a question of some importance?—Well, I would arm the whole lot of them.

79. Would you give the foot police the long rifle or the short carbine?—The short carbine, because I would have no foot men there that could not ride in case of emergency.

80. Then with regard to getting bodies of men together periodically for purposes of drill, do you approve of that?—I do not think that is feasible.

81. Not possible?—No; it is not a question of drill so much as a knowledge of the bush. It is a guerilla warefare altogether if there is anything of the sort required. They must be good shots and good riders; in fact, it is not the opposing of an enemy, but to find out where the enemy is, is the difficulty.

82. Would you consider that both the men and horses should be trained in leaping fences?—Yes, I think so. The difficulty has been to prevent them leaping logs and fences; but every man should be able to jump his horse over a fence, and that should be done when he is trained in the depôt.

83. You have got the black trackers now at Benalla?—Yes.

84. Under Constable Kirkham?—He is directly in charge. He lives with them, but he cannot be said to be in command of them. I control them myself.

85. If sent out for duty, does he go with them?—Yes, generally.

[Mr. O’Connor was called in, and the Chairman directed that the evidence to follow should be printed in the usual course.]

APPENDIX 2.
Ever since the publication, in October 1878, of what is known as the Mansfield murders, remarks have been made in the public papers and elsewhere, in which reflections have been thrown upon the character of the police force and its proceedings generally in connection with the search for the outlaws, and now that the gang has been destroyed those remarks have taken a more specific and definite character.

It is asserted and implied that the long-continued efforts of the police force to trace and capture the outlaws have been characterised by supineness and apathy; that the police have been in many cases influenced by a desire to avoid rather than meet the offenders, while in connection with the recent outbreak, which led to the destruction of the gang it is asserted that I have been guilty of most culpable procrastination; that the police officers have shown a want of generalship, and the conduct of the members of the force has been, according to some, characterised by an inconceivable disregard of human life, and, according to others, by an absence of that courage and dash which every good constable should possess. I have long felt the injustice of these reflections, and I think the time has now arrived when I can properly ask to have it ascertained whether they are deserved or not.

I have, therefore, the honor to request that an inquiry may be instituted by the Government into the whole proceedings and management of the police force, from the perpetration of the murders to the present date. This inquiry may take any form Government may consider desirable. On that point I am quite indifferent, provided only—(1) that the inquiry may be full and impartial, and open to receive the evidence of all persons, whether members of the force or not, who may have information on the subject to communicate; and (2) that the proceedings should not be open to the press, for though the full details of what the police have been doing should be known to the Government, it would be obviously contrary to public policy that they should be published for general information.

The report of the gentlemen making the inquiry should, I think, be all that should find its way into the hands of the public. It could of course be made sufficiently full to satisfy the reasonable expectations of any persons unconnected with the force.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

F. C. STANDISH,

The Honorable the Chief Secretary.

Chief Commissioner of Police.

Sir,

I have the honor respectfully to request that, before proceeding to acknowledge the services of those engaged in the destruction of the Kelly gang of outlaws, a searching inquiry be held into the whole circumstances and transactions of the police administration in the North-Eastern district since the Kelly outbreak in October 1878, and particularly into the circumstances of my recent withdrawal from that district.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

C. H. NICOLSON,

Assistant Commissioner of Police.

Sir,

With reference to my application for an inquiry into the whole proceedings of the police in re the Kelly gang, forwarded to you on or about the 1st instant, and to which I have received no answer, I have the honor to state that I am aware the Government have since been much occupied with important matters. But the recent publication of a report from Superintendent Hare, dated the 2nd instant, containing serious charges against me, compels me to bring the said application again under notice.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,
To the Chief Commissioner of Police, Melbourne.

C. H. NICOLSON,
Assistant Commissioner of Police.

Sir,
The Farm, Flemington, 7th September 1880.

I have the honor to apologise for trespassing upon your time, and to express a hope that you will be good enough to peruse the following report:—

In March 1879 I arrived in Victoria from Queensland, and placed myself and men under Captain Standish, Chief Commissioner of Police. He had me sworn in as an officer of the Victorian force. Captain Standish then sent me out in full charge of a party of police in quest of the Kelly outlaws. I requested to be allowed only two Victorian men to accompany my party, but the Chief Commissioner would not allow me to proceed with less than six. In one of our expeditions we received most reliable information in connection with the outlaws, which the Chief Commissioner would not allow us to proceed with, but instantly ordered our return. About May 1879, the Chief Commissioner began to show a degree of jealousy and dislike towards me. He ordered me to send my men to different localities, although my Government had ordered me not to do so. About this period, Captain Standish received some very good information, which, at the time, he only communicated to Superintendent Hare, who, some time after, told me that the information was that some men had been seen, whom the informer was confident were the Kellys, had gone to a hut, and if the police were sent they could be surrounded in the hut. I begged of the Chief Commissioner to allow myself and men to accompany the party going out, as the outlaws might get away before the police had time to reach the hut. Captain Standish said—"No; I will endeavour to get the Kellys without your assistance." Mr. Hare, who went out in charge of the party, returned unsuccessful, as a man, having met the party on their way to the hut, rode on and warned the outlaws, and was ready to receive the police when they arrived some time after. This, you will see, was a certainty thrown away, as my men could have easily picked up the outlaws’ tracks.

Upon the Lancefield bank robbery occurring, my men and myself proceeded there, and were mainly instrumental in having the robbers arrested. Sub-Inspector Baner, of your force, can testify to this. Captain Standish never in any way acknowledged this service.

A private quarrel occurred between Mr. Hare and myself, altogether unconnected with official business, in which Captain Standish, who was not in any way concerned, took part against me, and carried it into official matters. He made a series of communications to the Queensland Government, tending to depreciate me, and to remove the men from my control and supervision. This was done without my knowledge, and consequently I had no opportunity of explanation to my commissioner. My Government ultimately acceded to the request of Captain Standish, and informed him that he was at liberty to have one of my men for permanent service in Victoria. Upon this, Captain Standish had the man taken out of my party and attached to his police, although he (Captain Standish) still required our services. For the discourteous manner in which this was done, my Government requested our immediate return; and, upon this being conveyed to me, I left Benalla for Essendon on the morning of the 25th June 1880.

On the Sunday following, the 27th of June, at 7.30 p.m., I received a note (attached below) from Captain Standish, containing information of Sherritt’s murder near Beechworth. Now, although I had received but scant courtesy, having received no communication from the Victorian authorities beyond the order to leave Benalla and return to Queensland as soon as convenient, I acceded to the Chief Commissioner’s request, and waited upon him and arranged to leave Essendon at 10 o’clock that evening, with my men, for Beechworth. We left Essendon at 10.15 p.m., arriving at Benalla about 1 a.m., and at Glenrowan about 3 a.m.

Mr. Hare and myself were considering the best course to adopt when Constable Bracken rushed down on the platform and gave us the information that the outlaws were in Jones’s public-house. Mr. Hare and I ran up towards the house, he talking to me, and when at a short distance from the front of the place were stopped by a volley of bullets from its verandah. Almost simultaneously with the firing, Mr. Hare said, “O’Connor, I am wounded—shot in the arm; I must go back.” This Mr. Hare did, not having been five minutes on the field. It was I who told the men to take cover, also the order to cease firing and to let the women out. Mr. Hare’s statement as to having fired several shots is untrue, also his statement of having returned to the front, as he never left the railway platform after he returned there. Again, his statement is untrue when he states he saw me running up a drain, as I did not take cover for fully ten minutes after Mr. Hare disappeared. I remained at my post (immediately in front of the house) under heavy fire until 10.30 a.m., having held it for upwards of seven and a half hours, and only left when a superior officer arrived and took command. The Chief Commissioner arrived at Glenrowan at about 5.30 p.m., after the whole fight was over, and when he saw me he hardly condescended to recognise me. I returned next day to Melbourne, but never received a word of recognition for the services of my men or myself until Lord Normanby officially thanked me through Captain Standish.

In conclusion, I must say that Mr. Ramsay, the then Chief Secretary, subsequently sent for me, and thanked me most cordially on behalf of the Government of the colony, and stated that my services should be rewarded in the most substantial manner. After a little time he wrote a very complimentary letter to my Government.

In conclusion, I have to point out, as a Queensland officer of police, voluntarily serving in Victoria, assisting in searching for the Kelly gang, I have been treated in an ungentlemanly, ungenerous, and discourteous manner by the Commissioner of Police throughout the whole sixteen months I was under his command; and subsequently by Superintendent Hare, in his official report of the Glenrowan episode, which contains false and colored statements, calculated to make my services slightly esteemed, and to injure me seriously in my position as an officer of police. I submit that my voluntary action in proceeding to Glenrowan on the night of the 27th June, after my services had been dispensed with by Captain Standish, makes the injustice of Mr. Hare’s report greater; and I again appeal to you to grant me the inquiry, for which I have returned from Queensland.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,

STANHOPE O’CONNOR,

To the Hon. Graham Berry,

Chief Secretary, Melbourne.

Letter of Captain Standish to Sub-Inspector O’Connor.

MY DEAR SIR,

Melbourne Club, 27th June 1880.

I have just received telegraphic information that the outlaws stuck up the police party that was watching Mrs. Byrne’s house, and shot Aaron Sherritt dead. The police, however, appear to have escaped. In the urgent position of affairs, could you return to Beechworth with your trackers by the early train to-morrow, or by a special train, if that can be arranged. If you can oblige us in this way, could you manage to come in at once to see me at the Club by the hansom which I send out with this?

Yours faithfully,

S. O’Connor, Esq.

F. C. STANDISH.

SIR,

Flemington, 12th August 1880.

I have the honor to request that you will grant me a board of inquiry into the acts and occurrences of the Police Department of Victoria during the time I was on special duty here as the officer in charge of the detachment of Queensland Native Police, acting in the pursuit of the Kelly outlaws; also into the facts and occurrences concerning the death and capture of the outlaws at Glenrowan.

I trust you will see your way to grant me this request, as, after the report of Superintendent Hare, published in Argus of the 20th July 1880, and the evidence of Senior-Constable Kelly on the magisterial inquiry at Beechworth, published in the Age of the 11th and 12th August 1880, I feel it is due to the Police Department of Queensland, also to myself as an officer and a gentleman, that my conduct and that of my men during the whole of the period referred to may receive the fullest investigation. If it is more convenient to you that this inquiry be included in that of any board appointed to inquire into the police administration of this colony, I would be content to allow mine to form part of it.

In conclusion, I beg to state that I do not wish to participate in any part or portion of the £8,000 reward, but only require to have an opportunity of placing my conduct and that of my men in the proper light.

I have the honor, &c.,

STANHOPE O’CONNOR,
Sub-Inspector Queensland Police.

The following appeared in the Argus on 30th June 1880:—

With regard to the part taken by Sub-Inspector O’Connor and the Queensland black trackers in the encounter at Glenrowan, Mr. O’Connor makes the following statement:—“I went down by the special train on Sunday night, at the request of Captain Standish. I collected my troopers and started three hours after I received notice. I agreed to go on condition that the Government of Victoria would see me held blameless, as we were under orders to leave for Queensland. On our arrival at Glenrowan, we heard that the rails had been taken up some distance further on. We thought the best course would be to get the horses and proceed to the spot. Bracken then appeared, and informed us that the Kellys were at Jones’ public-house. Superintendent Hare, myself, and four or five men rushed up to the house. When we got within 25 yards we were received with a single shot and then a volley. We returned the fire. Hare said—‘O’Connor, I am wounded, I am shot in the arm; I must go back.’ He left immediately. We remained, and our incessant fire drove the outlaws into the house, which we heard them barricade. Mr. Hare returned to the station, remained a short time there, and then went to Benalla. I stood at my post until half-past ten in the forenoon, when I was sent for by Superintendent Sadleir. I was within 25 yards of the house the whole time. At daybreak I got behind shelter. One of my troopers was shot alongside of me—cut across the eyebrows. He jumped on the bank, fired five shots into the house, and said, ‘Take that, Ned Kelly.’ It seemed to afford him great relief, but rather amused me.

I was left in charge of the men from the time Mr. Hare left until Mr. Sadleir arrived on the ground.

APPENDIX 3.

SUPERINTENDENT HARE’S REPORT.

(Published in Argus of 20th July 1880.)

“SIR,

“Rupertswood, Sunbury, 2nd July 1880.

“I have the honor to inform you that I deem it my duty to give you a full report of all the circumstances from the commencement of the time I was directed to proceed to Benalla up to the period of the Kelly gang being surrounded by the police at Glenrowan on the 27th June.

“You may remember, on the 30th April last, when visiting the depot, you informed me that I was to proceed to Benalla to relieve Mr. Nicolson, and to take charge of the whole of the proceedings in connection with the capture of the Kellys. I protested in the strongest manner possible at the injustice of my being sent up there again. I pointed out that there were three officers senior to me—viz., Mr. Winch, Mr. Chomley, and Mr. Chambers—one of whom had been called upon to undertake the hardships that I had to undergo during the seven months that I was with you in that district. I also pointed out that the responsibility should be thrown on the senior officers. I stated that a promise was made to me when I was sent for previous to the capture of Power, the bushranger; that Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Montford had reaped the benefit of that capture; and that I, who was directed to organize the whole affair, am still in the same position as I was then, notwithstanding the promise made by the Chief Secretary, Sir James McCulloch. Ten years having elapsed since then, and my position in the police force being still the same, I did not see any advantage to be gained by being told off on this special duty. Your reply to this was, ‘It’s no use saying anything about it; you’ll have to go.’ I then requested that I might be allowed to see the Hon. the Chief Secretary on the subject, as I wished to enter my protest to him against being sent up to Benalla. You agreed to make an appointment for me, and at two o’clock that day I saw Mr. Ramsay in his office. I then pointed out to him the disadvantage to me of sending me up there. Mr. Ramsay replied, ‘Mr. Hare, this Kelly business has been discussed by the Cabinet; and it is their unanimous decision that you should be sent up to take charge of affairs. I give you carte blanche to do whatever you think proper, and I leave you entirely untrammelled. The Government have such entire confidence in you that they will hear you out in whatever you deem it advisable to do.’ I replied, ‘Very well, Mr. Ramsay when do you wish me to go?’ He said, ‘As soon as possible.’ I told him that I would leave in two or three days’ time. On Monday the 3rd May I received a note from you informing me that the Hon. the Chief Secretary, at the earnest request of Mr. Nicolson, had consented to allow him to remain at Benalla for one month longer, and that my orders for transfer were cancelled for the present.

“I received orders from you at the end of May that I was to proceed at once to Benalla to relieve Mr. Nicolson. I accordingly, on the 2nd June, went up there. I arrived at Benalla at about 11 o’clock that day. I saw Messrs. Nicolson, Sadleir, and O’Connor in the office. After some conversation on general subjects, Mr. Nicolson produced a letter he had received from you, directing him to give me all the information he had obtained concerning the Kelly gang during his stay at Benalla. He showed me the state of his financial account with one of his agents, and said there was nothing owing to any of the others. He opened a drawer and showed me a number of papers and the correspondence which had taken place during his stay at Benalla, and said, ‘You can get all the information from these papers.’ He gave me no verbal information whatever, but said, ‘Mr. Sadleir can tell you all I know concerning the movements of the outlaws.’ He left the office, and I never spoke to him again, and he went to Melbourne by the evening train. The principal agent employed by Mr. Nicolson I had appointed to meet me that evening. He was one who was considered the best man they had. After talking with him a few minutes, he positively refused to work for me or have anything to do with me, although he had accompanied the police from Beechworth the previous day for the purpose of having an interview with me.

“That evening I telegraphed to Detective Ward to come down to Benalla the next morning by train. He did so, and, after some conversation, he informed me that on the previous evening the senior-constable in charge of Beechworth had received a telegram from Mr. Nicolson to pay off all the agents he had employed.

“I at once endeavored to obtain a copy of this telegram in the office, but there was no record kept of it, nor did the clerks know anything about it, so I presume it must have been sent from the railway telegraph office, as Mr. Sadleir knew nothing whatever about it.

"I directed Detective Ward to return to Beechworth at once and order the senior-constable to allow matters to continue as they had been previous to my taking charge, as I did not wish to make an alteration in anything until I was in a position to judge what was best to be done.

"For the first two or three days of my stay at Benalla I occupied my time in reading up the papers in the office, and obtaining all the information I possibly could on the subject. I had a long conversation with Mr. Sadleir, who assisted me in every possible way, and gave me all the information in his power. I conversed with the different non-commissioned officers and constables I came across, and obtained their views on the duty upon which I was engaged. Most of Mr. Nicolson's communications with his agents were by word of mouth and not in writing, and the information I obtained from documents in the office was very scant and not of much service to me. I then started round the district to see the non-commissioned officers in charge of the principal stations. I had long talks with them and their men on the state of affairs, and informed them that I intended stationing black trackers, whom I expected from Queensland, at Benalla, Wangaratta, and Beechworth. I also told them that at each of these towns I would have a full party of men stationed, so that, if any information was received about the Kellys, they would be in a position to go in pursuit at once; and all I wished them to do was to communicate by telegram with me previous to their starting off, so that I might know in which direction they had gone.

"After a few days I returned to Benalla, and started off two or three parties of men who had been specially taken on in the police force, in consequence of their knowledge of the country and the outlaws, and directed them to obtain private horses, and go into the country they knew best, and knock about amongst their friends and relatives, in order to see if they could get any information concerning the outlaws. They might go where they liked, and remain out as long as they thought fit. I also made up three watch parties, consisting of four men each, and directed them to watch certain places by night and remain concealed all day. I made sundry other arrangements, which it will not be advisable for me to fully enter into.

"From the date of my arrival at Benalla up to Sunday the 27th June I heard nothing positive concerning the movements of the outlaws, although their agents and sympathisers were particularly active, and I was privately informed that the outlaws were about to commence some outrages which would not only astonish Australia but the whole world.

"On the 24th I received a communication from you that Mr. O'Connor and his black trackers were to be sent back to Queensland. I informed Mr. O'Connor accordingly. The next morning he started away from Benalla with his 'boys.' I had but one Queensland black of our own at Benalla, and there was another at Mansfield. I telegraphed to be sent down to Benalla at once, so that I might have two trackers in case anything happened before Mr. Chomley, who had gone to Queensland for a fresh supply of trackers for our own force, returned, as I did not expect him back for eight or ten days.

"On Sunday the 27th ultimo I was at the telegraph office at Benalla, at ten o'clock a.m. I received telegrams from all the stations in the district that all was quiet. I made an appointment with the telegraph master to be at the office again at 9 p.m. About half-past two o'clock that day I received a memo, from the railway telegraph office to go to the general telegraph office, as there was important information for me there, and a memo, to the same effect had been sent to the telegraph master. I lost no time in going there, and received a message from Beechworth that Aaron Sherritt, in whose house I had a watch party, had been shot the previous evening at six o'clock. I immediately sent for Mr. Sadleir, and we consulted together as to the best course to adopt. First of all we decided to give you all the information in our possession, and ask you to request Mr. O'Connor to return without loss of time to Benalla, with his 'boys,' as we considered they might have a good chance of tracking the outlaws from Sherritt's house.

"About eight o'clock that evening I received a telegram from you informing me that Mr. O'Connor would be sent up by special train, leaving town at ten o'clock. I also telegraphed to you asking authority to send on a pilot engine in front of our train. Your reply to me was, 'A good idea; there's no knowing what desperate deed the outlaws may now be guilty of. Have the pilot.'

"The whole afternoon Mr. Sadleir and myself were engaged in the telegraph office, warning all stations to be on the alert, and at places where there were no telegraph offices private messengers were employed, and sent out to convey the information of the outrage at Beechworth, and to be on the alert also.

"I started off then for the railway station, having previously sent word to the station master to have an engine ready to go to Beechworth as soon as possible, as it was my intention to take up my party and the two trackers, in the event of Mr. O'Connor not consenting to return. I told Mr. Stephens, station master, that a special was to leave town at ten o'clock, and that I wished the engine that I had ordered to act as pilot to the train to Beechworth, which would reach Benalla about two a.m.

"He informed me that he had no engine there which could run to Beechworth, that line requiring peculiar engines. I requested him to get the engine which was to come down to Wangaratta from Beechworth the following morning to get up steam at once, run down to Wangaratta, and wait there till my arrival, so that it could act as pilot thence to Beechworth. He consented to do this, and also to have trucks ready to convey the horses and men from Benalla to Beechworth.

"I then returned to the telegraph office, where Mr. Sadleir had remained during my absence. We made arrangements for horses and provisions to be ready for the trackers, and told off the following men to accompany me to Beechworth:—Senior-constable Kelly, Constables Arthur, Barry, Gascoigne, Canny, Kirkham, and Phillips, leaving a party behind us all ready equipped, with two black trackers, for Mr. Sadleir, in case anything occurred while I was away. I remained in the telegraph office until 10 o'clock p.m. Having completed all arrangements I went to lie down for two or three hours, as I expected to reach Sherritt’s house by daybreak the next morning to commence tracking from there.

“At 1 o’clock I went to the railway station, had the horses put in the trucks, and waited the arrival of the special, which reached Benalla. I think, about half-past 1. Mr. Rawlins, a gentleman residing at Winton, asked me to allow him to travel in the special to Beechworth from Benalla, as he had a pass on all the railways. I told him I had no objection to his doing so. The engineer in charge of the Benalla station suggested that I should put a constable in front of the engine, to keep a look along the line. I accordingly told off Constable Barry for this duty, and saw him securely fastened on the engine. I afterwards ascertained that the engine that brought the train from town had become disabled on the way up, and it was decided to send it as the pilot, and send the Benalla engine to Wangaratta with the tain. The engine-drivers refused to allow Barry to go on their engine, so I recalled him. The occupants of the train from Melbourne were as follows:—Mr. O’Connor, his wife and sister, five Queensland trackers, and six gentlemen connected with the press.

“My party, already mentioned, joined the train here. Previous to starting I asked the stationmaster to give me the key of the railway carriages, as the guard insisted on locking us in. He complied with my request. The pilot engine started about five minutes before our train. We went along at a rapid pace without interruption until within two or three miles of Glenrowan station I heard our engine whistle. I put my head out of the carriage, looked ahead, and saw the pilot pulled up within 300 yards of us. I immediately unlocked my carriage, jumped out of the train, and walked towards the pilot. When about a few yards beyond our engine, I met a man walking towards me from the pilot with a lamp. He came from the pilot engine, and told me that he had been stopped by a red handkerchief being held up, and lighted by a match held behind it. When be pulled up he saw a man without coat or hat approaching, who appeared greatly excited, and told him that the line had been broken up either this side or the other of Glenrowan. He said the man told him the Kellys had taken possession of everybody in Glenrowan, and that they said they were going to attack the police on their arrival. I asked him where the man was. He said after giving the information he ran away into the bush, as he had left his wife and family at home, and that he was a schoolmaster at Glenrowan. He said, ‘I invited him to go on the engine, but he declined.’ I then ordered all the carriages to be unlocked, lights extinguished, and gave the occupants the information that had been given to me, and to be ready for any emergency. I at once walked towards the pilot, taking with me three men, leaving Mr. O’Connor and his men with Senior-constable Kelly and the remainder of my men. I walked along the line myself, and distributed the men on each side, telling them to separate and keep a sharp look-out. When I reached the pilot the engine-driver repeated the story about the schoolmaster, and I told the driver to go on quietly in front of the train. He declined doing so until I jumped on the engine myself and brought up the three men with me. I placed the men in the best position, and told them to keep a sharp look-out and be ready for anything that might occur. I took up my position at the opening of the engine, and then told the driver to go ahead cautiously, and be ready to go ahead or backwards at any moment in the event of my directing him to do so. He said his engine was in a very disabled state, having lost its brake, and could not be depended on. He advised that he should shunt back to the train, and then tell them to separate and keep a sharp look-out. When I started back to the pilot, he said ‘Mr. O’Connor, his wife and sister, five Queensland trackers, and six gentlemen connected with the press.’ I immediately hastened back to the station with Mr. Rawlins, who told me he was thoroughly acquainted with the country, and would gladly render me all the assistance he could. He told me he was unarmed, and asked me if I had any spare arms. I told him ‘No,’ but that I would give him my revolver and stick to the double-barrelled gun myself. On reaching, the station I told the men what I had been informed by the stationmaster’s wife, and to lose no time in getting the horses out of the train and saddling them. Whilst the men were so engaged, Constable Bracken appeared on the platform in a very excited state. He said, ‘Mr. Hare, I have just escaped from Jones’s Hotel, where the Kellys have a large number of prisoners confined. For God’s sake go as quickly as possible, otherwise they will escape.’ I called on the men to follow me with their arms as quickly as they could. Many of them were holding horses. I told them to let go the horses, as the Kellys were in the house, and follow me, running off towards Jones’s Hotel. Some six or seven men followed me, amongst them were some of the black trackers, but I cannot say who any of them were. When approaching the hotel the place was quite silent and dark, and when within about twenty yards of the verandah I saw a flash of fire, but could not distinguish any figures. Instantly three persons also commenced firing from the verandah, which was in total darkness—the moon beams at the back of the house caused our men to be plainly seen—a continuous fire was kept up on both sides. I was struck by the first shot, and my left arm dropped helpless beside me. The firing was continued on both sides with great determination for about five minutes, when it ceased from the verandah, and screams from men, women, and children came from the inside of the house. I at once called on my men to cease firing, which they did. When the firing commenced I called upon the men to be steady, and I cannot speak too highly of the conduct of the men on this occasion, as they stood with firmness, receiving volley after volley from the verandah, and replying to it. The men were all on my right, and the fire seemed to come in a line, as if the men were on parade. I kept using my gun with my right hand, and I think I fired six shots. I had great difficulty in loading, having but the use of one arm. I had to put the stock of the gun between my legs in order to reload. I cannot remember any of the men who were with me during the firing except Senior-constable Kelly. I told him I was badly wounded, and directed him to take all the men and surround Jones’ Hotel, so as to prevent the escape of the outlaws, and saw this was being done. During the firing there were shouts from the outlaws calling on us to fire away—we could do them no harm.

"Feeling that I was losing large quantities of blood, I returned towards the railway platform. On my way thither I saw Mr. O’Connor running up a drain with some of his boys. As I passed him I called out to him I was hit. Senior-constable Kelly called out to me to send some more ammunition at once from the train. I did so directly I arrived at the platform, and Mr. Rawlins volunteered to take the ammunition round, and distribute it amongst the men, which he did. There were a number of gentlemen of the press on the platform when I arrived there, and they very kindly took a handkerchief, and bound up my arm. I then returned to the front, intending to go round the men posted, but after visiting two or three of them I felt myself getting very weak and faint from loss of blood. When I again reached the platform I was staggering, and the gentlemen of the press assisted me into a railway carriage. I intended to run down to Benalla to have my arm dressed, and to return immediately it was done. After getting into the carriage I was given a little sherry, which rallied me considerably, but the blood was still flowing from my arm. I started an engine away to inform Mr. Sadleir of what had occurred, requesting him to come as soon as possible with every available man on the station, and bring up a supply of ammunition, and shortly after that I followed on another engine to Benalla. Owing to my great loss of blood, I had great difficulty in keeping myself from fainting on my way down. We reached Benalla in about ten minutes. On my arrival there I asked the stationmaster to telegraph to Wangaratta, and direct Sergeant Steel to bring every available man he had on the station by the pilot engine, which was waiting for me there, to Glenrowan, as we had the Kellys surrounded in a house; but to be careful not to let the engine come within a mile and a half of Glenrowan, as the rails had been torn up. I then started off to the Benalla Telegraph Office, which was about a mile and a quarter distant from the station. Being afraid to walk that distance by myself, feeling so faint, I asked a Mr. Lewis, school inspector from Wangaratta, whom I met, to accompany me, which he did.

"On the way we called at Dr. Nicholson’s—this was about 4 a.m. I told the doctor I was shot by the Kellys, and I wished him to dress my arm, as the blood was still flowing freely. I told him I could not wait to have it done then, but to follow me to the telegraph office, as I wished him to return to Glenrowan with me, and to lose no time about it. I then started off with Mr. Lewis, leaving Dr. Nicholson to dress. On reaching the telegraph office I could barely stagger in. I found the office open, and dictated a telegram to the stationmaster to send to you. I also sent a telegram to the police at Beechworth and Violet Town, directing them to proceed with all available force to Glenrowan, as the Kellys were surrounded in a house, and as I did not know how much assistance might be required to secure them. I then laid down on a matress, and Mr. Sadleir came into the office. I told him what had occurred, and to hasten back as quickly as possible, and I would follow him. His reply was—‘Don’t be such a fool. You are a regular glutton. You have one bullet through you now, and I suppose you want more.’ He then left the office, and hastened away. Just then Dr. Nicholson entered. He examined my wound, and told me I had sustained a very bad fracture of the wrist, and that it would be madness for me to return. He procured an impromptu splint and lint, and, with the assistance of Mr. Lewis and Mr. Saxe (telegraph-master), dressed the wound. During the dressing I fainted. How long I remained in that state I do not know, but when I came to myself both the doctor and Mr. Lewis had gone, and Mr. Saxe gave me some strong spirits, and with his assistance, and that of one of his clerks, I walked to my lodgings, about a quarter of a mile away. I was unable to proceed, and was confined to bed all day, suffering great pain.

"At about 3 o’clock, Dr. Charles Ryan arrived from Melbourne, and dressed my hand, and Dr. Nicholson, returning just then, assisted in the operation.

"In conclusion, I wish to place on record the very great assistance rendered to me by Mr. Sadleir from the time I arrived at Benalla up to the eventful day. He spared neither time nor trouble, and I would desire strongly to urge upon you the necessity of suitably acknowledging his services.

Whilst mentioning the assistance rendered to me by Mr. Sadleir, I would also desire to place on record my high appreciation of the conduct and services of the police force, both of Queensland and Victoria, who by their steadfastness and courage seconded my efforts and contributed to the successful termination of the duties they were especially called upon to perform.

“I would also bring under your notice the great services rendered by Mr. Saxe, telegraph-master at Benalla. The police in the district found him always ready to assist them at any moment, day or night (Sundays inclusive), and he complied with everything he was asked to do most readily and cheerfully. I would therefore urge upon you the desirability of bringing his conduct under the notice of the Hon. the Postmaster-General, with a view to his promotion in the service, as you are well aware, from your own personal knowledge, of the many services rendered to us by him.

“With regard to the reward offered for the apprehension of the offenders, both by this Government and that of New South Wales, I trust that a board will be appointed to decide to whom it is to be paid, and that the constables and trackers who were engaged at the destruction of the gang will be allowed to partake of a portion, especially those who accompanied me from Benalla. I need hardly say that I decline to participate in any of the rewards already offered for the capture of these outlaws.

“I cannot bring my report to a close without strongly drawing the attention of the Government to the praiseworthy and plucky conduct of Mr. Curnow, who in my opinion was mainly instrumental in saving the lives of the whole party in giving the information of the lines being destroyed, and of the Kellys being at Glenrowan.

“Constable Bracken showed great presence of mind, and deserves much credit for his conduct on the occasion, and I think he has a claim to a good share of the reward.

“I think, also, that the thanks of the Government are due to Mr. Rawlius, who ably assisted me throughout the firing, he had previously offered me the benefit of his knowledge and experience of that part of the country. He ran considerable risk in serving out the ammunition to the police, and I feel very grateful to him for his personal service to me.

“Since writing the above I have seen a statement made by Mr. O’Connor to the press, and after reading it I can have no doubt his statement is perfectly correct, but in my report I have merely stated facts that are within my remembrance, and no doubt in the darkness of the morning, and time excitement of the time, I may have omitted many incidents that occurred.

“When I took charge of the district from the 2nd of June last, as far as I was able to ascertain, no more was known of the outlaws or their movements than when I left Benalla twelve months ago. The statements that have appeared in the public press for some weeks past, to the effect that the outlaws were surrounded by a cordon of the police and their agents, had not the slightest foundation. I do not take any special credit to myself and men in being able to surround them in Jones’s Hotel on 28th June. The chance occurred; we took advantage of it, and success attended us. You may recollect that at my interview with the Chief Secretary I objected to having a large party of trackers kept at Benalla, and as Mr. O’Connor objected to divide his men, I suggested that some native trackers should be provided from Queensland for our own force. I said also it was a general belief that the outlaws were afraid to show out because of the trackers, and in my opinion, if such was the case, the sooner Mr. O’Connor and men were removed the better, because, should the gang make a raid, there would be a probability of capturing them, but as long as they remained in the mountains we had little chance of finding them. Mr. Ramsay agreed with me in this opinion. I frequently expressed the same opinion to you in the last few months. The trackers were removed on the 25th June; the outlaws believing they had left for Queensland, showed out on the 26th. On the 28th the gang was destroyed, and its leader captured.

APPENDIX 4.

REPORT OF ACTING C. C. POLICE ON THE NORTH-EASTERN DISTRICT.

81/392. Police Department, Chief Commissioner’s Office,

Sir, Melbourne, 1st May, 1881.

I have the honor to inform you that in consequence of the report received from the North-Eastern District as to the unsettled state of that part of the country, and the probability of another outbreak of bushranging. I proceeded to Benalla on Friday last to make some enquiries into the truth, or otherwise, of these reports, and also as to the best steps to be taken in relation thereto.

After conversation with Messrs. Sadleir and Baber, Sergeants Steele, Whelan, and others, the impression left on my mind was that a very bad and revengeful feeling prevails amongst the relations and friends of the late gang of outlaws, against the police and the persons who assist the police during the late disturbances, and that this feeling may lead to some cowardly advantage being taken of some constable or police agent, or may be brought to a head, and lead to open acts of violence at any moment, in the event, for instance, of an attempt being carried out by the police to arrest any of the Kelly sympathisers.

There is no doubt, also, that horse stealing is carried on to a great extent, and that persons who have assisted the police with information, &c., are in terror of being discovered, and assaulted in consequence, so that many of them have thought it advisable to leave the district.

To meet this state of things, I would suggest—

1. That Inspector Montford be placed in charge of the North-Eastern District. Mr. Montford is an active and energetic officer, who will, I think, be equal to the position; and as he was stationed in that district for some years, he will have the advantage of being acquainted with the country.

2. That in consequence of the disclosures made before the Police Enquiry Board, and the references made to persons who assisted the police with information during the Kelly outbreak, it is now utterly impossible to obtain information as to the movements of the sympathisers; our chief dependence must, in case of a fresh outbreak, be in our black trackers, and it is most advisable to make them as efficient as possible. At present, I am led to believe they are not as useful as they might be if they were properly handled by an officer who understood them, and I would therefore suggest that Mr. O’Connor who came here with the Queensland trackers, and who served here with our force for some sixteen months, be asked to again give his services if he is not otherwise engaged, and to take charge of our trackers, and generally assist in the police duties in the North Eastern District. Mr. O’Connor must have gained very considerable experience and knowledge of the country while he was stationed at Benalla, which should make his assistance of great value.

3. That two detectives be sent up to move about the district, and to pick up information, where possible, about the actual crime in the district, and any acts of violence which may be in contemplation.

4. That the stations named in the margin be strengthened sufficiently to allow of a well armed and mounted party of at least four or five being kept at each station named, in readiness to move away at a moment’s notice if required.

5. That an addition of one foot constable be made to the strength of the Jamieson, Euroa, and Bethanga stations, as at these places there are banks situated, and they would be likely places to be attacked from the fact of their being so isolated.

6. That the Police Commission be asked to refrain from publishing any evidence having reference to the police agents, or at least to use great caution in doing so.

I think, with the addition of two smart officers to the district, the strength of the stations increased as suggested, and the police generally kept in a state of thorough efficiency and preparation, that not only will an actual outbreak be averted, but that confidence will be somewhat restored, and the district brought into proper order.

There are of course many details which will have to be attended to, such for instance as the selection of suitable men to take charge of parties, seeing that the men can make proper use of their firearms, that the men are well mounted, and that they acquire a perfect knowledge of the country; these must of course, however, be left a good deal to the discretion and attention of the officer in charge, who will, of course, receive every possible assistance from this office.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant.

(Signed) H. M. CHOMLEY.

When out of sight of the track they had a long conversation together, Byrne wanting Jones to join them as a scout. Byrne’s mind appeared burdened about the murder of Sergeant Kennedy, and revealed several ideas and plans they had in view, which enabled Mr. Nicolson to take precautions against them. Byrne’s spurs were bloody, and he had the appearance of having ridden hard. Jones believed he was under the eyes of the gang both going to and returning from Thompson’s, to test his good faith. No police were sent as this extraordinary appointment of Byrne was evidently taken with such precautions as to baffle any pursuit that might be instituted. (See Foote, September 29, page 9.) the party were then to remain with the bankers until the money was got out of the safe, and then Byrne was to carry off the swag. Byrne said their horses were bad.
His grey horse was still the best. A female present give himself up he might get his pardon. He replied that the police were tired of watching his mother’s place. He looked as if fretting. Now looks under 10 stone weight.

He left about 12 p.m., saying he would come again on

Jones to sleep in his garden, outside his hut. Cave party established on 3rd December.

[Report nearly two months old.]. Carrington reports young Tom Lloyd and the McAulifes about Greta and Fifteen-Mile Creek Swamp. They appear to have money. Gallop about at night shouting and noisy. Smith, who had been despatched by Detective Ward to El Dorado, Woolshed, Sebastopol, and Reids’s Creek, returned, and reports nothing known of police movements (cave party).

Agent at present watching. Reported that Ned and Dan were seen rushing into Mrs. Skillian’s, and a third man on horseback rode off at the sight of the stranger. The latter overtook the man on horseback, a relative of the outlaws. The latter admitted that the other two were the outlaws—the Kellys. Denny also reports Ned Kelly and Byrne about Fifteen-Mile Creek.

Visit from Denny. Gang about Greta Ranges. Portion of Greta Swamp burned from stone crossing nearly to township. Expect to ascertain outlaw’s exact locality soon.

17th April 1880.—Renwick reports Ehtm. Hart still at Glen-rowan. McAulifes, Lloyd, and other sympathizers at Mrs. Jones’s, and rowdy, especially to strangers. Was of opinion that the outlaws cross railway line on foot, horses through gates, thus no traces, and that they are using their friends’ horses. The above corroborated by Denny about 4th March.

night, and other work. Communicated to Sergeant Steele, Wangaratta. Watch party formed upon Warby Ranges. Suspicious movements of Dick Hart, elder brother of outlaw Steve Hart. He has returned to Mrs. Jones’s, Glenrowan. On night of 14th Dick went up behind the hotel; absent two hours. Next night he came out in front of house, and cracked a stockwhip three times, like a signal. A party of horsemen passed through Glenrowan, going north. Two returned, one missing. The rest overhauled at Yarrawonga by police. Proved to be John, Dan, and Mick Nolan. Renwick, watching Ryan’s, Lake Rowan, discovering that some one was hiding in a hut, Senior-Constable Kelly and Lake Rowan police searched the hut, and found young Tom Lloyd to be the occupant and the missing man of the band of sympathizers above referred to.

Mrs. Jones, of near Beechworth, reports visit of Byrne and Dan Kelly to B——n’s. This information tested further, and found correct. Moses on watch. Beechworth police discovered B——n had visited Sebastopol, and conveyed a letter from outlaw Byrne to his mother. Detective Ward also reports message sent by Mrs. Byrne to Mrs. Jones, near Beechworth, not to let Moses know, nor to allow Joe or Dan to visit her house, lest Moses should betray them.

Sergeant Steele instructed to have Hart’s house, near Wangaratta, watched at night. Denny reports that the plough mould boards recently stolen had been fitted into jackets for outlaws to wear.

Smith on watch. McAuliffe has given notice to the outlaw Ned Kelly that he must get some money. He must do another bank, as he, McAuliffe, was unable to continue aiding him longer. Mr. Nicolson despatched Renwick by night train to Beechworth, to reconnoitre, &c. Arranged for party of police to watch Mrs. Byrne’s temporarily while other steps were being taken. Mr. Nicolson interviewed one person at Beechworth, who alleged she saw the outlaw Byrne at Murphy’s empty hut, and that another person saw the Four outlaws at Mrs. Byrne’s hut. Mr. Nicolson informed Detective Ward and Senior-Constable Mullane of his leaving North-Eastern District, and explained to them the necessity for their obtaining Superintendent Hare’s authority to continue employment of Moses after Mr. N. leaves, as no authority existed from Chief Commissioner of Police to employ him. Mr. N. had done so lately at his own risk.

[Reported by Scout Renwick. Search party, under Mr. Nicolson, with trackers, with result that tracks seen were Not those of outlaws.] Search place of alleged appearance, and found information to be incorrect.

The total average being equal to 75 men for 242 days.
The cost of an artilleryman maintained in barracks in Melbourne, including rations, uniforms, kits, &c., for some years past, amounted to about £86 per annum.
The cost of the 75 men for 242 days, therefore, at head-quarters rate, amounts to £4,276

APPENDIX 9.

CONSTABLE ROBERT McHUGH’S AFFIDAVIT.

I, Robert McHugh, constable, of Euroa, in the colony of Victoria, being duly sworn, make the following statement:—

1. That Inspector A. B. Smith was in charge of the police force in the Ovens district from February 1876 to February 1878.
2. That during some months of that time he was unable, through an injury to his leg, to inspect the district and perform his duties effectively; yet no other officer took his place or performed his duties.
3. That, contrary to paragraph 122 of the Police Regulations, he selected constables to take charge of stations who were not the “most efficient” or “best conducted.”
4. That he was in the habit of drinking in and frequenting publichouses, contrary to paragraph 166 of the Regulations.
5. That I have reason to believe, and do believe, that he was indebted to publicans, storekeepers, and others, contrary to paragraphs 165 and 288 of the Regulations.
6. That, between February 1876 and February 1878, the police stations at Yackandandah, Talangatta, Stanley, Eldorado, and Beechworth, were reduced in strength, thus—
   - Yackandandah, reduced from two to one constable.
   - Talangatta, do. do.
   - Stanley, do. do.
   - Eldorado, do. do.
   - Beechworth, one constable taken away.
7. That the rifles, belts, and ammunition issued to the constables, as a part of their kit, were of too old a pattern to be effective when employed against any modern rifle. These rifles were of three kinds, and all muzzle loaders, viz.:
   - 1st. The old musket, dated, I believe, 1854.
   - 3rd. The Enfield, dated 1861.
   All these have been out of date for many years, and compared with the Winchester, Zsolper, or Martini-Henry rifle are practically useless. No practice in shooting was provided for, and none allowed except at the constable’s own expense.

ROBT. McHUGH,
Constable, 2551.

Sworn before me, at Euroa, in the colony of Victoria, this 19th day of August

JAS. PHELAN,
Superintendent of Stores (Ordnance Branch).

Ordnance Office, Victoria Barracks, 27th May 1881.

APPENDIX 12.

Police Department (Chief Commissioner’s Office),
Melbourne, 20th September 1881.

Sir,

1. With reference to Superintendent Hare’s affidavit, of 16th September instant, in which he denies that my agent, “Diseased Stock,” came into Benalla on Thursday the 24th June 1881, preceding the murder of Aaron Sherritt, and warned him that the outlaws had gone out, or were going out, to do something at once, I beg to enclose my affidavit on the subject; and further, simply to refer you to Mr. Hare’s own evidence, No. 1518, viz.: “Well, this looks rather black for me, that these men are going to commit some outrage at once.”

2. This warning was what I was waiting for when I was superseded. It came from one whom Superintendent Hare describes as “this most respectable and reliable man;” yet he took no steps to communicate it by telegram or post to the police around him; otherwise Sherritt’s life might have been saved, and the destruction of the outlaws accomplished in a more satisfactory manner.

I have further to request your attention to 1516, as compared with 1518, by which it is apparent Superintendent Hare is alluding to two different interviews with “Diseased Stock,” which he relates to the Commission as one interview.
Mr. Hare’s other affidavits are, I consider, beneath my notice. Such documents can be produced ad infinitum.

I have to apologise for replying to the one within referred to, but it seems necessary, in self defence.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedt. servt.,

To the Chairman of the Royal Commission on Police.

C. H. NICOLSON.

I, CHARLES HOPE NICOLSON, Assistant Commissioner of Police, make oath and say:

That referring to Mr. Superintendent Hare’s affidavit, of sixteenth day of September One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, as will be seen on reference to answer numbered 1518, wherein Mr. Hare says, speaking of the agent known as Diseased Stock:—

“He was not a supporter; he was, I think, one of the most respectable and reliable men that had ever been engaged in that capacity during the Kelly search. He was a little too sanguine, and after he left the office, I said to Mr. Sadleir, ‘Well, this looks rather black for me, that these men are going to commit some outrage at once.’ He said, ‘Oh, that man has been giving us some information for months. Besides,’ he says, ‘he is the most sanguine and tantalizing man I ever saw.’”

That there was in the office at Benalla a lithogram for striking off several copies of documents, and it was my invariable custom, whenever there was any expected movement of the Kellys, to use this machine and telegraph to circulate notice to all the police stations in the district, warning them to be on the alert; and I say that if this course had been pursued by Mr. Hare, on the receipt of the above-mentioned information, the police would have been put on their guard, and the catastrophe at Sherritt’s hut avoided.

C. H. NICOLSON.

Given at Melbourne, in the colony of Victoria, this twenty-second day of September One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, before me,

FRANK MADDEN,

A Commissioner of the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria for taking Affidavits.

Police Department, E. Melbourne.
Superintendent’s Office, Sept. 26th 1881.

Sir,

I do myself the honor to inform you that I this day received from Mr. Nicolson a copy of a declaration that he had forwarded to the Commission respecting a declaration made by me on the 16th September, and handed in to the Commission at their last meeting.

I would point out to the Chairman that the paragraph quoted from my evidence refers to what took place at my first interview with the man known as “the diseased stock agent,” a few days after my arrival at Benalla, in June 1880, and not the visit on the Thursday prior to Aaron Sherritt’s murder. See evidence, page 90, question 1516.

I would respectfully draw the attention of the Commission to the fact of Mr. Nicolson disobeying the positive instructions laid down by the Commission, viz., that each officer was to attend to the evidence concerning his own case, and not endeavor to pick holes in the conduct of other officers.

I think I might here observe that Mr. Nicolson has adopted a not uncommon course in such cases, that, when there is no defence, to set to work and abuse the opposite side.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

FRANCIS HARE, Superintendent of Police.

The Honorable Francis Longmore,
Chairman Royal Commission.

APPENDIX 13.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRISONER WILLIAMSON'S STATEMENT.—15.11.78.

The following is a further statement made to Inspector Green on the 15/11/78 by prisoner Williamson, in the Pentridge prison:— The Kellys are certain to keep on the ranges in the neighborhood, and get supplied with rations from Mrs. Skillion, which she would plant for them. They are likely to be camped at the head of one of the creeks, and as far back as they can keep; probably the Rose, the Hurdle, which is very scrubby, or the Cut-a-way, from which places they could see the police coming. They cross at Peacock’s paddock on the King. They will not come from the ranges except when the way is clear, as Mrs. Skillion can signal to them when the police are about by hanging a white sheet on a line fastened from the end of the house to a sapling which can be seen at a great distance.

They would probably get rations at Mick Millar’s, near the Buckland, as King, who is along with Ned Kelly, is supposed to be a half-brother of Millar’s. If pushed they would take food from any of the farmers’ houses about.

There is a store at the Merry-jig, on the Devil’s River, where they would likely get food; it is kept by a relative of the Lloyds on the wife’s side. Jack Quinn would allow them to come to his house and take rations.

The following is a description of Kelly’s horses

1st. A bay horse with white patch on near rump.
2nd. A tall bay mare, well bred, branded W > E (thinks near shoulder), small a under near saddle.
This is Edw. Kelly’s favorite.
3rd. A little bay mare, JC made into JO or JQ near shoulder, > E on some other part.
4th. A little chestnut with one eye.
5th. A chestnut horse with silver mane and tail, 17 or 18 hands high, which is psed as a pack horse.

Williamson is confident that the Kellys will keep to the ranges, as Ned Kelly told him often that it would be no good for him to try and get away as every body knew him well, and also that he would be suspicious of persons putting him away. The Johnston, of Black Range Creek, would put the Kellys away; they are. good bushmen, and know the country well; their father kept a station, and was known as Buffalo Johnston. Tom Lloyd and Wild Wright would also put them away. If they do leave the ranges they are certain to stick-up and make a haul. They would likely try the Seymour bank, as Ned Kelly had it in view for a long time to stick it up. They would keep the bush until they got to Seymour, and return the same way. Mrs. Skillion would probably get the haul. The Kellys have a track from Greta to Barnawartha; they pass under the railway bridge.

[Confidential.]

Forwarded for the information of Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadler. I address this to the latter, being uncertain whether Mr. Nicolson is still in Benalla. At all events, the information, which is important, should be communicated to him as soon as possible.

The signals which Mrs. Skillian makes from her place clearly bring her within the reach of the new Act. It would be very desirable to convict her, if possible, or, at a list rate, to prosecute her.

F. C. STANDISH,
C. C. Police.

702

7 Febry. 1879.

Williamson alias Brikey does not know Talangatta; but thinks that they would call at Magennis’s for some purpose. They (the Kellys) don’t know the country on the other side of the River Murray. Byrnes may know it. They might make from McGennis’s to the Maneroo country; but I don’t think they would go there. I think they must be about the Dividing Range, on the watershed into Gippsland, and have a camp there, and have come, where they were seen, for the purpose of obtaining rations and be returning to their camp, which they may have formed eighty or ninety miles off. I know no one but McGinnes in the country they are said to have been seen in. Mrs. Kelly should be sent to Beechworth to see the prisoners there, and her daughters; the latter would tell her all they know, and afterwards I might meet her in Melbourne gaol. The daughters would require to be arrested and imprisoned in Beechworth, in order to meet their mother. Don’t think they will try to get away just yet. They are probably planning something else like Euroa. They will not be about Buffalo or Morse’s Creek. They will keep clear of any place where diggers are working. They have some store where gold is purchased, which Power tried, but missed the gold which was secured on a horse outside, arid which Power neglected to examine.

Michael Woodyard states they would be making for the head of the Murray, Paddy’s River, in New South Wales; a track crosses head of Paddy’s River to Yarrangobilly Ranges into the Maneroo country, between Paddy’s River and Yarrangobilly. The Sparkes, a back station, who would show them the back country. By keeping to east of Kiandra they may reach Queensland. They may have been going to Duncan Macgennis’s, the drover, who lives at Towong. They have been at Kiandra. Dan sheared at Maneroo. Steve Hart does not know New South Wales.

The following statement has been made to Inspector Green, in the Pentridge prison, 29/10/78, by prisoner Williams, an associate of the Kellys.

The Kellys will probably camp on the Black Range or the Dundommother, which runs into the Buffalo; they are more likely to camp on the Dundommother, about 45 miles from the Kellys. They have a tent 8 x 10 feet, and a fly, which they take with them, together with about a month’s rations. They would plant their horses on the Rowe’s River, which runs into the Buffalo, and about 7 miles above Connolly’s station; if the horses were found, they could be watched, when the Kellys would be seen coming for them; the horses might be hobbled, but, being quiet, they are more likely to be without them. The Kellys are likely to get food from their own place; but they are more likely to get it Skillion’s, where Mick Henny, 40 years, 5 feet 6 or 7 inches high, grey hair, and Kelly’s daughter, 16 or 17 years, are stopping, and who are acquainted with a large log where they plant food for the Kellys to take away; the log, marked on the attached sketch, is about a quarter of a mile from the south angle of Williams’s fence, is in a scrubby range, it is the only log about the place, and lying north and south, it has a hollow large enough to hold two or three people in. If the log was found to contain food, it would be well to watch it, as the offenders would come in the night to take it away. The Kellys would give Skillion’s wife any haul they would make, and she would provide rations for them.

The offenders might be found by starting from the Eleven-mile Creek up the King’s as far as Wood-yard’s, where search might be made for their horses. They might also be found near the head of the Cut-a-way Creek, off the King Creek, which would be about 30 miles from Williams’s place. This is a most dangerous place, as the offenders could roll down big stones on any one following them.

There is a man named Billy King—but that is not his proper name—about 25 years, 5 feet 10 inches high, stout build, thin features, fair whiskers, small very fair moustache, blue eyes, small hands, thick legs, who was evidently in Pentridge, and is like King, who is married to Kelly’s sister. [is believed to be identical with Isaiah Wright, discharged from Pentridge last year, see Gazette, page 141, and is married to one of the Lloyds.] The above in brackets is not Williams’s statement. This King, who is now a mate of the Kellys, has been stopping at Kellys since last year; he was in Kelly’s house when Constable Fitzpatrick was fired at; he wanted the Kellys not to let Fitzpatrick get away alive, and said that, in place of being shot through the arm, he should be shot through the heart; he is a man that would fire on any one that would attempt to arrest him; he is a dangerous man.

Tom Lloyd would likely join the Kellys. Williams, when in his cell in Beechworth, spoke to Mrs. Kelly, who was in the yard after they were sentenced, when she said that they would play up, that there would be murder now. Williams further stated that Ned Kelly and King would fire on the police if followed, and that they would not be taken alive; but Dan Kelly would sooner run away than fire.

The Kellys and King have four revolvers and one rifle, but the rifle is not much use. Last year Skillion came to Melbourne and purchased some revolvers and ammunition; two of the revolvers are large ones, similar to what the police have got, and probably one of the Kellys would come to Melbourne by train for anything that they would require.

If the log is carefully watched, the Kellys are certain to be caught, as they will have no other means of getting food except from this log.
for money; and that they intend attempting another bank robbery.

If the proposed reductions are carried out, I believe there will be further outrage and loss of life, and it appears to me that the police, having failed to prevent in the first instance the present unfortunate condition of affairs should not now refuse the protection necessary in consequence.

J. SADLEIR, Superintendent of Police.

The Assistant Commissioner of Police, Benalla.

APPENDIX 15.

Benalla Police Station, 5/7/80.

REPORT OF CONSTABLE FALKINER’S RELATIVE TO INFORMATION RECEIVED ABOUT THE KELLY GANG.

I respectfully report to the Superintendent that on the 11th June Superintendent Hare spoke to Constable Canny and I, and directed us to take a trip in the bush, and see if we could not get some information. Superintendent Hare -told us that we could go where we thought best, and when we found it convenient to send him a few lines, and giving me his private address.

We came to the conclusion that it would be best to carry no firearms, and if anything urgent was to turn up, to come to the nearest telegraph office and speak to him (Superintendent Hare). Constable Canny and I left here on the morning of the 12/6/80, and on the 16/6/80 we reached Cotton Tree. On that day I wrote to Superintendent Hare telling him that I had been informed, on good authority, that the Kellys had been seen coming home of late, giving the names of the persons who had seen them, and the direction they were coming from, and that they were getting provisions from a Chinese store, but could not name the place just then; also some other good information, but nothing that would point to their exact whereabouts. On the 22nd I wrote again to Superintendent Hare telling him that we thought it best to return, as we had got all the information we could, and that we intended to see if the above report was correct that the gang were getting provisions from a Chinese store. On the 24th we arrived at the Black Dog Creek, and went to see this Chuiaman, Ah Yang; he knew Canny, and took me to be Canny’s brother, and spoke very freely. After speaking to him for a time, I asked him if he was not frightened of the Kellys, and he said no, that they were too far away, and that they were fifty miles away; that they were at the Buckland Flat, and were getting provisions at a Chinese store at that place, that they came down off the ranges two at a time, and tied their horses outside, and got plenty of grog and provisions, and carried them away.

This they did frequently, and telling the Chinaman, if he told the police, they would shoot him, and then burn him; he also said that they had plenty of money, and always paid.

The Chinaman said he was too frightened to tell the police, as the police were too frightened to go up there to them; and, if he told the police, they would kill him. As this information was so good, we thought we would get Superintendent flare to see him.

We then rode to Wangaratta, and on the morning of the 25th I sent a telegram to Superintendent Hare stating that Canny and I would be home that evening, and wished to see him.

On our arrival here we saw Mr. Hare, and gave him the above information. He said it was the best information he had received.

On the morning of the 26th Superintendent Hare called me into his office, and told me that I would have to proceed to this place again, and get the name of the Chinaman who was keeping the store, and the Chinaman who gave the information—to find out when he was there last.

I left Benalla on the morning of the 26th, and saw the Chinaman on the 27th; and he informed me that he had been there in May last, and the names of Chinamen keeping the store are Pong Luke and Chat Ving. On the morning of the 28th, as I was returning to Benalla, I was told that the gang were captured at Glenrowan, a distance of four miles from their own home.

I also beg to state that in my first letter to Mr. Hare I stated that the Kellys had been seen coming home of late, which proves my information to be correct, as they were captured within four miles of their own home.

Also the information I received from the Chinaman that they had horses for carrying their provisions, which since their capture has been proved beyond a doubt.

I regret to say that my being on this special duty prevented me from taking any part in the final destruction of the gang, as the superintendent is, of course, aware.

APPENDIX 16.

Urgent. (Copy.)
Police Department, Melbourne, 14th October 1881.

Sir,—I enclose herewith, for the information of the Royal Police Commission, a statutory declaration by Mr. C. C. Rawlins, in reference to matters now under their consideration. Mr. Rawlius was examined before the Commission at a time when the officers were excluded from the proceedings, and until yesterday I had no opportunity of knowing that he was in the position to give the evidence shown in his declaration. I hope that, even at this late period in the inquiry, the Commission will be pleased to take his declaration into careful consideration.

I have, &c.,
J. SADLEIR, Superintendent of Police.

J. Williams, Esq., Secretary H. P. Commission.

I, Charles Champion Rawlins, farmer, of 36 Rus street, in the colony of Victoria, make oath and say as follows:—I was at Glenrowan on 28th June 1880 from the first attack of the police on the Kelly gang until about 4 p.m. I saw the train conveying Mr. Sadleir and the Benalla police, which arrived at Glenrowan about 5.30 a.m. About twenty minutes after Mr. Sadleir arrived, I saw him near the railway station at Glenrowan. I understood from Mr. Sadleir that he had just come from Mr. O’Connor. I said to him, “Have you made the south and west side of the hotel (Mrs. Jones’s) secure against the escape of the outlaws?” Mr. Sadleir replied, “Yes, I have placed Sergeant Whelan and a number of the police there, and the place is perfectly secure.” Mr. Sadleir was at this time standing on the Benalla end of the platform, in the open, and in view of the hotel (about 120 yards distant), from which the outlaws had been firing all the morning. Subsequently, about 9 a.m., I had further conversation with Mr. Sadleir. We were standing together near the contractor’s tents, about 45 yards from the hotel (Mrs. Jones’s). We were speaking of the difficulty of getting the innocent persons out, and I said, “Shall we tickle them up a bit?” Mr. Sadleir said, “We can’t fire into the building until we get them out.” I saw Mr. Sadleir constantly during the day, and he took entire control of the proceedings.

I saw Mrs. Skillian arriving on the ground just as the hotel was taken fire. She had not been on the ground before.

And I make this declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and by virtue of the provisions of an Act of Parliament of Victoria rendering persons making a false declaration punishable for wilful and corrupt perjury.

(Signed) CHAS. C. RAWLINS,

Declared before me, at Melbourne, on the 14th day of October One thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.—F. CALL, P.M.

APPENDIX 17.

The following letter was received from H. M. Chomley, Esq., Acting Chief Commissioner of Police, and was read at the meeting held Tuesday, 9th August:—

(Copy.)

My dear Chomley,

1880.

In reply to your letter of yesterday, I beg to say that you never at any time showed the slightest disinclination to proceed to the North-Eastern district in connection with the pursuit of the outlaws; on the contrary, in November 1878 you expressed your willingness to undertake that duty, but as Mr. Nicolson was then in charge of operations, I thought it unnecessary to send up another officer. Subsequently, as you are aware, I proceeded to Benalla myself with Hare immediately after I received the news of the Euroa bank robbery, and remained there upwards of six months.

I wish to disabuse your mind of the idea that Hare in his report conveyed, or had the intention of conveying, the slightest reflection on you or the other officers whose names are mentioned. His statement is an accurate account of what passed between him and me, and on that occasion he strongly urged on me that you should be selected for that duty, more especially as you had been stationed at Beechworth before.

Having known you intimately for 26 years, and our official connection having extended over close on 22 years, I may state that I have had at all times the greatest confidence in your tact, judgment, and energy, and I have no doubt that had you been sent to the N.-E. district no one would have performed his duty more satisfactorily.

I may inform you that Mr. Service’s Government decided that it would be advisable to remove Mr. Nicolson, and to send up Mr. Hare in his place, and I was instructed to carry out that arrangement.

Yours very truly,

H. M. Chomley, Esq.  F. C. STANDISH.

APPENDIX 20.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AT MEETINGS HELD BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON POLICE.

TUESDAY, 15TH MARCH 1881.

Present:
Honorable F. Longmore, in the Chair;
Mr. Graves,
Mr. Fincham

Commission read.

Mr. Graves, prior to the commencement of the proceedings, called attention to remarks made by the Argus newspaper in reference to his appointment on the Commission. While contending that those remarks were, in his opinion, wholly unjustifiable, he at the same time expressed his willingness to resign his position, if his brother members considered his presence amongst them calculated in the least to act prejudicially to the public interests or impair the value of their report. He would withdraw from the room while the meeting considered the matter.

The Chairman requested Mr. Graves to remain, as such a proceeding as he proposed was quite unnecessary. He felt assured that Mr. Graves’s long and intimate acquaintance with the North-Eastern district would prove of the greatest value to his fellow members. They each had an important duty to discharge, and should not be deterred from doing it by anything that appeared in the press.

Moved by Mr. Fincham, seconded by Mr. Graves—
Resolved—that the evidence of witnesses called before the Commission be taken on oath.

Mr. Fincham gave notice of his intention to move, at the next meeting, that the proceedings of this Royal Commission be open to the press.

Some discussion arose as to whether witnesses should be allowed to obtain professional assistance. No definite decision was arrived at, but the general opinion expressed was adverse to that course being adopted.

Mr. Graves moved, Mr. Fincham seconded—
Resolved—that the Government be requested to place the services of Mr. Bell, shorthand writer, at the disposal of the Commission.

The Secretary submitted the following documents, which had been obtained from the Chief Secretary’s Department, viz. Communication addressed by Captain Standish to the Chief Secretary, dated 5th July 1880, asking for the appointment of a Board of Enquiry into the state of the police force, having special reference to the Kelly outrages. From Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner of Police, asking for a Board to investigate the circumstances of his removal from the North-Eastern district. From the same, reiterating the request. From Sub-Inspector O’Connor, of the Queensland police, requesting a Board. From the same, repeating the request. Also Superintendent Hare’s official report upon the Glenrowan affray.

Moved by Mr. Fincham, seconded by Mr. Graves—
Resolved—that the foregoing documents be printed, and copies sent to the various police officers concerned therewith, and also to the members of the Commission.

Ordered—that Captain Standish, Mr. Nicolson, Superintendent Hare, and Sub-Inspector O’Connor be summoned to attend the meeting of the Commission to be held on Friday the 18th March, at Eleven o’clock.

The Commissioners then adjourned.

18th March 1881.

F. Longmore, Chairman.

FRIDAY, 18TH MARCH 1881.

Present:
Mr. Longmore, in the Chair;
Mr. Dixon,
Mr. Fincham,
Mr. Graves,
Mr. G. C. Levey.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.
A discussion took place as to whether witnesses should be represented by counsel. It was agreed that such a course was inadvisable.

Mr. Fincham moved, Mr. Graves seconded—

Resolved—That the meetings of the Commission be open to the press except in cases where public policy demand that the proceedings should be conducted with closed doors.

Mr. Dixon moved, Mr. Fincham seconded—

Resolved—That the Chief Secretary be requested to place at the disposal of the Commission all documents, telegrams &c. in the hands of the Government relating to the Kelly outrages.

Mr. Dixon moved, Mr. Fincham seconded—

Resolved—That application be made to the Lands Department for a suitable map of the North-Eastern district.

Ordered—That the Chairman apply for a special advance from the Treasurer for the purposes of the enquiry.

The representatives of the press and the witnesses in attendance were admitted.

Mr. Frank Madden applied to be allowed to appear on behalf of Mr. Nicolson.

The Chairman intimated the decision arrived at by the Commission in reference to witnesses obtaining the assistance of counsel.

Prior to being sworn the witness applied for a postponement of the hearing on the ground of insufficient notice, and the necessity for reading up documents bearing upon the enquiry.

Mr. Nicolson and Mr. O’Connor also asked for a postponement.

Mr. Hare stated that he was prepared to proceed with his evidence.

Discussion ensued.

Finally resolved to adjourn till Wednesday the 23rd March, at Eleven a.m.

The meeting then adjourned.

23rd March 1881.

FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.
Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Gibb,
Mr. Dixon, Mr. Hall,
Mr. Fincham, Mr. Levey,
Mr. Graves.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Ordered—That application be made to the Honourable the Chief Secretary for a more suitable room in which to hold the meetings of the Commission.

Ordered—That application be made to the Police Department for the record taken of the capture of Power the bushranger.

Ordered—A return of the secret-service money disbursed during the pursuit of the Kelly gang.

Ordered—Papers relating to the removal of Constable Flood from Greta before 1877.

Mr. Nicolson called and further examined. Direct examination closed.

Mr. O’Connor called and examination proceeded with.

The meeting adjourned until the following day, at Eleven o’clock.

30th March 1881.

FRANCIS LONGMORE.

WEDNESDAY, 30TH MARCH 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Gibb,
Mr. Dixon, Mr. Hall.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Dixon, seconded by Mr. Anderson—.

Resolved—That Mr. Sadleir, Superintendent of Police, Benalla, be instructed to hold himself in readiness, upon receipt of a telegram, to proceed to Melbourne for the purpose of giving evidence before the Commission, and to bring with him all documents, reports, letters, telegrams, &c., in his possession, relating to the pursuit and destruction of the Kelly gang.

Ordered—That application be made to the Police Department for the correspondence which took place in reference to the transfer of a tracker named Moses from the Queensland to the Victorian service.

Mr. O’Connor called and examined. Examination closed.

The meeting adjourned until the following day, at Eleven o’clock.

31st March 1881.

FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

THURSDAY, 31ST MARCH 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Graves,
Mr. Dixon, Mr. Gibb,
Mr. Fincham, Mr. Hall.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Ordered—That Mr. Bellis, selector, Yarrawonga, be summoned to give evidence before the Commission.

Mr. Hare, Superintendent of Police, called and examined.

Discussion arose as to whether the Commission should sit on the following day or adjourn till Tuesday. Several members considered it unreasonable and inconvenient to sit more than three days a week.

The meeting adjourned until Eleven o’clock next day.

THURSDAY, 5TH MAY 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson
Mr. Fincham
Mr. Graves

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.
Mr. Dixon brought under the notice of the Commission the statement made on the previous day by Mr. O’Connor, to the effect that he had been appointed an officer in the Victorian police, and had been ordered to take the position of second in command in the North-Eastern district.
Moved by Mr. Dixon, seconded by Mr. Gibb—Resolved—That as Mr. O’Connor was one of those who applied for an enquiry into his treatment during the search for and capture of the Kelly outlaws, this Commission, having been informed by Mr. O’Connor that he has been appointed to active duty in the North-Eastern district, express an opinion that, pending the result of this enquiry, such an appointment should not have been made.
The following was the result of the division on this motion:—For—Messrs. Anderson, Gibb, Dixon, and Graves.
Against—Messrs. Fincham and Hall.
Ordered—That the Secretary at once see the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police and obtain the papers referring to Mr. O’Connor’s appointment.
The Secretary, having seen Mr. Chomley, reported that there were no papers in the case beyond the report which he
(the Acting Chief Commissioner) had made to the Honorable the Chief Secretary respecting the state of the North-Eastern district, and in which he had suggested the propriety of making the appointment referred to.
Moved by Mr. Graves, seconded by Mr. Gibb—Resolved—That the Chairman and Mr. Anderson wait upon the Honorable the Chief Secretary, and lay the resolution adopted by the Commission before him.
The Chairman, at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, reported that the deputation had had an interview with Mr.
Berry, the Chief Secretary, who informed them that the appointment of Mr. O’Connor as stated, had not been made; that it would not be made without the concurrence of the Commission, nor until a progress report had been sent in to the Government.
Constable Dowling called and examined.
Jacob Wilson called and examined. Examination closed.
The meeting adjourned until the following Tuesday, at Eleven o’clock.

10th May 1881.

FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

TUESDAY, 10TH MAY 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson
Mr. Fincham
Mr. Hall
Mr. Gibb.
Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.
Constable Dowling’s examination resumed and concluded.
Constable Falkener examined.
The Commission then sat with closed doors.
Communication, as follows, from Acting Under-Secretary was read:

Sir,—I am desired by the Chief Secretary to state that he will be glad if the Commission will submit separately, and at their earliest convenience, such of their recommendations as have reference to Mr. O’Connor and the black trackers under him, as in the projected re-organization of the police arrangements for the North-Eastern district it may be found necessary that Mr. O’Connor should be re-appointed.

I have, &c.,
(Signed)
T. R. WILSON, Acting Under-Secretary.

711

The Chairman, in explanation of the above, stated that he and Mr. Anderson had waited on the Chief Secretary, in accordance with the resolution of the Commission on the Thursday previously. They had expressed surprise that Mr. O’Connor should have received an appointment in the Victorian police while his case as well as that of other police officers was sub judice, as he (Mr. O’Connor) had made serious charges against officers of the force, and they had made serious charges against him. The Chief Secretary, in reply, informed the deputation that no appointment had been made, and that he would not make any without the concurrence of the Commission. Until a progress report respecting Mr. O’Connor had been sent in, nothing would be done. At the same time he (Mr. Berry) expressed a desire that the Commission should expeditiously investigate the matter, namely, Mr. O’Connor’s connection with the pursuit of the Kellys, so that, if deemed desirable, he might be appointed second in command in the North-Eastern district, in charge of the black trackers, he having been considered the best adapted for that service. The Chief Secretary had given the assurance that no appointment under existing circumstances would be made without the approval of the Commission, and he expressed surprise upon seeing the announcement made in the newspapers of Mr. O’Connor’s appointment.

Moved by Mr. Dixon, seconded by Mr. Anderson—

Resolved—That the verbal report of the Chairman and the letter from the Under-Secretary be received and duly recorded on the minutes.

Moved by Mr. Dixon, seconded by Mr. Anderson—

Resolved—That the Commissioner communicate with the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police requesting him to forward to the Commission his report upon the state of the North-Eastern district submitted to the Honorable the Chief Secretary; also all documents in his possession or obtainable having relation to the projected appointment of Mr. O’Connor to the position of second in command in the North-Eastern district.

The meeting adjourned until the following day.

Mr. Fincham,
Mr. Graves,
Mr. Hall,
Mr. Dixon.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Mr. Hall informed the Commission that he had received letters from several persons in the Benalla district pressing their claims for participating in the Kelly reward, and also for compensation for losses arising out of the pursuit of the outlaws. He desired to elicit from the Chairman whether the Commission was in a position to deal with those matters.

Mr. Graves stated he understood that the Board appointed to consider the claims of persons to the reward, having found that exception was taken to their report, had declined to deal with claims for compensation.

Mr. Hall informed the Commission that he had received letters from several persons in the Benalla district pressing their claims for participating in the Kelly reward, and also for compensation for losses arising out of the pursuit of the outlaws. He desired to elicit from the Chairman whether the Commission was in a position to deal with those matters.

Mr. Graves stated he understood that the Board appointed to consider the claims of persons to the reward, having found that exception was taken to their report, had declined to deal with claims for compensation.

The Chairman replied that the question of distributing the Kelly reward money had not been referred to the Commission.
He had had a conversation with the Chief Secretary upon the subject, and Mr. Berry stated that it was not his intention to act upon the Report of the Kelly Reward Board until the Police Commission had made fuller enquiry. The Commission had no desire to review the decision given by the Kelly Reward Board.

Senior-Constable Kelly further examined.
Senior-Constable Steele called and examined.

Meeting adjourned till following day.

Mr. H. M. Chomley, Acting Chief Commissioner of Police, examined. Examination closed.

The following letter was received from Superintendent Sadleir:

Memo.

Police Department, Melbourne, 2nd June 1881.

Will you kindly inform me, at your earliest convenience, whether the resolution arrived at by the Royal Commission on Police, on yesterday, is intended to exclude the officers of police from the hearing of evidence before the Commission, and from cross-examining the various witnesses on such points as may affect the character, reputation, or conduct of the officers concerned.

(Sd.)

J. SADLER, Superintendent Police.

J. Williams, Esq., Secretary Police Commission.

The Commission having deliberated, the Secretary was directed to forward the following reply:

Superintendent Sadleir, Melbourne, 2nd June 1881.

Sir,—In reply to your communication of this date, respecting the non-attendance of the officers of police at the meetings of the Commission whilst witnesses are being examined, I have been instructed to inform you that the Commissioners are of opinion that the presence of the officers and the system of cross-examination pursued by them have been found to greatly impede the progress of the enquiry and, in some instances, to have had the effect of apparently intimidating the witnesses. At present the Commission are engaged in dealing with the case of Mr. O’Connor, and as the line of examination to be adopted will have reference immediately to the circumstances attending that gentleman’s connection with the Victorian police, the further attendance of the officers has been deemed unnecessary and inexpedient. The evidence taken, as heretofore, will be forwarded to you in due course, and when your attendance is required you will be communicated with.

Meeting adjourned till the following Tuesday.

Mr. Graves,
Mr. Hall.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Superintendent Sadleir was called, and examined by Mr. O’Connor.

Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner of Police, called, and examined by Mr. O’Connor.

Mr. O’Connor intimated that the examination of these witnesses closed his case, and asked permission to attend the future meetings of the Commission when evidence was being taken.

The Chairman stated that compliance with the request would be regarded as making an invidious distinction, as the officers of the police had been relieved from attending. The matter would, however, be considered by the Commission.

Meeting adjourned till Tuesday, 21st June.

21st June 1881.

TUESDAY, 21ST JUNE 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Anderson,
Mr. Fincham,
Mr. Graves,
Mr. Hall,
Mr. Gibb.

Superintendent Hare was recalled and examined respecting the assistance given by the witness Jacob Wilson to the police during the pursuit of the Kelly gang.

Resolved—That application be made to the Acting Chief Commissioner of Police to place at the disposal of Jacob Wilson a small sum of money pending the consideration of his claim for compensation by the Government.

Resolved—That the Secretary be instructed to forward the following resolution to the Honorable the Chief Secretary

This Commission desire to bring under the special notice of the Honorable the Chief Secretary the case of the man Jacob Wilson who, owing to the assistance rendered to the police during the pursuit of the Kelly gang, has been compelled to relinquish his selection in Greta, and finally to leave the district. From the evidence adduced before them, the Commission think that, as a matter of justice, some means of subsistence should be provided for Wilson until such time as his claims for compensation have been dealt with by the Government.

The Very Reverend Dean Gibney called and examined. Examination closed.

Senior-constable Johnston called and examined.

Ordered—That the Secretary be instructed to proceed with the drawing up of the progress report in Mr. O’Connor’s case.

Meeting adjourned until the following morning.

FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.
WEDNESDAY, 29th JUNE 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Anderson, Mr. Dixon, Mr. Graves,
Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner of Police, appeared before the Commission to contradict a statement made by a witness who was reported to have stated that he (Mr. Nicolson) had recommended Mr. O’Connor’s appointment.

The Chairman intimated that no statement to that effect had been made to the Commission, and that the witness must therefore have been misreported.

Superintendent Sadleir asked the Commission to be allowed to cross-examine the Very Reverend Dean Gibney. The Chairman stated that Mr. Sadleir could arrange with Mr. Wade, Government shorthand writer, to hear the evidence given by Father Gibney read, and if he then considered it necessary to put additional questions to the witness referred to, they could be reduced to writing and forwarded to the Secretary, to be afterwards dealt with by the Commission.

Resolved—that the resolution of the Commission passed at the meeting held on Wednesday, 1st June, dispensing with the further attendance of the officers of police, be rescinded. That the officers be permitted to attend the meetings of the Commission while evidence is being taken; and, where statements are made reflecting upon their character or conduct, that they be allowed the right of cross-examining the witnesses, the questions to be submitted in writing and put through the Chairman.

Sensor—Constable Flood called and examined. Examination closed.

Meeting adjourned until the following morning.

1/7/81.

THURSDAY, 1st JULY 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

The leading features of the draft report were considered, and the framing of the progress report referred to a sub-committee consisting of the Chairman, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Graves, and the Secretary.

A memo. was received from the Chief Secretary, forwarding an application from Superintendent Sadleir, asking for re-employment.

The Secretary was instructed to acknowledge receipt of the same.

Meeting adjourned until the 5th July.

5/7/81.

TUESDAY, 5th JULY 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

The progress report, as appended, was finally adopted, and the Secretary instructed to forward it, when signed by the several members of the Commission, in due course.

The Chairman read the memo. of the Honorable the Chief Secretary, forwarding a communication from Superintendent Sadleir asking to be re-employed in active duty, on the ground that he had been only called as a witness before the Commission, and that he had been relieved from further attendance.

Resolved—that, in the opinion of the Commission, Superintendent Sadleir does not occupy the position of a witness only in connection with the enquiry now proceeding.

Mr. Sadleir was called before the Commission and informed of the decision arrived at.

Ordered—that arrangements be made for the attendance of the Very Rev. Dean Gibney for the purpose of cross-examination by Mr. Sadleir.

The Acting-Chief Commissioner of Police, Mr. Chomley, called and examined.

Resolved—that, having heard the evidence of Mr. Chomley, the Commission cannot see their way to alter the recommendation made to the Honorable the Chief Secretary on the 29th March last, requesting that Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Chief Commissioner, Superintendent Hare, and Superintendent Sadleir should receive leave of absence pending the result of the enquiry.

The Secretary was instructed to forward this resolution to the Honorable the Chief Secretary.

The following is the progress report of the Commission:—

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY—

A Royal Commission was appointed on March 7th 1881, under letters patent by Your Excellency—

1st. To enquire into the circumstances preceding and attending the Kelly outbreak.
2nd. As to the efficiency of the police to deal with such possible occurrences.
3rd. To enquire into the action of the police authorities during the period the Kelly gang were at large.
4th. The efficiency of the means employed for their capture; and
5th. Generally to enquire into and report upon the present state and organization of the police force.

Subsequently a memo., dated 10th May 1881, from the Hon. Graham Berry, Chief Secretary of the colony, was received by the Commissioners as follows:—“The Chief Secretary will be glad if the Police Commission will submit separately, and at their earliest convenience, such of their recommendations as have reference to Mr. Inspector O’Connor and the black trackers under him, as in the projected re-organization of the police arrangements for the North-Eastern district, it may be found necessary that Mr. O’ Connor be re-appointed.”

Your Commissioners have now the honor to submit the following progress report:—

1. That the evidence before the Commission is not of such a character as to warrant your Commissioners in recommending the Honorable the Chief Secretary to appoint Mr. Stanhope O’Connor to the position of an inspector of police in the North-Eastern district.

2. Your Commissioners are of opinion that the Government should make provision for the permanent employment of black trackers as an auxiliary branch of the police service; care being taken that they shall be trained to habits of subordination, and made amenable to the general discipline of the force.

Your Commissioners would also recommend—

3. That, as far as practicable, a thorough system of police patrol shall be established throughout the colony, more especially in the North-Eastern district.

4. That immediate steps be taken by the Government to arm the mounted police of the colony with the Martini-Henry carbine; that the entire force shall be instructed in the use of the weapon by means of periodical target practice; and that a reasonable quantity of a shall be served out to each man for that purpose.

THURSDAY, 22nd SEPTEMBER 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Dixon,
Mr. Fincham, Mr. Hall,
Mr. Levey, Mr. Gibb.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Resolved—That the Commission desire to bring under the notice of the Honorable the Chief Secretary the cases of the boy Reardon, who was shot by the police at Glenrowan, and of ex-constable McIntyre, with a view to obtaining for them special consideration at the hands of the Government. They would also respectfully suggest that Jacob Wilson, another sufferer by the Kelly outrages, receive some such appointment as a gatekeeper on the railways.

Mr. Anderson submitted the following resolution:—That in view of the requirements of the Public Service and without prejudice to any recommendations that may be contained in their report, this Commission are of opinion that the officers of the police now on leave of absence, viz., Messrs. Nicolson, Hare, and Sadleir, may be allowed to resume duty.

The Commission having deliberated, the proposition was withdrawn, and the consideration of the points of the evidence with a view to the compilation of the report was proceeded with.

It was resolved that the Commission deal finally with the Kelly business before proceeding with the question of the reconstruction of the force.

The Commission then consulted and deliberated upon the evidence dealing with matters up to the period of arrival of black trackers.

The Secretary received instructions to prepare a brief historical sketch of the incidents of the Kelly pursuit as disclosed in the evidence, together with the lines upon which he should proceed down to the arrival of the Queensland black trackers in the colony.

The Commission adjourned until Tuesday the 27th instant, at half-past Eleven o’clock.

TUESDAY, 4th OCTOBER 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Dixon,
Mr. Gibb, Mr. Hall,
Mr. Fincham, Mr. Levey.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

The Commission having deliberated on section 25, referring to Superintendent Hare’s report of 2nd July 1880, it was—

Resolved—That the charge made by Superintendent Hare in his report of 2nd July 1880—that Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner, “gave me (Hare) no verbal information whatever,” when at Benalla—is disproved by the evidence.

Sections 26 and 27 were postponed.

The Commission having deliberated respecting Captain Standish’s relations to the police force, it was—

Resolved—That the conduct of Captain Standish, as Chief Commissioner of Police, as disclosed in the evidence brought before the Commissioners, was not characterized either by good judgment or by that zeal for the interests of the Public Service which should have distinguished an officer in Captain Standish’s position. The Commission attribute much of the bad feeling which existed amongst the officers to the want of impartiality, temper, tact, and judgment evinced by the Chief Commissioner in his dealings with his subordinates; and they cannot refrain from remarking that many of the charges made by Captain Standish in his evidence before them were disproved by the evidence of other witnesses.

The meeting adjourned until the following morning, at Eleven am.

5/11/81.

FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

WEDNESDAY, 5th OCTOBER 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Hall,
Mr. Dixon, Mr. Gibb,
Mr. Levey.
Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

That section of the synopsis dealing with the case of Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner, was deliberated upon at considerable length.

Resolved—That this Commission respectfully request the Chief Secretary to grant the sum of £10 to Jacob Wilson, one of the sufferers by the Kelly outrages, the same to be without prejudice to any claims for compensation on his part which the Government may hereafter think proper to entertain.

The meeting adjourned until the following morning, at Eleven o’clock.

Mr. Anderson, Mr. Fincham, Mr. Levey, Mr. Dixon, Mr. Hall.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

The Commission, having debated various points of their report, decided upon the terms of certain notices of motion to be dealt with at a special meeting, to be held at Three o’clock on Monday the 10th instant.

The Commission adjourned until Monday, at Three p.m.

10/10/81
FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

MONDAY, 10th OCTOBER 1881.

Present:
Mr. LONGMORE in the Chair;
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Fincham, Mr. Levey, Mr. Dixon.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Mr. Levey moved, Mr. Dixon seconded:—That in the management of the police in the North-Eastern district Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner, evinced great zeal, and underwent considerable hardships, which told severely upon his constitution. The Commission are, however, of opinion that on several occasions the conduct of Mr. Nicolson was not characterized by judgment and discretion. They would recommend that Mr. Nicolson do not return to duty as Acting Commissioner, but that, in consideration of his services, he be allowed to retire upon the same superannuation allowance as though he had attained the age of 55 years.

Mr. Hall moved as an amendment, Mr. Anderson seconded:—That Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner, has shown himself in many respects a capable and zealous officer throughout his career in the force, but he labored under great difficulties through undue interference on the part of Captain Standish, and the jealousy occasioned by that officer’s previous favoritism exhibited towards Superintendent Hare. The want of unanimity existing between these officers was the means of preventing any concerted action in important matters, and the interests of the colony greatly suffered thereby. In view of these facts, the Commission do not think that the force would be benefited by re-instating Mr. Nicolson in the office of Acting Chief Commissioner of Police. Further, we recommend that, in consequence of his age and impaired constitution, which suffered through hardships endured in the late Kelly pursuit, Mr. Nicolson be allowed to retire on his superannuation allowance.

The motion was put and negatived, the voting being as follows:—For—Mr. Levey, Mr. Dixon, Mr. Gibb. Against—Mr. Longmore, Mr. Fincham, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Hall.

The amendment was put as a substantive resolution and carried. The following was the voting:—For—Mr. Longmore, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Fincham, Mr. Hall. Against—Mr. Levey, Mr. Dixon, Mr. Gibb.

Mr. Hall moved, and Mr. Anderson seconded:—“That Superintendent Hare’s services in the police force have been praiseworthy and creditable, but nothing special has been shown in his actions that would warrant the Commission in recommending his retention in the force, more especially when the fact is so patent that the ‘strained relations’ between himself and Mr. Nicolson have had such a damaging influence on the effectiveness of the service. This feeling is not likely to be mitigated after what has transpired in the evidence taken before the Commission; and we would therefore recommend that Mr. Hare be allowed to retire from the force ‘as though he had attained the age of 55 years, and, owing to the wound that he received at Glenrowan, that he receive an additional allowance of £100 per annum, under clause 29 of the Police Statute, No. 476."

Mr. Dixon moved as an amendment, That all the words after “creditable,” in the second line, be struck out, with the view to inserting the following:—“That during the time he was in charge of the North-Eastern district he displayed great zeal in his endeavors to capture the outlaws, and by the prompt and active steps taken by him on receipt of the news of the murder of Aaron Sherritt the gang were destroyed, and their leader, Ned Kelly, brought to justice. We therefore recommend that Superintendent Hare be allowed to return to duty.”

The amendment was put and negatived. The voting was as follows:—For—Mr. Dixon, Mr. Levey, Mr. Gibb. Against—Mr. Longmore, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Fincham, Mr. Hall.

The original resolution was declared carried.

The following resolutions were also agreed to

“That the evidence discloses that Superintendent Sadleir was guilty of several errors of judgment while assisting in the pursuit of the Kelly gang; that his conduct of operations against the outlaws at Glenrowan was not judicious or calculated to raise the police force in the estimation of the public. That the Commission are further of opinion that the treatment of Senior Constables Kelly and Johnson, by Superintendent Sadleir, was harsh and unmaitered; and the Commission recommend that Superintendent Sadleir be placed at the bottom of the list of superintendents when the changes necessitated in the force by the recommendations of the Commission have been carried out.”

“That a most favorable opportunity of capturing the outlaws at a very early period of their career of crime, namely, on the 4th November 1878, was lost, owing to the indulgence and incompetence of Inspector Brook Smith. Your Commissioners consider that Inspector Brook Smith committed a serious blunder in not having started in pursuit of the outlaws immediately upon receiving information of the gang having been seen passing under the bridge at Wangaratta, and also in not having properly followed up the tracks of the outlaws in the Warby...
“That, in the opinion of the Commission, Detective Ward, while he rendered active and efficient service during the pursuit of the gang, was guilty of misleading his superior officers upon several occasions, more especially in connection with Mr. Nicolson’s cave party, Superintendent Hare’s hut party, and the telegram forwarded to Senior-Constable Mullane by Mr. Nicolson when the latter was superseded on the 2nd of June 1880. The Commission therefore recommend that Detective Ward be censured and reduced one grade.”

“That in the opinion of your Commissioners the conduct of Sergeant Steele was highly censurable in neglecting to take action, when, on the 4th November 1878, he received reliable information that the outlaws had been observed on the previous morning passing under the one-mile bridge at Wangaratta. Although despatched on special duty, there seems no reason why, having under his command at the time a large body of troopers, he should not have gone immediately in pursuit. The tracks were plainly discernible; the men observed were undoubtedly the outlaws, and had they been then followed they must have been overtaken in the Wodonga Ranges. Sergeant Steele had full power to act upon his own discretion, and there can be little doubt that, had he exhibited judgment and promptitude on that occasion, he would have been the means of capturing the gang, and preventing the loss of life and the enormous expenditure of money incurred subsequently in the extermination of the gang. Your Commissioners therefore recommend that Sergeant Steele be reduced to the ranks.”

“That the constables who formed the hut party on the night of Aaron Sherritts murder, viz.: Henry Armstrong, William Duross, Thos. Patrick Dowling, and Robert Alexander, were guilty of disobedience of orders and gross cowardice, and that the three latter—Constable Armstrong having resigned—be dismissed from the service.”

“That the entries made by Superintendent Sadleir in the record sheets of Senior-Constables Kelly and Johnson be cancelled, and the Commission recommend these members of the force to the favorable consideration of the Government for promotion.”

“In moving the adoption of the action taken by Constable Bracken when imprisoned by the Kelly gang in Mrs. Jones’s hotel, at Glenrowan, and recommend him for promotion in the service.”

“That in consequence of the reprehensible conduct of Mr. Wallace, the State school teacher, during the Kelly pursuit, and his alleged sympathy with the outlaws, together with the unsatisfactory character of his evidence before the Commission, lead your Commissioners to think it very undesirable that Mr. Wallace should be retained in any department of the public service. We therefore recommend his immediate dismissal from the Education department.”

“That the conduct of Mr. Thos. Curnow, State school teacher, in warning the special train from Benalla to Beechworth on the morning of the 28th of June 1880, whereby a terrible disaster, involving probably the loss of many lives, was averted, deserves the highest praise, and the Commission strongly recommend that his services receive special recognition on the part of the Government.”

“The Commission desire to record their approval of the conduct of Mr. C. H. Rawlings during the attack upon the outlaws, and consider that his services deserve some consideration at the hands of the Government.”

“The Commission desire also to express their approval of the assistance rendered to the police at Glenrowan by the members of the press present.”

“That your Commissioners desire to record their marked appreciation of the courtesy and promptitude displayed by the Queensland Government in forwarding a contingent of native trackers to Victoria to aid in the pursuit of the outlaws. We take this opportunity of expressing our approval of the services of the black trackers as a body, and deeply regret that any misunderstanding amongst the officers in command of operations in the North-Eastern district should have led to unpleasant complications. The Queensland contingent did good service, and your Commissioners trust the Victorian Government will not fail to accord them proper recognition.”

The Commission adjourned until the following morning, at Eleven o’clock.

11/10/81. FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

TUESDAY, 11th OCTOBER 1881.

Present:

Mr. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Anderson, Mr. Levey
Mr. Fincham, Mr. Dixon.
Mr. Hall.

In moving the adoption of the minutes, Mr. Fincham called attention to the fact that the Chairman had not recorded his vote on the resolutions adopted. He gave notice of motion that at the next meeting of the Commission a fresh division take place, and the votes of all the members be recorded. Agreed to.

The minutes were then confirmed.

Mr. Hall gave the following notice of motion:—That, in the event of any protest being entered by a member of the Commission upon a finding in any clause of the report, such clause shall be open for additions and explanations before confirmation.

The following resolution was moved by Mr. Levey, seconded by Mr. Fincham:—That immediately prior to the Kelly outbreak, and for some time previously, the administration of the police in the North-Eastern district was not satisfactory, either as regards the number and distribution of the constabulary or the manner in which they were armed and mounted; and that a grave error was committed in abolishing the police station at Glenmore, and in reducing the strength of their force, and that a grave error was committed in abolishing the police station at Glenmore, and in reducing the strength of their force.

The Commissioners then proceeded to revise and make certain verbal amendments in the resolutions previously adopted.

The historical sketch prepared by the Secretary was considered to page 11, and certain alterations made.

The Commission adjourned until the following morning, at Eleven a.m.

12/10/81. FRANCIS LONGMORE, Chairman.

WEDNESDAY, 12th OCTOBER 1881.
Mr. L. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Fincham, Mr. Hall,
Mr. Anderson, Mr. Levey,
Mr. Gibb.

Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

The Chairman, in reply to Mr. Fincham, stated that he had voted for the third and fourth clauses of the report.

Mr. Levey gave notice of motion—That Mr. Gibb be asked how he would have voted on those clauses, so that his name should appear upon the record.

The sketch prepared by the Secretary was read, and some amendments made; it was then ordered to be printed and attached to the findings of the Commission.

The Commission adjourned until Tuesday following, at Eleven o’clock.

14/10/81.
FRANCIS L. LONGMORE, Chairman.

SPECIAL MEETING HELD ON FRIDAY, 14TH OCTOBER 1881.

Present:

Mr. L. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Fincham, Mr. Levey.
Mr. Hall,

The protest forwarded by Mr. E. J. Dixon against certain findings of the Commission in their report was submitted.

Mr. Fincham moved, Mr. Hall seconded, That the protest be received, and that a sub-committee consisting of the Chairman, Mr. Fincham, and Mr. Hall, be appointed to draw up a reply to be laid before the meeting to be held on Tuesday.

In pursuance of notice, Mr. Hall moved, and Mr. Fincham seconded—

Resolved—That in the event of any protest being entered by a member of the Commission against a finding upon any clause in the report, such clause shall be open to amendments, additions, and explanations before final confirmation.

The meeting adjourned until Tuesday, at Eleven o’clock.

FRANCIS L. LONGMORE, Chairman.

TUESDAY, 18TH OCTOBER 1881.

Present:

Mr. L. LONGMORE, in the Chair;

Mr. Anderson, Mr. Fincham,
Mr. Hall, Mr. Dixon,
Mr. Levey, Mr. Gibb.

The minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

The report and accompanying documents were duly signed, and the Secretary instructed to forward them to His Excellency the Governor.

The meeting adjourned without naming a day for the next sitting of the Commission.

By Authority: JOHN FERRES, Government Printer, Melbourne.
ROYAL COMMISSION OF ENQUIRY

INTO THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF

THE KELLY OUTBREAK

THE PRESENT STATE AND ORGANIZATION OF THE POLICE FORCE, ETC. PRESENTED TO BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT BY HIS EXCELLENCY’S COMMAND

By Authority:

JOHN FERRES, GOVERNMENT PRINTER, MELBOURNE.

To His Excellency the Most Honorable George Augustus Constantine, Marquis of Normanby, and Baron Mulgrave of Mulgrave, all in the County of York, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; and Baron Mulgrave of New Ross, in the County of Wexford, in the Peerage of Ireland; a Member of Her Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of Victoria and its Dependencies, &c, &c, &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:-

Under date March 7th 1881, Letters Patent were issued by Your Excellency appointing a Royal Commission, whose powers were thus defined, viz.:-

1. To inquire into the circumstances preceding and attending the Kelly outbreak.
2. As to the efficiency of the police to deal with such possible occurrences.
3. To inquire into the action of the police authorities during the period the Kelly gang were at large.
4. The efficiency of the means employed for their capture; and
5. Generally to inquire into and report upon the present state and organization of the police force.

A memorandum, dated 10th May 1881, was subsequently received by your Commissioners from the Honorable Graham Berry, as follows:- “The Chief Secretary will be glad if the Police Commission will submit separately and at their earliest convenience such of their recommendations as have reference to Mr. Inspector O'Connor and the black trackers under him, as, in the projected re-organization of the police arrangements for the North-Eastern district, it may be found necessary that Mr. O'Connor should be re-appointed.”

In accordance with the powers thus assigned to them, your Commissioners have held 66 meetings, and examined 62 witnesses. In order also to verify, by personal observation, the evidence of witnesses, and glean information on the spot respecting the career of the outlaws, your Commissioners visited several centres of population in the district, including Benalla, Greta, Glenrowan, Beechworth, Sebastopol and Wangaratta.
Your Commissioners, having taken a large amount of evidence respecting, and carefully considered the case of, Inspector O'Connor, had the honour to submit to Your Excellency, on 6th July last, their First Progress Report, as follows:

“1. That the evidence before the Commission is not of such a character as to warrant your Commissioners in recommending the Honorable the Chief Secretary to appoint Mr. Stanhope O'Connor to the position of an inspector of police in the Victorian Service.

“2. Your Commissioners are of opinion that the Government should make provision for the permanent employment of black trackers as an auxiliary branch of the police service; care being taken that they shall be trained to habits of subordination, and made amenable to the general discipline of the force.

“Your Commissioners would also recommend:-

“3. That, as far as practicable, a thorough system of police patrol shall be established throughout the colony, more especially in the North-Eastern District.

“4. That immediate steps be taken by the Government to arm the mounted police of the colony with the Regulation Pattern Martini-Henry carbine; that the entire force shall be instructed in the use of the weapon by means of regular drill and periodical target practice; and that a reasonable quantity of ammunition shall be served out to each man for such practice.”

Your Commissioners have now the honour to submit their Second Progress Report as follows:-

1. That immediately prior to the Kelly outbreak, and for some time previously, the administration of the police in the North-Eastern District was not satisfactory, either as regards the numbers and distribution of the constabulary, or the manner in which they were armed and mounted; and that a grave error was committed in abolishing the police station at Glenmore, and in reducing the number of men stationed at Stanley, Yackandandah, Tallangatta, Eldorado, and Beechworth.

2. That the conduct of Captain Standish, as Chief Commissioner of Police, as disclosed in the evidence brought before the Commissioners, was not characterized either by good judgment, or by that zeal for the interests of the public service which should have distinguished an officer in his position. The Commission attribute much of the bad feeling which existed amongst the officers to the want of impartiality, temper, tact, and judgment evinced by the Chief Commissioner in dealing with his subordinates, and they cannot refrain from remarking that many of the charges made by Captain Standish in his evidence before them were not sustained in his late examination, and were disproved by the evidence of other witnesses.

3. That Mr. Nicolson, Assistant Commissioner, has shown himself in many respects a capable and zealous officer throughout his career in the force, but he laboured under great difficulties through undue interference on the part of Captain Standish, and the jealousy occasioned by that officer's favouritism towards Superintendent Hare. The want of unanimity existing between these officers was frequently the means of preventing concerted action on important occasions, and the interests of the colony greatly suffered thereby. In view of these facts, the Commission do not think that the force would be benefited by re-instating Mr. Nicolson in the office of Acting Chief Commissioner of Police. Further, your Commissioners recommend that, in consequence of his impaired constitution, caused by hardships endured in the late Kelly pursuit, Mr. Nicolson be allowed to retire on his superannuation allowance, as though he had attained the age of 55 years.
4. That the charge made by Superintendent Hare in his official report, dated 2nd July 1880—viz., that “Mr Nicolson, Assistant commissioner, gave me (Hare) no verbal information whatever when at Benalla”—has been disproved by the evidence.

5. That Superintendent Hare's services in the police force have been praiseworthy and creditable, but nothing special has been shown in his actions that would warrant the Commission in recommending his retention in the force, more especially when the fact is so patent that the “strained relations” between himself and Mr. Nicolson have had such a damaging influence on the effectiveness of the service. This feeling is not likely to be mitigated after what has transpired in the evidence taken before the Commission; and we would therefore recommend that Superintendent Hare be allowed to retire from the force, as though he had attained the age of 55 years, and that, owing to the wound he sustained at Glenrowan, he receive an additional allowance of 100 pound per annum, under clause 29 of the Police Statute (No. 476).

6. That the evidence discloses that Superintendent Sadleir was guilty of several errors of judgement while assisting in the pursuit of the Kelly gang; that his conduct of operations against the outlaws at Glenrowan was not judicious or calculated to raise the police force in the estimation of the public. That the Commission are further of opinion that the treatment of Senior-Constable Kelly and Johnson, by Superintendent Sadleir, was harsh and unmerited. Your Commissioners therefore recommend that Superintendent Sadleir be placed at the bottom of the list of superintendents.

7. That a most favourable opportunity of capturing the outlaws at a very early period of their career of crime, namely, on the 4th November 1878, was lost, owing to the indolence and incompetence of Inspector Brook Smith. Your Commissioners consider that Inspector Brook Smith committed a serious blunder in not having started in pursuit of the outlaws immediately upon receiving information of the gang having been seen passing under the bridge at Wangaratta, and also in not having properly followed up the tracks of the outlaws in the Warby Ranges, a proceeding which would have warranted your Commissioners in recommending his dismissal from the force. Your Commissioners, however, having in view his former services, recommend that Inspector Brook Smith be called on to retire on a pension of 100 pound per annum.

8. That, in the opinion of the Commission, Detective Ward, while he rendered active and efficient service during the pursuit of the gang, was guilty of misleading his superior officers upon several occasions, more especially in connection with Mr. Nicolson's cave party, Mr. Hare's hut party, and the telegram forwarded to Senior-Constable Mullane by Mr. Nicolson when the latter was superseded on the 2nd of June 1880. The Commission therefore recommend that Detective Ward be censured and reduced one grade.

9. That in the opinion of your Commissioners the conduct of Sergeant Steele was highly censurable in neglecting to take action when, on his arrival at Wangaratta, on the 4th November 1878, he received reliable information that the outlaws had been observed on the previous morning passing under the One-mile bridge at Wangaratta. There was no reason why, as he had a large body of well-armed troopers under his command, and was then actually engaged in the search for the outlaws, he should not have gone immediately in pursuit. The tracks were plainly discernible; the men observed were undoubtable the outlaws, and had they been followed they would most probably have been overtaken in the Warby Ranges, in as much as their horses and themselves were exhausted by their journey to and from the Murray. Sergeant Steele had full power to act upon his own discretion, and there can be little doubt that, had he exhibited judgment and promptitude on that occasion, he would have been the means of capturing the gang, and preventing the loss of life and the enormous expenditure of money incurred subsequently in the extermination of the outlaws. Your Commissioners therefore recommend that Sergeant Steele be reduced to the ranks.

10. That the Constables who formed the hut party on the night of Aaron Sherritt's murder — viz., Henry Armstrong, William Duross, Thomas Patrick Dowling, and Robert Alexander — were guilty of disobedience of orders and gross cowardice, and that the three latter — Constable Armstrong's resignation having been accepted — be dismissed from the service.

11. That the entries made by Superintendent Sadleir in the record sheets of Senior-Constables Kelly and Johnson be cancelled, and the Commission recommend these members of the force to the favourable consideration of the Government for promotion.

12. That the Commission approve of the action taken by Constable Bracken when imprisoned by the Kelly gang in Mrs Jones's hotel, at Glenrowan, and recommend him for promotion in the service.

13. That in consequence of the reprehensible conduct of Mr. James Wallace, the State School teacher of Hurdle Creek, during the Kelly pursuit, and his alleged sympathy with the outlaws, together with the unsatisfactory character of his evidence before the Commission, your Commissioners think it very undesirable that Mr. Wallace should be retained in any department of the public service. We therefore recommend his immediate dismissal from the Education Department.

14. That the conduct of Mr. Thomas Curnow, State School teacher, in warning the special train from Benalla to Beechworth on the morning of the 28th of June 1880, whereby a terrible disaster, involving the probable loss of many lives, was averted, deserves the highest praise, and the Commission strongly recommends that his services receive special recognition on the part of the Government.

15. The Commission desire to record their approval of the conduct of Mr. C. H. Rawlings during the attack upon the outlaws, and consider that his services deserve some consideration at the hands of the Government.

16. The Commission desire also to express their approval of the assistance rendered to the police at Glenrowan by the members of the press present.

17. That your Commissioners desire to record their marked appreciation of the courtesy and promptitude displayed by the Queensland Government in forwarding a contingent of native trackers to Victoria to aid in the pursuit of the outlaws. We take this opportunity of expressing our approval of the services of the black trackers as a body, and deeply regret that any misunderstanding amongst the officers in command of operations in the North-Eastern district should have led to unpleasant complications. The Queensland contingent did good service, and Your Commissioners trust that the Victorian Government will not fail to accord them proper recognition.

1.-THE KELLY FAMILY

Among the many predisposing causes which operated to bring about the Kelly outbreak must be included the unchecked aggregation of a large class of criminals in the North-Eastern district of Victoria, all of whom, either by ties of consanguinity or sympathy, were identified with the outlaws. The origin and settlement in the colony of the Kelly family therefore deserves some passing notice at the hands of your Commissioners. James Quinn, the grandfather of Edward and Dan Kelly the outlaws, was a native of the county of Antrim, Ireland. With his wife and family, consisting of six children, he arrived in Victoria in 1839. He, in the first instance, resided in Pascoe Vale, and earned a subsistence by the cartage and sale of firewood in Melbourne. In 1845, he settled in Wallan Wallan, in the Kilmore district, where he rented a small farm, and was enabled in the course of a few years to purchase the freehold of 700 acres of land in that locality. In 1863, by which time his family had increased to ten children, four sons and six daughters, he realized the landed property which he possessed, and with the proceeds, amounting to about 2,000 pounds, took up the Glenmore run, situated in a remote part of the North-Eastern district. The precise object of this migration has not been ascertained; but it is believed that Quinn, having become notorious as a cattle stealer in the Kilmore district, was desirous of escaping from police surveillance; and, by removing back to the borders of settlement and civilization, to secure for himself and his associates a safer and more extended field of operations. The sons of old Quinn were named respectively - Patrick, John, James and William; the daughters were - Mary Anne; Catherine, married to John Lloyd; Ellen, married to John Kelly, the father of the outlaws; Jane, married to Tom Lloyd; Margaret, married to Pat Quin; and Grace. Numerous progeny was the result of the marriages contracted by the children of the elder Quinn, which accounts for the Kelly family being described as the most prolific in the district. James, the third son of old Quinn, became an object of interest to the police so far back as 1856; and from that date down to 1879, when he was incarcerated under the Felons Apprehension Act as a Kelly sympathizer, there were recorded against him no less than 16 arrests, and ten convictions for various offences, many of them of a serious nature, involving terms of imprisonment amounting to about nine years. John Quinn, though frequently before the courts, has escaped conviction, but when residing at Wallan he was regarded by the authorities as the organizer of many of the depredation's in which the members of his family were concerned. John Kelly, who married Ellen, the third daughter of the elder Quinn, and who was the father of the outlaws, was a convict, having been transported from Tipperary, Ireland, to Tasmania, in 1841, for an agrarian outrage, stated to have been shooting at a landlord with intent to murder. He worked as a bush carpenter for a time after arriving in Wallan, and subsequently turned his attention to gold digging, at which he was successful, and was enabled to purchase a small freehold at Beveridge. Here he became notorious as an expert cattle stealer, and his house was known as the rendezvous of thieves and suspected persons. In 1865, he was convicted of cattle stealing, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment in Kilmore gaol. He died shortly after his release. At his death he left seven children, namely Edward and Dan (the outlaws), James, Mrs. Gunn, Mrs. Skillion, Kate and Grace. Mrs. Kelly, upon the death of her husband, settled at the Eleven-mile Creek, near Greta, where, with the younger portion of her family, she at present...
resides. Her place was regarded for years as the resort of lawless and desperate characters, including Power, who is said to have given Ned Kelly his first lesson in bushranging. Edward Kelly, the leader of the outlaws, was born in 1854, at Wallan Wallan, and from an early age was regarded by the Police as an incorrigible thief. In company with Power the Bushranger he, on the 16th of March 1870, robbed Mr. McBean; and on the 25th of April stuck up Mr, John Murray of Lauriston. Kelly was arrested for the latter offence on the 4th of May following, but escaped conviction owing to want of identification. He was implicated in several outrages; and at Beechworth, in 1871, he received a sentence of three years for receiving a stolen horse. He led a wild and reckless life, and was always associated with the dangerous characters who infested the neighbourhood of Greta until the shooting of Constable Fitzpatrick, on the 15th of April 1878, when he took to the bush. Daniel Kelly was born in 1861, and from the age of 16 years was, with his elder brother Ned, a noted criminal. Joseph Byrne, the third outlaw, was born in 1857, and lived with his parents, who were Irish extraction and respectable antecedents, at the woolshed, about seven miles from Beechworth. When 16 years of age he was in trouble, and from the first appears to have developed vicious and cruel propensities. In 1876, along with Aaron Sherritt, who figures so prominently throughout the Kelly campaign, so to speak, and with whom he was on terms of the closest intimacy, he was arrested and sentenced to six months' imprisonment for having stolen meat in his possession; and he was also believed to have been connected with numerous cases of horse stealing in the North-Eastern district, which ultimately led to his joining the Kelly gang. Steve Hart, the fourth member of the gang, was born in 1860, and was the second son of Richard Hart, of Three-mile Creek, near Wangaratta. Stephen, at an early age, became the associate of disreputable persons, and carried on a system of stealing horses and planting them until such time as rewards were offered by the owners for there recovery. He received a sentence of imprisonment in July 1877, and subsequently was sent to gaol for ten months for horse stealing. On his release he returned to Wangaratta, and for a time appeared disposed to lead a more honest and reputable life. One day, however, while at work cutting timber, he suddenly threw down his axe, exclaiming to his mate, “A short life and a merry one.” He then rode off, stating that he was going to New South Wales. Nothing further was heard of him until the murders of the police at Wombat, when it was reported that a man answering to his description was seen near Greta; but it was not until the Euroa bank robbery that his identity was established as one of the accomplices of the murderers, Ned and Dan Kelly.

II.-THE KELLY COUNTRY

That portion of the North-Eastern district known as the Kelly country may be said to embrace the triangular tract lying between the points formed by the townships of Mansfield, Benalla, and Beechworth, together with the country lying to the west of the line of railway which extends to the Murray, including the vicinity of Lake Rowan, the Warby Ranges, and the neighbourhood of the Woolshed. This constitutes a large and diversified extent of territory, measuring about 1,600 square miles. It is in parts well suited for agricultural purposes, and settlement of late years has been rapid and permanent; but in the main, especially to the north-east, it consists of mountain ranges with innumerable spurs, forming steep ravines and slopes so heavily timbered, covered with scrub, and encumbered with huge boulders, that for the greater part it is almost inaccessible. The country is intersected by numerous creeks and rivers; and recently bush tracks have been cut, and roads capable of vehicular traffic constructed; land has been taken up eagerly, and an intelligent, honest, and hard-working population is steadily settling on the soil. It was, however, evident from the first that the peculiar characteristics of the country afforded special facilities for the operations of such lawless characters as the Quinns, the Lloyds, and the Kellys, who, if pursued by the police, could seek refuge in the vastness of the mountains and defy all the attempts of the authorities to arrest them. The district lying to the north and north-west of Mansfield, in the vicinity of which Sergeant Kennedy and Constables Lonigan and Scanlan were murdered by the Kelly gang, is exceptionally wild and broken. Here the various branches of the Broken River, the King River, and some smaller streams take their rise, flowing in a northerly direction, while the principal ranges trend in lines nearly parallel with their courses. In this isolated and still sparsely-inhabited spot, not far from the junction of the right and left branches of the King River, and about 40 miles from Mansfield, Glenmore is situated. The homestead of the elder Quinn lay directly in the track - the only one existing in the early days - between Mansfield and the Murray. It was principally utilized by cattle stealers, who, owing to the rugged and inhospitable character of the country, were enabled to pass to and fro without risk of being intercepted by the police. The arrest of Power the bushranger pointed to the necessity for a police station at Glenmore. In 1870 one was accordingly erected, and two constables placed in charge, with the results highly satisfactory.
The proximity of the police became intolerable to the criminals in the neighbourhood, and various means were adopted unavailingly to induce the Government to withdraw them, until finally the Quinns sold out and left the district. The policy of abolishing the Glenmore police station has been frequently adverted to in the course of the evidence; and, with due regard to all the circumstances, it seems to your Commissioners to ha have consented to its removal. In 1872 Superintendent Barclay strongly recommended the abolition of this station, on the grounds that the place was remote from settled population, that there was no crime in the neighbourhood, and that its maintenance was unnecessarily expensive. Acting upon the advice of his subordinate officers, and that of many respectable residents in the locality, the Chief Commissioner declined to accept Superintendent Barclay's suggestion. In 1875 the representations of this superintendent proved more successful. He directed Inspector Brook Smith to report on the subject. The views of the latter coincided with those of his superior officer, and, upon their recommendations, supported by the opinions of certain residents in the district, Captain Standish, in a memo. dated 17th November 1875, approved of the removal of the Glenmore station to the place recommended by Superintendent Barclay, viz., three miles above the Hedi station. The inadvisability of this step should have been apparent to Captain Standish at the time, inasmuch as he must have been aware of the state of the district. For many years anterior to the outbreak offences against the person were of frequent occurrence in the North-Eastern district. It was the scene of the exploits of many notorious criminals and bushrangers, and horse and cattle stealing was carried on systematically by gangs of thieves who acted in concert on both sides of the River Murray. Those engaged in the traffic were associated with the families of the Quinns, the Lloyds, and the Kellys, and constituted a “ring” that became a standing menace to the respectable and law-abiding people of the district. A return compiled from official documents shows the extent to which cattle stealing prevailed in the Kelly country for eight years prior to the outbreak. In 1871 the number of cases of cattle stealing reported was 101; 1872, 108; 1873, 97; 1874, 80; 1875, 93; 1876, 130; 1877, 132; and 1878, 101. It is true that a certain percentage of the animals missing, and reported as having been stolen, were subsequently found, but there seems every reason to conclude that in the majority of instances horses disappearing, if not permanently appropriated by the criminal classes, were freely taken and utilized as occasion served, and were then turned adrift into the bush, where they were sometimes recovered by the owner. The plan frequently adopted was to drive mobs of stolen cattle from Victoria across the Murray, where they were impounded by the New South Wales police. In due course they were disposed of, when the thieves attended the sale, and purchased the animals at a nominal price. Fortified against prosecution by possessing the sale note obtained from the poundkeeper, they retraced their steps to their homes, carrying with them the fruits of their criminal enterprise. Cattle stealers across the border pursued a similar system, driving the cattle lifted in New South Wales into Victoria, purchasing them when sold by the poundkeepers, effacing the brands, and taking them back to the districts from which they had been stolen. In 1877, Inspecting Superintendent Nicolson drew attention to the prevalence of this description of crime in the North-Eastern district, which drew forth a strong remonstrance from Captain Standish, addressed to the officers in charge of the North-Eastern district. Numerous witnesses, notably Captain Standish and the Hon. J. H. Graves, have deposed to the almost incredible extent to which for many years cattle stealing was carried on with impunity in the North-Eastern district; nevertheless, not only was the Glenmore station abolished, but the strength of many other police stations in the district was reduced. Further, excellent and experienced members of the force were removed from important centres and replaced by others wholly incompetent and unacquainted with the district.

III.-CAUSES OF THE OUTBREAK

In the opinion of your Commissioners, the abolition of the Glenmore station, the reduction of the numerical strength of the force in the district, and the substitution of inexperienced and inferior constables for those more competent, necessarily weakened that effective and complete police surveillance without which the criminal classes in all countries become more and more restive and defiant of the authorities. The incident, however, which seems to have more immediately precipitated the outbreak was the attempt of Constable Fitzpatrick to arrest Dan Kelly, at his mother's hut, on the 15th of April 1878. This constable appears to have borne a very indifferent character in the force from which he was ultimately discharged. Mr. Fosberry, the Inspector-General of Police, New South Wales, and Captain Standish express in strong terms their adverse opinions of Fitzpatrick, while the present Acting Commissioner of Police, Mr. Chomley, writes a valedictory memo. on his papers, describing him as a liar and larrikin. To this man was entrusted, in April 1878, the temporary charge of Greta, the very focus of crime in the district. He had been stationed at Benalla, and prior to starting for Greta he appears to have had an interview with Sergeant Whelan, the sub-officer in charge, relative to his duties. Whelan, in his evidence, is somewhat contradictory upon the point as to whether Fitzpatrick was justified in attempting to arrest Dan Kelly under the circumstances. In almost the one breath he states that the constable was wrong in going to the Kelly's hut, and then urges that it was his duty to act as he did. The arrest was attempted to be made in consequence of a Gazette notice to the effect that a warrant had been issued at Chiltern against Dan Kelly and Jack Lloyd, on a charge of suspected cattle stealing. Sergeant Lynch, at Chiltern, considered that the men alleged to have been seen driving certain horses through the township answered the description of those men, and warrants for their arrest were issued accordingly. Fitzpatrick's efforts to fulfil what he may have considered his duty proved disastrous. He was entrapped by accepting the invitation to accompany Dan Kelly into the hut, where he was attacked by several members of the family, and shot in the wrist by Ned Kelly. Warrants were in due course issued against Fitzpatrick's assailants; and those arrested, including Mrs. Kelly and a relative named Williamson, were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment for the offence of assault with intent to kill. The alleged severity of the punishment inflicted upon the mother of the outlaws has been subject of comment in the course of the inquiry, and Captain Standish considers that it formed one of the many causes which assisted to bring about the Kelly outrages. One point in this matter should not be overlooked. Jack Lloyd, who was implicated in the alleged case of horse stealing for which Fitzpatrick sought to arrest Dan Kelly, was subsequently taken into custody, and, the charge having been investigated, he was discharged. There can be little doubt that Constable Fitzpatrick's conduct, however justified by the rules of the service, was unfortunate in its results. It may also be mentioned that the charge of persecution of the family by the members of the police force has been frequently urged in extenuation of the crimes of the outlaws; but, after careful examination, your Commissioners have arrived at the conclusion that the police, in their dealings with the Kellys and their relations, were simply desirous of discharging their duty conscientiously; and that no evidence has been adduced to support the allegation that either the outlaws or their friends were subjected to persecution or unnecessary annoyance at the hands of the police.

IV.-THE WOMBAT MURDERS

In July 1878 a change was effected in the police arrangements of the country districts. Beechworth and Mansfield and a portion of Kilmore were combined, forming the North-Eastern district, and Superintendent Sadleir placed in charge, with his head quarters in Benalla. Mr Sadleir, upon taking charge, found warrants had been issued against Ned and Dan Kelly for the assault upon Constable Fitzpatrick in the previous April. He at once communicated with the Chief Commissioner, asking for the assistance of a detective to discover the whereabouts of the offenders, and Detective Ward, owing to his previous knowledge of that part of the country, was selected for the purpose. In a communication dated 17th October 1878, Inspector Secretan suggested to Superintendent Sadleir that an organized search should be made about Greta, the Fifteen-mile Creek, and from thence to Mansfield, as it was reported that one, if not the two Kellys had been seen there. This was all the information that Sergeant Kennedy and his party possessed when, on the afternoon of the 25th October, they started from Mansfield charged with the duty of arresting the Kellys. Although early in August an expedition to search the country between Mansfield and Greta had been proposed, various matters had interfered with the project being carried out. In reply to a communication from Superintendent Sadleir, in October, Sergeant Kennedy intimated that the only feasible plan of effecting the arrest was by establishing a depot at some distance beyond the Wombat, say near Stringy Bark Creek. This he pointed out, would enable the party to keep up a continuous search between that spot and the flat country towards the King River, the Fifteen-mile Creek, and Holland's Creek. He urged that, while the Mansfield men would be searching the ranges and creeks in that neighbourhood, the men forming the party to be despatched from Greta could co-operate on the flat country. Sergeant Kennedy's suggestion was approved of by his superior officer, and on 18th of October Superintendent Sadleir issued final orders to guide the search parties. Two parties of police were to start simultaneously - one, consisting of Sergeant Kennedy and Constables Lonigan, Scanlan, and McIntyre, from Mansfield, and the other, in charge of Senior-Constable Shoebridge, from Greta. The spot indicated by Sergeant Kennedy for the purpose of a camp was, therefore, of his own selection, and the arrangements generally left to himself. On reaching the site of the proposed depot, at Stringy Bark Creek, measures were adopted by Sergeant Kennedy for camping there for the night. It seems clear that Kennedy had no knowledge of the presence of the Kelly's in the locality. He took no precautionary measures against surprise. He seems to have acted with a singular disregard to possible contingencies. He not only divided his party, but allowed McIntyre to fire off his rifle at some birds, thus attracting the Kellys to the spot. The party was armed each with the regulation revolver, having beside a Spencer repeating rifle and a double shot gun. Considering that they anticipated meeting only the two Kellys, and that probably no more than a show of resistance would have been offered, those arms were considered sufficient for every purpose; but the absence of foresight, of proper discipline or precaution, enabled the gang to take the party in detail, and, consequently, at a disadvantage. There seems no reason to suppose that the murders were the result of premeditation; the men were shot down when, with an instinctive sense of duty, they endeavoured to repel the attack of their assailants. The cold-blooded despatch of the brave but ill-fated Kennedy when, wounded and hopeless of surviving, he pleaded to be allowed to live to bid farewell to his wife and children, is one of the darkest stains upon the career of the outlaws. It was cruel, wanton, and inhuman, and should of itself, apart from other crimes, brand the name of his murderer, the leader of the gang, with infamy.

V.-AFTER THE MURDERS

The action of the police immediately after the Wombat murders proved the utter unpreparedness of the authorities for so grave an emergency. The constables were found armed with revolvers that, under the circumstances were comparatively useless. A few rifles were scattered throughout the district, but such was the inadequacy of the armament available that upon the departure of Kennedy on his fatal expedition, the station at Mansfield was almost completely denuded of weapons. The parties who went out to search for the bodies of the murdered men were wretchedly equipped, and, before starting, the whole township had to be searched in order to obtain arms. The majority of the police were unacquainted with the use of the more modern description of rifle, and were, in many instances, notoriously bad bushman, and ignorant of the country in which they had to search for the outlaws. Some also were indifferent horsemen. As soon as information reached Melbourne of the Wombat murders, the Hon. Graham Berry, who was then Chief Secretary, gave the Chief Commissioner carte blanche, as regarded expense, to enable him to cope with the situation. Some Spencer repeating rifles that were in store were forwarded, and reinforcements were despatched to the scene of operations. Mr. Nicholson, the Assistant Commissioner of Police, who had done good service in the capture of bushrangers in the early days of the gold diggings, was specially selected to take charge of the pursuit. On arriving in Benalla, he found the township in a state of intense excitement, which was shared in more or less by the general community. At this time the mounted police in the North-Eastern district, which embraced an area of 11,000 square miles, numbered only about 50 mounted men, and the reinforcements came to hand slowly. Having visited the more important stations, Mr. Nicholson proceeded to form search parties with whom to scour the country according as information was received as to the supposed whereabouts of the gang. The officers in the district at this time, in addition to Mr. Nicholson and Mr. Sadleir, were Inspector B. Smith and Sub-Inspector Pewtress. Mr. Smith, as subsequent events proved, was quite inefficient for the work, and Mr. Pewtress was wholly unsuited for bush duty. The police parties sent in pursuit in the first instance returned to Quarters without success, and no reliable information appears to have been obtainable as to the whereabouts of the gang. The Government, it must be said, exhibited a commendable zeal and promptitude in seconding the efforts of the police. The better to facilitate their object, the Felons Apprehension Act was passed through the legislature at one sitting. The measure was based upon one that in New South Wales was found very effectual in stamping out bushranging. Its provisions were directed against not only the outlaws, but also against all those who wilfully harboured, assisted, or otherwise sympathized with them; and, doubtless, had it been judiciously administered, the object aimed at would soon have been achieved.

VI.-THE SEBASTOPOL RAID

One of the earliest combined movements of the police in pursuit of the outlaws was not calculated to favourably impress the mind of the public as regards the capacity of the officers. The “Sebastopol charge” as it has been designated, and which took place on the 7th November 1878, proved an utter fiasco, calculated simply to excite ridicule, and for this Superintendent Sadleir must be held directly responsible. On the 6th November, a splitter, in a state of intoxication, made his way from the Woolshed into Beechworth, where he was heard to boast that three days previously he had seen the gang in the bush near Sebastopol. This individual was conveyed to the lock-up, where he reiterated his statement to Superintendent Sadleir, and indicated where he believed the outlaws were secreted. Mr. Sadleir telegraphed to Mr. Nicolson, at Benalla, the information. Captain Standish happened to be with the Assistant Commissioner of Police at the time, and it was arranged that, taking with them a party of police, they should both proceed immediately by special train to Beechworth and accompany Superintendent Sadleir to the spot where he seemed sanguine of catching the Kellys. The Benalla contingent arrived at Beechworth at 3 am., and were met by Mr. Sadleir, who communicated to Captain Standish the information he had obtained, and then all rode off, leaving the Assistant Commissioner behind, searching for a horse, which occupied some time. The cavalcade moved rapidly forward, and as it proceeded, its numbers were gradually increased by parties of troopers who were gathered from various directions, until the force present numbered, according to various computations, from 23 to 50. The noise of so large a body of horseman, clattering along a hard road in the early hours of the morning and in the clear atmosphere of the ranges, was described by one witness as “just like thunder,” and could have been heard a mile off. Indeed, everything was done as though it were desirable to give the gang - supposing that they were in the neighbourhood - timely warning of the approach of the police. What followed was perfectly in keeping with the haphazard organisation of the party. It was not until the party had arrived opposite the house of Sherritt, senior, that Mr Sadleir informed the Assistant Commissioner of the precise object of the expedition, whereupon arrangements were made for the attack. While Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Sadleir rushed the hut where the outlaws were supposed to be concealed, the Chief Commissioner took up a position at a distance, in charge of the reserve force. The hut was duly searched, but nothing to excite suspicion was discovered. A second hut adjacent was pounced upon after a similar fashion with a like result. The procession of horseman then moved on to Mrs. Byrne's house, but here again the police were doomed to disappointment. The entire proceedings of the day were little better than a travesty; and as indicating the extent to which discipline prevailed in the force, it may be mentioned, that not a single witness could positively state which of the officers present was actually in the command of the party.

VII.-INSPECTOR BROOK SMITH IN PURSUIT

The conduct of Inspector Brook Smith while in charge at this period cannot be too severely censured. The history of the expedition which started on the 6th November 1878 from Wangaratta to search the Warby Ranges discloses culpable negligence and incapacity on the part of Mr. Smith, who was the officer in command. In the first place, he failed to take the proper steps with a view to the verification of the rumour that, on the morning of the 3rd November, the gang had been observed riding under the One-mile Bridge, at Wangaratta, in the direction of the ranges. Two days were allowed to elapse before starting in pursuit. Then, when the unmistakable tracks of the outlaws were discovered and Kennedy's horse found, this officer deliberately disobeyed orders by returning with his party to quarters. The following morning, from sheer laziness, he kept his men waiting from 4 am. till 7. The next day they had to start without him. With no other apparent object than that of retarding the pursuit, he compelled his men to make unnecessary detours to follow up the tracks; he rode slowly, loitered in the rear, and altogether so conducted the affair that only one conclusion can be arrived at as regards his conduct, namely, that he was determined that his party should not overtake the outlaws. What renders his action all the more reprehensible is the fact that upon no occasion throughout the pursuit, from the murders at the Wombat to the final affray at Glenrowan, was there presented a more favourable prospect of capturing the gang. Sergeant Steele was most blameworthy in this matter. If, as has been frequently urged, the men and more particularly the sub-officers were allowed to act upon their own discretion, upon the receipt of reliable intelligence, then surely it was the clear duty of Sergeant Steele, when informed by Constable Tuomy of the gang's appearance, to have immediately gone in pursuit. When the circumstance was communicated to him, he at once and rightly surmised that the men seen crossing the creek were the gang, and that they were guided by Steve Hart. The tracks were plainly discernible; he had a large body of armed troopers under his command, and was then actually engaged in the search for the outlaws; it was only men flying for their lives that would have attempted the passage of the creek at the time; the murderers and their horses were completely exhausted, owing to the journey to and from the Murray; so that, had this sub-officer acted with vigour and judgment on the occasion, he must have been instrumental in effecting the capture of the gang, and preventing the loss of life and the large expenditure of money which was subsequently incurred in bringing about the extermination of the gang. It would be unjust to lay down as a general principal that an inferior officer may be punished for the laches of his superior, but the circumstances of this case are exceptional. No one better than Sergeant Steele the personal peculiarities and unsuitability of Mr. Brook Smith for the work, and to have referred his informant to that officer was simply an attempt to evade responsibility.

VIII.-PROVISIONING THE OUTLAWS

A Pentridge inmate, named Williamson, who had been implicated in the assault upon Constable Fitzpatrick, and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment, imparted some very important information to the authorities shortly after the Wombat murders. His first communication was dated 30th October 1878. In this he gave certain particulars respecting the gang, their haunts, probable whereabouts, and their mode of obtaining supplies of provisions while hiding in the ranges. Attached to the statement was a rough pen-and-ink sketch, or plan, of the position and surroundings of Mrs. Kelly's hut at Eleven-mile Creek and its relation to a large hollow log, not far distant, which was likely to be used as a receptacle of food for the use of the outlaws. Search was made for the log, and it was found by Senior-Constable Flood without much difficulty. It was lying about 400 or 500 yards distant from the Kelly's hut, and in a spot suitable for secreting provisions. The suggestion made by Williamson - indeed the action that common sense would have dictated - was to watch the log, when discovered, and endeavour to cut off the outlaws’ supplies, or possibly trace them to their lair. This course was not adopted. From the appearance of the hollow log, Senior-Constable Flood came to the conclusion that it could not have been utilized as indicated, and so the matter rested. About the same time a secret agent informed Mr. Sadleir that Mrs. Skillion, the sister of Ned and Dan Kelly, was in the habit of preparing large quantities of food which she conveyed into the bush at night, returning in the morning with her horse completely exhausted. She was not, however, interfered with. It was stated in evidence that attempts were made to follow her, but the difficulty of doing so without skilled trackers was thought insurmountable, and all efforts to trace her nightly expeditions to their source were relinquished. The evidence given by Superintendent Sadleir upon this point is unsatisfactory, and favours the hypothesis that the officers depended upon fortuitous circumstances rather than upon any defined plan of operations to bring about the capture of the outlaws.

IX.-THE EUROA BANK ROBBERY

The authorities received from the prisoner Williamson another important statement, dated 15th November 1878, in which it was intimated that the kelly gang would probably attack one of the banks at Seymour. This information was communicated to Superintendent Hare on the 26th November, and that officer took immediate steps in his own district to guard against such an eventuality. On the 28th the document reached the hands of the officers in Benalla, and on the following day Mr. Nicolson telegraphed to the Chief Commissioner, suggesting that the police at Seymour should be reinforced. It seems clear that at this time rumours were current that one or other of the banks in the district would be robbed; and it has not been satisfactorily shown that Mr. Nicolson or Mr. Sadleir took any precautions to frustrate an attempt of that nature if made in the North-Eastern district. Indeed, their action indicates that they were either ignorant of the rumours or attached no importance to them, although the witness Patrick Quinn asserts, in the course of his evidence, that some time prior to the robbery he informed the Assistant Commissioner not only as to the locality in which the Kellys were secreted, but that one of the banks at Bright, Avenel, or Euroa would probably be attacked. That the force at the command of the officers in charge of the district was inadequate to resist the threatened raid in every centre of population in the district was apparent. Nevertheless, it has not been satisfactorily proved, from the documents or the evidence submitted to your Commissioners, that Mr. Nicolson realized the danger and applied for reinforcements. There is a document, dated some eight or nine months later, written by Mr. Sadleir, in which he alleges that application had been made to the Chief Commissioner for additional police prior to the attack upon Euroa, and Mr. Nicolson, in cross-examination, reiterates the statement, but beyond these mere assertions we have no proof that any special effort was made at this time to protect the banks in the North-Eastern district. Further, at a very critical juncture, and in the teeth of the most emphatic warning, both officers left head quarters at Benalla and proceeded to Albury on the 9th December 1878. The journey thither appears too have been the result of a ruse on the part of the sympathizers of the gang. The precise object of the officers in starting was simply to reconnoitre by daylight the crossing of the Murray, near Albury, where it was stated by a supposed reliable agent that the Kellys were expected to pass. Before starting an incident occurred which might have induced them to pause, if not to forego their intention. Mr. Wyatt, PM., arrived from Euroa by the evening train, bringing with him incontestable proofs that the telegraph wires in the vicinity of the township had been deliberately cut, and direct communication with Melbourne destroyed. Mr. Wyatt appears to have argued the matter out in his own mind, from all the circumstances which came under his notice, that the cutting of the wires was probably the work of the Kelly gang; and as soon as he observed Mr. Nicolson on the platform, at Benalla, he at once communicated to him his suspicions. Unfortunately Mr. Wyatt had warned the driver of the engine and others in the train by which he had arrived not to disclose any information they possessed on the subject, so that, when they were interrogated by Superintendent Sadleir as to whether there was anything wrong down the line, they returned a distinct negative. The warning of the police magistrate was disregarded. Turning to him, Mr. Nicolson said, “It will not alter our plans,” and, getting into the train, he and Mr. Sadleir took their departure for Albury. When passing Glenrowan station another incident occurred, which appears to have attracted the attention of Mr. Sadleir. When the train arrived at Glenrowan, Mr. Sadleir observed a suspected sympathizer and scout of the gang watching their movements; and, from this action and the expression of his face, it was evident that something unusual was stirring. This fact flashed through Mr. Sadleir's mind in the train on the journey to Albury, but he neglected to communicate with Sergeant Whelan, at Benalla, so as to place him on the Qui vive, as he might have done on arriving at Wangaratta or at any of the stations along the line. A strange and unfortunate fatality appears to have attached itself to every phase of this remarkable episode. There was, at the time of the robbery, virtually no police protection in Euroa. The constable, the only one stationed there, had been absent from the township during the day; and it was not until late in the evening, when doing duty at the railway station, he ascertained that the outrage had been committed, whereupon he leaped into the train and proceeded to Benalla. It seems also clear that for some days prior to the raid the outlaws were either in the township or secreted in its neighbourhood, and that their scouts gave them full information of its unprotected condition, so that they could push their audacity to any limits without fear of molestation. Mr. Nicolson was at Albury when, at midnight, he received intelligence of the robbery, and he took steps to return immediately by special train. En route he issued instructions to the several police stations, in order to ensure co-operation in the pursuit. Some stress has been laid upon the telegrams despatched to Sub-Inspector Pewtress, conveying instructions as to the course he should adopt; but - apart from the fact that if any doubt existed in the mind of Mr. Pewtress as to the propriety of acting upon the orders received he had full power to decide for himself what was best to be done - a careful scrutiny of the telegrams does not bear out the allegation that the Mansfield contingent were instructed to proceed in a direction the opposite to that in which there was a possibility of the gang with their plunder being encountered. The efforts made to follow up the tracks by Mr. Nicolson and his search party on the day following the robbery proved utterly futile, and they were compelled, from sheer exhaustion and inability to trace the outlaws, to return to quarters in the afternoon.

X.-CAPTAIN STANDISH AND SUPT. HARE IN CHARGE OF THE PURSUIT.

Mr. Nicolson was relieved from duty in the North-Eastern district, owing to the state of his health, immediately after the Euroa bank robbery, and Captain Standish and Superintendent Hare took charge of operations. One of their first acts was to enforce the provisions of the Felons Apprehension Act by arresting a large number of the more notorious sympathizers. By the orders of Captain Standish the responsible sub-officers and men in charge of stations who had for any length of time been in the Benalla district were collected. They were asked the names of the persons suspected. Those were taken down by Mr. Hare, and, without any effort to obtain information for the purposes of the prosecution, the necessary legal machinery was put in motion to make the arrests. In making these arrests no proper discretion was exercised. Several persons were taken into custody against whom no evidence could be obtained, while a number of persons known or suspected of being in close and intimate relations with the gang were allowed to remain at large. As a consequence, when the cases were called on, remand after remand was applied for and granted, until finally the magisterial bench at Beechworth discharged the prisoners. Those apparently arbitrary proceedings were not salutary in their effects. They did violence to people's ideas of the liberty of the subject; they irritated and estranged probably many who might have been of service to the police; they failed to allay apprehensions of further outrages on the part of the gang, or to prevent them from obtaining the requisite supplies; they crippled the usefulness of the officers, who had to be called away from active duty in connection with the pursuit to attend the petty sessions at Beechworth, when remands were applied for; and, what was of more significance, the failure of the prosecutions led the public to believe that the conduct of affairs was mismanaged. The original intention of the gang, after the Wombat murders, seems to have been to leave the colony, but this object having been frustrated, owing to the flooding of the Murray, they returned to the vicinity of their homes. Finding that the police were utterly at fault as to their whereabouts, and were receiving no reliable information as to their movements - that they were simply exhausting their energies in dragooning the district on purposeless expeditions - the gang gained confidence, and settled down in the ranges, varying their retreats, as occasion arose, between the neighbourhood of the King River, the Woolshed, near Sebastopol, and the Warby Ranges. The first detachment of the Garrison Artillery was forwarded from Melbourne to the North-Eastern district, 15th December 1878, and were distributed in the townships along the line of railways where another raid on the banks was possible. In January reinforcements of the artillery were sent to Beechworth, and in March following, it was deemed desirable to place a number in Shepparton. A considerable accession of strength was thus made to the available police at the disposal of Superintendent Hare, who appears to have attended to field work while Captain Standish transacted office business. The first cave party was formed at this time, and was taken command of by Superintendent Hare in person. It was maintained for a month, during which the party endured considerable hardships, having to remain concealed in the ranges in the neighbourhood of the Woolshed during the day, and watch the hut of Mrs. Byrne at night, on the chance of pouncing on one or other of the outlaws. At the end of 25 days the camp of the police was discovered by Mrs. Byrne, whereupon, without having accomplished anything, Superintendent Hare returned to Benalla. At this period Aaron Sherritt, no doubt in the hope of securing the reward offered for the capture of the outlaws, attached himself to Mr. Hare and his party, and great reliance appears to have been placed upon his fidelity. His acquaintance with the movements of the police in all parts of the district, communicated by bush telegraphs, demonstrated his knowledge of the operations of the sympathizers, and doubtless of the movements of the gang; but he did not enable the authorities to thwart the outlaws' raid upon Jerilderie on the 10th of February 1879. The daring with which this outrage was committed, and the impunity with which the gang were allowed to swoop down upon a township, to bail up the police, to rob one of the banks, and return to their haunts in Victoria, marked this episode as one of the most extraordinary in the whole career of the outlaws. Superintendent Hare conducted many search parties with vigour, and in addition to watching Byrne's house, kept active supervision over the houses of others who were supposed to be sympathizers. He undertook expeditions to the Warby Ranges; he led search parties to Cleary's house, and to the Whorouly races respectively, on the strength of information supplied by agents, but without success. What Captain Standish accomplished by his personal supervision and direction of affairs in the district does not appear manifest. He was supposed to attend at the office during the day and act upon information received from scouts, but beyond having visited Mr. Hare and remained with him one night during the existence of the cave party, he seems to have contented himself with rusticating peacefully in Benalla. Evidence has been given by several witnesses that the Chief Commissioner was not an ardent worker in connection with the Kelly business. He has been described as apathetic, and as seeking refuge in a novel when his officers referred to matters relating to the pursuit. Mr. Hare states that the Chief Commissioner was always willing to converse with him upon the subject, but other officers declare that the apathy of the Chief Commissioner was the subject of frequent conversation. As a matter of fact, when in July 1879 Captain Standish and Superintendent Hare returned to Melbourne, owing, as the former alleges, to the business of the head office being in a “frightful muddle,” the authorities were uncertain whether the outlaws were actually in the colony or had gone northward, in the direction of Queensland. An analysis of the list of appearances during the time Captain Standish and Superintendent Hare were in charge shows that the number reported was 53. Of these, 23 are stated to have been untrue or unreliable; in 5 instances the news was considered too stale; in four, no steps were taken; inquiries were simply instituted in several cases, and in 13 alone were active measures adopted, without any practical outcome.

XI.-THE QUEENSLAND TRACKERS

Early in December 1878 Mr. D. T. Seymour, the Queensland Commissioner, offered to place a number of native trackers at the service of the Victorian Government. The proposal did not meet with acceptance at the hands of Captain Standish. After the Jerilderie raid, however, the necessity for employing skilled trackers became obvious, and the Chief Commissioner's objections were overcome upon the representations of his officers. A telegram, dated 15th February 1879, was accordingly despatched to Mr. Seymour, at Brisbane, asking him to send down a party of eight trackers, under the command of a competent officer. The terms as regards remuneration and mode of working the contingent were soon arranged, and, on the 6th of March ensuing, Inspector O'Connor and his blacks arrived at Albury, where they were met by Captain Standish, who accompanied them the remainder of the journey to Benalla. Mr. O'Connor's instructions were that he was to obey the orders of Captain Standish, and co-operate with the members of the Victorian or New South Wales police, with whom he might be required to serve, while at the same time he was to communicate as opportunity arose with the Commissioner of Police in Brisbane. In fact, however Inspector O'Connor may have been regarded, he never held the position of an officer in the Victorian police. He stood in the relation of a volunteer, subject to the regulations and discipline of the force for the time being, simply holding the rank of an officer in a foreign service, his commission being recognized as a matter of courtesy by those with whom he was co-operating. In Mr. Seymour's memo., Inspector O'Connor was expressly informed that “he merely went as an assistant and that the conduct of affairs was entirely in the hands of Captain Standish and his officers; and that, in obeying orders, he freed himself from responsibility for anything beyond his own acts.” Mr O'Connor was not appointed to any particular position in the Victorian police; he was sworn in and remained exclusively in charge of the Queensland trackers. The arrangement was anomalous, and much of the difficulty and misunderstanding that afterwards arose might have been avoided had Mr. O'Connor been gazetted an officer in the Victorian police. For some months after the arrival of the Queensland trackers cordial relations appear to have subsisted between Captain Standish and Inspector O'Connor. Then dissension arose, and much bitterness of feeling was engendered in consequence of a personal quarrel with one of the officers. On the 11th of March, a week after the arrival of the trackers, they were despatched with Mr.
O'Connor in pursuit of the gang. As showing the friendly feeling entertained towards him at this period, it may be mentioned that he was placed in command of the party alluded to, although he was accompanied by Superintendent Sadleir, an officer of higher grade. Mr. O'Connor was desirous of going out with only a few Victorian troopers attached to his party, but the Chief Commissioner, for certain reasons, was averse to this arrangement, and sent a much larger number. This expedition, which was intended to test the powers of the trackers, resulted in demonstrating their usefulness to some extent; but, at the same time, it showed that, being natives of a warmer climate, they were not well adapted, even when supplied with suitable clothing and covering at night, to endure severe weather or the physical hardships incidental to carrying on operations in the ranges. They returned to quarters earlier than was expected, principally owing to this circumstance. Corporal Sambo, one of the contingent, died in a few days afterwards, having succumbed to the effects of congestion of the lungs. On the 16th of April following, Mr. O'Connor and his party again proceeded in pursuit, but on the fifth day out they were recalled by the Chief Commissioner for the purpose of placing the trackers at the disposal of Superintendent Hare, who was supposed to have obtained an important clue to the whereabouts of the gang in the Warby Ranges. This appears to have been the last occasion upon which, during the period Captain Standish remained in charge of the district, Inspector O'Connor went out in command of a party. This, together with the fact that the Chief Commissioner declined to work the trackers in accordance with the views of Mr. O'Connor, no doubts served to bring about the estrangement which arose between those officers. The Chief Commissioner at no time refrained from expressing his disparaging estimate of the value of the Queensland trackers. They had been engaged contrary to his wishes and his judgment. He believed them to be wholly unsuitable for tracking in broken and mountainous country, more especially as they required a considerable quantity of impedimenta, could work but slowly, and were therefore the more liable to attract observation. In a district like that in which the pursuit was conducted, and having to cope with men who frequently rode from 60 to 70 miles in one night, it was believed by Captain Standish that the trackers were utterly useless, and that their engagement was an idle expenditure of money. In withholding information from the officer in charge of the trackers, in connection with the search of Cleary's house, a slight was thereby implied; and, by making Superintendent Hare a party to the transaction, the Chief Commissioner adopted the most effectual means of sowing discord amongst the officers. He also deliberately informed Mr. O'Connor that he intended to catch the Kellys without his assistance; and, by his general demeanour, according to the evidence, displayed a want of kindly and generous feeling towards Mr. O'Connor, who as a stranger and a volunteer sent specially by the Government of a neighbouring colony to assist the Victorian police, was the more entitled to courtesy and consideration. While Captain Standish entertained this opinion of the trackers, it must be noticed that Mr. Hare, Mr. Sadleir and other competent authorities who had practical experience of the value of their work, bore favourable testimony to their abilities and usefulness.

XII.-MR. NICOLSON RESUMES CHARGE OF THE PURSUIT

When, in July 1879, Mr. Nicolson resumed charge of the pursuit, the prospect of capturing the outlaws appeared more remote than ever. The alarm caused by the daring outrages of the gang had to some extent subsided, but a strong feeling of indignation prevailed throughout the country at the spectacle presented of four young men, three of them only about twenty years of age, defying all the resources and powers of the Government, and remaining in almost undisturbed tranquillity in what one of them described as their mountain home. As indicating the condition of the district and the influences at work to shield and assist the gang, it may be mentioned that not even the offer of 8,000 pounds for their capture, to any appreciable degree, facilitated the operations of the police. Weary of the delay in effecting the capture, and concerned at the enormous outlay incidental to the pursuit, pressure appears to have been brought to bear immediately on Mr. Nicolson taking charge to effect reductions. The Garrison Artillery were gradually withdrawn, while the strength of the police in the district was also considerably reduced, as will be seen from the following returns:-

Number of Officers and Police stationed in the North-Eastern district and the extra expenditure incurred during the period Captain Standish and Superintendent Hare were in charge, and for the seven months after Mr. Nicolson resumed command.

It must be borne in mind that these returns are irrespective of the Garrison Artillery, who were stationed in the district while Captain Standish remained in Benalla, and whose presence and co-operation were no doubt of great importance at that time. Prior to the Euroa bank robbery Mr. Nicolson appears to have lost faith in the utility of search parties exclusively; and his coadjutor, Superintendent Sadleir, emphatically pronounced the system to be mere “fooling.” The Assistant Commissioner thus explains the position in which he was placed at this juncture, and the steps which he found it necessary to take. “I set to and reorganized the men on this basis, and adopted the view that, with the materials at my command, my best course to adopt was to secure places from outrage where there was treasure, so that the outlaws would be baffled in any attempt to replenish their coffers. I stationed a small body of men at Wodonga, under Sergeant Harkin, another at Wangaratta, under Sergeant Steele, another at Bright, under Senior-Constable Shoebridge, and the same at Mansfield, under Sub-Inspectors Toohey and Pewtress. At each of these there was barely strength enough for a search party, but they could make up a fair party - seven or eight - by calling in men from neighbouring stations. The only place where a complete search party was kept was Benalla. I instructed the police throughout the district to arrange to get quietly from two to four townsmen of the right sort who would turn out and aid them in the case of an attack.” Mr. Nicolson adds, that he had not carte blanche for expenditure as Captain Standish had. He had no money placed to his credit. He paid the accounts and all other expenses out of his own pocket, which were afterwards refunded. Large economies were also effected as regards the keep and hiring.
of horses and the expenses attached to the use of buggies by those engaged by the police. At the same time systematic efforts were made throughout the district to induce the well-disposed portion of the population to aid the police by every means in their power, and to afford any information respecting the outlaws that might come to their knowledge. This in time began to bear good fruit. At first the intelligence gleaned would be about a month old, then it was reduced to a fortnight, in time about a week, and sometimes a day only would elapse, before the receipt of news of the appearance of the gang, or the doings of their sympathizers. In fact the Assistant Commissioner appears at this time to have relied almost solely upon secret agents for information, and a reference to the list of reported appearances shows that his plan of operations so far was producing some effect. It was not, however, until he had been six weeks in charge that he obtained positive and reliable information that the Kellys were in the district. Special stress has been laid upon several incidents which mark the administration of affairs by Mr. Nicolson, to which it is desirable notice should be directed.

On the 27th September 1879, Superintendent Sadleir, while at Wangaratta, was informed by the agent known as Foote that on the previous night he had seen Ned Kelly and the other members of the gang in the bush. They were on foot, and of their identity there could not be any doubt. Mr. Nicolson, on being informed of this, at once telegraphed to Mr. Sadleir, from Benalla, instructing him to bring the man down. This order was not complied with, Mr. Sadleir explaining that he had left his informant drinking at a public house, and that he would himself be able to find the precise spot where the outlaws had been seen. Upon being questioned upon this point, Mr. Sadleir's knowledge was found to be vague; and Mr. Nicolson, under the circumstances, took no action. This was the occasion upon which the search party had assembled in the barrack yard at Benalla, with their horses saddled and ready to start, when at the last moment they were ordered back to quarters. In the following memo., dated 30th September 1879, Mr. Nicolson thus explains to the Chief Commissioner his reasons for adopting this course:

The informant was ______; he stated he saw five men. From conversation with Superintendent Sadleir, upon his return from Wangaratta, it did not appear that “the spot was indicated so that it could be found without difficulty,” nor that “it could be taken up by the trackers at daybreak before the people were moving” and had become conscious of the presence of the police among them. The subsequent examination of Mounted-Constable Ryan as to the locality and its approaches did not tend to remove the above impression. It appeared that the neighbourhood was settled, and that our party could hardly expect to pass Lloyd's house, even at midnight, without being discovered, and that the trackers might have to search over at least a quarter of a mile before finding the footprints; and considering the precaution said to have been taken by the men seen by ______ in sending a man to dog him home, it seemed likely that they had taken the other precaution of moving off, and, with the fifth man and other friends, each had taken separate directions, so that the trackers pursuing might find themselves running down one wrong man. Sub-Inspector O'Connor was of opinion that the chance of success was a bad one. Considering my other improving sources of information, I determined, upon this occasion, not to disturb the false sense of security into which the outlaws have been lulled. Although I decided upon the above course upon the merits of the report made to me, yet I may remind the Chief Commissioner that ______, the informant, was the man who tried to induce me to proceed with the Benalla police and meet him at the head of the King River on the day before the Euroa bank robbery.

The informant was Pat Quin, whose loyalty to the police Mr. Nicolson appears to have always doubted; but there seems every reason to believe that had Mr. Sadleir taken the precaution to bring with him the agent his statement would have been acted upon, and the officer in question have escaped the responsibility of the expedition being abandoned owing to his action. The tactics adopted at this time appear peculiar, and, perhaps, account to some extent for the apparent listlessness of the police. Mr. Nicolson was desirous, he alleges, of lulling the gang into what he terms a false sense of security. He was gradually forming round them a cordon, not of police but of secret spies, and was anxious not to allow them to know of the information he possessed, or of the precise nature of his plans, lest they should leave the district - where he felt assured they would ultimately be taken - and seek refuge in the inaccessible region near Tomroggin, in New South Wales. The immediate object was not so much to effect the capture as to guard against any renewal of a raid upon the banks. The relative merits of the two systems adopted by the police in connection with operations against the Kelly gang, namely, that of search parties and of secret agents, have been frequently referred to in the course of the evidence. The name of Mr. Hare has been more particularly associated with the former, and that of Mr. Nicolson with the latter. As a matter of fact, however, both systems were employed conjointly as occasion arose, but, from instinct and peculiarity of temperament, Mr. Hare seems to have preferred the more active and military mode of prosecuting the pursuit; while Mr. Nicolson trusted principally to the effects likely to arise from having the outlaws surrounded with spies and informers. One of the most peculiar features of Mr. Nicolson's administration of affairs during the period of his second charge was the nature of his transactions with the Sherritt family. Jack, the youngest brother, appears to have acted faithfully to the police while engaged by them; and there seems no doubt that from time to time he gave them important and reliable information respecting his frequent intercourse with Dan Kelly and Joe Byrne. He was introduced to Mr. Nicolson by Detective Ward, at Wangaratta, on the 12th September 1879, and from the information which he then gave, and the letters which he subsequently brought from the outlaws, it was evident that he was in close communication with, and was implicitly trusted by them. They were in fact anxious to induce him to join them in an attempt to rob one of the banks in the district. Sherritt seems to have told everything very unreservedly to Mr. Nicolson, who nevertheless decided on each occasion to wait for a more favourable opportunity in the hope of capturing the entire gang at one blow. This policy of procrastination was more especially noticeable on the occasion of Sherritt's interview, when he informed Mr. Nicolson of Dan Kelly's visit to his place at Sebastopol on the 13th November 1879, leaving word that he would call again about eight o'clock. Both witnesses agree as to the facts, but there is a marked difference as to the precise hour at which the interview occurred, and upon this point the material value of Jack Sherritt's information hinges. According to his evidence, he left the Woolshed in time to interview Mr. Nicolson about half past seven o'clock, and as the outlaws called at his place at eight, it has been urged that there was ample time for a party of police to have proceeded there, if not to encounter the gang direct, to have at least obtained such a clue to their whereabouts as would probably lead in the end to their capture. As against the evidence of Jack Sherritt, however, there must be taken, not only the denial of its accuracy, as given by Mr. Nicolson, but several other circumstances which deserve consideration in weighing the value of the testimony given pro and con. Jack Sherritt states that Dan Kelly called at dusk. According to the almanac, the sun, on the 13th November 1879, set at 6.45. The outlaw is said to have searched the house, looking for Jack; he remained, say ten minutes. Sherritt was working in a paddock, half a mile away. It must have taken his sister thirty minutes to have brought him the information. The distance into Beechworth was three or four miles through rough country, which took Senior-Constable Mullane three-quarters of an hour to ride. Ten minutes may be allowed for the recital of the intelligence to Mr. Nicolson. Supposing then that Dan Kelly called at Sherritt's at seven o'clock, these intervals bring up the hour to 8.35 pm. before Mr. Nicolson was in a position to order out a search party to go in pursuit. It would occupy say ten minutes getting a search party together, saddling the horses, and preparing to start, and, by going by the main road, the ground might be covered in about twenty-five minutes. It would, therefore, be after nine o'clock before the men by any possibility could have reached the spot. But the probabilities are against the entire gang having called according to promise. It was well known and can be easily understood that they never kept an appointment punctually. Again, as comparing oath with oath, there is on the one side a young man not particular as to dates, who, at the time, according to his own admission, was greatly agitated, thinking that the outlaw had called to carry him off, and disposed to make the most of his case, when before the Commission, as against the Assistant Commissioner. On the other, there is a trained official, accustomed to accuracy in matters of detail, who wrote the circumstances of the interview at the time in his memorandum book, and who, some days afterwards, wrote a long letter to the Chief Commissioner, in which he elaborates the narrative, and distinctly declares that it was late when Sherritt called at the station. Again, as indicating that Sherritt may have been mistaken in this as in other points, he alludes to Mr. Nicolson looking up from the desk at the clock and making some remark about the hour. As a matter of fact there was no clock in the room where they were conversing; the only clock in the station was fixed in the verandah and could not be seen from the room. Early in December 1879 Mr. Nicolson organized the second cave party; the secret was revealed by Senior-Constable Johnson to Mr. Hare, at the depot, and the latter at once informed Captain Standish on the subject. The Chief Commissioner did not approve of those parties, and wrote to Mr. Nicolson to that effect, stating that the cave was known at the depot. The announcement caused surprise and pain to the Assistant Commissioner, who, however, refused to withdraw the men, believing that their presence in the hut, although known at the depot, remained a profound secret in the district. There is a reason to believe that, during the existence of the cave party, the outlaws frequently visited the Woolshed, and that being so it must be inferred either that the gang were in possession of the secret and carefully avoided Mrs. Byrne's house, or they visited the place, as has been asserted, unseen by the police, who were supposed to be on the watch. The testimony of the constables bears out the supposition that the men's presence in the cave was known for a considerable time before they were removed, and the conduct of Detective Ward favours the conclusion that he deliberately deceived Mr. Nicolson upon that point, by the manipulation of the reports sent in by several of the constables. In February 1880, a report was received by the police that a number of mould-boards of ploughs had been stolen from the neighbourhood of Greta and Oxley. It was not then known what the object of these depredations was, but a search party and two trackers were sent out, and upon this occasion was discovered the footprints with the "larrikin heel," which, with other information, indicated that the Kelly gang were the thieves. The "diseased stock" letter, in which the object of the stolen mould-boards was communicated for the first time, was dated 20th May 1880, and this marks an epoch in the history of the pursuit. In that letter it was stated, "a break out may be expected, as feed is getting scarce." It was the receipt of this intelligence that gave Mr. Nicolson hope that the "beginning of end" was approaching. The outlaws were evidently preparing for a raid, and it was only necessary to be prepared to receive them. Doubtless the consciousness of this served to embitter Mr. Nicolson's feelings when he found himself obliged to relinquish the pursuit and yield to another the post of honor when he daily anticipated the fruition and reward of his labours. About the months of May and April the police ascertained that the outlaws were reduced to great straits. Over a year had elapsed since their last—the Jerilderie—raid. Their funds were well-nigh exhausted. With their money, their friends and sympathizers began to fall off too; and more than one, it was stated, had significantly suggested that another bank should be robbed. The outlaws at this time were said to be usually in the vicinity of the Greta Swamp, from which they would move back to the ranges, get across the Ovens River towards Sebastopol, and from thence to the Pilot Range, near Wodonga. They were obliged to travel on foot, and their immediate assistants were reduced to four. Intimation was also received that they were suffering such severe hardships in the ranges that they were obliged to obtain a tent to cover them at night; and the agent who gave all this valuable information led Mr. Nicolson to believe that, in a very short time, he would lead the police to the spot where they would have, to use the language of the Assistant Commissioner, “their hands on the throats of the outlaws without any trouble.” Information of this character at the time must have appeared very general, very indistinct, and its reliability very problematical, which may account for the fact that more practical measures were not adopted. When on one occasion, about this time, a search party was despatched to a hut near the Lloyd's house at Lake Rowan, on the strength of somewhat similar intelligence, the police by their efforts simply subjected themselves to badinage, as when the suspected hut was searched, only a well-known sympathizer was found there. It must be added that every precaution seems to have been taken to intercept the gang, should they attempt to pass any of the bridges, or crossings leading to or from their reputed haunts. Sealed orders, with special instructions were issued to every station; constant telegraphic communication was maintained throughout the district; the vigilance was apparently incessant, but was sought by the Assistant Commissioner to be of a masked, unostentatious, character, which it was believed would in time achieve success. An analysis of the list of appearances discloses that during Mr. Nicolson's second charge there were about sixty reports received by the police; of those, sixteen were considered stale or unreliable; inquiries were made as regards five; there is no record of action in reference to six; in several no action whatever; and in twenty six, action was taken mainly with a view to resisting attacks, the arranging of watch parties, or in endeavouring to induce the outlaws to suppose that the police were not on the alert. There were very few search parties despatched, and in every instance where action was taken of this nature the expeditions proved entirely fruitless.

XIII.-MR. NICOLSON'S RECALL

The Assistant Commissioner takes no pains to conceal the opinion that his removal in June 1880, although ostensibly the direct act of the Executive, was in reality the result of official intrigue. Whatever may have been the influences at work - whether, as Mr. Ramsay declared, the decision of the government meant no more than a desire for a change of bowlers, or, as has been insinuated, Captain Standish, for reasons of his own, was responsible for the move - of this there cannot be a doubt, that there was thereby revealed the existence of acrimonious feelings amongst the officers - of jealousy, distrust, and personal rivalry, of which nothing previously had been positively known, although perhaps suspected. There is no gainsaying the fact that the recall of Mr. Nicolson implied dissatisfaction, if not censure; but the fact of his having received a month's grace at a time when, according to his own account, he was in daily anticipation of capturing the Kellys, indicates some consideration for his feelings. Public servants are not always the best judges of the motives which actuate a Government in adopting a particular policy, and unfortunately private interests and individuals must often be sacrificed to public expediency. Mr. Nicolson evidently regarded his case as a hard one under the circumstances. He states that, for some time prior to his removal, he felt that there was mischief brewing. On the 22nd of April the Assistant Commissioner had an interview with the Chief Secretary, who was then returning from the ceremony at Mansfield of unveiling a monument erected to the memory of the victims of the Wombat tragedy. Mr. Ramsay expressed the greatest pleasure and confidence in Mr. Nicolson when informed of how things were going on. An anonymous letter, which has been frequently adverted to in evidence, was forwarded by the Chief Commissioner to Mr.
Nicolson on the 26th April for his explanation, and in a week subsequently he received intimation that he was to be superseded. The so-called anonymous letter was signed “Connor,” evidently a fictitious name. It criticised unsparring Mr. Nicolson's character and conduct throughout the pursuit, and from internal evidence it was clearly written or inspired by some member of the force. It had been forwarded in the first instance to the Honorable J.
H. Graves, the member for the district, and by that gentleman placed in the hands of the Chief Commissioner. The witness Wallace, a State-school teacher, and an alleged sympathizer with the gang, was the putative writer of the document, but he denies the allegation, and subsequently, in a communication addressed to your Commission, he declares that it was the joint concoction of Jack Sherritt and the outlaws, in order to have Mr. Nicolson removed from the district. But Wallace's bona fides and veracity are open to grave suspicion, and his flippancy of manner, when before your Commission, apart from the evidence respecting his equivocal relations with the gang, mark his statements as wholly unreliable. The Assistant Commissioner, when informed of the intention to remove him, sought an interview with the Chief Secretary early in May, when, upon his urgent representations, he obtained a month's extension of his charge of the district. The scenes which occurred between Mr. Nicolson and Captain Standish at this period indicate exacerbation of feeling and defiance on the one hand, and of cold superciliousness on the other, utterly at variance with that esprit de corps which is so desirable amongst brother officers. During the last month Mr. Nicolson remained in command he strained every nerve to make the most of the limited time allowed him. His last effort was made on the strength of a report by a secret agent, that Joe Byrne had been seen in the ranges, to the rear of his mothers hut. Mr Nicolson organized and led a search party to the spot. It was upon this occasion that Aaron Sherritt accompanied the expedition as a guide during daylight - a proceeding that has induced many to attribute the murder of Aaron Sherritt to a want of discretion on the part of the Assistant Commissioner. The fact, however, should not be forgotten, that some time previously Byrne had seen Mrs. Sherritt at Sebastopol, and had threatened to shoot Aaron. At the end of the month, Mr. Nicolson in the interim having failed to effect the capture of the outlaws, Mr. Hare was sent up to supersede him. This latter officer remonstrated with Captain Standish for having selected him for the duty, and appealed to Mr.
Ramsay with a view to some other officer being appointed to the post. The only reply that he received was that the Government had determined that he should take charge, and that there was left him no other alternative than to obey orders. The interview between Mr. Nicolson and Superintendent Hare on the 2nd of June 1880, when the latter took over charge, is variously described by the witnesses who were present. Superintendent Hare emphatically declares, and inserted a statement to the same effect in his official report after the affray at Glenrowan, that the interview lasted only ten minutes, and that Mr. Nicolson “gave him no verbal information whatever.” Mr Sadleir speaks of a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, but, in cross-examination, goes further. Mr. O'Connor thinks that the interview lasted much longer, while Mr. Nicolson insists that Superintendent Hare remained with him in the office nearly an hour; that during that time he gave him all the information he possessed, and, in conclusion, asked Mr. Sadleir if he thought he had omitted anything. Mr. Hare, in support of his allegation, produces his diary, and Mr. Nicolson relies, to a great extent, upon the corroborative fact that the train by which his successor arrived reached Benalla at ten minutes past eleven; that it took him about half-an-hour to reach the police station; and it is admitted upon all hands that the interview did not terminate until one o'clock, when the officers adjourned to their hotel for luncheon. A more serious charge than that levelled by Mr. Hare against Mr. Nicolson it would be difficult to define, amounting as it does to disloyalty to the service and the country, and meanness and treachery to brother officers; and if Mr. Hare at the time considered Mr. Nicolson guilty of such conduct, it was his duty to have at once reported the circumstance. He wrote, it appears, a private letter to Captain Standish informing him of his impressions, but such a course was not calculated to meet a case of such grave significance as Mr. Hare represents in his official report and evidence. The Assistant Commissioner indignantly repudiates the charge under which he had been allowed to labor for over twelve months, and appeals to his long service and the respect entertained towards him by his brother officers and men in refutation, urging that he would be even more criminal than the Kellys themselves if there were the least foundation for the charge. It must be mentioned that Mr. Hare was the first to leave the room in which the interview occurred; that he called again at the office in the afternoon without asking for further information; and that, if the interview were briefer than might have been expected under the circumstances, it was owing to Mr. Hare having asked Mr. Nicolson, in the course of conversation, to come to the last that had been heard of the outlaws. The telegram despatched by Mr. Nicolson to Senior-Constable Mullane prior to his leaving Benalla for Melbourne seems to have strengthened
Mr. Hare's suspicion of mala fides on the part of the Assistant Commissioner; but, judging from the explanations made, and the tenor of the document itself, there does not seem sufficient grounds for preferring so grave a charge against Mr. Nicolson as having wilfully sought to coerce the agents, and obstruct the efforts of the officer by whom he had been superseded.

XIV. SUPERINTENDENT HARE SUPERSEDES
MR. NICOLSON.

Superintendent Hare having mastered the documents in the office which had a bearing upon the pursuit, and having also obtained every information and assistance from Superintendent Sadleir, preceded to make his own arrangements. Reliable residents and constables in charge of stations were interviewed; scouts were despatched; secret agents communicated with, and what has become known as the hut party organized. Four constables under the direction of Detective Ward were secreted in Aaron Sherritt's hut, at Sebastopol, with instructions to remain concealed during the day, and in the evening to proceed to Mrs.
Byrne's place and watch it at night, as the cave parties had done previously. From the evidence it is clear that the constables acted very indiscreetly, situated as Aaron Sherritt's hut was, in close proximity to the main road and within view of numerous dwellings in the neighborhood. The first impression of your Commissioners when they visited the scene of the murder was its unsuitability for such a purpose. Again, the constables were known to have gone out to cut wood during the daytime and were, there is every reason to believe, seen by the gang and their sympathizers in the vicinity. Whatever suspicions there may have been engendered in the minds of the outlaws as regards Aaron Sherritt's treachery towards them previously, the fact of his harboring the police in his hut was sufficient to seal his doom. On the evening of the 26th of June 1880, while the police were in the hut, and as they were about to start on their nocturnal watch, a knock was heard at the door, and a neighbor named Anton Wicks, as though he had been bushed, inquired the way to his home. The door was opened by Aaron Sherritt. That moment a shot was fired; a second followed; Aaron stepped back, and fell dead without uttering a word. Three of the constables at the time were in an inner room divided off from the main apartment by a slight partition, which only reached from the floor to the lower edge of the roof, a door composed of flimsy material being in the centre. The front and back doors faced each other. There were two small windows in the hut, one giving light to the bedroom, the other to the kitchen. The hut in reality consisted of only one room with a portion partitioned off for the purposes of a bedroom. Constable Duross was at the fire in the outer room when the knock was heard; he at once sought refuge in the bedroom, where he and his companions remained throughout the night. The murder was perpetrated by Joe Byrne, assisted by Dan Kelly. The outlaws made several inquiries as to the men concealed in the bedroom, but the evidence upon the subject is contradictory and unsatisfactory. The names of the police present were Constables Armstrong (in charge), Duross, Dowling, and Alexander. Never was there a more conspicuous instance of arrant cowardice than was exhibited by those men on the night of the murder. Instead of attacking the outlaws, or at least making some effort out of sheer regard for their manhood, if not for their official responsibility, they sought the protection for themselves which they should have afforded to others. Two of them, Armstrong and Dowling, lay prostrate on the floor, with their bodies partly concealed beneath a bed, under which they had thrust the wife of the murdered man, with their feet resting against her, so that she could not possibly escape, in the hope that her presence would deter the outlaws from shooting them or attempting, as they had threatened, to set fire to the place. The conduct of those constables throughout the night was characterized by shameful poltroonery, which, in the army, would have been punished by summary expulsion from the service with every accompanying mark of contempt and degradation. It was not until the afternoon of the following day that the authorities in Benalla and Melbourne became aware of the outrage. As soon as information of the murder was received, prompt action was taken. The black trackers, who, with Mr. O'Connor, had been withdrawn from the district, preparatory to returning to Brisbane, were recalled, and despatched the same night by special train from Melbourne to Beechworth, the object being to utilize them in following the tracks of the outlaws from Sherritt's hut, at Sebastopol, to the ranges in the vicinity, where the murderers were supposed to be concealed.

XV.-GLENROWAN

The murder of Aaron Sherritt was designed as the prelude to the terrible tragedy by means of which the outlaws intended, as they had previously boasted, to astonish not only the Australian colonies but the whole world. It seems manifest that they had carefully thought out and matured their plan of operations. They proposed in the first place to shoot Aaron Sherritt. By this they rightly conjectured that they would, not only have wreaked their vengeance upon one who had betrayed them to the police, but would induce the authorities to despatch on the following day - Sunday - when there was no ordinary traffic on the line, a special train to Beechworth with the Queensland trackers and a large body of police. Next, it was determined to wreck this special train, and shoot any constable who might escape the effects of the disaster. Finally, the coast having been thus cleared, the gang were to proceed at once to Benalla or one of the townships in the district, rob one of the banks, and with the spoil retrace their steps to their previous haunts in the ranges. By one of those unforeseen accidents which often defeat the best laid schemes, execution of the latter portion of their program was frustrated, and their career suddenly brought to a close. The murder was perpetrated by only two of the gang, Joe Byrne and Dan Kelly. Their task accomplished, they rode with all speed across country to Glenrowan, where Ned Kelly and Steve Hart were occupied in preparing for the destruction of the train. The outlaws established themselves in Mrs. Jones's hotel, which stood in an oblique direction, about 400 yards south-west of the local railway station, and between the line and the Warby Ranges. Thither Ned Kelly and Hart conveyed the persons whom they had bailed up during the day, the intention being to keep them in duress until the special had passed. At an early hour on Sunday morning the rails were torn up by two men named Reardon and Sullivan, with a threat of being shot by Ned Kelly in case they refused to act as directed. The spot selected for the catastrophe is about 1000 yards north of the Glenrowan station, at a point where the line, after passing through a deep cutting, suddenly makes a sharp curve. Here there is on one side, to the west, a high embankment, which shuts out the view ahead as the point is approached; and on the other a steep declivity, down which it was intended to precipitate the train. The members of the gang were somewhat abstemious during the day. Steve Hart was drunk in the morning, but he soon recovered, and he alone appears to have taken any liquor to excess. They established very friendly relations with their prisoners, of whom, towards evening, there were no less than 62. They joined in outdoor sports, got up a dance during the night, played cards, indulged in some vocal music, and otherwise amused themselves while awaiting the arrival of the train which was expected to pass Glenrowan about midnight. Mr. Curnow, the local State School teacher, who, with his wife and sister-in-law, had been bailed up early in the afternoon, contrived by a show of sympathy to ingratiate himself into the good graces of the gang; and, under Providence, to his tact, coolness, and bravery, must be attributed the rescue of the special train and its occupants from destruction. Constable Bracken, who was stationed in the locality, was taken prisoner and conveyed to the hotel late in the evening. He appears to have acted with prudence throughout the trying circumstances in which he was placed. Mr. Curnow was released about midnight, and immediately took steps to warn the approaching special train. He improvised a danger signal by placing a lighted match behind a scarlet mantle, and with this he set out along the line to meet the train. The special, containing Mr. O'Connor, his wife, and sister-in-law, five trackers, and several representatives of the press, arrived at Benalla at about half-past one o'clock. Here Superintendent Hare and a party of troopers joined them, and having procured a pilot engine to go in advance, a start was made for Beechworth at 2.10 am. On arriving within a mile and a half of Glenrowan, the pilot engine was observed to stop, and upon inquiry as to the cause, the information given by Mr. Curnow of the presence of the Kellys at Glenrowan, and of the rails having been torn up, was communicated to Superintendent Hare. After a consultation, it was decided to travel slowly and cautiously, and bring the train up to the Glenrowan station. Under ordinary circumstances, the special would have passed Glenrowan without stopping. When therefore the outlaws heard the whistle, and observed the train draw up at the station, they were at once convinced that Mr. Curnow had conveyed the warning to the police. The prisoners in the hotel having been locked up, the outlaws at once prepared for the fight. They went into a room together and assisted each other to don the iron armour that they had brought with them, and thus equipped they awaited the attacks. Superintendent Hare ordered the horses to be taken out as soon as the train drew up at the station. He did not know the precise bearings of the locality, and supposed that the spot where the rails were torn up was about a mile from the station, and that it would be necessary to proceed there on horseback. A volunteer, Mr. Rawlings, undertook to act as guide. Mr. Hare and Mr. Rawlings, followed at a distance by three or four constables, went down the line to the station master's house to make inquiries. At this time everything was still; there was not a sound or a sign to indicate that the gang was so near. Mrs. Stanistreet, the wife of the station master, was found crying in great distress at the loss of her husband, who, she stated, had been taken away by the Kellys, at the same time pointing in the direction of the ranges behind Mrs. Jones's hotel. Thereupon Mr. Hare returned to the platform, and while engaged giving further instructions about the horses, Constable Bracken, in a state of excitement, appeared upon the scene and informed Mr. Hare that the outlaws were in Mrs. Jones's hotel, and had a large number of prisoners there bailed up. Thereupon Superintendent Hare told the men to let go the horses and to follow him. Without pausing, he rushed away, in the direction indicated, across the open space formed by the railway reserve, at the corner of which, directly opposite the hotel, is a large swing-gate with a wicket. He was closely followed by Constables Gascoigne, Phillips, and Canny, Inspector O'Connor and some of his black trackers bringing up the rear. On emerging from the wicket, Superintendent Hare and the constables mentioned found themselves on the roadway opposite the south-east corner of the hotel, which, although it was moonlight, stood in the shade, so that it was with difficulty objects could be discerned. When about fifteen paces from the hotel Superintendent Hare saw the figure of a man on the verandah. Then three men came round from the off side of the house and drew up. These were the outlaws, who, trusting to their armour, appeared to regard themselves as invulnerable. A shot was fired from the verandah, followed by a volley. The police at once returned the fire, and several volleys were exchanged, but in the very first Superintendent Hare received a bullet wound in the left wrist, which rendered his arm useless. The ball passed through the limb, shattering the bone and severing the artery. Mr. Hare with his one arm reloaded and fired. Several volleys having been exchanged, the outlaws retired within the house, when the shouts and screams of men, women, and children, imprisoned in the place, called forth the order from Superintendent Hare, and it is said from Mr. O'Connor also, to cease firing. Mr. Hare's wound appears to have become very painful, so, turning to Senior-Constable Kelly, who had reached the spot by making a detour round by the railway crossing, near the station master's house, he directed him to surround the house with the men and not allow the outlaws to escape. He then retired, going in the direction of the station. On his way thither he observed Mr. O'Connor, as he alleges, “running up a drain.” He informed him of his accident, at the same time repeating the orders he had already given to Senior-Constable Kelly. Inspector O'Connor warmly resents the statement contained in Mr. Hare's official report that he saw him “running up a drain.” Probably, it is the contemptuous form of expression employed to which Mr. O'Connor objects. As a matter of fact, there seems no reason to doubt the accuracy of Mr. Hare's description. Mr. O'Connor, it is clear, did not accompany Mr. Hare and the others who passed through the wicket or cross the fence surrounding the railway reserve. In the vicinity of the gate the ground is intersected by a number of watercourses, varying in depth from half a foot to seven feet. Those are in places spanned by small foot bridges, and all, more or less, in their sinuous windings communicate with each other. At the moment that the first volley was fired, Inspector O'Connor appears to have reached the culvert within the enclosure, in a direct line with the front of the hotel, or perhaps a little more towards the Wangaratta side of it, and about twenty-five yards distant from the house. Finding the danger of remaining in an exposed position, he at once sought shelter in a depression in the ground, in front of the bridge. To save himself from the bullets, which were flying about in every direction, it was requisite that he should assume a crouching attitude, and if, as Mr. O'Connor asserts, he remained in this position for nearly half an hour after the firing commenced, it was here he must have been observed by Superintendent Hare on his way returning to the platform. Whatever may have been the length of time Mr. O'Connor remained in this spot, it is certain that the position, having been found insecure, owing to the woodwork in front of the culvert having been struck by several bullets, Mr. O'Connor rose, crossed the little bridge, descended into the watercourse, which increases in depth at the other side, proceeded along this until some 15 or 20 yards back he reached a half-moon shaped excavation in the bank, which served him for all the purposes of a rifle pit. Here he took up his position, along with two of his trackers, the distance from the hotel being between 40 and 50 yards. The accounts given are so conflicting, and based, seemingly, upon after occurrences, that it is difficult to pronounce decisively as to the precise point of time at which Superintendent Hare saw Mr. O'Connor on his way back to the station; but as nearly all the witnesses agree that Mr. Hare was not more than from five to ten minutes in the front, it seems probable that he must have sighted Mr. O'Connor in his first position as he describes and before the Queensland Inspector had sought the more secure shelter of the spot where he remained until Mr. Sadleir's arrival. Mr. Hare, on reaching the platform, had his arm bandaged by Mr. Carrington, one of the representatives of the press, and he then left the station with the intention of resuming his position at the front. Great loss of blood, and consequent physical exhaustion, prevented him from doing so. He states that he felt great pain, and as the blood continued dripping from his wrist he became faint. He was clearly apprehensive of bleeding to death, and in this extremity he is said to have called to Mr. Rawlings - “For God's sake, Rawlings, go and get me a horse, or anything that will carry me to Benalla, where I can have my wound dressed properly.” He was observed sitting near a log not far from the fence by Constable Kirkham, but finding it necessary to return to the station, Superintendent Hare re-appeared there after an absence the second time from five to eight minutes, according to the evidence of the reporters. He fainted and fell down on reaching the platform. He was then lifted, placed in a railway carriage along with the ladies, who administered some sherry, under the influence of which he shortly revived. He then arranged to be sent to Benalla by one of the engines, and this was done. Here ends the first phase of the Glenrowan affray. Superintendent Hare, when he took his departure from the scene, appears to have been under the impression that he left Mr. O'Connor in charge of the attack. No doubt such was his intention, but Inspector O'Connor seems throughout the morning to have been animated by but one idea, namely, that by remaining in the deep cutting where he had sought shelter he was guarding the front of the premises, thereby cutting off all chance of escape for the outlaws from that quarter. A little reflection, however, would have led this officer to see that, if the outlaws did attempt an escape, they were not likely to select the front, where they would have had to run the gauntlet between the various parties of police stationed there. If an escape were attempted at all, it was more likely to have been by the rear of the hotel, where the ground was covered with timber and scrub, while the Warby ranges were only a short distance off. Therefore, instead of standing in the cutting, blazing away every time a flash was seen from the hotel, Mr. O'Connor might just as well have been on the platform along with the ladies, the reporters, and other non-combatants. Indeed the appearance of the ladies at such a juncture was somewhat incongruous. It was a mistake to have allowed them to accompany the party from Melbourne, and, as a fact, their presence seems to have had the reverse of an inspiriting influence upon the officer in charge of the Queensland contingent. He held his position until the arrival of Superintendent Sadleir and the reinforcements from Benalla. About the same time Sergeant Steele arrived from Wangaratta with his contingent, having ridden down with the greater part of them, a few proceeding by train. Mr. Sadleir, on reaching the ground, sought Mr. O'Connor, and consulted with him. After the first volley some of the female prisoners in the hotel escaped; but at the time Sergeant Steele took up his position, close to the rear of the hotel, Mrs. Reardon and some members of her family endeavored to make their escape. Mrs. Reardon, who had a child in her arms covered with a shawl, states distinctly that Sergeant Steele deliberately fired at her, and produced, before the Commission, a shawl perforated apparently by a bullet. Steele denies the allegation; but admits having shot young Reardon who, it is asserted, neglected, when ordered, to put up his hands. The ball or pellet fired entered his breast, and lodged beneath the ribs, but did not cause death. Indeed, the firing at this time, by all accounts, seems to have been indiscriminate, the blacks particularly being industrious in potting away at the premises. The prisoners, in a state of terror, arranged to hold out a white handkerchief, at which several shots were immediately fired, a proceeding highly reprehensible, as the most untutored savage is supposed to respect the signal of surrender. The order was given to fire high, but not before one of Mrs. Jones' children and a man named Martin Cherry were wounded, the latter fatally. About seven o'clock, Ned Kelly, the leader of the gang, was captured. He had been wounded in the foot during the first brush with the police. He left the hotel by the back shortly after, and selected his own horse, which he led away into the bush at the rear. On the way he seems to have dropped his rifle and the skull cap that he wore inside his iron headpiece, not far from the house. He then seems to have endeavoured to disencumber himself of his armour, but, being unable to do so without assistance, he evidently made up his mind to break through the cordon of police, rejoin and die with his companions in the hotel. His capture was effected without much difficulty or danger, as he was wounded in several parts of the body, and was incapacitated from using his revolver with effect. As the tall figure of the outlaw, encased in iron, appeared in the indistinct light of the dawn, the police for a time were somewhat disconcerted. To some it seemed like an apparition; others thought it was a black man who had donned a nail-can for a joke, but as the shots fired from Martini-Henry rifles, at short range, were found to have no effect, the sensation created seemed to have been akin to superstitious awe. One man described it as the “devil,” another as the “bunyip.” Ned Kelly advanced until within a stone's throw of the hotel, when, in the vernacular of the bush, he defied the police, and called on the other members of the gang to come out of the hotel and assist him. The lower portion of his body being unprotected by armour, the shots soon began to tell. The one that brought him to the ground was fired by Sergeant Steele, who then rushed forward, grappled the outlaw, when both fell to the ground. What followed precisely is confused and indistinct. However, it seems clear that Senior-Constable Kelly, Guard Dowsett, Constable Dwyer, and others, were early in at the capture of Ned Kelly, who, having been overpowered and divested of his armour, was conveyed to the railway station a prisoner, where he remained until the close of the fight. The male prisoners were allowed to escape at ten o'clock. They conveyed the intelligence that Joe Byrne had been shot dead early in the morning, while toasting prosperity to the gang at the bar of the hotel. The other outlaws, Dan Kelly and Steve Hart, had last been seen standing in the passage, both in armour, no doubt in their last extremity, considering as to what should be done. It has been asserted by various witnesses that spasmodic attempts at firing from the hotel were kept up till one o'clock that day; but viewed by the light of surrounding circumstances and subsequent information, it seems probable that there was little, if any, firing on the part of the survivors of the gang after the prisoners left at ten o'clock. In the forenoon, when the police were firing high and firing low, according as they were directed, Superintendent Sadleir appears to have evolved from his own inner consciousness - an idea which he was desirous at first of crediting the reporters and subsequently Dr. Nicolson with, namely, to blow down the hotel. He telegraphed in the forenoon to the Chief Secretary in Melbourne, asking him to send up to assist in the siege a big gun with the necessary ammunition and men to demolish the hut. A cannon and the requisite appliances were despatched by train, but owing to a stoppage on the line were detained, as Captain Standish was, until too late to be of any service. Superintendent Sadleir was seen several times during the day - once talking with Mr. O'Connor, the latter leaning against a tree reading a newspaper; again going round to some of the men, again talking to Ned Kelly, and on several occasions smoking his pipe at the railway station. He was pressed by several constables to allow them to rush the hotel, but he refused on the ground that not a single man should lose his life if he could help it in capturing the rest of the gang. The Superintendent was very probably influenced by humane motives in arriving at this decision, but a dispassionate observer could not fail to couple this inactivity with a want of capacity, if not courage, to deal with the difficulty. Of course, if an attack were made, as suggested, the officer in charge was in honor bound to take the lead, so that if there were danger in having recourse to such an expedient, the spectators could not be blamed if they thought more of Mr. Sadleir's discretion than any other quality that he displayed on that very trying occasion. The spectators were clearly not impressed with a very elevated opinion of the police proceedings on that day. The Very Revd. Dean Gibney's evidence upon the point is conclusive. Towards four o'clock, that is, after a state of siege had been maintained by three outlaws against nearly fifty police for about fourteen hours, Superintendent Sadleir consented to allow the hotel to be fired. This was accomplished by Senior-Constable Johnson. The Rev. Father Gibney was the first to enter the burning building. He found the bodies of the three outlaws with life extinct, and judging from appearances, Steve Hart and Dan Kelly, having taken off their armour, committed suicide, knowing death to be inevitable. The body of Joe Byrne was taken out before it was reached by the flames. The unfortunate man Cherry, one of the men bailed up by the outlaws, and who was wounded early in the fight, was taken out also, and died in a few minutes. The place was then abandoned to the flames, and these having done their work the charred remains of Dan Kelly and Steve Hart, with the body of Joe Byrne, were subsequently recovered and handed over to relatives for internment, while Ned Kelly was conveyed to Melbourne, and, some months subsequently, tried, convicted of the Wombat murders, and executed.

PROTEST A

In signing the Second Progress Report of the Police Commission, I beg to enter my protest against the decision of a majority of the Commission in their finding in Clauses three and five.

1. Because, in my opinion, it is in direct contradiction of the evidence taken before the Commission in that portion of clause four in which it states, “But nothing special has been shown in his action that would warrant the Commission in recommending his retention in the force.”

2. It is proved in evidence that Mr. Hare, after the murders at the Wombat, was zealously engaged at the depot in Melbourne in selecting the best men and horses and sending them to the North-Eastern district.

3. When informed by Captain Standish that the outlaws intended sticking up one of the banks, he at once took steps to protect those in his district, viz., Seymour, Avenel, Nagambie. See Questions Nos. 1244, 1245, and 1246.

4. After the Euroa bank robbery M. Hare was sent to the North-Eastern district with Captain Standish, Mr. Nicolson, who had been up to that time in charge, returned to Melbourne. He remained there for about seven months, but no reliable information was obtained as to the whereabouts of the outlaws. During the greater part of that time he pursued the same system as that followed on previous occasions in this colony when the police were in search of bushrangers, by keeping search and watch parties continually scouring the country. With these parties he took his full share of the hardships endured, and by so doing ensured the confidence and support of the men under his charge. During this time he was twenty-five days and nights with his cave party watching Mrs. Byrne's house; the result of all this arduous work told on his constitution, and he broke down under it, and asked to be relieved from duty in that district. This was conceded, and he returned to Melbourne, being relieved by Mr. Nicolson.

5. In April 1880, he was informed by Captain Standish that he would have to again resume charge of the North-Eastern district. Against this he strongly protested, but was told by the Chief Commissioner of Police that he must go; he then requested an interview with Mr. Ramsay, the then Chief Secretary; at this interview he again protested, and asked that one of his senior officers should be appointed to undertake this special duty. His appeal was of no avail. Mr. Ramsay told him that the subject had been under the consideration of the Cabinet, that the Ministry had full confidence in his ability, and they thought him the best officer in the force to undertake the duty, and that he must go, and if he should succeed in the capture of the outlaws he would be duly rewarded. See Question 1434.

6. Mr. Hare went to Benalla on the 2nd June 1880, and from all the information then obtained, the police were as far off the capture of the outlaws as they were when Mr. Hare left the district eleven months before. After two or three days looking round and interviewing the officers and police stationed in the district, he took steps to stop supplies by friends and relations of the outlaws. See Question 1477.

7. He then visited the watch party that had been stationed by Mr. Nicolson at Aaron Sherritt's house, and found it far from satisfactory.

8. On the 27th June 1880 he received information of the murder of Aaron Sherritt. See Question 1500.

9. He at once sent a telegram to Captain Standish, asking that Mr. O'Connor and his black trackers might be sent back at once. See Question 1501.

10. Captain Standish replied that Mr. O'Connor would be sent by first train on the following day, Monday.

11. Mr. Hare was not content with this reply, being thoroughly determined that no chance should be thrown away in his endeavour to secure the capture of the outlaws. And as this was the first reliable information he had obtained of their whereabouts during the whole time he had been in charge of the district, he felt that no time should be lost. He therefore sent another telegram to Captain Standish, “That if Mr. O'Connor and his trackers did not come that night it would be no use their coming on the Monday.” To this he received reply that Mr. O'Connor and his men would be sent that night by special train.
Mr. Hare then made all necessary arrangements for the police and horses to be ready to go on by the special coming from Melbourne, also providing for a pilot engine. And on the way up from Benalla he took every precaution against surprise from the outlaws, such as sending the pilot engine in front, stationing his men on the engine, and in every way acted as an active, intelligent, and determined officer. When the train was stopped by Mr. Curnow, he appears, if possible, to have taken extra care until their arrival at Glenrowan Station, when, from the statement made by Mr. Curnow to the man on the engine, he expected that the outlaws would be at some distance. He ordered the horses to be taken out of the train, and whilst this was being done a light was seen in the station master's house, to where he proceeded; and from what he heard there he thought the outlaws had taken to the Warby Ranges. On his return to the railway station, Constable Bracken made his appearance, having just escaped from Jones' Hotel, where he had been kept a prisoner by the gang. This was the first information Mr. Hare received that the outlaws were so near. I think his conduct at this time is worthy of all praise, for he at once started direct for the hotel, ordering his men to let the horses go and follow him. When within sixteen yards of the building, they were fired on by the outlaws; the firing was returned by the police, and kept up by them until the gang retired into the hotel. In the first fire he received the wound in his left wrist, but still he stood his ground, and fired several shots. From the evidence there can be no doubt in this first engagement both Ned Kelly and Joe Byrne were wounded.
12. The warder at the gaol says that Ned Kelly told him that Joe Byrne received a wound in the first engagement with the police, and this is corroborated in the declaration made by Constable Phillips, where he states, “I heard a conversation between Ned Kelly and Joe Byrne, shortly after taking up my position around the hotel, in which both admitted being wounded.” It is known that Ned Kelly had a bullet in his foot, another through his arm, and his thumb badly cut with shot when he was captured.

13. After the outlaw had retired into the hotel Mr. Hare found, from his disabled arm, that he would be compelled to return; he called on his men to cease firing, and ordered Senior-Constable Kelly and Mr. O’Connor to surround the building and not allow the outlaws to escape; he then returned to the railway platform, when his wound was bound up by the reporters. After this was done he again returned to the field and remained some time, but feeling that he was becoming faint from loss of blood, he was compelled to leave the scene of action, and on arrival at the station it was found necessary, to save him from bleeding to death, to at once send him back to Benalla to obtain surgical attendance. His conduct, on arrival at Benalla, shows clearly that his duty to the public service received his first attention. He first got the railway guard to go and inform Mr. Sadleir what had happened.

14. Then on his way to the telegraph station called on Dr. Nicholson and asked him to follow and dress his wound. He did not stop to have it done, but proceeded to the telegraph office, and telegraphed to Beechworth, Violet Town, Wangaratta, and Melbourne, informing the police what had taken place at Glenrowan and asked for reinforcements.

15. When Dr. Nicholson arrived at the telegraph station he found him in a low and fainting condition. After his wound was bound up and dressed he was conveyed to his hotel, suffering great pain.

16. He was laid up for months, his left hand maimed for life, and after he had sufficiently recovered he returned to his duty in Melbourne. He did not ask, at that time, for any special recognition for the arduous work he was called upon to perform, and the plucky and determined way in which he had acquitted himself at Glenrowan. He did not ask for any enquiry. He felt that by a fortunate circumstance the gang had come within his grasp. He took advantage of that, which resulted in the capture and destruction of the band of outlaws, who, for nearly two years, set the authorities at defiance; and, for this, it is recommended by the Commission that he should retire from the force.

17. I regret that my brother Commissioners should have made this recommendation, and thereby compelling me to enter this protest against their decision; but feel that I would be doing violence to my conviction were I not to do all that lays in my power to protect a public officer and a gentleman from an act of great injustice, and the loss of a valuable servant to the public.

18. Believing also that if this portion of the Report of the Commission be acted on it will be attended by disastrous effects on the police force of this colony, for, in future, what officer or men in the force will run the risk of distinguishing themselves in the discharge of their duty if, by so doing, they are subject to be dismissed, or may have brought on themselves the bitter jealousy of some of their fellow officers?

19. I have no desire, in making this protest, to compare the conduct of Mr. Hare with that of any of the other officers in charge of the North-Eastern district during the Kelly outlawry; they have been dealt with in the Report of the Commission, in my opinion, without any more censure than they deserve; and I am, therefore, more at a loss to understand why Mr. Hare should have met with such treatment at their hands.

E. J. DIXON.

12th October 1881.
PROTEST B

We must decline signing clauses 3 and 5. We should have preferred that the motion recommending Mr. Nicolson's superannuation had not been accompanied by the statement that “the want of unanimity existing between these officers, ie. Mr. Nicolson and Mr. Hare, was frequently the means of preventing concerted action on important occasions, and the interests of the colony greatly suffered thereby,” inasmuch as we do not consider that the latter statement is borne out by the evidence, and a resolution to that effect was moved in the course of the deliberations on the report. Nor do we see anything in the evidence to warrant the recommendation that Mr. Hare should be superannuated.

JAMES GIBB.
GEORGE COLLINS LEVEY.

REPLY TO MR. DIXON'S PROTEST

1. We, the undersigned Commissioners, in submitting a reply to the statement put forward in the form of a protest by Mr. Dixon, cannot refrain from expressing our surprise and regret that the document in question should be found a mere paraphrase of portions of Superintendent Hare's official report, which has been the source of so much mischief, and which we have no hesitation in declaring to be, in its essential features, a mere tissue of egotism and misrepresentation.

2. Your Commissioners have no desire to question Mr. Hare's personal courage or determination; the decision arrived at respecting this officer, we contend, has been based upon much more important considerations, namely, those of public expediency and the interest of the service.

3. Before proceeding to traverse the allegations contained in the official report and reproduced in the protest, we feel it incumbent upon us to make some reference to Superintendent Hare's conduct in connection with the present demoralized state of the police force of the colony.

4. There seems every reason to believe that Superintendent Hare was throughout in direct collusion with Captain Standish in the petty and dishonorable persecution to which Mr. Nicolson was subjected for many years while endeavoring honestly to discharge his duties to the best of his ability. Superintendent Hare admits that the late Chief Commissioner consulted him upon everything; one of the witnesses declared that Superintendent Hare was regarded as the actual head of the force; under such circumstances, how can Superintendent Hare be exonerated from all responsibility for the strained relations that existed amongst the officers?

5. Captain Standish characterized Mr. Nicolson's reports as twaddle; Superintendent Hare described them as infernal bosh. This agreement of opinion is significant when upon examination those reports are found to deserve a very different appellation. Had Captain Standish acted properly upon one of those written in 1877, concerning the state of the North-Eastern district, the Kelly outbreak would probably have been prevented.
6. Superintendent Hare exhibited a spirit of insubordination to a superior officer in questioning Mr. Nicolson's dictum regarding Constable Redding, and in the Assistant Commissioner's presence coinciding with Captain Standish when the latter was informed that Constable Gorman was not a suitable man for a particular station. Further, as showing Superintendent Hare's regard for the rules of the service, and the respect due to a superior officer, it may be added that when in the course of the enquiry Mr. Nicolson forwarded, as a matter of courtesy, a communication to Mr. Hare, the reply received, after acknowledging the receipt of the document, was as follows: - "I would suggest to Mr. Nicolson the advisability of devoting his attentions to answering the serious charges preferred by the witnesses examined before the Commission against himself instead of attempting to find fault with my conduct. - Francis Hare, Supt., 26/9/81."

7. In the personal feuds and jealousies which have marked the relations of the police officers, Superintendent Hare appears to have adroitly sheltered himself behind the late Chief Commissioner. Further, it is notorious that many of the men have taken sides with the officers, and that a spirit of rivalry and dissension exists in the lower ranks of the force.

8. Superintendent Hare's position as officer of the depot gave him many advantages over his brother officers, which he was not slow to utilize.

9. Your Commissioners cannot too strongly depurate the action by Superintendent Hare to override the decision of the political head of the department, in order to retain his position as officer of the depot and avoid being sent to Beechworth. With very questionable taste, and contrary to the regulations of the service, he applied personally to Sir George Bowen, the Governor of the colony, whom he met at a coursing meeting, to intercede for him and have the order for his removal cancelled. While Mr. Hare acknowledges to have thus enlisted the highest political influence on his own behalf, his charge against Mr. Nicolson of having employed similar means to obtain promotion utterly broke down, as the Assistant Commissioner appears to have depended solely for advancement upon his rights of seniority.

10. Superintendent Hare's conduct during the Kelly Pursuit was marked by anything but a generous or kindly feeling towards Mr. Nicolson. In paragraph 2 of the protest, Mr. Dixon states that after the Wombat murders Mr. Hare was zealously engaged at the depot in selecting the best men and horses to send to the North-Eastern district. As a matter of fact the reinforcements came to hand slowly, and the district, at the time of the Euroa Bank robbery, was unprepared to resist, at all points, the threatened raid, owing to the inadequacy of the police force placed at Mr Nicolson's disposal.

11. As regards warning the banks of Seymour, Avenel, and Nagambie, Superintendent Hare simply obeyed the instructions given him two days before Mr. Nicolson was apprised of the existence of the prisoner Williamson's communication, in which the information was conveyed regarding the intention of the outlaws to attack the bank at Seymour. Had there been proper concert between the officers at this period, the Euroa bank robbery might have been averted. Captain Standish, while he consulted Mr. Hare, neglected to inform Mr. Nicolson what arrangements had been made to protect Seymour, and made no effort to assist him in repelling any attack that might be made upon the banks in the North-Eastern district.

12. Mr. Dixon, in paragraph 4, states that during the seven months Captain Standish and Superintendent Hare remained in charge of the pursuit no reliable information was obtained respecting the whereabouts of the outlaws. To our minds this fact proves that the officers mentioned were incapable of grappling with the difficulties of the situation, more particularly as they had with them double the number of men, and incurred double the extra expenditure, in prosecuting the pursuit, allowed Mr. Nicolson.
13. As regards Mr. Hare's health having broken down after his seven months' duty, it has been proved in evidence that he was not so incapacitated as to be prevented from attending a series of coursing matches held in the district prior to his return to the depot.

14. When Mr. Nicolson resumed charge in June 1879, sweeping reductions were insisted upon, despite his repeated protestations; and when he applied for additional men for ordinary duty to replace those who had been invalided, Superintendent Hare sent him up from the depot a number of men, described as cripples, who were utterly useless.

15. While Mr. Nicolson was in charge, Superintendent Hare, in a manner highly unbecoming an officer, extracted privately from one of the constables some information respecting the cave party, and immediately informed the Chief Commissioner, as a piece of current gossip, that all about the cave was known at the depot. Further, while Mr. Nicolson was endeavoring to improve the efficiency of his men by rifle practice, Mr. Hare interfered, and told Captain Standish that the men were simply wasting ammunition. Those points may appear insignificant, but to our minds they indicate a system of tale-bearing undignified and ungracious and calculated to materially obstruct operations against the outlaws.

16. Mr. Dixon's statement in Clause 6, that when Mr. Hare went to Benalla on 2nd June 1880 the police were as far off the capture of the Kelly gang as when he left the district eleven months previously, is a reiteration of Superintendent Hare's assertion, contained in his official report, and is not borne out by the evidence. The allegation also based upon question 1477 is to some extent misleading. There is nothing in the paragraph mentioned to show that the steps taken by Mr. Hare were calculated to prevent supplies being conveyed to the outlaws.

17. Clause 7 of the protest is calculated to convey a false impression. The hut party alluded to had not been stationed at Aaron Sherritt's place by the Assistant Commissioner. During the last week of Mr. Nicolson's command in the North-Eastern district, and while scouring the ranges in the vicinity of Mrs. Byrne's hut, he had placed some men temporarily in Sherritt's house, but withdrew them prior to Mr. Hare's arrival. The organization of the hut party properly speaking is due to Mr. Hare, and it proved a most disastrous failure.

18. We have not been slow to acknowledge Superintendent Hare's energy and promptitude upon receiving intelligence of Aaron Sherritt's murder, but the injudicious zeal of his friends provokes the criticism which he might otherwise be spared. Mr. Dixon gives him credit for extraordinary foresight in providing a pilot engine for the special which left Benalla for Beechworth on the night of the 27th of June, but a reference to Mr. Carrington's evidence shows that, prior to the starting of the train, it was generally known, or at least currently reported at Benalla, that the rails had been taken up. Under such circumstances what was more natural than that a pilot engine should be procured?

19. Mr. Hare, as officer in command, should not have tolerated the presence of ladies in the special train when leaving Benalla, especially as he was aware of the report that the rails had been removed.

20. We consider that this officer cannot be complimented upon his discretion of generalship in the conduct of operations at Glenrowan for the short time that he remained upon the scene. He knew little, apparently, of the precise situation of Glenrowan, notwithstanding that he had been for eight months in command of the district. He was informed during the journey that the Kellys had torn up the line, taken possession of the place, and imprisoned all the people there; yet, on arrival, he seems to have had no correct idea of the peculiarity of the situation. The moment he was informed by Bracken of the presence of the outlaws at the hotel he dashed away, without waiting for some of his men to collect their arms. When he reached the hut he found his onslaught resisted by the gang. He was disabled in the wrist by the first volley, and after an absence of from five to ten minutes from the platform, he returned to have his wound dressed. He left the front without transferring the command to any one. The order to surround the house given to Senior-Constable Kelly and to Inspector O'Connor cannot be regarded as transferring the command. This neglect he might have rectified when he essayed to reach the front on the second occasion, but he failed to do so. Did he propose to rush the place, and at once overpower the outlaws? If that were his intention, he should not have been deterred by a mere wound in his wrist from doing so. If he had resolved merely to surround the gang and prevent their escape, then he ran unnecessary risk in exposing himself and his men to the fire of the outlaws. If, however, he simply trusted to the chapter of accidents, without any definite idea of what was best to be done, then his management of affairs displayed a decided lack of judgment and forethought. Comparisons may be odious, but it cannot fail to strike one as singular that, while Superintendent Hare felt himself obliged to leave his post and return to Benalla, under the impression that the wound in his wrist would prove fatal, the leader of the outlaws, with a rifle bullet lodged in his foot, and otherwise wounded in the extremities, was enabled to hold his ground, encumbered too by iron armour, until seven o'clock, when, in the effort to rejoin his companions, he fell overpowered by numbers.

21. Superintendent Hare's bill against the Government for surgical attendance amounted to 607 pounds, about 480 pounds of which was paid to his relative, Dr. Chas. Ryan. While this officer was being petted and coddled on all sides, and a special surgeon despatched almost daily some thirty miles by train to attend him, the Government questioned the payment of four guineas for the treatment of one of the black trackers who had received a wound in the head at Glenrowan.

22. It is, however, chiefly in relation to Superintendent Hare's official report of the 2nd of June 1880 that we, the undersigned Commissioners, have been led to regard this officer's conduct with suspicion. The document was manifestly written with the design of crushing Mr. Nicolson once and for all; to deprive him of all credit for anything that he had done or suffered in the pursuit, and to brand him as disloyal to the service and his brother officers. The evidence, however, discloses that many of the charges contained in the report were unfounded, the insinuations unjustifiable, and the statements mere assumptions.

23. It must be borne in mind too that Mr. Hare's personal quarrel with Inspector O'Connor led up to the latter officer's unfortunate complications with Captain Standish; the favoritism exhibited towards him by the Chief Commissioner was the cause of jealousy and dissension amongst the officers. And it is only fair to conclude that Superintendent Hare has been for many years a disturbing element in the force, and that his withdrawal from the service has become a matter of public necessity.

24. We have no desire to act unkindly towards Superintendent Hare. We regret deeply that, in justice to ourselves and in explanation of our action, we should be compelled thus to refer to matters that otherwise had better be buried in oblivion. The services rendered, and the injury sustained by Superintendent Hare have not been lost sight of, and, while declaring his immediate retirement from the force as indispensably necessary, the Commissioners have treated him, we consider, in connection with the recommendation submitted to Your Excellency, with the greatest possible liberality.
